

The AMERICAN HERITAGE

dic·tion·ar·y

of

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

THIRD EDITION

INTRODUCTION

Almost a quarter of a century ago a new dictionary bearing the name American Heritage appeared. That book was notable because it did four things and it did them well. It faithfully recorded the language in easily understood definitions. It provided guidance toward accuracy, precision, and grace in the use of English that intelligent people need and seek in a dictionary. It traced, whenever possible, the development of English words to their origins and keyed many to an Appendix of Indo-European Roots. And it presented complex lexical data in a typographically attractive design accented by thousands of photographs and line drawings in spacious margins. The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Third Edition, builds upon this distinguished, innovative foundation.

The pages of the Third Edition, a lexicon of more than 200,000 boldface forms, hundreds of thousands of meanings, and nearly 4,000 pieces of art, reflect the rich and varied texture of American English as it has been used over time by a broad group of educated speakers. This Dictionary is the product of four years of work by 175 contributors. In preparing the Dictionary, our editors have had access to a database containing hundreds of millions of lines of text that could be searched for any word in context.

The A-Z vocabulary, containing more than 16,000 words and meanings new to this Edition, is a comprehensive, detailed record of the language. Use of citations allowed the editors to identify new words and new meanings, identify levels of usage, and select more than 4,000 quoted illustrations from nearly 2,000 sources for use in exemplifying entry words in printed context. The quoted illustrations range from the works of Shakespeare, Pope, and Ruskin to the works of contemporary writers such as Joyce Carol Oates, Joan Didion, John Updike, and Tom Wicker. More than 30,000 nonquoted illustrative examples were also derived from study of the citations. Finally, the citations were used to determine the status of variants. For example, 4,000 electronic citations were accrued for the spelling ambiance and about 2,000 were found for the variant ambience. On the basis of this 2:1 ratio the Dictionary gives ambience as an "unequal," or less frequently occurring, variant of the entry word ambiance.

If language is a reflection of the ethos of the generation speaking it, then the new entries and meanings in this Edition have much to say about us and our time. The great majority of the new words relate to social and life patterns; to the life sciences with an emphasis on health, medicine, genetics, and ecology; and to the physical sciences with an emphasis on computer technology and electronics, physics, and astronomy.

The goal of the Third Edition is to provide the user with comprehension and appreciation of the language in a readable manner. Keeping the needs of the contemporary user in mind, we have presented the central and often the most frequently sought meaning of a word first. The definitions are worded in concise, lucid prose without the specialized terms and abbreviations that make most dictionaries forbidding and confusing.

The Third Edition contains more than 500 notes and comments on matters of grammar, diction, pronunciation, and levels and nuances of usage. Citations were used in identifying new and evolving usage problems, attesting and evaluating the currency of certain usages, studying various levels of usage, and evaluating their sociolinguistic implications. The 173-member Usage Panel, with 75 new members and chaired by Geoffrey Nunberg, a linguist associated with Stanford University, has made an important contribution to the content and direction of the Usage Notes through responses to periodic surveys developed by the Chair and the editors. The Usage Panel of the Third Edition consists chiefly of writers, editors, and scholars, 22 of whom are professors of linguistics or English. Other Panelists occupy distinguished positions in law, diplomacy, government, business, science and technology, medicine, and the arts. Eighteen are recipients of the Pulitzer Prize and one is a Nobel Laureate. These men and women, who reside in 28 states across the land and in Canada and England, are a cross section of today's critical, literary, and scholarly community.

A list of usage issues—old and new—was prepared by the Chair and the editors, and from it the usage program for the Third Edition was developed. Some of the usage issues are entirely new. An example is the Note at world-class. Other issues discussed in previous editions were resurveyed. An example is the use of contact as a verb. In some instances the Panel's views are more conservative than in the past: only 27 percent of the current Panel accepts hopefully as a sentence adverb, a usage that in 1969 was acceptable to 44 percent of the Panel. Other Notes, such as the one that discusses the use of above as a noun, present guidance and linguistic analysis without Panel opinions. The Usage Notes are not confined solely to matters of stylistic excellence. Our concern with usage extends to issues of gender, ethnicity, and sexual preference.

Considerable attention is devoted in this Edition to the history of words. The etymologies have been thoroughly revised and expanded by a group of 25 specialists whose work reflects original scholarly research in many fields, including African, Persian, Turkish, and Native American languages. Special symbols, abbreviations, and complex technical vocabulary have been avoided in the etymologies. More than 400 word history paragraphs, most of which contain dates of first occurrence of the words in English, appear at entries with especially interesting etymologies. These word histories, such as the one at nerd, provide a social, historical, and cultural context for the evolution of words and explain the various linguistic processes that contribute to the development of language.

A great many Modern English words can be traced to the reconstructed ancestral language called Proto-Indo-European. The etymologies in the Third Edition, like those in the First, trace many words to their earliest ascertainable origins, usually in Proto-Indo-European, by means of cross-references to a new and thoroughly revised Appendix of Indo-European Roots. The Appendix, in a major departure from previous style, gives the root followed by a brief gloss and a list of some of the Modern English words derived from it. The individual roots entry then follows. For example, the Modern English words fierce, and treacle, at first glance strange semantic companions, both derive from the root ghwer-*, "wild."

The Third Edition contains hundreds of labeled words and meanings whose occurrence is restricted to certain areas of the United States. An important new feature unique to the Third Edition is the inclusion of more than 100 Regional Notes that explore the various linguistic and historical processes contributing to the development of these terms. These processes are apparent in the Regional Notes at entries such as absquatulate.

In an effort to assist the reader in using the language with color, vitality, and freshness, the Third Edition devotes more attention than ever before to synonymy by including more than 900 synonym paragraphs. The fully cross-referenced synonym paragraphs are of two kinds. The first, liberally illustrated with quotations, discriminates shades of meaning. The second kind lists exact synonyms, that is, words sharing a common irreducible element of meaning, and provides antonyms when applicable.

The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Third Edition, like the First, is the product of significant advances in the use of computer technology. The Third Edition is derived from a complex, highly versatile structured database. Every element in the Dictionary was parsed, examined, and coded to reflect its lexical function and position within the base. In combination, these elements form dictionary entries, and on a broader scale they reflect a multitude of relationships across the lexicon. Use of the database in connection with electronically generated citations places the Third Edition a generation ahead of other dictionaries.

It is no longer possible for a few general editors working strictly within a publishing house to compile a true and accurate record of the language as it is used today. Semantic, etymological, linguistic, and technical complexities inherent in the language require the counsel of specialists from many disciplines. These specialists' names are listed under Special Contributors and Consultants. We wish to thank all of them for helping us in our pursuit of accuracy and truth. Special thanks go to John Simpson, Co-Editor of the New Oxford English Dictionary, for valuable comments made during the early stages of the project. And to all members of the Editorial Staff who gave unstintingly of their time and expended great effort in the development of the Third Edition, we express our deepest gratitude.

Anne H. Soukhanov

EDITORIAL AND PRODUCTION STAFF

EDITORIAL STAFF

EXECUTIVE EDITOR

Anne H. Soukhanov

SENIOR LEXICOGRAPHER

David A. Jost

SENIOR COORDINATING EDITOR

Kaethe Ellis

MANAGING EDITOR

Marion Severynse

VICE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR OF EDITORIAL, ART, PRODUCTION, AND MANUFACTURING SERVICES

Margery S. Berube

PUBLISHER

Jonathan P. Latimer

SENIOR EDITORS

Joseph P. Pickett, David R. Pritchard, David M. Weeks

EDITOR

Joseph M. Patwell

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Jim A. Craig, Donna Cremans, Paul G. Evenson, Susan M. Innes, Nina Judith Katz, James P. Marciano, Martha Fairman Phelps, Rosemary E. Previte, Hanna Schonthal

ASSISTANT EDITORS

Michael H. Choi, Ann-Marie Imbornoni, Daniel G. Prior

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

Laura P. Chesterton

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANCE

Kenneth C. Carpenter, Jennifer L. Crawford, Beth Jaffe, Craig LaPine, Margaret M.
May, Laurie A. McCrohon, Cara Murray, Rebecca A. Parker, Heidi Stahl, Alisa Stepanian

CONTRIBUTING EDITOR, SYNONYMY

Anne D. Steinhardt

CONTRIBUTING EDITOR, PRONUNCIATION

Rima Elkin McKinzey

COORDINATING EDITOR, DICTIONARIES

Pamela Burton DeVinne

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

Ihsan A. Al-Shehbaz, Elizabeth J.W. Baer, Ethan Balk, John K. Bollard, Carol J. Botteron, Guy J. Buckle, Karen Ann Cenci, Mary Lynn Czymbor, Ronald E.
Doel, Leon A. Feldman, Nancy Fliesler, Ian A. Grable, David S. Greenes, Michael K. Hahn, Kristin Hanson, W.M. Havighurst, Paul G.K. Jodka, Elizabeth A. Jordan, Victoria M. McClellan, Ramona R. Michaelis, Sonja N. Nelson, Trudy Nelson, Barry John Perlman, Richard E. Plotkin, Lois J. Principe, David C. Roberts, Paul R. Schwankl, James E. Shea, Jeffrey E. Topal, Monica L. Zangwill

CITATIONS CLERK

Shari Lynn Wheeler

COPYEDITING

Frances Barna, Alice P. Carman, Maria A. Morelli

PROOFREADING

Kathryn Blatt, Becky Cheston, Jennifer L. Dougherty, Judith L. Drummond, Valerie A. English, Bruce E. Frost II, Stella Gelboin, Rhonda L. Holmes, Katherine M. Isaacs, Eric C. Meyer, Maria Rodriguez Montenegro, Denis Moynihan, James F. Mulhern, Jill R. Norton, Lori Ohliger, Thelma Prince, Carole A. Ricciardi, Ann M. Rossi, A. Nancy Rourke

PRODUCTION STAFF

PRODUCTION AND MANUFACTURING MANAGER

Christopher Leonesio

PRODUCTION SUPERVISOR

Patricia McTiernan

SENIOR ART AND PRODUCTION COORDINATOR

Margaret Anne Miles

DATABASE KEYBOARDING

Miriam E. Palmerola, Supervisor

Lawrence Annucci, Edward Coleman, Cary Hawkins Doran, Kathleen R. Klingenberg, Sean Brosnahan Meehan, Donna Whiting

MANUFACTURING SUPERVISOR

Greg Mroczek

SENIOR MANUFACTURING ASSISTANT

Jill M. Lazer

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANCE

Christina M. Granados, Lauren B. Hunnewell

DATABASE DEVELOPMENT AND COMPOSITION SERVICES

Auto-Graphics, Inc.

Paul Cope, Vice President, Publishing Operations

Robert Eiferd, Manager of Programming

Kathi Pittman & Laura Stein, Project Managers

STRUCTURED DATABASE DESIGN

Joseph V. Gangemi, Consultant

In Remembrance

Jim A. Craig

1961–1991

Friend, Colleague, and Editor

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS AND CONSULTANTS

USAGE

Geoffrey Nunberg, Ph.D.
Stanford University

DIALECT

Sr. Mary Dominic Pitts, O.P, Ph.D.
Aquinas Junior College

INDO-EUROPEAN ROOTS APPENDIX

Calvert Watkins, Ph.D.
Harvard University

LANGUAGE AND ETYMOLOGY CONSULTANTS

Patrick S. Diehl, Ph.D., University of California, Berkeley

Deborah W. Anderson, Ph.D., University of California, Los Angeles

Martin E. Huld, Ph.D., Department of English, University of California, Los Angeles

Brian D. Joseph, Ph.D., Department of Linguistics, Ohio State University

Reuven Merkin, Ph.D., Professor, Academy of the Hebrew Language, Jerusalem, Israel

African Languages

George N. Clements, Ph.D., Department of Modern Languages and Linguistics, Cornell University

Austronesian Languages

R. David Zorc, Ph.D., Senior Linguist, MRM Language Research Center

Caribbean Languages

Richard Allsopp, Ph.D., Caribbean Lexicography Project, University of the West Indies at Cave Hill, Barbados

Celtic Languages

Lionel S. Joseph, Ph.D., Harvard University

Central and South American Languages

Richard F. Townsend, Ph.D., Department of Africa, Oceania, and the Americas, Art Institute of Chicago Hipólito Rafael Chacón, M.A., Department of Art History, University of Chicago

Dialect

Craig M. Carver, Ph.D., Dictionary of Regional American English

East Asian Languages

Stephen A. Bladey
Thomas Creamer, M.A.

English Language and Linguistics

G.W. Abernethy, Middle English Dictionary
Sara E. Kimball, Ph.D., Department of English, University of Texas at Austin Henry Kučera, Ph.D., Department of Linguistics, Brown University Marilyn S. Miller, M.S.L., Middle English Dictionary
Robert N. Mory, Ph.D., Middle English Dictionary
Lee Pederson, Ph.D., Department of English, Emory University
David W. Ruddy, M.A., University of Michigan
David M. Yerkes, Ph.D., Professor of English, Department of English, Columbia University

Greek and Latin

Vincent P. McCarren, Ph.D., Middle English Dictionary
Rex E. Wallace, Ph.D., Classics Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Roger D. Woodard, Ph.D., Classics Department, University of Southern California

North American Indian Languages

Ives Goddard, Ph.D., Department of Anthropology, Smithsonian Institution

Russian, Persian, and Ural-Altaic Languages

Alexander Lehrman, Ph.D., Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, University of Delaware

Science Etymology

Sharon L. Marshall, Ph.D., M.D., Harvard and Tufts Universities

Yiddish

Marvin I. Herzog, Ph.D., Department of Linguistics, Columbia University

SPECIAL CONSULTANTS

Architecture

Edward F. Ford, M.Arch., Associate Professor of Architecture, School of Architecture, University of Virginia

Art

H. Kristina Haugland, M.A., Assistant Curator, Costume and Textiles, Philadelphia Museum of Art

Cinema

P. Adams Sitney, Ph.D., Professor of Visual Arts in the Council of the Humanities, Princeton University

Dance

Mara Peets, M.A., Teaching Fellow, Expository Writing Program, New York University; Writer/Researcher and Assistant Director, Video Dictionary of Classical Ballet

Economics, Business, and Finance

David L. Scott, Ph.D., Professor of Accounting and Finance, Valdosta State College, Valdosta, Georgia

History and Government

John A. Garraty, Ph.D., Gouverneur Morris Professor Emeritus, Department of History, Columbia University

Law

Robert M. Landis, J.D., LL.D., Partner and formerly Chair, Dechert Price & Rhoads

Meteorology

David B. Johnson, Ph.D., National Center for Atmospheric Research, Boulder, Colorado

Military Science & Weapons

Daniel P. Bolger, Ph.D., U.S. Army Infantry Officer

Music

Mary Davenport, Professor of Music, School for the Arts, Boston University

Mythology

William S. Bonds, Ph.D., Associate Professor and Chair, Department of Classical Languages, University of the South

Philosophy

Hilary Kornblith, Ph.D., Professor and Chair, Department of Philosophy, University of Vermont

Religion

- William A. Graham, Ph.D., Professor of the History of Religion and Islamic Studies, Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, Harvard University
- Van A. Harvey, Ph.D., George Edwin Burnell Professor of Religious Studies, Department of Religious Studies, Stanford University
- Martin E. Marty, Ph.D., Fairfax M. Cone Distinguished Professor of the History of Modern Christianity, Divinity School, University of Chicago
- Richard P. McBrien, S.T.D., Crowley-O'Brien-Walter Professor of Theology, Department of Theology, University of Notre Dame
- Paul Mendes-Flohr, Ph.D., Professor, Department of Jewish Thought, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel
- Frank E. Reynolds, Ph.D., Professor of the History of Religions and Buddhist Studies, Divinity School and Department of South Asian Languages and Civilizations, University of Chicago
- Jack D. Van Horn, Ph.D., Associate Professor, Department of Religion, College of William and Mary

Science and Technology

- Donald C.S. Allison, Ph.D., Professor and Head, Department of Computer Science, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University
- William Ira Bennett, M.D., Editor, Harvard Health Letter, Harvard Medical School
- Sheila Ewing Browne, Ph.D., Professor of Chemistry and Chair, Department of Chemistry, Mount Holyoke College
- Neal D. Buffaloe, Ph.D., Professor Emeritus of Biology, University of Central Arkansas
- F.J. Collier, Curatorial Associate, Department of Invertebrate Paleobiology, Museum of Comparative Zoology, Harvard University
- Brooks B. Ellwood, Ph.D., Professor, Department of Geology, University of Texas at Arlington
- R.J. Emry, Ph.D., Research Paleontologist and Curator, Division of Vertebrate Paleontology, Department of Paleobiology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution
- Frank Espey, M.D., Neurological Surgery (retired), Greenville, South Carolina
- William S. Haubrich, M.D., Head, Division of Gastroenterology, Scripps Clinical Research Foundation
- Nicholas Hotton III, Ph.D., Curator, Division of Vertebrate Paleontology, Department of Paleobiology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution
- Lynn Margulis, Ph.D., Department of Biology, University of Massachusetts at Amherst
- J.W. Pierce, Ph.D., Department of Paleobiology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution
- C.E. Ray, Curator, Division of Vertebrate Paleontology, Department of Paleobiology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution

Richard Evans Schultes, Ph.D., Jeffrey Professor of Biology and Director, Harvard Botanical Museum (Emeritus)

James Trefil, Ph.D., Clarence J. Robinson Professor of Physics, George Mason University

Sociology

Mary Waters, Ph.D., John L. Loeb Associate Professor of the Social Sciences, Harvard University

Sports

Robert W. Creamer, formerly Senior Editor, Sports Illustrated

Trademarks

Ted J. Murphy, International and Information Services Manager, U.S. Trademark Association

THE USAGE PANEL

Geoffrey Nunberg, Ph.D. Chair

Department of Linguistics, Stanford University

Edwin Newman Chair Emeritus

Journalist; lecturer; author

Elie Abel Author and journalist; Professor Emeritus, Stanford University

Shana Alexander Writer

Cleveland Amory Humorist; humanitarian; President, The Fund for Animals

Roger Angell Writer and Fiction Editor, New Yorker

Natalie Angier Science journalist; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Isaac Asimov* Writer; Professor of Biochemistry, Boston University School of Medicine

James Atlas Writer; Editor, New York Times Magazine

Margaret Atwood Writer

Kathryn H. Au Professor of Education, University of Hawaii

Louis Auchincloss Writer

Ralph Backlund* Senior Contributing Editor, Smithsonian; formerly Producer and Executive Producer for news and public affairs, CBS; formerly Associate Editor and Managing Editor, Horizon

John Bainbridge* Staff writer, New Yorker; columnist, Gourmet

Sheridan Baker Professor Emeritus of English, University of Michigan

Letitia Baldrige Author; lecturer on manners

Jacques Barzun Writer; literary consultant; educator

John Baugh Professor of Linguistics, Stanford University

Carolyn Wilkerson Bell Susan Duval Adams Professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman's College

Daniel Bell Henry Ford II Professor of Social Sciences Emeritus, Harvard University; Scholar in Residence, American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Pierre Berton Canadian author and historian

Alton Blakeslee Science Editor (retired), Associated Press

- Harold Bloom Writer; Sterling Professor of Humanities, Yale University; Berg Professor of English, New York University; MacArthur Fellow
- Roy Blount, Jr. Writer; Contributing Editor, Atlantic
- Kallia H. Bokser Housing Consultant
- Dwight Bolinger Professor Emeritus of Romance Languages and Literatures, Harvard University; Visiting Professor Emeritus of Linguistics, Stanford University
- The Hon. Julian Bond Formerly Georgia state legislator; Professor, American University and University of Virginia; lecturer; host, public affairs television program
- The Hon. Daniel J. Boorstin Librarian of Congress Emeritus; recipient, Pulitzer Prize and National Book Award Medal for Distinguished Contribution to American Letters
- Charles P. Boren Associate Editor (retired), Lewiston (Idaho) Morning Tribune
- Barbara Taylor Bradford Writer
- The Hon. William W. Bradley U.S. Senator from New Jersey; formerly professional basketball player
- Leo Braudy Bing Professor of English, University of Southern California
- Paul Brooks Writer; formerly Editor in Chief, Houghton Mifflin Company
- Heywood Hale Broun Writer; actor; television newsperson
- Rachel M. Brownstein Professor of English, Brooklyn College and the Graduate Center, City University of New York
- William F. Buckley, Jr. President, National Review Inc.
- Gabrielle Burton Writer
- Gerald Carson Social historian; writer; advertising agency executive
- Claudia Cassidy Writer; formerly music and drama critic, Chicago Tribune; formerly critic at large, Chicago magazine
- Walter C. Clemens, Jr. Writer; Professor of Political Science, Boston University; Associate, Harvard University Center for Science and International Affairs
- Pat Conroy Novelist
- Claire Kehrwald Cook Formerly Editorial Director, Modern Language Association of America; author, Line by Line: How to Edit Your Own Writing
- Robin Cook, M.D. Physician; writer
- Alistair Cooke Journalist and broadcaster
- Roy H. Copperud Professor Emeritus of Journalism, University of Southern California; columnist, Editor & Publisher; author of works on English usage; recipient, Humanities Award, Association of American Publishers
- Norman Cousins Adjunct Professor, School of Medicine, University of California, Los Angeles; writer; formerly Editor, Saturday Review; formerly Chair, Pulitzer Prize jury in literature

- Malcolm Cowley Writer; literary adviser, Viking Press, Inc.; formerly Associate Editor, New Republic
- Robert W. Creamer Writer; biographer; formerly Senior Editor, Sports Illustrated
- Gene D. Dahmen Attorney; past President, Boston Bar Association
- Marshall B. Davidson Writer; Senior Editor, Horizon; formerly Editor of Publications, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York
- Robertson Davies Writer; founding Master, Massey College, University of Toronto; Professor of English and Drama
- Lois DeBakey Writer, lecturer, and consultant; Professor of Scientific Communication, Baylor College of Medicine
- Vine Deloria, Jr. Standing Rock Sioux Tribe Professor of Law, Religious Studies, Political Science, and History, University of Colorado
- Joan Didion Author
- Annie Dillard Writer; recipient, Pulitzer Prize
- William K. Durr Professor of Education Emeritus, Michigan State University; past President, International Reading Association
- Andrea Dworkin Writer
- Freeman J. Dyson Writer; Professor of Physics, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, New Jersey
- Anne Edwards Biographer and novelist; past President, Authors Guild
- Gretel Ehrlich Writer; Guggenheim Fellow from Wyoming
- Ralph Ellison Writer; educator
- Louise Erdrich Author
- Carolly Erickson Historian; writer
- Howard Fast Writer
- Frances FitzGerald Writer; contributor, New Yorker; recipient, Pulitzer Prize
- Elizabeth Frank Writer; Joseph E. Harry Professor of Modern Languages and Literature, Bard College; recipient, Pulitzer Prize
- Reuven Frank Author; columnist, New Leader magazine; formerly President, NBC News; formerly Executive Producer, Huntley-Brinkley Report
- John Kenneth Galbraith Economist; writer; formerly U.S. Ambassador to India; formerly Paul M. Warburg Professor of Economics Emeritus, Harvard University
- Sara Garnes Linguist; Director of First Year Composition and Associate Professor of English, Ohio State University
- Michael G. Gartner Columnist, USA Today; editor, Ames (Iowa) Daily Tribune; language columnist; formerly President, NBC News; past President, American Society of Newspaper Editors; past chairman, Pulitzer Prize Board
- Henry Louis Gates, Jr. Chair, Department of Afro-American Studies; W.E.B. Du Bois Professor of Humanities, Harvard University
- J. Edward Gates Lexicographer; editor; Professor Emeritus of English, Indiana State University

- A. Bartlett Giamatti Sports executive; educator; Commissioner of Baseball; formerly President, National Baseball League; formerly President, Yale University
- Francine du Plessix Gray Writer
- Linda Gregerson Assistant Professor of English, University of Michigan
- Patricia Hampl Writer; Professor of English, University of Minnesota
- The Hon. Mark O. Hatfield U.S. Senator from Oregon
- The Hon. S.I. Hayakawa Writer; educator; President Emeritus, San Francisco State University; formerly U.S. Senator from California
- Mark Helprin Writer; Contributing Editor, Wall Street Journal; Senior Fellow, Hudson Institute
- Oscar Hijuelos Author; recipient, Pulitzer Prize, Rome Prize
- Douglas R. Hofstadter College of Arts and Sciences Professor of Cognitive Science and Computer Science; Director, Center for Research on Concepts and Cognition, Indiana University, Bloomington; recipient, Pulitzer Prize
- Gloria Hom Educator and consultant; Chair, Economics Department, Mission College; member, California State University Board of Trustees; member, Board of Trustees, Dominican College of San Rafael
- Paul Horgan Novelist, biographer, and historian; Professor Emeritus and Author in Residence, Wesleyan University; recipient, Pulitzer Prize
- The Hon. Shirley M. Hufstедler Senior Counsel, Morrison & Foerster; formerly U.S. Secretary of Education; formerly Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit
- John K. Hutchens Retired member, Editorial Board, Book-of-the-Month Club; retired literary and drama reviewer, New York Times, New York Herald Tribune, and Boston Evening Transcript
- Molly Ivins Journalist; syndicated columnist; author
- Jennifer James Cultural anthropologist; writer
- Joyce Johnson Writer; recipient, National Book Critics Circle Award
- William F. Johnston Associate Professor and Newspaper Internship Coordinator, School of Communications, University of Washington
- Erica Mann Jong Poet, novelist, and essayist
- The Hon. Barbara Jordan Educator, attorney, and writer; Lyndon B. Johnson Centennial Professor in National Policy, Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, University of Texas at Austin; formerly U.S. Representative from Texas
- June M. Jordan Poet; Professor of African American Studies and Women's Studies, University of California, Berkeley
- Alfred E. Kahn Robert Julius Thorne Professor of Economics Emeritus, Cornell University; formerly Economic Adviser to the President of the United States
- Roger Kahn Author; journalist
- Justin Kaplan Writer; recipient, Pulitzer Prize and National Book Award

Stanley Kauffmann Film critic, New Republic

Alfred Kazin Writer; Distinguished Professor of English Emeritus, the Graduate Center, City University of New York

Trudy Kehret-Ward Educator; writer

Garrison Keillor Author and host of A Prairie Home Companion

Elizabeth T. Kennan Formerly President, Mount Holyoke College

Walter Kerr Drama critic (retired), New York Times; formerly drama critic, New York Herald Tribune; past President, New York Drama Critics' Circle; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Jamaica Kincaid Author

Florence King Writer; critic

Maxine Hong Kingston Writer; recipient, National Book Award, National Book Critics Circle Award, Anisfield-Wolf Race Relations Award, and PEN USA West Award in Fiction

Galway Kinnell Poet; Erich Maria Remarque Professor of Creative Writing, New York University; recipient, Pulitzer Prize, National Book Award

The Hon. Jeremy K.B. Kinsman Canadian Ambassador to Russia

The Hon. Jeane J. Kirkpatrick Diplomat; writer; educator; formerly U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

Maxine Kumin Writer; formerly Consultant in Poetry, Library of Congress; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Charles Kuralt Author; former CBS News correspondent

J.J. Lamberts* Professor Emeritus of English, Arizona State University; author of works on English usage

Milton I. Levine, M.D.* Professor of Clinical Pediatrics, New York Hospital--Cornell Medical Center; radio commentator, CBS; formerly syndicated columnist

Flora Lewis Senior Columnist, New York Times Syndicate

Robert E. Lewis Lexicographer; Editor in Chief, Middle English Dictionary; Professor of English, University of Michigan

Sara Lawrence Lightfoot Professor of Education, Harvard University; writer; recipient, MacArthur Prize

J. Anthony Lukas Author; journalist; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Russell Lynes* Writer; formerly Managing Editor, Harper's

Claudine B. Malone Management consultant; formerly Associate Professor, Harvard Business School

William Manchester Writer-in-Residence and Adjunct Professor of History Emeritus, Wesleyan University; Fellow, Pierson College, Yale University

Robert Manning Writer; editor; formerly Editor in Chief, Atlantic

Richard Curry Marius Novelist and biographer; Director of Expository Writing, Harvard University

Suzanne R. Massie Writer; lecturer on Russian history and culture; Fellow, Harvard Russian Research Center

Armistead Maupin Author

Alice E. Mayhew Editorial Director, Trade Division, Simon & Schuster

The Hon. Eugene McCarthy Writer, poet, and lecturer; formerly U.S. Senator from Minnesota

David McCord Poet; essayist; Honorary Curator of the Poetry and Farnsworth Rooms, Harvard University Library

Kenneth McCormick Senior Consulting Editor, Bantam Doubleday Dell; formerly Editor in Chief, Doubleday & Company, Inc.

Mary McGrory Journalist; columnist, Washington Post and Universal Press Syndicate; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Leonard Michaels Professor of English, University of California, Berkeley

James A. Michener Writer; recipient, Pulitzer Prize and Presidential Medal of Freedom

Hassan Minor, Jr. Vice President for Government Affairs, Howard University

Richard Scott Mitchell* Mineralogist; educator; writer; Professor of Environmental Science, University of Virginia; Executive Editor, Rocks and Minerals

Jessica Mitford Writer

Lance Morrow Essayist and Senior Writer, Time; recipient, National Magazine Award

The Hon. Daniel Patrick Moynihan U.S. Senator from New York; formerly Professor of Political Science, Harvard University

Cullen Murphy Managing Editor, Atlantic

The Hon. Maurine Neuberger Formerly U.S. Senator from Oregon; formerly Oregon state legislator

Ambassador Thomas M.T. Niles U.S. Ambassador to Greece; formerly Assistant Secretary of State for European and Canadian Affairs, U.S. Representative to the European Community, and U.S. Ambassador to Canada

David Ogilvy, C.B.E. Advertising copywriter; Officer of the Order of Arts and Letters (France); past Chair, United Negro College Fund

Cynthia Ozick Novelist; essayist; member, American Academy of Arts and Letters

Robert S. Pirie Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Rothschild Inc.

Alvin F. Poussaint, M.D. Clinical Professor of Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School

Ellen F. Prince Professor of Linguistics, University of Pennsylvania

Jane Bryant Quinn Journalist; syndicated financial columnist, Newsweek and Good Housekeeping

Tony Randall Actor

William James Raspberry Syndicated urban affairs columnist; Knight Professor for the Practice of Journalism, Duke University; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Edward W. Rosenheim Editor; writer; Professor of English Emeritus, University of Chicago

Judith Rossner Novelist

Leo Rosten Writer; social scientist; editor

Berton Roueché* Writer

Vermont Royster Writer; educator; Editor Emeritus, Wall Street Journal; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Carl Sagan David Duncan Professor of Astronomy and Space Sciences and Director, Laboratory for Planetary Studies, Cornell University; scientist; author; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Robert Saudek Television producer; former Division Chief, Library of Congress; Lecturer on Visual Studies, Harvard University; founding President, Museum of Broadcasting

Antonin Scalia Supreme Court Justice

Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. Writer; historian; educator; formerly Special Assistant to the President of the United States; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

Glenn T. Seaborg University Professor of Chemistry, University of California, Berkeley; formerly Chair, U.S. Atomic Energy Commission; recipient, Nobel Prize

Art Seidenbaum* Journalist; Editor, Opinion Section, Los Angeles Times

Harvey Shapiro Poet; Senior editor, New York Times Magazine

Elaine Showalter Professor of English, Princeton University

John Simon Drama critic, New York; film critic, National Review

Carlota S. Smith Centennial Professor of Linguistics; In Charge, Cognitive Science Program, University of Texas

Jack Smith* Columnist, Los Angeles Times

Susan Sontag Writer

Theodore C. Sorensen Attorney; writer; formerly Special Counsel to the President of the United States

Susan Stamberg Special Correspondent, National Public Radio

Wallace Stegner* Writer; founder and formerly Director, Stanford University Writing Program; recipient, Pulitzer Prize and National Book Award

Shane Templeton Foundation Professor of Curriculum and Instruction, University of Nevada, Reno

Paul Theroux Novelist; travel writer

Elizabeth Marshall Thomas Writer

Nina Totenberg Legal Affairs Correspondent, National Public Radio and ABC's "Nightline"; panelist, "Inside Washington"

Elizabeth C. Traugott Professor of Linguistics and English, Stanford University

Calvin Trillin Staff writer, New Yorker; columnist, Time

Anne Tyler Novelist; recipient, Pulitzer Prize

- The Hon. Stewart L. Udall Writer; Chairman of the Board, The Archaeological Conservancy, Santa Fe, New Mexico; formerly U.S. Secretary of the Interior and U.S. Representative from Arizona
- Helen H. Vendler A. Kingsley Porter University Professor of English, Harvard University
- Douglas Turner Ward Actor; playwright; recipient, Vernon Rice Award and Obie Award
- Calvert Watkins Victor S. Thomas Professor of Linguistics and the Classics, Harvard University; past President, Linguistic Society of America
- Fay Weldon Writer
- Eudora Welty Writer
- Jacqueline Grennan Wexler Writer; formerly President, Hunter College, City University of New York
- Tom Wicker Author; journalist; Editor, New York Times
- Alden S. Wood Lecturer on Editorial Procedures, Simmons College; national columnist on language and English usage
- Richard A. Young Writer, editor, lecturer, and engineer; Publisher, Pollution Engineering; Executive Director, National Registry of Environmental Professionals
- William Zinsser Writer, editor, and teacher; author of On Writing Well and Writing to Learn

* We regret that these members of the Usage Panel have died.

A NATURAL HISTORY OF ENGLISH: LANGUAGE, CULTURE, AND THE AMERICAN HERITAGE

LEE PEDERSON

American speech and writing record the transactions of nearly 400 years of social history. Dialects embody patterns of sound, syntax, and meaning; literature documents those spoken forms in poetry and prose. Through the process of communication, a native language becomes the social inheritance of its speakers. In describing the linguistic resources of American English this Dictionary becomes a cultural property book for all the American people.

A century before Noah Webster organized his first American dictionary (1806), Jonathan Edwards defined the materials of inquiry in remarkably modern terms, in words that should appeal to everyone, whether general reader or lexicographer:

By conversation, I mean intelligent beings expressing their minds one to another in words, or other signs intentionally directed to us for our notice, whose immediate and main design is to be signification of the mind of him who gives it.

Defining conversation as one might characterize language today, Edwards recognized the conceptual, symbolic, and functional aspects of human communication: the engagement of thought, the use of signs, and the transmission of ideas from one mind to another.

Today the English language makes conversation possible among 350 million native speakers who share its system of symbolic behavior. This number includes speakers of American, Australian, British, Canadian, Irish, New Zealand, and Scots English as members of the most influential speech community in the history of civilization. Their common cultural heritage makes possible the use of a single language by the members of these different groups, but each national variety with all its regional and social dialects reflects unique social experience. In a natural history of a national language, the richest gatherings of such material endure in folk speech--the unaffected, conservative expression of common people, as preserved in their oral traditions. National folk usage forms a subset of social dialects within regional dialects that comprise the larger divisions, the national varieties of a language.

Such experience makes a national vocabulary the most accessible and productive source of cultural information. Words are the complex linguistic structures that transmit the native lexicon through the systems of sound, grammar, and meaning. Words are also cultural emblems, symbols with social meaning that preserves the experience of human activity. Ralph Waldo Emerson said that words are signs of natural facts and wrote: "The etymologist finds the deadest word to have been once a brilliant picture. Language is fossil poetry." He demonstrated by his own example, moreover, that words are also signs of sociohistorical facts by giving the American meaning to transcendentalism. George Washington furnished the earliest citations for Democrat and Republican and was the first to receive the designation favorite son. Noah Webster made the earliest use of the phrase American English with characteristic impatience but ultimate accuracy: "In fifty years from this time [1806], the American English will be spoken by more people than all other dialects of the language." Such thought, conversation, and social interaction shaped the national character and gave substance to the lexicon. Contributions came from every sector of the American culture.

As the central component of American English culture, the national language transmits the essential messages of all other cultural systems. All of these are inseparable from language: family (kinship and marriage), training (education and economics), values (morality, ethics, and religious rites), government (political and social control), technology (artifacts of survival), and fine arts (artifacts of the creative imagination and of spiritual expression). From the earliest days on its first frontiers, American English carried forward the messages of the culture and the experience of the past. As it did its work, the national language established an identity and expressed native ideas in an American voice. This Dictionary records that American voice and gives substance to its underlying systems, language and culture.

Henry David Thoreau recognized a national dictionary as "a very concentrated and trustworthy natural history of the people":

What they have a word for, they have a thing for. A traveller may tell us that he thinks they used a pavement or built their cabins in a certain form, or soaked their seed corn in water . . . ; but when one gives us the word for these things, the question is settled,--that is a clincher. Let us know what words they had and how they used them, and we can infer almost all the rest. The lexicographer not only says that a certain people have or do a certain thing, but, being evidently a disinterested party, it may be allowed that he brings sufficient evidence to prove it. He does not so much assert as exhibit. He has no transient or private purposes to serve.

THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF AMERICAN ENGLISH

This natural history of the American people is the essential gift of the mother tongue. With all speakers of the English language Americans share the results of 1,500 years of linguistic development, and English had itself evolved for a full millennium before the first American words were spoken in Virginia. Furthermore, as a member of the Germanic language group of the Indo-European language family, English shares an ultimate heritage with most of the modern languages of Europe and Asia and with the official languages of every government in North and South America.

The essential features of the Germanic languages are these: (1) a thoroughgoing modification of the consonant system, especially the so-called First Germanic Consonant Shift, which distinguishes the system from all other Indo-European consonant patterns. It is captured in Grimm's Law and accounts for the differences between initial sounds in such cognate pairs as Latin/English pater/father, tu/thou, and hortus/garden; (2) mutation of vowels by neighboring sounds (umlaut) and the adaptation of the vowel system to express grammatical functions; (3) regular word stress on the first syllable; (4) seven classes of strong (irregular) verbs, such as sing, sang, sung; (5) three classes of weak (regular) verbs, such as love, loved, loved; (6) strong and weak adjectives that disappeared in Medieval English but endure elsewhere, as in Modern German and Norwegian definite and indefinite articles; and (7) a core vocabulary of common words. These shared characteristics define the 13 modern Germanic languages: Danish, Faroese, Icelandic, Norwegian, Swedish, German, Yiddish, Low German, Dutch, Afrikaans, Flemish, Frisian, and English.

The history of the English language begins with the arrival of Germanic invaders from the continent, said to be in A.D. 449 according to the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. In the eighth century the Venerable Bede identified these Germanic peoples as Angles, Saxons, and Jutes. In Britain they encountered their Indo-European relatives, the British Celts, who had settled in Britain centuries before. Like the Native Americans, the Celts left their greatest linguistic legacy in place names, such as Avon, Brynmaur (Welsh for "great hill"), Dover, Thames, and London. The Celts and Germans, however, were never separated by a distance greater than the narrow English Channel and shared a common Indo-European ancestry. Conversely, in North America, native inhabitants and newcomers emerged from different environments thousands of miles apart, from homelands distinguished by their native forms of vegetation, animal life, and social behavior.

As the dialects of the invaders merged in England they gave rise to the Northumbrian, Mercian, and Saxon varieties of the language that is called Old English today. Three tenth-century texts show the close similarities of those dialects in their respective translations of the Medieval Latin (Matthew 6:9) “pater noster, qui est in caelis, sanctificetur nomen tuum”:

NORTHUMBRIAN

Fader urer thu arth in heofnas, sie gehalgad noma thin Father our thou art in heaven, be hallowed name thy

MERCIAN

Fæder ure thu the in heofunum earth, beo gehalgad thin noma Father our thou which in heaven art, be hallowed thy name

WEST SAXON

Fæder ure thu the eart on heofonum, si thin nama gehalgod Father our thou which art in heaven, be thy name hallowed

Despite differences in pronunciation, word formation, and syntax, simple and effective conversation was surely possible among speakers of these different regional dialects of English. Conversation was also possible between the English and their Viking conquerors, the Norwegians and the Danes, many of whom settled primarily in what are now the northeast counties and took up peaceful ways with English wives. The fact that cultural interaction extended through most of the Old English period (449–1066) is evidenced in the greatest literary monument of the Anglo-Saxons, their epic poem Beowulf, which has a thoroughly Scandinavian setting and cast.

Words shared by Anglo-Saxons and Vikings include bring, can, come, father, folk, house, life, man, mine, mother, see, sit, smile, sorrow, summer, thine, wife, will, winter, and wise. In addition to hundreds of such intimate correspondences, the Scandinavians gave English many other familiar words through cultural interaction: anger, fellow, happy, husband, meek, root, rotten, skill, skin, skull, sky, and ugly. A second and much greater influence was brought to bear on the language and culture after the Battle of Hastings in 1066, when the Normans, French-speaking descendants of the Vikings, arrived from Normandy.

FRENCH INFLUENCES

The Norman-French presence marked the beginning of great changes in English social behavior, reflecting a gradual evolution of institutional and conversational forms. The chronicles and other writings show that Old English was in transition before the coming of the Normans, and later poetry and prose record unmodified Germanic forms deep into the Middle English period. In England, French became the official language of the dominant culture and spread its influence into every social system. Earlier, on the continent, the Normans had adopted Frankish laws, developed a system of knightly conduct, and perfected the skills of cavalry warfare.

Through force and friendship they gave the English a chivalric code, a parliamentary system of government, and one of the most distinctive architectural styles in all of European civilization. During the period of Norman dominion, English vernaculars evolved without a native standard dialect. The cultural influence of the Vikings emerged most clearly in Scandinavian loan words that marked regional speech in those northern counties where they had settled earlier, as the regional dialects of England were broadly reorganized. In the process, Middlesex became the preeminent focal area, and from its center arose the London Standard, the most influential social variety the English language has ever known.

Several dialects of 14th-century England were the immediate ancestors of the London Standard, but it drew most from the speech of the Southeast Midland region. The recorded usage of that era illustrates great linguistic change, a process that began more than 200 years earlier through the mingling of English and French. Causal relations for the change are hard to establish because phonological, grammatical, lexical, and cultural modifications were under way before the Battle of Hastings.

Romance language words, such as cheese, copper, and dish, entered Germanic dialects from Latin before the invasion of England in A.D. 449; from the same source came cleric, psalm, and temple with the Christianization of England in the seventh century. Later Romance loans in Old English include pride (French), capon and castle (French or Latin), and apostle, epistle, lily, and peony (Latin). Old English texts of the tenth century--the Vercelli Book, Exeter Book, Junius Manuscript, and Beowulf Manuscript--show the early simplification of weakly stressed vowels and inflectional patterns. During the reign of Edward the Confessor (1042–1066) a Norman association was firmly established between the king and his cousin, William the Conqueror, underscored by the installation of Robert of Jumieges as archbishop of Canterbury in 1051.

During the next 300 years the French presence altered the development of English through direct contributions and reinforcement of linguistic trends already under way. Four voiced fricative consonants emerged as distinctive elements of the sound system during this period, the initial sounds of veal, zeal, and thee, as well as the medial sound of leisure. None of these were distinctive in Old English, which had only the fricatives of feel, seal, thing, and pressure, respectively. The single outright contribution of Norman French to the English sound system was the diphthong of joy. French usage did accelerate the leveling of weakly stressed vowels, the simplification of noun, pronoun, and adjective inflections, and the transfer of many strong (irregular) verbs to weak (regular) conjugations. For example, Old English forms of modern doom included domes (genitive singular), domas (nominative plural), and domum (dative plural); all became doomes in Middle English. Strong verbs such as creopan, helpan, and slaepan became the weak verbs creep, help, and sleep, although a residue of the old patterns endures in the past forms crept and slept, as well as holp (pronounced like hope) in several current American dialects.

More French loan words entered English during the 14th century than during any comparable period before or since. As the French language fell into disuse in England, many of its culturally useful words were borrowed. Here the relationship between speech and writing is an important consideration. The documented evidence of the written forms is conservative and lags behind current usage. After King John lost the province of Normandy in 1204, French influence on English society began to decline. Before the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453) began, English speech had already returned as the native tongue of the nobility, and before the century closed, it had replaced French in the courts, Parliament, schools, and finally the highly formal documents of title, deeds, and wills.

Chaucer composed The Canterbury Tales in his native Southeast Midland dialect and so demonstrated the appropriateness of London speech as a literary medium, but The Canterbury Tales did not mark the triumph of a standard language within the culture at large. Just two years before he began his masterwork, Chaucer worried about the diversity of current speech in his envoy for Troilus and Criseyde (c. 1385):

And for ther is so gret diversite
In Englissh and in wrytyng of oure tonge, So prey I God that non myswrite the[e], Ne the[e] mys metre for defaute of tonge;
And red wherso thow be, or elles songe,
That thow be understonde, God I biseche!
But yet to purpos of my rather speche.

He prayed that none miswrite, mismeter (wrongly scan the measures), or misunderstand the purpose of his earlier (rather) speech, his spoken words that became this “litel bok.”

THE EMERGENCE OF MODERN ENGLISH

Chaucer had good reason for concern. The Great Vowel Shift was beginning a modification in quality of all long vowels and diphthongs, and the inconsistent treatment of weakly stressed vowels placed many syllables in jeopardy. The shift raised [a] to [æ] (and later to [e]), [e] to [i], [] to [o], and [o] to [u]. The vowels formerly pronounced [i] and [u] became, respectively, [i] (later [ai]) and [u] (later [au]).¹ Thus Chaucer's final vowels in diversite and the[e] rhyme with modern they; his verb write rhymes with modern feet; biseche and speche rhyme with modern aitch; and the vowel in oure rhymes with the vowel in boot. Although metrical evidence is difficult to interpret, Chaucer quite possibly pronounced the weakly stressed e in myswrite

1. All pronunciations in this article are in the notation of the International Phonetic Alphabet. The Pronunciation Key lists these symbols and their equivalents in the pronunciation system employed for this Dictionary.

and elles but ignored it in tonge, understonde, speche, and other words in the same stanza that comprise those seven iambic pentameter lines of rhyme royal.

At the outset of the Early Modern English period (1500–1700) fewer than 5 million people in the world spoke English, as compared to 12 million speakers of French, 10 million of German, and 8 million of Spanish. During the next two centuries those “intelligent beings expressing their minds” in English included More, Tyndale, Milton, Newton, Locke, and Dryden. At its center was Elizabethan English, the language of Shakespeare, Marlowe, Bacon, Donne, Raleigh, Spenser, and the queen herself. From this stage of linguistic development came the earliest varieties of American English. By 1700 the number of English speakers had nearly doubled, while German, Italian, and Spanish had scarcely maintained their numbers of two centuries earlier, and only French surpassed the growth rate of English among the western European nations.

As an emergent world language, English advanced with the spread of the London Standard and general education, with the loosening of class distinctions, and through the influence of what would today be called the mass media. By the year 1500 printed books in all of Europe included 35 thousand titles, most of which were in Latin. During the next 140 years 20 thousand English titles appeared in print, and scribal composition of manuscripts became virtually a lost art. England regained its cultural self-reliance with those new sources of influence and the spread of empire. In 1579 E.K., the anonymous editor of Spenser’s The Shepheardes Calender, commended his author and reflected the spirit of the age:

For in my opinion it is one special prayse, of many which are dew to this Poete, that he hath laboured to restore, as to their rightfull heritage such good and naturall English words, as haue ben long time out of vse and almost cleane disherited. Which is the onely cause, that our Mother tonge, which truely of it self is both ful enough for prose and stately enough for verse, hath long time ben counted most bare and barrein of both.

The English recognized the legitimacy of their native tongue for all modes of communication, including those technical fields formerly dominated by Latin and Greek. In his Elementary (1582) Richard Mulcaster defended the use of English and explained the implications of his work:

For the account of our tongue, both in pen and speech, no man will doubt therof who is able to judge what those things be which make any tongue to be of account; which things I take to be three: the authority of the people which speak it, the matter and argument wherein the speech dealeth, the manifold use for which the speech serveth. For all which three our tongue needeth not to give place to any of her peers.

Mulcaster and others wrote rules for pronunciation and grammar and tried to enrich the national word store. Earlier the Italians, Spanish, French, and Germans had done the same things for their own varieties of speech, as the transformation of local vernaculars into national languages characterized the Renaissance in every European country that it touched.

During the reign of Elizabeth I (1558–1603) a language pattern developed that was to become the base form of early American English. London usage reflected the linguistic patriotism of the English Renaissance and accepted forms from a variety of regional and social dialects in the development of a spoken standard. Roger Ascham, Elizabeth's Latin tutor, was a Yorkshireman; Raleigh preserved his distinctive Devonshire speech throughout his life; Essex was from Hertfordshire; Sidney, from Kent; Shakespeare, from Warwickshire; Donne, although of Welsh ancestry, emerged from the London merchant class. The language habits of all those speakers contributed to the shaping of the urban pattern and to the development of vigorous conversational speech.

THE BEGINNINGS OF AMERICAN ENGLISH

The fluid structure of Early Modern English underlies the formation of American English. Although the Great Vowel Shift had assigned new values to the long vowels, many British, Scots, and Irish social dialects were slow to accept all of these emergent features. Morphology and syntax showed inventiveness and flexibility in word formation and adaptations, as with the free use of affixes in word building (re-, de-, -ish, -ize), functional shift of parts of speech (nouns used as verbs, verbs as nouns, and both as adjectival or adverbial modifiers), frequent parenthetical expression, and phrase structures of predication, complementation, and coordination that reflect the intonational contours of the spoken language.

Drawn from that rapidly flowing stream, American English shows a much greater uniformity than its origins might suggest. Einar Haugen has called this evolution of the national language in America "Babel in reverse." The concept of the American melting pot can be found in the writing of Michel Guillaume Jean de Crèvecoeur (J. Hector St. John), a Norman-French immigrant and the eponym of St. Johnsbury, Vermont. In Letters from an American Farmer (1782) he provided the logic for a unified American language and culture:

What, then, is the American, this new man? He is either a European or the descendant of a European; hence that strange mixture of blood, which you will find in no other country. . . . He is an American, who, leaving behind him all his ancient prejudices and manners, receives new ones from the new mode of life he has embraced, the new government he obeys, and the new rank he holds. He becomes an American by being received in the broad lap of our great Alma Mater [Dear Mother]. Here individuals of all nations are melted into a new race of men, whose labors and posterity will one day cause great changes in the world. Americans are the western pilgrims who are carrying along with them that great mass of arts, sciences, vigor, and industry which began long since in the East; they will finish the great circle. The Americans were once scattered all over Europe; here they are incorporated into one of the finest systems of population which has ever appeared, and which will hereafter become distinct by the power of the different climates they inhabit. The American ought therefore to love this country better than that wherein either he or his forefathers were born.

The first substantial collection of immigrant literature appeared in New England, where writers worked with Elizabethan patterns and recorded a variety of occasional spellings and distinctive forms. In The History of Plimoth Plantation, 1620–1647, William Bradford wrote burthen, fadom, furder, gifen (given), gusle (guzzle), trible (triple), and vacabund (vagabond). Roger Williams rhymed abode/God, blood/good, and America/away in A Key into the Language of America (1643). Anne Bradstreet paired conceit/great, stood/flood, and satisfy/reality in The Tenth Muse Lately Sprung Up in America (1650). Two generations later Edward Taylor alternated spoil and spile, as well as soot and sut, and rhymed is/kiss, far/cur, and vile/soil.

Early American grammar also showed a great variety of forms. In 1630, while sailing westward aboard the Arbella, John Winthrop preached “A Modell of Christian Charity” with the line “We must love brotherly without dissimulation; we must love one another with a pure heart fervently.” Bradford used rid, runned (and ranne), drunk, writ, and shrunk as past forms of ride, run, drink, write, and shrink, respectively. Williams declared, “My disease is I know not what” and offered the interrogative form “Sleep you?” Mary Rowlandson wrote, “It is not my tongue or pen can express the sorrow of my heart” in her captive narrative of 1676.

During these same years cultural activity all along the Atlantic seaboard produced the first Americanisms. The following native words, among hundreds of others, originated, gained special meaning, or entered the English language through American speech in the 17th century: creek (stream), fat pine, green corn, and papoose from Massachusetts; catfish, corn (maize), mock[ing]bird, polecats (skunk), and raccoon from Virginia; Chippewa, groundhog, Manhattan, and Podunk from New York; gang [of birds], hominy, snakeroot, and Virginian from Maryland; frontier people, oyster rake, samp, and wampum from Rhode Island; grocery (store), hot-cakes (corn cakes), peavine (a climbing plant similar to the pea), and sunfish from Pennsylvania; settlement and swampland from Connecticut; Dutch grass (any one of various grasses) and hickory nut from South Carolina; frontier from New Jersey. Beyond the frontiers pilot (a guide over a land route) appeared in what is now Colorado, and Miami from what is now Illinois.

NATIVE AMERICAN INFLUENCES

These words suggest the importance of Native American loans, especially for artifacts and places. From the Algonquian dialects alone English and French in the New World borrowed more than a hundred terms that remain current today. In addition to Chippewa, hominy, Manhattan, papoose, Podunk, samp, squash, and wampum, the eastern tribes provided caribou, mackinaw, pone, Tammany, terrapin, and toboggan. Such terms often suggest multiple language contacts; as caribou and toboggan entered through Canadian French in the north, barbecue, canoe, and cushaw came out of the West Indies through Spanish. Spanish later transmitted coyote and peyote from the Nahuatl language of Mexico. From Quechua, probably through the cooperative efforts of French and Spanish, the New Orleans term lagniappe appeared somewhat later. American place names are the greatest Native American contribution. From Appalachia and the Alleghenies, across all five of the Great Lakes (Erie, Ontario, Huron, Michigan, and Superior [Ojibwa Gitchi via French Supérieur]); from Chicago to Sitka, native words cover the continent. Emblematic of American language and culture are the blends, such as Bayou La Batre, Alabama (Choctaw bayuk, “creek” + French de la Batre, “of the [artillery] battery”), and Minneapolis, Minnesota (Dakota minne, “water” + Greek/English (a)polis, “city”), or the loan translations Spearfish, South Dakota, Ten Sleep, Wyoming, Warroad, Minnesota, and Yellow Dirt Creek, Georgia, besides the native loans of the state names Alabama (people), Dakota (people), and Minnesota (Dakota minne, “water” + sota, “white”).

LOANS FROM THE EUROPEAN LANGUAGES

Early loans from European languages correspond with Dutch, French, and German settlements in the coastal colonies and along the first interior frontiers. During their New Amsterdam experience the Dutch added to American English the words boss, Bowery, coleslaw, cookie, sleigh, stoop, and waffle. Later they gave more place names, such as Catskill, Kinderhook, and Schuyler. Although Thoreau spoke of “Yankee ingenuity” in 1843, the durable nickname probably had its origin in Jan (Janke), the Dutch diminutive for John (Johnny); Saint Nicholas, clipped to Sinterklaas in a Dutch dialect, became Santa Claus before the Revolutionary War.

French loans contrast sharply with the Dutch and later German contributions. Although they also gave English such ordinary household words as chowder, pumpkin, sashay, shanty, and shivaree, the enterprising French illustrate their experience in a distinctive set of loans. Explorers, missionaries, and frontier warriors made American words of bateau, crevasse, levee, portage, prairie, and voyageur. As the English, Dutch, and Swedes struggled to control the seaboard, the French ranged across the interior and left their mark with the names of places at Bienville, Cape Girardeau, Prairie du Chien, and Sault Sainte Marie.

Early German loans on the frontier are difficult to ascertain. Like the Scandinavians and Anglo-Saxons in England, the Germans and English spoke languages with a common word stock that still endures in the basic vocabularies of both cultures. For the same reason it is impossible to determine whether nosh (snack) and schlemiel are of Yiddish or German origin and whether spook and dumb (stupid) are of Dutch or German origin, because in each case the words occur in both languages. Only when the Germans established discrete territories, as the Dutch had in New York, did the loans begin to appear in significant numbers from Pennsylvania, Cincinnati, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and east-central Texas. From early Pennsylvania, American English probably received smearcase, ponhaws (pannhass, “pan” + “hare,” or “scrapple”), rainworm (earthworm), and possibly George Washington’s most familiar title, The Father of His Country, which first appeared as Der Landes Vater on a Nord Amerikanische Kalender for 1779.

THE AMERICAN FRONTIER

The frontier contributions of the Swedes and folk speakers of British, Irish, and Scots dialects are virtually impossible to identify because these Northern Europeans were soon united in a common culture. As Crèvecoeur described the people at the outbreak of the Revolution:

They are a mixture of English, Scotch, Irish, French, Dutch, Germans, and Swedes. From this promiscuous breed, that race now called Americans have arisen. The eastern provinces [i.e., the coastal colonies] must indeed be excepted as being the unmixed descendants of Englishmen.

Early frontier speech probably included the pronouns hit (for it), hisn, ourn, theirn, and yourn, the inflected verb forms clumb, drug, holp, and riz, the auxiliary construction mought could (or might could), and a large number of folk pronunciations and lexical items, forms transmitted through the oral tradition of the common people. Scots forms, also appearing in the poetry of Burns, include duds (clothes), gumption, hunkers, mountain billy (hillbilly), tow (hemp fiber), and the distinctive pronunciations reflected in chimla (chimney), het (heated), and southron (southern), as well as the simplification of consonant clusters, as in kin’ (kind) and sin’ (since), and the total assimilation of l after back vowels, as in ca’ (call), fu’ (full), and howe (hollow). From Irish sources probably came mammy, moonshine, and mountain dew. General English folk forms also included clean, flat, and plumb (all meaning “completely”), passel (from parcel), and sass (from sauce). Many of these forms appear in Middle English, and all survive in current American Midland and Southern dialects.

THE EVOLUTION OF DIALECTS IN AMERICAN ENGLISH

During the 18th century the principal regions of American English developed. These are the historic cultural areas. Every major regional dialect area, past and present, corresponds almost perfectly with a cultural area delimited by other social systems. The presbyteries of Appalachia mark the pattern of Scottish settlement, the Dutch and German barns show a Germanic presence in the eastern and east-central states, the methods of cooking cornmeal in pones, dodgers, and hushpuppies reflect the settlement patterns of various groups, and the superstitions connected with chicken clavicles (wishbone, pulley bone, or lucky bone) identify social groups, as do the Southern greetings hey and Christmas Gift! The styles of folk, blues, jazz, and rock music also correspond with cultural areas, contrasting the perfected forms of the Carter Family in southern Appalachia, Huddie Ledbetter in the Red River Delta, and Robert Johnson in the Yazoo Delta, the rural blues of Richard Amerson and the urban blues of Bill Broonzy, the Kansas City jazz of Count Basie and the Chicago jazz of Bud Freeman, or the middle Georgia rock of the Allman Brothers and the southern California rock of the Beach Boys. All of these are as regionally distinctive as are the voices of the musicians. Wherever clear-cut boundaries of culture can be reconstructed on the basis of historical information from archaeology, music, graphic arts, or the social sciences, dialect differences can be predicted, based on the most persuasive kind of circumstantial evidence: the recorded experience of the forebears of a speech community.

Because language changes, many of the following historical dialect features--such as bucket, firefly, hushpuppy, and lariat--may no longer reflect current usage, especially among the young and better educated. Elsewhere, general currency forms--such as harmonica, headcheese, mantelpiece, and wishbone--serve as useful internal, subregional dialect features, contrasting with folk forms in systematic dialect study, as, for example, French harp, souse, fireboard and pulley bone, respectively. Finally, the diachronic perspective of essay and the synchronic perspective of the Dictionary itself make it impossible to integrate such examples in their historical settings in terms wholly consistent with usage today or with ultimate etymologies. For those reasons, the designation of some forms listed below will not conform with either the current regional labels or the ultimate etymological sources identified in the text of the Dictionary. The social evolution of such words, however, provides historical context and cultural foundations for the contemporary usage the Dictionary describes.

Modern American seaboard dialects preserve the early system from Maine to the Florida Keys and along the Gulf shores to Brownsville, Texas. The coastal communities shared the evolution of urban British pronunciation, grammar, and vocabulary, but very different speech forms developed throughout the interior along the old frontier. Neither of these regions is a uniform cultural area, but remarkable concordances of speech endure. Early centers at Boston, New York, and Philadelphia were quite different from their southern counterparts at Richmond, Charleston, and New Orleans. Along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, however, the dialects shared important features: the loss of constricted r after vowels (making popper homophonous with Papa); a contrast of stressed vowels in Mary, merry, and marry; a most distinctive diphthong in dues, news, and shoes that approaches that in few, music, and pupil; the loss of h in whip, white, wheelbarrow, and similar words; and even a "broad a" in hammer, pasture, and Saturday. Besides the familiar British past form et (of eat), the coastal dialects also shared lexical features, such as hog's head cheese, haslets (or harslets), and piazza (porch).

The coastal pattern divides near the Potomac River. To the north the language and culture drifted away from British influence more quickly than they did in the South, where the early planters of Jefferson's agrarian democracy required close association with British commerce, education, and industry. Southern coastal dialects preserved several other British features: the “clear l” of lean in Billy and Nelly, as opposed to the “dark l” of look and law, a flapped r in three and thresh, as heard in some British pronunciations of very, and even an occasional back vowel in pot and crop. Along the Gulf Coast these forms had mixed currency, largely because of the powerful influence of New Orleans, a cultural center that dominated the entire interior South until the Civil War. Basic Northern and Southern contrasts persist from the Potomac to the mouth of the Rio Grande: the Southern drawls (patterns of diphthongs, lengthening, and intonation), the vowel of ride [a] (which Northerners confuse with rod [ɑ]), the vowel of bird [ɜɪ] (which Northerners confuse with Brooklynese), a positional variant [ʊ] in house and mouse but not in rouse and cows, the plural pronoun you-all (or y’all), the past form drug (of drag), and a large set of vocabulary forms, such as mosquito hawk (dragonfly), crocus sack (burlap bag), snap beans (string beans), and tote (carry).

The New Orleans focal area interrupts this pattern, extending its influence from Mobile Bay to beyond the Sabine River. A Coastal and New Orleans contrast is marked by serenade, bateau, clabber cheese, and mush along the Southern coast, except in the area of New Orleans dominion, where shivaree (charivari), pirogue, cream cheese, and cush-cush (mush) prevail. Although cush has currency throughout the South, nowhere else is there a double form to match the New Orleans usage. Other distinctive terms are flambeau (makeshift torch), (h)armonica (instead of Southern harp), lagniappe (something extra, instead of South Carolina brawtus, Texas-Spanish pilon, and Florida-Minorcan countra), wishbone (instead of South Midland and Southern pulley bone), and creole tomatoes (instead of Northern cherry tomatoes and Southern tommytoes).

Unlike coastal speech, the Midland dialects of that transition area between the North and South grew up in the interior. From Pennsylvania to Georgia the eastern boundary of the Midland dialect area coincides with the geography of the old frontier.

Settlers took the land in the great migrations out of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia during the half century (1725–1775) that preceded the Revolutionary War. Thomas Walker’s discovery of the Cumberland Gap in 1750 provided a southern gateway to the Midwest, that passage into Kentucky for the ancestors of both Jefferson Davis and Abraham Lincoln. Before the War of 1812 the frontier extended in the north out of Pittsburgh and down the Ohio River and in the south out of the Yadkin Valley of North Carolina, across Tennessee and Kentucky along the Wilderness Trail of Pennsylvania’s Daniel Boone.

Like other American dialects, the Midland varieties rose from a British-English base in Pennsylvania, but the social composition on the frontier was different. Six of the seven ethnic groups mentioned by Crèvecoeur did not speak British English before they arrived in North America. Later those residents of the interior Midland dialect areas were without ports of entry to receive the influence of English culture and to share in the development of the prestigious London forms. More important, the frontier people occupied themselves mainly with survival in a hostile region. Those factors influenced the disparate groups in a uniform way: Midland dialects resisted the phonological changes under way in England and in the coastal colonies to the north and south; English, Irish, and Scots folk speech reinforced the regional grammar and vocabulary, giving these American dialects identities of their own.

The Midland pattern contrasts most sharply with the interior varieties of Northern and Southern speech. With a domain that in modern times extends from western New England and upstate New York, along the southern shores of the Great Lakes and then northwestward into the upper Midwest, the Inland Northern dialect spread from its eastern source after the War of 1812. The construction of the Erie Canal from Albany to Buffalo gave upstate New York and New England access to the Great Lakes, as had the wagon roads that preceded the watercourse and the railroads that followed it. As Northern speech extended out of upper New Jersey and northern Pennsylvania, a major dialect boundary was established with the southern limit of darning needle (dragonfly), pail, and whiffletree, contrasting with North Midland snake feeder, bucket, and singletree. From upstate New York and across Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa westward, the division of Northern and North Midland remains apparent in the pronunciation of fog and hog, which are pronounced with the vowel of father in the North and the vowel of dog in the North Midland; in the pronunciation of the diphthong of cow, house, and towel, which is [ʊ] in the North, beginning with a lower vowel that is closer to that of father, and [æʊ] in the North Midland, beginning with a vowel that is closer to that of lather; and in the existence of an excrescent r in “warsh” and “Warshington” in some Midland speech. Formerly distinctive are the Northern terms stone wall, pail, swill, teter-totter, faucet, pit [of a cherry or peach], and firefly, contrasting with the Midland terms stone fence, bucket, slops, seesaw, spicket (spigot), seed, and lightning bug. In the West the Northern/Midland distinction is most clearly heard in the pronunciation of car, yard, and similar words: the Northern pronunciation is marked by a vowel closer to that of father; the Midland pronunciation, by one closer to the vowel of saw.

Prior to the Civil War other interior forms spread from south of the Great Lakes to the fringes of the plantation cultures from Virginia to Texas and gave rise to the principal Midland varieties, North Midland and South Midland. Between those contrasting cultures the Midland area is perhaps best divided by a phonological Mason-Dixon Line established by the pronunciation of the medial consonant of greasy, with [s] to the north and [z] to the south. On the Atlantic Coast the boundary replicates the historic Mason-Dixon Line, the common border of Pennsylvania and Maryland. Philadelphia, with the pronunciation [s], must be considered a Northern territory. Westward, however, the difference in pronunciation marks the division within the Midland territory, from Ohio to Missouri. Heading south, a traveler encounters the line at approximately the same place where grits replace hash browns on the breakfast menu, and where the words nice, white, and rice are all pronounced with a vowel Northerners confuse with the vowel common to cat, hat, and sat, whether the side dish is served with Indiana- or Kentucky-fried chicken. With this feature comes the first suggestion of the drawl, indigenous bluegrass music, and stock car instead of Indy-type or midget automobile racing. Along the same line the northern extent of Southern cultural penetration appears in these contrasts: North Midland bunk, wishbone, husks, headcheese, fritters, bag, and turtle, versus South Midland pallet, pulley bone, shucks, souse (or pressed meat), flitters, sack, and terrapin.

South Midland speech is a Southern dialect, formerly called Hill Southern in contrast with the Upcountry and Lower Southern patterns (Plantation Southern) to the south and east. The principal South Midland/Southern boundary follows the Blue Ridge across Virginia, the Carolinas, and Georgia. In South Carolina and Georgia the boundary coincides with the 180-day growing season for cotton, the waterways, the soil types, and the cultural organizations inseparable from the plantation systems devoted to the cultivation of indigo, rice, and cane, as well as cotton.

Those geographic features and cultural factors underlie the Midland enclaves, as far south as the Florida Panhandle, and their Southern counterparts as far north as the St. Francis Basin of Arkansas and the bootheel of Missouri, the cotton country around New Madrid. South Midland is marked by the presence of a constricted r after a vowel in bird, car, and horse and monophthongs in right and ride, whereas Southern preserves a diphthong in right and similar words. Lexical contrasts include South Midland green beans, red worm, fireboard, French harp (for harmonica), and tow sack (for burlap bag), versus Southern snap beans, earthworm, mantelpiece, harp, and crocus sack. In the east, South Midland contrasts with Virginia Piedmont Southern: snake feeder, peanuts, and terrapin, versus snake doctor, goobers, and cooter. In the Mississippi Valley the South Midland dialect occupies the territory bypassed by the plantation cultures as unsuitable for the production of cotton, cane, and rice.

Where the planters extended their operations north and west, as in upper Louisiana, western Tennessee, Arkansas, and eastern Texas, Lower Southern features outline the area. The Coastal and Gulf plains were settled from the east, but the deltas of the Mississippi, Atchafalaya, Red, Yazoo, and St. Francis rivers received their populations from the south. As a result, interior Southern areas do not show the predictable gradations of uniformity from east to west that are found in the North and North Midland regions.

Instead, the pattern extends from north to south, from the Piedmont at the southern fringe of eastern Appalachia, through the Coastal Plains and Piney Woods, to the Atlantic and Gulf coastal regions. In the Piney Woods dialects of the interior lower plains of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, as well as the dialects of upper East Texas, below the plains and above the coastal strip, a striking configuration emerges. Piney Woods pronunciation includes three systematic features: (1) constricted postvocalic r, as in beard, bird, and butter; (2) excrescent constriction, yielding “Chicargo” (Chicago), croker sack (crocus sack), skeeter hawk (mosquito hawk), and “tomaters” (tomatoes); and (3) vocalized l in hotel, hospital, and bulge. These forms mark the regional vocabulary: piney-woods rooter (range hog), smut (soot), mantelboard (mantelpiece), corn dodger (cornmeal dumpling), pinders (peanuts), press peach (cling peach), and fat lighterd (resinous kindling). Lower Southern dialects are distinguished by coastal forms and by the distinctive contributions of the New Orleans focal area. Coastal Southern pronunciation includes the loss of constricted r after vowels, the contrast between the stressed vowels of Mary, merry, and marry, a “clear l” in Billy and Nelly, and vocabulary items such as mosquito hawk, crocus sack, hoghead cheese (or hog’s head cheese), and red bug (instead of chigger). Besides locker (for closet) and flambeau (for make-shift lamp), the domain of New Orleans is marked by the pervasiveness of gallery (for porch), lagniappe, pirogue (dugout canoe), cream cheese (cottage cheese), wish-bone (instead of South Midland and Southern pulley bone), and (h)armonica (instead of South Midland French harp or Southern harp). Such forms appear as far north as Lake Providence and Monroe, Louisiana; Yazoo City, Mississippi; and along the Gulf Coast beyond the Sabine River into Texas and eastward to Mobile Bay.

Western dialects begin beyond the 98th Meridian, 40 miles west of the Red River in North Dakota and 50 miles west of Fort Worth in Texas, where annual rainfall usually fails to exceed the 22 inches required for traditional Midwestern farming. Thus, modern agricultural methods, such as dry farming and irrigation through reservoirs, and tools, such as the Oliver moldboard plow and the spring-tooth harrow, opened the West for general settlement only after the Civil War. Before that, pioneers followed the Oregon and Mormon trails into the Upper Rockies and the Pacific Northwest, and the Santa Fe and Old Spanish trails into the Lower Rockies and California. Today, Western dialects divide primarily south to north, marked by the extent of the Spanish influence through Texas, New Mexico, and southern California, at least as far north as lower Colorado or even Montana among ranchers.

History complicates the speech of the West, by the blending of Northern, Midland, and Southern forms as well as by a heavy Spanish influence from Texas to California. The North Midland boundary extends over Iowa and cuts across South Dakota in a northwesterly direction. In Montana and Idaho the presence of North and South Midland features reflects the history of the frontier and the enterprises of cattle, agriculture, and mining. Throughout the Rocky Mountains and the urban West Coast the dialects of early settlers determined the pattern. Seattle and San Francisco speech grew from an Inland Northern base quite similar to old-fashioned Chicago speech. Denver and Los Angeles also developed from the same source, although the Hispanic influence in both places and the successive waves of newcomers from the East, especially in Los Angeles, have obscured the regional pattern that endures with greater stability in Seattle and San Francisco. The Midland influence is strongest west of the Rockies, from Idaho to Arizona, and especially in the conservative speech of Boise, Salt Lake City, and Phoenix. American English in Wyoming, Colorado, and Utah, for example, includes old-fashioned Inland Northern features, such as [ɪ] in creek, fully constricted postvocalic r, [hw] in wheel, whip, and similar words, and homophony in marry, Mary, and merry, and teeter-totter (seesaw); Midlands green beans, gunnysack, and anymore (meaning “nowadays” in positive statements); and Southern roasting ears (corn on the cob), slop bucket, and clabber. Beside these, are the distinctive Interior Western pronunciations [æ] instead of [a] in Colorado and Nevada, [i] instead of [e] in rodeo, and widespread replacement of [a] for [ɔ] in automobile, log, and Utah.

THE INFLUENCE OF BILINGUALISM

The national idiom grew through contacts between various languages and dialects. Spanish, French, and German bilingualism marks the regional patterns of Florida, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, and south Texas. Gullah, an English-based pidgin, developed in the Sea Islands of South Carolina and Georgia. From that source many varieties of American Black folk speech are derived, reflecting various stages of creolization as the dialects merge with the dominant patterns. Social dialects grew through urban and rural experiences throughout the country, many of these related to the Americanization of European bilinguals in the urban North and the integration of Black people in all sectors of society. These dialects are further conditioned and refined by formal and situational styles, including slang, ethnic variation, and patterns of usage reflecting socioeconomic class.

Before urban American Spanish gained prominence in San Antonio, Los Angeles, and Miami, that language had already made large contributions to American English in the West. Besides place names, extending from the Rio Grande to Montana, the Spanish vocabulary marks the cattle country with Western words: arroyo, bronc(o), canyon, chaparral, cinch, corral, frijol, hoosegow, lariat, lasso, mesa, mustang, patio, pronto, ranch, remuda, rodeo, sombrero, and tortilla.

In bilingual communities Spanish speakers of English tend to avoid regional dialect forms in favor of terms from the general vocabulary, despite the distinctive accent and syntax carried over from the parent language. The same tendency appears among the French in Louisiana, who freely use their native loans, such as banquette (sidewalk), boudin (blood sausage), fais-dodo (country dance), and jam-balaya, as well as loan translations and adaptations, such as coffee black, cream cheese (cottage cheese), green beans, (h)armonica, and wishbone, resisting the Southern regionalisms clabber cheese, snap beans, and pulley bone. German, Italian, Scandinavian, Slavic, Spanish, and Yiddish speakers reflect the same trend in the urban North, perhaps through learning from books rather than by simple oral acquisition and perhaps through efforts to translate from their native tongues. In becoming Americans all of these people enriched the national language and culture. If examples are limited to food alone, Germans provided bock beer and pretzels, Italians brought antipasto and pizza, Scandinavians added lingonberries and smorgasbord; Slavs contributed kolacky and kielbasa, Yiddish-speaking Germans and Slavs gave bagels and gefilte fish; and Mexican Spanish provided the base for an endless variety of enchiladas, burritos, and tacos, as its cooking entered the fast-food industry.

CONTRIBUTIONS FROM AFRICAN LANGUAGES

The full impact of African languages through Gullah and Plantation Creole remains to be assessed properly, but evidence suggests the influence is significant. Among certain and probable African loans, these have gained currency in the national language: banana, cola (kola), goober, gumbo, juke (-box, -joint, and -step), okra, voodoo, and yam, as well as, perhaps, boogie-woogie, chigger, gorilla, and tote. Some are regionally restricted to the South: cooter (turtle), cush and cush-cush, and pinder (peanut). Others seem limited to the South Carolina and Georgia Low Country: buckra (white man), det (heavy), as in det rain and det shower, and pinto (coffin). In addition to the loan words from Gullah, the creolization of that auxiliary language may also have left its mark on American English phonology and grammar. As a contact vernacular, a language of business (and a possible source of the word pidgin), Gullah provided a medium of communication for African slaves and their American overseers. Thus, the pidgin was a language variety native to neither group. In the development of Plantation Creole the language acquired highly complex phonological and grammatical rules, as well as a complete vocabulary, necessary in a self-reliant, independent language. General Southern features today include many correspondences with Plantation Creole, the creolized English Black folk speech of the plantation cultures of cane, cotton, indigo, and rice. Southern vowel nasality often replaces nasal consonants in am, been, and bacon, but this feature occurs in Parisian and Louisiana French as well as in Plantation Creole and West African languages. The simplification of consonant clusters, as in des (for desk and desks) or tase (for taste and tastes), is commonplace in all of those languages, as well as in the Scots dialect of Robert Burns, who like American Southerners, Black and white, often assimilated l after back vowels, as in fa' (fall) and saut (salt). Similarly, the pervasive deletion of articles, copulas, prepositions, and other function words, so characteristic of Gullah and its creolized extensions, is a feature regularly associated with the speech of French, German, and Spanish bilinguals. Nevertheless, this fact remains: large numbers of Black and white speakers share those features across the lower South, especially in those areas dominated by the plantation cultures.

THE INFLUENCE OF SOCIAL DIALECTS

As creolization reflects the blending of languages and cultures, so slang, argot, and social dialects mark the activities of subcultures within the basic social structure. Although nothing as widespread as Cockney and Australian rhyming slang has developed in America, inventive usage here has steadily modified native speech. Most slang originates in the specialized conversations of particular groups, in which usage reinforces group identity and develops into private codes that may later gain widespread acceptance. These include such now-familiar terms as clout and gerry- mander from politics, blues and jazz from music, headline and editorial from journalism, and by a nose, inside track, front-runner, shoo-in, and sure thing from the vocabulary of horse racing. The distinctive words of other groups--pickpockets, CB operators, and computer specialists--suggest the ways in which the subcultures function and illustrate the ways in which language develops.

Social dialects also underlie the regional patterns of speech, reflecting absolute factors, such as sex, age, and ethnic origin, and relative factors, such as education, experience, and social position. Since a healthy language is always changing, the age and experience of its speakers are recorded by incipient, dominant, and recessive forms, as demonstrated in the vocabulary of automobiles: the emergent gas-guzzler and pimpmobile, the durable sedan and limousine, and the relic tin lizzie and roadster. Ethnic terms are the cultural birthrights of individual speakers and great linguistic resources for society at large. Yiddish schlock, chutzpah, macher (fixer, operator, clever fellow), and schmaltz have moved from the Jewish communities to the national language, as have the specialized Sicilian terms capo, Cosa Nostra, and Mafia in urban American subcultures. Education reinforces language trends with the spread of generalized patterns of pronunciation, grammar, and vocabulary, but these are challenged by migrant accents in Chicago today just as they were in London 400 years ago. As Latinos made macho an American word, Black people have put many Southern regionalisms, such as funky, up-tight, and right on, into common usage. The language reflects cultural patterns, refined and strengthened through association and social status.

Social dialects also mark the evolution of a language. In America the middle classes have generated great changes. These include the absorption of immigrant cultures at the lower level and influence upon the dominant culture at the higher level. As the linguistic and cultural forms are traditionally conservative in both aristocratic and folk groups, however different their social styles, middle-class society and speech alter those conventional patterns from below and from above. Just as members of the secular and regular clergy, educators, lawyers, politicians, and physicians helped shape the London Standard from the early Middle Ages through the English Renaissance because they were conversant with both the ruling class and the common people, so new patterns of American usage grow today through the influence of upper-middle-class dialects. Even stronger influences appear from the speech of the lower middle class, especially in urban centers, where large numbers of workers come in contact with the entire community in their daily work.

Of these, ethnic dialects preserve the most complicated social varieties of language and reflect the essential spirit of American culture. As frontier societies developed distinctive regional patterns, Spanish, French, Dutch, Scandinavian, and German settlers used their native languages before adopting the dominant English dialect. English, Irish, and Scots folk speech constituted probably the most influential ethnic varieties on the frontier, but these were modified by the language habits of their neighbors. In the process of Americanization, Europeans, Africans, and Asians gave the language some of its most familiar words: chop suey, hamburger, hillbilly, jukebox, pizza, prairie, rodeo, Santa Claus, smorgasbord, and tycoon.

The national vocabulary reflects the intimacy of conversation and the evolution of democratic social forms. John Adams proposed that Congress establish an American Academy “for refining, correcting, improving, and ascertaining the English language.” Later, when asked to preside over such activities, Thomas Jefferson responded:

There are so many differences between us and England, of soil, climate, culture, productions, laws, religion, and government, that we must be left far behind the march of circumstances, were we to hold ourselves rigorously to their standard. If, like the French Academicians, it were proposed to fix our language, it would be fortunate, that the step was not taken in the days of our Saxon ancestors whose vocabulary would illy express the science of this day. Judicious neology can alone give strength and copiousness to language, and enable it to be the vehicle of new ideas.

Instead of rules from a National Academy of English, Americans accepted the common-law customs of intelligent conversation with all its modifications through time and circumstance. Current usage may reject “illy express” and “judicious neology,” but history shows the correctness of Jefferson’s message. He recognized the certainty of change, the function of language as a cultural tool, and the importance of thoughtful selection of vocabulary. Through common-law customs of speech and writing the national language develops words and documents social facts. This Dictionary orders those materials of discourse, records the natural history of a people, and transmits the substance of the American heritage.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN ORIGIN OF ENGLISH

CALVERT WATKINS

The name Indo-European is given for geographic reasons to the large and well-defined linguistic family that includes most of the languages of Europe, past and present, as well as those found in a vast area extending across Iran and Afghanistan to the northern half of the Indian subcontinent. In modern times the family has spread by colonization throughout the Western Hemisphere.

A curious byproduct of the age of colonialism and mercantilism was the introduction of Sanskrit in the 18th century to European intellectuals and scholars long familiar with Latin and Greek and with the European languages of culture—Romance, Germanic, and Slavic. The comparison of this ancient tongue with the two classical languages revolutionized the perception of linguistic relationships.

Speaking to the Asiatick Society in Calcutta on February 2, 1786, the English Orientalist and jurist Sir William Jones (1746–1794) uttered his now famous pronouncement:

The Sanskrit language, whatever be its antiquity, is of a wonderful structure; more perfect than the Greek, more copious than the Latin, and more exquisitely refined than either, yet bearing to both of them a stronger affinity, both in the roots of verbs and in the forms of grammar, than could possibly have been produced by accident; so strong, indeed, that no philologer could examine them all three, without believing them to have sprung from some common source, which, perhaps, no longer exists.

Jones was content with the assertion of a common original language, without exploring the details. Others took up the cause, but it remained for the German philologist Franz Bopp (1791–1867) to found the new science of comparative grammar, with the publication in 1816 of his work On the Conjugational System of the Sanskrit Language, in Comparison with that of the Greek, Latin, Persian, and Germanic Languages. He was 25 years old when it appeared.

It has been rightly said that the comparatist has one fact and one hypothesis. The one fact is that certain languages present similarities among themselves which are so numerous and so precise that they cannot be attributed to chance and which are such that they cannot be explained as borrowings or as universal features. The one hypothesis is that these languages must then be the result of descent from a common original. Certain similarities may be accidental: the Greek verb “to breathe,” “blow,” has a root pneu-, and in the language of the Klamath of Oregon the verb “to blow” is pniw-. Other similarities may reflect universal or near-universal features of human language: in the languages of most countries where the bird is known, the cuckoo has a name derived from the noise it makes. A vast number of languages around the globe have “baby talk” words like mama and papa. Finally, languages commonly borrow words and other features from each other, in a whole gamut of ways ranging from casual or chance contact to learned coinages of the kind that English systematically makes from Latin and Greek.

But where all of these possibilities must be excluded, the comparatist assumes genetic filiation: descent from a common ancestor, which in the case of Indo-European, as Sir William Jones surmised almost two centuries ago, no longer exists.

In the early part of the 19th century scholars set about systematically exploring the similarities observable among the principal languages spoken now or formerly in the regions from Iceland and Ireland in the west to India in the east and from Scandinavia in the north to Italy and Greece in the south. They were able to group these languages into a family that they called Indo-European (the term first occurs in English in 1813, though in a sense slightly different from today’s). The similarities among the different Indo-European languages require us to assume that they are the continuation of a single prehistoric language (called Indo-European or Proto-Indo-European). In the words of the greatest Indo-Europeanist of his age, the French scholar Antoine Meillet (1866–1936), “We will term Indo-European language every language which at any time whatever, in any place whatever, and however altered, is a form taken by this ancestor language, and which thus continues by an uninterrupted tradition the use of Indo-European.”

Those dialects or branches of Indo-European still represented today by one or more languages are Indic and Iranian, Greek, Armenian, Slavic, Baltic, Albanian, Celtic, Italic, and Germanic. The present century has seen the addition of two branches to the family, neither of which has left any living trace: Hittite and other Anatolian languages, the earliest attested in the Indo-European family, spoken in what is now Turkey in the second millennium B.C.; and the two Tocharian languages, the easternmost of Indo-European dialects, spoken in Chinese Turkestan (modern Xinjiang Uygur) in the first millennium A.D.

It should be pointed out that the Indo-European family is only one of many language families that have been identified around the world, comprising several thousand different languages. We have good reason, however, to be especially interested in the history of the Indo-European family. Our own language, English, is the most prevalent member of that family, being spoken as a native language by nearly 350 million people and being the most important second language in the world. The total number of speakers of all Indo-European languages amounts to approximately half the population of the earth.

English is thus one of many direct descendants of Indo-European: one of the dialects of the parent language became prehistoric Common Germanic, which subdivided into dialects of which one was West Germanic; this in turn broke up into further dialects, one of which emerged into documentary attestation as Old English. From Old English we can follow the development of the language directly, in texts, down to the present day. This history is our linguistic heritage; our ancestors, in a real cultural sense, are our linguistic ancestors. Only a small proportion of people in the United States can trace their biological ancestry back more than a century or two, and certainly a large segment of the population had languages other than English in their backgrounds only a few generations ago. But every individual is part of a culture, with language its external expression. That language, our language, has an ancestry, a history. Indeed, languages have perhaps the longest uninterrupted histories of all the cultural phenomena that we can study.

But it must be stressed that linguistic heritage, while it may well tend to correspond with cultural continuity, does not imply genetic or biological descent. The transmission of language by conquest, assimilation, migration, or any other ethnic movement is a complex and enigmatic process that this discussion does not propose to examine—beyond the general proposition that in the case of Indo-European no genetic conclusions can or should be drawn.

The comparative method—what we have called the comparatist’s “one fact and one hypothesis”—remains today the most powerful device for elucidating linguistic history. When it is carried to a successful conclusion, the comparative method leads not merely to the assumption of the previous existence of an antecedent common language but to a reconstruction of all the salient features of that language. In the best circumstances, as with Indo-European, we can reconstruct the sounds, forms, words, even the structure of sentences—in short, both grammar and lexicon—of a language spoken before the human race had invented the art of writing. It is worth reflecting on this accomplishment. A reconstructed grammar and dictionary cannot claim any sort of completeness, to be sure, and the reconstruction may always be changed because of new data or better analysis. But it remains true, as one distinguished scholar has put it, that a reconstructed protolanguage is “a glorious artifact, one which is far more precious than anything an archaeologist can ever hope to unearth.”

English, genetically a member of the Germanic branch of Indo-European and retaining much of the basic structure of its origin, has an exceptionally mixed lexicon. During the millennium of its documented history, it has borrowed extensively from its Germanic and Romance neighbors and from Latin and Greek. At the same time, it has lost the great bulk of its original Old English vocabulary. However, the inherited vocabulary, though now numerically a small proportion of the total, remains the genuine core of the language; all of the 100 words shown to be the most frequent in the Corpus of Present-Day American English, also known as the Brown Corpus, are native, inherited words; and of the second 100, eighty-three are native. Precisely because of its propensity to borrow from ancient and modern Indo-European languages, especially those mentioned above but including nearly every other member of the family, English has in a way replaced much of the Indo-European lexicon it lost. Thus, while the distinction between native and borrowed vocabulary remains fundamentally important, more than 50 percent of the basic roots of Indo-European as represented in Julius Pokorny's Indogermanisches Etymologisches Wörterbuch (Bern, 1959) are represented in modern English by one means or the other. Indo-European therefore looms doubly large in the background of our language.

NOTE: At the end of the Dictionary is an Appendix listing many Indo-European roots ancestral to at least one English word, with descriptions of the details of their descent, cross-referred throughout to the individual etymologies in the body of the Dictionary. A preface to the Appendix is a longer article by Professor Watkins, entitled "Indo-European and the Indo-Europeans," containing a description of the reconstructed language and a series of observations of the cultural inferences that can be drawn from it.

USAGE IN THE AMERICAN HERITAGE DICTIONARY: THE PLACE OF CRITICISM

GEOFFREY NUNBERG

Ever since the conception of “correctness” first emerged in the 18th century, there has never been a time when standards of usage were not controversial. Swift’s proposals for improving English were derided by Whig pamphleteers. Noah Webster remonstrated with the influential Dr. Robert Lowth for defending a construction like the King of England’s hat, and was in turn excoriated by later grammarians for countenancing the double negative. And so on, to the present day.

This litigious history may be disconcerting to those who would like to think of the English rules of correctness as long-settled standards from which we have lately fallen away. But a healthy tradition of language criticism requires controversy. This Dictionary contains over 500 Usage Notes and comments, which deal with several thousand words and usages altogether. That is a good deal more than what is found in most dictionaries. But at the most conservative estimate, an educated speaker of English knows around 100,000 words and constructions. And these can be combined in an infinite number of ways, most of them infelicitous—for there are many more ways to get a word wrong than to get it right. The number of possible mistakes in English is inexhaustibly vast, and no one could hope to catalog them all.

So traditional usage criticism has had to provide critical methods rather than lists. As a matter of convenience, of course, these methods are usually demonstrated in disputations over a body of canonical rules and dicta. When readers with an interest in these matters pick up a new usage book or a dictionary containing usage guidance, they invariably turn first to the entries dealing with the modification of unique, the proper use of disinterested, the distinction between shall and will, and the like. These, however, are merely the traditional occasions for discussions of usage and scarcely exhaust the scope of the subject.

Modern controversies about usage are different from their predecessors. The earlier disputes were waged intramurally, with everyone tacitly agreed about the stakes and the ground rules. Between Webster and Lowth there was no disagreement about the central premise of language criticism: that some forms of expression are preferable to others. Now that assumption itself has become controversial.

Modern discussions of usage often take the form of engagements in a battle between irreconcilable camps. On one side of the field is ranged the party of science, the “descriptivists,” who hold that all standards are ultimately based on the facts of use and that the business of dictionaries and usage books is simply to record those facts in a neutral way. On the other side stand the “prescriptivists,” who insist that language is subject to a higher morality and that people who care about the state of the language have an obligation to defend traditional values in the face of growing laxity and permissiveness.

Certainly language criticism was not originally conceived as an apology for traditional values. The 18th-century founders of the tradition were champions of a new class of writers, freed by an expanded reading public from a direct dependence on aristocratic patronage. The object of their criticism, whether of language, literature, or life, was to usurp the authority of the court and the aristocracy as a source of social values. Hence their insistence that the spoken language must defer to the written and that custom must sometimes defer to criticism—for in that era “custom” was simply another name for the practices of the privileged. Serious language criticism since then has been more often than not an arm of traditional liberalism, which reserved its sternest admonitions for the transgressions of the educated and the powerful. Matthew Arnold could berate the London Times for its “orthographical antics.” Edmund Wilson taxed Walter Lippmann, Lionel Trilling, and John F. Kennedy for their stylistic lapses.

Usage doctrines must change with the times, of course. The fundamental linguistic virtues—order, clarity, and conciseness—are unassailable, yet they must be constantly reinterpreted against an evolving social background. It is no longer permissible to pretend that the English language is a club for gentlemen who have “their” Latin authors at their fingertips. The language is too important to be left to nostalgic reveries. Nevertheless, it is too important to be excused from responsible critical review.

USAGE IN THIS DICTIONARY

In the treatment of usage the editors of The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Third Edition, have tried to construct each Usage Note as a miniature critical exercise and to provide, within the limits of space, the kinds of information that readers will require to resolve the question to their own satisfaction.

Naturally the Notes vary greatly in content and length according to the point at issue. Some provide no more than brief comments on relatively technical points. (What is the difference between flotsam and jetsam?) At the other end of the spectrum, several Notes run close to a thousand words—far longer than the discussions of usage in any other dictionary. The longer Notes deal primarily with complex grammatical questions or with questions of particular social or critical interest (I, man, he, hopefully, and unique, for example). In these cases we have begun the Note with a brief summary for the reader who has only a cursory interest in the issue.

The material provided in the Notes falls into three broad categories: information about use, summaries and analyses of critical arguments, and observations about the opinions of writers and critics. Speaking very broadly, all questions of usage involve a weighing of one or more of these three considerations.

USE The doctrine that correctness rests on use is hardly an invention of modern linguistics. Horace insisted that the laws of speech are fixed by custom, “whose arbitrary sway/Words and the forms of language must obey,” a dictum quoted with approval by the grammarians of every succeeding era. Of course, the rules of the language are determined by use, but whose? Where use is uniform, the question does not arise. It is a curious fact of English that the phrase more than one takes a singular verb, despite its sense, as in More than one student has left. Doubtless it would be more logical to say More than one student have left, but it would not be English.

Still, usage is often divided, sometimes unaccountably but more often according to social or geographic differences. And in these cases Horace’s dictum offers little by way of helpful advice, as Noah Webster observed with some impatience:

But what kind of custom did Horace design to lay down as the standard of speaking? Was it a local custom? . . . Is it the practice of a court, or a few eminent scholars, that he designed to constitute a standard?

Webster’s questions have no general answer. It depends on the word. Sometimes local custom is the only determinant, and we find as many standards as there are speech communities.

In other cases people do insist that there must be some one general standard, usually as determined by the practice of educated middle-class speakers. The Dictionary records facts about the use of items like these either in usage labels such as Non-Standard (see the Guide to the Dictionary) or, in particularly complicated cases, in the Usage Notes. Take the past tense form snuck. It originated as a non-standard regional variant for sneaked, and many people still have a lingering prejudice against it: 67 percent of the Usage Panel disapproves of it. In recent years, however, snuck has become increasingly frequent in reputable writing (the American Heritage Dictionary files contain citations for it from the New Republic and the San Francisco Chronicle, as well as from the works of writers like Anne Tyler and Garrison Keillor). And while the files show that sneaked is by far more prevalent in edited prose by a factor of about 7 to 2, it is no longer possible to label snuck as non-standard, even though many educated users of English continue to consider it informal.

While the practice of the educated middle class often determines what counts as “Standard English,” it does not have the last word in all matters of divided usage. Not even the most assiduously “descriptivist” dictionary would think of basing its definitions of annuity or zabaglione simply on the way the words are used by educated speakers in general. Here readers do not expect to find a mirror of their own practice; they want to know how the words are used by experts in finance or Italian cooking. Of course, those are specialists’ terms, but the point applies to many words in the general vocabulary as well. A great many educated speakers use ironic to mean simply “coincidental,” as in It’s ironic that he was also using a borrowed bat when he hit a grand slam last week against the Dodgers. The use, then, is unquestionably Standard English, and it is certainly the responsibility of a dictionary to record it. But the meaning of ironic is not at the disposition of the general public in quite the way the past tense of sneak is. Ironic is still a literary sort of word, and it is likely that a good many of the people who have used it to mean “coincidental” were reaching for a literary effect at the time. As long as literary folk continue to use ironic in a narrower sense—and what is no less important, as long as a large proportion of the general public continues to think of the word as literary—a dictionary has the responsibility to note that in this case the general use is sometimes at odds with the use of the writers and critics who have particular authority about the notion in question.

It is never easy to say which group has authority over any given usage, of course. Who owns disinterested? Is the word kudos by now a common or garden-variety English plural like peas, or is it still an elegant borrowing that should be held responsible to its origin as a Greek singular? We will want to take the facts of use into consideration when we approach these questions, but it is the height of scientific self-deception to suppose that use provides an objective criterion for resolving them. Lexicographers invariably have to make critical evaluations of the raw facts of use. And where the verdict of use is equivocal, a dictionary should give readers the wherewithall to make up their own minds.

CRITICISM Custom fixes the rules of language but does not justify them. Even complete uniformity of use doesn’t make a practice exempt from critical review. After all, custom is partly determined by our beliefs about the world and society, and in these we might all be wrong. At one time everybody used fish to refer to whales, but the practice was abandoned in the light of new zoological evidence. And until quite recently, everybody used the words man and men to mean simply “human beings,” but now many people have abandoned that practice in the light of new conceptions of social justice.

The prescriptive tradition had its origins in the Age of Criticism as a method no different in kind from the criticism of artistic works or of civil society in general.

The 18th-century writers established the battery of principles to which usage might be held accountable—the familiar arguments from analogy, logic, etymology, meaning, and the rest. Granted, they often applied these principles with the overzealous love of rules and systems that they brought to all their critical enterprises, so that we may sometimes feel, as Leslie Stephen put it, that they “sanctioned the attempt to do by rule and compasses what ought to be done by the eye.” And much of the “logic” they invoked was derived either from speculative philosophy or from inappropriate parallels to Latin grammar, with the result that it often turns out to be of dubious relevance to the facts of English. It is fair to criticize the double negative in a sentence like I never got nothing on the grounds that it is associated with nonstandard varieties of English. But one cannot fault the construction on logical grounds without also being willing to assert the illogicality of standard French and Italian.

Linguists of a generation or so ago were fond of citing examples such as these in an effort to undermine the entire prescriptive program, and some of them went on to argue that the rules of language are simply immune from criticism, since they answer to natural laws inaccessible to cursory reflection. But the fact that particular prescriptive arguments are sometimes unsound does not vitiate the case for criticism in general. If modern linguistics teaches us that the logic of language structure is a good deal more subtle and elusive than traditional grammarians supposed, it does not follow that the grammar of every variety has achieved complete consistency or functional perfection—particularly with regard to the relatively “unnatural” requirements of written public communication.

In fact there is no reason that the methods of scientific linguistics and of traditional criticism should be regarded as incompatible. Modern syntax and semantics have developed an impressive array of analytical tools, which often make it possible to capture distinctions and subtleties that elude the sometimes coarse apparatus of traditional, Latin-based school grammar. These techniques can be as useful in analyzing prescriptive rules as in describing the facts of actual speech, and we have turned to them here in the course of analyzing a number of traditional questions, as well as some of the grammatical complications raised by the new concerns about matters of gender (see, for example, the entries at dare, different, each other, plus, and than, and at man and he). We have avoided the use of unfamiliar technical terminology, since we are interested in providing a critical method, not in communicating a body of scientific results. We believe, along with an increasing number of linguists, that there is an important place for a “critical linguistics” in the study of usage.

OPINION: THE ROLE OF THE USAGE PANEL Custom can provide precedents and criticism can provide principles, but each has to be evaluated at the bar of opinion. Of course, dictionaries register received opinion at every turn (what else could justify labeling a usage as “offensive”?). But it is often useful to have a more explicit way of gauging the opinions of people who have a critical interest in the language. This, then, is the role of the Dictionary's Usage Panel, a group of 173 well-known writers, critics, and scholars. Panel members are regularly surveyed on a broad range of usage questions, from the distinction between each other and one another to the status of words such as the noun lifestyle and the verb impact. The results of these surveys are included in many of the Usage Notes.

The Usage Panel should not be thought of as an Academy, charged with ruling on all questions of disputed usage. Indeed, the opinions of the Panel are often divided, even though at times the Panelists seem to speak with a single voice. In earlier surveys, for example, 99 percent of the Panelists rejected between you and I and ain't I in formal writing. But the Panel's judgment on questions like these merely reflects the hegemony of Standard English. The results of the surveys are far more interesting when they involve questions that are matters of dispute among educated speakers. In the most recent survey, for example, 49 percent of the Panel accepted the use of alternative to refer to one of three or more choices, as in Of the three alternatives, the first is the least distasteful.

One might think that faced with this sort of disagreement readers interested merely in knowing which usage is "correct" would be perplexed: if there is no agreement among so august a group as this, what hope is there of fixing standards? But this misses the point. In the first place, the variation may itself be instructive. In the most recent survey, for example, we included several questions about words of uncertain pronunciation, such as banal, err, harass, and hegemony. We were not surprised to find a lack of consensus—the Panel was split exactly 50-50 on which syllable takes the emphasis in harass, for example—but the results did serve to make the no less useful point that on these matters, at least, there is no agreed-upon standard.

More important, the Panel's diverging opinions underscore the point that usage questions are always controversial—must be controversial, if discussions of usage are to be instructive. The Usage Panel surveys are most interesting in providing a rough indication of just how controversial an issue is, that is, how seriously the views of individual critics have been taken by people with a critical interest in the language. This fact becomes clear when we compare the Panel's reactions on different items. For instance, if you read what some critics have had to say about new forms like the use of parent as a verb, or the word lifestyle, you may be led to believe that they are all egregious New Age jargon. But collectively, the Panel was more discriminating. Fully 98 percent of the Panel rejected the sentence Critics have charged that the department was remiss in not trying to dialogue with representatives of the community. By contrast, lifestyle is acceptable to a large majority of the Panel, 70 percent, in the sentence Salaries in the Bay Area may be higher, but it may cost employees as much as 30 percent more to maintain their lifestyles. Readers, of course, will want to make up their own minds about each of these usages, but the opinions of the Panel may carry some weight, especially when taken together with the critical discussions in the Usage Notes.

CHANGING ATTITUDES In preparing this edition of the Dictionary, we were able for the first time to use the results of the Usage Panel surveys to draw another kind of comparison, one that shows the shifts in critical attitudes over time. The Usage Panel was first polled in 1964, nearly a generation ago. That is not a long time on the linguistic scale of things, for language as a whole changes much more slowly than other social institutions. But it is time enough for usages to change significantly in their status, particularly when they involve the sorts of innovations and neologisms that criticism often focuses on.

One notable trend, for example, is that a number of words and constructions that were questionable a generation ago have become more acceptable. The verb contact was problematic to many language critics of the 1950's and 1960's, but resistance seems to have abated: between 1969 and the most recent survey the Panel's acceptance of contact rose from 34 to 65 percent. The pattern of increasing acceptability was repeated with the use of the verb intrigue to mean "arouse interest" (up from 52 to 78 percent) and with various senses of the words host, identify, and many others. The tendency is not surprising. Innovations rarely remain for long on the linguistic littoral; most either make their way onto dry land or are carried off with the receding tide.

But other shifts in the Panel's opinions may have less to do with changing patterns of usage than with changes in critical standards. In evaluating the most recent survey, for example, we were struck by the Panelists' increased indifference to traditional injunctions against using certain words in ways that appear to be inconsistent with their Latin origins. Fully 68 percent of the Panel now accepts the use of aggravate to mean "irritate," up from 43 percent in 1969. The same shift is evident with the use of anxious to mean "eager" (up from 23 to 52 percent), transpire to mean "happen" (up from 38 to 58 percent), cohort to refer to a single person (up from 31 to 71 percent), and several other words of this type.

Does this mean that the Panel has become generally more liberal or permissive? It is true that its composition has changed over the years. The membership of the current Panel is more numerous and younger than it was in 1969, and it includes a greater proportion of women and members of minority groups than before. Yet on many other canonical usage issues the current Panelists have proved to be no less conservative than their predecessors. For example, 89 percent rejects the use of disinterested to mean "uninterested," a figure not significantly different from the 93 percent who rejected this usage in 1969. And on a few issues, such as the use of hopefully as a sentence adverb, the Panel is actually more conservative now than it was a generation ago. Why then the shift in the Panelists' opinions on aggravate and the rest? Perhaps they have come to believe that it is no longer possible to expect adherence to general usage standards that presuppose a familiarity with classical languages, even if many of them note that they still observe the traditional strictures in their own writing. (See also the Usage Notes at data, dilemma, celibate, minimal, and nauseous.)

THE SCOPE OF COVERAGE

THE TRADITIONAL CANON These changes in critical attitudes should not obscure the fact that most of the traditional canon of usage questions has emerged largely intact from the controversies of recent years. When people think about “usage questions,” they still have in mind the same points of grammar and diction that occupied critics a century ago: the differences between who and whom, between and among, enormity and enormousness; the qualification of absolute terms such as unique, equal, and parallel; and so forth. These questions exemplify the consideration of usage in its most general form; they are ostensibly motivated by very broad critical principles that apply to writing of all sorts and about all subjects: criteria of logic, coherence, clarity, and concision. Over the years, to be sure, the traditional canon has accumulated a good deal of unexamined grammatical lore that does not hold up well under scrutiny; see, for example, the Notes at and and preposition. But we believe that canonical issues like these give language criticism its historical continuity; thus they still constitute the largest single category among the Usage Notes in the Dictionary. In some cases we have added Notes dealing with questions that, though not historically part of the canon, have much the quality of traditional issues: the use of periodic to mean “occasional,” the use of specious to mean “false,” the modification of infinite, and the potential ambiguity of deceptively. The traditional canon has always been surrounded by a penumbra of items like these, introduced by individual writers or reference books in the interest of making particular points. What makes the canon central, after all, is not so much the particular words included, but the broader linguistic questions raised.

NEW WORDS, NEW ISSUES The Dictionary’s treatment of usage has been extended to cover a variety of new issues. Notes are included for a host of new words that have attracted commentary. Some of these are drawn from the language of particular domains: new social movements (caring, parent, wellness, lifestyle, and father, for example); postmodernism (about); publicity (world-class, legend, and showcase); technology (parameter, input, and access). Others have a more general provenance: the use of go to mean “say” or the use of holocaust to mean simply “disaster” or “misfortune.” Of course the Dictionary’s coverage of such items cannot be “comprehensive”—the class is far too fluid for that—but we have tried to cover items of particular critical interest.

In other cases, we have included Usage Notes for items not often touched on by criticism, which exemplify problems that might be considered appropriate elements in a revised usage canon. For example, there are Notes on several terms, such as black English, nonstandard, and literacy, that figure in recent public discussions of language questions. In including items like these, of course, we may be open to a charge of special pleading. But such words are only examples of a kind of scientific and technical terminology that has become increasingly important in public discussion. So we have also included Usage Notes on questions such as the difference between methodology and method, whether a cross section is necessarily “representative,” and whether one can speak of a quantity as having been “reduced by 150 percent.” Obviously the brief of usage criticism cannot be extended to cover all of the specialized discourse of the sciences. But the program of criticism can make at least a token effort to acknowledge the role that scientific and quantitative argumentation has come to play in general discourse.

USAGE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE Over the past 30 years the most radical change in the scope of language criticism has been its extension to a wide range of usages involving the relation between language and questions of social diversity and social justice. Discussion of these issues constitutes the most important and extensive additions to the treatment of usage in this Edition. One category includes the names of various social groups defined along lines of ethnicity, religion, race, physical capacity, and sexual preference, as discussed in the Notes at Asian, black, Chicano, color, gay, handicapped, Hispanic, Jew, Jewess, Kanaka, Moslem, Native American, and Negress. In one sense, of course, these questions are not genuinely “new.” But in the past they were not taken up as part of the public discussion of language standards. Only recently have these issues emerged as critical questions, whether as a result of the rise of official pluralism or of a more general tendency to emphasize the political and ideological aspects of usage.

In matters like these, of course, a dictionary has no authority to lay down standards of “correct” usage (at least not in the linguistic sense of the term). Most of these words are subject to a great deal of variation, even among members of the groups they apply to, and their connotations and use can change very rapidly. The Dictionary can help by providing information on the social and linguistic backgrounds of the questions. Thus the Note at Hispanic explains how that term is different in meaning from Latino. At the least, this information may spare some readers from resorting to unnecessary circumlocution or from giving inadvertent offense.

USAGE AND GENDER With a few exceptions (as with black and gay), the usage questions raised by the names of ethnic categories and the like are socially complex but linguistically simple. Replacement of one such word by another rarely causes grammatical difficulties or creates ancillary linguistic problems. But gender differences are so extensively and intricately woven into the fabric of the language that efforts to change usage often require a great deal of attentiveness and linguistic ingenuity. So it is not surprising that feminism has had more extensive consequences for questions of usage than any other recent social movement or that the debate over these issues has been particularly energetic. In this Edition we have greatly expanded coverage of these issues, which are discussed in the Usage Notes at blond, brunette, -ess, -ette, feminist, gender, he, heroine, lady, man, and Ms.

With these items, as with the names of ethnic and social categories, we have tried to present the linguistic and social background that readers will require to make informed decisions about the issues. Because the linguistic program of feminism has called for such extensive and varied changes in usage, we have also made an effort to gauge its overall effects on the attitudes and practice of writers, both in general and with regard to particular words and constructions. To this end, we included a number of questions about these issues in recent Usage Panel surveys. Generally speaking, we found that a great majority of the Panelists of both sexes have adopted at least a few of the recommendations of feminists. But virtually all the Panelists were discriminating in their revisions; they found some usages more objectionable than others. (In reporting the results on these items, we have sometimes broken down the Panelists' responses on the basis of gender. Not surprisingly, women were consistently more likely than men to reject usages that might be labeled sexist. But men and women showed roughly the same patterns in differentiating one item from the next. Thus both groups found hostess more acceptable than sculptress, and so forth.)

Fewer than 40 percent of the Panelists say they would use the masculine pronoun his to complete the sentence A child who wants to become a doctor should be encouraged by _____ parents and teachers, against 81 percent (including 58 percent of the women members) who accepted the generic use of man in If early man suffered from a lack of information, modern man is tyrannized by an excess of it.

Like most critical users of the language, the Panelists seem to have revised their usage on a case-by-case basis, evaluating each item in the light of the sometimes conflicting claims of syntax, established use, and social justice. In a sense, one can say that the feminist linguistic program has already succeeded, in requiring most literate people to reflect carefully on the ways in which usage might imply or reinforce gender stereotypes. Of course, the Panel's divisions reflect controversies about these usages that are not likely to be resolved in the near future. But these are precisely the kinds of controversies about particular words and principles that ensured the vitality of traditional language criticism in the 18th and 19th centuries. Here as elsewhere, what matters is not that we should expect to achieve uniformity but that we should find in our differences the occasion for lively critical discussion.

THE MATHEMATICS OF LANGUAGE

HENRY KUČERA

Language is such a characteristically human activity and such a potentially exquisite transmitter of literary imagination that many of us find it difficult to view it as having prosaic, predictable, or even mathematical properties. And yet, over the last decade, we have seen much of our language communication recorded, processed, and transmitted by computers that are capable of reducing our written words to electronic signals, allowing us to search through them and organize them, and then, if need be, transmit them electronically and almost instantaneously over long distances. Word processing and information retrieval, as we have rather unimaginatively named these computer manipulations of our language records, is not only a billion-dollar industry but a new information medium that is revolutionizing our world of communication as much as the invention of movable print type did more than 500 years ago.

It still takes people to formulate ideas and to write the novels and the poems. But now the drudgery of having to retype entire pages of a manuscript in order to make a few corrections is gone. We have the opportunity to look up synonyms and definitions in an electronic dictionary, and even the possibility of relying on the machine to find our misspellings and correct them or to check our grammar and style.

Computers—machines that some of us still think of as fast number crunchers—can encode, manipulate, process, and in a limited way understand language only because of the remarkable properties of natural language systems as they have evolved through a long history. In its essence, language is a hierarchically organized structure of symbols, which allows us to express a potentially infinite number of ideas through finite means. The basic building blocks of this system are very few: a set of contrastive sounds—the phonemes of the language—that we can represent by letters and letter combinations in our alphabetical writing systems. These elementary building blocks are combined in highly restricted ways into the basic meaningful units, the words of the language. These words, again in accordance with systematic combinatory principles, form meaningful sequences of syntactically well-formed sentences. The entire system thus consists of combining a finite inventory of discrete units into a potentially infinite set of discourses, just as the ten numerals of our number system can be combined into an infinite set of different mathematical values and expressions.

This analogous organization of language and numeric systems makes it easily possible to represent linguistic units by numbers and to manipulate them as if they were mathematical objects. Having a computer find a misspelled word in our document is not magic: if the machine has a lexicon available, with words coded as numbers, it can compare the numeric code of the word we write with the numerical value of the word in its word list through a simple arithmetical operation. If no match is found, our word is not in the computer's lexicon, and we have a good candidate for a misspelling.

EFFICIENCY AND REDUNDANCY

But languages—as they have evolved spontaneously in communities over the ages—possess much more complex mathematical properties than those resulting from a hierarchical structure of discrete units. Languages exhibit both efficiency and redundancy, two contradictory characteristics balanced against each other to achieve both a communicational usefulness and reliability.

Consider redundancy first: of the 33 or so phonemes of English, only a small subset of their possible permutations can form actual words. Adult English speakers know, for example, that trip is an English word. But they also know that tlip is not an English word and do not have to go to a dictionary to discover that fact. Intuition tells them that no English word can begin with tl-. But when faced with trin, English speakers—though not recognizing the word—may have to seek help in a dictionary. The form trin is at least theoretically a possible English word because it does not violate any of the general constraints on permissible sequences of English sounds.

Even on this elementary phonological level, we find a substantial redundancy, the imposition of constraints on possible sequences and, consequently, the introduction of some information waste into the system. This waste is needed to enable us to communicate without overwhelming numbers of errors and misunderstandings. If every possible permutation of sounds were an actual English word, our communication system would be very efficient indeed, and all our words could be very short. There would be no need for any word of more than four sounds: mathematically we could have over a million of those. But communicating in such a system would be extremely difficult. Our physiological limitations in producing and perceiving sounds and sound sequences, and the properties of human memory, would make the learning and use of such a system practically impossible. Even if one could learn this distressingly efficient language, every noise, every imperfection or error that would distort our perception of even a single sound, would disrupt our understanding, because the lack of redundancy in the system would not allow us to guess what we might have missed. Worse still, if we heard one sound where another was intended, we would have heard a legitimate, albeit unintended word. Thus redundancy, a universal property of all languages, is one of our great communicational friends.

Of course, the constraints on the permissible sequences of sounds that are used to achieve this redundancy may differ substantially from language to language; there are many languages, for example, in which a word can begin with the initial tl-cluster prohibited in English. The same is true on higher levels. English—a configurational language that relies on word order to signal many grammatical functions—imposes severe restrictions on possible sequences of words within a sentence. Languages with a “free” word order, such as Latin or Russian, allow seemingly endless permutations of words. These permutations are possible because these languages have an elaborate system of inflected forms and paradigms in which a small set of endings is combined in highly restricted ways with the stems of the word to signal the syntactic relations that are achieved through word order in English.

A branch of mathematics known as information theory provides a formal means of measuring the redundancy of a communication system. For natural languages these measurements are complex and difficult, but some overall estimates are possible. On the phonological level we have calculated for several languages (English, German, Russian, and Czech) that—taking only the constraints on sound sequences within syllables into account—redundancy reaches about 50 percent. All languages, of course, also have restrictions on which syllables may follow one another; the overall redundancy estimate thus must be put at least at the 80 percent level.

The other side of the coin in language design is efficiency. It has been known for a long time that very frequently occurring words tend to be short. We even clip or abbreviate words as they become more common: telephone to phone, airplane to plane, and so on. Computer analysis of large samples of language texts provides accurate data to support this general conclusion. In the one-million-word Corpus of Present-Day American English, also known as the Brown Corpus, compiled from samples taken from 500 different sources of 15 different genres and styles of writing, words accounting for 57 percent of the running texts (i.e., 57 percent of the one million word tokens) have 4 letters or fewer. Examples of these are the, and, but, of, that, and have. But an entirely different situation comes to view if we construct a “dictionary” from the Brown Corpus, that is, a collection of different words, known in formal linguistics as types, with each word appearing only once in the list regardless of the number of times it may be repeated in the text itself. Here, words of 4 or fewer characters account for less than 9 percent of the lexicon.

The discrepancy between the two suggests the communication efficiency of language: the system is designed so that the short words are repeated often in an average text and thus accumulate high frequency figures. Longer words are used sparingly, and the repeat rate of the truly long words is negligible. For every occurrence of a 10-letter word, there are 8 occurrences of a 3-letter word, and for every instance of a 20-letter word, there are 3,524 occurrences of a 3-letter word.

This principle in human languages is similar to the design of artificial communication systems. In International Morse code, the most frequently used English letter, namely e, has the shortest symbol, one short signal requiring minimum transmission time. Conversely, the infrequently used letters, such as j, q, and y, have the longest codes, various sequences of three long signals and one short. Samuel F.B. Morse did by planning what languages have achieved in their natural evolution.

HOW MANY WORDS?

On occasion, every linguist with an interest in the quantitative properties of language will be faced with some form of the ultimate numerical question: “How many words did Shakespeare use?” “How many words does a person know?” “How many words should a dictionary have?”

The first question, at least, has a definite, though not simple answer: Shakespeare’s complete works consist of a total of 884,647 words of text containing a total of 29,066 different words, including proper names. In order to understand the significance of these numbers, however, we have to be quite certain of what we mean by a word. What is it that we are counting? Even if we focus only on written language and define a word simply as a string of letters bounded by space on each side, our problem does not entirely go away. We still have to decide whether to consider inflected forms, such as those formed from the verb play, (plays, playing, played), to be words in their own right or simply members of a single class represented by the stem form PLAY. If we take the first approach, we have four distinct words. If we take the second, we have only one, comprising a set of grammatical forms, differing only in inflection, that linguists call a lemma. Even in English, where the inflectional system is quite limited, we have to exercise great terminological care when making any statistical statements about the size of the vocabulary used by a writer or found in a work. In a highly inflected language like Russian, where many nouns have ten different case and number forms, the difference between the number of word forms and the number of lemmas is dramatic indeed.

Conventional dictionaries are, by and large, collections of lemmas represented by their stem forms, which appear as boldface entries in an alphabetical order. Their inflected forms are given when the formation involves some irregularity or a spelling change, but these inflections are generally not listed when regular. The concept of a word, as we have become used to it from the dictionary structure, is thus closer to that of a lemma than that of a word form.

In frequency and vocabulary studies of an author or a collection of texts, however, word forms, not lemmas, are usually counted. There are several reasons for this: computers can detect as different words strings of letters that are not identical, but they cannot easily recognize and put together items belonging to a single lemma. Lemmatization involves a number of methodological linguistic decisions, some of them quite difficult. The figure of 29,066 different words used by Shakespeare thus refers to word forms, not lemmas. Assuming that the research results on Modern English also hold, at least approximately, for Shakespeare's works, we can conclude that the total vocabulary of lemmas in the poet's work is about 18,000.

Given these rules of the game, how does the richness of Shakespeare's vocabulary compare to present-day English usage? In the analysis of the Brown Corpus, word forms have been assigned to their lemma groups on the basis of well-defined principles, but the statistics for individual word forms have also been compiled. The two sets of results indicate that this one-million-word database contains 61,805 word forms, which belong to 37,851 lemmas. The number of different words in the Brown Corpus is thus more than twice that of the complete works of Shakespeare, though the size of the two databases is comparable. Does this mean that Shakespeare's vocabulary was modest or that over the last few hundred years English has evolved into a much richer language lexically? Not necessarily. Many words have undoubtedly been added to our lexical store, but the main reason for the discrepancy is almost certainly the fact that the corpus of Shakespeare's writings is quite homogeneous in content and style, while the Brown Corpus is intentionally heterogeneous in order to make it representative of contemporary usage. The content of the Corpus was therefore selected from 500 different sources ranging from newspapers to scientific writing to general fiction.

If all words were statistically equal, then each word form would occur about 16 times in the one-million-word text, and each lemma about 26 times. In actuality, the rate of repetition of individual words, and thus their frequency, is extremely uneven. The overall statistics are quite striking: the use rate of the first 100 most frequent words is so high that they account for a full 47.4 percent of all the text. Of all the running words (tokens) contained in the one million, the 100 most frequent lemmas constitute 49.6 percent of all the text. To account for 80 percent of the entire one-million-word text takes only 2,854 different word forms belonging to 2,124 distinct lemmas.

The fact that one needs to know fewer than 3,000 words in order to understand 80 percent of a reasonably representative modern English text does not mean that this kind of vocabulary could guarantee any of us cultural survival in a modern society. It must be realized, first of all, that many of the most frequently occurring words in English are function words: articles, prepositions, and auxiliary verb forms, such as those of be, have, or do. The definite article the is by far the most frequently used word in English, occurring 69,975 times in the one-million-word corpus. Although in the overall text the dominant parts of speech are nouns and verbs, accounting for about 26 percent and 18 percent, respectively, of all the word tokens, the part-of-speech representation in the highest frequency category strongly favors function words. The lemmas occupying the frequency ranks 1 through 32 are all function words or pronouns; the first content word, the verb say, appears only at rank 33, and the first noun, man, at rank 44.

These function words, essential as they may be for signaling the exact role of content words and their syntactic relation in a sentence, are also precisely the ones that, because of their high predictability, can be most easily guessed if they happen to be omitted from a text. Such omissions are just what characterizes the style of newspaper headlines. The headline Actor Found in Critical Condition after Explosion has been deprived of all articles and auxiliaries; in a full text the sentence would read something like An actor has been found in a critical condition after an explosion. Thus, a 12-word sentence has been reduced to a 7-word headline without any loss of information. Conversely, the less predictable a word is in a given context, the more its presence contributes to the “surprise value” of the sentence, to its informational role. In this sense, the less frequent the word, the more important it will be—statistically speaking, at least—for an understanding of the communication.

If understanding 80 percent of any text were sufficient for us to function as literate people, we could manage with a vocabulary of fewer than 3,000 words and could dispense with dictionaries. Since it is not, dictionaries, which offer us the spelling, the pronunciation, and the definitions of both the frequent and the rare, become our indispensable companions.

COMPUTERS AND GRAMMAR

In the last few years we have developed computers with an even more impressive degree of linguistic ability: we now have programs that can find and correct at least some errors in grammar. At first glance, this kind of machine ability may seem astonishing. As difficult as it may be to master the subtleties of English spelling, an explanation of how a spelling checker works is not difficult to understand. But grammar does not deal with specific lists of sentences, as a spelling lexicon does with words. It deals with a potentially infinite variety of human expressions. The sentences that we encounter are often quite new to us, yet we can understand them even though we have never seen or heard them before. Learning one’s native language surely does not consist of memorizing sentences. Instead, it consists of internalizing an abstract knowledge of the acceptable structures that can then be applied to the creation and understanding of new strings of words.

All native speakers of English, even those who have never studied “grammar,” possess a basic, reliable intuition of what is and what is not a possible English sentence, just as they know what is a possible English word. This grammatical intuition, however, is much more abstract and sophisticated than the speaker’s phonological intuition. Consider a simple example: a native speaker of English knows that the sentence She told him to behave himself is well-formed but that She told him to behave him and She told himself to behave himself are totally unacceptable. If one considers the details of the mental process allowing us to make these seemingly simple decisions, their true complexity becomes immediately apparent. We know that himself rather than him is required as the last word of the first example because the person told to be on good behavior is both the underlying actor and the object of the verb behave: linguists call this a “reflexive construction.” The pronoun him, the third word of the same example, on the other hand, is the object of the verb told, obviously different from the subject, identified by she, and hence impossible to be expressed by a reflexive pronoun.

Programming a computer to detect and correct errors in sentence structure is a very difficult process, but if one is willing to live with less than absolute perfection, it is certainly possible. In essence, the process involves teaching the machine how to parse a sentence, that is, how to break it into its component parts of speech, reveal their syntactic relationships, find important constituents such as individual phrases, subjects, and objects, decide whether the subject and the verb agree, and so on.

What needs to be borne in mind is that grammar analysis is possible only because we can formalize the rules of linguistic structures: computers can do wonderful things only if we tell them, in very explicit and formally precise ways, how to do them. Describing the abstract rules of grammar—the mathematical properties of language in the broadest sense of the term—makes this task possible. We can thus remain quite confident about who controls the human-machine interaction: it is still the human being who must discover the linguistic principles and instruct the machine how to apply them, no matter how impressive the ultimate performance of the machines may be.

GUIDE TO THE DICTIONARY

The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Third Edition, is a record of the language as it is used by a broad and diverse group of educated speakers and writers over the long term. Its word list reflects the many complex elements that constitute our language. This Guide, which explains the conventions used in presenting the great array of information contained in the Dictionary, is intended to enable you to find and understand that information quickly and easily.

THE ENTRY WORDS: ALPHABETICAL ORDER

Each entry word, printed in boldface type, is set slightly to the left of the text column. All entries—including biographical and geographic names, abbreviations, symbols, and compounds of two or more words—are listed in strict alphabetical order:

abs.
Absaroka Range
Absaroke abscess abscise abscisic acid
abscissa abscission
abscission zone

For the sake of convenience, proper names are listed according to their most important element, such as a surname shared by a number of important people. In these cases, the alphabetical sequence applies only to those letters preceding the first comma:

George
George, Saint
George I¹
George I²

.....

George VI
George, Henry
George, Lake
George River

SUPERSCRIPT NUMBERS. Words with identical spellings but different etymologies are entered separately and have superscript, or raised, numbers. In most cases, these numbers reflect the frequency of use:

tick¹ (tĭk) n. 1. A light, sharp, clicking sound made repeatedly by a machine, such as a clock. 2. Chiefly British. A moment. 3. A light mark used to check off or call attention to an item. 4. Informal. A unit on a scale; a degree: when interest rates move up a tick. — v. ticked, tick-ing, ticks. — v. intr. 1. To emit recurring clicking sounds: as the clock ticked. 2. To function characteristically or well: machines ticking away; curious about what makes people tick. — v. tr. 1. To count or record with or as if with the sound of ticks: a clock ticking the hours; a taxi meter ticking the fare. 2. To mark or check off (a listed item) with a tick: ticked off each name as the roll was called. — phrasal verb. tick off. Informal. To make angry or annoyed: Constant delays ticked me off. [Middle English tek, light tap.]

tick² (tĭk) n. 1. Any of numerous small bloodsucking parasitic arachnids of the family Ixodidae, many of which transmit febrile diseases, such as Rocky Mountain spotted fever and Lyme disease. 2. Any of various usually wingless, louselike insects of the family Hippoboscidae that are parasitic on sheep, goats, and other animals. [Middle English teke, tik, perhaps from Old English ticca*.]

tick³ (tĭk) n. 1. a. A cloth case for a mattress or pillow. b. A light mattress without inner springs. 2. Ticking. [Middle English tikke, probably from Middle Dutch tike, ultimately from Latin thēca, receptacle, from Greek thēkē. See dhē- in Appendix.]

tick⁴ (tĭk) n. Chiefly British. Credit or an amount of credit. [Short for TICKET.]

SYLLABICATION

An entry word and its inflected and derived forms are divided into syllables by means of centered dots:

ac·e·tate (äs'ĭ-tāt') n.

In entries, such as ethyl acetate, that consist of two or more words separated by spaces, the words without centered dots are divided into syllables at their own places in the Dictionary.

Pronunciations are syllabicated for the sake of clarity. The syllabication of the pronunciation may not match the syllabication of the entry word because the division of the pronunciation follows phonological rules, while the division of the entry word reflects the long-established practices of printers and editors in breaking words at the end of a line of text.

PRONUNCIATION

The pronunciation is enclosed in parentheses and appears after the boldface entry word. If an entry word and a variant to that entry word have the same pronunciation, the pronunciation is given immediately after the variant. If the variant or variants do not have the same pronunciation as the entry word, pronunciations follow the forms to which they apply. Differing or variant pronunciations are given wherever necessary. If an entry or variant requires more than one pronunciation, subsequent pronunciations show only those syllables that are different in sound quality or stress from the first pronunciation or that are necessary for clarity.

The key to the pronunciation symbols appears in a block in the margin of every other page. A fuller key appears at the end of this Guide to the Dictionary.

PRONUNCIATION SYMBOLS. The symbols used in this Dictionary enable you to produce a satisfactory pronunciation with no more than a quick reference to the key. All pronunciations given here are acceptable in all circumstances. When more than one pronunciation is given, the first is assumed to be the most common, but the difference in frequency may be insignificant.

For most words a single set of symbols can represent the pronunciation found in each regional variety of American English. You will supply those features of your own regional speech that are called forth by the pronunciation key in this Dictionary. The pronunciations are exclusively those of educated speech.

EXPLANATION OF THE SCHWA. Most symbols in the pronunciation key are self-explanatory, but one requires brief discussion. The nonalphabetical symbol (ə) is called a schwa. It is used in this Dictionary to represent a reduced vowel, a vowel that receives the weakest level of stress within a word. The schwa sound varies, sometimes according to the vowel it is representing and often according to the sounds surrounding it:

sis·ter (sɪs'tər)

a·bun·dant (ə-bŭn'dənt)

STRESS. The relative emphasis with which the syllables of a word or phrase are spoken, called stress, is indicated in three different ways. The strongest, or primary, stress is marked with a bold mark ('). An intermediate, or secondary, level of stress is marked with a similar but lighter mark ('). The weakest stress is unmarked. Words of one syllable show no stress mark.

VARIANTS

Though standardization of English in the United States is more extensive than at any earlier time, many variant spellings and stylings remain in common use. All variants shown in this Dictionary are acceptable in any context unless indicated otherwise by a restrictive label, such as a dialect label. Variants, set in boldface type, are of two kinds: equal and unequal.

EQUAL VARIANTS. The word or joining an entry word and its variant form or forms indicates that these forms occur with virtually equal frequency in edited sources, based on our electronic and printed citational evidence:

ar·chae·ol·o·gy or ar·che·ol·o·gy (är'kē-ōl'ə-jē) n.

UNEQUAL VARIANTS. The word also joining an entry word and its variant form or forms indicates that the variant form occurs less frequently:

am·bi·ance also am·bi·ence (äm'bē-əns, än-byäns') n.

Variants that are not adjacent to their entry words in alphabetical order are entered as separate cross-references at the appropriate places in the alphabetical word list:

me·di·e·val also me·di·ae·val (mē'dē-ē'vəl, mēd'ē-) adj.

me·di·ae·val (mē'dē-ē'vəl, mēd'ē-) adj. Variant of medieval.

BRITISH VARIANTS. A number of variants consist of spellings preferred in British English. These variants, such as defence and colour, are labeled Chiefly British. They are entered at their own alphabetical places but are not given at the entries to which they relate:

de·fence (dī-fēns') n. & v. Chiefly British. Variant of defense.

One exception to this general rule has to do with words, such as realize, that end with the suffix -ize. The British spelling ending in -ise is not entered in this Dictionary unless it also commonly occurs in the United States. When a word that has a chiefly British variant occurs in compounds, the variant is not repeated at the compound. For example, the chiefly British variant colour is given for color but not for colorblind, color guard, and other such compounds.

PART-OF-SPEECH LABELS

The following italicized labels indicate parts of speech:

adj. adjective
adv. adverb conj. conjunction

def.art.	definite article
indef.art.	indefinite article
interj.	interjection
n.	noun
prep.	preposition
pron.	pronoun
v.	verb

These italicized labels indicate inflected forms:

pl.	plural
sing.	singular

Words such as cattle that occur only in the plural are labeled pl.n.

These italicized labels are used for the traditional classification of verbs:

tr.	transitive
intr	intransitive
aux.	auxiliary

The labels for word elements are:

pref.	prefix
suff.	suffix

Entries that are abbreviations, such as A.M. and blvd., are labeled abbr. Nouns that are often used to modify other nouns are labeled attributive.

Certain entries do not carry labels. They include contractions, symbols, trademarks, and the word elements -i- and -o-, which never occur in initial or final position in a word:

I'll (īl) 1. I will. 2. I shall.

I² 1. The symbol for the element iodine (n., sense 1).

Walk·man (wòk'măn', -mən) A trademark used for a pocket-sized audio-cassette player, radio, or combined unit with lightweight earphones.

Sometimes an entry word fulfills more than one grammatical function. For example, current can be an adjective (current pricing; current negotiations) and a noun (a current of air; the swift current of a river; electric current). In such cases the different parts of speech are defined within a single entry called a combined entry. The shift in grammatical function is indicated by a boldface dash followed by the boldface entry word and the appropriate part-of-speech label. If the syllabication or pronunciation differs, it is also included. Inflected forms are given if necessary and are followed by definitions.

re·bel (rĭ-bĕl') v. intr. re·belled, re·bel·ling, re·bels. 1. To refuse allegiance to and oppose by force an established government or ruling authority. 2. To resist or defy an authority or a generally accepted convention. 3. To feel or express strong unwillingness or repugnance: She rebelled at the unwelcome sug- gestion. — n. also reb·el (rĕb'əl) One who rebels or is in rebellion: "He is the perfect recruit for fascist movements: a rebel not a revolutionary, contemptuous yet envious of the rich and involved with them" (Stanley Hoffman). — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: rebel troops; a rebel army.

INFLECTED FORMS

An inflected form of a word differs from the main entry form by the addition of a suffix or by a change in its base form to indicate grammatical features such as number, person, mood, or tense. In this Dictionary the following inflected forms appear with entry words:

1. Principal parts of all verbs, whether regular or irregular
2. All degrees of comparison of adjectives and adverbs formed by inflection
3. Irregular plurals of nouns and plurals whose formation might cause a spelling problem

Inflected forms follow the part-of-speech label. They are set in boldface type, divided into syllables, and given pronunciations as necessary.

cap·i·tal·ize (kăp'i-tl-īz') v. cap·i·tal·ized, cap·i·tal·iz·ing, cap·i·tal·iz·es. — v. tr. 1. To use as or convert into capital. 2. To supply with capital or investment funds: capitalize a new business. 3. To authorize the issue of a certain amount of capital stock of: capitalize a corporation. 4. To convert (debt) into capital stock or shares. 5. To calculate the current value of (a future stream of earnings or cash flows). 6. To include (expenditures) in business accounts as assets instead of expenses. 7. a. To write or print in capital letters. b. To begin a word with a capital letter. — v. intr. To turn something to one's advantage; benefit: capitalize on an opponent's error. See Synonyms at benefit. — cap'i·tal·iz'a·ble adj.

PRINCIPAL PARTS OF VERBS. The principal parts of verbs are entered in this order: past tense, past participle, present participle, and third person singular present tense. When the past tense and the past participle are identical, one form represents both:

fly¹ (flī) v. flew (flōō), flown (flōn), fly·ing, flies (flīz).

walk (wōk) v. walked, walk·ing, walks.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Adjectives and adverbs whose comparative and superlative degrees are formed by adding -er and -est to the unchanged word show these comparative and superlative suffixes immediately after the part-of-speech label:

high (hī) adj. high·er, high·est.

Irregular comparative and superlative forms are given in full, as in bad, worse, worst.

The existence of -er and -est forms does not preclude the use of more and most with a simple adjective or adverb to express the comparative and superlative degrees. Often the comparative and superlative can be expressed either way, as in cloudier or more cloudy, cloudiest or most cloudy.

PLURALS OF NOUNS. Plurals of nouns other than those formed regularly by adding the suffixes -s or -es are shown and labeled pl.:

mouse (mous) n. pl. mice (mīs).

When a noun has a regular and an irregular plural form, both forms appear, with the most common shown first:

a·quar·i·um (ə-kwâr'ē-əm) n. pl. a·quar·i·ums or a·quar·i·a (-ē-ə).

Regular plurals are also shown when spelling might be a problem:

ra·di·o (rā'dē-ō) n. pl. ra·di·os.

hon·ey (hūn'ē) n. pl. hon·eys.

A noun that is chiefly or exclusively plural in both form and meaning is labeled pl.n.:

cat·tle (kăt'l) pl.n. 1. Any of various mammals of the genus Bos, including cows, steers, bulls, and oxen, often raised for meat and dairy products.

A noun that is always plural in form but is not necessarily used with a plural verb is labeled like this:

aer·o·bics (â-rō'bīks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. A system of physical conditioning designed to enhance circulatory and respiratory efficiency that involves vigorous, sustained exercise, such as jogging, swimming, or cycling, thereby improving the body's utilization of oxygen. 2. A program of physical fitness that involves such exercise. [From AEROBIC.]

pol·i·tics (pōl'ī-tīks) n. Abbr. pol., polit. 1. (used with a sing. verb). a. The art or science of government or governing, especially the governing of a political entity, such as a nation, and the administration and control of its internal and external affairs. b. Political science. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). a. The activities or affairs engaged in by a government, politician, or political party: "All politics is local" (Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.). "Politics have appealed to me since I was at Oxford because they are exciting morning, noon, and night" (Jeffrey Archer).

SEPARATE ENTRIES FOR INFLECTED FORMS. Irregular inflected forms are entered separately in the Dictionary when they occur more than one entry away from the main entry word:

men (měn) n. Plural of man.

went (wěnt) v. 1. Past tense of go¹.

Such entries carry a part-of-speech label and are given pronunciations as necessary.

Inflected forms are not shown at variant spellings that are cross-references to main entries:

par·a·lyse (pär'ə-līz') v. Chiefly British. Variant of paralyze.

Some verbs, such as do, be, and have, have archaic inflected forms, such as dost, art, and hadst, that occur frequently enough to justify their inclusion in this Dictionary. These forms are also entered separately:

dost (düst) v. Archaic. A second person singular present tense of do¹.

LABELS

This Dictionary uses various labels to indicate entries related to particular subject areas, to provide guidance regarding various levels of usage, and to indicate words indigenous to specific geographic areas.

SUBJECT LABELS. A subject label identifies the special area of knowledge to which an entry word or a definition applies:

e·qui·mo·lar (ē'kwə-mō'lər, ěk'wə-) adj. Chemistry. Having an equal number of moles.

tri·mor·phic (trī-môr'fīk) also tri·mor·phous (-fəs) adj. 1. Biology. Having or occurring in three differing forms. 2. Chemistry. Crystallizing in three distinct forms.

STATUS LABELS. Status labels indicate that an entry word or a definition is limited to a particular level or style of usage. All words and definitions not restricted by such a label should be regarded as appropriate for use in all contexts.

Non-Standard. This, the most restrictive label in the Dictionary, is applied to forms and usages that educated speakers and writers consider unacceptable:

an·y·ways (ĕn'ē-wāz') adv. Non-Standard. In any case.

Usage Problem. The label Usage Problem warns of possible difficulties involving grammar, diction, and writing style. A word or definition so labeled is discussed in a Usage Note:

snuck (snŭk) v. Usage Problem. A past tense and a past participle of sneak. See Usage Note at sneak.

well·ness (wĕl'nīs) n. Usage Problem. The condition of good physical and mental health, especially when maintained by proper diet, exercise, and habits. — n. attributive. Usage Problem. Often used to modify another noun: wellness programs; a wellness clinic.

USAGE NOTE: It can be argued that wellness serves a useful function as a means of describing a state that includes not just physical health but fitness and emotional well-being. The word is first recorded in 1654 but has never been given the acceptance of its antonym illness. In the most recent survey 68 percent of the Usage Panel found the word unacceptable in the sentence A number of corporations have implemented employee wellness programs, aimed at enhancing spiritual values, emotional stability, fitness, and nutrition.

Offensive. This label is reserved for words and expressions such as racial, ethnic, or gender slurs that are not only derogatory and insulting to the person to whom they are directed but also a discredit to the one using them. This label may occur alone or in combination as Offensive Slang.

Vulgar. This label warns of social taboos attached to a word; it may appear alone or in combination as Vulgar Slang.

Obscene. A word that violates accepted standards of decency carries the label Obscene.

Slang. This label indicates a style of language that is distinguished by a striving for rhetorical effect through the use of extravagant, often facetious figures of speech. Slang either dies out or is eventually incorporated into the standard language as its rhetorical effect is lost. Some forms of slang occur in most cultivated speech but not in formal discourse. An example of a word labeled Slang is:

white-knuckle (hwīt'nūk'əl, wīt'-) adj. Slang. Characterized by tense nervousness or apprehension: a white-knuckle emergency landing; white-knuckle time in the hospital waiting room.

Informal. Those whose speech is standard use not only the language of formal discourse but also the language of conversation. The great majority of words are acceptable at both levels, though many words that are acceptable in conversation with friends and colleagues would be unsuitable in the formal prose of an article written for publication in the journal of a learned society, for example. An example of an entry labeled Informal is:

wish list (wīsh list) n. Informal. An often mental list of things wanted or wished for.

TEMPORAL LABELS. Temporal labels signal words or senses whose use in modern English is uncommon.

Archaic. This label is applied to words and senses that once were common but are now rare, though they may be familiar because of their occurrence in certain contexts, such as the literature of an earlier time. Specifically, this label is attached to entry words and senses for which there is only sporadic evidence in print after 1755:

en-ter-tain-ment (ĕn'tər-tān'mənt) n. . . . 5. Archaic. Maintenance; support. 6. Obsolete. Employment.

Obsolete. The label Obsolete is used with entry words and senses no longer in active use, except, for example, in literary quotations. Specifically, this label is attached to entry words and senses for which there is little or no printed evidence since 1755. Sense 6 of entertainment is an example.

ENGLISH-LANGUAGE LABELS. This Dictionary contains a number of labels noting the restriction of particular entry words and senses to specific areas of the English-speaking world. Among them is Chiefly British, which acknowledges that words are seldom restricted exclusively to the British or American vocabulary and in fact are often in use elsewhere in the world, as in New Zealand. Here is a typical example of a word labeled Chiefly British:

win·kle² (wɪŋg'kəl) v. tr. win·kled, win·kling, win·kles. Chiefly British. To pry, extract, or force from a place or position. Often used with out.

Other English-language labels are:

Australian	Irish
Canadian	Scots
Caribbean	South African

DIALECT LABELS. When a word or sense is commonly used in a specific area of the United States and little used—even if known—in other areas, it has been given a dialect label.

bo·da·cious also bow·da·cious (bō-dā'shəs) or bar·da·cious (bär-) Southern U.S. & South Midland U.S.

This Dictionary uses dialect labels singly and in various combinations ranging from the very general (Regional) to the very specific (Cincinnati). The very specific labels, which are self-explanatory, serve as descriptors of geographic regions such as cities, states, and interstate areas.

Major areas of distribution. Major, generalized areas of dialect distribution are labeled as follows and can occur in any number of combinations:

Northern U.S.—from New Jersey and Pennsylvania north to New England and west to Washington and Oregon

Southern U.S.—from southern Maryland along the coastal plains of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana to eastern Texas and also including the "Upper South" as defined in the section "Midwestern and Midland"

Eastern U.S.—the Atlantic states from Maine to Florida, also including Vermont, New Hampshire, and upstate New York

Western U.S.—west of the 100th parallel, which extends southward from the Dakotas to western Oklahoma and Texas.

Subcategories of distribution. Within the major areas are these subcategories, the labels for which also can occur in various combinations:

For the north:

New England—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island

Northeastern U.S.—New England, New York State, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey

Upper Northern or Inland Northern U.S.—western upstate New York; northwest Pennsylvania; northern Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; Michigan; Wisconsin; and Minnesota

Lower Northern or North Midland U.S.—southern New Jersey and Pennsylvania; northern Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia; Ohio; Indiana; Illinois; Iowa; and Nebraska

Upper Midwest—Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota, and Nebraska Northwestern U.S. or Pacific Northwest—Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming

For the south:

Southeastern U.S.—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi

Upper Southern or South Midland U.S.—southern Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; western Virginia and North Carolina; northern Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana; Tennessee; Kentucky; Arkansas; and eastern Oklahoma

Lower Southern U.S.—Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and eastern Texas

Eastern Lower Southern or South Atlantic U.S.—North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida

For the east:

Central Atlantic U.S.—Delaware; Washington, D.C.; eastern Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania; and southern New Jersey

North Atlantic Coast—Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, southeast New York State, and northern New Jersey

For the west:

Southwestern U.S.—Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and southern California

Midwestern and Midland. In addition to the labels just described, two labels are used that overlap with but lie outside the overall scheme. Midwestern U.S. designates regional terms that occur throughout the area from Michigan westward to the Dakotas and from Ohio westward to Kansas, an area that includes parts of several dialect areas. Midland U.S., a term previously used in American dialect geography, includes the Lower North and the Upper South. The collective label Midland is distinguished from Midwestern, which does not include the South. Two Midland words are Indian turnip for jack-in-the-pulpit and Italian for submarine.

Gullah. The label Gullah refers not to a region but to the distinctive dialect of English spoken by American Black people who live on the coast and coastal islands of Georgia, South Carolina, and northern Florida.

CROSS-REFERENCES

A cross-reference signals that additional information about one entry can be found at another entry. Cross-references have two main functions: to avoid needless duplication of information and to indicate where further discussion of a word occurs.

The entry referred to is printed in boldface type preceded by a brief descriptive or instructional phrase:

bade (bād, bād) v. A past tense of bid.

The cross-reference indicates that bade is a past tense at the entry bid, where further information about the entry can be found.

The word See is also used to introduce certain cross-references:

feath-er-edge (fēth'ər-ēj') n. 1. A thin fragile edge, especially a tapering edge of a board. 2. See deckle edge.

A full definition is given at the entry referred to, in this case deckle edge. At the end of the definition of deckle edge the phrase Also called appears followed by one or more words, here featheredge, that have the same meaning:

deckle edge (dĕk'l ĕj) n. The rough edge of handmade paper formed in a deckle. Also called featheredge

A cross-reference referring to only one definition in an entry having two or more definitions contains that definition number:

tsar (zär, tsär) n. Variant of czar (n., sense 1).

Some cross-references refer to tables. The boldface term in the cross-reference is the entry at which the table can be found:

kro-na² (krō'nə) n. pl. kro-nor (-nôr', -nər). Abbr. kr., k., K. A basic unit of currency in Sweden. See Table at currency.

ORDER OF SENSES

Entries containing more than one sense are arranged for the convenience of contemporary dictionary users with the central and often the most commonly sought meanings first. Senses and subsenses are grouped to show their relationships with each other. For example, in the entry for fatal shown below, the commonly sought meaning "Causing or capable of causing death" appears first and the now obsolete sense "Having been destined; fated" comes last in the series of five:

fa·tal (fāt'l) adj. 1. Causing or capable of causing death. 2. Causing ruin or destruction; disastrous: "Such doctrines, if true, would be absolutely fatal to my theory" (Charles Darwin). 3. Of decisive importance; fateful. 4. Determining destiny; controlled by fate. 5. Obsolete. Having been destined; fated.

Electronic and printed citations have been used to determine how all words should be defined.

DIVISION OF SENSES. Boldface letters before senses indicate that two or more subsenses are closely related:

phe·nom·e·non (fī-nŏm'ə-nŏn', -nən) n. pl. phe·nom·e·na (-nə). 1. . . . 2. pl. phe·nom·e·nons. a. An unusual, significant, or unaccountable fact or occurrence; a marvel. b. A remarkable or outstanding person; a paragon. See Synonyms at wonder. 3. Philosophy. a. That which appears real to the mind, regardless of whether its underlying existence is proved or its nature understood. b. In Kantian philosophy, the appearance of an object to the mind as opposed to its existence in and of itself, independent of the mind.

In a combined entry the senses are numbered in separate sequences after each part of speech:

ber·ry (bĕr'ē) n. pl. ber·ries. 1. a. Botany. An indehiscent fruit derived from a single ovary and having the whole wall fleshy, such as the grape or tomato. b. A small, juicy, fleshy fruit, such as a blackberry or raspberry, regardless of its botanical structure. 2. The small, dark egg of certain crustaceans or fishes. — v. intr. ber·ried, ber·ry·ing, ber·ries. 1. To hunt for or gather berries: went berrying in July. 2. To bear or produce berries.

Information applicable only to a particular sense or subsense is shown after the number or letter of that sense or subsense:

ra·dix (rā'dīks) n. pl. rad·i·ces (răd'ī-sēz', rā'dī-) or ra·dix·es. 1. Biology. A root or point of origin. 2. Abbr. rad. Mathematics. The base of a system of numbers, such as 2 in the binary system and 10 in the decimal system.

In this entry the subject label Biology applies only to the first sense. The subject label Mathematics and the abbreviation rad. apply only to the second sense.

The same principles hold with respect to information about capitalization and plural use:

lam·en·ta·tion (lăm'ən-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of lamenting. 2. A lament. 3. Lamentations. (used with a sing. verb.) Abbr. Lam., Lm A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

In this entry the form Lamentations at sense 3 indicates that only the capitalized plural form is used to refer to the biblical book. The usage label used with a sing. verb means that this form, with this meaning, is used only with a singular verb. The abbreviations Lam. and Lm and the subject label Bible apply only to sense 3.

Labels and other information applicable to all senses in an entry with more than one part of speech appear before the first part of speech in that entry:

kedge (kěj) Nautical. n. A light anchor used for warping a vessel. — v. kedged, kedg-ing, kedg-es. — v. tr. To warp (a vessel) by means of a light anchor.

The positioning of the label Nautical before the noun part-of-speech label, the first such label in the entry, indicates that Nautical applies to the entire combined entry—in this case, the noun and the verb.

SPECIAL WORDING OF SOME DEFINITIONS

Information essential to the accurate presentation of a meaning of a word is included in a phrasal definition. In some instances, however, the defining language varies.

FULL-SENTENCE EXPANDERS. Supplementary information is sometimes included in a full sentence after the phrasal definition if, on the basis of citational and other evidence, it is considered to be of special import:

me-ter² (mē'tər) n. Abbr. m The international standard unit of length, approximately equivalent to 39.37 inches. It was redefined in 1983 as the distance traveled by light in a vacuum in 1/299,792,458 of a second.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. Words whose meanings do not permit standard definitions have explanatory notes, beginning with Used or Often used. Words requiring notes of this kind include function words, interjections, intensives, some auxiliary verbs, and words labeled Offensive and Offensive Slang. An example is the explanatory note at the interjection ugh:

Used to express horror, disgust, or repugnance.

ATTRIBUTIVES

It has long been a characteristic feature of English that nouns, like adjectives, can be used to modify other nouns. Nouns used in this way are labeled attributives in this Dictionary. An attributive is a word that freely occurs as a modifier of a broad group of other nouns, does not undergo comparison in the manner of true adjectives, cannot be modified by very, and does not regularly occur in the predicate after be.

Attributives are included as subsections of noun entries. Verbal illustrations exemplify typical contexts of their usage:

gas (gās) n. pl. gas-es or gas-ses. 1. a. The state of matter distinguished from the solid and liquid states by relatively low density and viscosity, relatively great expansion and contraction with changes in pressure and temperature, the ability to diffuse readily, and the spontaneous tendency to become distributed uniformly throughout any container. b. A substance in the gaseous state. 2. A gaseous fuel, such as natural gas. 3. Gasoline. 4. The speed control of a gasoline engine: Step on the gas. 5. A gaseous asphyxiant, irritant, or poison. 6. A gaseous anesthetic, such as nitrous oxide. 7. a. Flatulence. b. Flatus. 8. Slang. Idle or boastful talk. 9. Slang. Someone or something exceptionally exciting or entertaining: The party was a gas. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: gas tanks; gas stoves.

ILLUSTRATIVE EXAMPLES

In this Dictionary there are tens of thousands of illustrative examples, of which more than 4,000 are quoted from over 2,000 separate sources. These illustrative examples, which follow the definitions and are set in italic type, show the entry words in typical contexts. The examples are taken from our files of electronic and printed citations showing patterns of word usage by a broad group of educated speakers in a wide array of publications. Such examples are especially helpful in showing changing usage, attesting to the existence of new words and meanings, illustrating transitive and intransitive verbs, revealing figurative uses of words, and exemplifying levels and styles of usage. Here are some instances of the use of quoted illustrations:

self-con-fi-dence (sɛlf'kɔn'fɪ-dəns) n. Confidence in oneself or one's own abilities: "Without self-confidence we are as babes in the cradle" (Virginia Woolf).

wis-dom (wɪz'dəm) n. 1. Understanding of what is true, right, or lasting; insight: "One cannot have wisdom without living life" (Dorothy McCall). 2. Common sense; good judgment: "It is a characteristic of wisdom not to do desperate things" (Henry David Thoreau). 3. a. The sum of scholarly learning through the ages; knowledge: "In those homely sayings was couched the collective wisdom of generations" (Maya Angelou). b. Wise teachings of the ancient sages. 4. A wise outlook, plan, or course of action. 5. Wisdom. Bible. Wisdom of Solomon. [Middle English, from Old English wīsdōm. See weid- in Appendix.]

Illustrative examples that are not direct quotations appear in entries such as the verb speak:

speak (spɛk) v. spoke (spōk), spo-ken (spō'kən), speak-ing, speaks. — v. intr. 1. To utter words or articulate sounds with ordinary speech modulation; talk. 2. a. To convey thoughts, opinions, or emotions orally. b. To express oneself. c. To be on speaking terms: They are no longer speaking. 3. To deliver an address or a lecture: The president of NOW was to speak at the rally. 4. a. To make a statement in writing: The biography speaks of great loneliness. b. To act as spokesperson: spoke for the entire staff. 5. a. To convey a message by non-verbal means: Actions speak louder than words. b. To be expressive: spoke with her eyes. c. To be appealing: His poetry speaks to one's heart.

PHRASAL VERBS

A phrasal verb is an expression consisting of a verb and an adverb or a preposition with a unitary meaning that cannot be deduced from the sum total of the meanings of its constituent parts. Phrasal verbs, set in boldface type and introduced by the heading phrasal verbs, follow the main definitions and precede the idioms, if any are present. Phrasal verbs are listed in alphabetical order:

set¹ (sĕt) v. set, set-ting, sets. — v. tr. 1. To put in a specified position; place: set a book on a table. . . . —phrasal verbs. set about. To begin or start: set about solving the problem. set apart. 2. To reserve for a specific use. 3. To make noticeable: character traits that set her apart. set aside. 4. To separate and reserve for a special purpose. 5. To discard or reject. 6. To declare invalid; annul or overrule: The court has set aside the conviction. set at. To attack or assail: The dogs set at the fox. set back. 8. To slow down the progress of; hinder. 9. Informal. To cost: That coat set me back $1,000. set by. To reserve for future use: It is wise to set food and money by in case of a future emergency.

IDIOMS

An idiom is an expression consisting of two or more words having a meaning that cannot be deduced from the sum total of the meanings of its constituent parts. Idioms, set in boldface type and introduced by the heading idioms, are fully defined in the last part of an entry. Idioms are listed in alphabetical order:

take (tāk) v. took (tōök), tak-en (tā'kən), tak-ing, takes. — v. tr. 1. To get into one's possession by force, skill, or artifice . . . —idioms. on the take. Informal. Taking or seeking to take bribes or illegal income: "There were policemen on the take" (Scott Turow). take a bath. Informal. To experience serious financial loss: "Small investors who latched on to hot new issues took a bath in Wall Street" (Paul A. Samuelson). take account of. To take into consideration. take away from. To detract: Her stringy hair takes away from her lovely face. take care. To be careful: Take care or you will slip on the ice. take care of. To assume responsibility for the maintenance, support, or treatment of. take charge. To assume control or command.

ETYMOLOGIES

Etymologies appear in square brackets following the definitions. An etymology traces the history of a word from one language to another as far back in time as can be determined with reasonable certainty. The most recent stage before Modern English is given first, with each earlier stage following in sequence:

cab-in (kāb'ĭn) n. 1. A small, roughly built house; a cottage. . . . [Middle English caban, from Old French cabane, from Old Provençal cabana, from Late Latin capanna.]

A language name, linguistic form, and brief definition, or gloss, of that form are given for each stage of the derivation. In order to avoid redundancy, however, a language, form, or gloss is not repeated if it is identical to the corresponding item in the immediately preceding stage. In the example shown for cabin, the different Middle English, Old French, and Late Latin forms have the same gloss, which is the same as the first definition of the Modern English word cabin: "small, roughly built house."

CONTENT OF ETYMOLOGIES. The etymologies in this dictionary are designed to be as readable as possible. They rarely use abbreviations, symbols, or highly technical terms. The traditional language of descriptive grammar is used to identify parts of speech and various grammatical and morphological forms and processes, such as diminutive, frequentative, variant, stem, past participle, and metathesis. All of these terms are fully defined entries in the Dictionary. Likewise, every language cited in an etymology is either a Dictionary entry or is glossed in the etymology itself.

Sometimes a stage in the history of the word is not attested, yet there is reasonable certainty from comparative evidence about what the missing linguistic form looked like and what language it belonged to. These unattested forms are preceded by an asterisk indicating their hypothetical nature:

cer·tain (sûr'tn) adj. 1. Definite; fixed: set aside a certain sum each week. 2. Sure to come or happen; inevitable: certain success. 3. Established beyond doubt or question; indisputable: What is certain is that every effect must have a cause. . . . [Middle English, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin certānus*, from Latin certus, past participle of cernere, to determine. See krei- in Appendix.]

If a word is taken from the name of a person or place, such names are identified with pertinent information as to time or place. The etymology usually stops there, although a further etymology of the name itself is occasionally given.

Some words are not given etymologies. These include interjections, trademarks, and ethnic names that are Anglicizations of the group's name for itself. A large and important group of words not given explicit etymologies consists of compounds and derivatives, such as sodium chloride, emergence, and euploid, formed in English from words or word elements that are themselves entries in the Dictionary. If only a portion of an entry is used in an etymology, the unused portion of the entry is enclosed within parentheses:

bal·lis·to·car·di·o·gram (bə-lis'tō-kār'dē-ə-grām') n. A recording made by a ballistocardiograph. [BALLIST(IC) + CARDIOGRAM.]

Derivatives such as emergence, from emerge, in which only the final vowel of one constituent has been deleted, are assumed to be sufficiently understandable not to need etymologies.

INDO-EUROPEAN ROOTS. It is remarkable that the great bulk of the now vast vocabulary of English can be traced back to the reconstructed ancestral language called Proto-Indo-European. English words can be so traced either through their native origins in Old English and Proto-Germanic or through borrowings from nearly every other Indo-European language, but chiefly from Germanic, Romance, Latin, and Greek. The etymologies in this Dictionary take many such words back to their earliest ascertainable origins either in Proto-Indo-European or in the prehistoric stage of one of its chief branches, such as Germanic or Celtic. Each word is traced back to its earliest documentary attestation in its own etymology, then cross-referred to the Appendix of Indo-European Roots found at the end of the Dictionary. An introductory essay by Professor Calvert Watkins discusses some of the cultural inferences that may be drawn from this material (see pages 2081–2089). Also included are an explanatory Guide to the Appendix (pages 2090–2091), a table of the principal sound correspondences, and a diagram of the Indo-European languages on the endpapers.

STYLE OF ETYMOLOGIES. The etymologies present a great deal of complex information in a small space, and for this reason certain typographic and stylistic conventions are used. The word from indicates origin of any kind—by inheritance, borrowing, derivation, or composition. When a compound word is split into its component elements, a colon introduces them. Each element is traced in turn to its further origins. Parentheses enclose the further history of a part of a compound:

pseud·e·pig·ra·pha (sōō'dī-pīg'rā-fə) pl.n. 1. Spurious writings, especially writings falsely attributed to biblical characters or times. 2. A body of texts written between 200 B.C. and A.D. 200 and spuriously ascribed to various prophets and kings of Hebrew Scriptures. [Greek, from neuter pl. of pseudepigraphos, falsely ascribed : pseudēs, false; see PSEUDO- + epigraphēin, to inscribe (epi-, epi- + graphein, to write); see gerbh- in Appendix.]

At times it is necessary to cross-refer from one etymology to another, either to avoid repeating part of a lengthy and complex derivation or to indicate the close relationship between two different Modern English words:

bat³ (băt) v. tr. bat·ted, bat·ting, bats. To wink or flutter: bat one's eyelashes. [Probably a variant of BATE².]

A word or word element in an etymology printed in small capitals is an entry in the Dictionary and should be referred to for more etymological information. Linguistic forms that are not Modern English words appear in italics, and glosses and language names appear in roman type.

Old English thorn (þ) and edh (ð) are both given as th, whereas Old Norse thorn is spelled as th and the phonemically distinct edh as dh. In Latin all long vowels are marked with macrons. Mandarin Chinese forms are given in the Pinyin system. The transcription of African and Native American languages occasionally requires the use of symbols—usually drawn from the International Phonetic Alphabet—whose values will be apparent to specialists but are not discussed here.

UNDEFINED FORMS

At the end of many entries additional boldface words appear without definitions—words either formed from the entry words by the addition of suffixes or otherwise closely and clearly related to the entry words. These run-on entries involve the same basic meaning as the entry word but have different grammatical functions, as indicated by their part-of-speech labels. Multisyllabic run-ons are divided into syllables and show primary and secondary stresses as needed. Pronunciations are included as required:

ex·cuse (ik-skyōōzʹ) v. tr. . . . [Middle English excusen, from Old French excuser, from Latin excūsāre: ex-, ex- + causa, accusation; see CAUSE.] —ex·cus′a·ble adj. —ex·cus′a·ble·ness n. —ex·cus′a·bly adv. —ex·cus′er n.

Undefined run-ons are usually entered in alphabetical order. However, when different run-ons have the same grammatical function and the same meaning, they are separated by a comma and share a single part-of-speech label. For instance, at the entry lampoon the variants lampooner and lampoonist have the same meaning and function and are therefore run on together:

lam·poon (läm-pōōnʹ) n. . . . [French lampon, perhaps from lampons, let us drink (from a common refrain in drinking songs), first person pl. imperative of lamper, to gulp down, of Germanic origin.] —lam·poon′er, lam·poon′ist n. —lam·poon′er·y n.

In other instances, undefined run-ons have the same grammatical function but different meanings. These appear separately, as is the case with excusableness and excuser at the entry excuse.

In some cases an entry word appears unchanged as a run-on at the end of that entry with a different part-of-speech label. This indicates that the word is related in basic meaning to the entry word but has a different grammatical function.

SYNONYM PARAGRAPHS

Synonyms of special interest are listed after the entry for the central word in the group. Synonym paragraphs are introduced by the heading SYNONYMS. There are two kinds of synonym paragraphs. The first consists of a group of undiscriminated, alphabetically ordered words sharing a single, irreducible meaning. Antonyms, if applicable, appear at the end of the paragraph, as seen at the entry for the adjective plentiful:

SYNONYMS: plentiful, abundant, ample, copious, plenteous. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “being fully as much as one needs or desires”: a plentiful supply of stationery; her abundant talent; ample space; copious provisions; a plenteous crop of wheat.

ANTONYM: scant

The second kind, exemplified at the adjective entry *real*¹, consists of fully discriminated synonyms ordered in a way that reflects their interrelationship. A brief sentence explaining the initial point of comparison of the words is given, followed by explanations of their connotations and varying shades of meaning:

SYNONYMS: real, actual, true, existent. These adjectives are compared as they mean not imaginary but having verifiable existence. Real implies that something is genuine or authentic or that what it seems or purports to be tallies with fact: Don't lose the bracelet; it's made of real gold. My mother showed real sympathy for my predicament. "The general, in a well-feigned or real ecstasy, embraced him" (William Hickling Prescott). Actual means existing and not merely potential or possible: "rocks, trees... the actual world" (Henry David Thoreau); "what the actual things were which produced the emotion that you experienced" (Ernest Hemingway). True implies that something is consistent with fact, reality, or the actual state of things: "It is undesirable to believe a proposition when there is no ground whatever for supposing it true" (Bertrand Russell). Existent applies to what has life or being: Much of the beluga caviar existent in the world is found in the Soviet Union and Iran. See also Synonyms at authentic

In both kinds of paragraphs the synonyms are set in lightface italic type. Illustrative examples, many of them quoted, exemplify the use of the synonyms in context.

SYNONYM CROSS-REFERENCES. Every synonym in a synonym paragraph is itself cross-referenced to that synonym paragraph. For instance, the word true is discussed in the synonym paragraph at the entry *real*¹. Therefore, definition 1a of the entry true—the definition directly tied in with the synonym paragraph at *real*¹—contains a cross-reference to the synonym paragraph at *real*¹:

true (trōō) adj. tru-er, tru-est. 1. a. Consistent with fact or reality; not false or erroneous. See Synonyms at real¹.

Sometimes a word is discussed in more than one synonym paragraph. Cross-references are given to all the synonym paragraphs that include this word. An example is unaffected, which appears in synonym paragraphs at both naive and sincere:

un-af-fect-ed (ŭn'ə-fĕk'tĭd) adj. 1. Not changed, modified, or affected.
2. Marked by lack of affectation; genuine. See Synonyms at naive. See Synonyms at sincere.

7At times the entry word central to one synonym group is a synonym in a group of synonyms at another entry. Such is the case with the entry real. At the end of the synonym paragraph at real, a cross-reference directs you to another synonym paragraph at the entry authentic.

USAGE NOTES

Usage Notes following many entries present important information and guidance on matters of grammar, diction, pronunciation, and registers and nuances of usage.

For detailed discussion of usage and our Usage Panel see Geoffrey Nunberg's essay on pages xxvi-xxx.

Some Notes, such as the one at world-class, contain opinions of the Usage Panel:

world-class (wûrld'kläs') adj. 1. Ranking among the foremost in the world; of an international standard of excellence; of the highest order: a world-class figure skater. 2. Usage Problem. Great, as in importance, concern, or notoriety.

USAGE NOTE: The adjective world-class became current as a result of its original use to describe athletes capable of performing at an international level of competition, as in A ten-second time would put him in the first rank of world-class sprinters. In recent years it has been extended to mean “of an international standard of excellence” and has been applied to a wide variety of categories. When used of things that naturally admit such comparison, the extended use of the word is generally acceptable to the Usage Panel. In the most recent survey 65 percent accepted the description world-class restaurant, and 53 percent accepted world-class sports car. But the expression is not generally accepted as a vague way of emphasizing magnitude or degree. The sentence Johann Sebastian Bach's 300th birthday will rank as a world-class anniversary was acceptable to only 7 percent, and only 4 percent accepted a newspaper's description of AIDS as a world-class tragedy.

An example of a Usage Note without an opinion of the Usage Panel is found at the entry criterion:

USAGE NOTE: Like the analogous etymological plurals agenda and data, criteria is widely used as a singular form. Unlike them, however, it is not yet acceptable in that use.

USAGE NOTE CROSS-REFERENCES. A Note containing information related to the content of another Note ends with a cross-reference:

well² (wĕl) adv. bet-ter (bĕt'ər), best (bĕst).

USAGE NOTE: Used as an adjective applied to people, well usually refers to a state of health, whereas good has a much wider range of senses. It has always been a first principle of grammatical criticism that there should be no difference without a distinction, and perhaps for this reason, some critics have insisted that the expression feel good cannot be used in reference to health. It is true that there is a distinction between feel well and feel good, but both can be applied to a state of health. Thus a patient suffering from a chronic disease might appropriately say to a doctor I feel good today, which implies a relative lack of physical discomfort. By contrast, I feel well today would be appropriate if the patient believes that the ailment has disappeared. See Usage Note at good.

The Note at *well*² concludes with a cross-reference to related information in the Note at the entry good. Similarly, the Note at good concludes with a cross-reference to the Note at *well*²:

good (gōōd) Abbr. gd., G, G. adj. bet-ter (bĕt'ər), best (bĕst).

USAGE NOTE: Good is properly used as an adjective with linking verbs such as be, seem, or appear: The future looks good. The soup tastes good. It should not be used as an adverb with other verbs: The car runs well (not good). Thus, The dress fits well and looks good. See Usage Note at well².

f an entry without a Note is discussed in a Note elsewhere, that entry contains a cross-reference to the Note where a full discussion is to be found. For example, the entry -ess contains a Usage Note. The content of this Note has direct bearing on the use of the word stewardess. Consequently, the entry stewardess has a cross-reference directing the reader to the Note at -ess:

stew-ard-ess (stōō'ər-dīs, styōō'-) n. A woman flight attendant. See Usage Note at -ess.

REGIONAL NOTES

This Dictionary contains hundreds of words and meanings whose occurrence is restricted to certain areas of the United States. Many entries contain Regional Notes explaining in detail a point of dialect. For example, the word dragonfly is widespread in American English, but dialect terms for the insect abound. These dialect terms, listed at the entry for dragonfly, are discussed in the Regional Note at the end of the entry:

drag-on-fly (dräg'ən-flī') n. pl. drag-on-flies. Any of various large insects of the order Odonata or suborder Anisoptera, having a long slender body and two pairs of narrow, net-veined wings that are usually held outstretched while the insect is at rest. Also called darning needle, devil's darning needle, ear sewer, mosquito hawk, skeeter hawk, snake doctor, snake feeder, spindle.

REGIONAL NOTE: Regional terms for the dragonfly are numerous, providing good evidence for dialect boundaries in the United States. The greatest variety of terms is to be found in the South, where the most widespread term is snake doctor (a name based on a folk belief that dragonflies take care of snakes). The Midland equivalent is snake feeder. Speakers from the Lower South, on the other hand, are more likely to refer to the same insect as a mosquito hawk or, in the South Atlantic states, a skeeter hawk. The imagery outside the South alludes more to the insect's shape than to its behavior or diet: Upper Northern speakers call it a darning needle or a devil's darning needle; those in Coastal New Jersey, a spindle; and Northern Californians, an ear sewer.

REGIONAL NOTE CROSS-REFERENCES. Regional Notes are fully cross-referenced. In the case of snake doctor, a term appropriately labeled to reflect its use in the South, the entry contains two cross-references—a "See" cross-reference directing the reader to the main entry at dragonfly, where the full definition and a list of synonymous terms are found, and a "Regional Note" cross-reference directing the reader to the Regional Note at dragonfly for full discussion of the distribution of these terms:

snake doctor (snāk dök'tər) n. 1. Chiefly Southern U.S. See dragonfly. See Regional note at dragonfly. 2. See hellgrammite.

WORD HISTORIES

In addition to etymologies, which necessarily contain information in a compressed form, this Dictionary provides word history paragraphs at entries whose etymologies are of particular interest. In these paragraphs the bare facts of the etymology are expanded to give a fuller understanding of how important linguistic processes operate, how words move from one language to another, and how the history of an individual word can be related to historical and cultural developments. For example, the history of the word alligator involves borrowing from Spanish into English, as its etymology reveals, but the word history also describes the role of taboo deformation in the history of the word alligator and in that of crocodile as well. Usually the word history also contains the date at which the word was first recorded in English:

al-li-ga-tor (äl'i-gā'tər) n. 1. Either of two large reptiles, Alligator mississippiensis of the southeast United States or A. sinensis of China, having sharp teeth and powerful jaws. They differ from crocodiles in having a broader, shorter snout. 2. Leather made from the hide of one of these reptiles. 3. A tool or fastener having strong, adjustable, often toothed jaws. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an alligator pond; an alligator handbag. [Alteration of Spanish el lagarto, the lizard : el, the (from Latin ille, that); see al¹ in Appendix + lagarto, lizard (from Latin lacertus).]

WORD HISTORY: In The Travailes of an Englishman, published in 1568, Job Hortop says that “in this river we killed a monstrous Lagarto or Crocodile.” This killing gives rise to the first recorded instance of alligator in English, obviously in a different form from the one familiar to modern speakers. Alligator, which comes to us from Spanish el lagarto, “the lizard,” was modified in pronunciation and form in several ways before taking on the form alligator. Such changes, referred to by linguists as taboo deformation, are not uncommon in a name for something that is feared and include, for example, the change in sequence of the r and t that occurred between el lagarto and alligator. An interesting parallel case is crocodile, which appears in Spanish, for example, as cocodrilo, with a similar difference in the sequence of the r. The earliest recorded form of alligator that is similar to ours appears in Shakespeare’s Romeo and Juliet (First Folio, 1623): “In his needie shop a tortoyrs hung,/An Allegater stuf.”

Yet another example showing how the facts of etymology are expanded in a word history paragraph to give the reader a better understanding of the historical and social forces shaping word and sense development is found at the entry holocaust, where meaning, usage, and history are clearly delineated by the definitions, the Usage Note, and the word history paragraph:

hol·o·caust (hōl'ə-kōst', hō'lə-) n. 1. Great or total destruction, especially by fire. 2. a. Widespread destruction. b. A great disaster. 3. a. Holocaust. The genocide of European Jews and others by the Nazis during World War II: "Israel emerged from the Holocaust and is defined in relation to that catastrophe" (Emanuel Litvinoff). b. A massive slaughter: "an important document in the so far sketchy annals of the Cambodian holocaust" (Rod Nordland). 4. A sacrificial offering that is consumed entirely by flames. [Middle English, burnt offering, from Old French holocauste, from Latin holocaustum, from Greek holokauston, from neuter of holokaustos, burnt whole : holo-, holo- + kaustos, burnt (from kaiein, to burn).] —hol'·o·caus'tal, hol'·o·caus'tic adj.

USAGE NOTE: When referring to the massive destruction of human beings by other human beings, holocaust has a secure place in the language. Fully 99 percent of the Usage Panel accepts the use of holocaust in the phrase nuclear holocaust. Sixty percent accepts the sentence As many as two million people may have died in the holocaust that followed the Khmer Rouge takeover in Cambodia. But because of its associations with genocide, extended applications of holocaust may not always be received with equanimity. When the word is used to refer to death brought about by natural causes, the percentage of the Panel's acceptance drops sharply. Only 31 percent of the Panel accepts the sentence In East Africa five years of drought have brought about a holocaust in which millions have died. Just 11 percent approved the use of holocaust to summarize the effects of the AIDS epidemic. This suggests that other figurative usages such as the huge losses in the Savings and Loan holocaust may be viewed as overblown or in poor taste.

WORD HISTORY: Totality of destruction has been central to the meaning of holocaust since it first appeared in Middle English in the 14th century and referred to the biblical sacrifice in which a male animal was wholly burnt on the altar in worship of God. Holocaust comes from Greek holokauston ("that which is completely burnt"), which was a translation of Hebrew ôlâ (literally "that which goes up," that is, in smoke). In this sense of "burnt sacrifice," holocaust is still used in some versions of the Bible. In the 17th century the meaning of holocaust broadened to "something totally consumed by fire," and the word eventually was applied to fires of extreme destructiveness. In the 20th century holocaust has taken on a variety of figurative meanings, summarizing the effects of war, rioting, storms, epidemic diseases, and even economic failures. Most of these usages arose after World War II, but it is unclear whether they permitted or resulted from the use of holocaust in reference to the mass murder of European Jews and others by the Nazis. This application of the word occurred as early as 1942, but the phrase the Holocaust did not become established until the late 1950's. Here it parallels and may have been influenced by another Hebrew word, sho'ah ("catastrophe"). In the Bible sho'ah has a range of meanings including "personal ruin or devastation" and "a wasteland or desert." Sho'ah was first used to refer to the Nazi slaughter of Jews in 1939, but its phrase ha-sho'ah ("the catastrophe") only became established after World War II. Holocaust has also been used to translate hurban ("destruction"), another Hebrew word used to summarize the genocide of Jews by the Nazis. This sense of holocaust has since broadened to include the mass slaughter of other peoples, but when capitalized it refers specifically to the destruction of Jews and other Europeans by the Nazis and may also encompass the Nazi persecution of Jews that preceded the outbreak of the war.

PRONUNCIATION KEY

A list of the pronunciation symbols used in this Dictionary is given below in the column headed AHD. The column headed EXAMPLES contains words chosen to illustrate how the AHD symbols are pronounced. The letters that correspond in sound to the AHD symbols are shown in boldface. Although similar, the AHD and IPA (International Phonetic Alphabet) symbols are not precisely the same because they were conceived for different purposes.

EXAMPLES	AHD	EXAMPLES	AHD
pat	ă	pît	ĩ
pay	ā	pie, by	ī
care	âr	pier	îr
father	ä	judge	j
bib	b	kick, cat, pique	k
church	ch	lid, needle*	l (nēd'l) deed, milled	d	mum	m
pet	ě	no, sudden*	n (sŭd'n)
bee	ē	thing	ng
fife, phase, rough	f	pot	ö gag	g	toe	ō
hat	h	caught, paw, for,	ô which	hw	horrid, hoarse noise	oi

EXAMPLES	AHD	EXAMPLES	AHD
took	ō	with	w
boot	ō	yes	y
out	ou	zebra, xylem	z
pop	p	vision, pleasure, garage	zh roar	r	about, item, edible, gallop, circus	ə sauce	s	butter	ər
ship, dish	sh
tight, stopped	t
thin	th
this	th
cut	ŭ
urge, term, firm, word, heard	ûr
valve	v

FOREIGN	AHD
French feu, German schön	œ
French tu, German über	ü
German ich, Scottish loch	KH
French bon 	N

*In English the consonants l and n often constitute complete syllables by themselves.

Regional pronunciations of -or- vary. In pairs such as for, four; horse, hoarse; and morning, mourning, the vowel varies between (ô) and (ō). In this Dictionary these vowels are represented as follows: for (fôr), four (fôr, fôr); horse (hôrs), hoarse (hôrs, hōrs); and morning (môr'ning), mourning (môr'ning, mōr'-). Other words for which both forms are shown include more, glory, and borne. A similar variant occurs in words such as coral, forest, and horrid, where the pronunciation of o before r varies between (ô) and (ö). In these words the (ôr) pronunciation is given first: forest (fôr'ist, fôr'-).

The Dictionary uses N to reflect that the preceding vowel is nasalized.

- a¹ or A (ā) n. pl. a's or A's. 1. The first letter of the modern English alphabet. 2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter a. 3. The first in a series. 4. The best or highest in quality or rank: grade A milk. 5. Something shaped like the letter A. 6. Music. a. The sixth tone in the scale of C major or the first tone in the relative minor scale. b. A key or scale in which A is the tonic. c. A written or printed note representing this tone. d. A string, key, or pipe tuned to the pitch of this tone. 7. A. One of four types of blood in the ABO system.
- a² (ə; ā when stressed) indef.art. 1. Used before nouns and noun phrases that denote a single but unspecified person or thing: a region; a person. 2. Used before terms, such as few or many, that denote number, amount, quantity, or degree: only a few of the voters; a bit more rest; a little excited. 3. a. Used before a proper name to denote a type or a member of a class: the wisdom of a Socrates. b. Used before a mass noun to indicate a single type or example: a dry wine. 4. The same: birds of a feather. 5. Any: not a drop to drink. [Middle English, variant of an, an. See AN¹.]

USAGE NOTE: In modern written English, the form a is used before a word beginning with a consonant sound, however it may be spelled (a frog, a university, a euphemism). The form an is used before a word beginning with a vowel sound (an orange, an hour). At one time, an was an acceptable alternative before words beginning with a consonant sound but spelled with a vowel (an one, an united appeal), but this usage is now entirely obsolete. • An was also once a common variant before words beginning with h in which the first syllable was unstressed; thus 18th-century authors wrote either a historical or an historical but a history, not an history. This usage had a phonetic justification inasmuch as the initial h in words such as historical and heroic was often dropped, a practice that was largely abandoned by the late 19th century in educated speech. By 1926 H.W. Fowler could regard the continued use of an before such words as pedantic. Nowadays it survives primarily before the word historical; one rarely encounters a reference to an hysterectomy or an hereditary trait. The use of a phrase like an historic opportunity is a harmless adornment in formal writing.

- a³ (ə) prep. In every; to each; per: once a month; one dollar a pound. [Middle English, from Old English an, in. See ON.]
- a⁴ (ə) v. aux. Informal. Have: He'd a come if he could. [Middle English, alteration of haven, to have. See HAVE.]
- a⁵ abbr. 1. Also a.. Absent. 2. Physics. Acceleration. 3. Also a.. Are (measurement).
- A or Å. abbr. 1. Also a. or Å.. Acre. 2. Ammeter. 3. Ampere. 4. Or Å. Angstrom. 5. Also a. or Å.. Area.

a. abbr. 1. About. 2. Acreage. 3. Acting. 4. Adjective. 5. Afternoon. 6. Also A.. Amateur. 7. Latin. Anno (in the year). 8. Latin. Annus (year). 9. Anode. 10. Anonymous. 11. Also A.. Answer. 12. Latin. Ante (before). 13. Anterior.

A. abbr. 1. Academician; academy. 2. Music. Alto. 3. America; American.

a-¹ or an- pref. Without; not: amoral. [Greek. See ne in Appendix.]

a-² pref. 1. On; in: abed. 2. In the act of: aborning. 3. In the direction of: astern. 4. In a specified state or condition: abuzz. [Middle English, from Old English, from an, on. See ON.]

A1C abbr. Airman first class.

AA abbr. 1. Alcoholics Anonymous. 2. Antiaircraft.

A.A. abbr. Associate in Arts.

AAA abbr. 1. Agricultural Adjustment Administration. 2. American Automobile Association. 3. Antiaircraft artillery.

AAAL abbr. American Academy of Arts and Letters.

AAAS abbr. American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Aa·chen (ä'kən, ä'KHən) also Aix-la-Cha-pelle (äks'lä-shə-pěl', ěks'-) A city of western Germany near the Belgian and Dutch borders. Charlemagne may have been born here in 742; he later made the city his northern capital. Population, 239,801.

AAF abbr. Army Air Forces.

aah (ä) interj. Used to express pleasure, satisfaction, surprise, or great joy. — v. intr. aahed, aah·ing, aahs. To exclaim in pleasure, satisfaction, surprise, or great joy: The crowd was oohing and aahing beside the panda's enclosure. —aah n.

Aa·land Islands (ä'lənd ī'ləndz, ö'länd') See Ahvenanmaa.

Aal·borg (öl'bôrg') See Ålborg.

Aa·len (ä'lən) A city of south-central Germany east of Stuttgart. It was a free imperial city from 1360 to 1803. Population, 62,861.

Aalst (älst) also A·lost (ä-lôst') A city of west-central Belgium west-northwest of Brussels. It was the capital of Austrian Flanders in the 18th century. Population, 78,068.

Aal·to (äl'tô), Alvar. 1898-1976. Finnish architect and furniture designer noted for his use of contrasting materials.

A and R abbr. Artists and repertory.

AAPSS abbr. American Academy of Political and Social Sciences.

Aar (är) See Aare.

AAR abbr. Against all risks.

aard·vark (ärd'värk') n. A burrowing mammal (Orycteropus afer) of southern Africa, having a stocky, hairy body, large ears, a long tubular snout, and powerful digging claws. [Obsolete Afrikaans : aarde, earth (from Middle Dutch aerde); see er-² in Appendix + vark, pig (from Middle Dutch varken); see porko- in Appendix.]

aard·wolf (ärd'wöolf') n. A mammal (Proteles cristatus) native to southern and eastern Africa that resembles the hyena, has gray fur with black stripes, and feeds mainly on termites and insect larvae. [Afrikaans : aarde, earth (from Middle Dutch aerde); see er-² in Appendix + wolf, wolf (from Middle Dutch); see włk^wo- in Appendix.]

Aa·re (är'ə) or Aar (är) A river of central and northern Switzerland rising in the Bernese Alps and flowing about 295 km (183 mi) to join the Rhine River at the Swiss-German border.

Aar·hus (ôr'hōos') See Århus.

Aar·on (âr'ən, ăr'-) In the Old Testament, the elder brother of Moses who helped lead the Hebrews out of Egypt.

Aar·on (âr'ən, ăr'-), Henry Louis. Known as "Hank." Born 1934. American baseball player who surpassed (1974) Babe Ruth's lifetime record of 714 home runs and retired (1976) with a total of 755 home runs.

Aa·ron·ic (â-rön'ik, ă-rön'-) also Aa·ron·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. 1. Of, having to do with, or characteristic of Aaron. 2. Mormon Church. Of or having to do with the lower order of priests.

Aar·on's beard (âr'ənz bîrd, ăr'-) n. See rose of Sharon (n., sense 2).

Aaron's rod (âr'ənz rōd) n. Architecture. A rod-shaped molding decorated with a design of leaves, scrolls, or a twined serpent.

A.A.S. abbr. Associate in Applied Sciences.

AAU abbr. Amateur Athletic Union.

AAUP abbr. American Association of University Professors.

AAUW abbr. American Association of University Women.

ab (ăb) n. Slang. An abscess caused by injecting an illegal drug, usually heroin.

Ab (ăb, äv, ôv) n. Variant of Av.

AB¹ (ā'bē') n. One of four types of blood in the ABO system.

AB² abbr. 1. Airman basic. 2. Alberta.

ab. abbr. About.

A.B. abbr. 1. Also a.b. Able-bodied seaman. 2. Latin. Artium Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Arts).

ab-¹ pref. Away from: aboral. [Latin. See apo- in Appendix.]

ab-² pref. Used to indicate an electromagnetic unit in the centimeter-gram-second system: abcoulomb. [From ABSOLUTE.]

a·ba (ə-bä', ä'bə) n. 1. A fabric woven of the hair of camels or goats. 2. A loose-fitting sleeveless garment made of this fabric, traditionally worn by Arabs. [Arabic 'abā']

A·ba (ä'bə) A city of southeast Nigeria northeast of Port Harcourt. It is an important market and transportation center. Population, 210,700.

ABA abbr. 1. Abscisic acid. 2. American Bankers Association. 3. Also A.B.A. American Bar Association. 4. American Booksellers Association.

ab·a·ca also ab·a·cá (ăb'ə-kä') n. 1. A bananalike plant (Musa textilis) native to the Philippines and having broad leaves with long stalks. 2. The fibers obtained from the stalks of this plant, used to make cordage, fabric, and paper. In this sense, also called manila, Manila hemp. [Spanish abacá, from Tagalog abaká.]

ab·a·ci (ăb'ə-sī', ə-băk'ī') n. A plural of abacus.

a·back (ə-băk') adv. 1. By surprise: He was taken aback by her caustic remarks. 2. New England & Southern U.S. Behind: aback of the house. 3. Upper Southern U.S. Ago: several years aback. 4. Nautical. In such a way that the wind pushes against the forward side of a sail or sails. 5. Archaic. Back; backward. — adj. New England. Being at a standstill; unable to move: “You run your business that way and first thing you know you’re all aback” (Dialect Notes).

A·ba·co and Cays (ăb'ə-kō' ənd kēz, kāz) An island group, the northernmost of the Bahamas, in the Atlantic Ocean east of southern Florida.

ab·a·cus (ăb'ə-kəs, ə-băk'əs) n. pl. ab·a·cus·es or ab·a·ci (ăb'ə-sī', ə-băk'ī'). 1. A manual computing device consisting of a frame holding parallel rods strung with movable counters. 2. Architecture. A slab on the top of the capital of a column. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek abax, abak-, counting board, probably from Hebrew 'ăbāq, dust.]

WORD HISTORY: The adjective dusty, with its connotations of disuse and age, might seem to be an appropriate word to describe the abacus, since this counting device was used for solving arithmetical problems in the days before the advent of calculators and computers. Originally the abacus was, in fact, dusty. The source of our word abacus, the Greek word abax, probably comes from Hebrew 'ăbāq, “dust,” although the details of transmission are obscure. In postbiblical usage 'ăbāq meant “sand used as a writing surface.” The Greek word abax has as one of its senses “a board sprinkled with sand or dust for drawing geometric diagrams.” This board is a relative of the abacus with movable counters strung on rods that is familiar to us. The first use of the word abacus, recorded in Middle English in a work written before 1387, refers to a sand-board abacus, in this case, one used by the Arabs. The difference in form between the Middle English word abacus and its Greek source abax is explained by the fact that Middle English actually borrowed Latin abacus, which came from the Greek genitive form (abakos) of abax.

Ab·a·dan (ă'bə-dän', äb'ə-dän') A city of southwest Iran on Abadan Island in the delta of the Shatt al Arab at the head of the Persian Gulf. The city's oil installations were heavily damaged in 1980 during the war with Iraq. Population, 296,081.

a·baft (ə-bäft') Nautical. adv. Toward the stern. — prep. Toward the stern from. [Middle English on baft : on, at; see ON + baft, to the rear (from Old English beaftan, behind : be, by, at; see ambhi in Appendix + æftan, behind); see apo- in Appendix.]

A·ba·jo Peak (ä'bə-hō' pēk) A mountain, 3,490.7 m (11,445 ft) high, in the Abajo Mountains of southeast Utah near the Colorado border.

A·ba·kan (ä'bə-kän') A city of south-central Russia east-southeast of Novosibirsk. It is a commercial center on the Yenisei River and the Siberian Railroad. Population, 147,000.

Abakan River (ä'bə-kän' rīv'ər) A river of south-central Russia rising in the western Sayan Mountains and flowing about 563 km (350 mi) northeast to the Yenisei River.

ab·a·lo·ne (äb'ə-lō'nē, äb'ə-lō'-) n. Any of various large, edible marine gastropods of the genus Haliotis, having an ear-shaped shell with a row of holes along the outer edge. The colorful, pearly interior of the shell is often used for making ornaments. Also called ear shell [American Spanish abulón.]

ab·am·pere (äb-äm'pīr') n. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of current equal to ten amperes.

a·ban·don (ə-bän'dən) v. tr. a·ban·doned, a·ban·don·ing, a·ban·dons.

1. To withdraw one's support or help from, especially in spite of duty, allegiance, or responsibility; desert: abandon a friend in trouble. 2. To give up by leaving or ceasing to operate or inhabit, especially as a result of danger or other impending threat: abandoned the ship. 3. To surrender one's claim to, right to, or interest in; give up entirely. See Synonyms at relinquish. 4. To cease trying to continue; desist from: abandoned the search for the missing hiker. 5. To yield (oneself) completely, as to emotion. — n. 1. Unbounded enthusiasm; exuberance. 2. A complete surrender of inhibitions. [Middle English abandounen, from Old French abandoner, from a bandon : a, at (from Latin ad); see AD- + bandon, control; see bhā-² in Appendix.] — a·ban'don·ment n.

a·ban·doned (ə-bän'dənd) adj. 1. Deserted; forsaken. 2. Exuberantly enthusiastic. 3. Recklessly unrestrained.

ab·ap·i·cal (äb-äp'i-kəl, -ä'pī-) adj. Being opposite to or directed away from the apex.

a·base (ə-bās') v. tr. a·based, a·bas·ing, a·bas·es. To lower in rank, prestige, or esteem. See Synonyms at degrade. [Middle English abassen, from Old French abaissier : Latin ad-, ad- + Vulgar Latin bassiāre* (from Medieval Latin bassus, low).] — a·base'ment n.

a·bash (ə-bäsh') v. tr. a·bashed, a·bash·ing, a·bash·es. To make ashamed or uneasy; disconcert. See Synonyms at embarrass. [Middle English abaishen, to lose one's composure, from Old French esbahir, esbahiss- : es-, intensive pref. (from Latin ex-); see EX- + baer, to gape; see BAY².] — a·bash'ment n.

a·ba·sia (ə-bā'zhə) n. Impaired muscular coordination in walking. [A⁻¹ + Greek basis, step; see g^wā- in Appendix + -IA¹.]

a·bate (ə-bāt') v. a·bat·ed, a·bat·ing, a·bates. — v. tr. 1. To reduce in amount, degree, or intensity; lessen. See Synonyms at decrease. 2. To deduct from an amount; subtract. 3. Law. a. To put an end to. b. To make void. — v. intr. 1. To fall off in degree or intensity; subside. 2. Law. To become void. [Middle English abaten, from Old French abatre, to beat down : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + batre, to beat; see BATTER¹.]

a·bate·ment (ə-bāt'mənt) n. 1. Diminution in degree or intensity; moderation. 2. The amount lowered; a reduction. 3. Law. The act of eliminating or annulling.

ab·at·toir (äb'ə-twär') n. 1. A slaughterhouse. 2. Something likened to a slaughterhouse: "The hand of God and mankind's self-inflicted blows seem equally heavy.... giving a strong cumulative impression of the world as an abattoir" (Manchester Guardian Weekly). [French, from abatre, to strike down, from Old French. See ABATE.]

ab·ax·i·al (äb-äk'sē-əl) adj. Biology. Located away from or on the opposite side of the axis, as of an organ or organism.

A·ba·ya (ə-bī'ə), Lake. A lake of southwest Ethiopia in the Great Rift Valley south-southwest of Addis Ababa. It was discovered in 1896 and has several inhabited islands.

abb. abbr. 1. Abbess. 2. Abbey. 3. Abbot.

Ab·ba (äb'ə, ä'bə) n. 1. Bible. In the New Testament, God. 2. abba. Used as a title of honor for bishops and patriarchs in some Christian churches of Egypt, Syria, and Ethiopia. [Middle English, from Late Latin abbā, from Greek abba. See ABBOT.]

ab·ba·cy (äb'ə-sē) n. pl. ab·ba·cies. The office, term, or jurisdiction of an abbot. [Middle English abbacie, from Late Latin abbātia, from abbās, abbāt-, abbot. See ABBOT.]

Ab·bas·side also Ab·bas·sid (äb'ə-sīd', ə-bäs'id') An Arabic dynasty (750-1258) that expanded the Muslim empire. It was named for al-Abbas (566?-652), paternal uncle of the prophet Mohammed.

ab·ba·tial (ə-bā'shəl) adj. Of or having to do with an abbey, abbot, or abbess. [Middle English abbacyal, from Late Latin abbātiālis, from abbās, abbāt-, abbot. See ABBOT.]

ab·bé (äb'ā', ä-bā') n. Roman Catholic Church. 1. Used as a title for the Superior of a monastery in a French-speaking area. 2. Used as a title for a cleric in major or minor orders in a French-speaking area. [French, from Old French abbe, from Late Latin abbātem, accusative of abbās, abbot. See ABBOT.]

ab·bess (äb'ıs) n. Abbr. abb. 1. The superior of a convent. 2. Used as a title for such a person. [Middle English abesse, from Old French, from Late Latin abbātissa, from abbās, abbāt-, abbot. See ABBOT.]

Ab·be·vil·li·an (äb'ə-vıl'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to the earliest Paleolithic archaeological sites in Europe, characterized by bifacial stone hand axes. [After Abbeville, a city of northern France.]

ab·bey (äb'ē) n. pl. ab·beys. Abbr. abb. 1. A monastery supervised by an abbot. 2. A convent supervised by an abbess. 3. A church that is or once was part of a monastery or convent. [Middle English, from Old French abaie, from Late Latin abbātia. See ABBACY.]

Ab·bey (äb'ē), Edwin Austin. 1852-1911. American artist who illustrated editions of Herrick and Shakespeare and painted the mural Quest of the Holy Grail (1890-1902).

ab·bot (äb'ət) n. Abbr. abb. 1. The superior of a monastery. 2. Used as a title for such a person. [Middle English abbod, from Old English, from Late Latin abbās, abbāt-, from Greek abbā, from Aramaic abbā, father.]

Ab·bot (äb'ət), Charles Greeley. 1872-1973. American astrophysicist noted for his pioneering study of solar radiation.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), Berenice. 1898-1991. American photographer known especially for her series of black-and-white portraits of New York City.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), George. 1887-1995. American theatrical producer and playwright who cowrote and directed many productions, including Fiorello!, which won a 1959 Pulitzer Prize.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), Grace. 1878-1939. American social reformer noted for her opposition to child labor and her promotion of maternal and infant health care programs.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), Sir John Joseph Caldwell. 1821-1893. Canadian politician who served as Conservative prime minister (1891-1892).

Ab·bott (äb'ət), Lyman. 1835-1922. American Congregational cleric, writer, and editor who sought progressive Christian solutions to social problems.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), Robert Sengstacke. 1868-1940. American newspaper publisher who founded and edited (1905-1940) the Chicago Defender, which was an early advocate of Black civil rights.

Ab·bott (äb'ət), William. Known as “Bud.” 1898-1974. American comedian noted for his partnership with Lou Costello. Abbott and Costello appeared in numerous motion pictures, including The Naughty Nineties (1945), which features their famous “Who’s on First” routine.

abbr. or abbrev. abbr. Abbreviation.

ab·bre·vi·ate (ə-brē'vĕ-āt') v. tr. ab·bre·vi·at·ed, ab·bre·vi·at·ing, ab·bre·vi·ates. 1. To make shorter. See Synonyms at shorten. 2. To reduce (a word or phrase) to a shorter form intended to represent the full form. [Middle English abbreviaten, from Late Latin abbreviāre, abbreviāt- : ab- (variant of ad-, ad-) + breviāre, to shorten (from breviis, short); see mregh-u- in Appendix.]

—ab·bre'vi·a'tor n.

ab·bre·vi·a·tion (ə-brē'vĕ-ā'shən) n. Abbr. abbr., abbrev. 1. The act or product of shortening. 2. A shortened form of a word or phrase used chiefly in writing to represent the complete form, such as Mass. for Massachusetts or USMC for United States Marine Corps. 3. Music. Any of various symbols used in notation to indicate that a series of notes is to be repeated.

ABC (ā'bĕ-sĕ') n. pl. ABC's. 1. Often ABC's. The alphabet. 2. ABC's. The rudiments of reading and writing.

ABC art (ā'bĕ-sĕ' ärt) n. See minimalism (n., sense 1).

ab·cou·lomb (ăb-kōō'lōm', -lōm') n. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of charge, equal to ten coulombs.

ABC soil (ā'bĕ-sĕ' soil) n. Soil in which three distinct layers can be seen in vertical section.

ABD (ā'bĕ-dĕ') n. A candidate for a doctorate who has completed all the requirements for the degree, such as courses and examinations, with the exception of the dissertation. [a(ll) b(ut) d(issertation).]

Abd-el-Ka·der also Abd-al-Ka·dir (ăb'dəl-kä'dĭr, -kä-dĭr'), 1807?-1883.

Arab emir and scholar who led Oran's Muslim tribes in a holy war against the French (1832-1847).

Abd-er-Rah·man Khan (ăb'dər-rə-män' kăn', KHän'), 1830?-1901. Afghan emir (1880-1901) who established a strong national army and reduced crime in his country.

Ab·di·as (ăb-dĭ'əs) See Obadiah (n., sense 1).

ab·di·cate (ăb'dĭ-kāt') v. ab·di·cat·ed, ab·di·cat·ing, ab·di·cates. — v. tr. To relinquish (power or responsibility) formally. — v. intr. To relinquish formally a high office or responsibility. [Latin abdĭcāre, abdĭcāt-, to disclaim : ab-, away; see *ab-*¹ + dĭcāre, to proclaim; see deik- in Appendix.] —ab'di·ca·ble (-kə-bəl) adj. —ab'di·ca'tion n. —ab'di·ca'tor n.

ab·do·men (ăb'də-mən, ăb-dō'mən) n. 1. The part of the body that lies between the thorax and the pelvis and encloses the stomach, intestines, liver, spleen, and pancreas. Also called belly. 2. The posterior segment of the body in arthropods. [Latin, belly.] —ab·dom'i·nal (ăb-dōm'ə-nəl) adj.

—ab·dom'i·nal·ly adv.

ab·dom·i·nous (ăb-dōm'ə-nəs) adj. Potbellied.

ab·du·cens (ăb-dōō'sənz, -dyōō'-) n. pl. ab·du·cen·tes (ăb'dōō-sĕn'tĕz', -dyōō-). Either of the sixth pair of cranial nerves that convey motor impulses to the rectus muscle on the lateral side of each eye. [Latin abdūcĕns, present participle of abdūcere, to take away. See ABDUCT.] ab·duct (ăb-dŭkt') v. tr. ab·duct·ed, ab·duct·ing, ab·ducts. 1. To carry off by force; kidnap. 2. Physiology. To draw away from the midline of the body or from an adjacent part or limb. [Latin abdŭcere, abduct- : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + dŭcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix.] —ab·duc'tion n.

ab·duc·tor (ăb-dŭk'tər) n. 1. One, such as a kidnapper, that abducts.

2. Anatomy. A muscle that draws a body part, such as a finger, arm, or toe, away from the midline of the body or of an extremity.

Ab·dul-A·ziz (ăb'doŏl-ă-zēz'), 1830-1876. Turkish sultan (1861-1876) whose reforms of educational and legal systems were offset by his increasingly absolutist rule, which led to uprisings and his deposition.

Ab·dul Ha·mid II (ăb'doŏl hă-mēd', -mīt'), 1842-1918. Turkish sultan (1876-1909) whose autocratic rule led to revolts by the Young Turks.

Ab·dul-Jab·bar (ăb-dōol'jă-băr'), Kareem. Originally Lew Alcindor. Born 1947. American basketball player. As a center for the Los Angeles Lakers (1975-1989) he became the all-time leading scorer in National Basketball Association history in 1984.

Ab·dul-lah ibn-Hu·sein (ăb'dōo-lă'ib'n-hōo-săn'), 1882-1951. Transjordanian emir (1921-1946) and first king of independent Jordan (1946-1951). He annexed the West Bank of the Jordan River in 1950 and was assassinated a year later by a Palestinian nationalist.

Ab·dul-Me·djid I also Ab·dul-Me·jid I (ăb'doŏl-mě-jēd', -jīt'), 1823-1861. Turkish sultan (1839-1861) whose social reforms were overshadowed by extravagances that contributed to the financial ruin of Turkey in the late 1800's.

a·beam (ə-bēm') adv. Nautical. At right angles to the keel of a ship.

a·be·ce·dar·i·an (ă'bē-sē-dâr'ē-ən) n. 1. One who teaches or studies the alphabet. 2. One who is just learning; a beginner. — adj. 1. Having to do with the alphabet. 2. Being arranged alphabetically. 3. Elementary or rudimentary. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin abecedarium, alphabet, from Late Latin abecedarius, alphabetical : from the names of the letters A B C D + -arius, -ary.]

a·bed (ə-bēd') adv. In bed.

A·bed·ne·go (ə-bēd'nī-gō') In the Old Testament, a young man who with Meshach and Shadrach emerged unharmed from the fiery furnace of Babylon.

A·bel (ă'bəl) In the Old Testament, the son of Adam and Eve who was slain by his elder brother, Cain.

A·bel (ă'bəl), Sir Frederick Augustus. 1827-1902. British chemist noted for his research and writings concerning explosives. He invented cordite (1889) with Sir James Dewar.

A·bel (ă'bəl), I(orwith) W(ilbur). 1908-1987. American labor leader who was president of the United Steelworkers of America (1965-1977).

Ab·e·lard (ăb'ə-lărd') also A·bé·lard (ă-bă-lăr'), Peter or Pierre. 1079-1142. French theologian and philosopher whose application of the principles of ancient Greek logic to the doctrines of the medieval Catholic Church led to charges of heresy. He secretly married his pupil Héloïse after she bore him a child, thus angering her family, who arranged to have him attacked and castrated. He became a monk and continued in his work. Héloïse became a nun.

a·bele (ə-bēl') n. See white poplar. [Dutch abeel, from Old French aubel, from Medieval Latin albellus, diminutive of Latin albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.]

a·be·li·a (ə-bē'lē-ə, ə-bēl'yə) n. Any of various deciduous or evergreen ornamental shrubs of the genus Abelia, native to Asia and Mexico and having opposite simple leaves and small white, pink, or purple flowers. [New Latin, after Clarke Abel (1780-1826), British botanist.]

A·be·lian group (ə-bēl'yən grōp, ə-bē'lē-ən) n. See commutative group. [After Niels Henrik Abel (1802-1829), Norwegian mathematician.]

a·bel·mosk (ā'bəl-mōsk') n. A hairy annual or biennial plant (Abelmoschus moschatus) native to tropical Asia and having yellow flowers with crimson centers. It is cultivated for its seed. Also called ambrette, musk mallow. [New Latin abelmoschus, from Arabic ḥabbalmusk, grain of musk : ḥabb, grain + musk, musk (from Persian mušk); see MUSK.]

Ab·e·na·ki (ä'bə-nä'kē, äb'ə-nāk'ē) or Ab·na·ki (äb-nä'kē, äb-) n. pl.

Abenaki or Ab·e·na·kis or Abnaki or Ab·na·kis. 1. a. Any of various Native American peoples formerly inhabiting northern New England and southeast Canada, with present-day populations in Maine and southern Quebec. b. A member of any of these peoples. 2. a. A confederacy of Abenaki and other peoples formed in the mid-18th century in opposition to the Iroquois confederacy and the English colonists. b. A member of this confederacy. 3. Either or both of the two Eastern Algonquian languages of the Abenaki peoples. Also called Wabanaki ABEND abbr. Computer Science. Abnormal end of task.

A·be·o·ku·ta (äb'ē-ō-kō'tə) A city of southwest Nigeria north of Lagos. It is a trade center in an agricultural region. Population, 301,000.

Ab·er·deen (äb'ər-dēn') 1. (also äb'ər-dēn') A city of northeast Scotland on the North Sea at the mouth of the Dee River. It is known as “the Granite City” because stone from local quarries is used in many of its buildings. Population, 212,542. 2. A town of northeast Maryland east-northeast of Baltimore. Aberdeen Proving Ground, a major research, development, and testing installation, is nearby. Population, 11,533. 3. A city of northeast South Dakota northeast of Pierre. It is a trade center in a wheat and livestock region. Population, 24,927. 4. A city of western Washington west-southwest of Tacoma. Located on Grays Harbor, it has lumbering, fishing, and shipping industries. Population, 16,565.

Aberdeen Angus (äb'är-dēn' äng'gəs) n. A breed of black, hornless beef cattle that originated in Scotland. Also called Black Angus [After Aberdeen and Angus, former counties of Scotland.]

Ab·er·nath·y (äb'är-näth'ē), Ralph David. 1926-1990. American civil rights leader who was a founder and president (1968-1977) of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

ab·er·rant (ä-bēr'ənt, äb'är-) adj. 1. Deviating from the proper or expected course. 2. Deviating from what is normal; untrue to type. [Latin aberrāns, aberrant- present participle of aberrāre, to go astray. See ABERRATION.] —ab·er'rance, ab·er'ran·cy n. —ab·er'rant·ly adv.

ab·er·rat·ed (äb'ä-rā'tid) adj. Characterized by defects, abnormality, or deviation from the usual, typical, or expected course.

ab·er·ra·tion (äb'ä-rā'shən) n. 1. A deviation from the proper or expected course. See Synonyms at deviation. 2. A departure from the normal or typical: events that were aberrations from the norm. 3. Psychology. A disorder or abnormal alteration in one's mental state. 4. a. A defect of focus, such as blurring in an image. b. An imperfect image caused by a physical defect in an optical element, as in a lens. 5. Astronomy. The apparent displacement of the position of a celestial body in the direction of motion of an observer on Earth, caused by the motion of Earth and the finite velocity of light. 6. Genetics. A deviation in the normal structure or number of chromosomes in an organism. [Latin aberrātiō, aberrātiōn-, diversion, from aberrātus, past participle of aberrāre, to go astray : ab-, away from; see AB⁻¹ + errāre, to stray; see ers- in Appendix.]

a·bet (ə-bět') v. tr. a·bet·ted, a·bet·ting, a·bets. 1. To approve, encourage, and support (an action or a plan of action); urge and help on. See Synonyms at incite. 2. To urge, encourage, or help (a person): abetted the thief in robbing the bank. [Middle English abetten, from Old French abeter, to entice : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + beter, to bait; see bheid- in Appendix.] —a·bet'ment n. —a·bet'tor, a·bet'ter n.

ab ex·tra (äb'äk'strə) adv. From without. [Latin ab extrā : ab, from + extrā, outside.]

a·bey·ance (ə-bā'əns) n. 1. The condition of being temporarily set aside; suspension. 2. Law. A condition of undetermined ownership, as of an estate that has not yet been assigned. [Anglo-Norman, variant of Old French abeance, desire, from abaer, to gape at : a-, at (from Latin ad-); see AD- + baer, to gape; see BAY².] —a·bey'ant adj.

ab·far·ad (äb-fär'äd', -əd) n. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of capacitance, equal to one billion farads.

ab·hen·ry (äb-hěn'rē) n. pl. ab·hen·ries. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of inductance, equal to one billionth of a henry.

ab·hor (ăb-hôr') v. tr. ab·horred, ab·hor·ring, ab·hors. 1. To regard with horror or loathing; abominate. 2. To reject vehemently; shun: "The problem with Establishment Republicans is they abhor the unseemliness of a political brawl" (Patrick J. Buchanan). [Middle English abhorren, from Latin abhorrere, to shrink from : ab-, from; see *AB-*¹ + horrere, to shudder.] —ab·hor'·rer n.

ab·hor·rence (ăb-hôr'əns, -hôr'-) n. 1. One that is disgusting, loathsome, or repellent. 2. A feeling of repugnance or loathing.

ab·hor·rent (ăb-hôr'ənt, -hôr'-) adj. 1. Disgusting, loathsome, or repellent. 2. Feeling repugnance or loathing. 3. Archaic. Being strongly opposed. —ab·hor'·rent·ly adv.

A·bib (ă-vēv') n. The seventh month of the year in the Hebrew calendar, corresponding to Nisan. [Hebrew 'ăbîb, spring.]

a·bid·ance (ə-bīd'əns) n. 1. The act or condition of abiding; continuance. 2. Adherence; compliance: abidance by parliamentary procedure.

a·bide (ə-bīd') v. a·bode (ə-bōd') or a·bid·ed, a·bid·ing, a·bides. — v. tr. 1. To put up with; tolerate: can't abide such incompetence. See Synonyms at bear¹. 2. To wait patiently for. 3. To be in store for; await: "I will abide the coming of my lord" (Tennyson). 4. To withstand: a thermoplastic that will abide rough use and great heat. — v. intr. 1. To remain in a place. 2. To continue to be sure or firm; endure. See Synonyms at stay¹. 3. To dwell or sojourn. —idiom.

abide by. To conform to; comply with: abide by the rules; had to abide by the judge's decision. [Middle English abiden, from Old English ābīdan : ā-, intensive + bīdan, to remain; see bheidh- in Appendix.] —a·bid'er n.

a·bid·ing (ə-bī'dīŋ) adj. Lasting for a long time; enduring: an abiding love of music. —a·bid'ing·ly adv.

Ab·i·djan (ăb'ī-jän') The capital and largest city of Ivory Coast, in the southern part of the country on an enclosed lagoon of the Gulf of Guinea. In 1983 Yamoussoukro was designated as the future capital. Abidjan's population is 1,500,000.

ab·i·et·ic acid (ăb'ē-ēt'ik əs'īd) n. A yellowish resinous powder, C₁₉H₂₉COOH, isolated from rosin and used in lacquers, varnishes, and soaps. [From Latin abiēs, abiet-, silver fir.]

Ab·i·gail (ăb'ī-gāl') In the Old Testament, the wife of David.

Ab·i·lene (ăb'ə-lēn') 1. A city of central Kansas west of Topeka. Dwight D. Eisenhower lived in Abilene during his youth; the Eisenhower Center includes his family homestead, a museum and library, and his grave. Population, 6,572. 2. A city of west-central Texas west-southwest of Fort Worth. Founded in 1881 with the coming of the railroad, the city first prospered as a shipping center for cattle. Population, 106,654.

a·bil·i·ty (ə-bīl'ī-tē) n. pl. a·bil·i·ties. 1. The quality of being able to do something; the physical, mental, financial, or legal power to perform. 2. A natural or acquired skill or talent. [Middle English abilite, from Old French habilite, from Latin habilitās, from habilis, handy. See ABLE.]

SYNONYMS: ability, capacity, faculty, talent, skill, competence, aptitude. These nouns denote the qualities in a person that permit or facilitate achievement or accomplishment. Ability is the power, mental or physical, to do something: “To make a fortune some assistance from fate is essential. Ability alone is insufficient” (Ihara Saikaku). Capacity refers to an innate potential for growth, development, or accomplishment: “Not by age but by capacity is wisdom acquired” (Plautus). Faculty denotes an inherent power or ability: “An unerring faculty for detecting hypocrisy is one of her most useful attributes.” Talent emphasizes inborn ability, especially in the arts: “There is no substitute for talent. Industry and all the virtues are of no avail” (Aldous Huxley). Skill stresses ability that is acquired or developed through experience: “The intellect, character and skill possessed by any man are the product of certain original tendencies and the training which they have received” (Edward L. Thorndike). Competence suggests the ability to do something satisfactorily but not necessarily outstandingly well: “The concerto was performed by a violinist of unquestioned competence but limited imagination.” Aptitude implies inherent capacity for learning, understanding, or performing: “Even as a child he showed an unusual aptitude for mathematics.”

-ability or -ibility suff. Ability, inclination, or suitability for a specified action or condition: teachability. [Middle English -abilitie, from Old French -abilite, from Latin -ābilitās, from -ābilis, -able.]

ab in·i·ti·o (ăb' ĭ-nĭsh'ē-ō') adv. Abbr. ab init. From the beginning. [Latin ab initiō: ab, from + initiō, ablative of initium, beginning.]

ab in·tra (ăb ĭn'trə) adv. From within. [Latin ab intrā: ab, from + intrā, within.] a·bi·o·gen·e·sis (ā'bī-ō-jĕn'ĭ-sĭs) n. The supposed development of living organisms from nonliving matter. Also called autogenesis, spontaneous generation. —a'bi·o·ge·net'ic (-jə-nĕt'ĭk), a'bi·o·ge·net'i·cal adj.

—a'bi·og'e·nist (-ōj'ə-nĭst) n.

a·bi·o·gen·ic (ā'bī-ō-jĕn'ĭk) adj. Not produced by living organisms.

—a'bi·o·gen'i·cal·ly adv.

a·bi·o·log·i·cal (ā'bī-ə-lōj'ĭ-kəl) adj. Not associated with or derived from living organisms. —a'bi·o·log'i·cal·ly adv.

a·bi·ot·ic (ā'bī-ōt'ĭk) adj. Nonliving: The abiotic factors of the environment include light, temperature, and atmospheric gases. —a·bi·o'sis (-ō'sĭs) n.

—a·bi·ot'ic·al·ly adv.

Ab·i·tib·i Lake (äb'ī-tīb'ē lāk) An irregularly shaped lake of eastern Ontario and southwest Quebec, Canada. It is the source of the Abitibi River, which flows about 370 km (230 mi) west and north to an arm of James Bay.

ab·ject (äb'jēkt', äb-jēkt') adj. 1. Brought low in condition or status. See Synonyms at mean². 2. Being of the most contemptible kind: abject cowardice.

3. Being of the most miserable kind; wretched: abject poverty. [Middle English, outcast, from Latin abiectus, past participle of abicere, to cast away : ab-, from; see AB⁻¹ + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.] —ab·ject'ly adv. —ab·ject'ness, ab·ject'ion n.

ab·jure (äb-jōor') v. tr. ab·jured, ab·jur·ing, ab·jures. 1. To renounce under oath; forswear. 2. To recant solemnly; repudiate: abjure one's beliefs. 3. To give up (an action or practice, for example); abstain from: "For nearly 21 years after his resignation as Prime Minister in 1963, he abjured all titles, preferring to remain just plain 'Mr.'" (Time). [Middle English abjuren, from Old French abjurer, from Latin abiūrāre : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + iūrāre, to swear; see yewes- in Appendix.] —ab·ju·ra'tion n. —ab·jur'er n.

abl. abbr. Ablative (grammar).

ab·late (ä-blāt') v. ab·lat·ed, ab·lat·ing, ab·lates. — v. tr. To remove by erosion, melting, evaporation, or vaporization. — v. intr. To become ablated; undergo ablation. [Back-formation from ABLATION.]

ab·la·tion (ä-blā'shən) n. 1. Surgical excision or amputation of a body part or tissue. 2. The erosive processes by which a glacier is reduced. 3. Aerospace. The dissipation of heat generated by atmospheric friction, especially in the atmospheric reentry of a spacecraft or missile, by means of a melting heat shield. [Late Latin ablātiō, ablātiōn-, from Latin ablātus, past participle of aufferre, to carry away : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + lātus, carried; see telə- in Appendix.]

ab·la·tive¹ (äb'lə-tīv) adj. Abbr. abl. Of, relating to, or being a grammatical case indicating separation, direction away from, sometimes manner or agency, and the object of certain verbs. It is found in Latin and other Indo-European languages. — n. Abbr. abl. 1. The ablative case. 2. A word in this case. [Middle English, from Latin ablātīvus, from ablātus, carried away. See ABLATION.]

ab·la·tive² (ä-blā'tīv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or capable of ablation. 2. Tending to ablate. [From ABLATION.]

ab·la·tive absolute (äb'lə-tiv äb'sə-lōot') n. In Latin grammar, an adverbial phrase syntactically independent from the rest of the sentence and containing a noun plus a participle, an adjective, or a noun, both in the ablative case.

ab·laut (äb'lout', äp'-) n. A vowel change, characteristic of Indo-European languages, that accompanies a change in grammatical function; for example, i, a, u in sing, sang, sung. Also called gradation [German : ab, off (from Old High German aba); see apo- in Appendix + Laut, sound (from Middle High German lūt, from Old High German hlūt); see kleu- in Appendix.]

a·blaze (ə-blāz') adj. 1. Being on fire: The house is ablaze. 2. Radiant with bright color: a maple tree ablaze in autumn. —a·blaze' adv.

a·ble (ā'bəl) adj. a·bler, a·blest. 1. Having sufficient ability or resources. 2. Especially capable or talented. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin habilis, from habēre, to handle. See ghabh- in Appendix.] —a'bly (ā'blē) adv.

USAGE NOTE: The construction able to ascribes to its subject the ability to accomplish the action expressed in its complement: The troupe was able to get a grant for the project from a large corporation. The new submarine is able to dive twice as fast as the older model. It should be avoided when such an ascription is unwarranted, as with passive constructions involving forms of the verb be; thus it is inconsistent to say The problem was able to be solved through the method she had learned about in business school, since this sentence ascribes no capacity or ability to the problem itself. In such cases, can or could can usually be substituted: The problem could be solved... By contrast, passives with get ascribe a more active role to their subjects, and here the able to construction can be used: He was able to get himself accepted by a top law school.

-able or -ible suff. 1. Susceptible, capable, or worthy of a specified action: debatable. 2. Inclined or given to a specified state or action: changeable. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -ābilis: -ā- and -i-, thematic vowels + -bilis, adj. suff..] a·ble·bod·ied (ā'bəl-bōd'ēd) adj. Physically strong and healthy: "It required an immediate end to welfare for the able-bodied poor" (David A. Stockman).

able-bodied seaman (ā'bəl-bōd'ēd sē'mən) n. Abbr. A.B., a.b. A merchant seaman certified for all seaman's duties. Also called able seaman a·bloom (ə-blōm') adj. Being in bloom; flowering.

ab·lu·tion (ə-blō'shən, ä-blō'-) n. 1. A washing or cleansing of the body, especially as part of a religious rite. 2. The liquid so used. [Middle English ablucioun, from Latin ablūtīō, ablūtīōn-, from ablūtus, past participle of abluere, to wash away : ab-, away; see AB-¹ + -luere, to wash; see leu(ə)- in Appendix.]

—ab·lu'tion·ar'y (-shə-nēr'ē) adj.

ABM (ā'bē-ēm') n. See antiballistic missile.

abn abbr. Airborne.

Ab·na·ki (äb-nä'kē, äb-) n. Variant of Abenaki.

ab·ne·gate (äb'nī-gāt') v. tr. ab·ne·gat·ed, ab·ne·gat·ing, ab·ne·gates.

1. To give up (rights or a claim, for example); renounce. 2. To deny (something) to oneself. [Latin abnegāre, abnegāt-, to refuse : ab-, away; see AB-¹ + negāre, to deny; see ne in Appendix.] —ab'ne-ga'tor n.

ab·ne·ga·tion (äb'nī-gā'shən) n. Self-denial.

ab·nor·mal (ăb-nôr'məl) adj. Not typical, usual, or regular; not normal; deviant. [Alteration (influenced by AB⁻¹), of obsolete anormal, from Medieval Latin anormālis, blend of Late Latin abnormis (Latin ab-, away from;; see ab⁻¹ + Latin norma, rule); see gnō- in Appendix, and anōmalus; see ANOMALOUS.] —ab·nor·mal·ly adv.

ab·nor·mal·i·ty (ăb'nôr-măl'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ab·nor·mal·i·ties. 1. The condition of not being normal. 2. A phenomenon or occurrence that is not normal.

abnormal psychology (ăb-nôr'məl sī-köll'ə-jē) n. Psychopathology.

Ab·o or ab·o (ăb'ō) n. pl. Ab·os. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for an Australian aborigine: "A group of Australian words such as abo (aborigine) or tyke (Catholic) display a degree of intolerance" (Leonard Santorelli).

a·board (ə-bôrd', ə-bôrd') adv. 1. On board a ship, train, aircraft, or other passenger vehicle. 2. In or into a group, organization, or business: "By bringing aboard a number of blacks as department heads, lawyers, and accountants, the Mayor has also broadened the racial mix in top city jobs" (Christian Science Monitor). 3. Baseball. On base. — prep. On board of; on; in. [Middle English abord: a-, on; see A⁻² + bord, ship (from Old English bord).]

a·bode (ə-bôd') v. A past tense and a past participle of abide. — n. 1. A dwelling place; a home. 2. The act of abiding; a sojourn. [Middle English abod, home, from abiden, to wait. See ABIDE.]

ab·ohm (ă-bôm') n. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of resistance, equal to one billionth of an ohm.

a·bol·ish (ə-böll'ish) v. tr. a·bol·ished, a·bol·ish·ing, a·bol·ish·es. 1. To do away with; annul. 2. To destroy completely. [Middle English abolishsen, from Old French abolir, aboliss-, from Latin abolēre. See al⁻² in Appendix.]

—a·bol·ish·a·ble adj. —a·bol·ish·er n. —a·bol·ish·ment n.

SYNONYMS: abolish, exterminate, extinguish, extirpate, eradicate, obliterate. These verbs mean to get rid of. Abolish applies only to doing away with conditions, practices, or regulations, not material things or persons: The legislature passed a law to abolish the surtax. Exterminate suggests total destruction, as of living things, by a deliberate, selective method: Entire peoples were exterminated in the concentration camps. Extinguish means to put out a flame or something likened to a flame: Repeated rebuffs couldn't extinguish my enthusiasm. Extirpate suggests effective destruction by removing roots or entrenched causes: The police arrested dealers in an attempt to extirpate drug abuse. Eradicate shares the connotations of extirpate but stresses the resistance to dislodgment offered by the object: Scientists are working to find a serum to eradicate the disease. Obliterate means to destroy so as to leave no trace: Amnesia mercifully obliterated his memory of the accident.

ab·o·li·tion (ăb'ə-līsh'ən) n. 1. The act of doing away with or the state of being done away with; annulment. 2. Abolishment of slavery. [Latin abolitiō, abolitiōn-, from abolitus, past participle of abolēre, to abolish. See ABOLISH.] —ab'·o·li'·tion·ar'y (-līsh'ə-nēr'ē) adj.

ab·o·li·tion·ism (ăb'ə-līsh'ə-nīz'əm) n. Advocacy of the abolition of slavery. —ab'·o·li'tion·ist n.

ab·o·ma·sum (ăb'ō-mā'səm) n. pl. ab·o·ma·sa (-sə). The fourth division of the stomach in ruminant animals, such as cows, sheep, and deer, in which digestion takes place. —ab'·o·ma'sal (-səl) adj.

A·bomb (ā'bŏm') n. See atom bomb (n., sense 1). a·bom·i·na·ble (ə-bŏm'ə-nə-bəl) adj. 1. Unequivocally detestable; loathsome: abominable treatment of prisoners. 2. Thoroughly unpleasant or disagreeable: abominable weather. [Middle English abominable, from Old French, from Latin abŏminābilis, from abŏminārī, to abhor. See ABOMINATE.] —a·bom'i·na·bly adv.

abominable snowman (ə-bŏm'ə-nə-bəl snŏ'män') n. A hairy humanlike animal reportedly inhabiting the snows of the high Himalaya Mountains. Also called yeti a·bom·i·nate (ə-bŏm'ə-nāt') v. tr. a·bom·i·nat·ed, a·bom·i·nat·ing, a·bom·i·nates. To detest thoroughly; abhor. [Latin abŏminārī, abŏmināt-, to deprecate as a bad omen : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + ōmen, omen.] —a·bom'i·na'tor n.

a·bom·i·na·tion (ə-bŏm'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. Abhorrence; disgust. 2. A cause of abhorrence or disgust.

ab·o·ral (ă-bŏr'əl, ăbŏr'-) adj. Located opposite to or away from the mouth.

ab·o·rig·i·nal (ăb'ə-rīj'ə-nəl) adj. 1. Having existed in a region from the beginning: aboriginal forests. See Synonyms at native. 2. Of or relating to aborigines. — n. An aborigine. —ab'·o·rig'i·nal·ly adv.

ab·o·rig·i·ne (ăb'ə-rīj'ə-nē) n. 1. A member of the indigenous or earliest known population of a region. 2. aborigines. The flora and fauna native to a geographic area. [From Latin aborīgines, original inhabitants (folk etymology of a pre-Roman tribal name) : ab-, from; see AB⁻¹ + orīgine, ablative of orīgo, beginning; see ORIGIN.]

a·born·ing (ə-bŏr'nĭng) adv. While coming into being or getting under way: "Our own revolutionary war almost died aborning through lack of popular support" (William Randolph Hearst, Jr.).

a·bort (ə-bŏrt') v. a·bort·ed, a·bort·ing, a·borts. — v. intr. 1. To give birth before the embryo or fetus is capable of surviving on its own; miscarry. 2. To cease growth before full development or maturation. 3. To terminate an operation or procedure, as with a project, a missile, an airplane, or a space vehicle, before completion. — v. tr. 1. a. To cause to terminate pregnancy prematurely, before the embryo or fetus is viable. b. To cause the expulsion of (an embryo or fetus) before it is viable. 2. To interfere with the development of; conclude prematurely: abort plans for a corporate takeover. 3. To terminate before completion: abort a trip because of illness; abort a spaceflight; abort a takeoff. 4. To stop the progress of (a disease, for example). — n. 1. The act of terminating an operation or procedure, as with a project, a missile, an airplane, or a space vehicle, before completion. 2. Computer Science. A procedure to terminate execution of a program when an unrecoverable error or malfunction occurs. [Latin abortāre, frequentative of aborīrī, abort-, to disappear, miscarry : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + orīrī, to appear; see er⁻¹ in Appendix.]

a·bor·ti·fa·cient (ə-bôr'tə-fā'shənt) adj. Causing abortion. — n. A substance or device used to induce abortion.

a·bor·tion (ə-bôr'shən) n. 1. Induced termination of pregnancy and expulsion of an embryo or fetus that is incapable of survival. 2. A miscarriage. 3. Cessation of normal growth, especially of an organ or other body part, prior to full development or maturation. 4. An aborted organism. 5. Something malformed or incompletely developed; a monstrosity.

a·bor·tion·ist (ə-bôr'shə-nĭst) n. One who performs abortions.

a·bor·tive (ə-bôr'tĭv) adj. 1. Failing to accomplish an intended objective; fruitless: an abortive attempt to conclude the negotiations. 2. Biology. Partially or imperfectly developed: an abortive organ. — a·bor'tive·ly adv. — a·bor'tive·ness n.

ABO system (ā'bē-ō' sĭs'təm) n. A classification system for human blood that identifies four major blood types based on the presence or absence of two antigens, A and B, on red blood cells. The four blood types (A, B, AB, and O, in which O designates blood that lacks both antigens) are important in determining the compatibility of blood for transfusion.

a·bou·li·a (ə-bōō'lē-ə, ə-byōō'-) n. Variant of abulia.

a·bound (ə-bound') v. intr. a·bound·ed, a·bound·ing, a·bounds. 1. To be great in number or amount. 2. To be fully supplied or filled; teem. See Synonyms at teem¹. [Middle English abounden, from Old French abonder, from Latin abundāre, to overflow : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + undāre, to flow (from unda, wave); see wed⁻¹ in Appendix.]

a·bout (ə-bout') adv. Abbr. a., ab., abt. 1. Approximately; nearly: The interview lasted about an hour. 2. Almost: The job is about done. 3. To a reversed position or direction: Turn about and walk away slowly. 4. In no particular direction: wandering about with no place to go. 5. All around; on every side: Let's look about for help. 6. In the area or vicinity; near: spoke to a few spectators standing about. 7. In succession; one after another: Turn about is fair play. — prep.

1. On all sides of; surrounding: I found an English garden all about me. 2. In the vicinity of; around: explored the rivers and streams about the estate. 3. Almost the same as; close to; near. 4. a. In reference to; relating to; concerned with: a book about snakes; objectivity—a part of what biography is about. b. In the act or process of: While you're about it, please clean your room. 5. In the possession or innate character of: Keep your wits about you. 6. a. Ready or prepared to do something: The chorus is about to sing. b. Usage Problem. Used with a negative to indicate strong intention: I am not about to concede the point. — adj.

1. Moving here and there; astrir: The patient is up and about. 2. Being in evidence or existence: Rumors are about concerning his resignation. [Middle English, from Old English onbūtan : on, in; see ON + būtan, outside; see ud- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The construction not about to is often used to express determination: We are not about to negotiate with terrorists. A majority of the Usage Panel considers this usage acceptable in speech but not in formal writing. • About is traditionally used to refer to the relation between a narrative and its subject: a book about Cézanne, a movie about the Boston Massacre. This use has lately been extended to refer to the relation between various nonlinguistic entities and the things they make manifest, as in The party was mostly about showing off their new offices or His designs are about the use of rough-textured materials. This practice probably originates with the expression That's what it's all about and may partly reflect implicit deference to the postmodern doctrine that every social artifact and activity can be regarded as a text subject to interpretation. But the usage is still too voguish to have won general acceptance; it is rejected by 59 percent of the Usage Panel in the example A designer teapot isn't about making tea; it is about letting people know that you have a hundred dollars to spend on a teapot.

a·bout·face (ə-bout'fās') n. 1. a. The act of pivoting to face in the opposite direction from the original, especially in a military formation. b. A military command to turn clockwise 180°. 2. A total change of attitude or viewpoint. — v. intr. a·bout·faced, a·bout·fac·ing, a·bout·fac·es. To reverse direction.

a·bove (ə-būv') adv. 1. On high; overhead: the clouds above. 2. In heaven; heavenward. 3. a. Upstairs: a table in the dining room above. b. To a degree that is over zero: 15° above. 4. In or to a higher place. 5. In an earlier part of a given text: "The problems cited above have led to a number of suggestions for reform" (Wharton Magazine). 6. In or to a higher rank or position: the ranks of major and above. — prep. 1. Over or higher than: a cool spring above the timberline. 2. Superior to in rank, position, or number; greater than: put principles above expediency. 3. Beyond the level or reach of: a shot that was heard above the music. 4. In preference to. 5. Too honorable to bend to: I am above petty intrigue. 6. More than: somewhat above normal temperature. — n. Usage Problem. An earlier part of a given text: Refer to the above for that information. — adj. Appearing earlier in the same text: flaws in the above interpretation. [Middle

English aboven, from Old English abufan : a-, on; see A-² + būfan, above; see upo in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The use of above as an adjective or noun in referring to a preceding text is most common in business and legal writing. In general writing its use as an adjective (the above figures) was accepted by a majority of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey, but its use as a noun (read the above) was accepted by only a minority.

above all (ə-bŭv' ōl) adv. Over and above all other factors or considerations.

a·bove·board (ə-bŭv'bōrd', -bōrd') adv. & adj. Without deceit or trickery; straightforward in manner. [Originally a gambling term referring to the fact that when a gambler's hands were above the board or gaming table, he could not engage in trickery, such as changing cards, below the table.]

a·bove·ground (ə-bŭv'ground') adj. 1. Situated or taking place on or above the surface of the ground: aboveground nuclear testing. 2. Operating or existing within the establishment or in accordance with conventional standards: journalistic practices unacceptable to the aboveground press; an aboveground corps of 20,000 priests in Poland. — a·bove'ground' adv.

abp. or Abp. abbr. Archbishop.

abr. abbr. 1. Abridged. 2. Abridgment.

ab·ra·ca·dab·ra (ăb'rə-kə-dăb'rə) n. 1. A magical charm or incantation having the power to ward off disease or disaster. 2. Foolish or unintelligible talk. [Late Latin, magical formula.]

WORD HISTORY: “Abracadabra,” says the magician, unaware that at one time the thing to do with the word was wear it, not say it. Abracadabra was a magic word, the letters of which were arranged in an inverted pyramid and worn as an amulet around the neck to protect the wearer against disease or trouble. One fewer letter appeared in each line of the pyramid, until only a remained to form the vertex of the triangle. As the letters disappeared, so supposedly did the disease or trouble. While magicians still use abracadabra in their performances, the word itself has acquired another sense, “foolish or unintelligible talk.”

a·bra·chi·a (ə-brā'kē-ə) n. Congenital absence of the arms. [A-¹ + Greek bra-khiōn, arm; see BRACE + -IA¹.]

a·brad·ant (ə-brād'nt) n. An abrasive. — adj. Abrasive.

a·brade (ə-brād') v. tr. a·brad·ed, a·brad·ing, a·brades. 1. To wear down or rub away by friction; erode. See Synonyms at chafe. 2. To make weary through constant irritation; wear down spiritually. [Latin abrādere, to scrape off : ab-, away; see AB-¹ + rādere, to scrape; see rēd- in Appendix.]

A·bra·ham (ā'brə-hām') In the Old Testament, the first patriarch and progenitor of the Hebrew people. He was the father of Isaac.

Abraham, Plains of. A field adjoining the upper part of Quebec City, Canada. In 1759 the British under Gen. James Wolfe defeated the French under Gen. Louis Montcalm in a decisive battle of the French and Indian Wars. The victory led to British supremacy in Canada.

a·bran·chi·ate (ā-bräng'kē-īt, -āt') n. An animal that has no gills. — adj. also a·bran·chi·al (-kē-əl) Having no gills.

a·brash (ä-bräsh', ə-brāzh') n. The natural and variable change in color that occurs in an Oriental rug over time when different dyes are used. [Arabic, mottled, possibly of Persian origin.]

ab·ra·sion (ə-brā'zhən) n. 1. The process of wearing down or rubbing away by means of friction. 2. a. A scraped or worn area. b. A scraped area on the skin or on a mucous membrane, resulting from injury or irritation. [Medieval Latin abrāsio, abrāsion-, from Latin abrāsus, past participle of abrādere, to scrape off. See ABRABE.]

ab·ra·sive (ə-brā'siv, -ziv) adj. 1. Causing abrasion. 2. Harsh and rough in manner. — n. A substance that abrades.

ab·re·act (äb'rē-äkt') v. tr. ab·re·act·ed, ab·re·act·ing, ab·re·acts. To release (repressed emotions) by acting out, as in words, behavior, or the imagination, the situation causing the conflict. [Translation of German abreagieren : ab-, away + reagieren, to react.] — ab·re·ac'tion n.

a·breast (ə-brěst') adv. 1. Side by side: ships docked two abreast. 2. Up to date with: keeping abreast of the latest developments.

a·bridge (ə-brīj') v. tr. a·bridged, a·bridg·ing, a·bridg·es. 1. To reduce the length of (a written text); condense. 2. To cut short; curtail. See Synonyms at shorten. [Middle English abregen, from Old French abregier, from Late Latin abbreviāre, to shorten. See ABBREVIATE.] — a·bridg'er n.

a·bridg·ment also a·bridge·ment (ə-brīj'mənt) n. Abbr. abr. 1. The act of abridging or the state of being abridged. 2. A written text that has been abridged.

a·brin (ä'briñ) n. A poisonous protein found in the seeds of the rosary pea. [New Latin Abrus precatorius, Indian licorice (from Abrus, genus name, from Greek habros, graceful, delicate) + -IN.] a·broach (ə-bröch') adj. 1. Opened or positioned so that a liquid, such as wine, can be let out. 2. In a state of action; astir. [Middle English abroche : a-, on, in; see A⁻² + broche, a pointed object, spigot; see BROACH¹.]

a·broad (ə-brôd') adv. & adj. 1. Out of one's own country. 2. In a foreign country or countries. 3. Away from one's home. 4. In circulation; at large. 5. Covering a large area; widely: "An epidemic is abroad in America" (Richard M. Smith). 6. Not on target; in error. — n. A foreign country or countries in which to live or travel: “Do you like abroad or hate it?” (John le Carré). [Middle English abrod : a-, in, on; see A^{-2} + brod, broad; see BROAD.]

ab-ro-gate (ăb'rə-gāt') v. tr. ab-ro-gat-ed, ab-ro-gat-ing, ab-ro-gates. To abolish, do away with, or annul, especially by authority. [Latin abrogāre, abrogāt- : ab-, away; see AB^{-1} + rogāre, to ask; see reg- in Appendix.] — ab'ro-ga'tion n.

a-brupt (ə-brŭpt') adj. 1. Unexpectedly sudden: an abrupt change in the weather. 2. Surprisingly and unceremoniously curt; brusque. 3. Touching on one subject after another with sudden transitions: abrupt prose. 4. Steeply inclined. See Synonyms at steep¹. 5. Botany. Terminating suddenly rather than gradually; truncate: an abrupt leaf. [Latin abruptus, past participle of abrumpere, to break off : ab-, away; see AB^{-1} + rumpere, to break; see reup- in Appendix.]

—a-brupt'ly adv. —a-brupt'ness n.

a-brup-tion (ə-brŭp'shən) n. An instance of suddenly breaking away or off.

A-bruz-zi (ä-brōöt'sē, ə-brōöt'-) also A-bruz-zi e Mo-li-se (ā mô-lē'zě) A region of central Italy bordering on the Adriatic Sea. Mostly mountainous, it includes Mount Corno, the highest peak of the Apennines.

A-bruz-zi (ä-brōöt'sē, ə-brōöt'-), Duke of Title of Luigi Amedeo, Prince of Savoy-Aosta. 1873-1933. Italian explorer and naval officer who made the first ascent of Mount St. Elias in Alaska (1897).

abs abbr. Absolute temperature.

abs. abbr. 1. Absence; absent. 2. Absolute; absolutely. 3. Abstract.

Ab-sa-ro-ka Range (ăb-sär'ə-kə rānj) A section of the Rocky Mountains in northwest Wyoming and southern Montana. It rises to 4,007.7 m (13,140 ft) at Franks Peak.

Ab-sa-ro-ke (ăb-sär'ə-kə) n. pl. Absaroke or Ab-sa-ro-kes. See Crow¹.

ab-scess (ăb'sēs') n. A localized collection of pus in part of the body, formed by tissue disintegration and surrounded by an inflamed area. — v. intr.

ab-scessed, ab-scess-ing, ab-scess-es. To form an abscess. [Latin abscessus, from past participle of abscedere, to go away : ab-, away; see AB^{-1} + cedere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

ab-scise (ăb-sīz') v. ab-scised, ab-scis-ing, ab-scis-es. — v. tr. To cut off; remove. — v. intr. To shed by abscission. [Latin abscindere, absciss- : ab-, away; see AB^{-1} + caedere, to cut; see ka-id- in Appendix.]

ab-scis-ic acid (ăb-sīz'ik əs'id) n. Abbr. ABA A plant hormone, $C_{15}H_{20}O_4$, involved in the abscission of leaves, flowers, and fruits and the dormancy of buds and seeds.

ab-scis-sa (ăb-sīs'ə) n. pl. ab-scis-sas or ab-scis-sae (-sīs'ē). Symbol x The coordinate representing the position of a point along a line perpendicular to the y-axis in a plane Cartesian coordinate system. [New Latin (linea) abscissa, (line) cut off, from Latin abscissus, past participle of abscindere, to abscise. See ABSCISE.]

ab-scis-sion (ăb-sîzh'ən) n. 1. The act of cutting off. 2. Botany. The shedding of leaves, flowers, or fruits following the formation of the abscission zone.

abscission zone (ăb-sîzh'ən zōn) n. The region at the base of a leaf, flower, fruit, or other plant part, where the formation of a cork layer results in the separation of that part from the plant body.

ab-scound (ăb-skönd') v. intr. ab-scound-ed, ab-scound-ing, ab-scounds. To leave quickly and secretly and hide oneself, often to avoid arrest or prosecution. [Latin abscondere, to hide : abs-, ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + condere, to put; see dhē in Appendix.] —ab-scound'er n.

ab-sence (ăb'səns) n. Abbr. abs. 1. The state of being away. 2. The time during which one is away. 3. Lack; want: an absence of leadership.

ab-sent (ăb'sənt) adj. Abbr. abs., a, a. 1. Not present; missing: absent friends; absent parents. 2. Not existent; lacking: a country in which morality is absent.

3. Exhibiting or feeling inattentiveness: an absent nod. — v. tr. ab-sent-ed, ab-sent-ing, ab-sents (ăb-sənt'). To keep (oneself) away: They absented themselves from the debate. — prep. Without: "Absent a legislative fix, this is an invitation for years of litigation" (Brian E. O'Neill). [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin absēns, absent- present participle of abesse, to be away : abs-, ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + esse, to be; see es- in Appendix.] —ab'sent-ly adv.

ab-sen-tee (ăb'sən-tē') n. One that is absent. — adj. 1. Of or relating to one that is absent. 2. Not in residence: absentee landlords. See Usage Note at -ee¹.

absentee ballot (ăb'sən-tē' bäl'ət) n. A ballot marked and mailed in advance by a voter away from the place where he or she is registered.

ab-sen-tee-ism (ăb'sən-tē'iz'əm) n. 1. Habitual failure to appear, especially for work or other regular duty. 2. The rate of occurrence of habitual absence from work or duty.

ab-sent-mind-ed (ăb'sənt-mīn'did) adj. Deep in thought and heedless of present circumstances or activities; preoccupied. See Synonyms at abstracted. —ab'sent-mind'ed-ly adv. —ab'sent-mind'ed-ness n.

absent without leave (ăb'sənt wîth-out' lēv) adj. Absent from one's assigned military post or duties without official permission; AWOL.

ab-sinthe also ab-sinth (ăb'sinth) n. 1. A perennial aromatic European herb (Artemisia absinthium), naturalized in eastern North America and having pinnatifid, silvery silky leaves and numerous nodding flower heads. Also called common wormwood 2. A green liqueur having a bitter anise or licorice flavor and a high alcohol content, prepared from absinthe and other herbs. Production of absinthe is now prohibited in many countries because of its toxicity. [Middle English, wormwood, from Old French, from Latin absinthium, from Greek apsinthion.]

ab-so-lute (ăb'sə-lōōt', ăb'sə-lōōt') adj. Abbr. abs. 1. Perfect in quality or nature; complete. 2. Not mixed; pure. See Synonyms at pure. 3. a. Not limited by restrictions or exceptions; unconditional: absolute trust. b. Unqualified in extent or degree; total: absolute silence. See Usage Note at infinite.

4. Unconstrained by constitutional or other provisions: an absolute ruler. 5. Not to be doubted or questioned; positive: absolute proof. 6. Grammar. a. Of, relating to, or being a word, phrase, or construction that is isolated syntactically from the rest of a sentence, as the referee having finally arrived in The referee having finally arrived, the game began. b. Of, relating to, or being a transitive verb when its object is implied but not stated. For example, inspires in We have a teacher who inspires is an absolute verb. c. Of, relating to, or being an adjective or a pronoun that stands alone when the noun it modifies is being implied but not stated. For example, in Theirs were the best, theirs is an absolute pronoun and best is an absolute adjective. 7. Physics. a. Relating to measurements or units of measurement derived from fundamental units of length, mass, and time. b. Relating to absolute temperature. 8. Law. Complete and unconditional; final. — n.

1. Something that is absolute. 2. Absolute. Philosophy. a. Something regarded as the ultimate basis of all thought and being. Used with the. b. Something regarded as independent of and unrelated to anything else. [Middle English absolut, from Latin absolūtus, unrestricted, past participle of absolvere, to absolve : ab-, away; see AB-¹ + solvere, to loosen; see leu- in Appendix.] —ab'so-lute'-ness n.

absolute alcohol (äb'sə-lōōt' ä'l'kə-hôl') n. Ethyl alcohol containing no more than one percent water.

absolute ceiling (äb'sə-lōōt' sē'lǐŋ) n. The maximum altitude above sea level at which an aircraft or missile can maintain horizontal flight under standard atmospheric conditions.

ab-so-lute-ly (äb'sə-lōōt'lē, äb'sə-lōōt'lē) adv. Abbr. abs. 1. Definitely and completely; unquestionably. 2. Grammar. In a manner that does not take an object.

USAGE NOTE: For some time, absolutely has been used informally as a vague intensive, as in an absolutely magnificent painting. In an earlier survey, a majority of the Usage Panel disapproved of this usage in formal writing.

absolute magnitude (äb'sə-lōōt' mäg'nī-tōōd') n. The intrinsic magnitude of a celestial body computed as if viewed from a distance of 10 parsecs, or 32.6 light-years.

absolute music (äb'sə-lōōt' myōō'zǐk) n. Instrumental music that depends solely on its rhythmic, melodic, and contrapuntal structures.

absolute pitch (äb'sə-lōōt' pǐch) n. 1. The precise pitch of an isolated tone, as established by its rate of vibration measured on a standard scale. 2. Music. The ability to identify or sing any tone heard. In this sense, also called perfect pitch absolute scale (ăb'sə-lōōt' skāl) n. 1. A scale of temperature with absolute zero as the minimum. 2. The Kelvin scale.

absolute temperature (ăb'sə-lōōt' tēm'pər-ə-chōōr') n. Abbr. abs Temperature measured or calculated on an absolute scale.

absolute value (ăb'sə-lōōt' văl'yōō) n. 1. The numerical value of a real number without regard to its sign. For example, the absolute value of -4 is 4 . Also called numerical value 2. The modulus of a complex number, equal to the square root of the sum of the squares of the real and imaginary parts of the number.

absolute zero (ăb'sə-lōōt' zîr'ō) n. Physics. The temperature at which substances possess no thermal energy, equal to -273.15°C , or -459.67°F .

ab-so-lu-tion (ăb'sə-lōō'shən) n. The formal remission of sin imparted by a priest, as in the sacrament of penance. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin absolūtiō, acquittal, from absolūtus, past participle of absolvere, to absolve. See ABSOLUTE.]

ab-so-lut-ism (ăb'sə-lōō'tîz'əm) n. 1. a. A political theory holding that all power should be vested in one ruler or other authority. b. A form of government in which all power is vested in a single ruler or other authority. 2. An absolute doctrine, principle, or standard. —ab'so-lut'ist n. —ab'so-lu-tis'tic (-lōō-tîs'tîk) adj.

ab-solve (əb-zōlv', -sōlv') v. tr. ab-solved, ab-solv-ing, ab-solves. 1. To pronounce clear of guilt or blame. 2. To relieve of a requirement or an obligation. 3. a. To grant a remission of sin to. b. To pardon or remit (a sin). [Middle English absolven, from Latin absolvere. See ABSOLUTE.] —ab-solv'a-ble adj. —ab-solv'er n.

ab-sorb (əb-sôrb', -zôrb') v. tr. ab-sorbed, ab-sorb-ing, ab-sorbs. 1. To take (something) in through or as through pores or interstices. 2. To occupy the full attention, interest, or time of; engross. See Synonyms at monopolize. 3. Physics. To retain (radiation or sound, for example) wholly, without reflection or transmission. 4. To take in; assimilate: immigrants who were absorbed into the social mainstream. 5. To receive (an impulse) without echo or recoil: a fabric that absorbs sound; a bumper that absorbs impact. 6. To take over (a cost or costs). 7. To endure; accommodate: couldn't absorb the additional hardships. [Middle English, to swallow up, from Old French absorber, from Latin absorbĕre: ab-, away; see *AB-*¹ + sorbĕre, to suck.] —ab-sorb'a-bil'i-ty n. —ab-sorb'a-ble adj. —ab-sorb'er n. —ab-sorb'ing-ly adv.

ab-sorbed (əb-sôrbd', -zôrbd') adj. Wholly involved or occupied; engrossed. See Synonyms at abstracted. —ab-sorb'ed-ly (əb-sôrb'bîd-lē, -zôrb'-) adv. —ab-sorb'ed-ness n.

ab·sor·be·fa·cient (əb-sôr'bə-fā'shənt, -zôr'-) adj. Inducing or causing absorption. — n. A medicine or an agent that induces absorption.

[ABSORBE(NT) + -FACIENT.]

ab·sorb·ent (əb-sôr'bənt, -zôr'-) adj. Capable of absorbing: absorbent cotton. — n. A substance that is capable of absorbing. — ab·sorb·en·cy n.

ab·sorp·tance (əb-sôrp'təns, -zôrp'-) n. The ratio of absorbed to incident radiation. [ABSORPT(ION) + -ANCE.]

ab·sorp·tion (əb-sôrp'shən, -zôrp'-) n. 1. The act or process of absorbing or the condition of being absorbed. 2. A state of mental concentration. [Latin absorptiō, absorptiōn-, from absorptus, past participle of absorbēre, to absorb. See ABSORB.] — ab·sorp·tive (-tīv) adj. — ab·sorp·tiv·i·ty n.

absorption spectrum (əb-sôrp'shən spēk'trəm) n. Physics. The electromagnetic spectrum, broken by a specific pattern of dark lines or bands, observed when radiation traverses a particular absorbing medium.

ab·squat·u·late (ăb-skwöch'ə-lāt') v. intr. ab·squat·u·lat·ed, ab·squat·u·lat·ing, ab·squat·u·lates. Midland U.S. 1. a. To depart in a hurry; abscond: “Your horse has absquatulated!” (Robert M. Bird). b. To die. 2. To argue. [Mock-Latinate formation, purporting to mean “to go off and squat elsewhere”.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The vibrant energy of American English sometimes appears in the use of Latin affixes to create jocular pseudo-Latin “learned” words. There is a precedent for this in the language of Shakespeare, whose plays contain scores of made-up Latinate words. Midland absquatulate has a prefix ab-, “away from,” and a suffix -ate, “to act upon in a specified manner,” affixed to a nonexistent base form -squatul-, probably suggested by squat. Hence the whimsical absquatulate, “to squat away from.” Another such coinage is Northern busticate, which joins bust with -icate by analogy with verbs like medicate. Southern argufy joins argue to a redundant -fy, “to make; cause to become.” These creations are largely confined to regions of the United States where change is slow, and where the 19th-century love for Latinate words and expressions is still manifest. For example, Appalachian speech is characterized by the frequent use of recollect, aggravate, oblige, and other such words.

ab·stain (ăb-stān', əb-) v. intr. ab·stained, ab·stain·ing, ab·stains. To refrain from something by one's own choice: abstain from traditional political rhetoric. See Synonyms at refrain¹. [Middle English absteinen, to avoid, from Old French abstenir, from Latin abstinēre, to hold back : abs-, ab-, away; see AB-¹ + tenēre, to hold; see ten- in Appendix.] — ab·stain·er n.

ab·ste·mi·ous (ăb-stē'mē-əs, əb-) adj. 1. Eating and drinking in moderation: an abstemious person. 2. a. Sparingly used or consumed: abstemious meals.

b. Restricted to bare necessities: an abstemious way of life. [From Latin abstēmius : abs-, ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + tēmum*, liquor variant of tēmētum.]

—ab-ste/mi-ous-ly adv. —ab-ste/mi-ous-ness n.

ab-sten-tion (ăb-stĕn'shən, əb-) n. The act or habit of deliberate self-denial. [Late Latin abstentiō, abstentiōn-, from abstentus, past participle of Latin abstinēre, to hold back. See ABSTAIN.]

ab-sti-nence (ăb'stā-nəns) n. 1. The act or practice of refraining from indulging an appetite, as for food. 2. Abstention from alcoholic beverages. [Middle English, from Old French abstenance, from Latin abstinentia, from abstinēns, abstinent- present participle of abstinēre, to hold back. See ABSTAIN.]

—ab/sti-nent adj. —ab/sti-nent-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: abstinence, self-denial, temperance, sobriety, continence. These nouns refer to restraint of one's appetites or desires. Abstinence implies the willful avoidance of pleasures, especially of food and drink, thought to be harmful or self-indulgent: "To many, total abstinence is easier than total moderation" (Saint Augustine). Self-denial suggests resisting one's own desires for the achievement of a higher goal, such as the good of another person: She practiced self-denial in order to provide for her family's needs. Temperance in its general sense refers to moderation and self-restraint (negotiations marked by the temperance of the participants), sobriety to gravity in bearing, manner, or treatment (sobriety of décor); both nouns denote moderation in or abstinence from the consumption of alcoholic liquor: Teetotalers preach temperance for everyone. "Something can (has) been [sic] said for sobriety/but very little" (John Berryman). Continence specifically refers to abstention from sexual activity.

ab-stract (ăb-străkt', ăb'străkt') adj. Abbr. abs. 1. Considered apart from concrete existence: an abstract concept. 2. Not applied or practical; theoretical: See Synonyms at theoretical. 3. Difficult to understand; abstruse: abstract philosophical problems. 4. Thought of or stated without reference to a specific instance: abstract words like truth and justice. 5. Impersonal, as in attitude or views. 6. Having an intellectual and affective artistic content that depends solely on intrinsic form rather than on narrative content or pictorial representation: abstract painting and sculpture. — n. (ăb'străkt') 1. A statement summarizing the important points of a text. 2. Something abstract. — v. tr. ab-tract-ed, ab-tract-ing, ab-tracts (ăb-străkt'). 1. To take away; remove. 2. To remove without permission; filch. 3. To consider (a quality, for example) without reference to a particular example or object. 4. (ăb'străkt') To summarize; epitomize. 5. To create artistic abstractions of (something else, such as a concrete object or another style): "The Bauhaus Functionalists were... busy unornamenting and abstracting modern architecture, painting and design" (John Barth). [Middle ab-tract-ed (ăb-străk'tid, ăb'străk'-) adj. 1. Removed or separated from something else; apart. 2. Lost or deep in thought; preoccupied.

English, from Latin abstractus, past participle of abstrahere, to draw away : abs-, ab-, away; see AB-¹ + trahere, to draw.] —ab-tract'er n. —ab-tract'ly adv.

—ab-tract'ness n.

—ab-tract'ed-ly adv. —ab-tract'ed-ness n.

SYNONYMS: abstracted, absorbed, distraught, absent-minded. These adjectives apply to lack of heed to or lack of awareness of matters requiring one's immediate attention. Abstracted implies being so deep in thought as to be mentally elsewhere: "He walked on, sucking his cigar, and apparently in as abstracted a mood as Mr. Cargill himself" (Sir Walter Scott). Absorbed suggests complete and often pleasurable mental involvement in the object of thought: "He eyed the coming tide with an absorbed attention" (Charles Dickens). Distraught emphasizes mental agitation that makes concentration difficult or impossible: Distraught with grief, I signed away my rights to the property. Absent-minded implies that the mind is straying from the matter at hand: Some professors are absent-minded.

abstract expressionism (ăb-străkt' ik-sprësh'ə-niz'əm) n. A school of painting that flourished after World War II until the early 1960's, characterized by the view that art is nonrepresentational and chiefly improvisational.

ab-straction (ăb-străk'shən, əb-) n. 1. a. The act or process of abstracting or the state of having been abstracted. b. An abstract concept, idea, or term. c. An abstract quality. 2. Preoccupation; absent-mindedness. 3. An abstract work of art.

ab-straction-ism (ăb-străk'shə-niz'əm) n. The theory and practice of abstract art. —ab-strac'tion-ist n.

ab-strac-tive (ăb-străk'tiv, əb-) adj. Of or derived by abstraction.

abstract of title (ăb-străkt' ŭv tīt'l) n. Law. A brief history of the transfers of a piece of land, including all claims that could be made against it.

ab-struse (ăb-strōōs', əb-) adj. Difficult to understand; recondite. See Synonyms at ambiguous. [Latin abstrūsus, past participle of abstrūdere, to hide : abs-, ab-, away; see AB-¹ + trūdere, to push; see treud- in Appendix.]

—ab-struse'ly adv. —ab-struse'ness n.

ab-surd (əb-sûrd', -zûrd') adj. 1. Ridiculously incongruous or unreasonable. See Synonyms at foolish. 2. Of, relating to, or manifesting the view that there is no order or value in human life or in the universe. 3. Of or relating to absurdism or the absurd. — n. The condition or state in which human beings exist in a meaningless, irrational universe wherein people's lives have no purpose or meaning. Used chiefly with the. [Latin absurdus.] —ab-surd'i-ty (-sûr'dī-tē, -zûr'-), ab-surd'ness n. —ab-surd'ly adv.

ab-surd-ism (əb-sûr'diz-əm, -zûr'-) n. 1. A philosophy, often translated into art forms, holding that human beings exist in a meaningless, irrational universe and that any search for order by them will bring them into direct conflict with this universe: “True absurdism is not less but more real than reality” (John Simon). 2. An act or an instance of the ridiculous: “This strained conceit never quite locates screen equivalents for the stage absurdisms” (Village Voice). —ab-surd'ist adj. & n.

abt. abbr. About.

A·bu-Bakr (ä'bōō-bä'kær) also A·bu Bekr (ä'bōō bĕk'ær), 573-634. First caliph of the Muslim empire (632-634). Ascending to power after the death of his son-in-law Mohammed, he made Islam a political and military force throughout Arabia.

A·bu Dha·bi (ä'bōō dä'bē) A sheikdom and city of eastern Arabia on the Persian Gulf. The city is the capital of the federated United Arab Emirates. With enormous oil revenues, the sheikdom has one of the highest per capita incomes in the world. Population, 242,975.

a·build·ing (ə-bīl'dīng) adj. In the process of being built or of building: “He sees motels and restaurants abuilding” (Wall Street Journal).

A·bu·ja (ä-bōō'jä) A city of central Nigeria northeast of Lagos. It was designated the capital in 1982 in an attempt to relieve the racial and ethnic divisions of the country, and the capital was officially moved on December 12, 1991. However many government offices remain in Lagos pending construction and development. Population, 15,000.

A·bu·kir or A·bu Qir (ä'bōō-kîr', äb'ōō-) A village of northern Egypt in the Nile River delta on the Bay of Abukir. Adm. Horatio Nelson's victory over a French fleet off Abukir in 1798 restored British prestige in the Mediterranean and ended French hopes of establishing a stronghold in the Middle East.

a·bu·li·a also a·bou·li·a (ə-bōō'lē-ə, ə-byōō'-) n. Loss or impairment of the ability to make decisions or act independently. [New Latin, from Greek aboulia, indecision : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + boulē, will; see g^welə- in Appendix.]

—a·bu'lic (-lĭk) adj.

a·bun·dance (ə-bŭn'dəns) n. 1. A great or plentiful amount. 2. Fullness to overflowing: “My thoughts... are from the abundance of my heart” (Thomas De Quincey). 3. Affluence; wealth.

a·bun·dant (ə-bŭn'dənt) adj. 1. Occurring in or marked by abundance; plentiful. See Synonyms at plentiful. 2. Abounding with; rich: a region abundant in wildlife. [Middle English aboundant, from Old French abondant, from Latin abundāns, abundant- present participle of abundāre, to overflow. See ABOUND.] a·buse (ə-byōōz') v. tr. a·bused, a·bus·ing, a·bus·es. 1. To use wrongly or improperly; misuse. 2. To hurt or injure by maltreatment; ill-use. 3. To assail with contemptuous, coarse, or insulting words; revile. 4. Obsolete. To deceive or trick. — n. (ə-byōōs') 1. Improper use or handling; misuse: drug abuse. 2. Physical maltreatment: spousal abuse. 3. A corrupt practice or custom: abuse of power. 4. Insulting or coarse language: verbal abuse. [Middle English abusen, from Old French abuser, from abus, improper use, from Latin abūsus, past participle of abūtī, to misuse : ab-, away; see AB-¹ + ūtī, to use.] — a·bus'er n.

—a·bun'dant·ly adv.

A·bu Qir (ä'bōō kîr', äb'ōō) See Abukir.

SYNONYMS: abuse, misuse, mistreat, ill-treat, maltreat. These verbs mean to treat a person or thing wrongfully, incorrectly, or harmfully. Abuse applies to injurious, improper, or unreasonable treatment: “We abuse land because we regard it as a commodity belonging to us” (Aldo Leopold). Misuse stresses incorrect or unknowledgeable handling: “How often misused words generate misleading thoughts” (Herbert Spencer). Mistreat, ill-treat, and maltreat all share the sense of inflicting injury, often intentionally, as through malice: “I had seen many more patients die from being mistreated for consumption than from consumption itself” (Earl of Lytton). The army of occupation had orders not to ill-treat the local citizenry. “When we misuse [a language other than our native language], we are in fact trying to reduce its element of foreignness. We let ourselves maltreat it as though it naturally belonged to us” (Manchester Guardian Weekly).

A·bu Sim·bel (ä'bōō sīm'bəl, -bəl) A village of southern Egypt on the Nile River. It is the site of massive rock temples dating from c. 1250 B.C. that were raised (1964-1966) to avoid flooding from the Aswan High Dam.

a·bu·sive (ə-byōō'siv, -zīv) adj. 1. Of or relating to abuse. 2. a. Characterized by abuse: abusive police tactics. b. Serving to abuse: “argued... that homes are abusive, that foster homes are abusive” (National Review). 3. Physically injurious to another: abusive punishment. — a·bu'sive·ly adv.

a·but (ə-büt') v. a·but·ted, a·but·ting, a·buts. — v. intr. To touch at one end or side; lie adjacent. — v. tr. To border upon; be next to. [Middle English abutten, from Old French abouter, to border on (a-, to from Latin ad-; see ad- + bouter, to strike); see bhau- in Appendix, and from Old French abuter, to end at (from but, end); see BUTT⁴.] — a·but'ter n.

a·bu·ti·lon (ə-byōōt'l-ōn') n. See flowering maple. [New Latin Abutilon, genus name.]

a·but·ment (ə-büt'mənt) n. 1. The act or process of abutting.

2. a. Something that abuts. b. The point of contact of two abutting objects or parts. 3. a. The part of a structure that bears the weight or pressure of an arch. b. A structure that supports the end of a bridge. c. A structure that anchors the cables of a suspension bridge.

a·buzz (ə-büz') adj. Filled with or as if with a buzzing sound: a field abuzz with snowmobiles; a room abuzz with talk.

ab·volt (äb'völt') n. The centimeter-gram-second electromagnetic unit of potential difference, equal to one hundred-millionth of a volt.

A·by·dos (ə-bī'dös) 1. An ancient town of Asia Minor on the Asiatic coast of the Hellespont in modern-day Turkey. It was the scene of the legendary tale of Hero and Leander. 2. An ancient city of southern Egypt on the Nile River northwest of Thebes. One of the oldest Egyptian cities, it was a religious center for the worship of Osiris and a burial site for the kings of the earliest dynasties.

a·bysm (ə-bīz'əm) n. An abyss. [Middle English abime, from Old French abisme, from Vulgar Latin abissimus*, alteration of Late Latin abyssus. See ABYSS.]

a·bys·mal (ə-bīz'məl) adj. 1. Resembling an abyss in depth; unfathomable. 2. Very profound; limitless: abysmal misery. See Synonyms at deep. 3. Very bad: an abysmal performance. —a·bys'mal·ly adv.

a·byss (ə-bīs') n. 1. An unfathomable chasm; a yawning gulf. 2. An immeasurably profound depth or void: "lost in the vast abysses of space and time" (Loren Eiseley). 3. a. The primeval chaos out of which it was believed that the earth and sky were formed. b. The abode of evil spirits; hell. [Middle English abissus, from Late Latin abyssus, from Greek abussos, bottomless : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + bussos, bottom.]

a·bys·sal (ə-bīs'əl) adj. 1. Abysmal; unfathomable. 2. Of or relating to the great depths of the oceans.

Ab·ys·sin·i·a (äb'ī-sīn'ē-ə) See Ethiopia. —Ab'ys-sin'i-an adj. & n.

Abyssinian cat (äb'ī-sīn'ē-ən kät) n. A slender, short-haired cat of a breed developed from Near Eastern stocks, having a reddish-brown coat tipped with small black markings.

Ab·zug (äb'zōög', -züg'), Bella. Born 1920. American politician who was a U.S. representative from New York State (1971-1976) and is noted for her support of the peace movement and feminism.

ac or AC abbr. Alternating current.

Ac¹ The symbol for the element actinium.

Ac² abbr. Bible. Acts of the Apostles.

ac. abbr. 1. Acre. 2. Air-cool.

a.c. abbr. Latin. Ante cibum (before meals).

a/c abbr. 1. Account. 2. Account current. 3. Or a.c.. Air conditioning.

ac- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

-ac suff. Used to form adjectives from nouns: ammoniac. [New Latin -acus, from Greek -akos.]

a·ca·cia (ə-kā'shə) n. 1. Any of various often spiny trees or shrubs of the genus Acacia in the pea family, having alternate, bipinnately compound leaves or leaves represented by flattened leafstalks and heads or spikes of small flowers. 2. Any of several other leguminous plants, such as the rose acacia. 3. See gum arabic. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek akakia.]

acad. abbr. Academic; academy.

ac·a·deme (ăk'ə-dēm') n. 1. a. The academic environment, community, or world. b. Academic life. 2. A place in which instruction is given to students. 3. A scholar, especially a pedant. [From Latin Acadēmīa, the Academy. See ACADEMY.]

ac·a·de·mi·a (ăk'ə-dēm'mē-ə) n. The academic community; academe. [New Latin acadēmīa, from Latin, the Academy. See ACADEMY.]

ac·a·dem·ic (ăk'ə-dēm'ik) adj. Abbr. acad. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a school, especially one of higher learning. 2. a. Relating to studies that are liberal or classical rather than technical or vocational. b. Relating to scholarly performance: a student's academic average. 3. Relating or belonging to a scholarly organization. 4. Scholarly to the point of being unaware of the outside world. See Synonyms at pedantic. 5. Based on formal education. 6. Formalistic or conventional. 7. Theoretical or speculative without a practical purpose or intention. See Synonyms at theoretical. 8. Having no practical purpose or use. — n. 1. One who is a member of an institution of higher learning. 2. A person who has an academic viewpoint or a scholarly background. — ac'a·dem'i·cal·ly adv.

academic freedom (ăk'ə-dēm'ik frē'dəm) n. Liberty to teach and pursue knowledge and to discuss it openly without restriction or interference by school or public officials or other authorities.

ac·a·de·mi·cian (ăk'ə-dē-mīsh'ən, ə-kăd'ə-) n. Abbr. A. 1. An academic. 2. A member of an art, literary, or scientific academy or society.

ac·a·dem·i·cism (ăk'ə-dēm'ī-sīz'əm) also a·cad·e·mism (ə-kăd'ə-mīz'əm) n. Traditional formalism, especially when reflected in art.

ac·a·dem·ics (ăk'ə-dēm'iks) n. (used with a pl. verb). College or university courses and studies: "Academics are a much more important priority to him than athletics" (Gerald McIntosh).

a·cad·e·mism (ə-kăd'ə-mīz'əm) n. Variant of academicism.

a·cad·e·my (ə-kăd'ə-mē) n. pl. a·cad·e·mies. Abbr. A., acad. 1. A school for special instruction. 2. A secondary or college-preparatory school, especially a private one. 3. a. The academic community; academe: "When there's moral leadership from the White House and from the academy, people tend to adjust" (Jesse Jackson). b. Higher education in general. Used with the. c. A society of scholars, scientists, or artists. 4. Academy. a. Plato's school for advanced education. b. Platonism. c. The disciples of Plato. [Latin Acadēmīa, the school where Plato taught, from Greek Akadēmīa.]

A·ca·di·a (ə-kă'dē-ə) A region and former French colony of eastern Canada, chiefly in Nova Scotia but also including New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Cape Breton Island, and the coastal area from the St. Lawrence River south into Maine. During the French and Indian War (1755-1763) many Acadians migrated or were deported by the British to southern territories, including Louisiana, where their descendants came to be known as Cajuns.

A·ca·di·an (ə-kā'dē-ən) adj. Of or relating to Acadia or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. a. One of the early French settlers of Acadia. b. A descendant of these settlers, especially a Cajun. 2. A dialect of French spoken by the Acadians.

a·can·tha (ə-kän'thə) n. pl. a·can·thae (-thē). A sharp spiny part or structure, such as the spinous process of a vertebra. [Greek, thorn.]

a·can·thi (ə-kän'thī) n. A plural of acanthus.

acantho- or acanth- pref. Thorn: acanthocephalan. [From Greek akanthos, thorn plant. See ACANTHUS.]

a·can·tho·ceph·a·lan (ə-kän'thə-sěf'ə-lən) also a·can·tho·ceph·a·lid (-līd) n. See spiny-headed worm. [From New Latin Acanthocephala, phylum name : ACANTHO- + Greek kephalē, head; see -CEPHALOUS.] — a·can'tho·ceph'a·lan adj.

a·can·thoid (ə-kän'thoid') adj. Shaped like a thorn or spine.

ac·an·thop·ter·yg·i·an (äk'ən-thöp'tə-rīj'ē-ən) n. Any of a large group of fishes of the superorder Acanthopterygii, having bony skeletons and spiny rays in the dorsal and anal fins and including the bass, perch, mackerel, and swordfish. [From New Latin Acanthopterygii : ACANTHO- + Greek pterugion, diminutive of pterox, wing; see pet- in Appendix.] — ac'an·thop'ter·yg'i·an adj.

a·can·thus (ə-kän'thəs) n. pl. a·can·thus·es or a·can·thi (-thī'). 1. Any of various perennial herbs or small shrubs of the genus Acanthus, native to the Mediterranean and having pinnately lobed basal leaves with spiny margins and showy spikes of white or purplish flowers. Also called bear's breech. 2. Architecture. A design patterned after the leaves of one of these plants, used especially on the capitals of Corinthian columns. [New Latin Acanthus, genus name, from Greek akanthos, thorn plant, from akantha, thorn.]

a·cap·ni·a (ā-käp'nē-ə) n. A condition marked by the presence of less than the normal amount of carbon dioxide in the blood and tissues. [New Latin, from Latin acapnos, without smoke (which contains carbon dioxide), from Greek akapnos : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + kapnos, smoke.]

a cap·pel·la (ä' kə-pěl'ə) adv. Music. Without instrumental accompaniment. [Italian : a, in the manner of + cappella, chapel, choir.]

Ac·a·pul·co (äk'ə-pōōl'kō, ä'kä-pōōl'kō) also Ac·a·pul·co de Juárez (də hwär'ēs, -ěz, wär'-) A city of southern Mexico on the Pacific Ocean. It is a popular resort with a fine natural harbor surrounded by cliffs and promontories. Population, 301,902.

Acapulco gold (ăk'ə-pōōl'kō gōld) n. Slang. Mexican-grown marijuana that is considered to be very strong.

ac·a·ri (ăk'ə-rī') n. Plural of acarus.

ac·a·ri·a·sis (ăk'ə-rī'ə-sīs) n. Infestation with or disease caused by mites.
[ACAR(ID) + -IASIS.]

ac·a·rid (ăk'ə-rīd) n. An arachnid of the order Acarina, which includes the mites and ticks. [From New Latin Acaridae, family name, from Acarus, type genus, from Greek akari, a kind of mite.] —ac'a·rid adj.

ac·a·roid resin also ac·ca·roid resin (ăk'ə-roid' rēz'in) n. A yellow or reddish resin obtained from various Australian grass trees and used in varnishes, lacquers, and paper manufacture. Also called accroides gum, gum accroides. [From New Latin acaroides, from Greek akari, a kind of mite.]

ac·a·rol·o·gy (ăk'ə-rōl'ə-jē) n. The study of mites and ticks. [ACAR(ID) + -LOGY.] —ac'a·rol'o·gist n.

ac·a·ro·pho·bi·a (ăk'ə-rə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of mites, other small insects, or worms. [ACAR(ID) + -PHOBIA.]

a·car·pous (ā-kär'pəs) adj. Botany. 1. Producing no fruit; sterile. 2. Having no fruit.

ac·a·rus (ăk'ər-əs) n. pl. ac·a·ri (-rī'). A mite, especially one of the genus Acarus. [New Latin Acarus. See ACARID.]

a·cat·a·lec·tic (ā-kăt'l-ĕk'tīk) adj. Having a metrically complete pattern, especially having the full number of syllables in the final foot. Used of verse. [Late Latin acatalēcticus, from Greek akatalēktikos: a-, not; see *A-*¹ + katalēktikos, incomplete; see CATALECTIC.]

a·cau·date (ā-kô'dāt') also a·cau·dal (ā-kôd'l) adj. Having no tail.

a·cau·les·cent (ā'kô-lēs'ənt) adj. Botany. Stemless or apparently so.

acc. or acc abbr. Accusative.

Ac·cad (ăk'ăd', ä'käd') See Akkad.

ac·ca·roid resin (ăk'ə-roid' rēz'in) n. Variant of acaroid resin.

ac·cede (ăk-sēd') v. intr. ac·ced·ed, ac·ced·ing, ac·cedes. 1. To give one's consent, often at the insistence of another; concede. See Synonyms at assent.

2. To arrive at or come into an office or dignity: accede to the throne. 3. To become a party to an agreement or treaty. [Middle English accēden, to come near, from Latin accēdere, to go near : ad-, ad- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

—ac·ced'ence (-sēd'ns) n. —ac·ced'er n.

ac·cel·er·an·do (ă-chĕl'ə-răn'dō) adv. & adj. Music. Gradually accelerating or quickening in time. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, present participle of accelerare, to hasten, from Latin accelerāre. See ACCELERATE.]

ac·cel·er·ant (ăk-sĕl'ər-ənt) n. A substance, such as a petroleum distillate, that is used as a catalyst, as in the spreading of an intentionally set fire.

ac·cel·er·ate (ăk-sĕl'ə-rāt') v. ac·cel·er·at·ed, ac·cel·er·at·ing, ac·cel·er·ates. — v. tr. 1. To increase the speed of. 2. To cause to occur sooner than expected. 3. To cause to develop or progress more quickly: a substance used to accelerate a fire. 4. a. To speed up (an academic course, for example). b. To make it possible for (a student) to finish an academic course faster than usual.

5. Physics. To cause a change of velocity. — v. intr. 1. To move or act faster. See Synonyms at speed. 2. To engage in an academic program that progresses faster than usual. [Latin accelerāre, accelerāt-: ad-, intensive pref.; see AD- + celerāre, to quicken (from celer, swift).] — ac·cel'er-a'tive adj.

ac·cel·er·a·tion (ăk-sĕl'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of accelerating. b. The process of being accelerated. 2. Abbr. a Physics. The rate of change of velocity with respect to time.

acceleration of gravity (ăk-sĕl'ə-rā'shən ūv grāv'ī-tē) n. Abbr. g The acceleration of freely falling bodies under the influence of terrestrial gravity, equal to approximately 9.81 meters (32 feet) per second per second.

ac·cel·er·a·tor (ăk-sĕl'ə-rā'tər) n. 1. A device, especially the gas pedal of a motor vehicle, for increasing speed. 2. Chemistry. A substance that increases the speed of a reaction. 3. Physics. A device, such as a cyclotron or linear accelerator, that accelerates charged subatomic particles or nuclei to high energies. In this sense, also called atom smasher ac·cel·er·o·graph (ăk-sĕl'ər-ə-grāf') n. An accelerometer equipped to measure and record ground motion during an earthquake.

ac·cel·er·om·e·ter (ăk-sĕl'ə-rōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument used to measure acceleration. [ACCELER(ATION) + -METER.]

ac·cent (ăk'sĕnt') n. 1. The relative prominence of a particular syllable of a word by greater intensity or by variation or modulation of pitch or tone. 2. Vocal prominence or emphasis given to a particular syllable, word, or phrase. 3. A characteristic pronunciation, especially: a. One determined by the regional or social background of the speaker. b. One determined by the phonetic habits of the speaker's native language carried over to his or her use of another language. 4. A mark or symbol used in the printing and writing of certain languages to indicate the vocal quality to be given to a particular letter: an acute accent. 5. A mark or symbol used in printing and writing to indicate the stressed syllables of a spoken word. 6. Rhythmically significant stress in a line of verse. 7. Music. a. Special stress given to a note within a phrase. b. A mark representing this stress. 8. Mathematics. a. A mark used as a superscript to distinguish among variables represented by the same symbol. b. A mark used as a superscript to indicate the first derivative of a variable. 9. A mark or one of several marks used as a superscript to indicate a unit, such as feet (') and inches (") in linear measurement. 10. A distinctive feature or quality, such as a feature that accentuates or complements a decorative style. 11. Particular importance or interest; emphasis:

The accent is on comfort. See Synonyms at emphasis. — v. tr. ac-cent-ed, ac-cent-ing, ac-cent-s (ăk'sěnt', ăk-sěnt'). 1. To stress or emphasize the pronunciation of. 2. To mark with a printed accent. 3. To focus attention on; accentuate: a program that accents the development of leadership. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin accentus, accentuation : ad-, ad- + cantus, song (from canere, to sing); see kan- in Appendix.]

ac-cen-tu-al (ăk-sěn'chō-əl) adj. 1. Of or relating to accent. 2. Based on stress accents: accentual rhythm; accentual verse. [From Latin accentus, accent. See ACCENT.] — ac-cen'tu-al-ly adv.

ac-cen-tu-ate (ăk-sěn'chō-āt') v. tr. ac-cen-tu-at-ed, ac-cen-tu-at-ing, ac-cen-tu-ates. 1. To stress or emphasize; intensify: "enacted sweeping land-reform plans that accentuated the already chaotic pattern of landholding" (James Fallows). 2. To pronounce with a stress or an accent. 3. To mark with an accent. [Medieval Latin accentuāre, accentuāt-, from Latin accentus, accent. See ACCENT.] — ac-cen'tu-a'tion n.

ac-cept (ăk-sěpt') v. ac-cept-ed, ac-cept-ing, ac-cepts. — v. tr. 1. To receive (something offered), especially with gladness. 2. To admit to a group, an organization, or a place: accepted me as a new member of the club. 3. a. To regard as proper, usual, or right: Such customs are widely accepted. b. To regard as true; believe in: Scientists have accepted the new theory. c. To understand as having a specific meaning. 4. To endure resignedly or patiently: accept one's fate. 5. a. To answer affirmatively: accept an invitation. b. To agree to take (a duty or responsibility). 6. To be able to hold (something applied or inserted): This wood will not accept oil paints. 7. To receive officially: accept the committee's report. 8. To consent to pay, as by a signed agreement. — v. intr. To receive something, especially with favor. Often used with of. [Middle English accepten, from Latin acceptāre, frequentative of accipere, to receive : ad-, ad- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.]

ac-cept-a-ble (ăk-sěp'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Worthy of being accepted. 2. Adequate to satisfy a need, requirement, or standard; satisfactory. — ac-cept'a-bil'i-ty, ac-cept'a-ble-ness n. — ac-cept'a-bly adv.

ac-cep-tance (ăk-sěp'təns) n. Abbr. acpt. 1. The act or process of accepting. 2. The state of being accepted or acceptable. 3. Favorable reception; approval. 4. Belief in something; agreement. 5. a. A formal indication by a debtor of willingness to pay a time draft or bill of exchange. b. A written instrument so accepted. 6. Law. Compliance by one party with the terms and conditions of another's offer so that a contract becomes legally binding between them.

ac-cep-tant (ăk-sěp'tənt) adj. Accepting willingly.

ac-cep-ta-tion (ăk'sěp-tā'shən) n. 1. The usual or accepted meaning, as of a word or expression. See Synonyms at meaning. 2. Favorable reception; approval.

ac-cept-ed (äk-sĕp'tĭd) adj. Widely encountered, used, or recognized: “an aura of dismal monotony, an accepted tedium of both journey and season” (John Fowles).

ac-cept-er (äk-sĕp'tər) n. 1. One that accepts: an acceptor of fate. 2. Variant of acceptor (n., sense 1).

ac-cep-tor (äk-sĕp'tər) n. 1. Also ac-cept-er. One who signs a time draft or bill of exchange. 2. Chemistry. a. The reactant in an induced reaction that has an increased rate of reaction in the presence of the inductor. b. The atom that contributes no electrons to a covalent bond.

ac-cess (äk'sĕs) n. 1. A means of approaching, entering, exiting, or making use of; passage. 2. The act of approaching. 3. The right to approach, enter, exit, or make use of: has access to the restricted area; has access to classified material.

4. Increase by addition. 5. An outburst or onset: an access of rage. — v. tr.

ac-cessed, ac-cess-ing, ac-cess-es. 1. To obtain access to (data or processes).

2. Usage Problem. To obtain access to (goods or information), usually by technological means. [Middle English accēs, a coming to, from Old French, from Latin accessus, past participle of accēdere, to arrive : ad-, ad- + cēdere, to come; see ked- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The verb access is well established in its computational sense “to obtain access to (data or processes),” as in This program makes it considerably easier to access files on another disk. In recent years it has come to be used in nontechnical contexts with the more general sense of “to obtain access to (goods or information), usually by technological means,” as in You can access your cash at any of 300 automatic tellers throughout the area. This example was judged unacceptable by 82 percent of the Usage Panel.

access broker (äk'sĕs brō'kər) n. A former high-level political figure with close ties to an incumbent political administration who parlays those ties and other personal connections into a lucrative public relations or lobbying venture, often involving foreign clients.

access code (äk'sĕs kōd) n. An alphanumeric sequence that permits access to an electronic network, such as a telephone network or an automated teller machine.

ac-ces-si-ble (äk-sĕs'ə-bəl) adj. 1. Easily approached or entered. 2. Easily obtained: accessible money. 3. Easy to talk to or get along with: an accessible manager. 4. Easily swayed or influenced: accessible to flattery.

—ac-ces'si-bil'i-ty, ac-ces'si-ble-ness n. —ac-ces'si-bly adv.

ac-ces-sion (äk-sĕsh'ən) n. 1. The attainment of a dignity or rank: the queen's accession to the throne. 2. a. Something that has been acquired or added; an acquisition. b. An increase by means of something added. 3. Law. a. The addition to or increase in value of property by means of improvements or natural growth. b. The right of a proprietor to ownership of such addition or increase.

4. Agreement or assent. 5. Access; admittance. 6. A sudden outburst. — v. tr.

ac·ces·sioned, ac·ces·sion·ing, ac·ces·sions. To record in the order of acquisition: a curator accessioning newly acquired paintings. —ac·ces'sion·al adj.

ac·ces·sor·ize (ăk-sēs'ə-rīz') v. tr. ac·ces·sor·ized, ac·ces·sor·iz·ing, ac·ces·sor·iz·es. Usage Problem. To furnish with accessories: "She was the first to take... glamour... and apply it to clothes [by] accessorizing them at whim" (Atlantic).

See Usage Note at -ize.

ac·ces·so·ry (ăk-sēs'ə-rē) n. pl. ac·ces·so·ries. 1. a. A subordinate or supplementary item; an adjunct. b. Something nonessential but desirable that contributes to an effect or result. See Synonyms at appendage. 2. Law. a. One who incites, aids, or abets a lawbreaker in the commission of a crime but is not present at the time of the crime. Also called accessory before the fact b. One who aids a criminal after the commission of a crime, but was not present at the time of the crime. Also called accessory after the fact — adj. 1. Having a secondary, supplementary, or subordinate function. 2. Law. Serving to aid or abet a lawbreaker, either before or after the commission of the crime, without being present at the time the crime was committed. [Middle English accessorie, from Medieval Latin accessōrius, from accessor, helper, from Latin accessus, approach. See ACCESS.]

—ac'ces·so·ri·al (-sə-sōr'ē-əl, -sōr-) adj. —ac·ces'so·ri·ly adv.

—ac·ces'so·ri·ness n.

accessory after the fact (ăk-sēs'ə-rē ăf'tər thē făkt) n. pl. accessories after the fact. Law. See accessory (n., sense 2b).

accessory apartment (ăk-sēs'ə-rē ə-pärt'mənt) n. A rental apartment within a single-family dwelling. Also called granny flat, in-law rental.

accessory before the fact (ăk-sēs'ə-rē bī-fôr' thē făkt) n. pl. accessories before the fact. Law. See accessory (n., sense 2a).

accessory cell (ăk-sēs'ə-rē sĕl) n. See subsidiary cell.

accessory fruit (ăk-sēs'ə-rē frōōt) n. A fruit, such as the pear or strawberry, that develops from a ripened ovary or ovaries but includes a significant portion derived from nonovarian tissue. Also called false fruit, pseudocarp.

accessory nerve (ăk-sēs'ə-rē nûrv) n. Either of the 11th pair of cranial nerves, which convey motor impulses to the pharynx and muscles of the upper thorax, back, and shoulders.

accessory pigment (ăk-sēs'ə-rē pig'mənt) n. Botany. A pigment that absorbs light energy and transfers it to chlorophyll A.

access road (ăk'sēs rōd) n. A road that affords access into and out of an area.

access time (ăk'sēs tīm) n. Computer Science. The time lag between a request for information stored in a computer and its delivery.

ac·ciac·ca·tu·ra (ä-chä'kə-tōōr'ə) n. Music. A short grace note one half step below a principal note, sounded immediately before or at the same time as the principal note to add sustained dissonance. [Italian, from acciaccare, to crush.]

ac·ci·dence (äk'sī-dəns, -dəns') n. Grammar. The section of morphology that deals with the inflections of words. [Middle English, from Late Latin accidentia, from Latin accidēns, accident-, accident. See ACCIDENT.]

ac·ci·dent (äk'sī-dənt, -dənt') n. 1. a. An unexpected, undesirable event: car accidents on icy roads. b. An unforeseen incident: went to college in England by happy accident. 2. Lack of intention; chance: ran into an old friend by accident. 3. Logic. A circumstance or an attribute that is not essential to the nature of something. [Middle English, chance event, from Old French, from Latin accidēns, accident- present participle of accidere, to happen : ad-, ad- + cadere, to fall; see kad- in Appendix.]

ac·ci·den·tal (äk'sī-dən'tl) adj. 1. Occurring unexpectedly, unintentionally, or by chance. 2. Music. Of or relating to a sharp, flat, or natural not indicated in the key signature. — n. 1. A property, a factor, or an attribute that is not essential. 2. Music. A chromatically altered note not belonging to the key signature. — ac'ci·den'tal·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: accidental, fortuitous, contingent, incidental, adventitious. These adjectives apply to what comes about without design or intent. Accidental primarily refers to what occurs by chance: Their accidental meeting led to a renewal of their acquaintance. It can also mean subordinate or nonessential: "Poetry is something to which words are the accidental, not by any means the essential form" (Frederick W. Robertson). Fortuitous stresses chance or accident even more strongly and inferentially minimizes relation or cause: "the happy combination of fortuitous circumstances" (Sir Walter Scott). Contingent in this context describes what is possible but uncertain because of chance or unforeseen or uncontrollable factors: "The results of confession were not contingent, they were certain" (George Eliot). Incidental refers to what is an adjunct to something else and does not necessarily imply the operation of chance: "There is scarcely any practice which is so corrupt as not to produce some incidental good" (Enoch Mellor). Adventitious applies to what is not inherent in something but is added extrinsically, sometimes by accident or chance: "The court tries to understand 'whether the young man's misconduct was adventitious or the result of some serious flaw in his character'" (Harry F. Rosenthal).

accident insurance (äk'sī-dənt ĩn-shōōr'əns) n. Insurance against injury or death because of accident.

ac·ci·dent·prone (äk'sī-dənt-prōn') adj. Having or susceptible to having a greater than average number of accidents or mishaps.

ac·cip·i·ter (ăk-sĭp'ĭ-tər) n. A hawk of the genus Accipiter, characterized by short wings and a long tail. [Latin, hawk. See ōku- in Appendix.]

—ac·cip'ĭ·trine' (-trĭn', -trĭn) adj.

ac·claim (ə-klām') v. ac·claimed, ac·claim·ing, ac·claims. — v. tr. To praise enthusiastically and often publicly; applaud. See Synonyms at praise. — v. intr. To shout approval. — n. Enthusiastic applause; acclamation. [From Latin acclāmāre: ad-, ad- + clāmāre, to shout; see kelə-² in Appendix.]

—ac·claim'er n.

ac·cla·ma·tion (ăk'lə-mā'shən) n. 1. A shout or salute of enthusiastic approval. 2. An oral vote, especially an enthusiastic vote of approval taken without formal ballot: a motion passed by acclamation. [Latin acclāmātiō, acclāmātiōn-, from acclāmātus, past participle of acclāmāre, to shout at. See ACCLAIM.] —ac·clam'a·to'ry (ə-klām'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

ac·cli·mate (ə-klī'mĭt, ăk'lə-māt') v. tr. intr. ac·cli·mat·ed, ac·cli·mat·ing, ac·cli·mates. To accustom or become accustomed to a new environment or situation; adapt. See Synonyms at harden. [French acclimater: a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + climat, climate (from Old French); see CLIMATE.]

ac·cli·ma·tion (ăk'lə-mā'shən) n. 1. The process of acclimating or of becoming acclimated. 2. Acclimatization.

ac·cli·ma·ti·za·tion (ə-klī'mə-tĭ-zā'shən) n. The physiological adaptation of an animal or a plant to changes in climate or environment, such as light, temperature, or altitude.

ac·cli·ma·tize (ə-klī'mə-tĭz') v. ac·cli·ma·tized, ac·cli·ma·tiz·ing, ac·cli·ma·tiz·es. — v. tr. 1. To acclimate. See Synonyms at harden. 2. To adapt (oneself), especially to environmental or climatic changes. — v. intr. To become acclimated or adapted. —ac·cli'ma·tiz'er n.

ac·cliv·i·ty (ə-klĭv'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ac·cliv·i·ties. An upward slope, as of a hill. [Latin acclīvītās, from acclĭvis, uphill: ad-, ad- + clĭvus, slope; see klei- in Appendix.]

ac·co·lade (ăk'ə-lād', -lād') n. 1. a. An expression of approval; praise. b. A special acknowledgment; an award. 2. A ceremonial embrace, as of greeting or salutation. 3. Ceremonial bestowal of knighthood. — v. tr. ac·co·lad·ed, ac·co·lad·ing, ac·co·lades. To praise or honor: "His works are invariably accoladed as definitive even as they sparkle and spark" (Malcolm S. Forbes). [French, an embrace, accolade, from accoler, to embrace, from Old French acoler, from Vulgar Latin accolāre*: Latin ad-; see AD- + Latin collum, neck; see k^wel-¹ in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Those who have received so many accolades that they have no fear of getting it in the neck may have to reconsider their situation. In tracing accolade back to its Latin origins, we find that it was formed from the prefix ad-, "to, on," and the noun collum, "neck," which may bring the word collar to mind.

From these elements came the Vulgar Latin word ·accollāre, which, in turn, was the source of French acolade, “an embrace.” An embrace was originally given to a knight when dubbing him, a fact that accounts for acolade having the technical sense “ceremonial bestowal of knighthood,” the sense in which the word is first recorded in English in 1623.

ac·com·mo·date (ə-kŏm'ə-dāt') v. ac·com·mo·dat·ed, ac·com·mo·dat·ing, ac·com·mo·dates. — v. tr. 1. To do a favor or service for; oblige. See Synonyms at oblige. 2. To provide for; supply with. 3. To hold comfortably without crowding. See Synonyms at contain. 4. To make suitable; adapt. See Synonyms at adapt. 5. To allow for; consider: an economic proposal that accommodates the special needs and interests of the elderly. 6. To settle; reconcile. — v. intr. Physiology. To become adjusted, as the eye to focusing on objects at a distance. [Latin accomodāre, accomodāt-, to fit : ad-, ad- + commodus, suitable; see COMMODIOUS.] — ac·com'·mo·da'tive adj. — ac·com'·mo·da'tive·ness n. — ac·com'·mo·da'tor n.

ac·com·mo·dat·ing (ə-kŏm'ə-dā'tīng) adj. Helpful and obliging.
— ac·com'·mo·dat'ing·ly adv.

ac·com·mo·da·tion (ə-kŏm'ə-dā'shən) n. 1. The act of accommodating or the state of being accommodated; adjustment. 2. Something that meets a need; a convenience. 3. accommodations. a. Room and board; lodgings. b. A seat, compartment, or room on a public vehicle. 4. Reconciliation or settlement of opposing views. 5. Physiology. The automatic adjustment in the focal length of the lens of the eye to permit retinal focus of images of objects at varying distances. 6. A financial favor, such as a loan.

ac·com·mo·da·tion·ist (ə-kŏm'ə-dā'shə-nīst) n. One that compromises with or adapts to the viewpoint of the opposition: “The episode revealed... the conceptual fissure within the... Administration. The split is between the realists and the accommodationists” (National Review). — ac·com'·mo·da'tion·ist adj.

accommodation ladder (ə-kŏm'ə-dā'shən lăd'ər) n. Nautical. A portable ladder hung from the side of a ship.

ac·com·pa·ni·ment (ə-kŭm'pə-nē-mənt, ə-kŭmp'nē-) n. 1. Music. A vocal or instrumental part that supports another, often solo, part. 2. Something, such as a situation, that accompanies something else; a concomitant. 3. Something added for embellishment, completeness, or symmetry; complement.

ac·com·pa·nist (ə-kŭm'pə-nīst, ə-kŭmp'nīst) n. Music. A performer, such as a pianist, who plays an accompaniment.

ac·com·pa·ny (ə-kŭm'pə-nē, ə-kŭmp'nē) v. ac·com·pa·nied, ac·com·pa·ny·ing, ac·com·pa·nies. — v. tr. 1. To be or go with as a companion. 2. To add to; supplement: Wine accompanies the meal. 3. To coexist or occur with. 4. Music. To perform an accompaniment to. — v. intr. Music. To play an accompaniment. [Middle English acompanien, from Old French acompanier : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + compaignon, companion; see COMPANION¹.]

SYNONYMS: accompany, conduct, escort, chaperon. These verbs are compared when they mean to be with or to go with another or others. Accompany suggests going with another on an equal basis: She went to Europe accompanied by her colleague. Conduct implies guidance of others: The usher conducted us to our seats. Escort stresses protective guidance: The picture shows the party chairperson escorting the candidate through the crowd. Chaperon specifies adult supervision of young persons: Teachers often chaperon their classes on field trips.

USAGE NOTE: It is traditionally claimed that the preposition to use with accompany in the passive should be by in the case of persons and with otherwise: The candidate was accompanied by six burly bodyguards. The salmon was accompanied with a delicious watercress salad. However, by is quite commonly used in sentences of the second type, and the usage is grammatically defensible. The phrase introduced with by normally represents the subject of a related active sentence; thus, the sentence The salmon was accompanied by a delicious watercress salad is the unexceptional passive of the sentence A delicious watercress salad accompanied the salmon. By the same token, with can be used with persons when they are the instruments of an act of accompanying performed by someone else. We can say The Secret Service accompanied the candidate with six burly bodyguards, or we can use the passive The candidate was accompanied with six burly bodyguards (by the Secret Service). The choice between the two prepositions really depends on the intended sense. Although the traditional rule may serve as a guide to which sense is likely to feel the most natural, it should not be taken as a categorical stricture.

ac-com-lice (ə-kŏm'plīs) n. One who aids or abets a lawbreaker in a criminal act, either as a principal or an accessory. [Alteration of COMPLICE.]

ac-com-plish (ə-kŏm'plīsh) v. tr. ac-com-plished, ac-com-plish-ing, ac-com-plish-es. 1. To succeed in doing; bring to pass. See Synonyms at perform. 2. To reach the end of; complete. [Middle English accomplisshen, from Old French acomplir, accompliss-, to complete : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + complir, to complete (from Latin complēre, to fill out); see COMPLETE.]

—ac-com'plish-a-ble adj. —ac-com'plish-er n.

ac-com-plished (ə-kŏm'plīst) adj. 1. Skilled; expert: an accomplished pianist. 2. Unquestionable; indubitable: That smoking causes health problems is an accomplished fact.

ac-com-plish-ment (ə-kŏm'plīsh-mənt) n. 1. The act of accomplishing or the state of being accomplished; completion. 2. Something completed successfully; an achievement. 3. Social poise and grace.

ac·cord (ə-kôrd') v. ac·cord·ed, ac·cord·ing, ac·cords. — v. tr. 1. To cause to conform or agree; bring into harmony. 2. To grant, especially as being due or appropriate: accorded the President the proper deference. See Synonyms at grant. 3. To bestow upon: I accord you my blessing. — v. intr. To be in agreement, unity, or harmony. See Synonyms at agree. — n. 1. Agreement; harmony: act in accord with university policies. 2. A settlement or compromise of conflicting opinions. 3. A settlement of points at issue between nations. 4. Spontaneous or voluntary desire to take a certain action: The children returned on their own accord. [Middle English accorden, from Old French acorder, from Vulgar Latin accordāre* : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin cor, heart; see kerd- in Appendix.]

ac·cor·dance (ə-kôr'dns) n. 1. Agreement; conformity: in accordance with your instructions. 2. The act of granting.

ac·cor·dant (ə-kôr'dnt) adj. Being in agreement or harmony; consonant.
—ac·cor'dant·ly adv.

ac·cord·ing as (ə-kôr'dĩng əz) conj. 1. Corresponding to the way in which; precisely as. 2. Depending on whether; if.

ac·cord·ing·ly (ə-kôr'dĩng-lē) adv. 1. In accordance; correspondingly. 2. So; consequently.

according to (ə-kôr'dĩng tō) prep. 1. As stated or indicated by; on the authority of: according to historians. 2. In keeping with; in agreement with: according to instructions. 3. As determined by: a list arranged according to the alphabet.

ac·cor·di·on (ə-kôr'dē-ən) n. Music. A portable instrument with a small keyboard and free metal reeds that sound when air is forced past them by pleated bellows operated by the player. — adj. Having folds or bends like the bellows of an accordion: accordion pleats; accordion blinds. [German Akkordion, from Akkord, chord, from French accord, harmony, from Old French acorder, from Medieval Latin accordāre, to accord. See ACCORD.] —ac·cor'di·on·ist n.

ac·cost (ə-kôst', ə-köst') v. tr. ac·cost·ed, ac·cost·ing, ac·costs. To approach and speak to in an aggressive, hostile, or sexually suggestive manner. [French accoster, from Old French, from Medieval Latin accostāre, to adjoin : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin costa, side; see kost- in Appendix.]

ac·couche·ment (ä'kōosh-män') n. A confinement during childbirth; lying-in. [French, from accoucher, to assist in childbirth, from Old French : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + coucher, to lay down; see COUCH.]

ac·count (ə-kount') n. 1. a. A narrative or record of events. b. A reason given for a particular action. 2. Abbr. a/c, acct. a. A formal banking, brokerage, or business relationship established to provide for regular services, dealings, and other financial transactions. b. A precise list or enumeration of financial transactions. c. Money deposited for checking, savings, or brokerage use. d. A customer having a business or credit relationship with a firm: salespeople visiting their accounts. 3. Worth, standing, or importance: a landowner of some account.

4. Profit or advantage: turned her writing skills to good account. — v. tr.

ac·count·ed, ac·count·ing, ac·counts. To consider as being; deem. See Synonyms at consider. See Usage Note at as¹. —phrasal verb. account for.

1. To constitute the governing or primary factor: Bad weather accounted for the long delay. 2. To provide an explanation or justification: The suspect couldn't account for his time that night. —idioms. call to account. 1. To challenge or contest. 2. To hold answerable for. on account. On credit. on account of.

4. Because of; for the sake of: “We got married on account of the baby” (Anne Tyler). 5. Chiefly Southern U.S. Because: “He got picked up by the cops on account of he was walking with his shopping bag and they said there was numbers in it” (Jimmy Breslin). on no account. Under no circumstances. on (one's) own account. 7. For oneself. 8. On one's own; by oneself: He wants to work on his own account. take into account. To take into consideration; allow for. [Middle English, from Old French acont, from aconter, to reckon : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + cunter, to count (ultimately from Latin computāre, to sum up); see COMPUTE.]

ac·count·a·ble (ə-koun'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Liable to being called to account; answerable. See Synonyms at responsible. 2. That can be explained: an accountable phenomenon. —ac·count'a·bil'i·ty, ac·count'a·ble·ness n.

—ac·count'a·bly adv.

ac·count·ant (ə-koun'tənt) n. Abbr. acct. One that keeps, audits, and inspects the financial records of individuals or business concerns and prepares financial and tax reports. —ac·count'an·cy (-tən-sē) n.

account executive (ə-kount'ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv) n. A person, as in an advertising or a public relations firm, who manages clients' accounts.

ac·count·ing (ə-koun'tĭng) n. The bookkeeping methods involved in making a financial record of business transactions and in the preparation of statements concerning the assets, liabilities, and operating results of a business.

ac·cou·ter or ac·cou·tre (ə-kōō'tər) v. tr. ac·cou·tered or ac·cou·tred, ac·cou·ter·ing or ac·cou·tre·ing, ac·cou·ters or ac·cou·tres. To outfit and equip, as for military duty. See Synonyms at furnish. [French accouter, from Old French acoustrer, arrange, equip : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + coustrer, sew; see COUTURE.]

ac·cou·ter·ment or ac·cou·tre·ment (ə-kōō'tər-mənt, -trə-) n. 1. Often accouterments or accoutrements. a. Ancillary items of equipment or dress. b. Military equipment other than uniforms and weapons. 2. accouterments or accoutrements. Outward forms of recognition; trappings: the standard accouterments of the historical novel; cathedral ceilings, heated swimming pools, and other accoutrements signaling great wealth. 3. Archaic. The act of accoutering.

Ac·cra (ăk'ṛə, ə-krä') The capital and largest city of Ghana, in the southeast part of the country on the Gulf of Guinea. Originally the capital of an ancient Ga kingdom, it became an important economic center after the completion in 1923 of a railroad to the mining and agricultural hinterland. Population, 859,640.

ac·cred·it (ə-krĕd'īt) v. tr. ac·cred·it·ed, ac·cred·it·ing, ac·cred·its. 1. To ascribe or attribute to; credit with. 2. a. To supply with credentials or authority; authorize. See Synonyms at authorize. b. To appoint as an ambassador to a foreign government. 3. a. To attest to and approve as meeting a prescribed standard. See Synonyms at approve. b. To recognize (an institution of learning) as maintaining those standards requisite for its graduates to gain admission to other reputable institutions of higher learning or to achieve credentials for professional practice. 4. To believe. [French accréditer: a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + crédit, credit (from Old French); see CREDIT.]

ac·cred·i·ta·tion (ə-krĕd'ī-tā'shən) n. The act of accrediting or the state of being accredited, especially the granting of approval to an institution of learning by an official review board after the school has met specific requirements.

ac·cres·cent (ə-krĕs'ənt) adj. Botany. Increasing in size after flowering, as the calyx of the ground cherry. [Latin accrēscēns, accrēscēt- present participle of accrēscere, to grow. See ACCRUE.]

ac·crete (ə-krĕt') v. ac·cret·ed, ac·cret·ing, ac·cretes. — v. tr. To make larger or greater, as by increased growth. — v. intr. 1. To grow together; fuse. 2. To grow or increase gradually, as by addition. [Back-formation from ACCRETION.]

ac·cre·tion (ə-krĕ'shən) n. 1. a. Growth or increase in size by gradual external addition, fusion, or inclusion. b. Something added externally to promote such growth or increase. 2. Biology. The growing together or adherence of parts that are normally separate. 3. Geology. a. Slow addition to land by deposition of water-borne sediment. b. An increase of land along the shores of a body of water, as by alluvial deposit. 4. Astronomy. An increase in the mass of a celestial object by the collection of surrounding interstellar gases and objects by gravity. [Latin accrētiō, accrētiōn-, from accrētus, past participle of accrēscere, to grow. See ACCRUE.] — ac·cre'tion·ar'y (-shə-nĕr'ē), ac·cre'tive adj.

accretion disk (ə-krĕ'shən dĭsk) n. A disk of interstellar material surrounding a celestial object with an intense gravitational field, such as a black hole.

Ac·cring·ton (ăk'rĭng-tən) A borough of northwest England north of Manchester. It is the center of a textile-processing area. Population, 79,200.

ac·croi·des gum (ə-kroi'dĕz gŭm, ä-kroi'-) n. See acaroid resin. [Alteration of New Latin acaroides; see ACAROID RESIN + GUM¹.]

ac·cru·al (ə-krō'əl) n. 1. The act or process of accumulating; an increase. 2. Something that accumulates or increases.

ac·crue (ə-krōō') v. ac·crued, ac·cru·ing, ac·crues. — v. intr. 1. To come to one as a gain, an addition, or an increment: interest accruing in my savings account. 2. To increase, accumulate, or come about as a result of growth: common sense that accrues with experience. 3. To come into existence as a claim that is legally enforceable. — v. tr. To accumulate over time: I have accrued 15 days of sick leave. [Middle English acreuen, ultimately from Latin accrēscere, to grow : ad-, ad- + crēscere, to arise; see ker⁻² in Appendix.] —ac·crue'ment n.

acct. abbr. 1. Account. 2. Accountant.

ac·cul·tur·ate (ə-kül'chə-rāt') v. ac·cul·tur·at·ed, ac·cul·tur·at·ing, ac·cul·tur·ates. — v. tr. To cause (a society, for example) to change by the process of acculturation. — v. intr. To change or be modified by acculturation.

ac·cul·tur·a·tion (ə-kül'chə-rā'shən) n. 1. The modification of the culture of a group or an individual as a result of contact with a different culture. 2. The process by which the culture of a particular society is instilled in a human being from infancy onward. —ac·cul'tur·a'tion·al adj. —ac·cul'tur·a'tive adj.

ac·cum·bent (ə-kūm'bənt) adj. Lying down; reclining. [Latin accumbēns, accumbent- present participle of accumbere, to recline at table : ad-, ad- + cumbere, to recline.]

ac·cu·mu·late (ə-kyōōm'yə-lāt') v. ac·cu·mu·lat·ed, ac·cu·mu·lat·ing, ac·cu·mu·lates. — v. tr. To gather or pile up; amass. See Synonyms at gather. — v. intr. To mount up; increase. [Latin accumulāre, accumulāt- : ad-, ad- + cumulāre, to pile up (from cumulus, heap); see keuə- in Appendix.] —ac·cu'mu·la·ble (-lə-bəl) adj.

ac·cu·mu·la·tion (ə-kyōōm'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. The act of gathering or amassing, as into a heap or pile: "Little things grew by continual accumulation" (Samuel Johnson). 2. The process of growing into a large amount or heap. 3. A mass heaped up or collected: an accumulation of rubbish.

ac·cu·mu·la·tive (ə-kyōōm'yə-lā'tiv, -lə-tiv) adj. 1. Characterized by or showing the effects of accumulation; cumulative. 2. Tending to accumulate. —ac·cu'mu·la·tive·ly adv. —ac·cu'mu·la·tive·ness n.

ac·cu·mu·la·tor (ə-kyōōm'yə-lā'tər) n. 1. One that accumulates: an accumulator of old magazines. 2. A register or electric circuit in a calculator or computer, in which the results of arithmetical and logical operations are formed. 3. Chiefly British. An automobile storage battery.

ac·cu·ra·cy (äk'yər-ə-sē) n. 1. Conformity to fact. 2. Precision; exactness.

ac·cu·rate (äk'yər-īt) adj. 1. Conforming exactly to fact; errorless. 2. Deviating only slightly or within acceptable limits from a standard. 3. Capable of providing a correct reading or measurement: an accurate scale. [Latin accūrātus, done with care, past participle of accūrāre, to do with care : ad-, ad- + cūrāre, to care for (from cūra, care); see CURE.] —ac'cu·rate·ly adv.

—ac'cu·rate·ness n.

ac-curs-ed (ə-kûr'sîd, ə-kûrst') also ac-curst (ə-kûrst') adj. 1. Abominable; hateful: this accursed mud. 2. Being under a curse; doomed. [Middle English acursed, past participle of acursen, to put a curse on : a-, intensive pref. (from Old English ā-) + Old English cursian, to curse (from curs, curse).]

—ac-curs'ed-ly adv. —ac-curs'ed-ness n.

accus abbr. Accusative.

ac-cu-sa-tion (ăk'yōō-zā'shən) n. 1. An act of accusing or the state of being accused. 2. A charge of wrongdoing that is made against a person or other party.

ac-cu-sa-tive (ə-kyōō'zə-tīv) adj. Abbr. acc., acc, accus Of, relating to, or being the case of a noun, pronoun, adjective, or participle that is the direct object of a verb or the object of certain prepositions. — n. The accusative case. [Middle English acusatif, from Old French, from Latin (casus) accūsātīvus, (case) of accusation, from accūsātus, past participle of accūsāre, to accuse. See ACCUSE.]

—ac-cu'sa-tive-ly adv.

ac-cu-sa-to-ri-al (ə-kyōō'zə-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) also ac-cu-sa-to-ry (-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Containing or implying accusation: an accusatorial glare.

—ac-cu'sa-to'ri-al-ly adv.

ac-cuse (ə-kyōōz') v. ac-cused, ac-cus-ing, ac-cus-es. — v. tr. 1. To charge with a shortcoming or an error. 2. To charge formally with a wrongdoing. — v. intr. To make a charge of wrongdoing against another. [Middle English acusen, from Latin accūsāre : ad-, ad- + causa, lawsuit.] —ac-cus'er n. —ac-cus'ing-ly adv.

ac-cused (ə-kyōōzd') n. Law. The defendant or defendants in a criminal case.

ac-cus-tom (ə-kûs'təm) v. tr. ac-cus-tomed, ac-cus-tom-ing, ac-cus-toms.

To familiarize, as by constant practice, use, or habit: I have accustomed myself to working long hours. [Middle English accustomen, from Old French acostumer : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + costume, custom; see CUSTOM.]

ac-cus-tomed (ə-kûs'təmd) adj. 1. Frequently practiced, used, or experienced; customary: spoke with her accustomed modesty. See Synonyms at usual.

2. Being in the habit of: I am accustomed to sleeping late. 3. Having been adapted to the existing environment and conditions: eyes not accustomed to desert sun.

AC/DC (ă'sē-dē'sē) adj. Offensive Slang. Engaging in or practicing bisexuality. [From the likening of a bisexual person to an appliance that works on either alternating or direct current.] ace (ās) n. 1. Games. a. A single spot or pip on a playing card, die, or domino.

b. A playing card, die, or domino having one spot or pip. 2. Sports. In racket games: a. A serve that one's opponent fails to return. b. A point scored by such a serve. 3. Sports. The act of hitting a golf ball in the hole with one's first shot.

4. A military aircraft pilot who has destroyed five or more enemy aircraft. 5. An expert in a given field. — adj. Topnotch; first-rate. — v. tr. aced, ac-ing, ac-es. 1. Sports. To serve an ace against. 2. Sports. To hit an ace in golf. 3. Slang.

To get the better of (someone): a candidate who aced his opponents in the primaries. 4. Slang. To receive a grade of A on: She aced the exam. —idioms. ace in the hole. A hidden advantage or resource kept in reserve until needed. within an ace of. On the verge of; very near to: came within an ace of losing the election. [Middle English as, from Old French, from Latin, unit.]

-acean suff. 1. Variant of -aceous. 2. An organism belonging to a taxonomic group: cetacean. [From New Latin -ācea, neuter pl. of -āceus, -aceous.]

a·ce·di·a (ə-sē'dē-ə) n. Spiritual torpor and apathy; ennui: “There is a name for the generic shoulder shrug—the buzzing indifference, as if it’s always 90 degrees in the shade after a large lunch. The word is acedia. It is the weariness of effort that extends to the heart and becomes a weariness of caring” (Melvin Maddocks). [Late Latin, from Greek akēdeia, indifference : a-, a-; see A⁻¹ + kēdos, care.]

A·cel·da·ma¹ (ə-sěl'də-mə) In the New Testament, a potter’s field near Jerusalem purchased by the priests as a burial ground for strangers with the reward that Judas had received for betraying Jesus and had later returned to them.

A·cel·da·ma² (ə-sěl'də-mə) n. A place with dreadful associations. [After Acelandama¹.]

a·cel·lu·lar (ā-sěl'yə-lər) adj. Containing no cells; not made of cells.

-aceous or -acean suff. 1. a. Of or relating to: amylaceous. b. Resembling or having the nature of: amentaceous. 2. Belonging to a taxonomic group: orchidaceous. [New Latin -āceus, from Latin -āceus.]

a·ceph·a·lous (ā-sěf'ə-ləs) adj. 1. Biology. Headless or lacking a clearly defined head: acephalous worms. 2. Having no leader. [From Medieval Latin acephalus, from Greek akephalos : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + kephalē, head; see -CEPHALOUS.]

a·ce·qui·a (ə-sā'kē-ə, ä-sā'-) n. Southwestern U.S. An irrigation canal. [Spanish, from Arabic as-sāqiyah.]

ac·er·ate (äs'ə-rāt') also ac·er·at·ed (-rā'tid) adj. Acerose. [From Latin ācer, sharp. See ak- in Appendix.]

a·cerb (ə-sûrb') adj. Variant of acerbic.

ac·er·bate (äs'ər-bāt') v. tr. ac·er·bat·ed, ac·er·bat·ing, ac·er·bates. To vex or annoy. [Latin acerbāre, acerbāt-, to make harsh, from acerbus, harsh. See ACERBIC.]

a·cer·bic (ə-sûr'bik) also a·cerb (ə-sûrb') adj. Sour or bitter, as in taste, character, or tone: “At times, the playwright allows an acerbic tone to pierce through otherwise arid or flowery prose” (Alvin Klein). See Synonyms at bitter. [From Latin acerbus. See ak- in Appendix.] —a·cer'bi·cal·ly adv.

a·cer·bi·ty (ə-sûr'bī-tē) n. pl. a·cer·bi·ties. Sourness of taste, character, or tone.

ac·er·ose (ăś'ə-rōs') adj. Needlelike, as the leaves of pine; acerate. [New Latin acerōsus, incorrect use (as if from Latin acus, needle, or ācer, sharp), of Latin acerōsus, full of chaff, from Latin acus, acer-, chaff. See ak- in Appendix.]

a·cer·vu·lus (ə-sûr'vyə-ləs) n. pl. a·cer·vu·li. A tiny cushionlike or blisterlike structure produced by certain fungi on a plant host and consisting of a mass of hyphae-bearing asexually produced spores. [New Latin, diminutive of Latin acer-vus, heap.]

acet. abbr. Acetone.

acet- pref. Variant of aceto-.

ac·e·tab·u·lum (ăś'ĭ-tăb'yə-ləm) n. pl. ac·e·tab·u·la (-lə). 1. Anatomy. The cup-shaped cavity at the base of the hipbone into which the ball-shaped head of the femur fits. 2. Zoology. The cavity in the body of an insect into which the leg fits. 3. Zoology. A cup-shaped structure, such as the sucker of a tapeworm or leech. [Latin, vinegar cup, from acētum, vinegar. See ACETUM.] —ac'e·tab'·u·lar (-lər) adj.

ac·e·tal (ăś'ĭ-tăl') n. 1. A colorless, flammable, volatile liquid, $\text{CH}_3\text{CH}(\text{OC}_2\text{H}_5)_2$, used in cosmetics and as a solvent. 2. Any of the class of compounds formed from aldehydes combined with alcohol. [ACET(O)- + AL(COHO)].]

ac·et·al·de·hyde (ăś'ĭ-tăl'də-hīd') n. A colorless, flammable liquid, $\text{C}_2\text{H}_4\text{O}$, used to manufacture acetic acid, perfumes, and drugs. Also called aldehyde a·cet·a·mide (ə-sět'ə-mīd', ăś'ĭt-ăm'īd') n. The crystalline amide of acetic acid, CH_3CONH_2 , used as a solvent and wetting agent and in lacquers and explosives.

a·cet·a·min·o·phen (ə-sē'tə-mĭn'ə-fən, ăś'ə-) n. A crystalline compound, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_9\text{NO}_2$, used in chemical synthesis and in medicine to relieve pain and reduce fever. [ACET(O)- + AMIN(O)- + PHEN(OL).]

ac·et·an·i·lide (ăś'ĭt-ăn'līd') also ac·et·an·i·lid (-ăn'līd) n. A white crystalline compound, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{NH}(\text{COCH}_3)$, used in medicine to relieve pain and reduce fever. [ACET(O)- + ANIL(INE) + -IDE.]

ac·e·tate (ăś'ĭ-tăt') n. 1. A salt or ester of acetic acid. 2. Cellulose acetate or any of various products, especially fibers, derived from it.

a·ce·tic (ə-sē'tĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or containing acetic acid or vinegar. [From Latin acētum, vinegar. See ACETUM.]

acetic acid (ə-sē'tĭk ăś'īd) n. A clear, colorless organic acid, CH_3COOH , with a distinctive pungent odor, used as a solvent and in the manufacture of rubber, plastics, acetate fibers, pharmaceuticals, and photographic chemicals. It is the chief acid of vinegar.

a·ce·ti·fy (ə-sē'tə-fĭ', ə-sět'ə-) v. tr. intr. a·ce·ti·fied, a·ce·ti·fy·ing, a·ce·ti·fies. To convert or become converted to acetic acid or vinegar. —a·ce'ti·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ-kă'shən) n. —a·ce'ti·fi·er n.

aceto- or acet- pref. 1. Acetic acid: acetify. 2. Acetyl: acetanilide. [From Latin acētum, vinegar. See ACETUM.]

ac·e·to·a·ce·tic acid (ăs'ī-tō-ə-sē'tik əs'īd, ə-sē'tō-) n. A ketone body, $\text{CH}_3\text{COCH}_2\text{COOH}$, excreted in the urine in certain diabetic conditions.

ac·e·tone (ăs'ī-tōn') n. Abbr. acet. A colorless, volatile, extremely flammable liquid ketone, CH_3COCH_3 , widely used as an organic solvent. —ac'e-ton'ic (-tōn'ik) adj.

acetone body (ăs'ī-tōn' bōd'ē) n. See ketone body.

ac·e·to·phe·net·i·din (ăs'ī-tō-fə-nēt'ī-dīn, ə-sē'tō-) n. A white powder or crystalline solid, $\text{CH}_3\text{CONHC}_6\text{H}_4\text{OC}_2\text{H}_5$, derived from coal tar and used in medicine to reduce fever and relieve pain. Also called phenacetin [ACETO- + PHEN(O)- + E(THYL) + -ID(E) + -IN.] a·ce·tous (ə-sē'təs, əs'ī-təs) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or producing acetic acid or vinegar. 2. Having an acetic taste; sour-tasting. [Middle English, sour, from Medieval Latin acētōsus, vinegary, from Latin acētum, vinegar. See ACETUM.]

a·ce·tum (ə-sē'təm) n. 1. Vinegar. 2. An acetic acid solution of a drug. [Latin acētum. See ak- in Appendix.]

a·ce·tyl (ə-sēt'l, əs'ī-tl) n. The acetic acid radical CH_3CO . —ac'e-tyl'ic (ăs'ī-tīl'ik) adj.

a·cet·y·late (ə-sēt'l-āt') v. tr. a·cet·y·lat·ed, a·cet·y·lat·ing, a·cet·y·lates. To bring an acetyl group into (an organic molecule). —a·cet'y-la'tion n.

a·ce·tyl·cho·line (ə-sēt'l-kō'lēn') n. A white crystalline derivative of choline, $\text{C}_7\text{H}_{17}\text{NO}_3$, that is released at the ends of nerve fibers in the somatic and parasympathetic nervous systems and is involved in the transmission of nerve impulses in the body.

a·ce·tyl·cho·lin·es·ter·ase (ə-sēt'l-kō'lə-nēs'tə-rās', -rāz') n. An enzyme found in nerve synapses that cleaves acetylcholine into acetate and choline.

a·ce·tyl·co·A (ə-sēt'l-kō'ā', əs'ī-tl-) n. See acetyl coenzyme A. acetyl coenzyme A (ə-sēt'l kō-ĕn'zīm' ā) n. A compound, $\text{C}_{25}\text{H}_{38}\text{N}_7\text{O}_{17}\text{P}_3\text{S}$, that functions as a coenzyme in many biological acetylation reactions and is formed as an intermediate in the oxidation of carbohydrates, fats, and proteins. Also called acetyl-coA a·cet·y·lene (ə-sēt'l-ēn', -ən) n. A colorless, highly flammable or explosive gas, C_2H_2 , used for metal welding and cutting and as an illuminant.

—a·cet'y-len'ic (ə-sēt'l-ēn'ik) adj.

acetylene series (ə-sēt'l-ēn' sîr'ēz) n. A series of unsaturated aliphatic hydrocarbons, each containing at least one triple carbon bond, having chemical properties resembling acetylene and having the general formula $\text{C}_n\text{H}_{2n-2}$, with acetylene being the simplest member.

a·ce·tyl·sal·i·cyl·ic acid (ə-sēt'l-sāl'ī-sīl'ik əs'īd) n. See aspirin (n., sense 1).

ace-y-deuc-y (ā'sē-dōō'sē, -dyōō'-) n. Games. A variation of backgammon.

[ACE + DEUCE¹.]

A·chae·a (ə-kē'ə) also A·cha·ia (ə-kī'ə, ə-kā'ə) An ancient region of southern Greece occupying the northern part of the Peloponnesus on the Gulf of Corinth. The cities of the region banded together in the early third century B.C. to form the Achaean League, which defeated Sparta but was eventually beaten by the Romans, who annexed Achaea in 146 B.C. and later gave the name to a province that included all of Greece south of Thessaly.

A·chae·an (ə-kē'ən) also A·cha·ian (ə-kā'ən, ə-kī'-) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Achaea. 2. One of a Hellenic people believed to have inhabited the Peloponnesus and to have created the Mycenaean civilization. 3. A Greek, especially of the Mycenaean era. — A·chae'an adj.

ach·a·la·sia (ăk'ə-lā'zhə) n. The failure of a ring of muscle fibers, such as a sphincter of the esophagus, to relax. [New Latin : A-¹ + Greek khalasis, relaxation (from khalan, to loosen).]

A·cha·tes (ə-kā'tēz) n. 1. Mythology. The faithful companion of Aeneas in Virgil's Aeneid. 2. A loyal friend.

ache (āk) v. intr. ached, ach·ing, aches. 1. To suffer a dull, sustained pain. 2. To feel sympathy or compassion. 3. To yearn painfully: refugees who ached for their homeland. — n. 1. A dull, steady pain. See Synonyms at pain. 2. A longing or desire; a yen. [Middle English aken, from Old English acan.]

A·che·be (ă-chā'bā), Chinua. Born 1930. Nigerian writer whose works, including the novel Things Fall Apart (1958), describe traditional African life in conflict with colonial rule and westernization.

a·chene also a·kene (ā-kēn') n. A small, dry, indehiscent one-seeded fruit with a thin wall, as in the sunflower. [New Latin achenium : Greek a-, a-; see A-¹ + Greek khainein, to yawn.] — a·che'ni·al (-nē-əl) adj.

A·cher·nar (ā'kər-nār') n. A star in the constellation Eridanus that is one of the brightest stars in the sky and is 114 light-years from Earth. [From Arabic 'ahīr an-nahr, the end of the river (referring to the star's position in the constellation Eridanus).]

Ach·er·on (ăk'ə-rōn', -rən) n. Greek Mythology. The river of woe, one of the five rivers of Hades.

Ach·e·son (ăch'i-sən), Dean Gooderham. 1893-1971. American statesman who promoted the Marshall Plan and helped establish NATO.

A·cheu·li·an also A·cheu·le·an (ə-shōō'lē-ən) adj. Of or relating to a stage of tool culture of the European Lower Paleolithic Age between the second and third interglacial periods, characterized by symmetrical stone hand axes. [French acheuléen, after St. Acheul, a hamlet in northern France.]

a·chieve (ə-chēv') v. a·chieved, a·chiev·ing, a·chieves. — v. tr. 1. To perform or carry out with success; accomplish. See Synonyms at perform. 2. To attain with effort or despite difficulty. See Synonyms at reach. — v. intr. To accomplish something successfully. [Middle English acheven, from Old French achever, from a chief (venir), (to come) to a head. See CHIEF.] — a·chiev'·a·ble adj. — a·chiev'er n.

a·chieved (ə-čhēvd') adj. Highly successful because of great skill and ability: “The author... is not merely lucky, but an achieved and deserving fiction writer” (Wright Morris).

a·chieve·ment (ə-čhēv'mənt) n. 1. The act of accomplishing or finishing. 2. Something accomplished successfully, especially by means of exertion, skill, practice, or perseverance. See Synonyms at feat¹.

Ach·ill (ăk'īl) A mountainous and barren island off the northwest coast of Ireland. At its western end is Achill Head.

ach·il·le·a (ăk'ə-lē'ə, ə-kīl'ē-ə) n. See yarrow. [New Latin achillēa, from Latin, from Greek achilleios, of Achilles, plant that healed wounds, from Achilleus, Achilles.]

A·chil·les (ə-kīl'ēz) n. Greek Mythology. The hero of Homer's Iliad, the son of Peleus and Thetis and slayer of Hector.

A·chil·les' heel (ə-kīl'ēz hēl) n. A seemingly small but actually mortal weakness. [From Achilles' being vulnerable only in the heel.]

Achilles jerk (ə-kīl'ēz jûrk) n. Physiology. A reflex bending of the foot resulting from the contraction of lower leg muscles.

Achilles tendon (ə-kīl'ēz tēn'dən) n. The large tendon connecting the heel bone to the calf muscle of the leg.

a·chir·a (ə-čhīr'ə) n. See edible canna (adj., sense 2). [New Latin, A⁻¹ + Greek kheir, hand.]

ach·la·myd·e·ous (ăk'lə-mīd'ē-əs, ā'klə-) adj. Having no perianth, as the flowers of a willow.

a·chlor·hy·dri·a (ā'klôr-hī'drē-ə, ā'klôr-) n. Absence of hydrochloric acid in the gastric secretions of the stomach. [A⁻¹ + CHLOR(O)- + HYDR(O)- + -IA¹.] — a·chlor·hy'dric adj.

a·chlo·ro·phyl·lous (ā-klôr'ə-fīl'əs, ā-klôr'-) adj. Botany. Having no chlorophyll.

a·cho·li·a (ā-kō'lē-ə) n. A decrease in or an absence of bile secretion. [New Latin : A⁻¹ + Greek kholē, bile; see ghel-² in Appendix.]

A·cho·ma·wi (ə-čhō'mə-wē') n. pl. Achomawi or A·cho·ma·wis. 1. a. A Native American people inhabiting northeast California. b. A member of this people. Also called Pit River 2. The Hokan language of the Achomawi.

a·chon·drite (ā-kōn'drīt') n. A stony meteorite that contains no chondrules. — a'chon·drit'ic (-drīt'ik) adj.

a·chon·dro·pla·sia (ā-kōn'drō-plā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. Improper development of cartilage at the ends of the long bones, resulting in a form of congenital dwarfism.

—a·chon'dro·plas'tic (-plās'tīk) adj.

ach·ro·mat·ic (ăk'rə-măt'īk) adj. 1. Designating color perceived to have zero saturation and therefore no hue, such as neutral grays, white, or black.

2. Refracting light without spectral color separation. 3. Biology. Difficult to stain with standard dyes. Used in reference to cells or tissues. 4. Music. Having only the diatonic tones of the scale. [From Greek akhrōmatos : a-; see A⁻¹ + khrōma, color.]

—ach'ro·mat'i·cal·ly adv. —a·chro'ma·tism (ā-krō'mə-tīz'əm), ach'ro·ma·tic'i·ty (ăk'rō-mə-tīs'ī-tē) n.

achromatic lens (ăk'rə-măt'īk lēnz) n. A combination of lenses made of different glass, used to produce images free of chromatic aberrations.

a·chro·ma·tin (ā-krō'mə-tīn) n. The part of a cell nucleus that remains less colored than the rest of the nucleus when stained or dyed. [ACHROMAT(IC) + -IN.]

—a·chro'ma·tin'ic adj.

a·chro·ma·tize (ā-krō'mə-tīz') v. tr. a·chro·ma·tized, a·chro·ma·tiz·ing, a·chro·ma·tiz·es. To rid of color; render achromatic.

a·chro·mic (ā-krō'mīk) adj. Having no color; colorless. [A⁻¹ + CHROM(O)- + -IC.]

ach·y (ā'kē) adj. ach·i·er, ach·i·est. Experiencing aches. —ach'i·ness n.

a·cic·u·la (ə-sīk'yə-lə) n. pl. a·cic·u·lae (-lē'). A slender, needlelike part or structure, such as the spines or bristles of some plants and animals and the crystals of certain minerals. [Latin, hairpin, diminutive of acus, needle. See ak- in Appendix.] —a·cic'u·late (-līt, -lāt'), a·cic'u·lat'ed (-lā'tīd) adj.

a·cic·u·lar (ə-sīk'yə-lər) adj. Having the shape of a needle: acicular crystals.

ac·id (ăs'īd) n. 1. Chemistry. a. Any of a large class of sour-tasting substances whose aqueous solutions are capable of turning blue litmus indicators red, of reacting with and dissolving certain metals to form salts, and of reacting with bases or alkalis to form salts. b. A substance that ionizes in solution to give the positive ion of the solvent. c. A substance capable of yielding hydrogen ions.

d. A proton donor. e. An electron acceptor. f. A molecule or ion that can combine with another by forming a covalent bond with two electrons of the other.

2. A substance having a sour taste. 3. The quality of being sarcastic, bitter, or scornful. 4. Slang. See LSD¹.

— adj. 1. Chemistry. a. Of or relating to an acid.

b. Having a high concentration of acid. 2. Having a sour taste. See Synonyms at sour. 3. Biting, sarcastic, or scornful: an acid wit; an acid tone of voice. [From Latin acidus, sour, from acēre, to be sour. See ak- in Appendix.] —ac'id·ly adv.

—ac'id·ness n.

ac·i·dan·the·ra (ăs'ī-dăn'thər-ə) n. Any of several ornamental African plants of the genus Acidanthera, having fibrous corms, swordlike leaves, and large, fragrant flowers with straight tubes. Also called peacock orchid [New Latin : Greek akis, akid-, needle; see ak- in Appendix + New Latin anthera; see ANTHER.]

ac·id·base equilibrium (ăs'ĭd-bās' ē'kwə-lĭb'rē-əm) n. The state that exists when acidic and basic ions in solution exactly neutralize each other.

acid-base indicator (ăs'ĭd-bās' ĭn'dĭ-kā'tər) n. A substance that indicates the degree of acidity or basicity of a solution through characteristic color changes.

ac·i·de·mi·a (ăs'ĭ-dē'mē-ə) n. Abnormal acidity of the blood.

ac·id·fast (ăs'ĭd-fäst') adj. Not decolorized by acid after staining, as bacteria that retain dye after an acid rinse. —ac'id·fast'ness n.

ac·id·head (ăs'ĭd-hĕd') n. Slang. A person who uses LSD.

a·cid·ic (ə-sĭd'ĭk) adj. 1. Acid. 2. Tending to form an acid.

a·cid·i·fy (ə-sĭd'ə-fĭ') v. tr. intr. a·cid·i·fied, a·cid·i·fy·ing, a·cid·i·fies. To make or become acid. —a·cid'i·fi'a·ble adj. —a·cid'i·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n. —a·cid'i·fi'er n.

ac·i·dim·e·ter (ăs'ĭ-dĭm'ĭ-tər) n. A hydrometer used to determine the specific gravity of acid solutions. —a·cid'i·met'ric (ə-sĭd'ə-mĕt'ĭk) adj.

—ac'i·dim'e·try n.

a·cid·i·ty (ə-sĭd'ĭ-tē) n. 1. The state, quality, or degree of being acid.

2. Hyperacidity.

ac·i·do·phil·ic (ăs'ĭ-dō-fĭl'ĭk) also ac·i·doph·i·lus (-dŏf'ə-ləs) adj. Microbiology. 1. Growing well in an acid medium: acidophilic bacteria. 2. Easily stained with acid dyes: an acidophilic cell. —a·cid'o·phil' (ə-sĭd'ə-fĭl'), a·cid'o·phile' (-fĭl') n.

acidophilus milk (ăs'ĭ-dō-fĭl'ĭs mĭlk) n. Milk fermented by bacterial cultures that thrive in dilute acid, often used to alter the bacterial flora of the gastrointestinal tract in the treatment of certain digestive disorders. [New Latin acidophilus, specific epithet of several species of bacteria : ACID + -philus, -philous.]

ac·i·do·sis (ăs'ĭ-dō'sis) n. An abnormal increase in the acidity of the body's fluids, caused either by accumulation of acids or by depletion of bicarbonates.

—ac'i·dot'ic (-dŏt'ĭk) adj.

acid precipitation (ăs'ĭd prĭ-sĭp'ĭ-tā'shən) n. Precipitation abnormally high in sulfuric and nitric acid content that is caused by atmospheric pollutants.

acid rain (ăs'ĭd rān) n. Acid precipitation falling as rain.

acid rock (ăs'ĭd rŏk) n. Music. Rock music having a prominent repetitive beat and lyrics that suggest psychedelic experiences.

acid test (ăs'ĭd tĕst) n. A decisive or critical test, as of worth or quality. [From the testing of gold in nitric acid.]

a·cid·u·late (ə-sĭj'ə-lāt') v. tr. intr. a·cid·u·lat·ed, a·cid·u·lat·ing, a·cid·u·lates. To make or become slightly acid. [ACIDUL(OUS) + -ATE¹.]

—a·cid'u·la'tion n.

a·cid·u·lous (ə-sīj'ə-ləs) adj. Slightly sour in taste or in manner. See Synonyms at sour. [From Latin acidulus, diminutive of acidus, sour. See ACID.]

ac·i·dur·i·a (äs'ī-dōōr'ē-ə, -dyōōr'-) n. A condition marked by the presence of acid in the urine.

acid washing (äs'id wōsh'ing) n. A washing process in which stones soaked in chlorine acid are used to soften and bleach fabric, especially denim garments.

—ac'id-washed' (äs'id-wōsht', -wōsht') adj.

ac·i·nar (äs'ī-nər, -när') adj. Of or relating to an acinus.

ac·i·nus (äs'ə-nəs) n. pl. ac·i·ni (-nī'). Anatomy. One of the small saclike dilations composing a compound gland. [Latin, berry.] —a·cin'ic (ə-sīn'ik), ac'i·nous adj.

ack. abbr. Acknowledge; acknowledgment.

ack-ack (äk'äk') n. Slang. 1. An antiaircraft gun. 2. Antiaircraft fire. [British telephone code for AA, abbreviation for ANTIAIRCRAFT.]

ack-ee (äk'ē, ə-kē') n. Variant of akee.

ac·knowl·edge (äk-nōl'ij) v. tr. ac·knowl·edged, ac·knowl·edg·ing, ac·knowl·edg·es. Abbr. ack. 1. a. To admit the existence, reality, or truth of.

b. To recognize as being valid or having force or power. 2. a. To express recognition of: acknowledge a friend's smile. b. To express thanks or gratitude for. 3. To report the receipt of. 4. Law. To accept or certify as legally binding: acknowledge a deed. [Probably blend of Middle English knowlechen, to acknowledge (from knownen, to know); see KNOW, Middle English aknouen, to recognize (from Old English oncnāwan, to know : on-, on; see on + cnāwan, to know); see KNOW.]

—ac·knowl'edge·a·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: acknowledge, admit, own, avow, confess, concede. These verbs mean to make a disclosure, usually with reluctance or under pressure. To acknowledge is to accept responsibility for something one makes known: He acknowledged that the purchase had been a mistake. Admit usually implies marked reluctance in acknowledging one's acts or accepting a different point of view: "There are some faults which men readily admit, but others not so readily" (Epictetus). Own stresses personal acceptance of and responsibility for one's thoughts or deeds: She owned that she had fears for the child's safety. Avow, a strong term, means to assert openly and boldly: "Many a man thinks, what he is ashamed to avow" (Samuel Johnson). Confess usually emphasizes disclosure of something damaging or inconvenient to oneself: I have to confess that I lied to you. To concede is to admit something, such as the validity of an argument, often against one's will: The lawyer refused to concede that the two cases were at all similar.

ac·knowl·edged (äk-nōl'ijd) adj. Commonly accepted or recognized.

ac·knowl·edg·ment or ac·knowl·edge·ment (äk-nöl'ij-mənt) n. Abbr.

ack. 1. The act of admitting or owning to something. 2. Recognition of another's existence, validity, authority, or right. 3. An answer or response in return for something done. 4. An expression of thanks or a token of appreciation. 5. A formal declaration made to authoritative witnesses to ensure legal validity.

a·clin·ic line (ā-klīn'ik līn) n. See magnetic equator. [From Greek aklinēs, not inclining to either side : a-, a-; see A⁻¹ + klinein, to lean; see klei- in Appendix.]

ACLU abbr. American Civil Liberties Union.

ac·me (äk'mē) n. The highest point, as of perfection. See Synonyms at summit. [Greek akmē. See ak- in Appendix.]

ac·ne (äk'nē) n. An inflammatory disease of the sebaceous glands and hair follicles of the skin that is marked by the eruption of pimples or pustules, especially on the face. [New Latin, probably from misreading of Greek akmē, facial eruption, point. See ACME.] —ac'ned adj.

acne rosacea (äk'nē rō-zā'shē-ə) n. See rosacea.

a·cock (ə-kök') adv. & adj. In a cocked position.

a·coe·lo·mate (ə-sē'lə-māt') n. An animal that lacks a coelom. Acoelomates, which include the flatworm, fluke, tapeworm, and ribbonworm, exhibit bilateral symmetry and possess one internal space, the digestive cavity. —a·coe'lo·mate (-lə-mīt) adj.

a·coe·lous (ā-sē'ləs) adj. Lacking a true body cavity or digestive tract. [A⁻¹ + COEL(OM) + -OUS.]

ac·o·lyte (äk'ə-līt') n. 1. One who assists the celebrant in the performance of liturgical rites. 2. A devoted follower or attendant. [Middle English acolit, from Old French, from Medieval Latin acolytus, from Greek akolouthos, attendant. See ANACOLUTHON.]

A·co·ma¹ (äk'ə-mə, -mô', ä'kə-) n. pl. Acoma or A·co·mas. 1. a. A Pueblo people, the founders and inhabitants of Acoma. b. A member of this people. 2. The Keresan language of the Acoma.

A·co·ma² (äk'ə-mə, -mô', ä'kə-) A pueblo of west-central New Mexico west of Albuquerque. Founded c. 1100-1250, it is regarded as the oldest continuously inhabited community in the United States. Population, 975.

A·con·ca·gua (äk'ən-kä'gwə, ä'kən-) A mountain, 7,025.4 m (23,034 ft) high, in the Andes of western Argentina near the Chilean border. The highest peak of the Western Hemisphere, it was first scaled in 1897.

ac·o·nite (äk'ə-nīt') n. 1. Any of various, usually poisonous perennial herbs of the genus Aconitum, having tuberous roots, palmately lobed leaves, blue or white flowers with large hoodlike upper sepals, and an aggregate of follicles. 2. The dried poisonous roots of these plants, used as a source of drugs. Also called monkshood [French aconit, from Latin aconitum, from Greek akoniton.]

A·çO-res (ä-sôr'ësh) See Azores.

a·corn (ä'kôrn', ä'kærn) n. The fruit of an oak, consisting of a single-seeded, thick-walled nut set in a woody, cuplike base. [Middle English akorn, from Old English æcern.]

WORD HISTORY: A thoughtful glance at the word acorn might produce the surmise that it is made up of oak and corn, especially if we think of corn in its sense of “a kernel or seed of a plant,” as in peppercorn. The fact that others thought the word was so constituted partly accounts for the present form acorn. Here we see the workings of the process of linguistic change known as folk etymology, an alteration in form of a word or phrase so that it resembles a more familiar term mistakenly regarded as analogous. Acorn actually goes back to Old English æcern, “acorn,” which in turn goes back to the Indo-European root ōg-, meaning “fruit, berry.”

acorn squash (ä'kôrn' skwösh) n. A type of winter squash shaped somewhat like an acorn and having longitudinal ridges, a variously colored rind, and yellow to orange flesh.

acorn worm (ä'kôrn' wûrn) n. Any of a class (Enteropneusta) of hemichordate, wormlike animals that inhabit shallow burrows in mud or sand flats of intertidal zones and are equipped with an acornlike proboscis used for digging and collecting food.

a·cous·tic (ə-kōō'stīk) adj. also a·cous·ti·cal (-stī-kəl) 1. Of or relating to sound, the sense of hearing, or the science of sound. 2. Designed to carry sound or to aid in hearing. 3. Music. a. Of, relating to, or being an instrument that does not feature electronically modified sound: an acoustic guitar; an acoustic bass.

b. Being a performance that features such instruments: opened the show with an acoustic set. — n. Music. An acoustic instrument. [Greek akoustikos, pertaining to hearing, from akouein, to hear. See keu- in Appendix.] — a·cous'ti·cal·ly adv.

ac·ous·ti·cian (äk'ōō-stīsh'ən) n. A specialist in acoustics.

acoustic nerve (ə-kōō'stīk nûrv) n. Either of the eighth pair of cranial nerves that divides to form the cochlear nerve and the vestibular nerve. Also called auditory nerve a·cous·tics (ə-kōō'stīks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The scientific study of sound, especially of its generation, transmission, and reception. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The total effect of sound, especially as produced in an enclosed space.

a·cous·to·e·lec·tric (ə-kōō'stō-ī-lëk'trīk) adj. Of or relating to electroacoustics. [ACOUST(IC) + ELECTRIC.] — a·cous'to·e·lec'tri·cal·ly adv.

a·cous·to·op·tics (ə-kōō'stō-öp'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of the interaction of acoustic and optical phenomena. [ACOUST(IC) + OPTICS.]

—a·cous'to-op'ti-cal adj. —a·cous'to-op'ti-cal-ly adv.

ACP abbr. American College of Physicians.

acpt. abbr. Acceptance.

ac·quaint (ə-kwānt') v. tr. ac·quaint·ed, ac·quaint·ing, ac·quaints.

1. a. To cause to come to know personally: Let me acquaint you with my family.

b. To make familiar: acquainted myself with the controls. 2. To inform: Please acquaint us with your plans. [Middle English aqueinten, from Old French acoitier, from Medieval Latin adcognitāre, from Latin accognitus, past participle of accognoscere, to know perfectly : ad-, intensive pref.; see AD- + cognoscere, to know; see COGNITION.]

ac·quain·tance (ə-kwān'təns) n. 1. Knowledge of a person acquired by a relationship less intimate than friendship. 2. A person whom one knows.

3. Knowledge or information about something or someone.

—ac·quain'tance·ship' n.

ac·quaint·ed (ə-kwān'tīd) adj. 1. Known by or familiar with another.

2. Informed or familiar: Are you fully acquainted with the facts?

ac·qui·esce (ăk'wē-ēs') v. intr. ac·qui·esced, ac·qui·esc·ing, ac·qui·esc·es.

To consent or comply passively or without protest. See Synonyms at assent.

[Latin acquiēscere : ad-, ad- + quiēscere, to rest (from quiēs, rest); see k^weiə- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: When acquiesce takes a preposition, it is usually used with in (acquiesced in the ruling) but sometimes with to (acquiesced to her parents' wishes). Acquiesced with is obsolete.

ac·qui·es·cence (ăk'wē-ēs'əns) n. 1. Passive assent or agreement without protest. 2. The state of being acquiescent.

ac·qui·es·cent (ăk'wē-ēs'ənt) adj. Disposed or willing to acquiesce. See Synonyms at obedient. —ac'qui·es'cent-ly adv.

ac·quire (ə-kwīr') v. tr. ac·quired, ac·quir·ing, ac·quires. 1. To gain possession of: acquire 100 shares of stock. 2. To get by one's own efforts: acquire proficiency in math. 3. Aerospace. To locate (a satellite, for example) with a detector, especially radar. [Middle English acquere, from Old French aquerre, from Latin acquīrere, to add to : ad-, ad- + quaerere, to seek, get.] —ac·quir'a·ble adj.

—ac·quir'er n.

ac·quired antibody (ə-kwīrd' ən'tī-bōd'ē) n. An antibody produced by an immune response, in contrast to one occurring naturally in an individual.

acquired character (ə-kwīrd' kār'ək-tər) n. A nonhereditary change of function or structure in a plant or animal made in response to the environment. Also called acquired characteristic acquired immune deficiency syndrome (ə-kwīrd' ĭ-myoōn' dī-fīsh'ən-sē sīn'drōm') n. AIDS.

acquired immunity (ə-kwīrd' ĭ-myōō'nĭ-tē) n. Immunity obtained either from the development of antibodies in response to exposure to an antigen, as from vaccination or an attack of an infectious disease, or from the transmission of antibodies, as from mother to fetus through the placenta or the injection of antiserum.

ac·quire·ment (ə-kwīr'mənt) n. 1. The act of acquiring. 2. An attainment, such as a skill or social accomplishment.

ac·qui·si·tion (āk'wĭ-zīsh'ən) n. 1. The act of acquiring. 2. Something acquired, especially an addition to an established category or group. 3. Aerospace. The process of locating a satellite, guided missile, or moving target so that its track or orbit can be determined. [Middle English adquisicioun, attainment, from Latin acquisitiō, acquisitiōn-, from acquisitus, past participle of acquĭrere, to acquire. See ACQUIRE.]

ac·quis·i·tive (ə-kwĭz'ĭ-tĭv) adj. 1. Characterized by a strong desire to gain and possess. 2. Tending to acquire and retain ideas or information: an acquisitive mind. —ac·quis·i·tive·ly adv. —ac·quis·i·tive·ness n. —ac·quis·i·tor (-tər) n.

ac·quit (ə-kwĭt') v. tr. ac·quit·ted, ac·quit·ting, ac·quits. 1. Law. To free or clear from a charge or accusation. 2. To release or discharge from a duty. 3. To conduct (oneself) in a specified manner. 4. Obsolete. To repay. [Middle English aquiten, from Old French aquiter: a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + quite, free, clear (from Medieval Latin quittus, variant of Latin quiētus, past participle of quiescere, to rest); see QUIET.] —ac·quit·ter n.

ac·quit·tal (ə-kwĭt'tl) n. Law. 1. Judgment, as by a jury or judge, that a defendant is not guilty of a crime as charged. 2. The state of being found or proved not guilty.

ac·quit·tance (ə-kwĭt'tns) n. A written release from an obligation, specifically a receipt indicating payment in full.

acr- pref. Variant of acro-.

a·cre (ā'kər) n. Abbr. A, a., A., ac. 1. A unit of area in the U.S. Customary System, used in land and sea floor measurement and equal to 160 square rods, 4,840 square yards, or 43,560 square feet. See Table at measurement. 2. acres. Property in the form of land; estate. 3. Often acres. A wide expanse, as of land or other matter: "Everything was streaky pink marble and acres of textureless carpeting" (Anne Tyler). 4. Archaic. A field or plot of arable land. [Middle English āker, field, acre, from Old English æcer. See agro- in Appendix.]

A·cre (ä'krə, ä'kər) also Ak·ko (ä-kō', ä'kō) A port of northern Israel on the Bay of Haifa. During the Crusades it changed hands many times between Christians and Muslims. Acre was ceded to the Arabs in the United Nations partition of Palestine in 1948 but was captured by Israel shortly thereafter. Population, 37,700.

a·cre·age (ä'kər-ij, ä'krīj) n. Abbr. a. Area of land measured in acres.

a·cre·foot (ä'kər-fōōt') n. The volume of water, 43,560 cubic feet, that will cover an area of one acre to a depth of one foot.

a·cre·inch (ä'kər-īnch') n. One twelfth of an acre-foot, equal to 3,630 cubic feet.

ac·rid (äk'rid) adj. 1. Unpleasantly sharp, pungent, or bitter to the taste or smell. See Synonyms at bitter. 2. Caustic in language or tone. [From Latin acer, sharp (probably modeled on ACID). See ak- in Appendix.] —a·crid'·i·ty (ə-krīd'ī-tē), ac'rid·ness n. —ac'rid·ly adv.

ac·ri·dine (äk'ri-dēn') n. A coal tar derivative, C₁₃H₉N, that has a strongly irritating odor and is used in the manufacture of dyes and synthetics.

ac·ri·fla·vine (äk'rə-flā'vēn', -vīn) n. A brown or orange powder, C₁₄H₁₄N₃Cl, derived from acridine and used as a topical antiseptic. [ACRI(DINE) + FLAVIN.]

ac·ri·mo·ni·ous (äk'rə-mō'nē-əs) adj. Bitter and sharp in language or tone; rancorous: an acrimonious on-air exchange between the candidate and the anchorperson. —ac'ri·mo'ni·ous·ly adv. —ac'ri·mo'ni·ous·ness n.

ac·ri·mo·ny (äk'rə-mō'nē) n. Bitter, sharp, ill-natured animosity, especially as it is exhibited in speech or behavior. [Latin acrimonia, sharpness, from acer, sharp. See ak- in Appendix.]

A·cris·i·us (ə-krīz'ē-əs) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Argos and father of Danaë who was killed by his grandson Perseus.

acro- or acr- pref. 1. a. Top; summit: acropetal. b. Height: acrophobia.

2. a. Tip; beginning: acronym. b. Extremity of the body: acromegaly. [From Greek akros, extreme. See ak- in Appendix.]

ac·ro·bat (äk'rə-bät') n. 1. One who is skilled in feats of balance and agility in gymnastics. 2. One who is facile at changing one's viewpoint or position on short notice in response to the circumstances. [French acrobate, from Greek akrobatēs, from akrobatein, to walk on tiptoe : akros, high; see ACRO- + bainein, bat-, to walk; see g^wā- in Appendix.] —ac'ro·bat'ic adj. —ac'ro·bat'·i·cal·ly adv.

ac·ro·bat·ics (äk'rə-bät'īks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. a. The gymnastic moves of an acrobat. b. The art, skill, or performance of an acrobat. 2. A display of spectacular virtuosic skill and agility: vocal acrobatics.

ac·ro·cen·tric (äk'rō-sēn'trīk) adj. Having the centromere located near one end of the chromosome so that one chromosomal arm is long and the other is short. —ac'ro·cen'tric n.

ac·ro·ceph·a·ly (ăk' rə-sĕf' ə-lē) n. See oxycephaly. —ac'ro·ce·phal'ic (-ə-fäl'ik) adj.

ac·ro·dont (ăk' rə-dönt') adj. Having teeth attached to the edge of the jawbone without sockets. [ACR(O)- + -ODONT.] —ac'ro·dont' n.

ac·ro·lect (ăk' rə-lĕct') n. Linguistics. The variety of language in an area undergoing decreolization that is closest to the standard variety of a major international language, such as standard Jamaican English. [ACRO- + (DIA)LECT.]

a·cro·le·in (ə-krō'lē-ĭn) n. A colorless, flammable, poisonous liquid aldehyde, CH₂CHCHO, having an acrid odor and vapors irritating to the eyes. [ACR(ID) + OLEIN.]

ac·ro·meg·a·ly (ăk' rō-mĕg' ə-lē) n. A chronic disease of adults marked by enlargement of the bones of the extremities, face, and jaw that is caused by over-activity of the pituitary gland. [French acromégalie : Greek akron, extremity; see ACRO- + Greek megas, megal-, big; see meg- in Appendix.] —ac'ro·me·gal'ic (-mĭ-gäl'ik) adj. & n.

ac·ro·mel·ic (ăk' rō-mĕl'ik) adj. Of or relating to the end of the extremities. [ACRO- + Greek melos, limb.]

a·cro·mi·on (ə-krō'mē-ən) n. The outer end of the scapula to which the collar-bone is attached. [New Latin acrōmion, from Greek akrōmion : akros, extreme; see ak- in Appendix + ōmion, diminutive of ōmos, shoulder.]

ac·ro·nym (ăk' rə-nĭm') n. A word formed from the initial letters of a name, such as WAC for Women's Army Corps, or by combining initial letters or parts of a series of words, such as radar for radio detecting and ranging. [ACR(O)- + -ONYM.] —ac'ro·nym'ic, a·cron'y·mous (ə-krōn' ə-məs) adj.

a·crop·e·tal (ə-kröp' i-tl) adj. Developing or maturing from the base toward the apex, as in those plant organs in which the younger tissues are nearer the apex. —a·crop'e·tal·ly adv.

ac·ro·pho·bi·a (ăk' rə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of high places.

a·crop·o·lis (ə-kröp' ə-lĭs) n. The fortified height or citadel of an ancient Greek city. [Greek akropolis : akron, top; see ACRO- + polis, city; see pelə⁻³ in Appendix.]

ac·ro·some (ăk' rə-sōm') n. A caplike structure at the anterior end of a spermatozoon that produces enzymes aiding in egg penetration. [ACRO- + -SOME³.] —ac'ro·so'mal (-sō'məl) adj.

a·cross (ə-krōs', ə-krōs') prep. 1. On, at, or from the other side of: across the street. 2. So as to cross; through: drew lines across the paper. 3. From one side of to the other: a bridge across a river. 4. Into contact with: came across my old roommate. — adv. 1. From one side to the other: The footbridge swayed when I ran across. 2. On or to the opposite side: We came across by ferry. 3. Crosswise; crossed. 4. In such a manner as to be comprehensible, acceptable, or successful: put our idea across; get a message across. — adj. Being in a crossed position:

seated with arms across. [Middle English acrois, from Anglo-Norman an croiz : an, in (from Latin in); see IN-² + croiz, cross (from Latin crux); see CROSS.]

a·cross-the-board (ə-krôs'thə-bôrd', -bôrd', ə-krôs'-) adj. 1. Including all categories or members, especially in an occupation or industry: an across-the-board pay hike; an across-the-board policy decision. 2. Sports & Games. Of, relating to, or being a racing wager whereby equal amounts are bet on the same contestant to win, place, or show.

a·cros·tic (ə-krô'stĭk, ə-krôs'tĭk) n. 1. A poem or series of lines in which certain letters, usually the first in each line, form a name, motto, or message when read in sequence. 2. See word square. [French acrostiche, from Old French, from Greek akrostikhis : akron, head, end; see ACRO- + stikhos, line; see steigh- in Appendix.] —a·cros'tic adj. —a·cros'ti-cal-ly adv.

WORD HISTORY: An acrostic gives the reader two for one, and the etymology of the word emphasizes one of these two. Our word goes back to the Greek word akrostikhis, “acrostic,” which is a combination of Greek akron, “head,” and stikhos, “row, line of verse.” Literally akrostikhis means “the line at the head,” emphasizing the fact that an acrostic has in addition to horizontal rows a vertical row formed of the letters at the “head” or start of each line. In ancient manuscripts, in which a line of verse did not necessarily correspond to a line of text, an acrostic would have looked particularly striking, with each of its lines standing by itself and beginning with a capital letter. Our word for this type of composition is first found in English in the 16th century.

ACRR abbr. American Council on Race Relations.

ac·ry·late resin (ăk'rə-lāt' rĕz'ĭn) n. Any of a class of acrylic resins used in emulsion paints, adhesives, plastics, and textile and paper finishes. Also called acrylate a·cryl·ic (ə-krĭl'ĭk) n. 1. An acrylic resin. 2. A paint containing acrylic resin. 3. A painting done in acrylic resin. 4. An acrylic fiber. [ACR(OLEIN) + -YL + -IC.] —a·cryl'ic adj. acrylic acid (ə-krĭl'ĭk ăs'ĭd) n. An easily polymerized, colorless, corrosive liquid, H₂C:CHCOOH, used as a monomer for acrylate resins.

acrylic fiber (ə-krĭl'ĭk fĭ'bər) n. Any of numerous synthetic fibers polymerized from acrylonitrile.

acrylic resin (ə-krĭl'ĭk rĕz'ĭn) n. Any of numerous thermoplastic or thermosetting polymers or copolymers of acrylic acid, methacrylic acid, esters of these acids, or acrylonitrile, used to produce paints, synthetic rubbers, and lightweight plastics.

ac·ry·lo·ni·trile (ăk'rə-lō-nī'trəl, -trēl, -trīl) n. A colorless, liquid organic compound, H₂C:CHCN, used in the manufacture of acrylic rubber and fibers.

[ACRYL(IC RESIN) + NITRILE.]

ACS abbr. 1. American Chemical Society. 2. American College of Surgeons.

act (ăkt) n. 1. The process of doing or performing something: the act of thinking. 2. Something done or performed; a deed: a charitable act. 3. A decisional product, such as a statute, decree, or enactment, delivered by a legislative or a judicial body. 4. A formal written record of proceedings or transactions. 5. a. One of the major divisions of a play or an opera. b. A theatrical performance that forms part of a longer presentation: a juggling act. 6. A manifestation of intentional or unintentional insincerity; a pose: put on an act. — v. act-ed, act-ing, acts. — v. tr. 1. To play the part of; assume the dramatic role of: She plans to act Lady Macbeth in summer stock. 2. To perform (a role) on the stage: act the part of the villain. 3. a. To behave like or pose as; impersonate: Don't act the fool. b. To behave in a manner suitable for: Act your age. — v. intr. 1. To behave or comport oneself: She acts like a born leader. 2. To perform in a dramatic role or roles. 3. To be suitable for theatrical performance: This scene acts well. 4. To behave affectedly or unnaturally; pretend. 5. To appear or seem to be: The dog acted ferocious. 6. To carry out an action: We acted immediately. The governor has not yet acted on the bill. 7. To operate or function in a specific way: His mind acts quickly. 8. To serve or function as a substitute for another: A coin can act as a screwdriver. 9. To produce an effect: waited five minutes for the anesthetic to act. — phrasal verbs. act out. 1. a. To perform in or as if in a play; dramatize: act out a story. b. To realize in action: wanted to act out his theory. 2. To express (unconscious impulses, for example) in an overt manner without awareness or understanding. act up. 3. To misbehave. 4. To malfunction. 5. Informal. To become active or troublesome after a period of quiescence: My left knee acts up in damp weather. Her arthritis is acting up again. — idioms. be in on the act. To be included in an activity. clean up (one's) act. Slang. To improve one's behavior or performance. get into the act. To insert oneself into an ongoing activity, project, or situation. get (one's) act together. Slang. To get organized. [Middle English, from Old French acte, from Latin actus, a doing, and actum, a thing done both from agere, act-, to drive, do. See ag- in Appendix.] — ac'ta·bil'i·ty n. — act'a·ble adj.

USAGE NOTE: The words act and action both mean “a deed” and “the process of doing.” However, other senses of act, such as “a decision made by a legislative body” and of action, such as “habitual or vigorous activity” show that act tends to refer to a deed while action tends to refer to the process of doing. The demands of meaning or idiom will often require one word or the other: class act and class action, for example, are not interchangeable. In cases where either can be used, either is acceptable: my act (or action) was premature.

ACT abbr. American College Test.

A.C.T. abbr. Australian Capital Territory.

Ac-tae-on (ăk-tē'ən) n. Greek Mythology. A young hunter who, having inadvertently observed Artemis while she was bathing, was turned by her into a stag and killed by his own dogs.

actg. abbr. Acting.

ACTH (ā'sē'tē-āch') n. A hormone produced by the anterior lobe of the pituitary gland that stimulates the secretion of cortisone and other hormones by the adrenal cortex. Also called adrenocorticotropin, corticotropin.

[A(DRENO)C(ORTICO)T(ROPIC)H(ORMONE).]

ac-tin (ăk'tīn) n. A protein found in muscle that together with myosin functions in muscle contraction. [Latin āctus, motion (from agere, āct-, to drive, do); see ACT + -IN.]

actin- pref. Variant of actino-.

ac-ti-nal (ăk'tī-nəl, ăk-tī'-) adj. Of, relating to, or located on the part of a radially symmetric animal from which the tentacles radiate or the side where the oral area is found. —ac'ti-nal-ly adv.

act-ing (ăk'tīng) adj. 1. Abbr. a., actg. Temporarily assuming the duties or authority of another. See Synonyms at temporary. 2. a. That contains directions for use in a dramatic performance: the play's acting text. b. That is appropriate for dramatic performance: an acting comedy. — n. 1. The occupation of an actor or actress. 2. Performance as an actor or actress. 3. False behavior; pretense.

ac-tin-i-a (ăk-tīn'ē-ə) also ac-tin-i-an (-ən) *n. pl. ac-tin-i-ae (-ē-ē') also ac-tin-i-ans. A sea anemone or a related animal. [New Latin Actinia, type genus, from Greek aktis, aktin-, ray. See ACTINO-.]*

ac-tin-ic (ăk-tīn'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or exhibiting actinism. —ac-tin'i-cal-ly adv.

actinic ray (ăk-tīn'īk rā) n. Photochemically active radiation, as of the sun.

ac-ti-nide (ăk'tə-nīd') n. Any of a series of chemically similar, radioactive elements with atomic numbers ranging from 89 (actinium) through 103 (lawrencium).

ac-ti-nism (ăk'tə-nīz'əm) n. The intrinsic property in radiation that produces photochemical activity.

ac-tin-i-um (ăk-tīn'ē-əm) n. Symbol Ac A radioactive element found in uranium ores, used in equilibrium with its decay products as a source of alpha rays. Its longest lived isotope is Ac 227 with a half-life of 21.7 years. Atomic number 89; melting point 1,050°C; boiling point (estimated) 3,200°C; specific gravity (calculated) 10.07; valence 3.

actino- or actin- pref. 1. Radial in form: actinoid. 2. Actinic radiation: actinometer. [From Greek aktis, aktin-, ray.]

ac-ti-noid (ăk'tə-noid') adj. Having a radial form, as a starfish.

ac-tin·o·lite (ăk-tĭn'ə-līt') n. A greenish variety of amphibole.

ac-ti-no-mere (ăk-tĭn'ə-mîr') n. One of the segments forming the body of a radially symmetric animal.

ac-ti-nom·e-ter (ăk'tə-nŏm'ī-tər) n. Any of several radiometric instruments, such as a pyrheliometer, used chiefly for meteorological measurements of terrestrial and solar radiation. —ac'ti-no-met'ric (-nŏ-mĕt'rik), ac'ti-no-met'ri-cal adj. —ac'ti-nom'e-try n.

ac-ti-no-mor-phic (ăk'tə-nŏ-mŏr'fĭk) also ac-ti-no-mor-phous (-fəs) adj.

Of or relating to a flower that can be divided into equal halves along any diameter, such as the flowers of the rose or tulip. —ac'ti-no-mor'phy n.

ac-ti-no-my-ces (ăk'tə-nŏ-mī'sēz') n. pl. actinomyces. Any of various filamentous, mostly anaerobic microorganisms of the genus Actinomyces, which includes the causative agents of actinomycosis. [New Latin, genus name :

ACTINO- + Greek mukēs, fungus.] —ac'ti-no-my-ce'tal (-mī-sĕt'l) adj.

ac-ti-no-my-cete (ăk'tə-nŏ-mī'sĕt', -mī-sĕt') n. Any of various filamentous or rod-shaped, often pathogenic microorganisms of the order Actinomycetales that are found in soil and resemble bacteria and fungi. —ac'ti-no-my'ce-tous adj.

ac-ti-no-my-cin (ăk'tə-nŏ-mī'sĭn) n. Any of various red, often toxic, polypeptide antibiotics obtained from soil bacteria.

actinomycin D (ăk'tə-nŏ-mī'sĭn dĕ) n. See dactinomycin.

ac-ti-no-my-co-sis (ăk'tə-nŏ-mī-kŏ'sĭs) n. An inflammatory disease of cattle, hogs, and sometimes human beings, caused by microorganisms of the genus Actinomyces and characterized by lumpy tumors of the mouth, neck, chest, and abdomen. Also called lumpy jaw —ac'ti-no-my-cot'ic (-kŏt'ik) adj.

ac-ti-non (ăk'tə-nŏn') n. A radioactive, inert, gaseous isotope of radon, with a half-life of 3.92 seconds. [ACTIN(IUM) + -ON².]

ac-ti-no-u-ra-ni-um (ăk'tə-nŏ-yŏŏ-rā'nĕ-əm) n. The isotope of uranium with mass number 235, fissionable with slow neutrons. [ACTIN(IUM) + URANIUM.]

ac-tion (ăk'shən) n. 1. The state or process of acting or doing. 2. A deed. See Usage Note at act. 3. A movement or a series of movements. 4. Manner of movement: a horse with good action; a gearshift with smooth action. 5. Habitual or vigorous activity; energy: a woman of action. 6. Often actions. Behavior or conduct. 7. a. The operating parts of a mechanism. b. The manner in which such parts operate. 8. A change that occurs in the body or in a bodily organ as a result of its functioning. 9. A physical change, as in position, mass, or energy, that an object or a system undergoes. 10. The series of events and episodes that form the plot of a story or play. 11. The appearance of animation of a figure in painting or sculpture. 12. Law. A judicial proceeding whose purpose is to obtain relief at the hands of a court. 13. Armed encounter; combat: killed in action. 14. The most important or exciting work or activity in a specific field or area: always heads for where the action is. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an action film; action stories.

ac·tion·a·ble (ăk'shə-nə-bəl) adj. Law. Giving cause for legal action: an actionable statement. — ac'tion·a·bly adv.

action painting (ăk'shən pān'tɪŋ) n. A style of abstract painting that uses techniques such as the dribbling or splashing of paint to achieve a spontaneous effect. — action painter n.

action potential (ăk'shən pə-těn'shəl) n. A momentary change in electrical potential on the surface of a nerve or muscle cell that takes place when it is stimulated, especially by the transmission of a nerve impulse: Stimulating a nerve fiber causes an action potential to spread across the nerve cell, making it contract.

Ac·ti·um (ăk'shē-əm, -tē-) A promontory and ancient town of western Greece. In 31 B.C. it was the site of Octavian's victory over Mark Antony and Cleopatra. The battle established Octavian (later Augustus) as the ruler of Rome.

ac·ti·vate (ăk'tə-vāt') v. ac·ti·vat·ed, ac·ti·vat·ing, ac·ti·vates. — v. tr.

1. To set in motion; make active or more active. 2. To organize or create (a military unit, for example): activate the National Guard. 3. To treat (sewage) with aeration and bacteria to aid decomposition. 4. Chemistry. To accelerate a reaction in, as by heat. 5. Physics. To make (a substance) radioactive. 6. Biology. To convert (certain biological compounds) into biologically active derivatives.

— ac'ti·va'tion n. — ac'ti·va'tor n.

ac·ti·vat·ed charcoal (ăk'tə-vā'tīd chār'kōl') n. Highly absorbent carbon obtained by heating granulated charcoal to exhaust contained gases, resulting in a highly porous form with a very large surface area. It is used primarily for purifying gases by adsorption, solvent recovery, or deodorization and as an antidote to certain poisons. Also called activated carbon ac·ti·va'tion analysis (ăk'tə-vā'shən ə-nāl'i-sis) n. A method for analyzing a material for its component chemical elements by bombarding it with nuclear particles or gamma rays and identifying the resultant radiations.

ac·tive (ăk'tīv) adj. 1. Being in physical motion: active fish in the aquarium.

2. Functioning or capable of functioning. 3. Disposed to take action or effectuate change: a director who takes active interest in corporate operations.

4. a. Engaged in activity; participating: an active member of a club. b. Busy: active stock and bond markets. c. Being in continuous use or operation: an active brokerage account. 5. Being in a state of action; not passive or quiescent: an active volcano. 6. a. Characterized by energetic action or activity; lively.

b. Requiring physical exertion and energy: Tennis is an active sport.

7. Grammar. a. Indicating that the subject of the sentence is performing or causing the action expressed by the verb. Used of a verb form or voice. b. Expressing action rather than a state of being. Used of verbs such as run, speak, and move.

8. Producing profit, interest, or dividends: active accounts; active stocks. 9. Being on full military duty and receiving full pay. 10. Music. Suggesting that something follows: active tones. — n. 1. Grammar. a. The active voice. b. A construction or form in the active voice. 2. A participating member of an organization: union actives. [Middle English actif, from Old French, from Latin āctīvus, from agere, āct-, to drive, do. See ACT.] —ac'tive·ly adv. —ac'tive·ness n.

SYNONYMS: active, energetic, dynamic, vigorous, lively. These adjectives are compared as they mean engaged in activity. Active, the most neutral, merely means being in a state of action as opposed to being passive or quiescent: an active toddler; an active imagination; saw active service in the army. Energetic suggests sustained enthusiastic action with unflinching vitality: an energetic fund raiser for the college. Dynamic connotes energy and forcefulness that is often inspiring to others: A dynamic speaker, the senator often persuades her colleagues to change their votes. Vigorous implies healthy strength and robustness: “a vigorous crusader against apartheid and government press restrictions” (Christian Science Monitor). Lively suggests brisk alertness, animation, and energy: I take a lively interest in politics.

active immunity (ăk'tiv ĭ-myōō'nĭ-tē) n. Immunity resulting from the development of antibodies in response to the presence of an antigen, as from vaccination or exposure to an infectious disease.

active site (ăk'tiv sīt) n. The part of an enzyme at which catalysis of the substrate occurs.

active transport (ăk'tiv trāns-pōrt') n. The movement of a chemical substance through a gradient of concentration or electrical potential in the direction opposite to normal diffusion, requiring the expenditure of energy: active transport across a cell membrane.

ac-tiv-ism (ăk'tə-vĭz'əm) n. The theory, doctrine, or practice of assertive, often militant action, such as mass demonstrations or strikes, used as a means of opposing or supporting a controversial issue, entity, or person. —ac-tiv-ist'ic adj.

ac-tiv-ist (ăk'tə-vĭst) n. A proponent or practitioner of activism: political activists. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or engaged in activism. 2. Of, relating to, or being an activist.

ac-tiv-i-ty (ăk-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ac-tiv-i-ties. 1. The state of being active. 2. Energetic action or movement; liveliness. 3. a. A specified pursuit in which a person partakes. b. An educational process or procedure intended to stimulate learning through actual experience. 4. The intensity of a radioactive source.

5. The ability to take part in a chemical reaction. 6. A physiological process: respiratory activity.

act of God (äkt üv göd) n. pl. acts of God. An unusual, extraordinary, or unforeseeable manifestation of the forces of nature beyond the powers of human intervention, such as a tornado or a bolt of lightning.

ac-to-my-o-sin (äk'tə-mī'ə-sin) n. The system of actin and myosin that, with other substances, constitutes muscle fiber and is responsible for muscular contraction. [ACT(IN) + MYOSIN.]

Ac-ton (äk'tən) A town of northeast Massachusetts, a residential and manufacturing suburb of Boston. Population, 17,872.

Ac-ton (äk'tən), First Baron Title of John Emerich Edward Dalberg Acton. 1834-1902. British historian who led English Roman Catholics in their opposition to the doctrine of papal infallibility.

ac-tor (äk'tər) n. 1. A theatrical performer. 2. One who takes part; a participant: "France, Britain... and any other external actors now involved... in the affairs of the continent" (Helen Kitchen). 3. Law. One, such as the manager of a business, who acts for another. [Middle English actour, doer, probably from Latin āctor, doer, from agere, āct-, to drive, do. See ACT.]

ac-tress (äk'trīs) n. A woman who is an actor. See Usage Note at -ess.

Acts of the Apostles (äkts üv thē ə-pōs'əlz) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb).

Abbr. Ac Bible. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

ac-tu-al (äk'chōō-əl) adj. 1. Existing and not merely potential or possible. See Synonyms at real¹. 2. Being, existing, or acting at the present moment; current. 3. Based on fact: an actual account of the accident. [Middle English, from Old French, active, from Late Latin actuālis, from agere, āct-, to drive, do. See ACT.] —ac'tu-al-ly adv.

ac-tu-al-i-ty (äk'chōō-äl'i-tē) n. pl. ac-tu-al-i-ties. 1. The state or fact of being actual; reality. See Synonyms at existence. 2. Often actualities. Actual conditions or facts.

ac-tu-al-ize (äk'chōō-ə-līz') v. ac-tu-al-ized, ac-tu-al-iz-ing, ac-tu-al-iz-es.

— v. tr. 1. To realize in action or make real: "More flexible life patterns could... nurture and renew our spirits through opportunities to actualize personal dreams" (Fred Best). 2. To describe or portray realistically. — v. intr. To become actual.

—ac'tu-al-i-za'tion (-ə-lī-zā'shən) n.

ac-tu-ar-y (äk'chōō-ēr'ē) n. pl. ac-tu-ar-ies. A statistician who computes insurance risks and premiums. [Latin actuārius, secretary of accounts, from ācta, records, from agere, āct-, to drive, do. See ACT.] —ac'tu-ar'i-al (-âr'ē-əl) adj.

—ac'tu-ar'i-al-ly adv.

ac-tu-ate (äk'chōō-āt') v. tr. ac-tu-at-ed, ac-tu-at-ing, ac-tu-ates. 1. To put into motion or action: electrical relays that actuate the elevator's movements. 2. To move to action: a speech that actuated dissent. [Medieval Latin āctuāre, āctuāt-, from Latin āctus, act, from agere, āct-, to drive, do. See ACT.] —ac'tu-a'tion n. ac-tu-a-tor (ăk'chōō-ā'tər) n. One that activates, especially a device responsible for actuating a mechanical device, such as one connected to a computer by a sensor link.

a-cu-i-ty (ə-kyōō'ī-tē) n. Acuteness of vision or perception; keenness. [Middle English acuīte, from Old French, ultimately from Latin acūtus, sharp. See ACUTE.]

a-cu-le-ate (ə-kyōō'lē-īt, -āt') adj. 1. Biology. Having a stinger, as a bee or wasp. 2. Botany. Having sharp prickles. [Latin acūleātus, from acūleus, sting, diminutive of acus, needle. See ACUMEN.]

a-cu-men (ə-kyōō'mən, ăk'yə-) n. Quickness, accuracy, and keenness of judgment or insight. [Latin acūmen, from acuere, to sharpen, from acus, needle. See ak- in Appendix.]

a-cu-mi-nate (ə-kyōō'mə-nīt, -nāt') adj. Tapering gradually to a sharp point, as the tips of certain leaves. — v. tr. a-cu-mi-nat-ed, a-cu-mi-nat-ing, a-cu-mi-nates (ə-kyōō'mə-nāt'). To sharpen or taper. [Latin acūminātus, past participle of acūmināre, to sharpen, from acūmen, acuteness. See ACUMEN.]

—a-cu'mi-na'tion n.

ac-u-pres-sure (ak'yə-prēsh'ər) n. See shiatsu. [ACU(PUNCTURE) + PRESSURE.]

ac-u-punc-ture (ăk'yōō-pŭngk'chər) n. A technique, as for relieving pain or inducing regional anesthesia, in which thin needles are inserted into the body at specific points. — v. tr. ac-u-punc-tured, ac-u-punc-tur-ing, ac-u-punc-tures. To subject to acupuncture. [Latin acus, needle; see ACUMEN + PUNCTURE.] —ac'u-punc'tur-ist n.

a-cute (ə-kyōōt') adj. 1. Having a sharp point or tip. 2. Keenly perceptive or discerning; penetrating: “a raw, chilling and psychologically acute novel of human passions reduced to their deadliest essence” (Literary Guild Magazine). See Synonyms at sharp. 3. Reacting readily to impressions; sensitive: acute observers of the human comedy. 4. Of great importance or consequence; crucial: an acute lack of research funds. 5. Extremely sharp or severe; intense: acute pain; acute relief. 6. Medicine. a. Having a rapid onset and following a short but severe course: acute disease. b. Afflicted by a disease exhibiting a rapid onset followed by a short, severe course: acute patients. 7. Music. High in pitch; shrill. 8. Geometry. Designating angles less than 90°. [Latin acūtus, past participle of acuere, to sharpen, from acus, needle. See ak- in Appendix.] —a-cute'ly adv. —a-cute/-ness n.

acute accent (ə-kyōōt' ăk'sěnt') n. A mark (´) indicating: a. A raised pitch in certain languages such as Chinese and Ancient Greek. b. Stress of a spoken sound or syllable. c. Metrical stress in poetry. d. Sound quality or vowel length.

acv abbr. Actual cash value.

ACV abbr. Air-cushion vehicle.

a·cy·clic (ā-sī'klīk, ā-sīk'līk) adj. 1. Botany. Not cyclic. Used especially of flowers whose parts are arranged in spirals rather than in whorls, as in magnolias.

2. Chemistry. Having an open-chain molecular structure rather than a ring-shaped structure.

a·cy·clo·vir (ā-sī'klō-vīr, -klō-) n. A synthetic purine nucleoside analog, C₈H₁₀N₅O₃, derived from guanine and used topically in the treatment of herpes simplex infections, especially such infections of the genitals. [A⁻¹ + CYCLO- + VIR(AL) or VIR(US).]

ac·yl (ās'əl) n. Chemistry. A radical having the general formula RCO-, derived from an organic acid. [AC(ID) + -YL.]

ad¹ (ād) n. An advertisement.

ad² (ād) n. Sports. An advantage in tennis.

AD abbr. 1. Active duty. 2. Air-dried.

ad. abbr. Adapter.

A.D. abbr. Often A.D.. Anno Domini.

ad- pref. 1. ac- or af- or ag- or al- or ap- or as- or at-. Toward; to. Before c, f, g, k, l, p, q, s, and t, ad- is usually assimilated to ac-, af-, ag-, ac-, al-, ap-, ac-, as-, and at-, respectively. 2. Near; at: adrenal. [Latin, from ad, to. See ad- in Appendix.]

-ad suff. In the direction of; toward: cephalad. [From Latin ad, to. See ad- in Appendix.]

A·da¹ (ā'də) A city of south-central Oklahoma southeast of Oklahoma City. It is the center of a horse-breeding area. Population, 15,820.

A·da² (ā'də) n. Computer Science. A programming language, based on Pascal and developed for the U.S. Department of Defense. [After Augusta Ada Byron, Countess of Lovelace (1815-1852).]

ADA abbr. 1. American Dental Association. 2. American Diabetes Association. 3. Americans for Democratic Action.

ad·age (ād'ij) n. A saying that sets forth a general truth and that has gained credit through long use. See Synonyms at saying. [French, from Old French, from Latin adagium.]

USAGE NOTE: It is sometimes claimed that the expression old adage is redundant, inasmuch as a saying must have a certain tradition behind it to count as an adage in the first place. But the word adage is first recorded by the OED in the phrase old adage, showing that this redundancy itself is very old. Such idiomatic redundancy is paralleled by similar phrases such as young whelp.

a·da·gio (ə-dä'jō, -jē-ō', -zhō, -zhē-ō) adv. & adj. Music. In a slow tempo, usually considered to be slower than andante but faster than largo. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl. a·da·gios. 1. Music. A slow passage, movement, or work, especially one using adagio as the direction. 2. A section of a pas de deux in which the ballerina and her partner perform steps requiring lyricism and great skill in lifting, balancing, and turning. [Italian ad-, at (from Latin); see AD- + agio, ease (from Old Provençal aize) from Vulgar Latin adiacēs*, from Latin adi-acēns, convenient. See ADJACENT.]

A·dak (ā'dāk') An island of western Alaska in the central Aleutian Islands. It was an important military base during World War II.

Ad·am¹ (ăd'əm) In the Old Testament, the first man and the husband of Eve.

Ad·am² (ăd'əm) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the neoclassic style of furniture and architecture originated by Robert and James Adam.

Ad·am (ăd'əm), Robert. 1728-1792. British architect who led the neoclassical movement in England and is noted for his elegant interior designs and for collaborations with his brother James (1730-1794).

Ad·am-and-Eve (ăd'əm-ənd-ēv') n. See puttyroot.

ad·a·mant (ăd'ə-mənt, -mănt') adj. Impervious to pleas, appeals, or reason; stubbornly unyielding. See Synonyms at inflexible. — n. 1. A stone once believed to be impenetrable in its hardness. 2. An extremely hard substance. [From Middle English, a hard precious stone, from Old French adamaunt, from Latin adamās, adamant-, hard steel, diamond, anything inflexible, from Greek adamas, adamant-, hard steel, diamond, anything fixed or unalterable, unconquerable. See demə- in Appendix.]

ad·a·man·tine (ăd'ə-mănt'ēn', -tīn', -tĭn') adj. 1. Made of or resembling adamant. 2. Having the hardness or luster of a diamond. 3. Unyielding; inflexible: "If there is one dominant trait that emerges from this account, it is adamantine will-power" (Eugene Linden).

A·da·ma·wa Massif (ăd'ə-mă'wə mə-sēf') An extensive plateau of west-central Africa in north-central Cameroon and eastern Nigeria.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Abigail Smith. 1744-1818. First Lady of the United States (1797-1801) as the wife of President John Adams. Her letters to her husband provide a vivid picture of life in colonial Massachusetts.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Ansel. 1902-1984. American photographer noted for his magnificent black-and-white photographs of the American wilderness.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Brooks. 1848-1927. American historian who theorized that civilizations rise and fall according to a pattern of economic growth and decline.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Charles Francis. 1807-1886. American public official who as an ambassador during the Civil War helped dissuade Great Britain from officially recognizing the Confederacy.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Franklin Pierce. Known as "F.P.A." 1881-1960. American humorist whose column "The Conning Tower" appeared in New York newspapers for more than 20 years.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Henry Brooks. 1838-1918. American historian noted for his nine-volume History of the United States during the Administrations of Jefferson and Madison (1889-1891). He also wrote a famous autobiography, The Education of Henry Adams (1918).

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), James Truslow. 1878-1949. American historian whose works include The Epic of America (1931).

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), John. 1735-1826. The first Vice President (1789-1797) and second President (1797-1801) of the United States. He was a major figure during the American Revolution, the drafting of the Declaration of Independence, and the shaping of the Constitution.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), John Quincy. 1767-1848. The sixth President of the United States (1825-1829). As secretary of state (1817-1825) he helped formulate the Monroe Doctrine. After his presidency he served in the House of Representatives (1831-1848), where he advocated antislavery measures.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), (Llewellyn) Sherman. 1899-1986. American politician who was the influential White House chief of staff (1953-1958) for President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Maude Kiskadden. 1872-1953. American actress whose successes included more than 1,500 performances as the lead in Peter Pan.

Adams, Mount. A peak, 3,753.6 m (12,307 ft) high, in the Cascade Range of southwest Washington.

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Samuel. 1722-1803. American Revolutionary leader whose agitations spurred Bostonians toward rebellion against British occupation and rule. He was a member of the First and Second Continental Congresses, signed the Declaration of Independence, and served as governor of Massachusetts (1794-1797).

Ad·ams (ăd'əmz), Walter Sydney. 1876-1956. American astronomer who developed a method of measuring the distance of a star from the earth by comparing its absolute brightness to its apparent brightness.

Ad·am's apple (ăd'əmz ăp'əl) n. The slight projection at the front of the throat formed by the largest cartilage of the larynx, usually more prominent in men than in women.

Adam's Bridge (ăd'əmz brīj) also Ra·ma's Bridge (ră'məz brīj) A chain of shoals extending about 29 km (18 mi) between India and Sri Lanka. According to Hindu legend, the bridge was built to transport Rama, hero of the Ramayana, to the island to rescue his wife from the demon king Ravana.

Ad·am's-nee·dle (ăd'əmz-nēd'l) n. Any of several closely related, stemless plants of the genus Yucca, especially Y. filamentosa and Y. smalliana of the south-east United States. [From the spines on its leaves.]

Adam's Peak (ăd'əmz pēk) A mountain, 2,244.8 m (7,360 ft) high, in south-central Sri Lanka. It is a sacred place of pilgrimage for Buddhists, Hindus, and Muslims.

A-da-na (ă'də-nə, ə-dă'nə) A city of southern Turkey on the Seyhan River near the Mediterranean Sea. Probably founded by the Hittites, it was colonized by the Romans in 66 B.C. Population, 574,515.

a·dapt (ə-dăpt') v. a·dapt-ed, a·dapt-ing, a·dapt-s. — v. tr. To make suitable to or fit for a specific use or situation. — v. intr. To become adapted: a species that has adapted well to winter climes. [Middle English adapten, from Latin adaptāre: ad-, ad- + aptāre, to fit (from aptus, fitting); see APT.]

SYNONYMS: adapt, accommodate, adjust, conform, fit, reconcile. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to make suitable to or consistent with a particular situation or use”: adapted themselves to city life; can't accommodate myself to the new requirements; adjusting their behavior to the rules; conforming her life to accord with her moral principles; made the punishment fit the crime; couldn't reconcile his reassuring words with his hostile actions.

ANTONYM: unfit

a·dapt·a·ble (ə-dăp'tə-bəl) adj. Capable of adapting or of being adapted.

—a·dapt'a·bil'i·ty, a·dapt'a·ble·ness n.

ad·ap·ta·tion (ăd'ăp-tă'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of adapting. b. The state of being adapted. 2. a. Something, such as a device or mechanism, that is changed or changes so as to become suitable to a new or special application or situation. b. A composition that has been recast into a new form: The play is an adaptation of a short novel. 3. Biology. An alteration or adjustment in structure or habits, often hereditary, by which a species or individual improves its condition in relationship to its environment. 4. Physiology. The responsive adjustment of a sense organ, such as the eye, to varying conditions, such as light intensity.

5. Change in behavior of a person or group in response or adjustment to new or modified surroundings. —ad'ap-ta'tion-al adj. —ad'ap-ta'tion-al-ly adv.

a·dapt·er also a·dapt·or (ə-dăp'tər) n. Abbr. ad. One that adapts, such as a device used to effect operative compatibility between different parts of one or more pieces of apparatus.

a·dap·tion (ə-dăp'shən) n. Adaptation.

a·dap·tive (ə-dăp'tiv) adj. Tending to, designed for, suitable for, or having a capacity for adaptation: created adaptive clothing for children and young adults with special needs. —a·dap'tive-ly adv. —a·dap'tive·ness n.

adaptive radiation (ə-dăp'tiv rā'dē-ă'shən) n. Diversification of a species or single ancestral type into several forms that are each adaptively specialized to a specific environmental niche.

a·dap·tor (ə-dăp'tər) n. Variant of adapter.

A·dar (ä-där', ä'där') n. The sixth month of the year in the Jewish calendar. See Table at calendar. [Hebrew 'ădār, from Akkadian adaru, a month of the Akkadian calendar corresponding to parts of February and March.]

Adar She·ni (ä-där' shā-nē') n. An extra month of the Hebrew year, having 29 days, added in leap years after the regular month of Adar. See Table at calendar. [Hebrew 'ădār šēnî, second Adar.]

ad·ax·i·al (ăd-ăk'sē-əl) adj. 1. Located on the side nearest to the axis of an organ or organism. 2. Of or relating to the side or surface facing or nearest to the axis of an organ, such as the upper surface of a leaf; ventral.

ADC abbr. 1. Also a.d.c.. Aide-de-camp. 2. Aid to Dependent Children. 3. Air Defense Command.

add (ăd) v. add·ed, add·ing, adds. — v. tr. 1. To combine (a column of figures, for example) to form a sum. 2. To join or unite so as to increase in size, quantity, quality, or scope: added 12 inches to the deck; flowers that added beauty to the dinner table. 3. To say or write further. — v. intr. 1. To find a sum in arithmetic. 2. a. To constitute an addition: an exploit that will add to her reputation. b. To create or make an addition: gradually added to my meager savings. —phrasal verb. add up. 1. To be reasonable, plausible, or consistent; make sense: The witness's testimony simply did not add up. 2. To amount to an expected total: a bill that didn't add up. 3. To formulate an opinion of: added up the other competitors in one glance. —idiom. add up to. To constitute; amount: This movie adds up to a lot of tears. [Middle English adden, from Latin addere : ad-, ad- + dare, to give; see dō- in Appendix.] —add'a·ble, add'i·ble adj.

ADD abbr. Attention deficit disorder.

add. abbr. 1. Addendum. 2. Addition.

Ad·dams (ăd'əmz), Charles Samuel. 1912-1988. American cartoonist known for the macabre humor and Gothic settings of his cartoons, many of which first appeared in the New Yorker.

Ad·dams (ăd'əmz), Jane. 1860-1935. American social reformer and pacifist who founded Hull House (1889), a care and education center for the poor of Chicago, and worked for peace and many social reforms. She shared the 1931 Nobel Peace Prize.

ad·dax (ăd'ăks') n. An antelope (Addax nasomaculatus) of northern Africa having long, spirally twisted horns. [Latin, of African origin.]

ad·ded value (ăd'īd văl'yōō) n. The intangible, subjective, perceived difference setting one brand apart from another in the mind of a consumer.

ad·dend (ăd'ënd', ə-dënd') n. Any of a set of numbers to be added. [Short for ADDENDUM.]

ad·den·dum (ə-dĕn'dəm) n. pl. ad·den·da (-də). Abbr. add. Something added or to be added, especially a supplement to a book. [Latin, neuter of addendus gerundive of addere, to add. See ADD.] add·er¹ (ăd'ər) n. One that adds, especially a computational device that performs arithmetic addition.

ad·der² (ăd'ər) n. 1. See viper (n., sense 1). 2. Any of several nonvenomous snakes, such as the milk snake of North America, popularly believed to be harmful. [Middle English, from an addre, alteration of a naddre : a, a; see A² + naddre, snake (from Old English nædre).]

WORD HISTORY: The biblical injunction to be wise as serpents and innocent as doves looks somewhat alien in the Middle English guise “Loke ye be prudent as neddris and symple as dowves.” Neddris, which is perhaps the strangest-looking word in this Middle English passage, would be adders in Modern English, with a different meaning and form. Adder, an example of specialization in meaning, no longer refers to just any serpent or snake, as it once did, but now denotes only specific kinds of snakes. Adder also illustrates a process known as false splitting, or juncture loss: the word came from Old English nædre and kept its n into the Middle English period, but later during that stage of the language people started analyzing the phrase a naddre as an addre—the false splitting that has given us adder.

ad·der's-mouth (ăd'ərz-mouth') n. Any of various chiefly terrestrial orchids of the genus Malaxis, having terminal clusters of small, often greenish flowers. [From the resemblance of its flowers to the open mouths of snakes.] ad·der's-tongue (ăd'ərz-tŭng') n. 1. See adder's-tongue fern. 2. See dogtooth violet.

adder's-tongue fern (ăd'ərz-tŭng' fŭrn) n. Any of various ferns in the genus Ophioglossum, having leaves divided into a simple, sterile blade and a slender, spikelike spore-bearing segment. Also called adder's-tongue [From the resemblance of the spike at the base of the frond to a snake's tongue.]

ad·dict (ə-dĭkt') v. tr. ad·dict·ed, ad·dict·ing, ad·dicts. 1. To devote or give (oneself) habitually or compulsively: She was addicted to rock music. 2. To cause to become compulsively and physiologically dependent on a habit-forming substance: He was addicted to cocaine. — n. (ăd'ikt) 1. One who is addicted, as to narcotics. 2. A devoted believer or follower: “We are all... addicts of change” (Christopher Lasch). [Latin addĭcere, addĭct-, to sentence : ad-, ad- + dĭcere, to adjudge; see deik- in Appendix.] —ad·dic'tive adj.

ad·dic'tion (ə-dĭk'shən) n. 1. The quality or condition of being addicted: had an addiction for fast cars. 2. Compulsive physiological need for a habit-forming substance: “the international traffickers who sell addiction and the users struggling to fight free of it” (Richard M. Smith).

Ad·dis Ab·a·ba (ăd'īs äb'ə-bə, ä'dīs ä'bə-bä') The capital and largest city of Ethiopia, in the center of the country on a plateau more than 2,440 m (8,000 ft) above sea level. Captured by the Italians in 1936 and made the capital of Italian East Africa, it was retaken by the Allies in 1941 and returned to Ethiopian sovereignty. Population, 1,408,068.

Ad·di·son (ăd'ī-sən) A village of northeast Illinois, a residential and industrial suburb of Chicago. Population 32,058.

Ad·di·son (ăd'ī-sən), Joseph. 1672-1719. English essayist whose witty and elegant works appeared in The Tatler, founded by Richard Steele in 1709, and The Spectator, founded by Addison and Steele in 1711. —Ad'di·so'ni-an (-sō'nē-ən) adj.

Ad·di·son's disease (ăd'ī-sənz dī-zēz') n. A disease caused by partial or total failure of adrenocortical function, which is characterized by a bronzelike pigmentation of the skin and mucous membranes, anemia, weakness, and low blood pressure. [After Thomas Addison (1793-1860), British physician.]

ad·di·tion (ə-dīsh'ən) n. Abbr. add., addn. 1. The act or process of adding, especially the process of computing with sets of numbers so as to find their sum. 2. Something added, such as a room or section appended to a building. —idioms. in addition. Also; as well as. in addition to. Over and above; besides. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin additiō, additiōn-, from additus, past participle of addere, to add. See ADD.] —ad·di'tion·al adj. —ad·di'tion·al·ly adv.

ad·di·tive (ăd'ī-tīv) n. A substance added in small amounts to something else to improve, strengthen, or otherwise alter it. — adj. 1. Marked by, produced by, or involving addition. 2. Color. Of or being any of certain primary colors of wavelengths that may be mixed with one another to produce other colors.

additive identity (ăd'ī-tīv ī-dēn'tī-tē) n. Mathematics. An identity element that in a given mathematical system leaves unchanged any element to which it is added.

additive inverse (ăd'ī-tīv ĩn-vûrs') n. Mathematics. See inverse (n., sense 2b).

ad·dle (ăd'l) v. ad·dled, ad·dling, ad·dles. — v. tr. To muddle; confuse: “My brain is a bit addled by whiskey” (Eugene O'Neill). See Synonyms at confuse. — v. intr. 1. To become confused. 2. To become rotten; spoil. [From Middle English adel, rotten, from Old English adel, pool of excrement.]

ad·dle·pat·ed (ăd'l-pā'tīd) adj. 1. Eccentric: “seeking sympathy from her addlepatated old dad” (Rita Kempsey). 2. Mixed up and confused: “shackled with dime-a-dance disco, bland ballads and addlepatated fluff” (People).

addn. abbr. Addition.

addnl. abbr. Additional.

add-on (ăd'ŏn', -ôn') n. One thing added as a supplement to another, especially a component that increases the capability of the system to which it is added.

ad-dress (ə-drēs') v. tr. ad-dressed, ad-dress-ing, ad-dress-es. 1. To speak to: addressed me in low tones. 2. To make a formal speech to. 3. To direct (a spoken or written message) to the attention of: address a protest to the faculty senate. 4. To mark with a destination: address a letter. 5. a. To direct the efforts or attention of (oneself): address oneself to a task. b. To deal with: addressed the issue of absenteeism. 6. To dispatch or consign (a ship, for example) to an agent or factor. 7. Sports. To adjust and aim the club at (a golf ball) in preparing for a stroke. — n. 1. A formal spoken or written communication: used the proper address for a priest. 2. A formal speech. 3. (also ăd'rēs') The written or printed directions on mail or other deliverable items indicating destination. 4. (also ăd'rēs') The location at which a particular organization or person may be found or reached. 5. Often addresses. Courteous attentions. 6. The manner or bearing of a person, especially in conversation. 7. Skill, deftness, and grace in dealing with people or situations. See Synonyms at tact. 8. The act of dispatching or consigning a ship, as to an agent or a factor. 9. Computer Science. A number used in information storage or retrieval that is assigned to a specific memory location. [Middle English adressen, to direct, from Old French adresser, from Vulgar Latin addīrēctiāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Vulgar Latin dīrēctiāre*, to straighten (from Latin dīrēctus, past participle of dīrigere, to direct); see DIRECT.] ad-dress-a-ble (ə-drēs'ə-bəl) adj. Accessible through an address, as in computer memory.

ad-dress-ee (ăd'rē-sē', ə-drēs'ē') n. The one to whom something is addressed.

ad-dress-er also ad-dres-sor (ə-drēs'ər) n. One, such as a person or a machine, that addresses.

ad-duce (ə-dōōs', ə-dyōōs') v. tr. ad-duced, ad-duc-ing, ad-duc-es. To cite as an example or means of proof in an argument. [Latin addūcere, to bring to: ad-, ad- + dūcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix.] — ad-duce'a-ble, ad-duc'i-ble adj.

ad-duct (ə-dŭkt', ă-dŭkt') v. tr. ad-duct-ed, ad-duct-ing, ad-ducts. Physiology. To draw inward toward the median axis of the body or toward an adjacent part or limb. [Back-formation from ADDUCTOR.] — ad-duc'tion n. — ad-duc'tive adj.

ad-duc-tor (ə-dŭk'tər) n. A muscle that draws a body part, such as a finger, an arm, or a toe, inward toward the median axis of the body or of an extremity. [From Latin addūcere, to bring to. See ADDUCE.]

Ade (ād), George. 1866-1944. American humorist whose newspaper columns, plays, and books, such as Fables in Slang (1899), reflect the humor and common sense of ordinary people.

-ade suff. A sweetened beverage of: limeade. [Middle English, from Old French, ultimately from Latin -āta, feminine of -ātus, -ate. See *-ATE*¹.]

Ad·e·laide (ăd'ī-ăd') A city of southern Australia northwest of Melbourne. A port of entry at the mouth of the Torrens River, it was founded in 1836. Metropolitan area population, 983,200.

A·dé·lie Coast also A·dé·lie Land (ə-dā'lē kōst) A region of Antarctica near George V Coast, under French sovereignty since 1938.

Adélie penguin (ə-dā'lē pęng'gwĭn) n. A common Antarctic penguin (Pygoscelis adeliae) that has white underparts and a black back and head and lives and breeds in large exposed rookeries.

a·demp·tion (ə-dęmp'shən) n. Law. The disposal by a testator of specific property bequeathed in his or her will so as to invalidate the bequest. [Latin ademptiō, ademptiōn-, a taking away, from ademptus, past participle of adimere, to take away : ad-, ad- + emere, to buy, take; see em- in Appendix.]

A·den (ăd'n, ăd'n) 1. A former British colony and protectorate of southern Arabia, part of Southern Yemen (now Yemen) since 1967. 2. The largest city of Yemen, in the southern part of the country on the Gulf of Aden. It has been one of the chief ports of southern Arabia since ancient times and became a major trading and refueling station after the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869. Aden was the capital of Southern Yemen from 1967 until 1990. Population, 271,600.

Aden, Gulf of. An arm of the Arabian Sea lying between Yemen on the Arabian Peninsula and Somalia in eastern Africa. It is connected with the Red Sea by the Bab el Mandeb.

aden- pref. Variant of adeno-.

Ad·en·au·er (ăd'n-ou'ər, ăd'-), Konrad. 1876-1967. First chancellor of West Germany (1949-1963), under whom the country began economic reconstruction and became a member of NATO and the Common Market.

ad·e·nec·to·my (ăd'n-ęk'tə-mē) n. Surgical excision of a gland.

ad·e·nine (ăd'n-ēn', -ĭn) n. A purine base, C₅H₅N₅, that is a constituent of DNA and RNA.

ad·e·ni·tis (ăd'n-ī'tis) n. Inflammation of a lymph node or gland.

adeno- or aden- pref. Gland: adenectomy. [From Greek adēn, aden-.]

ad·e·no·car·ci·no·ma (ăd'n-ō-kār'sə-nō'mə) n. A malignant tumor originating in glandular tissue. —ad·e·no·car·ci·nom'a·tous (-nōm'ə-təs, -nō'mə-təs) adj.

ad·e·no·hy·poph·y·sis (ăd'n-ō-hī-pŏf'ĭ-sĭs) n. The anterior glandular lobe of the pituitary gland that secretes many hormones, including ACTH, prolactin, and somatotropin. —ad·e·no·hy·poph'y·se'al, ad·e·no·hy·poph'y·si'al (-pŏf'ĭ-sē'al) adj.

ad·e·noid (ăd'n-oid') n. A lymphoid tissue growth located at the back of the nose in the upper part of the throat that when swollen may obstruct normal breathing and make speech difficult. Often used in the plural. — adj. Of, relating to, or resembling lymphatic glands or lymphoid tissue.

ad·e·noi·dal (ăd'n-oid'l) adj. 1. Of or relating to the adenoids. 2. Suggestive of the vocal sound caused by abnormally enlarged adenoids: a singer with an adenoidal voice.

ad·e·no·ma (ăd'n-ō'mə) n. pl. ad·e·no·mas or ad·e·no·ma·ta (-mə-tə). A benign epithelial tumor having a glandular origin and structure.

—ad·e·nom'a·toid' (ăd'n-ŏm'ə-toid') adj. —ad·e·nom'a·tous (-ŏm'ə-təs) adj.

a·den·o·sine (ə-dĕn'ə-sĕn') n. A nucleoside, C₁₀H₁₃N₅O₄, that is a structural component of nucleic acids and the major molecular component of ADP, AMP, and ATP. [Blend of ADENINE, and RIBOSE.]

adenosine diphosphate (ə-dĕn'ə-sĕn' dī-fŏs'fāt') n. ADP.

adenosine mon·o·phos·phate (ə-dĕn'ə-sĕn' mŏn'ō-fŏs'fāt') n.

1. AMP. 2. Cyclic AMP.

adenosine tri·phos·pha·tase (ə-dĕn'ə-sĕn' trī-fŏs'fə-tās', -tāz') n. ATPase.

adenosine triphosphate (ə-dĕn'ə-sĕn' trī-fŏs'fāt') n. ATP.

ad·e·no·sis (ăd'n-ō'sis) n. A disease of a gland, especially one marked by the abnormal formation or enlargement of glandular tissue.

ad·e·no·vi·rus (ăd'n-ō-vī'rəs) n. Any of a group of DNA-containing viruses that cause conjunctivitis and upper respiratory tract infections in humans.

—ad·e·no·vi'ral adj.

a·den·yl·ate cy·clase (ə-dĕn'l-īt sī'klās, -klāz, ăd'n-ĭl'īt) n. An enzyme that catalyzes the formation of cyclic AMP from ATP. Also called adenyl cyclase

[ADEN(INE) + -YL + -ATE² + CYCL- + -ASE.]

ad·e·nyl·ic acid (ăd'n-ĭl'ik ăs'īd) n. See AMP. [ADEN(INE) + -YL + -IC + ACID.]

a·dept (ə-dĕpt') adj. Very skilled. See Synonyms at proficient. — n.

(ăd'ĕpt') A highly skilled person; an expert: "The adepts in Washington mean to give rather than to take" (Lewis H. Lapham). [Latin adeptus, past participle of adipīscī, to attain : ad-, ad- + apīscī, to grasp.]

—a·dept'ly adv. —a·dept'ness n.

ad·e·quate (ăd'ī-kwīt) adj. 1. Sufficient to satisfy a requirement or meet a need. See Synonyms at sufficient. 2. Barely satisfactory or sufficient: The skater's technique was only adequate. [Latin adaequātus, past participle of adaequāre, to equalize : ad-, ad- + aequāre, to make equal from aequus, equal.]

—ad·e·qua·cy (-kwə-sĕ), ad·e·quate·ness n. —ad·e·quate·ly adv.

à deux (ă' dœ') adj. Of or involving two individuals, especially when of a private or intimate nature. — adv. Privately with only two individuals involved: dining à deux. [French.]

ad fem-i-nam (ăd fĕm'ī-nām', -nəm) adj. Appealing to irrelevant personal considerations concerning women, especially prejudices against them: “Its treatment of [him] and its ad feminam attack on his wife... often border on character assassination” (Simon Karlinsky). [Latin ad, to + fēminam, accusative of fēmina, woman.] —ad fem'ī-nam' adv.

ADH abbr. Antidiuretic hormone.

ad·here (ăd-hîr') v. intr. ad·hered, ad·her·ing, ad·heres. 1. To stick fast by or as if by suction or glue. 2. To be a devoted follower or supporter. 3. To carry out a plan, a scheme, or an operation without deviation: We will adhere to our plan. [French adhérer, from Latin adhaerēre, to stick to : ad-, ad- + haerēre, to stick.]

ad·her·ence (ăd-hîr'əns, -hĕr'-) n. 1. The process or condition of adhering. 2. Faithful attachment; devotion: “Adherence to the rule of law... is a very important principle” (William H. Webster).

ad·her·ent (ăd-hîr'ənt, -hĕr'-) n. A supporter, as of a cause or an individual. — adj. 1. Sticking or holding fast. 2. Botany. Joined but not united. Used of dissimilar parts or organs. —ad·her'ent·ly adv.

ad·he·sion (ăd-hĕ'zhən) n. 1. The act or state of adhering. 2. Attachment or devotion; loyalty. 3. Assent or agreement to join. 4. Medicine. A condition in which bodily tissues that are normally separate grow together. 5. Physics. The physical attraction or joining of two substances, especially the macroscopically observable attraction of dissimilar substances. 6. Medicine. A fibrous band of scar tissue that binds together normally separate anatomical structures. [French adhésion, from Latin adhaesiō, adhaesiōn-, from adhaesus, past participle of adhaerēre, to adhere. See ADHERE.] ad·he·si·o·to·my (ăd-hĕ'zē-ōt'ə-mē) n. pl. ad·he·si·o·to·mies. Surgical division or separation of adhesions.

ad·he·sive (ăd-hĕ'siv, -ziv) adj. 1. Tending to adhere; sticky. 2. Gummed so as to adhere. 3. Tending to persist; difficult if not impossible to shake off: “He feels an adhesive dread, a sudden acquaintance with the... darker side of mankind” (George F. Will). — n. A substance, such as paste or cement, that provides or promotes adhesion. —ad·he'sive·ly adv. —ad·he'sive·ness n.

adhesive tape (ăd-hĕ'siv tăp) n. A tape lined on one side with an adhesive.

ad hoc (ăd hŏk', hŏk') adv. For the specific purpose, case, or situation at hand and for no other: a committee formed ad hoc to address the issue of salaries. — adj. 1. Formed for or concerned with one specific purpose: an ad hoc compensation committee. 2. Improvised and often impromptu: “On an ad hoc basis, Congress has... placed... ceilings on military aid to specific countries” (New York Times). [Latin ad, to + hoc, this.]

ad hoc·ism also ad hoc·ism or ad·hoc·ism (ăd hŏk'iz-əm, hŏ'kiz-) n. The tendency to establish temporary, chiefly improvisational policies and procedures to deal with specific problems and tasks: “In the absence of specific policies carefully tended by specialists, ad hocism took root” (U.S. News & World Report).

ad hom·i·nem (ăd hŏm'ə-nĕm', -nəm) adj. Appealing to personal considerations rather than to logic or reason: Debaters should avoid ad hominem arguments that question their opponents' motives. [Latin ad, to + hominem, accusative of homō, man.] —ad hom'i·nem' adv.

ad·i·a·bat·ic (ăd'ē-ə-băt'ik, ă'dī-ə-) adj. Of, relating to, or denoting a reversible thermodynamic process executed at constant entropy and occurring without gain or loss of heat. [From Greek adiabatos, impassable : a-, a-; see *A-*¹ + diabatos, passable (dia, dia- + batos, passable from bainein, to go); see g^wā- in Appendix.] —ad'i·a·bat'i·cal·ly adv.

a·dieu (ə-dyōō', ə-dōō') interj. Used to express farewell. — n. pl. a·dieus or a·dieux (ə-dyōōz', ə-dōōz'). A farewell. [Middle English, from Old French a dieu, (I commend you) to God : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + Dieu, God (from Latin deus); see deiv- in Appendix.]

A·di·ge (ă'dī-jā', ă'dē-jĕ') A river of northeast Italy rising in the Alps and flowing about 410 km (255 mi) generally south then east to the Adriatic Sea at the Gulf of Venice.

ad in·fi·ni·tum (ăd in'fə-nī'təm) adv. & adj. To infinity; having no end. [Latin ad, to + īnfinītum, accusative of īnfinītus, infinite.]

ad in·ter·im (ăd in'tər-əm) adv. Abbr. ad int. In or for the meantime; temporarily. — adj. Acting or done ad interim; temporary. See Synonyms at tempo·rary. [Latin ad, to, for + interim, the meantime.]

ad·i·os (ăd'ē-ōs', ă'dē-) interj. Used to express farewell. [Spanish adiós, probably translated from French à dieu. See ADIEU.]

ad·i·po·cere (ăd'ə-pō-sîr') n. A brown, fatty, waxlike substance that forms on dead animal tissues in response to moisture. [ADIPO(SE) + Latin cĕra, wax.]

ad·i·po·cyte (ăd'ə-pō-sīt') n. See fat cell.

ad·i·pose (ăd'ə-pōs') adj. Of, relating to, or composed of animal fat; fatty. — n. The fat found in adipose tissue. [New Latin adipōsus, from Latin adeps, adip-, fat.] —ad'i·pose'ness, ad'i·pos'i·ty (-pōs'ī-tē) n.

adipose tissue (ăd'ə-pōs' tîsh'ō) n. A type of connective tissue that contains stored cellular fat.

Ad·i·ron·dack Mountains (ăd'ə-rŏn'dăk' moun'tənz) A group of mountains in northeast New York between the St. Lawrence River valley in the north and the Mohawk River valley in the south. The range is part of the Appalachian system and rises to 1,629.9 m (5,344 ft). Lakes, forests, and numerous winter sports resorts, including Lake Placid, site of the 1932 and 1984 Winter Olympics, attract many tourists.

ad·it (ăd'īt) n. An almost horizontal entrance to a mine. [Latin aditus, access, from past participle of adīre, to approach : ad-, ad- + īre, to go; see ei- in Appendix.]

adj. abbr. 1. Grammar. Adjective. 2. Adjunct. 3. Adjustment. 4. Also Adj.. Adjutant.

ad·ja·cen·cy (ə-jā'sən-sē) n. pl. ad·ja·cen·cies. 1. The state of being adjacent; contiguity. 2. A thing that is adjacent.

ad·ja·cent (ə-jā'sənt) adj. 1. Close to; lying near: adjacent cities. 2. Next to; adjoining: adjacent garden plots. [Middle English, from Latin adiacēns, adiacent- present participle of adiacēre, to lie near : ad-, ad- + iacēre, to lie; see yē- in Appendix.] — ad·ja·cent·ly adv.

adjacent angle (ə-jā'sənt ăng'gəl) n. Mathematics. Either of two angles having a common side and a common vertex.

ad·jec·ti·val (ăj'ĭk-tĭ'vəl) adj. Grammar. Of, relating to, or functioning as an adjective. — ad·jec·ti·val·ly adv.

ad·jec·tive (ăj'ĭk-tĭv) n. Abbr. adj., a. Grammar. Any of a class of words used to modify a noun or other substantive by limiting, qualifying, or specifying and distinguished in English morphologically by one of several suffixes, such as -able, -ous, -er, and -est, or syntactically by position directly preceding a noun or nominal phrase, such as white in a white house. — adj. 1. Grammar. Adjectival: an adjective clause. 2. Law. Prescriptive; remedial: adjective law. 3. Not standing alone; derivative or dependent. [Middle English, from Old French adjectif, from Late Latin adiectīvus, from adiectus, past participle of adiicere, to add to : ad-, ad- + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.] — ad·jec·tive·ly adv.

adjective pronoun (ăj'ĭk-tĭv prō'noun') n. Grammar. A pronoun acting as an adjective, such as which in which dictionaries?

ad·join (ə-join') v. ad·joined, ad·join·ing, ad·joins. — v. tr. 1. To be next to; be contiguous to: property that adjoins ours. 2. To attach: “I do adjoin a copy of the letter that I have received” (John Fowles). — v. intr. To be contiguous. [Middle English ajoinen, from Old French ajoindre, ajoin-, from Latin adiungere, to join to : ad-, ad- + iungere, to join; see yeug- in Appendix.]

ad·join·ing (ə-join'ning) adj. Neighboring; contiguous.

ad·journ (ə-jûrn') v. ad·journed, ad·journ·ing, ad·journs. — v. tr. To suspend until a later stated time. — v. intr. 1. To suspend proceedings to another time or place. 2. To move from one place to another: After the meal we adjourned to the living room. [Middle English ajournen, from Old French ajourner : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + jour, day (from Late Latin diurnum, from Latin diurnus, daily, from diēs, day); see deiw- in Appendix.] — ad·journ·ment n.

adjt. also Adj. abbr. Adjutant.

ad·judge (ə-ˈjʊdʒ/) v. tr. ad·judged, ad·judg·ing, ad·judg·es. 1. Law. a. To determine or decide by judicial procedure; adjudicate. b. To order judicially; rule. c. To award (damages, for example) by law. 2. To regard, consider, or deem: was adjudged incompetent. [Middle English ajugen, from Old French ajuger, from Latin adiūdicāre. See ADJUDICATE.]

ad·ju·di·cate (ə-ˈjʊdʒiˈkæt/) v. tr. ad·ju·di·cat·ed, ad·ju·di·cat·ing, ad·ju·di·cates. 1. Law. To hear and settle (a case) by judicial procedure. 2. To study and settle (a dispute or controversy): had to ask the school principal to adjudicate the quarrel. [Latin adiūdicāre, adiūdicāt-, to award to (judicially) : ad-, ad- + iūdicāre, to judge (from iūdex, judge); see JUDGE.] —ad·ju·di·ca·tion n.

—ad·ju·di·ca·tive adj. —ad·ju·di·ca·tor n.

ad·junct (əˈdʒʌŋkt/) n. Abbr. adj. 1. Something attached to another in a dependent or subordinate position. See Synonyms at appendage. 2. A person associated with another in a subordinate or auxiliary capacity. 3. Grammar. A clause or phrase added to a sentence that, while not essential to the sentence's structure, amplifies its meaning, such as for several hours in We waited for several hours.

4. Logic. A nonessential attribute of a thing. — adj. 1. Added or connected in a subordinate or auxiliary capacity: an adjunct clause. 2. Attached to a faculty or staff in a temporary or auxiliary capacity: an adjunct professor of history. [From Latin adiunctus, past participle of adiungere, to join to. See ADJOIN.] —ad·junc·tion ad·ju·ra·tion (əˈdʒʊərəˈʃən) n. An earnest, solemn appeal. —ad·jur·a·to·ry (ə-ˈdʒʊərəˈtɔri, -tɔri) adj.

(ə-ˈdʒʌŋkʃən) n. —ad·junc·tive adj.

ad·jure (ə-ˈdʒʊr/) v. tr. ad·jured, ad·jur·ing, ad·jures. 1. To command or enjoin solemnly, as under oath: “adjuring her in the name of God to declare the truth” (Increase Mather). 2. To appeal to or entreat earnestly. [Middle English adjuren, from Latin adiūrāre, to swear to : ad-, ad- + iūrāre, to swear; see yewes- in Appendix.] —ad·jur·er, ad·ju·ror n.

ad·just (ə-ˈdʒʌst/) v. ad·just·ed, ad·just·ing, ad·justs. — v. tr. 1. To change so as to match or fit; cause to correspond. 2. To bring into proper relationship. 3. To adapt or conform, as to new conditions: “unable to adjust themselves to their environment” (Karl A. Menninger). See Synonyms at adapt. 4. To bring the components of into a more effective or efficient calibration or state: adjust the timing of a car's engine. 5. To treat disorders of (the spine) by correcting slight dislocations between vertebrae using chiropractic techniques. 6. To decide how much is to be paid on (an insurance claim). — v. intr. 1. To adapt oneself; conform. 2. To achieve a psychological balance in one's life with regard to one's own needs and the needs of others. [Obsolete French adjuster, from Old French ajoster, from Vulgar Latin adiuxtāre*, to put close to : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin iuxtā, near; see yeug- in Appendix.] —ad·just·a·ble adj. —ad·just·a·bly adv.

—ad·just·er, ad·jus·tor n.

ad·just·ment (ə-just'mənt) n. Abbr. adj. 1. The act of adjusting or the state of being adjusted. 2. A means of adjusting. 3. Settlement of a debt or claim. 4. A modification, fluctuation, or correction: made an adjustment on the telephone bill; an adjustment in the consumer price index.

ad·ju·tant (äj'ə-tənt) n. 1. Abbr. adj., Adj., adjt., Adjt. A staff officer who helps a commanding officer with administrative affairs. 2. An assistant. 3. See marabou (n., sense 1). [From Latin adiūtāns, adiūtant- present participle of adiūtāre, to help. See AID.] — ad·ju·tan·cy n.

adjutant general (äj'ə-tənt jən'ər-əl) n. pl. adjutants general. Abbr. A.G., AG 1. An adjutant of a unit having a general staff. 2. An officer in charge of the National Guard in one of the U.S. states. 3. Adjutant General. The chief administrative officer, a major general, of the U.S. Army.

adjutant stork (äj'ə-tənt stōrk) n. See marabou (n., sense 1).

ad·ju·vant (äj'ə-vənt) n. 1. A pharmacological agent added to a drug to increase or aid its effect. 2. An immunological agent that increases the antigenic response. [From Latin adiuvāns, adiuvant- present participle of adiuvāre, to help. See AID.]

Ad·ler (äd'lər, äd'-), Alfred. 1870-1937. Austrian psychiatrist who rejected Sigmund Freud's emphasis on sexuality and theorized that neurotic behavior is an overcompensation for feelings of inferiority.

Ad·ler (äd'lər), Cyrus. 1863-1940. American religious leader and educator who was president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America (1924-1940) and edited scholarly works concerning Judaism.

Ad·ler (äd'lər, äd'-), Felix. 1851-1933. German-born American educator and reformer who founded the Society for Ethical Culture (1876), an organization dedicated to the teaching and application of ethical ideals.

Ad·ler (äd'lər), Jacob. 1855-1926. Russian-born actor active in Yiddish theater. His children Stella (born 1902) and Luther (1903-1984) became prominent American actors.

Ad·ler (äd'lər), Mortimer Jerome. Born 1902. American philosopher and educator whose numerous published works include How to Read a Book (1940) and The Conditions of Philosophy (1965).

Ad·le·ri·an (äd-lîr'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or being a psychological school based on the belief that behavior arises in subconscious efforts to compensate for inferiority or deficiency and that neurosis results from overcompensation. [After Alfred ADLER.]

ad lib (äd lib') adv. In an unrestrained manner; spontaneously. [Short for AD LIBITUM.]

ad-lib (äd-lib') v. ad--libbed, ad--lib-bing, ad--libs. — v. tr. To improvise and deliver extemporaneously. — v. intr. To engage in improvisation, as during delivery of a speech. — n. (äd'lib') Words, music, or actions uttered, performed, or carried out in an extemporaneous manner. — adj. Uttered, performed, or carried out spontaneously. See Synonyms at extemporaneous.

—ad-lib/ber n.

ad lib-i-tum (ăd lib'ĭ-təm) adj. Music. At the discretion of the performer. Used chiefly as a direction giving license to alter or omit a part. [Latin ad, according to + libitum, past participle of libēre, to please.]

ad loc. abbr. Latin. Ad locum (to, or at, the place).

adm. abbr. 1. Administration. 2. Administrative. 3. Administrator.

ad-meas-ure (ăd-mězh'ər) v. tr. ad-meas-ured, ad-meas-ur-ing, ad-meas-ures. To divide and distribute proportionally; apportion. [Middle English amesuren, from Old French amesurer: a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + mesurer, to measure (from Late Latin mēnsūrāre, to measure, from Latin mēnsūra, measure); see MEASURE.] —ad-meas/ure-ment n. —ad-meas/ur-er n.

Ad-me-tus (ăd-mē'təs) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Thessaly and husband of Alcestis.

admin. abbr. 1. Administration. 2. Administrative. 3. Administrator.

ad-min-is-ter (ăd-mĭn'ĭ-stər) v. ad-min-is-tered, ad-min-is-ter-ing, ad-min-is-ters. — v. tr. 1. To have charge of; manage. 2. a. To give or apply in a formal way: administer the last rites. b. To apply as a remedy: administer a sedative. 3. To mete out; dispense: administer justice. 4. To manage or dispose of (a trust or an estate) under a will or an official appointment. 5. To impose, offer, or tender (an oath, for example). — v. intr. 1. To manage as an administrator. 2. To minister: administering to their every whim. [Middle English administren, from Old French administrer, from Latin administrāre: ad, ad- + ministrāre, to manage; see MINISTER.] —ad-min/is-tra-ble (-ĭ-strə-bəl) adj.

—ad-min/is-trant adj. & n.

ad-min-is-trate (ăd-mĭn'ĭ-strāt') v. tr. ad-min-is-trat-ed, ad-min-is-trat-ing, ad-min-is-trates. To administer.

ad-min-is-tra-tion (ăd-mĭn'ĭ-strā'shən) n. Abbr. admin., adm.

1. Management, especially of business affairs. 2. The activity of a sovereign state in the exercise of its powers or duties. 3. Often Administration. Those who constitute the executive branch of a government. 4. Management of an institution, public or private. 5. The term of office of an executive officer or a body. 6. Law. Management and disposal of a trust or an estate. 7. The dispensing, applying, or tendering of something, such as an oath, a sacrament, or medicine.

—ad-min/is-tra'tive (-strā'tĭv, -strə-) adj. —ad-min/is-tra'tive-ly adv.

administrative segregation (ăd-mĭn'ĭ-strā'tĭv səg'rĭ-gā'shən) n. Solitary confinement.

ad-min-is-tra-tor (ăd-mĭn'ĭ-strā'tər) n. Abbr. admin., adm. 1. One who administers, especially business or public affairs; an executive. 2. One appointed to administer an estate.

ad·mi·ra·ble (ăd'mər-ə-bəl) adj. Deserving admiration.

—ad'mi·ra·ble·ness n. —ad'mi·ra·bly adv.

ad·mi·ral (ăd'mər-əl) n. 1. The commander in chief of a fleet. 2. A flag officer. 3. a. A commissioned rank in the U.S. Navy or Coast Guard that is above vice-admiral and below Admiral of the Fleet. b. One who holds the rank of admiral, Admiral of the Fleet, rear admiral, or vice-admiral. 4. Any of various brightly colored butterflies of the genera Limenitis and Vanessa. 5. Archaic. The ship carrying an admiral; flagship. [Middle English amiral, admiral, from Old French, and from Medieval Latin amīrālis, admīrālis both from Arabic 'amīr a 'ālī, high commander.]

Ad·mi·ral of the Fleet (ăd'mər-əl ùv thə flēt) n. 1. The highest rank in the U.S. Navy, equivalent to General of the Army. 2. One who holds this rank. Also called Fleet Admiral ad·mi·ral·ty (ăd'mər-əl-tē) n. pl. ad·mi·ral·ties. 1. a. A court exercising jurisdiction over all maritime cases. b. Maritime law. 2. Admiralty. The department of the British government that once had control over all naval affairs.

Ad·mi·ral·ty Inlet (ăd'mər-əl-tē in'lēt') An arm of the Pacific Ocean in northwest Washington. It is the northernmost part of Puget Sound and lies between Whidbey Island and the mainland.

Admiralty Island (ăd'mər-əl-tē ī'lənd) A mountainous, heavily forested island of southeast Alaska in the Alexander Archipelago southwest of Juneau.

Admiralty Islands (ăd'mər-əl-tē ī'ləndz) A group of volcanic islands of the southwest Pacific Ocean in the Bismarck Archipelago. Discovered by the Dutch in 1616, the islands are now part of Papua New Guinea.

Admiralty Range (ăd'mər-əl-tē rānj) A mountain group of Antarctica on the northern coast of Victoria Land northwest of Ross Sea. The range was discovered by Sir James Ross on his 1841 expedition.

ad·mi·ra·tion (ăd'mə-rā'shən) n. 1. A feeling of pleasure, wonder, and approval. See Synonyms at regard. 2. An object of wonder and esteem; a marvel. 3. Archaic. Wonder.

ad·mire (ăd-mīr') v. ad·mired, ad·mir·ing, ad·mires. — v. tr. 1. To regard with pleasure, wonder, and approval. 2. To have a high opinion of; esteem or respect. 3. Chiefly New England & Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. To enjoy (something): "I just admire to get letters, but I don't admire to answer them" (Dialect Notes). 4. Archaic. To marvel or wonder at. — v. intr. New England & Upper Southern U.S. To marvel at something. [French admirer, from Old French amirer, from Latin admīrārī, to wonder at : ad-, ad- + mīrārī, to wonder (from mīrus, wonderful); see smei- in Appendix.] —ad·mir'er n. —ad·mir'ing·ly adv.

ad·mis·si·ble (ăd-mīs'sə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be accepted; allowable: admissible evidence. 2. Worthy of admission. —ad·mis'si·bil'i·ty, ad-mis-'si·ble·ness n. —ad·mis'si·bly adv.

ad·mis·sion (ăd-mĭsh'ən) n. 1. a. The act of admitting or allowing to enter. b. The state of being allowed to enter. 2. Right to enter; access. 3. The price required or paid for entering; an entrance fee. 4. A confession, as of having committed a crime. 5. A voluntary acknowledgment of truth. 6. A fact or statement granted or admitted; a concession. [Middle English, from Latin admissiō, admissiōn-, from admissus, past participle of admittere, to admit. See ADMIT.] —ad·mis'sive (-mĭs'iv) adj.

USAGE NOTE: It is often maintained that admittance should be used only to refer to achieving physical access to a place (He was denied admittance to the courtroom), and that admission should be used for the wider sense of achieving entry to a group or institution (her admission to the club; China's admission to the United Nations). This distinction is often ignored, though many writers continue to observe it. But admission is much more common in the sense “a fee paid for the right of entry”: The admission to the movie was five dollars.

ad·mit (ăd-mĭt') v. ad·mit·ted, ad·mit·ting, ad·mits. — v. tr. 1. To permit to enter. 2. To serve as a means of entrance: A ticket that admits the whole group. 3. To permit to exercise the rights, functions, or privileges of: was admitted to the bar association. 4. To have room for; accommodate. 5. To afford opportunity for; permit. 6. To grant to be real, valid, or true; acknowledge: admit the truth. See Synonyms at acknowledge. 7. To grant as true or valid, as for the sake of argument; concede. — v. intr. 1. To afford possibility: a problem that admits of no solution. 2. To allow entrance; afford access: a door admitting to the hall. 3. To make acknowledgment. [Middle English amitten, admitten, from Old French amettre, admettre, from Latin admittere : ad-, ad- + mittere, to send.]

ad·mit·tance (ăd-mĭt'sns) n. 1. The act of admitting or entering. 2. a. Permission to enter. b. Right of entry. See Usage Note at admission. 3. Symbol Y Electricity. The reciprocal of impedance.

ad·mit·ted·ly (ăd-mĭt'ĭd-lē) adv. By general admission; confessedly.

ad·mix (ăd-mĭks') v. tr. intr. ad·mixed, ad·mix·ing, ad·mix·es. To mix; blend. [Back-formation from obsolete admixt, mixed into, from Middle English, from Latin admixtus, past participle of admiscere, to mix into : ad-, ad- + miscere, to mix; see meik- in Appendix.]

ad·mix·ture (ăd-mĭks'chər) n. 1. a. The act of mixing or mingling. b. The state of being mingled or mixed. 2. Something that is produced by mixing; a mixture. 3. Something added in mixing. See Synonyms at mixture.

ad·mon·ish (ăd-mŏn'ish) v. tr. ad·mon·ished, ad·mon·ish·ing, ad·mon·ish·es. 1. To reprove gently but earnestly. 2. To counsel (another) against something to be avoided; caution. 3. To remind of something forgotten or disregarded, as an obligation or a responsibility. [Middle English amonishen, admonishen, alteration of amonesten, from Old French amonester, admonester, from Vulgar Latin admonestāre*, from Latin admonēre : ad-, ad- + monēre, to warn; see men¹ in Appendix.] —ad·mon'ish·er n. —ad·mon'ish·ing·ly adv. —ad·mon'ish·ment n.

SYNONYMS: admonish, reprove, rebuke, reprimand, reproach. These verbs refer to adverse criticism intended as a corrective or caution. Admonish implies the giving of advice or a warning so that a fault can be rectified or a danger avoided: “A gallows erected on an eminence admonished the offenders of the fate that awaited them” (William Hickling Prescott). Reprove usually suggests gentle criticism and constructive intent: With a quick look the teacher reprovved the child for whispering in class. Rebuke and reprimand both refer to sharp, often angry criticism; of the two reprimand more frequently implies formal or official censure: “Some of the most heated criticism... has come from the Justice Department, which rarely rebukes other agencies in public” (Howard Kurtz). “A committee at [the university] asked its president to reprimand a scientist who tested gene-altered bacteria on trees” (New York Times). Reproach usually refers to regretful or unhappy criticism arising from a sense of disappointment: “Even if I had done wrong you should not have reproached me in public—people wash their dirty linen at home” (Napoleon Bonaparte).

ad·mo·ni·tion (ăd'mə-nîsh'ən) n. 1. Mild, kind, yet earnest reproof.

2. Cautionary advice or warning. [Middle English amonicioun, from Old French amonition, from Latin admonitiō, admonitiōn-, from admonitus, past participle of admonēre, to admonish. See ADMONISH.]

ad·mon·i·to·ry (ăd-mŏn'î-tŏr'ē, -tŏr'ē) adj. Expressing admonition.

ad·nate (ăd'nāt') adj. Biology. United to a part or organ of a different kind, as stamens attached to petals. [Latin adnātus, variant of agnātus, past participle of agnāscī, to grow upon. See AGNATE.] —ad·na'tion n.

ad nau·se·am (ăd nô'zē-əm) adv. To a disgusting or ridiculous degree; to the point of nausea. [Latin ad, to + nauseam, accusative of nausea, sickness.]

ad·nex·a (ăd-nĕk'sə) pl.n. Accessory or adjoining anatomical parts, as ovaries and oviducts in relation to the uterus. [Latin, neuter pl. of adnexus past participle of adnectere, to bind to. See ANNEX.] —ad·nex'al adj.

ad·noun (ăd'noun') n. Grammar. An adjective used as a noun, such as merciful in Blessed are the merciful. [Latin ad, to; see AD- + NOUN.] —ad·nom'i·nal (ăd-nŏm'ə-nəl) adj.

a·do (ə-dŏo') n. Bustle; fuss; trouble; bother. [Middle English, from the phrase at do : at, to (used with infinitive) (from Old Norse at); see ad- in Appendix + do, do; see DO¹.]

A·do (ä'dō) A city of southwest Nigeria northeast of Lagos. It was once the capital of a Yoruba state that was probably founded in the 15th century. Population, 253,300.

a·do·be (ə-dō'bē) n. 1. a. A sun-dried, unburned brick of clay and straw. b. The clay or soil from which this brick is made. 2. A structure built with this type of brick. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an adobe house; adobe walls. [Spanish, from Arabic aṭ-ṭūbah, the brick : al, the + ṭūbah, brick.]

a·do·bo (ä-dō'bō) n. pl. a·do·bos. A Philippine dish of marinated vegetables and meat or fish seasoned with garlic, soy sauce, and spices and served with rice. [Spanish, from Old Spanish adobar, to stew, from Old French adouber, to dub, arm, prepare, of Germanic origin.]

ad·o·les·cence (äd'l-ēs'əns) n. 1. The period of physical and psychological development from the onset of puberty to maturity. 2. A transitional period of development between youth and maturity: the adolescence of a nation.

ad·o·les·cent (äd'l-ēs'ənt) adj. Of, relating to, or undergoing adolescence. See Synonyms at young. — n. A young person who has undergone puberty but who has not reached full maturity; a teenager. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin adolēscēns, adolēscēt- present participle of adolēscere, to grow up : ad-, ad- + alēscere, to grow, inchoative of alere, to nourish; see al² in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: The adolescent grows up to become the adult. The words adolescent and adult that refer to these two stages in the human life cycle ultimately come from forms of the same Latin word, adolēscere, meaning “to grow up.” The present participle of adolēscere, adolēscēns, from which adolescent derives, means “growing up,” while the past participle adultus, the source of adult, means “grown up.” Appropriately enough, adolescent, first recorded in English in a work written perhaps in 1440, seems to have come into the language before adult, first recorded in a work published in 1531.

Ad·o·nai (ä'dō-nī', -noi') n. Lord. Used in Judaism as a spoken substitute for the ineffable name of God. [Hebrew 'ādōnāy, my lord, from Hebrew 'ādōn, lord.]

A·don·is (ə-dōn'is, ə-dō'nīs) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A strikingly beautiful youth loved by Aphrodite. 2. Often adonis. A very handsome young man. [Greek Adōnis, from Phoenician adōn, lord.]

a·dopt (ə-dōpt') v. tr. a·dopt·ed, a·dopt·ing, a·dopts. 1. To take into one's family through legal means and raise as one's own child. 2. a. To take and follow (a course of action, for example) by choice or assent: adopt a new technique. b. To take up and make one's own: adopt a new idea. 3. To take on or assume: adopted an air of importance. 4. To vote to accept: adopt a resolution. 5. To choose as standard or required in a course: adopt a new line of English textbooks. [Middle English adopten, from Old French adopter, from Latin adoptāre : ad-, ad- + optāre, to choose.] —a·dop't·a·ble adj. —a·dop't'er n. —a·dop'tion n.

USAGE NOTE: One refers to an adopted child but to adoptive parents.

a·dop·tee (ə-döp'tē, ə-döp-tē') n. One, such as a child, that is or has been adopted.

a·dop·tive (ə-döp'tiv) adj. 1. a. Of or having to do with adoption.

b. Characteristic of adoption. 2. Related by adoption: “increased honesty and sharing between birth families, adoptive families and adoptees” (Robyn S. Quinter). See Usage Note at adopt. —a·dop'tive·ly adv.

adoptive immunotherapy (ə-döp'tiv im'yə-nō-thēr'ə-pē) n. A form of immunotherapy used in the treatment of cancer in which an individual's own white blood cells are coupled with a naturally produced growth factor to enhance their cancer-fighting capacity.

a·dor·a·ble (ə-dôr'ə-bəl, ə-dôr'-) adj. 1. Delightful, lovable, and charming: an adorable set of twins. 2. Worthy of adoration. —a·dor'a·bil'i·ty, a·dor'a·ble·ness n. —a·dor'a·bly adv.

ad·o·ral (äd-ôr'əl, -ôr'-) adj. Situated toward or near the mouth.

ad·o·ra·tion (äd'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act of worship. 2. Profound love or regard.

a·dore (ə-dôr', ə-dör') v. a·dored, a·dor·ing, a·dores. — v. tr. 1. To worship as God or a god. 2. To regard with deep, often rapturous love. See Synonyms at revere¹. 3. To like very much: adores mink coats. — v. intr. To worship. [Middle English adouren, from Old French adourer, from Latin adōrāre, to pray to : ad-, ad- + ōrāre, to pray.] —a·dor'er n. —a·dor'ing·ly adv.

a·dorn (ə-dörn') v. tr. a·dorned, a·dorn·ing, a·dorns. 1. To lend beauty to; decorate: “the pale mimosas that adorned the favorite promenade” (Ronald Firbank). 2. To fit out with or as if with ornaments: “The sugar plantations were adorned with windmills” (Alec Waugh). 3. To enhance the distinction, beauty, splendor, or glory of; add luster to: “Virtue adorned his mind” (John Ford). [Middle English adornen, from Old French adourner, from Latin adōrnāre : ad-, ad- + ōrnāre, to decorate; see ar- in Appendix.] —a·dorn'er n.

a·dorn·ment (ə-dörn'mənt) n. 1. The act of adorning. 2. Something that beautifies or adorns; an ornament. “Japanese food is on the whole superb, one of the adornments of the culture” (James Fallows).

A·dour (ə-dōor') A river of southwest France rising in the Pyrenees and flowing about 338 km (210 mi) north then west to the Bay of Biscay near Biarritz.

A·do·wa (ä'də-wə, äd'ə-) See Adwa.

ADP¹ (ā'dē'pē') n. An ester of adenosine, C₁₀H₁₅N₅O₁₀P₂, that is converted to ATP for the storage of energy. [A(DENOSINE) D(I)P(HOSPDATE).]

ADP² abbr. Computer Science. Automatic data processing.

A·dras·te·a (ə-drās'tē-ə) n. The satellite of Jupiter that is third in distance from the planet. [Latin Adrāstēa, daughter of Jupiter and distributor of rewards and punishments, from Greek Adrasteia, so called from an altar erected to her by Adrastos, king of Argos.]

ad·re·nal (ə-drē'nəl) adj. 1. At, near, or on the kidneys. 2. Of or relating to the adrenal glands or their secretions. — n. The adrenal gland. [AD- + RENAL.]
—ad·re·nal·ly adv.

adrenal cortex (ə-drē'nəl kôr'těks') n. The outer portion of the adrenal glands that produces several steroid hormones, including cortisol and aldosterone.

ad·re·nal·ec·to·my (ə-drē'nə-lěk'tə-mē) n. The surgical excision of one or both of the adrenal glands.

adrenal gland (ə-drē'nəl gländ) n. Either of two small, dissimilarly shaped endocrine glands, one located above each kidney, consisting of the cortex, which secretes several steroid hormones, and the medulla, which secretes epinephrine. Also called suprarenal gland a·dren·a·line (ə-drěn'ə-lĭn) n. See epinephrine (n., sense 1).

A·dren·a·lin (ə-drěn'ə-lĭn) A trademark used for a medicinal preparation of adrenaline.

ad·re·nal·ize (ə-drē'nə-lĭz', ə-drěn'ə-) v. tr. ad·re·nal·ized, ad·re·nal·iz·ing, ad·re·nal·izes. To stir up and spur to action.

adrenal medulla (ə-drē'nəl mĭ-dŭl'ə) n. The inner, reddish-brown portion of the adrenal glands that synthesizes, stores, and releases epinephrine and norepinephrine.

ad·re·ner·gic (ăd'rə-nŭr'jĭk) adj. Producing or activated by epinephrine or an epinephrinelike substance: an adrenergic nerve fiber. [ADREN(ALINE) + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix.] —ad·re·ner·gi·cal·ly adv.

a·dre·no·chrome (ə-drē'nō-krōm', -nə-) n. A naturally occurring chemical formed during the oxidation of epinephrine. [ADREN(ALINE) + CHROME.]

a·dre·no·cor·ti·cal (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tĭ-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or derived from the adrenal cortex. [ADREN(AL) + CORTICAL.]

ad·re·no·cor·ti·co·ster·oid (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tĭ-kō-stĭr'oid, -stĕr'-) n. A steroid derived from the adrenal cortex or one that produces physiological effects similar to those of the adrenal cortex. [ADREN(AL) + CORTICOSTEROID.]

ad·re·no·cor·ti·co·trop·ic (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tĭ-kō-trŏp'ĭk, -trŏ'pĭk) also ad·re·no·cor·ti·co·troph·ic (-trŏf'ĭk, -trŏ'fĭk) adj. Stimulating or otherwise acting on the adrenal cortex. [ADREN(AL) + CORTICO- + -TROPIC.]

adrenocorticotropic hormone (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tī-kō-trōp'ik hôr'môn') also ad-re-no-cor-ti-co-troph-ic (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tī-kō-trōf'ik hôr'môn') n.

ACTH.

ad-re-no-cor-ti-co-trop-in (ə-drē'nō-kôr'tī-kō-trōp'in, -trō'pĭn) also ad-re-no-cor-ti-co-troph-in (-trōf'in, trō'fĭn) n. See ACTH. [ADREN(AL) + CORTICOTROPIN.]

ad-re-no-lyt-ic (ə-drē'nə-līt'ik) adj. Inhibiting or preventing the action of adrenergic nerves or the effects of epinephrine: an adrenolytic drug. [ADREN(AL) + LYTIC.] —ad-re'no-lyt'ic n.

A-dri-a-my-cin (ā'drē-ə-mī'sən) A trademark used for an antibiotic containing doxorubicin and used as an antineoplastic agent.

A-dri-an (ā'drē-ən) A city of southeast Michigan southwest of Detroit. It is a trade center in a fertile farming region. Population, 22,097.

A-dri-an IV (ā'drē-ən), Originally Nicholas Breakspear. 1100?-1159. English-born pope (1154-1159) whose papacy was marked by disputes with Emperor Frederick I. He is reputed to have bestowed sovereignty over Ireland on Henry II of England (c. 1155).

A-dri-an (ā'drē-ən), Edgar Douglas First Baron Adrian. 1889-1977. British physiologist. He shared a 1932 Nobel Prize for major advances in the understanding of the nervous and muscular systems.

A-dri-a-no-ple (ā'drē-ə-nō'pəl) See Edirne.

A-dri-at-ic Sea (ā'drē-ăt'ik sē) An arm of the Mediterranean Sea between Italy and the Balkan Peninsula. It extends from the Gulf of Venice southward to the Strait of Otranto, which links it to the Ionian Sea.

a-drift (ə-drift') adv. & adj. 1. Drifting or floating freely; not anchored. 2. Without direction or purpose.

a-droit (ə-droit') adj. 1. Dexterous; deft. 2. Skillful and adept under pressing conditions. See Synonyms at dexterous. [French, from à droit : à, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + droit, right (from Latin dīrēctus); see DIRECT.] —a-droit'ly adv. —a-droit'ness n.

ad-sci-ti-tious (ăd'sī-tīsh'əs) adj. Not inherent or essential; derived from something outside. [From Latin adscītus, past participle of adscīscere, to adopt : ad-, ad- + scīscere, to accept, inchoative of scīre, to know; see skei- in Appendix.]

ad seg (ăd' sĕg') n. Informal. Administrative segregation.

ad-sorb (ăd-sôrb', -zôrb') v. tr. ad-sorbed, ad-sorb-ing, ad-sorbs. To take up by adsorption. [AD- + Latin sorbēre, to suck.] —ad-sorb'a-ble adj.

ad-sor-bate (-sôrb'bit, -bāt', ăd-zôrb'-) n. An adsorbed substance.

ad-sor-bent (ăd-sôrb'bənt, -zôrb'-) adj. Capable of adsorption. — n. An adsorptive material, such as activated charcoal.

ad·sorp·tion (ăd-sôrp'shən, -zôrp'-) n. The accumulation of gases, liquids, or solutes on the surface of a solid or liquid. [From ADSORB.] —ad·sorp'tive (-tĭv) adj.

ad·su·ki bean (ăd-sōō'kē bēn, -zōō'-) n. Variant of adzuki bean.

ad·u·lar·i·a (ăj'ə-lâr'ē-ə, -lâr'-) n. A variety of transparent or translucent orthoclase. [Italian, from French adulaire, after Adula, a mountain group of southeast Switzerland.]

ad·u·late (ăj'ə-lāt') v. tr. ad·u·lat·ed, ad·u·lat·ing, ad·u·lates. To praise or admire excessively; fawn on. [Back-formation from ADULATION.] —ad'u·la'tor n. —ad'u·la·to'ry (-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

ad·u·la·tion (ăj'ə-lā'shən) n. Excessive flattery or admiration. [Middle English adulacioun, from Old French, from Latin adulātiō, adulātiōn-, from adulātus, past participle of adulārī, to flatter.]

a·dult (ə-dŭlt', ăd'ŭlt) n. 1. One who has attained maturity or legal age.

2. Biology. A fully grown, mature organism. — adj. 1. Fully developed and mature. 2. Intended for or befitting adults: adult education. 3. Containing or dealing in explicitly sexual material; pornographic: adult movies; adult bookstores. [From Latin adultus, past participle of adolēscere, to grow up. See ADOLESCENT.]

—a·dult'hood' n. —a·dult'ness n.

a·dul·ter·ant (ə-dŭl'tər-ənt) n. A substance that adulterates. — adj. Serving to adulterate.

a·dul·ter·ate (ə-dŭl'tə-rāt') v. tr. a·dul·ter·at·ed, a·dul·ter·at·ing, a·dul·ter·ates. To make impure by adding extraneous, improper, or inferior ingredients. — adj. (-tər-ĭt) 1. Spurious; adulterated. 2. Adulterous. [Latin adulterāre, adulterāt-, to pollute. See al¹ in Appendix.] —a·dul'ter·a'tion n.

—a·dul'ter·a'tor n.

SYNONYMS: adulterate, debase, doctor, load, sophisticate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to make impure or inferior by adding foreign substances, especially by way of fraudulently increasing weight or quantity”: adulterate coffee with ground acorns; silver debased with copper; doctored the wine with water; rag paper loaded with wood fiber; alcohol sophisticated with ether.

a·dul·ter·er (ə-dŭl'tər-ər) n. One who commits adultery.

a·dul·ter·ess (ə-dŭl'trĭs, -tər-ĭs) n. A woman who commits adultery.

a·dul·ter·ine (ə-dŭl'tə-rĭn', -rĕn') adj. 1. Characterized by adulteration; spurious. 2. Unauthorized by law; illegal. 3. Born of adultery: adulterine offspring. [Latin adulterĭnus, from adulter, adulterer, perhaps back-formation from adulterāre, to pollute. See ADULTERATE.]

a·dul·ter·ous (ə-dŭl'tər-əs, -trəs) adj. Relating to, inclined to, or marked by adultery. —a·dul'ter·ous·ly adv.

a·dul·ter·y (ə-dül'tə-rē, -trē) n. pl. a·dul·ter·ies. Voluntary sexual intercourse between a married person and a partner other than the lawful spouse. [Middle English, from Old French adultere, from Latin adulterium, from adulter, adulterer. See ADULTERATE.]

a·dult-on-set diabetes (ə-dült'ön'sět dī'ə-bē'tīs, -ōn'-) n. Non-insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus. ad·um·brate (äd'əm-brät', ə-düm'-) *v. tr. ad·um·brat·ed, ad·um·brat·ing, ad·um·brates. 1. To give a sketchy outline of. 2. To prefigure indistinctly; foreshadow. 3. To disclose partially or guardedly. [Latin adumbrāre, adumbrāt-, to represent in outline : ad-, ad- + umbra, shadow.] —ad'um·bra'tion *n.

—ad·um'bra-tive (ə-düm'brə-tīv) adj. —ad·um'bra-tive-ly adv.

a·dust (ə-düst') adj. 1. Burned; scorched. 2. Archaic. Browened by the sun; sunburned. 3. Archaic. Melancholy in appearance; gloomy. [Middle English, from Latin adustus, past participle of adūrere, to set fire to : ad-, ad- + ūrere, to burn.]

A·du·wa (äd'də-wə, äd'ə-) See Adwa.

adv. abbr. 1. Grammar. Adverb; adverbial. 2. Latin. Adversus (against). 3. Advertisement. 4. Advisory.

ad va·lo·rem (äd' və-lōr'əm, -lōr'-) adj. Abbr. a.v., a/v, ad val. In proportion to the value: ad valorem duties on imported goods. [Latin ad, to + valorem, value.]

ad·vance (äd-vāns') v. ad·vanc·ed, ad·vanc·ing, ad·vanc·es. — v. tr.

1. To move or cause to move forward. 2. To put forward; propose or suggest: advanced a novel theory during the seminar. 3. To aid the growth or progress of. 4. To raise in rank; promote. 5. To cause to occur sooner: advance a deadline by one week. 6. To raise in amount or rate; increase. 7. To pay (money or interest) before due. 8. To supply or lend, especially on credit. 9. To serve as an advance person for (a trip to be made by a politician or a dignitary): “advanced the China trip during which the first trade agreements... were signed” (Suzanne Perney).

10. Archaic. To lift. — v. intr. 1. a. To go or move forward or onward. b. To move against another, as when attacking: advance on the enemy's position. 2. To make progress; improve. 3. To rise in rank, position, or value. 4. To serve as an advance person for a trip to be made by a politician or a dignitary. — n. 1. The act or process of moving or going forward. 2. A forward move, as toward an objective; progress: an advance in genetic engineering. 3. An increase of price or value. 4. advances. Opening approaches made to secure acquaintance, favor, or an agreement; overtures. 5. a. The furnishing of funds or goods on credit. b. The funds or goods so furnished; a loan. 6. Payment of money before due: an advance on next week's salary. — adj. 1. Made or given ahead of time: an advance payment. 2. Going before, in front, or forward. —idioms. in advance. Ahead of time; beforehand. in advance of. In front of; ahead of.

[Middle English avauncen, from Old French avauncer, from Vulgar Latin

abantiāre*, from Latin abante, from before : ab-, ab- + ante, before; see ant- in Appendix.] —ad·vanc'er n.

SYNONYMS: advance, forward, foster, further, promote. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause to move ahead, as toward a goal”: advance a worthy cause; forwarding their own interests; fostered friendly relations; furthering your career; efforts to promote sales.

ANTONYM: retard

USAGE NOTE: Advance, as a noun, is used for forward movement (the advance of the army) or for progress or improvement in a figurative sense. Advancement is used mainly in the figurative sense: career advancement. In the figurative sense, moreover, there is a distinction between the two terms deriving from the transitive and intransitive forms of the verb advance. The noun advancement (unlike advance) often implies the existence of an agent or outside force. Thus, the advance of science means simply the progress of science, whereas the advancement of science implies progress resulting from the action of an agent or force: The purpose of the legislation was the advancement of science.

ad·vanced (ăd-vănst') adj. 1. Highly developed or complex. 2. Being at a higher level than others: an advanced text in physics. 3. Ahead of the times; progressive: advanced teaching methods. 4. Far along in course or time: an advanced stage of illness; a person of advanced age.

advanced degree (ăd-vănst' dī-grē') n. A university degree, such as a master's or doctorate, that is higher than a bachelor's.

Ad·vanced level (ăd-vănst' lēv'əl) n. Chiefly British. A level.

advanced standing (ăd-vănst' stăn'dĩng) n. The status of a college student granted credit, usually after passing a qualifying test, for courses omitted or taken elsewhere.

advance guard (ăd-văns' gărd) n. A detachment of troops sent ahead of a main force to reconnoiter and provide protection.

advance man or ad·vance·man (ăd-văns'măn') n. A man who travels ahead to arrange the details of scheduling, publicity, security, and other matters connected with a trip or a public appearance, especially one to be made by a politician or a dignitary: “Spontaneous' crowds are painstakingly built through days of effort by political advancementen” (Timothy G. Smith).

ad·vance·ment (ăd-văns'mənt) n. 1. A forward step; an improvement.

2. Development; progress: the advancement of knowledge. 3. A promotion, as in rank. 4. The act of moving forward. See Usage Note at advance.

advance person (ăd-văns' pûr'sən) n. A person who travels ahead to arrange the details of a trip or a public appearance, especially one to be made by a politician or a dignitary.

ad·van·tage (ăd-văn'tīj) n. 1. A beneficial factor or combination of factors. 2. Benefit or profit; gain: It is to your advantage to invest wisely. 3. A relatively favorable position; superiority of means: A better education gave us the advantage. 4. Sports. a. The first point scored in tennis after deuce. b. The resulting score. — v. tr. ad·van·taged, ad·van·tag·ing, ad·van·tag·es. To afford profit or gain to; benefit. — idioms. take advantage of. 1. To put to good use; avail oneself of: take advantage of all educational opportunities. 2. To profit selfishly by; exploit: took advantage of the customer. to advantage. To good effect; favorably: The roses were displayed to advantage in a blue vase. [Middle English avauntage, from Old French, from avant, before, from Latin abante, from before. See ADVANCE.]

SYNONYMS: advantage, edge, handicap, odds. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a factor or combination of factors conducive to superiority and success”: has the advantage of a superior education; a manufacturing edge given by sophisticated technology; a golfing champion with a handicap of 2; odds overwhelmingly in our favor.

ANTONYM: disadvantage

ad·van·ta·geous (ăd'văn-tā'jəs, -vən-) adj. Affording advantage; beneficial. See Synonyms at beneficial. — ad'van·ta'geous·ly adv. — ad'van·ta'geous·ness n.

ad·vect (ăd-věkt') v. tr. ad·vect·ed, ad·vect·ing, ad·vects. 1. To convey horizontally by advection. 2. To transport (a substance) by advection. [Back-formation from ADVECTION.]

ad·vec·tion (ăd-věk'shən) n. A local change in the properties, such as temperature, of an air mass caused by the horizontal movement of the air mass. [Latin advectiō, advectiōn-, act of conveying, from advectus, past participle of advehere, to carry to : ad-, ad- + vehere, to carry; see wegh- in Appendix.]

ad·vent (ăd'vent') n. 1. The coming or arrival, especially of something extremely important: the advent of the computer. 2. Also Advent. a. The period beginning on the fourth Sunday before Christmas, observed by many Christians as a season of prayer, fasting, and penitence in preparation for Christmas. b. Theology. The coming of Jesus at the Incarnation. c. Theology. See Second Coming. [Middle English, the Advent season, from Old French, from Latin adventus, arrival, from past participle of advenīre, to come to : ad-, ad- + venīre, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

Ad·vent·ist (ăd'vent'-tīst, ăd'vent'-) n. A member of any of several Christian denominations that believe Jesus's Second Coming and the end of the world are near. — Ad'vent'ism n.

ad·ven·ti·tia (ăd'vĕn-tĭsh'ə, -vən-) n. The membranous outer covering of an organ or a blood vessel. [New Latin, from Latin adventicius, foreign. See ADVENTITIOUS.] —ad·ven·ti'tial adj.

ad·ven·ti'tious (ăd'vĕn-tĭsh'əs, -vən-) adj. 1. Not inherent but added extrinsically. See Synonyms at accidental. 2. Biology. Of or belonging to a structure that develops in an unusual place: adventitious roots. [From Latin adventicius, foreign, from adventus, arrival. See ADVENT.] —ad·ven·ti'tious-ly adv.

—ad·ven·ti'tious-ness n.

ad·ven·tive (ăd-vĕn'tĭv) Biology. adj. Not native to and not fully established in a new habitat or environment; locally or temporarily naturalized: an adventive weed. — n. An adventive organism. [From Latin adventus, arrival. See ADVENT.]

—ad·ven'tive-ly adv.

Advent Sunday (ăd'vĕnt' sŭn'dĕ) n. The first Sunday of Advent.

ad·ven·ture (ăd-vĕn'chər) n. 1. a. An undertaking or enterprise of a hazardous nature. b. An undertaking of a questionable nature, especially one involving intervention in another state's affairs. 2. An unusual or exciting experience: an adventure in dining. 3. Participation in hazardous or exciting experiences: the love of adventure. 4. A financial speculation or business venture. — v.

ad·ven·tured, ad·ven·tur·ing, ad·ven·tures. — v. tr. To hazard or risk.

— v. intr. To engage in hazardous activities; take risks. [Middle English aventure, from Old French, from Latin adventurus, future participle of advenire, to arrive. See ADVENT.]

ad·ven·tur·er (ăd-vĕn'chər-ər) n. 1. One that seeks adventure. 2. A soldier of fortune. 3. A heavy speculator in stocks, business, or trade. 4. One that attempts to gain wealth and social position by unscrupulous means.

ad·ven·ture·some (ăd-vĕn'chər-səm) adj. Disposed to engage in risky activities or enterprises. See Synonyms at adventurous. —ad·ven'ture-some-ly adv. —ad·ven'ture-some-ness n.

ad·ven·tur·ess (ăd-vĕn'chər-ĭs) n. A woman who seeks social and financial advancement by unscrupulous means.

adventure travel (ăd-vĕn'chər trāv'əl) n. Nontraditional, strenuous outdoor vacation travel, typically to remote places renowned for their natural beauty and involving activities such as camping, trekking, mountain and rock climbing, white-water rafting, sailing, diving, or viewing big game. —adventure traveler n.

ad·ven·tur·ism (ăd-vĕn'chə-rĭz'əm) n. Involvement in risky enterprises without regard to proper procedures and possible consequences, especially the reckless intervention by a nation in the affairs of another nation or region: "American strategic interests would... be even more jeopardized by Soviet adventurism in the Middle East" (Christopher T. Rand). —ad·ven'tur-ist adj. & n.

ad·ven·tur·ous (ăd-vĕn'chər-əs) adj. 1. Inclined to undertake new and daring enterprises. 2. Hazardous; risky. —ad·ven'tur·ous·ly adv. —ad·ven'tur·ous·ness n.

SYNONYMS: adventurous, adventuresome, audacious, daredevil, daring, venturesome. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “taking, willing to take, or seeking out risks”: adventurous pioneers; an adventuresome prospector; an audacious explorer; a daredevil test pilot; daring acrobats; a venturesome investor.

ad·verb (ăd'vûrb) n. Abbr. adv. Grammar. 1. A part of speech comprising a class of words that modify a verb, an adjective, or another adverb. 2. A word belonging to this class, such as rapidly in The dog runs rapidly. [Middle English adverbe, from Old French, from Latin adverbium : ad-, in relation to; see AD- + verbum, word; see wer⁵ in Appendix.]

ad·ver·bi·al (ăd-vûr'bĕ-əl) adj. Abbr. adv. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being an adverb. —ad·ver'bi·al·ly adv.

ad ver·bum (ăd vûr'bəm) adv. Word for word; verbatim. [Latin : ad, in accordance with + verbum, word.]

ad·ver·sar·i·al (ăd'vær-sâr'ĕ-əl) adj. Relating to or characteristic of an adversary; involving antagonistic elements: “the chasm between management and labor in this country, an often needlessly adversarial... atmosphere” (Steve Lohr).

ad·ver·sar·y (ăd'vær-sĕr'ĕ) n. pl. ad·ver·sar·ies. 1. An opponent; an enemy. See Synonyms at opponent. 2. Adversary. Theology. The Devil; Satan. Often used with the. [Middle English adversarie, from Latin adversarius, enemy, from adversus, against. See ADVERSE.]

ad·ver·sa·tive (ăd-vûr'sə-tĭv) adj. Expressing antithesis or opposition: the adversative conjunction but. — n. A word that expresses antithesis or opposition. [Latin adversativus, from adversatus, past participle of adversārī, to oppose, from adversus, against. See ADVERSE.] —ad·ver'sa·tive·ly adv.

ad·verse (ăd-vûrs', ăd'vûrs') adj. 1. Acting or serving to oppose; antagonistic: adverse criticism. 2. Contrary to one's interests or welfare; harmful or unfavorable: adverse circumstances. 3. Moving in an opposite or opposing direction: adverse currents. 4. Archaic. Placed opposite. [Middle English, from Old French advers, from Latin adversus, past participle of advertere, to turn toward : ad-, ad- + vertere, to turn; see wer² in Appendix.] —ad·verse'ly adv. —ad·verse'ness n.

ad·ver·si·ty (ăd-vûr'sĭ-tĕ) n. pl. ad·ver·si·ties. 1. A state of hardship or affliction; misfortune. 2. A calamitous event. See Synonyms at misfortune.

ad·vert¹ (ăd-vûrt') v. intr. ad·vert·ed, ad·vert·ing, ad·verts. To call attention; refer: advert to a problem. See Synonyms at refer. [Middle English adverten, from Old French advertir, to notice, from Latin advertere, to turn toward. See ADVERSE.] ad·vert² (ăd'vûrt) n. Chiefly British. An advertisement.

ad·ver·tise (ăd'vər-tīz') v. ad·ver·tised, ad·ver·tis·ing, ad·ver·tis·es. — v. tr. 1. To make public announcement of, especially to proclaim the qualities or advantages of (a product or business) so as to increase sales. See Synonyms at announce. 2. To make known; call attention to: advertised my intention to resign. 3. To warn or notify: “This event advertises me that there is such a fact as death” (Henry David Thoreau). — v. intr. 1. To call the attention of the public to a product or business. 2. To inquire or seek in a public notice, as in a newspaper: advertise for an apartment. [Middle English advertisen, to notify, from Old French advertir, advertiss-, to notice. See ADVERT¹.] — ad·ver·tis·er n.

ad·ver·tise·ment (ăd'vər-tīz'mənt, ăd-vûr'tīs-, -tīz-) n. Abbr. adv., advt.

1. The act of advertising. 2. A notice, such as a poster, newspaper display, or paid announcement in the electronic media, designed to attract public attention or patronage.

ad·ver·tis·ing (ăd'vər-tī'zīng) n. 1. The activity of attracting public attention to a product or business, as by paid announcements in print or on the air. 2. The business of designing and writing advertisements for publication or broadcast. 3. Advertisements considered as a group: This paper takes no advertising.

ad·vice (ăd-vīs') n. 1. Opinion about what could or should be done about a situation or problem; counsel. 2. Often advices. Information communicated; news: advices from an ambassador. [Middle English avis, advice, from Old French avis, from (ester) a vis, to seem : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + vis, seen (from Latin vīsum, what seems (good), from neuter past participle of vidēre, to see); see weid- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: advice, counsel, recommendation. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an opinion as to a decision or course of action”: sound advice for those looking for work; accepted the counsel of her attorney; refused to follow his recommendation. See also Synonyms at news ad·vis·a·ble (ăd-vī'zə-bəl) adj. Worthy of being recommended or suggested; prudent. — ad·vis'a·bil'i·ty, ad·vis'a·ble·ness n. — ad·vis'a·bly adv.

ad·vise (ăd-vīz') v. ad·vised, ad·vis·ing, ad·vis·es. — v. tr. 1. To offer advice to; counsel. 2. To recommend; suggest: advised patience. 3. Usage Problem. To inform; notify. — v. intr. 1. To take counsel; consult: She advised with her associates. 2. To offer advice. [Middle English avisen, advisen, from Old French aviser, from avis, advice. See ADVICE.]

SYNONYMS: advise, counsel, recommend. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to give recommendations to someone about a decision or course of action”: advised him to take advantage of the opportunity; will counsel her to be prudent; recommended that we wait. See also Synonyms at confer USAGE NOTE: The use of advise in the sense of “inform, notify,” was found acceptable by a majority of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey, but many members would prefer that this usage be restricted to business correspondence and legal contexts. Thus one may say The suspects were advised of their rights, but it would be considered pretentious to say You’d better advise your friends that the date of the picnic has been changed.

ad·vised (ăd·vīzd/) adj. 1. Thought out; considered. Often used in combination: well-advised; ill-advised. 2. Informed: Keep me advised of further developments.

ad·vis·ed·ly (ăd·vī’zīd-lē) adv. With careful consideration; deliberately.

ad·vi·see (ăd·vī·zē/) n. One that is advised.

ad·vise·ment (ăd·vīz’mənt) n. Careful consideration: Your request will be taken under advisement.

ad·vis·er or ad·vi·sor (ăd·vī’zər) n. 1. One that advises, such as a person or firm that offers official or professional advice to clients. 2. An educator who advises students in academic and personal matters.

ad·vi·so·ry (ăd·vī’zə-rē) adj. Abbr. adv. 1. Empowered to advise: an advisory committee. 2. Relating to or containing advice, especially a warning: an advisory memorandum regarding airworthiness. — n. pl. ad·vi·so·ries. A report giving information, especially a warning: a weather advisory.

ad·vo·ca·cy (ăd’və-kə-sē) n. The act of pleading or arguing in favor of something, such as a cause, an idea, or a policy; active support.

advocacy journalism (ăd’və-kə-sē jûr’nə-līz’əm) n. Journalism in which the writer or the publication expresses a subjective view or promotes a certain cause. — advocacy journalist n.

advocacy tank (ăd’və-kə-sē tăngk) n. A research and problem-solving institution functioning essentially as a lobby in that it attempts, through seminars and studies, to persuade legislators to adopt the views held by its staff, as on matters of foreign policy, economics, defense, or human rights.

ad·vo·cate (ăd’və-kāt/) v. tr. ad·vo·cat·ed, ad·vo·cat·ing, ad·vo·cates. To speak, plead, or argue in favor of. See Synonyms at support. — n. (-kīt, -kāt’) 1. One that argues for a cause; a supporter or defender: an advocate of civil rights. 2. One that pleads in another’s behalf; an intercessor: advocates for abused children and spouses. 3. A lawyer. [From Middle English advocat, lawyer, from Old French advocat, from Latin advocātus, past participle of advocāre, to summon for counsel : ad-, ad- + vocāre, to call; see wek^w- in Appendix.] — ad’vo·ca’tor n. — ad·voc’a·to’ry (ăd-vŏk’ə-tŏr’ē, -tŏr’ē, ăd’və-kə-) adj.

ad·vow·son (ăd·vou'zən) n. The right in English ecclesiastical law of presentation to a vacant benefice. [Middle English avouson, from Old French avoeson, from Medieval Latin advocātia, from Latin advocātiō, a summoning, from advocāre, to summon. See ADVOCATE.]

adv. abbr. Advertisement.

Ad·wa (ăd'wə, ăd'-) also A·du·wa or A·do·wa (ă'də-wə, ă'də-) A town of northern Ethiopia south of Asmara. Emperor Menelik II decisively defeated the Italians here in 1896 to secure recognition of Ethiopia's independence. Population, 21,107.

ad·y·na·mi·a (ăd'ə-nā'mē-ə) n. Loss of strength or vigor, usually because of disease. [A^{-1} + DYNAM(ISM) + $-IA^1$.] —ad'y·nam'ic (-năm'ik) adj.

ad·y·tum (ăd'ī-təm) n. pl. ad·y·ta (-tə). The sanctum in an ancient temple. [Latin, from Greek aduton, from adutos, not to be entered : a-, not; see A^{-1} + duein, to enter.]

adz or adze (ădz) n. An axlike tool with a curved blade at right angles to the handle, used for dressing wood. [Middle English adese, from Old English adesa.]

Ad·zhar·i·a (ə-jär'ē-ə) or Ad·zhar·i·stan (ə-jär'ī-stăn', ŭj'ə-ryī-stăn') A region of southwest Georgia bordering on the Black Sea and Turkey. Colonized by the Greeks in the fourth and fifth centuries B.C., it was ruled by the Romans and the Turks before its acquisition by Russia in 1878. —Ad·zhar' (ə-jär') n.

—Ad·zhar'i·an adj. & n.

ad·zu·ki bean (ăd-zōo'kē bēn) also ad·su·ki bean (-sōo'-, -zōo'-) or a·zu·ki bean (ə-zōo'-) n. 1. An erect or twining East Asian herb (Vigna angularis) of the pea family, having edible sprouts and reddish seeds used to make flour. 2. A seed of this plant. [Japanese azuki, from Chinese xiǎo dòu : xiǎo, small + dòu, bean.]

aech·me·a (ēk·mē'ə, ēk'mē-ə) n. Any of various tropical American bromeliads of the genus Aechmea, grown indoors for their attractive, often patterned leaves and showy bracts. [New Latin, from Greek aikhmē, point of a spear.]

ae·ci·o·spore (ē'sē-ə-spōr', -spōr', -shē-) n. A binucleate spore of a rust fungus, formed in a chainlike series in an aecium. [AECI(UM) + SPORE.]

ae·ci·um (ē'sē-əm, ē'shē-) n. pl. ae·ci·a (-sē-ə, -shē-ə). A cuplike structure of some rust fungi that contains chains of aeciospores. [New Latin, from Greek aikia, injury, from aeikēs, unseemly, injurious.] —ae'ci·al (ē'sē-əl, -shē-) adj.

a·e·des (ā-ē'dēz) n. pl. aedes. A mosquito of the genus Aedes, including A. aegypti, which transmits diseases such as yellow fever and dengue. Also called yellow-fever mosquito [New Latin Aēdēs, genus name, from Greek aēdēs, unpleasant : a-, not; see A^{-1} + ēdos, pleasure; see swād- in Appendix.] —a·e'dine (-dīn, -dēn) adj.

ae-dile (ē'dīl') n. An elected official of ancient Rome who was responsible for public works and games and who supervised markets, the grain supply, and the water supply. [Latin aedilis, from aedēs, house.]

Ae-ga-de-an Isles (ē-gā'dē'ən īlz) also Ae-ga-tes (-tēz) See Egadi Islands.

Ae-ge-an (ī-jē'ən) adj. Of or relating to the Bronze Age civilization that flourished in the Aegean area, as at Crete.

Aegean Sea (ī-jē'ən sē) An arm of the Mediterranean Sea off southeast Europe between Greece and Turkey. The numerous Aegean Islands dotting the sea include the Cyclades, the Dodecanese, and the Sporades. Most of the islands belong to Greece.

Ae-geus (ē'jōōs, ē'jē-əs) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Athens and the father of Theseus.

Ae-gi-na (ī-jī'nə) An island off southeast Greece in the Saronic Gulf of the Aegean Sea near Athens. It was a prosperous maritime city-state in the fifth century B.C. but declined after its defeat by Athens and the expulsion of its population. The first Greek coins were struck here.

Aeg-ir (äg'ər, ēj'ir) n. Mythology. The Norse god of the sea.

ae-gis also e-gis (ē'jis) n. 1. Protection: a child whose welfare is now under the aegis of the courts. 2. Sponsorship; patronage: a concert held under the aegis of the parents' association. 3. Greek Mythology. The shield or breastplate of Zeus, later an attribute of Athena, carrying at its center the head of Medusa. [Latin, from Greek aigis.]

Ae-gis-thus (ī-jīs'thəs) n. Greek Mythology. The son of Thyestes and lover of Clytemnestra. He helped Clytemnestra kill her husband Agamemnon upon Agamemnon's return from the Trojan War.

Ae-gos-pot-a-mi (ē'gəs-pöt'ə-mī') or Ae-gos-pot-a-mos (-mōs') A small river and ancient town of southern Thrace in present-day western Turkey. The culminating battle of the Peloponnesian War, in which Lysander and the Spartans destroyed the Athenian fleet, took place at the mouth of the river in 405 B.C.

Ael-fric (äl'frīk), Also called "Grammaticus." 955?-1020?. Anglo-Saxon abbot who is considered the greatest Old English prose writer. His works include Catholic Homilies, Lives of the Saints, and a Latin grammar.

-aemia suff. Variant of -emia.

Ae-ne-as (ī-nē'əs) n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The Trojan hero of Virgil's epic poem, the Aeneid, and son of Anchises and Aphrodite. He escaped the sack of Troy and wandered for seven years before settling in Italy.

a-e-ne-ous or a-e-ne-us (ā-ē'nē-əs) adj. Brassy or golden green in color. [From Latin aēneus, of bronze, from aes, bronze. See ayes- in Appendix.]

Ae-o-li-a (ē-ō'lē-ə) See Aeolis.

Ae-o-li-an (ē-ō'lē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Aeolis or its people or culture.

2. Greek Mythology. Of or relating to Aeolus. 3. aeolian. Variant of eolian. —

n. 1. One of a Hellenic people of central Greece that occupied Aeolis and Lesbos around 1100 B.C. 2. See Aeolic (n., sense 1).

Aeolian harp (ē-ō'lē-ən härp) n. Music. An instrument consisting of an open box over which are stretched strings that sound when the wind passes over them. Also called wind harp [From AEOLIAN, relating to Aeolus, god of the winds.]

Aeolian Islands (ē-ō'lē-ən ī'ləndz) See Lipari Islands.

Ae-ol-ic (ē-ōl'īk) n. 1. A group of dialects of ancient Greek spoken by the Aeolians. Also called Aeolian 2. Any of several verse forms built around a central choriamb, used especially by Sappho, Alcaeus, and their imitators.

Ae-o-lis (ē'ə-līs) or Ae-o-li-a (ē-ō'lē-ə) An ancient region of the western coast of Asia Minor in present-day Turkey. It was made up of a group of cities founded by the Aeolians c. 1100 B.C.

Ae-o-lus (ē'ə-ləs) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The god of the winds. 2. A king of Thessaly and ancestor of the Aeolians.

ae-on (ē'ōn', ē'ən) n. Variant of eon.

ae-o-ni-an (ē-ō'nē-ən) adj. Variant of eonian.

ae-py-or-nis (ē'pē-ōr'nīs) n. A genus of extinct, large, flightless birds native to Madagascar. [New Latin Aepyornis, genus name : Greek aipus, high + Greek ornis, bird; see or- in Appendix.]

ae-quor-in (ē-kwōr'īn, ē-kwōr'-) n. A protein secreted by certain jellyfish that interacts with seawater to produce bioluminescent light. [New Latin Aequorea, jellyfish genus (from Latin aequoreus, of the sea, from aequor, smooth surface, from aequus, smooth) + -IN.]

aer- pref. Variant of aero-.

aer-ate (âr'āt) v. tr. aer-at-ed, aer-at-ing, aer-ates. 1. To supply or charge (liquid) with a gas, especially to charge with carbon dioxide. 2. To expose to the circulation of air for purification. 3. To expose (a tissue) to oxygen, as in the oxygenation of the blood by respiration. —aer-a'tion n.

aer-a-tor (âr'ā'tər) n. One that aerates, as a machine for aerating turf or a device for aerating liquids.

aer-en-chy-ma (â-rěng'kə-mə) n. A spongy tissue with large air spaces found between the cells of the stems and leaves of aquatic plants, providing buoyancy and allowing the circulation of gases. [New Latin : AER(O)- + Greek enkharma, filling (from enkhein, to pour in : en-, in; see en-² + khein, to pour); see CHYME.]

aer-i-al (âr'ē-əl, ā-îr'ē-əl) adj. 1. Of, in, or caused by the air. 2. Living in the air. 3. Reaching high into the air; lofty. 4. Suggestive of air, as in lightness; airy. 5. Unsubstantial; imaginary. 6. Of, for, or by means of aircraft: aerial photography. 7. Botany. Growing or borne above the ground or water: aerial roots. — n. (âr'ē-əl) See antenna (n., sense 2). [From Latin āerius, from Greek aerios, from aēr, air. See wer-¹ in Appendix.]

aer-i-al-ist (âr'ē-ə-lĭst) n. An acrobat who performs in the air, as on a trapeze or tightrope.

aerial ladder (âr'ē-əl lăd'ər) n. A ladder that can be extended to reach high places, especially one mounted on a fire engine.

aerial yam (âr'ē-əl yăm) n. See air potato.

aer-ie or aer-y also ey-rie or eyr-y (âr'ē, îr'ē) n. pl. aer-ies. 1. The nest of a bird, such as an eagle, built on a cliff or other high place. 2. A house or stronghold perched on a height. [Medieval Latin aeria, from Old French aire, from Latin ārea, open space, threshing-floor.]

aer-o (âr'ō) adj. Aerodynamic in styling. Used especially of an automobile or a van.

aero- or aer- pref. 1. a. Air; atmosphere: aeroballistics. b. Gas: aerosol.

2. Aviation: aeronautics. [Greek, from aēr, air. See wer-¹ in Appendix.]

aer-o-al-ler-gen (âr'ō-ăl'ər-jən) n. Any of various airborne substances, such as pollen or spores, that can cause an allergic response.

aer-o-bal-lis-tics (âr'ō-bə-lĭs'tĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Ballistics, especially of missiles, in the atmosphere. —aer'ō-bal-lis'tic adj.

aer-o-bat-ics (âr'ə-băt'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Spectacular stunts, such as rolls and loops, performed in an airplane or glider. [AERO- + (ACRO)BATICS.] —aer'ō-bat' n. —aer'ō-bat'ic adj.

aer-obe (âr'ōb') n. An organism, such as a bacterium, requiring oxygen to live. Also called aerobium [French aérobie: Greek aēr, air; see AERO- + Greek bios, life; see g^wei- in Appendix.]

aer-o-bic (â-rō'bĭk) adj. 1. Biology. a. Living or occurring only in the presence of oxygen: aerobic bacteria. b. Of or relating to aerobes. 2. Involving or improving oxygen consumption by the body: aerobic exercise. 3. Relating to or used in aerobics: aerobic shoes. —aer-ō'bi-cal-ly adv.

aer-o-bi-cize (â-rō'bĭ-sĭz') v. intr. aer-o-bi-cized, aer-o-bi-ciz-ing, aer-o-bi-ciz-es. To perform vigorous exercise as part of a program to improve physical fitness.

aer-o-bics (â-rō'bĭks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. A system of physical conditioning designed to enhance circulatory and respiratory efficiency that involves vigorous, sustained exercise, such as jogging, swimming, or cycling, thereby improving the body's utilization of oxygen. 2. A program of physical fitness that involves such exercise. [From AEROBIC.]

aer-o-bi-ol-o-gy (âr'ō-bĭ-ōl'ə-jē) n. The study of the sources, dispersion, and effects of airborne biological materials, such as pollen, spores, and microorganisms. —aer'ō-bi-ol-og'i-cal (-ə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl) adj. —aer'ō-bi-ol-og'i-cal-ly adv.

aer-o-bi-o-sis (âr'ō-bĭ-ō'sĭs) n. Life sustained by an organism in the presence of air or oxygen. —aer'ō-bi-ot'ic (-ōt'ĭk) adj.

aer-o-bi-um (â-rō'bē-əm) n. See aerobe. [New Latin, from AEROBE.]

- aer·o·cul·ture (âr'ə-kŭl'chər) n. See aeroponics. [AERO- + (AGRI)CULTURE.]
- aer·o·drome (âr'ə-drŏm') n. Chiefly British. An airdrome.
- aer·o·dy·nam·ic (âr'ō-dī-nām'ik) also aer·o·dy·nam·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to aerodynamics. 2. Styled with distinctively rounded edges so as to reduce wind drag and thereby increase fuel efficiency. Used especially of automobiles and vans. —aer'·o·dy·nam/i·cal·ly adv.
- aer·o·dy·nam·ics (âr'ō-dī-nām'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The dynamics of bodies moving relative to gases, especially the interaction of moving objects with the atmosphere. —aer'·o·dy·nam/i·cist (-ī-sist) n.
- aer·o·dyne (âr'ə-dīn') n. A heavier-than-air aircraft deriving lift from motion. [AERO- + Greek dunamis, power from dunasthai, to be able. See deu-² in Appendix.]
- aer·o·em·bo·lism (âr'ō-ēm'bə-līz'əm) n. Embolism that occurs as a result of the entrance of air bubbles into a blood vessel after surgical procedures or trauma.
- aer·o·foil (âr'ə-foīl') n. Chiefly British. Variant of airfoil.
- aer·o·gram also aer·o·gramme (âr'ə-grām') n. An air-mail letter in the form of a lightweight sheet of stationery that folds into its own envelope for mailing at a relatively low postage rate. Also called air letter
- aer·o·lite (âr'ə-līt') also aer·o·lith (-līth') n. A chiefly siliceous meteorite. —aer'·o·lit'ic (-līt'ik) adj.
- aer·ol·o·gy (âr-rŏl'ə-jē) n. Meteorology of the total vertical extent of the atmosphere as opposed to the study of the atmosphere near Earth's surface. —aer'·o·log'ic (âr'ə-lŏj'ik), aer'·o·log/i·cal adj. —aer·ol'·o·gist n.
- aer·o·mag·net·ics (âr'ō-măg-nēt'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of magnetic characteristics associated with atmospheric conditions. —aer'·o·mag·net'ic adj. —aer'·o·mag·net/i·cal·ly adv.
- aer·o·me·chan·ics (âr'ō-mī-kăn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of the motion and equilibrium of air and other gases, comprising aerodynamics and aerostatics. —aer'·o·me·chan/i·cal adj. —aer'·o·me·chan/i·cal·ly adv.
- aer·o·med·i·cine (âr'ō-mēd'ī-sīn) n. The medical study and treatment of physiological and psychological disorders associated with atmospheric or space flight. Also called aerospace medicine, aviation medicine. —aer'·o·med/i·cal (-kəl) adj.
- aer·o·me·te·or·o·graph (âr'ō-mē'tē-ôr'ə-grăf', -ŏr'-) n. An aircraft instrument for simultaneously recording temperature, atmospheric pressure, and humidity.
- aer·om·e·ter (âr-rŏm'ī-tər) n. An instrument for determining the weight and density of air or another gas.
- aer·o·naut (âr'ə-nôt') n. A pilot or navigator of a lighter-than-air craft, such as a balloon. [AERO- + Greek nautēs, sailor; see nāu- in Appendix.]

aer·o·nau·tic (âr'ə-nô'tik) also aer·o·nau·ti·cal (-tī-kəl) adj. Of or relating to aeronautics. —aer'·o·nau'ti·cal·ly adv.

aer·o·nau·tics (âr'ə-nô'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. The design and construction of aircraft. 2. The theory and practice of aircraft navigation.

aer·o·neu·ro·sis (âr'ō-nōō-rō'sīs, -nyōō-) n. Nervous exhaustion from prolonged piloting of aircraft.

aer·on·o·my (â-rōn'ə-mē) n. The study of the upper atmosphere, especially of regions of ionized gas. —aer·on'·o·mer n. —aer'·o·nom'ic, aer'·o·nom'i·cal adj. —aer·on'·o·mist n.

aer·o·pause (âr'ō-pōz') n. The region of the atmosphere above which aircraft cannot fly.

aer·o·pha·gia (âr'ə-fā'jə) n. The abnormal, spasmodic swallowing of air, especially as a symptom of hysteria.

aer·o·pho·bi·a (âr'ə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of air, especially drafts.

aer·o·phore (âr'ə-fōr', -fōr'-) n. A device to supply air to a nonbreathing infant or to a person in an environment where there is no oxygen, such as a closed mine or an underwater area.

aer·o·phyte (âr'ə-fit') n. See epiphyte.

aer·o·plane (âr'ə-plān') n. Chiefly British. Variant of airplane.

aer·o·pon·ics (âr'ə-pōn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). A technique for growing plants without soil or hydroponic media. The plants are held above a system that constantly mists the roots with nutrient-laden water. Also called aeroculture [AERO- + (HYDRO)PONICS.]

aer·o·sol (âr'ə-sōl', -sōl') n. 1. A gaseous suspension of fine solid or liquid particles. 2. a. A substance, such as paint, a detergent, or an insecticide, packaged under pressure with a gaseous propellant for release as a spray of fine particles. b. An aerosol bomb. [AERO- + SOL(UTION).]

aerosol bomb (âr'ə-sōl' bōm) n. A usually hand-held container or dispenser from which an aerosol is released.

aer·o·space (âr'ō-spās') adj. 1. Of or relating to Earth's atmosphere and the space beyond. 2. Of or relating to the science or technology of flight.

—aer'·o·space' n.

aerospace engineering (âr'ō-spās' ěn'jə-nîr'ing) n. Engineering related to aircraft and space vehicles.

aerospace medicine (âr'ō-spās' mēd'i-sin) n. See aeromedicine.

aer·o·sphere (âr'ō-sfir') n. The lower portion of the atmosphere in which both uncrewed and crewed flight is possible.

aer·o·stat (âr'ō-stāt') n. An aircraft, especially a balloon or dirigible, deriving its lift from the buoyancy of surrounding air rather than from aerodynamic motion. [French aérostat: Greek aēr, air; see AERO- + Greek statos, standing; see STATO-.] —aer'·o·stat'ic, aer'·o·stat'i·cal adj.

aer-o-stat-ics (âr'ô-stăt'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of gases in equilibrium and of the equilibrium of balloons or aircraft under changing atmospheric flight conditions.

aer-o-tax-is (âr'ə-tăk'sis) n. Movement of an organism, especially a bacterium, toward or away from air or oxygen. —aer'o-tac'tic adj.

aer-o-ther-mo-dy-nam-ics (âr'ô-thûr'mô-dī-năm'iks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the thermodynamics of gases, especially at high relative velocities. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The thermodynamics of such gases.

aer-y¹ (âr'ē, ā'ə-rē) adj. aer-i-er, aer-i-est. Ethereal. [Latin āerius, of the air. See AERIAL.]

aer-y² (âr'ē, îr'ē) n. Variant of aerie.

Aes-chy-lus (ēs'kə-ləs, ē'skə-), 525-456 B.C. Greek tragic dramatist whose plays were the first to include two actors in addition to the chorus. Only 7 of his 90 dramas survive, including the Oresteia trilogy (458). —Aes'chy-le'an (-lē'an) adj.

Aes-cu-la-pi-an (ēs'kyə-lā'pē-ən) adj. Relating to the healing arts; medical.

Aes-cu-la-pi-us (ēs'kyə-lā'pē-əs) n. Roman Mythology. The god of medicine and healing. [Latin, Greek Asklēpios.]

Ae-sir (ā'sîr', ā'zîr') pl.n. Mythology. The Norse gods. [Old Norse, plural of āss, god. See ansu- in Appendix.]

Ae-sop (ē'səp, -söp') , Sixth century B.C. Greek fabulist traditionally considered the author of Aesop's Fables, including "The Tortoise and the Hare" and "The Fox and the Grapes."

Ae-so-pi-an (ē-sō'pē-ən) also Ae-sop-ic (ē-söp'ik) adj. 1. Relating to or characteristic of the animal fables of Aesop. 2. So veiled in allegorical suggestions and hidden meanings as to elude political censorship: "They could express their views only in a diluted form, resorting to Aesopian hints and allusions" (Isaac Deutscher).

aes-the-sia or es-the-sia (ēs-thē'zhə) n. The ability to feel or perceive. [Back-formation from ANESTHESIA.]

aes-thete or es-thete (ēs'thēt) n. 1. One who cultivates an unusually high sensitivity to beauty, as in art or nature. 2. One whose pursuit and admiration of beauty is regarded as excessive or affected. [Back-formation from AESTHETIC.]

aes-thet-ic or es-thet-ic (ēs-thēt'ik) adj. 1. Relating to the philosophy or theories of aesthetics. 2. Of or concerning the appreciation of beauty or good taste: the aesthetic faculties. 3. Characterized by a heightened sensitivity to beauty.

4. Artistic: The play was an aesthetic success. 5. Informal. Conforming to accepted notions of good taste. — n. 1. A guiding principle in matters of artistic beauty and taste; artistic sensibility: "a generous Age of Aquarius aesthetic that said that everything was art" (William Wilson). 2. An underlying principle, a set of principles, or a view often manifested by outward appearances or style of behavior: "What troubled him was the squalor of [the colonel's] aesthetic" (Lewis H. Lapham). [German ästhetisch, from New Latin aesthēticus, from Greek aisthē- tikos, of sense perception, from aisthēta, perceptible things, from aisthanesthai, to perceive. See au- in Appendix.] —aes-thet'i-cal·ly adv.

aes-the-ti-cian or es-the-ti-cian (ēs'thī-tīsh'ən) n. 1. One versed in the theory of beauty and artistic expression. 2. One skilled in giving facials, massages, depilations, manicures, pedicures, and other beauty treatments.

aes-thet-i-cism or es-thet-i-cism (ēs-thēt'ī-sīz'əm) n. 1. Devotion to and pursuit of the beautiful; sensitivity to artistic beauty and refined taste. 2. The doctrine that beauty is the basic principle from which all other principles, especially moral ones, are derived. 3. The belief that art and artists have no obligation other than to strive for beauty.

aes-thet-i-cize also es-thet-i-cize (ēs-thēt'ə-sīz') v. tr. aes-thet-i-cized, aes-thet-i-ciz-ing, aes-thet-i-ciz-es. To depict in an idealized or artistic manner: “When they range too far from experience, aestheticize life too much, the pictures are disappointing” (Village Voice).

aes-thet-ics or es-thet-ics (ēs-thēt'iks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). a. The branch of philosophy that deals with the nature and expression of beauty, as in the fine arts. b. In Kantian philosophy, the branch of metaphysics concerned with the laws of perception. 2. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the psychological responses to beauty and artistic experiences. 3. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A conception of what is artistically valid or beautiful: minimalist aesthetics. 4. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). An artistically beautiful or pleasing appearance: “They’re looking for quality construction, not aesthetics” (Ron Schram).

aes-ti-val (ēs'tə-vəl) adj. Variant of estival.

aes-ti-vate (ēs'tə-vāt') v. Variant of estivate.

aes-ti-va-tion (ēs'tə-vā'shən) n. Variant of estivation.

Aeth-el-red II (ēth'əl-rēd') See Ethelred II.

Ae-ther (ē'thər) n. Greek Mythology. The poetic personification of the clear upper air breathed by the Olympians. [Latin, from Greek aithēr, upper air.]

ae-ti-ol-o-gy (ē'tē-ōl'ə-jē) n. Variant of etiology.

Aet-na (ēt'nə), Mount. See Mount Etna.

Ae-to-li-a (ē-tō'lē-ə, -tōl'yə) An ancient region of central Greece north of the Gulfs of Corinth and Calydon (Patras). Aetolia was briefly significant in Greek history after the formation in 290 B.C. of the Aetolian League, a military confederation that was defeated by the Achaeans later in the third century.

—Ae-to'li-an adj. & n.

AF abbr. 1. Air force. 2. Audio frequency.

af- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

a·far (ə-fär') adv. From, at, or to a great distance: saw it afar off; traveled afar.
— n. A long distance: Tales from afar. [Middle English afer, from on fer, far, and from of fer, from afar from Old English feor, far. See FAR.]

A·fars and Is·sas (ə-färs' änd ī'səs) See Djibouti (sense 1).

AFB abbr. Air force base.

AFDC abbr. Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

a·feard also a·feared (ə-fīrd′) adj. New England & Upper Southern U.S. & Ozarks. Afraid. [Middle English afered, from Old English āfæred, past participle of āfæran, to frighten : ā-, intensive pref. + færan, to frighten (from fær, danger); see FEAR.]

a·feb·rile (ā-fēb′rəl, ā-fē′brəl) adj. Having no fever.

af·fa·ble (ăf′ə-bəl) adj. 1. Easy and pleasant to speak to; approachable. See Synonyms at amiable. 2. Gentle and gracious: an affable smile. [Middle English affabil, from Old French affable, from Latin affābilis, from affārī, to speak to : ad-, ad- + fārī, to speak; see bhā-² in Appendix.] —af′fa·bil′i·ty n. —af′fa·bly adv.

af·fair (ə-fâr′) n. 1. Something done or to be done; business. 2. affairs. Transactions and other matters of professional or public business: affairs of state. 3. a. An occurrence, an event, or a matter: The senator’s death was a tragic affair. b. A social function. 4. An object or a contrivance: Their first car was a ramshackle affair. 5. A matter of personal concern. 6. affairs. Personal business: get one’s affairs in order. 7. A matter causing public scandal and controversy: the Dreyfus affair. 8. A romantic and sexual relationship, sometimes one of brief duration, between two people who are not married to each other. [Middle English affaire, from Old French affaire, from a faire, to do : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + faire, to do (from facere); see dhē- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: affair, business, concern, lookout. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “something that involves one personally”: I won’t comment on that; it’s not my affair. That’s none of your business. Mind your own concerns. It’s your lookout to see that your application is filed on time.

af·faire d’a·mour (ă-fâr′ dă-mōor′) n. pl. af-faires d’a-mour (ă-fâr′ dă-mōor′). A love affair. [French : affaire, affair + de, of + amour, love.]

af·faire de cœur (ă-fâr′ də kœr′) n. pl. af-faires de cœur (ă-fâr′ də kœr′). A love affair. [French : affaire, affair + de, of + cœur, heart.]

af·faire d’hon·neur (ă-fâr′ dô-nœr′) n. pl. af-faires d’hon·neur (ă-fâr′ dô-nœr′). An affair of honor; a duel. [French : affaire, affair + de, of + honneur, honor.]

af·fect¹ (ə-fĕkt′) v. tr. af-fect-ed, af-fect-ing, af-fects. 1. To have an influence on or effect a change in: Inflation affects the buying power of the dollar. 2. To act on the emotions of; touch or move. 3. To attack or infect, as a disease: Rheumatic fever can affect the heart. — n. (ăf′ĕkt′) 1. Psychology. a. A feeling or emotion as distinguished from cognition, thought, or action. b. A strong feeling having active consequences. 2. Obsolete. A disposition, feeling, or tendency. [Latin afficere, affect- : ad-, ad- + facere, to do; see dhē- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: affect, influence, impress, touch, move, strike. These verbs are compared as they mean to produce a mental or emotional effect. To affect is to act upon a person's emotions: The adverse criticism the book received didn't affect the author one way or another. Influence implies a degree of control or sway over the thinking and actions, as well as the emotions, of another: "Humanity is profoundly influenced by what you do" (John Paul II). To impress is to produce a marked, deep, often enduring effect: "The Tibetan landscape particularly impressed him" (Doris Kerns Quinn). Touch usually means to arouse a tender response, such as love, gratitude, or compassion: "The tributes [to the two deceased musicians] were fitting and touching" (Daniel Cariaga). Move suggests profound emotional effect that sometimes leads to action or has a further consequence: The account of her experiences as a refugee moved us to tears. Strike implies keenness or force of mental response to a stimulus: I was struck by the sudden change in his behavior.

USAGE NOTE: *Affect*¹ and effect have no senses in common. As a verb *affect*¹ is most commonly used in the sense of "to influence" (how smoking affects health). Effect means "to bring about or execute": layoffs designed to effect savings. Thus the sentence These measures may affect savings could imply that the measures may reduce savings that have already been realized, whereas These measures may effect savings implies that the measures will cause new savings to come about.

af·fect² (ə-fĕkt') v. tr. af·fect·ed, af·fect·ing, af·fects. 1. To put on a false show of; simulate: affected a British accent. See Synonyms at pretend. 2. a. To have or show a liking for: affects dramatic clothes. b. Archaic. To fancy; love. 3. To tend to by nature; tend to assume: a substance that affects crystalline form. 4. To imitate; copy: "Spenser, in affecting the ancients, writ no language" (Ben Jonson). [Middle English affecten, from Latin affectāre, to strive after, frequentative of afficere, affect-, to affect, influence. See AFFECT¹.] —af·fect'er n.

af·fec·ta·tion (ăf'ĕk-tā'shən) n. 1. A show, pretense, or display. 2. a. Behavior that is assumed rather than natural; artificiality. b. A particular habit, as of speech or dress, adopted to give a false impression. [Latin affectātiō, affectātiōn-, from affectātus, past participle of affectāre, to strive after. See AFFECT².]

SYNONYMS: affectation, pose, air, mannerism. These nouns refer to personal behavior assumed for effect. An affectation is an artificial habit, as of speech or dress, that is often adopted in imitation of an admired person and that can be identified by others as being unnatural: "His [Arthur Rubinstein's] playing stripped away... the affectations and exaggerations that characterized Chopin inter- pretation before his arrival” (Michael Kimmelman). Pose denotes an attitude adopted with the aim of calling favorable attention to oneself or making an impression on other people: His humility is only a pose. Air, meaning a distinctive but intangible quality, does not always imply sham: an air of authority. In the plural, however, it suggests affectation and especially a wish to seem more important than is actually the case: Don’t put on airs. Mannerism denotes an idiosyncratic trait, manner, or quirk, often one that others find obtrusive and distracting: He had a mannerism of closing his eyes as he talked, as if he were deep in thought.

af·fect·ed¹ (ə-fĕk’tĭd) adj. 1. Acted upon, influenced, or changed.

2. Emotionally stirred or moved. 3. Infected or attacked, as by disease. [From AFFECT¹.]

af·fect·ed² (ə-fĕk’tĭd) adj. 1. Assumed or simulated to impress others: an affected accent. 2. Speaking or behaving in an artificial way to make an impression. 3. Disposed or inclined. [From AFFECT².] —af·fect’ed·ly adv.

—af·fect’ed·ness n.

af·fect·ing (ə-fĕk’tĭŋ) adj. Inspiring or capable of inspiring strong emotion; moving. See Synonyms at moving. [From AFFECT¹.] —af·fect’ing·ly adv.

af·fec·tion (ə-fĕk’shən) n. 1. A tender feeling toward another; fondness. See Synonyms at love. 2. Often affections. Feeling or emotion: an unbalanced state of affections. 3. A disposition to feel, do, or say; a propensity. 4. Obsolete. Prejudice; partiality. [Middle English affecioun, from Old French affection, from Latin affectiō, affectiōn-, from affectus, past participle of afficere, to affect, influence. See AFFECT¹.] —af·fec’tion·al adj. —af·fec’tion·al·ly adv.

af·fec·tion·ate (ə-fĕk’shə-nĭt) adj. 1. Having or showing fond feelings or affection; loving and tender. 2. Obsolete. Inclined or disposed. —af·fec’tion·ate·ly adv. —af·fec’tion·ate·ness n.

af·fec·tive (ə-fĕk’tĭv) adj. 1. Psychology. Influenced by or resulting from the emotions: affective disorders. 2. Concerned with or arousing feelings or emotions; emotional. —af·fec’tive·ly adv. —af’fec·tiv’i·ty (ăf’ĕk-tĭv’i-tē) n.

af·fect·less (ăf’ĕkt’lĭs) adj. Having or showing no emotion; unfeeling: “Mass-culture banality is killing our souls and making everybody affectless” (New Yorker). —af’fect’less·ness n.

af·fen·pin·scher (ăf’ən-pĭn’shər) n. A breed of small dogs of European origin, having wiry, shaggy hair and a tufted muzzle. [German : Affe, ape (from Middle High German, from Old High German affo) + Pinscher, a type of dog with ears operated on or “pinched” to make them stand up (from English PINCH).]

af·fer·ent (ăf’ər-ənt) adj. Carrying inward to a central organ or section, as nerves that conduct impulses from the periphery of the body to the brain or spinal cord. [Latin afferēns, afferent- present participle of afferre, to bring toward : ad-, ad- + ferre, to bring; see bher-¹ in Appendix.] —af'fer-ent-ly adv.

af·fi·ance (ə-fī'əns) v. tr. af·fi·anced, af·fi·anc-ing, af·fi·anc-es. To bind in a pledge of marriage; betroth. [From Middle English affiaunce, assurance, from Old French, from affier, to trust to, from Medieval Latin affīdāre : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin fīdus, faithful; see bheidh- in Appendix.]

af·fi·ant (ə-fī'ənt) n. Law. One who makes an affidavit. [From affy, to make affidavit, from Middle English affien, to trust, from Old French affier, to promise. See AFFIANCE.]

af·fi·da·vit (ăf'ī-dā'vīt) n. Law. A written declaration made under oath before a notary public or other authorized officer. [Medieval Latin affīdāvit, from third person sing. past tense of Latin affīdāre, to pledge. See AFFIANCE.]

af·fil·i·ate (ə-fīl'ē-āt') v. af·fil·i·at·ed, af·fil·i·at·ing, af·fil·i·ates. — v. tr. 1. To adopt or accept as a member, subordinate associate, or branch. 2. To associate (oneself) as a subordinate, subsidiary, employee, or member: affiliated herself with a new law firm. 3. To assign the origin of. — v. intr. To become closely connected or associated: The two unions voted to affiliate. — n. (-ē-īt, -āt') A person, an organization, or an establishment associated with another as a subordinate, subsidiary, or member: network affiliates. [Medieval Latin affiliāre, to adopt : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin fīlius, son; see dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

—af·fil'i-a'tion n.

af·fine (ə-fīn') adj. Mathematics. 1. Of or relating to a transformation of coordinates that is equivalent to a translation, contraction, or expansion with respect to a fixed origin and fixed coordinate system. 2. Of or relating to the geometry of affine transformations. [French affin, closely related, from Old French. See AFFINED.]

af·fined (ə-fīnd') adj. 1. Linked by a very close relationship. 2. Beholden to another; bound. [French affiné, from Old French affin, closely related, from Latin affīnis, related by marriage : ad-, ad- + fīnis, boundary.]

af·fin·i·ty (ə-fīn'ī-tē) n. pl. af·fin·i·ties. 1. A natural attraction or feeling of kinship. 2. Relationship by marriage. 3. An inherent similarity between persons or things. See Synonyms at likeness. 4. Biology. A relationship or resemblance in structure between species that suggests a common origin. 5. Immunology. The attraction between an antigen and an antibody. 6. Chemistry. An attraction or force between particles that causes them to combine. [Middle English affinite, from Old French afinite, from Latin affīnitās, from affīnis, related by marriage. See AFFINED.]

USAGE NOTE: In the sense of “attraction,” affinity may be followed by of, between, or with. Thus one may speak of the close affinity of James and Samuel, or of the affinity between James and Samuel, or of James’s affinity with Samuel. In its chemical use affinity is generally followed by for: a dye with an affinity for synthetic fabrics. In general usage affinity should not be used as a simple synonym for liking. In an earlier survey, a majority of the Usage Panel rejected the example Her affinity for living in California led her to reject a chance to return to New York.

affinity group (ə-*f*in^ŋi-tē grōōp) n. A group of people who share a common interest, background, or goal.

af·firm (ə-*f*ûrm^l) v. af·firmed, af·firm·ing, af·firms. — v. tr. 1. To declare positively or firmly; maintain to be true. See Synonyms at assert. 2. To support or uphold the validity of; confirm. — v. intr. Law. To declare solemnly and formally but not under oath. [Middle English affermen, from Old French afermer, from Latin affirmāre: ad-, ad- + firmāre, to strengthen (from firmus, strong); see dher- in Appendix.] — af·firm'able adj. — af·firm'a·bly adv. — af·fir'mant adj., n. — af·firm'er n.

af·fir·ma·tion (ăf'ər-mā'shən) n. 1. The act of affirming or the state of being affirmed; assertion. 2. Something declared to be true; a positive statement or judgment. 3. Law. A solemn declaration given in place of a sworn statement by a person who conscientiously objects to taking an oath.

af·fir·ma·tive (ə-*f*ûr^lmə-tīv) adj. 1. Asserting that something is true or correct, as with the answer “yes”: an affirmative reply. 2. Giving assent or approval; confirming: an affirmative vote. 3. Positive; optimistic: an affirmative outlook. 4. Logic. Of, relating to, or being a proposition in which the predicate affirms something about the subject, such as the statement apples have seeds. — n. 1. A word or statement of agreement or assent, such as the word yes. 2. The side in a debate that upholds the proposition: Her team will speak for the affirmative. — adv. Informal. Used in place of the response “yes” to express confirmation or consent. — af·fir'ma·tive·ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: The expressions in the affirmative and in the negative, as in She answered in the affirmative, are generally regarded as pompous. She answered yes would be more acceptable even at the most formal levels of style.

affirmative action (ə-*f*ûr^lmə-tīv äk'shən) n. A policy or a program that seeks to redress past discrimination through active measures to ensure equal opportunity, as in education and employment.

af·fix (ə-*f*iks^l) v. tr. af·fixed, af·fix·ing, af·fix·es. 1. To secure to something; attach: affix a label to a package. 2. To impute; attribute: affix blame to him. 3. To place at the end; append: affix a postscript to a letter. 4. Grammar. To add as an affix. — n. (ăf'iks^l) 1. Something that is attached, joined, or added; an appendage or addition. 2. Linguistics. A word element, such as a prefix or suffix, that can only occur attached to a base, stem, or root. [Medieval Latin affixāre, frequentative of Latin affigere, affix- : ad-, ad- + figere, to fasten; see dhīg^w- in Appendix.] —af·fix'a·ble adj. —af·fix'er n.

af·fla·tus (ə-flā'təs) n. A strong creative impulse; divine inspiration. [Latin afflātus, from past participle of afflāre, to breathe on : ad-, ad- + flāre, to blow; see bhlē- in Appendix.]

af·flict (ə-flɪkt') v. tr. af·flict·ed, af·flict·ing, af·flicts. To inflict grievous physical or mental suffering on. [Middle English afflighten, from afflight, disturbed, frightened, from Latin afflictum, past participle of affligere, to cast down : ad-, ad- + fligere, to strike.] —af·flict'er n. —af·flic'tive adj. —af·flic'tive·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: afflict, agonize, excruciate, rack, torment, torture. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to bring great harm or suffering to someone”: afflicted with arthritis; agonizing pain; excruciating spasms of neuralgia; racked with cancer; tormented by migraine headaches; tortured by painful emotions.

af·flic·tion (ə-flɪk'shən) n. 1. A condition of pain, suffering, or distress. See Synonyms at trial. 2. A cause of pain, suffering, or distress. See Synonyms at burden¹.

af·flu·ence (ăf'lōō-əns, ə-flōō'-) n. 1. A plentiful supply of material goods; wealth. 2. A great quantity; an abundance. 3. A flowing to or toward a point; afflux.

af·flu·en·cy (ăf'lōō'ən-sē, ə-flōō'-) n. Affluence.

af·flu·ent (ăf'lōō-ənt, ə-flōō'-) adj. 1. Generously supplied with money, property, or possessions; prosperous or rich. See Synonyms at rich. 2. Plentiful; abundant. 3. Flowing freely; copious. — n. 1. A stream or river that flows into a larger one; a tributary. 2. A person who is well-off financially: “the so-called emerging affluents” (Leslie Tweeton). [Middle English, abundant, flowing, from Old French, from Latin affluēns, affluent- present participle of affluere, to abound in : ad-, ad- + fluere, to flow; see bhleu- in Appendix.] —af'flu·ent·ly adv.

af·flux (ăf'lŭks') n. A flow to or toward an area, especially of blood or other fluid toward a body part: an afflux of blood to the head. [Medieval Latin affluxus, from Latin, past participle of affluere, to flow to. See AFFLUENT.]

af·ford (ə-fôrd', ə-fôrd') v. tr. af·ford·ed, af·ford·ing, af·fords. 1. To have the financial means for; be able to meet the cost of: not able to afford a new car. 2. To be able to spare or give up: can't afford an hour for lunch. 3. To be able to do or bear without disadvantage or risk to oneself: can afford to be tolerant. 4. To make available; provide: a sport affording good exercise; a tree that affords ample shade. [Middle English aforthen, from Old English geforthian, to carry out : ge-, perfective pref.; see YCLEPT + forthian, to further (from forth, forth, forward); see per¹ in Appendix.]

af·ford·a·ble (ə-fôr'də-bəl, ə-fôr'-) adj. That can be afforded: affordable housing; an affordable risk. —af·ford'a·bil'i·ty n. —af·ford/a·bly adv.

af·for·est (ə-fôr'ist, ə-för'-) v. tr. af·for·est·ed, af·for·est·ing, af·for·ests. To convert (open land) into a forest by planting trees or their seeds. [Medieval Latin afforēstāre : Latin ad-, ad- + Medieval Latin forēstāre (from forēsta, forest); see FOREST.] —af·for'es·ta'tion n.

af·fray (ə-frā') n. A noisy quarrel or brawl. See Synonyms at conflict. — v. tr. af·frayed, af·fray·ing, af·frays. Archaic. To frighten. [Middle English, from Old French effrei, esfrei, from esfraier, esfreer, to disturb. See pri- in Appendix.]

af·fri·cate (ăf'rī-kīt) n. Linguistics. A complex speech sound consisting of a stop consonant followed by a fricative; for example, the initial sounds of child and joy. Also called affricative [Latin affricātus, past participle of affricāre, to rub against : ad-, ad- + fricāre, to rub.]

af·fric·a·tive (ə-frīk'ə-tīv) Linguistics. adj. Of, relating to, or forming an affricate. — n. See affricate.

af·fright (ə-frīt') v. tr. af·fright·ed, af·fright·ing, af·frights. To arouse fear in; terrify: "Many of nature's greatest oddities, that would affright dwellers up here, are accepted down there" (David Mazel). — n. 1. Great fear; terror. 2. A cause of terror. [Middle English afrighten, from Old English āfyrhtan : ā-, intensive pref. + fyrhtan, to frighten (from fyrhto, fright).] —af·fright'ment n.

af·front (ə-frünt') v. tr. af·front·ed, af·front·ing, af·fronts. 1. To insult intentionally, especially openly. See Synonyms at offend. 2. a. To meet defiantly; confront. b. Obsolete. To meet or encounter face to face. — n. 1. An open or intentional offense, slight, or insult: Such behavior is an affront to society. 2. Obsolete. A hostile encounter or meeting. [Middle English afrounten, from Old French afronter : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin frōns, front-, face; see FRONT.]

Aff·ton (ăf'tən) A city of eastern Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis. Population, 21,106.

af·fu·sion (ə-fyōō'zhən) n. A pouring on of liquid, as in baptism. [Late Latin affusiō, affusiōn-, from Latin affusus, past participle of affundere, to pour on : ad-, ad- + fundere, to pour; see gheu- in Appendix.]

Afg. abbr. Afghanistan.

Af·ghan (ăf'găn', -gən) adj. Of or relating to Afghanistan or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Afghanistan. 2. See Pashto. 3. afghan. a. A coverlet or shawl of wool, knitted or crocheted in colorful geometric designs. b. A carpet of similar design. 4. An Afghan hound. [Persian afghān, an Afghan.]

Afghan hound (ăf'găn' hound) n. A large, slender hunting dog having long, thick hair, a pointed muzzle, and drooping ears.

af·ghan·i (ăf-găn'ē, -gă'nē) n. A basic unit of currency in Afghanistan. See Table at currency. [Pashto.]

Af·ghan·i·stan (ăf-găn'i-stăn') Abbr. Afg. A landlocked country of southwest-central Asia. Mostly arid and mountainous, the country depends on agriculture; its mineral wealth is largely undeveloped. Since ancient times Afghanistan has been crisscrossed by invasion routes. Kabul is the capital and the largest city. Population, 13,051,358.

a·fi·cio·na·do (ə-fish'ē-ə-nă'dō, ə-fis'ē-, ə-fē'sē-) n. pl. a·fi·cio·na·dos. An enthusiastic admirer or follower; a devotee or a fan: “West Coast aficionados of postwar coffee-shop architecture” (Karal Ann Marling). [Spanish, past participle of aficionar, to induce a liking for, from afición, liking, from Latin affectiō, affectiōn-. See AFFECTION.]

a·field (ə-fēld') adv. 1. Off the usual or desired track. See Synonyms at amiss.

2. Away from one's home or usual environment. 3. To or on a field.

a·fire (ə-fīr') adv. & adj. 1. On fire. 2. Intensely interested.

AFL abbr. 1. American Federation of Labor. 2. American Football League.

a·flame (ə-flām') adv. & adj. 1. On or as if on fire. 2. Keenly excited and interested.

af·la·tox·i·co·sis (ăf'lă-tōk'sī-kō'sis) n. Poisoning caused by the consumption of substances or foods contaminated with aflatoxin. [AFLA(TOXIN) + TOXICOSIS.]

af·la·tox·in (ăf'lă-tōk'sin) n. Any of a group of toxic compounds produced by certain molds, especially Aspergillus flavus, that contaminate stored food supplies such as animal feed and peanuts. [New Latin A(spergillus) fla(vus), species name (ASPERGILLUS + Latin flavus, yellow); see FLAVO- + TOXIN.]

AFL-CIO abbr. American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

a·float (ə-flōt') adv. & adj. 1. In a floating position or condition. 2. On a boat or ship away from the shore; at sea. 3. In circulation; prevailing: Rumors are afloat. 4. Awash; flooded. 5. Drifting about; moving without guidance. 6. Free or out of difficulty, especially financial difficulty: couldn't keep the business afloat.

a·flut·ter (ə-flüt'ər) adj. 1. Being in a flutter; fluttering: with flags aflutter.

2. Nervous and excited.

A.F. of L. abbr. American Federation of Labor.

A·fog·nak Island (ə-fôg'năk' ī'lənd, -fôg-) An island of Alaska in the western Gulf of Alaska north of Kodiak.

a·foot (ə-fōot') adv. & adj. 1. On foot; walking. 2. In the process of being carried out; astir: plans afoot to resign.

a·fore (ə-fôr', ə-för') adv., prep. & conj. Chiefly Southern U.S. & Chiefly Midland U.S. Before. [Middle English, from Old English onforan : on, at; see ON + fōran, before from fore. See FORE.]

a·fore·men·tioned (ə-fôr'měn'shənd, ə-för'-) adj. Mentioned previously.

a·fore·said (ə-fôr'sëd', ə-för'-) adj. Spoken of earlier.

a·fore·thought (ə-fôr'thôt', ə-för'-) adj. Planned or intended beforehand; premeditated: malice aforethought.

a·fore·time (ə-fôr'tīm', ə-för'-) Archaic. adv. At a former or past time; previously. — adj. Earlier; former.

a for·ti·o·ri (ä fôr'tē-ô'rĕ, ä fôr'tē-ô'rĭ') adv. For a still stronger reason; all the more. Used of a conclusion that is logically more certain than another. [Latin : ā, ab, from + fortiōrĭ, ablative of fortior, stronger.]

a·foul of (ə-foul' ūv) prep. 1. In or into collision, entanglement, or conflict with. 2. Up against; in trouble with: ran afoul of the law. 3. Entangled with: The anchor fell afoul of the wreckage.

AFP abbr. Alpha-fetoprotein.

Afr. abbr. Africa; African.

a·fraid (ə-frād') adj. 1. Filled with fear: afraid of ghosts; afraid to die; afraid for his life. 2. Having feelings of aversion or unwillingness in regard to something: not afraid of hard work; afraid to show emotion. 3. Filled with regret or concern. Used especially to soften an unpleasant statement: I'm afraid you're wrong. [Middle English affraied, past participle of affraien, to frighten, from Old French esfraier, esfreer, to disturb, of Germanic origin. See pri- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: afraid, apprehensive, fearful. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “filled with fear”: afraid of snakes; feeling apprehensive before surgery; fearful of criticism.

ANTONYM: unafraid

WORD HISTORY: The notion of removal from a state of peace happens to be the basis for constructing ·exfredāre, literally “to remove from peace,” the Vulgar Latin ancestor of our word afraid. This Vulgar Latin word is made up of the Latin prefix ex-, “out of,” and a Vulgar Latin verb of the form ·fridāre or ·fretāre, which came from Germanic ·frithuz, “peace.” The Old French word esfraier, “to disturb,” which subsequently developed from ·exfredāre, came into Middle English as affraien, a verb whose earliest recorded sense, found in a text composed possibly around 1300, is “to frighten, disturb.” Affray, the descendant of affraien, is little used in contemporary writing and speech, but the same cannot be said of the descendant of the past participle of affraien, our adjective afraid.

A·frame (ā'frām') n. A structure, such as a house, with steeply angled sides that meet at the top in the shape of the letter A.

af·reet also af·rit (ăf'rēt', ə-frēt') n. Mythology. A powerful evil spirit or gigantic and monstrous demon in Arabic mythology. [Arabic 'ifrīt.]

a·fresh (ə-frēsh') adv. Once more; anew; again: start afresh.

Af·ri·ca (ăf'ri-kə) Abbr. Afr. The second-largest continent, lying south of Europe between the Atlantic and Indian oceans. The hottest continent, Africa has vast mineral resources, many of which are still undeveloped.

Af·ri·can (ăf'ri-kən) adj. Abbr. Afr. Of or relating to Africa or its peoples, languages, or cultures. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Africa. 2. A person of African descent.

Af·ri·can·A·mer·i·can or African American (ăf'ri-kən-ə-mēr'ikən) adj. Of or relating to Americans of African ancestry; Afro-American. — n. An American of African ancestry; an Afro-American: "The words... are stinging reminders of the unresolved tension among African-Americans" (Derrick Z. Jackson). See Usage Note at black.

African daisy (ăf'ri-kən dā'zē) n. Any of several African plants in the composite family, especially those in the genera Arctotis, Gerbera, and Lonas, that have showy flower heads.

Af·ri·can·ism (ăf'ri-kə-nīz'əm) n. 1. A characteristically African cultural feature, such as a belief or custom. 2. A linguistic feature of an African language occurring in a non-African language.

Af·ri·can·ist (ăf'ri-kə-nīst) n. A specialist in African affairs, cultures, or languages.

Af·ri·can·ize (ăf'ri-kə-nīz') v. Af·ri·can·ized, Af·ri·can·iz·ing, Af·ri·can·iz·es. — v. tr. 1. To make African, as in culture. 2. To transfer to African control: "the Government's plan to Africanize the service" (BBC Summary of World Broadcasts). — v. intr. To become African.

Af·ri·can·ized bee (ăf'ri-kə-nīzd' bē) n. A hybrid strain of honeybee introduced into Brazil in the mid-1950's and distinguished by aggressive traits such as the tendency to mass swarm and sting with great frequency. The bee was developed by a geneticist attempting to produce a commercial honeybee better adapted to the tropics. Also called Africanized honeybee, killer bee.

African lily (ăf'ri-kən līl'ē) n. A South African rhizomatous plant (Agapanthus africanus) having violet funnel-shaped flowers grouped in umbels. Also called agapanthus, lily of the Nile.

African mahogany (ăf'ri-kən mə-hōg'ə-nē) n. 1. a. Any of several African trees of the genus Khaya, having wood similar to that of the New World mahogany. b. The wood of any of these trees, used to make furniture, cabinets, and boat interiors. 2. Any of various other African woods similar to mahogany.

African marigold (ăf'ri-kən măr'i-gōld') n. An aromatic annual Mexican plant (Tagetes erecta) in the composite family, having pinnately lobed leaves and showy, solitary, yellow to orange flower heads.

African millet (ăf'ri-kən mĭl'it) n. See pearl millet.

African oil palm (ăf'ri-kən oil pām) n. See oil palm (n., sense 1).

African sleeping sickness (ăf'ri-kən slē'pɪŋ sĭk'nĭs) n. See sleeping sickness (n., sense 1).

African swine fever (ăf'ri-kən swĭn fē'vər) n. See hog cholera.

African tulip tree (ăf'ri-kən tōō'lĭp trē) n. A tropical African evergreen tree (Spathodea campaulata) having compound leaves and showy orange-scarlet or yellow flowers. Also called tulip tree

African violet (ăf'ri-kən vī'ə-lĭt) n. Any of various East African herbs of the genus Saintpaulia, having a basal leaf rosette and a showy cluster of violet or sometimes pink or white flowers. African violets are grown as indoor ornamentals.

Af-ri-kaans (ăf'ri-kāns', -kānz') n. A language that developed from 17th-century Dutch and is an official language of South Africa. Also called *Taal*² — adj. Of or relating to Afrikaans or Afrikaners. [Afrikaans, from Dutch Afrikaansch, African, from Latin Āfricānus. See AFRIKANER.]

Af-ri-ka-ner (ăf'ri-kā'nər) n. An Afrikaans-speaking South African of European ancestry, especially one descended from 17th-century Dutch settlers. [Afrikaans, an African, from Dutch, from Latin Āfricānus, from Āfrica, Africa, from Āfer, Āfr-, an African.]

af-rit (ăf'rĕt', ə-frĕt') n. Mythology. Variant of afreet.

Af-ro (ăf'rō) n. pl. Af-ros. A rounded, very thick, tightly curled hair style. — adj. African in style or origin. [Probably short for AFRO-AMERICAN.]

Afro- pref. African: Afro-Asiatic. [From Latin Āfer, Āfr-, an African.]

Af-ro-A-mer-i-can (ăf'rō-ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən) adj. Of or relating to Americans of African ancestry or to their history or culture. — n. An American of African ancestry. See Usage Note at black.

Af-ro-A-si-at-ic (ăf'rō-ā'zhĕ-ăt'ĭk, -shĕ-, -zĕ-) n. A large family of languages spoken in northern Africa and southwest Asia, comprising the Semitic, Chadic, Cushitic, Berber, and ancient Egyptian languages; formerly known as Hamito-Semitic. — Af-ro-A-si-at-ic adj.

aft (ăft) adv. & adj. Nautical. At, in, toward, or close to the stern of a vessel or the rear of an aircraft or a spacecraft. [Middle English aftē, back, from Old English æftan, behind. See apo- in Appendix.]

AFT abbr. American Federation of Teachers.

aft. abbr. Afternoon.

af-ter (ăf'tər) prep. 1. a. Behind in place or order: Z comes after Y. b. Next to or lower than in order or importance. 2. In quest or pursuit of: seek after fame; go after big money. 3. Concerning: asked after you. 4. Subsequent in time to; at a later time than: come after dinner. 5. Subsequent to and because of or regardless of: They are still friends after all their differences. 6. Following continually: year after year. 7. In the style of or in imitation of: satires after Horace. 8. With the same or close to the same name as; in honor or commemoration of: named after her mother. 9. According to the nature or desires of; in conformity to: a tenor after my own heart. 10. Past the hour of: five minutes after three. — adv.

1. Behind; in the rear. 2. At a later or subsequent time; afterward: three hours after; departed shortly after. — adj. 1. Subsequent in time or place; later; following: in after years. 2. Nautical. Nearer the stern of a vessel. — conj. Following or subsequent to the time that: I saw them after I arrived. — n. Afternoon. [Middle English, from Old English æfter. See apo- in Appendix.]

af·ter·ac·tion (ăf'tər-äk'shən) adj. Relating to or being a retrospective view or analysis of a battle: an after-action report; after-action surveys of the sector.

after all also af·ter·all (ăf'tər-ôl') adv. 1. In spite of everything to the contrary; nevertheless: We chose to take a plane after all. 2. Everything else having been considered; ultimately: "How will that affect the Nicaraguan situation, which after all must still be the main target of any regional plan?" (Martin Cohen).

af·ter·birth (ăf'tər-bûrth') n. The placenta and fetal membranes expelled from the uterus following childbirth.

af·ter·burn·er (ăf'tər-bûr'nər) n. 1. A device for augmenting the thrust of a jet engine by burning additional fuel with the uncombined oxygen in the hot exhaust gases. 2. A device for burning or chemically altering unburned or partially burned carbon compounds in exhaust gases.

af·ter·care (ăf'tər-kâr') n. Treatment or care given to convalescent patients after release from a hospital.

af·ter·clap (ăf'tər-klăp') n. An unexpected, often unpleasant sequel to a matter that had been considered closed.

af·ter·damp (ăf'tər-dămp') n. An asphyxiating mixture of gases, primarily nitrogen and carbon dioxide, left in a mine after a fire or an explosion. [AFTER + DAMP, gas.]

af·ter·deck (ăf'tər-dĕk') n. Nautical. The part of a ship's deck past amidships toward the stern.

af·ter·ef·fect (ăf'tər-ĭ-fĕkt') n. An effect following its cause after some delay, especially a delayed or prolonged physiological or psychological response to a stimulus.

af·ter·glow (ăf'tər-glō') n. 1. The atmospheric glow that remains for a short time after sunset. 2. The light emitted after removal of a source of energy, especially: a. The glow of an incandescent metal as it cools. b. The emission of light from a phosphor after removal of excitation. 3. The comfortable feeling following a pleasant experience. 4. A lingering impression of past glory or success.

af·ter·hours (ăf'tər-ourz') adj. 1. Occurring after closing time: after-hours socializing. 2. Open after a legal or established closing time: an after-hours club.

af·ter·im·age (ăf'tər-ĭm'ij) n. A visual image that persists after the visual stimulus causing it has ceased to act: “the red afterimage of the... flame pulsing before my eyes” (Anthony Hyde). Also called photogene af·ter·life (ăf'tər-lĭf') n. 1. A life believed to follow death. 2. The part of one's life that follows a particular event.

af·ter·mar·ket (ăf'tər-mär'kĭt) n. The demand for goods and services, such as parts and repairs, associated with the upkeep of a previous purchase.

af·ter·math (ăf'tər-măth') n. 1. A consequence, especially of a disaster or misfortune: famine as an aftermath of drought. 2. A period of time following a disastrous event: in the aftermath of war. 3. A second growth or crop in the same season, as of grass after mowing. [AFTER + obsolete math, mowing (from Old English māth); see mē⁻⁴ in Appendix.]

af·ter·most (ăf'tər-mōst') adj. 1. Nautical. Nearest the stern; farthest aft. 2. Nearest the end or rear; hindmost or last.

af·ter·noon (ăf'tər-nōon') n. 1. Abbr. aft., a. The part of day from noon until sunset. 2. The latter part: in the afternoon of life.

af·ter·pains (ăf'tər-pānz') pl.n. Cramps or pains following childbirth, caused by contractions of the uterus.

af·ter·piece (ăf'tər-pēs') n. A short comic piece performed after a play.

af·ter·ri·pen·ing (ăf'tər-rĭ'pə-nĭng) n. A period during which certain changes must occur in some dormant but fully developed seeds before germination.

af·ter·sen·sa·tion (ăf'tər-sĕn-sā'shən) n. A sensory impression, such as an afterimage or aftertaste, that persists after the stimulus has ceased to act.

af·ter·shave (ăf'tər-shāv') n. A usually fragrant lotion for use on the face after shaving.

af·ter·shock (ăf'tər-shōk') n. 1. A quake of lesser magnitude, usually one of a series, following a large earthquake in the same area. 2. A further reaction following the shock of a deeply disturbing occurrence or revelation: “The industry continued to reel from aftershocks of a disastrous [year]” (David Lake).

af·ter·taste (ăf'tər-tāst') n. 1. A taste persisting in the mouth after the substance that caused it is no longer present. 2. A feeling that remains after an event or experience, especially one that was unpleasant.

af·ter·tax also af·ter·tax (ăf'tər-tāks) adj. Relating to or being that which remains after payment, especially of income taxes: after-tax profits.

af·ter·thought (ăf'tər-thôt') n. An idea, a response, or an explanation that occurs to one after an event or a decision.

af·ter·time (ăf'tər-tĭm') n. The time to come; the future.

af·ter·ward (ăf'tər-wərd) also af·ter·wards (-wərdz) adv. At a later time; subsequently.

af·ter·word (ăf'tər-wûrd') n. See epilogue (n., sense 2).

af·ter·work (ăf'tər-wûrk') adj. Relating to, taken during, engaged in, occurring in, or intended for the hours after one's work has been finished: the after-work hours; an afterwork beer; afterwork lifestyle.

af·ter·world (ăf'tər-wûrld') n. A world thought to exist after death.

aft·most (ăft'mōst') adj. Nautical. Farthest aft; aftermost.

Af·ton (ăf'tən) A river, about 14 km (9 mi) long, in southwest Scotland. It is the "sweet Afton" of Robert Burns's 1789 poem.

Ag The symbol for the element silver (n., sense 1). [From Latin argentum, silver. See ARGENT.]

A.G. also AG abbr. 1. Adjutant general. 2. Law. Attorney general.

ag- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

a·ga also a·gha (ă'gə, ăg'ə) n. Used as a title for a civil or military leader, especially in Turkey. [Turkish ağa, from Old Turkic aqa, older brother.]

A·ga·de (ə-gä'də) See Akkad (sense 2).

a·gain (ə-gĕn') adv. 1. Once more; anew: try again. 2. To a previous place, position, or state: left home but went back again. 3. Furthermore; moreover. 4. On the other hand: She might go, and again she might not. 5. In return; in response; back. [Middle English (influenced by Old Norse i gegn, again), from Old English ongeagn, against.]

again and again (ə-gĕn' ənd ə-gĕn') adv. Repeatedly; frequently.

a·gainst (ə-gĕnst') prep. 1. In a direction or course opposite to: row against the current. 2. So as to come into forcible contact with: waves dashing against the shore. 3. In contact with so as to rest or press on: leaned against the tree. 4. In hostile opposition or resistance to: struggle against fate. 5. Contrary to; opposed to: against my better judgment. 6. In contrast or comparison with the setting or background of: dark colors against a fair skin. 7. In preparation for; in anticipation of: food stored against winter. 8. As a defense or safeguard from: protection against the cold. 9. To the account or debt of: drew a check against my bank balance. 10. Directly opposite to; facing. [Middle English, alteration of againes, from Old English ongeagn.]

A·ga Khan III (ă'gə kăn'), Originally Aga Sultan Sir Mohammed Shah. 1877-1957. Indian leader of the Ismaili Muslim sect. He appointed his grandson Prince Karim (born 1936) to succeed him as Aga Khan IV.

a·ga·lac·ti·a (ā-gə-lăk'tĕ-ə, -shĕ-ə, ăg'ə-) n. Absence of or faulty secretion of milk following childbirth. [New Latin, from Greek agalaktia, lack of milk : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + gala, galakt-, milk; see melg- in Appendix.]

a·ga·ma (ə-gă'mə, ăg'ə-) n. Any of various small, long-tailed, insect-eating lizards of the family Agamidae, found in the Old World tropics. [American Spanish, of Cariban origin.]

Ag·a·mem·non (ăg'ə-mĕm'nŏn', -nən) n. Greek Mythology. The king of Mycenae and leader of the Greeks in the Trojan War, who was the son of Atreus and the father of Orestes, Electra, and Iphigenia. He was killed by his wife Clytemnestra upon his return from Troy.

a·gam·ete (ā-gām'ēt', ā'gə-mēt') n. An asexual reproductive cell, such as a spore. [From Greek agametos, unmarried, variant of agamos. See AGAMIC.]

a·gam·ic (ā-gām'ik) also ag·a·mous (äg'ə-məs) adj. Biology. Occurring or reproducing without the union of male and female cells; asexual or parthenogenetic. [From Late Latin agamus, unmarried, from Greek agamos : a-, not; see A-¹ + gamos, marriage; see -GAMY.] —a·gam'i·cal·ly adv.

a·gam·o·gen·e·sis (ā-gām'ə-jěn'i-sis, äg'ə-mō-) n. Asexual reproduction, as by budding, cell division, or parthenogenesis. [Greek agamos, unmarried; see AGAMIC + -GENESIS.]

a·gam·o·sperm·y (ə-gām'ə-spûr'mē, äg'ə-mō-) n. Botany. The asexual formation of embryos and seeds without the occurrence of fertilization. [From Greek agamos, unmarried; see AGAMIC + Greek sperma, seed; see SPERM¹.]

ag·a·mous (äg'ə-məs) adj. Biology. Variant of agamic.

A·ga·na (ə-gä'nyə, ä-gä'nyä) The capital of Guam, on the western coast of the island. It was almost completely destroyed in World War II. Population, 896.

ag·a·pan·thus (äg'ə-pän'thəs) n. See African lily. [New Latin Agapanthus, genus name : Greek agapē, love + Greek anthos, flower.]

a·gape¹ (ə-gāp', ə-gāp') adv. & adj. 1. In a state of wonder or amazement, as with the mouth wide open. 2. Wide open.

a·ga·pe² (ä-gä'pā, ä'gə-pā') n. 1. Christian love. 2. Love that is spiritual, not sexual, in its nature. 3. In the early Christian Church, the love feast accompanied by Eucharistic celebration. [Greek agapē, love.]

a·gar (ā'gär', ä'gär') also a·gar·a·gar (ā'gär-ä'gär', ä'gär-ä'-) n. 1. A gelatinous material derived from certain marine algae. It is used as a base for bacterial culture media and as a stabilizer and thickener in many food products. 2. A culture medium containing this material. [Short for Malay agar-agar.]

ag·a·ric (äg'-ər-ik, ə-gär'ik) n. 1. Any of various mushrooms of the genera Agaricus, Fomes, or related genera, having large umbrellalike caps with numerous gills beneath. 2. The dried fruiting body of certain fungal species in the genus Fomes, formerly used in medicine, especially to inhibit the production of sweat. [Middle English agarik, a kind of fungus, from Latin agaricum, from Greek agarikon, from Agaria, a town in Sarmatia.]

Ag·as·siz (äg'ə-sē), Elizabeth Cabot Cary. 1822-1907. American educator who helped organize the predecessor of Radcliffe College (1879) and served as Radcliffe's first president (1894-1899).

Ag·as·siz (äg'ə-sē), (Jean) Louis (Rodolphe). 1807-1873. Swiss-born American naturalist noted for his study of fossil fish and for recognizing from geologic evidence that ice ages had occurred in the Northern Hemisphere.

Agassiz, Lake. A glacial lake of the Pleistocene epoch extending over present-day northwest Minnesota, northeast North Dakota, southern Manitoba, and southwest Ontario.

agate (ăg'īt) n. 1. A fine-grained, fibrous variety of chalcedony with colored bands or irregular clouding. 2. Games. A playing marble made of agate or a glass imitation of it. 3. A tool with agate parts, such as a burnisher tipped with agate. 4. Printing. A type size, approximately 52 points. [Middle English achate, agaten, from Old French acate, agate, alteration (influenced by Greek agathē, good), of Latin achātēs, from Greek akhatēs.]

agate line (ăg'īt līn) n. Printing. A measure of space, usually one column wide and 14 of an inch deep, used especially for classified advertisements.

A-gath-o-cles (ə-găth'ə-klēz'), 361-289 B.C. Sicilian despot and tyrant of Syracuse (317-289).

a-ga-ve (ə-gă'vē, ə-gă'-) n. Any of numerous plants of the genus Agave, native to hot, dry regions of the New World and having basal rosettes of tough, sword-shaped, often spiny-margined leaves. Agaves are grown for ornament, fiber, and food. Also called century plant [New Latin Agave, genus name, from Greek agauē, feminine of agauos, noble.]

Ag-a-wam (ăg'ə-wŏm') A town of southwest Massachusetts on the Connecticut River near Springfield. It was settled in 1635. Population, 27,323.

agcy. abbr. Agency.

age (āj) n. 1. The length of time that one has existed; duration of life: 23 years of age. 2. The time of life when a person becomes qualified to assume certain civil and personal rights and responsibilities, usually at 18 or 21 years; legal age: under age; of age. 3. One of the stages of life: the age of adolescence; at an awkward age.

4. The state of being old; old age: hair white with age. 5. Often Age. a. A period in the history of humankind marked by a distinctive characteristic or achievement: the Stone Age; the computer age. b. A period in the history of the earth, usually shorter than an epoch: the Ice Age. c. A period of time marked by the presence or influence of a dominant figure: the Elizabethan Age. See Synonyms at period. 6. a. The period of history during which a person lives: a product of his age. b. A generation: ages yet unborn. 7. ages. Informal. An extended period of time: left ages ago. — v. aged, ag-ing, ag-es. — v. tr.

1. To cause to become old. 2. To cause to mature or ripen under controlled conditions: aging wine. 3. To change (the characteristics of a device) through use, especially to stabilize (an electronic device). — v. intr. 1. To become old. 2. To manifest traits associated with old age. 3. To develop a certain quality of ripeness; become mature: cheese aging at room temperature. See Synonyms at mature. —phrasal verb. age out. Informal. To reach an age, 18 or 21 years, for example, at which one is no longer eligible for certain special services, such as education or protection, from the state. [Middle English, from Old French aage, from Vulgar Latin aetāticum*, from Latin aetās, aetāt-, age. See aiw- in Appendix.] —ag'er n.

-age suff. 1. Collection; mass: sewerage. 2. Relationship; connection: parentage. 3. Condition; state: vagabondage. 4. a. An action: blockage. b. Result of an action: breakage. 5. Residence or place of: vicarage. 6. Charge or fee: cartage. [Middle English, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin -āticum*, abstract n. suff., from Latin -āticum, n. and adj. suff..]

ag-ed (ā'jīd) adj. 1. Being of advanced age; old. See Synonyms at elderly. 2. Characteristic of old age. 3. (āj'd) Having reached the age of: aged three. 4. (āj'd) Brought to a desired ripeness or maturity: aged cheese. 5. Geology. Approaching the base level of erosion. — n. Elderly people considered as a group. Used with the. —ag'ed·ly adv. —ag'ed·ness n.

A·gee (ā'jē), James. 1909-1955. American writer and critic who won a 1958 Pulitzer Prize for his novel A Death in the Family.

age group (āj grōōp) n. All the people of a particular age or range of ages.

age·ing (ā'jīŋ) n. Chiefly British. Variant of aging.

age·ism also ag·ism (ā'jīz'əm) n. Discrimination based on age, especially prejudice against the elderly. —age'ist adj. & n.

age·less (āj'lis) adj. 1. Seeming never to grow old. 2. Existing forever; eternal. —age'less·ly adv. —age'less·ness n.

SYNONYMS: ageless, eternal, timeless. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “existing unchanged forever”: the ageless themes of love and revenge; eternal truths; timeless beauty.

Ag·e·nais (ä'zhə-nā') or Ag·e·nois (-nwä') A historical region of southwest France. Ruled by England at various times during the Hundred Years' War, it finally passed to France after 1444.

a·gen·cy (ā'jən-sē) n. pl. a·gen·cies. Abbr. agcy. 1. The condition of being in action; operation. 2. The means or mode of acting; instrumentality. 3. A business or service authorized to act for others: an employment agency. 4. An administrative division of a government or international body. [Medieval Latin agentia, from Latin agēns, agent- present participle of agere, to do. See AGENT.] agency shop (ā'jən-sē shōp) n. An establishment in which a union represents all employees regardless of union membership but requires that nonmembers pay union dues or fees.

a·gen·da (ə-jěn'də) n. pl. a·gen·das. 1. A list or program of things to be done or considered: “They share with them an agenda beyond the immediate goal of democratization of the electoral process” (Daniel Snider). 2. A plural of agendum. [Latin, pl. of agendum, agendum. See AGENDUM.]

USAGE NOTE: It is true that Cicero would have used agendum to refer to a single item of business before the Roman Senate, with agenda as its plural. But in Modern English a phrase such as item on the agenda expresses the sense of agendum, and agenda is used as a singular noun to denote the set or list of such items, as in The agenda for the meeting has not yet been set. If a plural of agenda is required, the form should be agendas: The agendas of both meetings are exceptionally varied.

a·gen·dum (ə-jĕn'dəm) n. pl. a·gen·da (-də) also a·gen·dums. Something to be done, especially an item on a program or list. [Latin, neuter gerundive of agere, to do. See ag- in Appendix.]

a·gen·e·sis (ā-jĕn'i-sĭs) n. Absence or incomplete development of an organ or body part.

A·ge·nois (ä'zhə-nwä') See Agenais.

a·gent (ā'jĕnt) *n. Abbr. agt. 1. One that acts or has the power or authority to act. 2. One empowered to act for or represent another: an author's agent; an insurance agent. 3. A means by which something is done or caused; instrument. 4. A force or substance that causes a change: a chemical agent. 5. A representative or official of a government or administrative department of a government: an FBI agent. 6. A spy. [Middle English, from Latin agĕns, agent- present participle of agere, to do. See ag- in Appendix.]*

a·gen·tial (ā-jĕn'shəl) adj. Of, relating to, or acting as an agent or agency.

A·gent Orange (ā'jĕnt ôr'ĭnj) n. A herbicide containing trace amounts of the toxic contaminant dioxin that was used in the Vietnam War to defoliate areas of forest. [From the orange identifying strip on drums in which it was stored.]

a·gent pro·vo·ca·teur (ă-zhän' prô-vô'kă-tœr') *n. pl. a·gents pro·vo·ca·teurs (ă-zhän' prô-vô'kă-tœr'). A person employed to associate with suspected individuals or groups with the purpose of inciting them to commit acts that will make them liable to punishment. [French : agent, agent + provocateur, instigator.]*

a·gent·ry (ā'jĕn-trĕ) n. pl. a·gent·ries. The office or functions of an agent.

Age of Aquarius (āj ŭv ə-kwâr'ē-əs) n. An astrological era held to have brought to the world increased spirituality and harmony among people.

age of consent (āj ŭv kən-sĕnt') n. Law. The age at which a person is legally considered competent to give consent, as to sexual intercourse.

age of reason (āj ŭv rĕ'zən) n. 1. An era in which rationalism prevails, especially the period of the Enlightenment in England, France, and the United States.

2. An age at which a person is considered capable of making reasoned judgments.

age-old (āj'ôld') adj. Very old or of long standing.

ag·er·a·tum (äj'ə-rā'təm) n. 1. Any of various New World plants of the genus Ageratum in the composite family, especially A. houstonianum, having showy, colorful flower heads. 2. Any of several other plants having flower clusters similar to the ageratum. [New Latin Agēratum, genus name, from Greek agēratos, ageless : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + gēras, old age; see gerə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

A·ges·i·la·us II (ə-jēs'ə-lā'əs), 444?-360? B.C. Spartan king (399?-360?). Considered one of the most brilliant military leaders of antiquity, he successfully defended Sparta during the Corinthian War (394-387).

ag·gie¹ (äg'ē) n. Games. A playing marble. [AG(ATE) + -IE.]

ag·gie² (äg'ē) n. Informal. 1. An agricultural school or college. 2. A student enrolled at such a school or college. [AG(RICULTURAL) + -IE.]

ag·gior·na·men·to (ə-jôr'nə-měn'tō) n. pl. ag·gior·na·men·tos. The process of bringing an institution or organization up to date; modernization. [Italian, from aggiornare, to update : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + giorno, day (from Latin diurnus, daily); see DIURNAL.]

ag·glom·er·ate (ə-glōm'ə-rāt') v. tr. intr. ag·glom·er·at·ed, ag·glom·er·at·ing, ag·glom·er·ates. To form or collect into a rounded mass.

— adj. (-ər-īt) Gathered into a rounded mass. — n. (-ər-īt) 1. A confused or jumbled mass; a heap. 2. A volcanic rock consisting of rounded and angular fragments fused together. [Latin agglomerāre, agglomerāt-, to mass together : ad-, ad- + glomerāre, to form into a ball (from glomus, ball).] —ag·glom'er·a'tive (-ə-rā'tīv, -ər-ə-tīv) adj. —ag·glom'er·a'tor n.

ag·glom·er·a·tion (ə-glōm'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of gathering into a mass. 2. A confused or jumbled mass: “To avoid the problems of large urban agglomerations, the state decentralized the university system” (Bickley Townsend).

ag·glu·tin·a·ble (ə-glōt'n-ə-bəl) adj. Capable of agglutinating. —ag·glu'tin·a·bil'i·ty n.

ag·glu·ti·nate (ə-glōt'n-āt') v. ag·glu·ti·nat·ed, ag·glu·ti·nat·ing, ag·glu·ti·nates. — v. tr. 1. To cause to adhere, as with glue. 2. Linguistics. To form (words) by combining words or words and word elements. 3. Physiology. To cause (red blood cells or bacteria) to clump together. — v. intr. 1. To join together into a group or mass. 2. Linguistics. To form words by agglutination.

3. Physiology. To clump together; undergo agglutination. — n. See agglutination (n., sense 2). [Latin agglutināre, agglutināt- : ad-, ad- + glutināre, to glue (from glūten, glue).] —ag·glu'ti·nant adj. & n.

ag·glu·ti·na·tion (ə-glōt'n-ā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of agglutinating; adhesion of distinct parts. 2. A clumped mass of material formed by agglutination. Also called agglutinate 3. Linguistics. The formation of words from morphemes that retain their original forms and meanings with little change during the combination process. 4. The clumping together of red blood cells or bacteria, usually in response to a particular antibody.

ag·glu·ti·na·tive (ə-glōōt'n-ā'tiv, -ə-tiv) adj. 1. Tending toward, concerning, or characteristic of agglutination. 2. Linguistics. Of, relating to, or being a language in which words are formed primarily by means of agglutination.

ag·glu·ti·nin (ə-glōōt'n-ĭn) n. Physiology. A substance, such as an antibody, that is capable of causing agglutination of a particular antigen, especially red blood cells or bacteria. [AGGLUTIN(ATION) + -IN.]

ag·glu·tin·o·gen (ăg'lōō-tĭn'ə-jən, ə-glōō'tn-) n. Physiology. An antigen that stimulates the production of a particular agglutinin, such as an antibody.

[AGGLUTIN(IN) + -GEN.] —ag'glu·tin'o·gen'ic (ăg'lōō-tĭn'ə-gĕn'ĭk, ə-glōō'tn-) adj.

ag·grade (ə-grād') v. tr. ag·grad·ed, ag·grad·ing, ag·grades. To fill and raise the level of (the bed of a stream) by deposition of sediment.

—ag'gra·da'tion (ăg'rə-dā'shən) n. —ag'gra·da'tion·al adj.

ag·gran·dize (ə-grăn'dīz', äg'rən-) v. tr. ag·gran·dized, ag·gran·diz·ing, ag·gran·diz·es. 1. To increase the scope of; extend. 2. To make greater in power, influence, stature, or reputation. 3. To make appear greater; exaggerate:

aggrandize one argument while belittling another. [French agrandir, aggrandiss-, from Old French : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + grandir, to grow larger (from Latin grandire, from grandis, large).] —ag·gran'dize·ment (ə-grăn'dīz-mənt, -dīz'-) n. —ag·gran'diz'er n.

ag·gra·vate (ăg'rə-vāt') v. tr. ag·gra·vat·ed, ag·gra·vat·ing, ag·gra·vates. 1. To make worse or more troublesome. 2. To rouse to exasperation or anger; provoke. See Synonyms at annoy. [Latin aggravāre, aggravāt- : ad-, ad- + gravāre, to burden (from gravis, heavy); see g^werə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

—ag'gra·vat'ing·ly adv. —ag'gra·va'tive adj. —ag'gra·va'tor n.

USAGE NOTE: It is sometimes claimed that aggravate should be used only to mean “to make worse” and not “to irritate.” Based on this view it would be appropriate to say The endless wait for luggage aggravates the misery of modern air travel, but not It's the endless wait for luggage that aggravates me the most. But the latter use dates back as far as the 17th century and is accepted by 68 percent of the Usage Panel. As H.W. Fowler wrote, “the extension from aggravating a person's temper to aggravating the person himself is slight and natural, and when we are told that Wackford Squeers [in Dickens's Nicholas Nickleby] pinched the boys in aggravating places we may reasonably infer that his choice of places aggravated both the pinches and the boys.”

ag·gra·vat·ed assault (ăg'rə-vā'tĭd ə-sôlt') n. Law. Any of various assaults that are more serious than a common assault, especially one performed with an intent to commit a crime.

ag·gra·va·tion (ăg' rə-vā'shən) n. 1. The act of aggravating or the state of being aggravated. 2. A source of continuing, increasing irritation or trouble. 3. Exasperation.

ag·gre·gate (ăg'rī-gīt) adj. 1. Constituting or amounting to a whole; total: aggregate sales in that market. 2. Botany. Crowded or massed into a dense cluster. 3. Composed of a mixture of minerals separable by mechanical means. — n.

1. A total considered with reference to its constituent parts; a gross amount: “An empire is the aggregate of many states under one common head” (Edmund Burke).

2. The mineral materials, such as sand or stone, used in making concrete. — v.

tr. ag·gre·gat·ed, ag·gre·gat·ing, ag·gre·gates (-gāt'). 1. To gather into a mass, sum, or whole. 2. To amount to; total. — idiom. in the aggregate.

Taken into account as a whole: Unit sales for December amounted in the aggregate to 100,000. [Middle English aggregat, from Latin aggregātus, past participle of aggregāre, to add to : ad-, ad- + gregāre, to collect (from grex, greg-, flock); see ger- in Appendix.]

— ag'gre·gate·ly adv. — ag'gre·ga'tion n.

— ag'gre·ga'tive adj. — ag'gre·ga'tor n.

aggregate fruit (ăg'rī-gīt frōōt) n. A fruit, such as the raspberry, consisting of many individual small fruits derived from separate ovaries within a single flower, borne together on a common receptacle.

ag·gress (ə-grēs') v. intr. ag·gressed, ag·gress·ing, ag·gress·es. To initiate an attack, a war, a quarrel, or a fight: “America and the European countries should press back when the Soviets overstep and aggress, as in Afghanistan” (Washington Post). [French agresser, from Latin aggredi, aggress-, to attack : ad-, ad- + gradī, to go; see ghredh- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Aggress has occasionally been unjustly maligned as an upstart back-formation, that is, as having been created by people who incorrectly thought that aggression was formed from the verb aggress. As used in the field of psychology aggress may be a back-formation from aggression, but aggress has been in general use since the 16th century and in fact antedates aggression.

ag·gres·sion (ə-grēsh'ən) n. 1. The act of initiating hostilities or invasion.

2. The practice or habit of launching attacks. 3. Psychology. Hostile or destructive behavior or actions.

ag·gres·sive (ə-grēs'iv) adj. 1. Inclined to behave in a hostile fashion.

2. Assertive, bold, and enterprising: an aggressive young executive. 3. Intense or harsh, as in color. 4. Fast growing; tending to spread quickly: an aggressive tumor.

— ag·gres'sive·ly adv. — ag·gres'sive·ness n.

ag·gres·sor (ə-grēs'ər) n. One that engages in aggression.

ag·grieve (ə-grēv′) v. tr. ag·grieved, ag·griev·ing, ag·grieves. 1. To distress; afflict. 2. To inflict an injury or injuries on. [Middle English agreven, from Old French agrever, from Latin aggravāre, to make worse. See AGGRAVATE.]

ag·grieved (ə-grēvd′) adj. 1. Feeling distress or affliction. 2. Treated wrongly; offended. 3. Law. Treated unjustly, as by denial of or infringement upon one's legal rights. —ag·griev′ed·ly (ə-grē′vīd-lē) adv. —ag·griev′ed·ness n.

ag·gro (ăg′rō) n. pl. ag·gros. Chiefly British. 1. a. Irritation and exasperation: “Postponing new hospitals and roads causes far less aggro than sacking town hall or Whitehall workers” (Economist). b. A raucous rivalry or grievance, characterized by angry public confrontations or violence: “The Commons met in apprehensive mood yesterday following the ructions in the Chamber last week. Were we in for more aggro or were the lads on the Westminster terraces going to return to more civilized conduct?” (Financial Times). c. A fistfight. 2. Aggressive nature. — adj. Slang. Very aggressive, fearless, and stylish, as in surfing or skateboarding: “Nat was aggro... Not content to ride in a straight line across the wave’s face, Nat was a pioneer of the vertical move” (Kem Nunn). [Short for AGGRAVATION, and AGGRESSION.]

a·gha (ă′gə, ăg′ə) n. Variant of aga.

a·ghast (ə-găst′) adj. Struck by shock, terror, or amazement. [Middle English agast, past participle of agasten, to frighten : a-, intensive pref. (from Old English ā-) + gasten, to frighten (from Old English gæstan, from gāst, ghost).]

ag·ile (ăj′əl, -īl′) adj. 1. Characterized by quickness, lightness, and ease of movement; nimble. See Synonyms at nimble. 2. Mentally alert: an agile mind. [French, from Latin agilis, from agere, to drive, do. See ag- in Appendix.]

—ag′ile·ly adv. —ag′ile·ness n.

a·gil·i·ty (ə-jīl′i-tē) n. The state or quality of being agile; nimbleness. [Middle English agilite, from Old French, from Medieval Latin agilitās, from Latin agilis. See AGILE.]

a·gin (ə-gīn′) Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. prep. 1. Against. 2. Opposed to: I’m agin him. 3. Next to; beside; near. 4. By or before (a specified time). — conj. By the time that. [Regional variant of AGAINST.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The spelling of agin reflects both the raised vowel before a nasal consonant, typical of Southern dialects, and a reduced final consonant cluster, typical of several regional varieties. Agin has a wide spectrum of senses in the regional speech of those who pronounce it this way. Indeed, these regional senses are tied to the pronunciation, for standard English against does not quite capture the full implication of the assertion “I’m agin him”—that is, “opposed to him and all that he stands for.” Another regional sense recalls the original literal Old English sense of “facing; next to” (see the first four senses of against in the Oxford English Dictionary), where standard English would have by: Their house is agin the mountain. Agin may be used figuratively with regard to time chiefly in South Midland dialects, meaning “by or before (a specified time)”: “I’ll be there agin daylight” (North Carolina informant in DARE).

A·gin·court (äj’în-kôrt’, -kôrt’) A village of northern France west-northwest of Arras. On October 25, 1415, Henry V of England decisively defeated a much larger French army here. The victory demonstrated the effectiveness of longbow-equipped troops over heavily armored feudal knights.

ag·ing (ā’jīng) n. 1. The process of growing old or maturing. 2. An artificial process for imparting the characteristics and properties of age.

ag·ism (ā’jīz’əm) n. Variant of ageism.

ag·i·ta (äj’i-tə) n. Acid indigestion: “Agita... can afflict those who indulge in too much good... food” (New York Times). [Italian, from agitare, to agitate, from Latin agitāre. See AGITATE.]

ag·i·tate (äj’i-tāt’) v. ag·i·tat·ed, ag·i·tat·ing, ag·i·tates. — v. tr. 1. To cause to move with violence or sudden force. 2. To upset; disturb: was agitated by the alarming news. 3. To arouse interest in (a cause, for example) by use of the written or spoken word; debate. — v. intr. To stir up public interest in a cause: agitate for a tax reduction. [Latin agitāre, agitāt- frequentative of agere, to drive, do. See ag- in Appendix.] — ag’i·tat’ed·ly (-tā’tīd-lē) adv. — ag’i·ta’tive adj.

SYNONYMS: agitate, churn, convulse, rock, shake. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause to move to and fro violently”: land agitated by tremors; a storm churning the waves; buildings and streets convulsed by the detonation of a bomb; a tornado rocking trees and houses; an explosion that shook the ground.

ag·i·ta·tion (äj’i-tā’shən) n. 1. The act of agitating or the state of being agitated. 2. Extreme emotional disturbance; perturbation. 3. The stirring up of public interest in a matter of controversy, such as a political or social issue.

— ag’i·ta’tion·al adj.

ag·i·ta·to (äj’i-tā’tō) adv. & adj. Music. In a restless, agitated style. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, past participle of agitare, from Latin agitāre, to agitate.

See AGITATE.]

ag·i·ta·tor (äj’i-tā’tər) n. 1. One who agitates, especially one who engages in political agitation. 2. An apparatus that shakes or stirs, as in a washing machine.

ag·it·prop (äj’īt-prōp’) n. 1. Communist-oriented political propaganda disseminated especially through literature, drama, art, or music. 2. The means or vehicle, such as a government department or a state-controlled press, by which such propaganda is disseminated. 3. Something, such as a film, that is designed to impress a certain political or social perspective on its audience, with little or no consideration given to accuracy: “It also is a conspiracy movie, agitprop against today's targets, big government and big business" (George F. Will). — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a massive agitprop campaign; agitprop filmmaking. [Russian, short for otdel agitatsii i propagandy, incitement and propaganda section (of the central and local committees of the Russian Communist party); name changed in 1934.]

A·gla·ia (ə-glā'ə, ə-glī'ə) n. Greek Mythology. One of the three Graces.

a·gleam (ə-glēm') adv. & adj. Brightly shining.

ag·let (äg'līt) n. 1. A tag or metal sheath on the end of a lace, cord, or ribbon to facilitate its passing through eyelet holes. 2. A similar device used for an ornament. [Middle English, from Old French aguillette, diminutive of aguille, needle, from Vulgar Latin acūcula*, from Late Latin acucula, diminutive of Latin acus, needle. See ak- in Appendix.]

a·gley (ə-glī', ə-glā', ə-glē') adv. Scots. Off to one side; awry. [A⁻² + Scots gley, to squint (from Middle English glien, possibly of Scandinavian origin).]

a·glit·ter (ə-glīt'ər) adv. & adj. Glittering; sparkling.

a·glow (ə-glō') adv. & adj. In a glow; glowing.

a·gly·cone (ə-glī'kōn') or a·gly·con (-kōn) n. The nonsugar component of a glycoside molecule that results from hydrolysis of the molecule. [a-, together (from Greek ha-); see HAPLOID + GLYC(O)- + -ONE.]

ag·nail (äg'nāl') n. 1. A hangnail. 2. A painful sore or swelling around a fingernail or toenail. [Middle English angnail, corn, from Old English angnægl: ang-, painful; see angh- in Appendix + nægel, peg, nail; see NAIL.]

ag·nate (äg'nāt') adj. 1. Related on or descended from the father's or male side. 2. Coming from a common source; akin. — n. A relative on the father's or male side only. [Latin agnātus, past participle of agnāscī, to become an agnate: ad-, ad- + nāscī, to be born; see genə- in Appendix.] — ag·nat'ic (äg-nāt'ik) adj. — ag·nat'i·cal·ly adv. — ag·na'tion n.

ag·na·than (äg'nə-thən) adj. Lacking a lower jaw: agnathan fish. [A⁻¹ + Greek gnathos, jaw + -AN¹.]

Ag·nes (äg'nīs), Saint. Died c. A.D. 304. Roman Christian who, according to tradition, was martyred as a virgin at the age of 13. She is the patron saint of young girls.

Ag·new (äg'nōō', -nyōō'), Spiro Theodore. Born 1918. Vice President of the United States (1969-1973) under Richard M. Nixon. Agnew resigned amid charges of illegal financial dealings during his governorship of Maryland (1966-1968).

Ag·ni (üg'nē) n. Hinduism. The Vedic god of fire and guardian of humanity.

ag·no·men (äg-nō'mən) n. pl. ag·nom·i·na (-nōm'ə-nə). An additional cognomen given to a Roman citizen, often in honor of military victories. [Latin: ad-, ad- (influenced by agnōscere, to recognize) + nōmen, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.]

Ag·non (äg'nôn'), Shmuel Yosef. 1888-1970. Polish-born Israeli writer. His dramatic novels, written in Hebrew, include A Guest for the Night (1939). He shared the 1966 Nobel Prize for literature.

ag·no·sia (äg-nō'zhə) n. Loss of the ability to interpret sensory stimuli, such as sounds or images. [Greek agnōsia, ignorance : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + gnōsis, knowledge (from gignōskein, to know); see gnō- in Appendix.]

ag·nos·tic (äg-nōs'tik) n. One who believes that there can be no proof of the existence of God but does not deny the possibility that God exists. — adj.

1. Relating to or being an agnostic. 2. Noncommittal: “I favored European unity, but I was agnostic about the form it should take” (Henry A. Kissinger). [A⁻¹ + GNOSTIC.] —ag·nos'ti·cal·ly adv.

WORD HISTORY: An agnostic does not deny the existence of God and heaven, for example, but rather holds that one cannot know for certain if they exist or not. The term agnostic was fittingly coined by the 19th-century British scientist Thomas H. Huxley, who believed that only material phenomena were objects of exact knowledge. He made up the word from the prefix a-, meaning “without, not,” as in amoral, and the noun Gnostic. Gnostic is related to the Greek word gnōsis, “knowledge,” which was used by early Christian writers to mean “higher, esoteric knowledge of spiritual things”; hence, Gnostic referred to those with such knowledge. In coining the term agnostic, Huxley was considering as “Gnostics” a group of his fellow intellectuals—“ists,” as he called them—who had eagerly embraced various doctrines or theories that explained the world to their satisfaction. Because he was a “man without a rag of a label to cover himself with,” Huxley coined the term agnostic for himself, its first published use being in 1870.

ag·nos·ti·cism (äg-nōs'ti-siz'əm) n. 1. The doctrine that certainty about first principles or absolute truth is unattainable and that only perceptual phenomena are objects of exact knowledge. 2. The belief that there can be no proof either that God exists or that God does not exist.

Ag·nus De·i (äg'nəs dē'ī', än'yōōs dā'ē, äg'nōōs') n. 1. Lamb of God; Jesus. Also called Paschal Lamb 2. a. A liturgical prayer to Jesus. b. A musical setting for this prayer. [Late Latin : Latin agnus, lamb + Latin dei, genitive of deus, god.]

a·go (ə-gō') adv. & adj. 1. Gone by; past: two years ago. 2. In the past: It happened ages ago. [Middle English, past participle of agon, to go away, from Old English āgān : ā-, intensive pref. + gān, to go; see ghē- in Appendix.]

a·gog (ə-gōg') adv. & adj. Full of keen anticipation or excitement; eager. See Synonyms at eager¹. [Middle English agogge, from Old French en gogue, in merriment : en, in (from Latin in); see IN⁻² + gogue, merriment.]

-agog suff. Variant of -agogue.

à go·go or à-go-go (ə-gō'gō') adv. In a fast and lively manner; freely: dancing à gogo. — n. A nightclub for fast, lively dancing, drinking, and socializing. [French à gogo, galore, from Old French a gogo : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + gogo (probably reduplicated form of gogue, merriment).]

-agogue or -agog suff. A substance that stimulates the flow of: emmenagogue. [French, from Late Latin -agōgus, from Greek -agōgos, from agōgos, drawing off, from agein, to lead, drive. See ag- in Appendix.]

ag·on (ăg'ŏn, -ŏn, ä-gŏn') n. pl. a·gon-es (ə-gō'nēz). 1. A conflict, especially between the protagonist and antagonist in a work of literature or drama. 2. The part of an ancient Greek drama, especially a comedy, in which two characters engage in verbal dispute. 3. A test of will; a conflict: "Freud's originality stemmed from his aggression and ambition in his agon with biology" (Harold Bloom).

[Greek agōn. See AGONY.]

ag·o·nal (ăg'ə-nəl) adj. Associated with or relating to great pain, especially the agony of death.

a·gone (ə-gŏn', ə-gŏn') adv. & adj. Archaic. Gone by; past. [Middle English agon, past participle of agon, to go away. See AGO.]

a·gon·es (ə-gō'nēz) n. Plural of agon.

a·gon·ic (ā-gŏn'ik, ə-gŏn'-) adj. Having no angle. [From Greek agōnos : a-, without; see A-¹ + gōnia, angle; see DIAGONAL.]

agonic line (ā-gŏn'ik līn) n. An imaginary line on the earth's surface connecting points where the magnetic declination is zero.

ag·o·nist (ăg'ə-nĭst) n. 1. One involved in a struggle or competition.

2. Physiology. A contracting muscle that is resisted or counteracted by another muscle, the antagonist. 3. Biochemistry. A substance that can combine with a nerve receptor to produce a reaction typical for that substance. [Late Latin agōnista, contender, from Greek agōnistēs, from agōn, contest. See AGONY.]

ag·o·nis·tic (ăg'ə-nĭs'tik) also ag·o·nis·ti·cal (-tĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Striving to overcome in argument; combative. 2. Struggling to achieve effect; strained and contrived. 3. Of or relating to contests, originally those of the ancient Greeks.

—ag'ō·nis'ti·cal·ly adv.

ag·o·nize (ăg'ə-nĭz') v. ag·o·nized, ag·o·niz·ing, ag·o·niz·es. — v. intr.

1. To suffer extreme pain or great anguish. 2. To make a great effort; struggle.

See Synonyms at writh. — v. tr. To cause great pain or anguish to. See Synonyms at afflict. [Medieval Latin agōnizāre, from Greek agōnizesthai, to struggle, from agōn, contest. See AGONY.] —ag'ō·niz'ing·ly adv.

ag·o·ny (ăg'ə-nē) n. pl. ag·o·nies. 1. The suffering of intense physical or mental pain. 2. The struggle that precedes death. 3. A sudden or intense emotion: an agony of doubt. 4. A violent, intense struggle. [Middle English agonie, from Old French, from Late Latin agōnia, from Greek, from agōn, struggle, from agein, to drive. See ag- in Appendix.]

agony column (äg'ə-nē kōl'əm) n. A newspaper column containing advertisements chiefly about missing relatives or friends.

ag·o·ra¹ (äg'ər-ə) n. pl. ag·o·rae (ə-rē') or ag·o·ras. A place of congregation, especially an ancient Greek marketplace. [Greek. See ger- in Appendix.]

a·go·ra² (ä'gə-rä') n. pl. a·go·rot or a·go·roth (-rōt'). A unit of currency in Israel. See Table at currency. [Hebrew 'ăgôrâ, from 'āgar, to hire.]

ag·o·ra·pho·bi·a (äg'ər-ə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of open or public places. [Greek agora, market place; see ger- in Appendix + -PHOBIA.]

—ag·o·ra·pho·bi·ac' (-äk') n. —ag'·o·ra·pho'·bic (-fō'bīk, -föb'īk) adj. & n.

a·gou·ti (ə-gōō'tē) n. pl. a·go·tis or a·gou·ties. 1. A burrowing rodent of the genus Dasyprocta, native to tropical America and usually having brown fur streaked with gray. 2. The alternation of light and dark bands of color in the fur of various animals, producing a grizzled appearance. [French, from American Spanish agutí, from Guarani acutí.]

agr- pref. Variant of agro-.

A·gra (ä'grə) A city of north-central India on the Jumna River southeast of New Delhi. It was a Mogul capital in the 16th and 17th centuries and is the site of the Taj Mahal, built by the emperor Shah Jahan after the death of his favorite wife in 1629. Population, 694,191.

a·graffe also a·grafe (ə-grāf') n. 1. A hook-and-loop arrangement used for a clasp on armor and clothing. 2. A cramp iron for holding stones together in building. [French agrafe, from agrafer, to hook onto : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + grafer, to hook (from grafe, hook, from Old High German krāpfo).]

a·gran·u·lo·cy·to·sis (ā-grăn'yə-lō-sī-tō'sis) n. An acute disease marked by high fever and a sharp drop in circulating granular white blood cells. It may be drug-induced or the result of exposure to radiation.

ag·ra·pha also Ag·ra·pha (äg'rə-fə) pl.n. The sayings of Jesus not in the Bible. [Greek, from neuter pl. of agraphos, unwritten : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + graphein, to write; see gerbh- in Appendix.]

a·graph·i·a (ā-gräf'ē-ə) n. A disorder marked by loss of the ability to write. [A⁻¹ + Greek graphein, to write; see gerbh- in Appendix + *-IA*¹.] —a·graph'ic adj.

a·grar·i·an (ə-grâr'ē-ən) adj. 1. Relating to or concerning the land and its ownership, cultivation, and tenure. 2. a. Relating to agricultural or rural matters.

b. Intended to further agricultural interests: agrarian lobbyists. — n. A person who favors equitable distribution of land. [From Latin agrārius, from ager, agr-, field. See agro- in Appendix.] —a·grar'i·an·ly adv.

a·grar·i·an·ism (ə-grâr'ē-ə-nīz'əm) n. A movement for equitable distribution of land and for agrarian reform.

a·gree (ə-grē') v. a·greed, a·gree·ing, a·grees. — v. intr. 1. To grant consent; accede. 2. To come into or be in accord, as of opinion. 3. To be of one opinion; concur. 4. To come to an understanding or to terms. 5. To be compatible or in correspondence: The copy agrees with the original. 6. To be suitable, appropriate, pleasing, or healthful: Spicy food does not agree with me.

7. Grammar. To correspond in gender, number, case, or person. — v. tr. To grant or concede: My parents agreed that we should go. [Middle English agreeen, from Old French agreer, from Vulgar Latin agrātāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin grātus, pleasing; see g^werə-² in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: agree, conform, harmonize, accord, correspond, coincide. These verbs all indicate a compatible relationship between people or things. Agree may indicate mere lack of incongruity or discord: The testimony of all the witnesses agrees on that point. Often, however, it suggests acceptance of ideas or actions and thus accommodation: We finally agreed on a price for the house. Conform stresses correspondence in essence or basic characteristics, sometimes as a result of accommodation to established standards: The kinds of books in her library conform to her level of education. Students are required to conform to the rules. Harmonize implies a relationship of unlike elements combined or arranged to make a pleasing whole: Beige harmonizes with black. Accord implies harmonious relationship, unity, or consistency, as in feeling or essential nature: “The creed [upon which America was founded] was widely seen as both progressive and universalistic: It accorded with the future, and it was open to all” (Everett Carl Ladd). Correspond refers either to actual similarity in form or nature (The dots on the pattern correspond with the seam allowance on the cut fabric) or to similarity in function, character, or structure: The Diet in Japan corresponds to the American Congress. Coincide stresses exact agreement in space, time, or thought: “His interest happily coincided with his duty” (Edward A. Freeman). See also Synonyms at assent a·gree·a·ble (ə-grē'ə-bəl) adj. 1. To one's liking; pleasing. See Synonyms at amiable. 2. Suitable; conformable. 3. Ready to consent or submit.

ANTONYM: disagree

—a·gree'a·bil'i·ty, a·gree'a·ble·ness n. —a·gree'a·bly adv.

a·gree·ment (ə-grē'mənt) n. Abbr. agt. 1. The act of agreeing. 2. Harmony of opinion; accord. 3. An arrangement between parties regarding a method of action; a covenant. 4. Law. a. A properly executed and legally binding compact. b. The writing or document embodying this compact. 5. Grammar. Correspondence in gender, number, case, or person between words.

agri. abbr. 1. Agricultural. 2. Agriculture.

agri- pref. Variant of agro-.

ag·ri·a (ăg'rē-ə) n. An extensive pustular eruption. [From Greek agrios, wild. See agro- in Appendix.]

ag·ri·busi·ness (ăg' rə-bīz' nīs) n. Farming engaged in as a large-scale business operation embracing the production, processing, and distribution of agricultural products and the manufacture of farm machinery, equipment, and supplies.

agric. abbr. 1. Agriculture. 2. Agriculturist.

ag·ri·chem·i·cal (ăg' rī-kēm' ī-kəl) n. Variant of agrochemical.

ag·ri·cide (ăg' rī-sīd') n. The abuse of agricultural land through improper farming methods, which renders it unfit to support plant or animal life.

A·gri·c·o·la (ə-grīk' ə-lə), Gnaeus Julius. A.D. 37-93. Roman soldier and politician who as governor of Britain (77-84) brought most of its inhabitants under Roman control. He also circumnavigated Britain, thereby discovering it to be an island.

ag·ri·cul·ture (ăg' rī-kül' chər) n. Abbr. agri., agric. The science, art, and business of cultivating the soil, producing crops, and raising livestock; farming.

[Middle English, from Latin agrīcultūra : agrī, genitive of ager, field; see agro- in Appendix + cultūra, cultivation; see CULTURE.] —ag'ri-cul'tur-al adj.

—ag'ri-cul'tur-al-ly adv. —ag'ri-cul'tur-ist, ag'ri-cul'tur-al-ist n.

A·gri·gen·to (ă' grī-jěn' tō, ăg' rī-) A city of southwest Sicily, Italy, overlooking the Mediterranean Sea. It was founded c. 580 B.C. by Greek colonists. Population, 51,931.

ag·ri·ma·tion (ăg' rə-mā' shən) n. Automated farming, especially the use of robots to perform heretofore manual operations that require acute vision, dexterity, and the ability to make choices. [AGRI(CULTURE) + (AUTO)MATION.]

ag·ri·mo·ny (ăg' rə-mō' nē) n. pl. ag·ri·mo·nies. 1. Any of various perennial herbaceous plants of the genus Agrimonia, having pinnately compound leaves and spikelike clusters of small yellow flowers. 2. Any of several similar or related plants, such as the hemp agrimony. [Middle English, from Old French aigre-moine, from Latin agrīmōnia (influenced by Old French aigre, sour), alteration of argemōnia, from Greek argemōnē, poppy, possibly from argos, white. See arg- in Appendix.]

A·gri·p·pa (ə-grīp' ə), Marcus Vipsanius. 63-12 B.C. Roman soldier and statesman who commanded the fleet that defeated the forces of Mark Antony and Cleopatra at Actium (31).

Ag·rip·pi·na¹ (ăg' rə-pī' nə, -pē' -), Known as “the Elder.” 13 B.C.?-A.D. 33. Roman matron and mother of Caligula. She was influential in the struggle for power during the reign of Tiberius.

Ag·rip·pi·na² (ăg' rə-pī' nə, -pē' -), Known as “the Younger.” A.D. 15?-59. Roman empress. She murdered her husband, the emperor Claudius, so that her son by a previous marriage, Nero, would become emperor. Nero, distrusting his mother, had her murdered.

agro- or agri- or agr- pref. 1. Field; soil: agrology. 2. Agriculture: agroindustrial. [From Greek agros, field. See agro- in Appendix.]

ag-ro-bi-ol-o-gy (ăg'rō-bī-ōl'ə-jē) n. The study of plant nutrition and growth as related to soil condition, especially to determine ways to increase crop yield.

—ag'ro-bi'o-log'ic (-ə-lōj'ik), ag'ro-bi'o-log'i-cal adj.

—ag'ro-bi'o-log'i-cal-ly adv. —ag'ro-bi-ol-o-gist n.

ag-ro-chem-i-cal (ăg'rə-kēm'i-kəl) also ag-ri-chem-i-cal (ăg'ri-) n. 1. A chemical, such as a hormone, a fungicide, or an insecticide, that improves the production of crops. 2. A chemical or product, such as cellulose, derived from plants.

ag-ro-in-dus-tri-al (ăg'rō-īn-dūs'trē-əl) adj. Of or relating to the production or supply of various needs, such as water or power, for agriculture and industry.

a-grol-o-gy (ə-grōl'ə-jē) n. The applied science of soils in relation to crops.

—ag'ro-log'ic (ăg'rə-lōj'ik), ag'ro-log'i-cal adj. —ag'ro-log'i-cal-ly adv.

—a-grol-o-gist n.

a-gron-o-my (ə-grōn'ə-mē) n. Application of the various soil and plant sciences to soil management and crop production; scientific agriculture.

—ag'ro-nom'ic (ăg'rə-nōm'ik), ag'ro-nom'i-cal adj. —a-gron'o-mist n.

ag-ros-tol-o-gy (ăg'rə-stōl'ə-jē) n. The study of grasses. [Greek agrōstis, a kind of wild grass (from agros, field); see AGRO- + -LOGY.] —ag'ros-tol'o-gist n.

a-ground (ə-ground') adv. & adj. 1. Onto or on a shore, reef, or the bottom of a body of water: a ship that ran aground; a ship aground offshore. 2. On the ground: combat aircraft aloft and aground.

agt. abbr. 1. Agent. 2. Agreement.

a-gua-ca-te (ă'gwə-kă'tē) n. The avocado. [American Spanish, from Nahuatl ahuacatl.]

A-gua-dil-la (ă'gwə-dē'ə, ă'gwä-thē'ä) A town of northwest Puerto Rico on Mona Passage. Christopher Columbus reputedly landed at the site of Aguadilla in 1493. Population, 22,039.

A-gua Fri-a (ă'gwə frē'ə) A river of western Arizona rising east of Prescott and flowing about 193 km (120 mi) generally southward to the Gila River west of Phoenix.

A-guas-ca-lien-tes (ă'gwäs-kä-lyěn'tēs) A city of central Mexico northeast of Guadalajara. It was built over an intricate system of tunnels constructed by ancient, still unidentified inhabitants. Population, 293,152.

a-gue (ă'gyō) n. 1. A febrile condition in which there are alternating periods of chills, fever, and sweating. Used chiefly in reference to the fevers associated with malaria. 2. A chill or fit of shivering. [Middle English, from Old French (fievre) ague, sharp (fever), from Medieval Latin (febris) acūta, from Latin, feminine of acūtus. See ACUTE.] —a'gu-ish (ă'gyō-īsh) adj. —a'gu-ish-ly adv. —a'gu-ish-ness n.

A-gui-nal-do (ă'gē-näl'dō), Emilio. 1869-1964. Philippine leader of a rebellion against Spanish rule (1896-1898) and an uprising against American authority (1899-1901) that ended with his capture and subsequent oath of allegiance to the United States.

A·gul·has (ə-gŭl'əs), Cape. A rugged headland of South Africa, the southernmost point of Africa. Its meridian, longitude 20° east, marks the division between the Atlantic and Indian oceans.

ah (ä) interj. Used to express various emotions, such as satisfaction, surprise, delight, dislike, or pain.

A.h. abbr. Ampere-hour.

A.H. abbr. 1. Latin. Anno Hebraico (in the Hebrew year). 2. Latin. Anno Hegirae (in the year of the Hegira).

a·ha (ä-hä') interj. Used to express surprise, pleasure, or triumph.

AHA abbr. 1. American Heart Association. 2. American Hospital Association.

A·hab (ä'häb'), Ninth century B.C. Pagan king of Israel and husband of Jezebel who, according to the Old Testament, was overthrown by Jehu.

a·head (ə-hĕd') adv. 1. At or to the front or head. 2. a. In advance; before: Pay ahead, and you'll receive a discount. b. In or into the future; for the future: planned ahead. 3. a. In an advanced position or a configuration registering the future: Set the clock ahead. b. At or to a different time; earlier or later: moved the appointment ahead, from Tuesday to Monday. 4. a. In a forward direction; onward: The train moved ahead slowly. b. In the prescribed direction or sequence for normal use: You won't hear anything unless you roll the tape ahead. 5. In or into a more advantageous position: wanted to get ahead in life. —idiom. be ahead. To be winning or in a superior position: The home team was ahead in the second period. Your company is ahead in developing the new technology.

ahead of (ə-hĕd' ūv) prep. 1. In front of. 2. In advance of; at an earlier time than: arrived ahead of the others. 3. In a superior or advanced position to; more successful than: We are way ahead of you in that field.

a·hem (ə-hĕm') interj. Used to attract attention or to express doubt or warning.

AHF abbr. Antihemophilic factor.

a·him·sa (ə-hĭm'sä') n. A Buddhist and Hindu doctrine of nonviolence expressing belief in the sacredness of all living creatures. [Sanskrit ahimsā : a-, not; see ne in Appendix + himsā, injury (from himsati, he injures).]

a·his·tor·i·cal (ä'hĭ-stŏr'ĭ-kəl, -stŏr'-) adj. Unconcerned with or unrelated to history, historical development, or tradition: "All of this is totally ahistorical. There is virtually no evidence in the historical record to support any of it" (Heritage Foundation Reports).

Ah·len (ä'lən) A city of west-central Germany southeast of Münster. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 52,537.

Ah·ma·da·bad or Ah·me·da·bad (ä'mə-də-bäd') A city of northwest India north of Bombay. Founded in 1412 as the capital of a former Gujarat kingdom, it is a commercial and cultural center with many outstanding mosques, temples, and tombs. Population, 2,059,725.

a·hold (ə-hōldʹ) n. Hold; grip: “I knew I could make it all right if I got... back to the hotel and got ahold of that bottle of brandy” (Jimmy Breslin). “Can you tell me how to get ahold of them?” (Margaret Truman).

-aholic suff. One that is addicted to or compulsively in need of: workaholic.
[From (ALC)OHOLIC.]

A-ho-ri-zon (ā'hə-rī'zən) n. In ABC soil, the uppermost zone of soil, containing humus; topsoil. Also called zone of leaching a·hoy (ə-hoiʹ) interj. Nautical. Used to hail a ship or person or to attract attention.

Ah-ri-man (ä'rī-mən) n. The spirit of evil in Zoroastrianism, understood by some as the arch rival of Ormazd. [Persian ahriman, from Middle Persian ahra-man, from Avestan angrō mainiiuš, the evil spirit : angrō, evil + mainiiuš, spirit; see men-¹ in Appendix.]

A-hu-ra Maz-da (ä-höör'ə mätz'də) n. Ormazd. [Avestan ahurō mazdā, the Wise Lord : ahura-, lord; see ansu- in Appendix + mazdā-, wise; see men-¹ in Appendix.]

Ah·vaz or Ah·waz (ä-wäzʹ) A city of southwest Iran north-northeast of Basra, Iraq. Modern Ahvaz was built on extensive ruins of an ancient Persian city. Population, 471,000.

Ah·ven·an·maa (ä'və-nän-mäʹ) also Å·land Islands or Aa·land Islands (ä'länd, ö'ländʹ) An archipelago in the Baltic Sea at the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia between Sweden and Finland. Colonized in the 12th century by Swedes, the islands were ceded to Russia in 1809 and became part of Finland after World War I.

Ah·waz (ä-wäzʹ) See Ahvaz.

ai¹ (ī) n. See sloth (n., sense 2a). [Portuguese, of Tupian origin.]

ai² abbr. Airborne intercept.

AI abbr. 1. Artificial insemination. 2. Computer Science. Artificial intelligence.

a.i. abbr. Latin. Ad interim (in the meantime).

aid (ād) v. intr. tr. aid-ed, aid-ing, aids. To furnish with help, support, or relief. See Synonyms at help. — n. 1. The act or result of helping; assistance. 2. a. An assistant or a helper. b. A device that assists: visual aids such as slides. c. A hearing aid. 3. An aide or an aide-de-camp. 4. A monetary payment to a feudal lord by a vassal in medieval England. [Middle English aiden, from Old French aider, from Latin adiūtāre, frequentative of adiuvāre, adiūt-, to help : ad-, to; see ad- in Appendix + iuvāre, to help.] —aid'er n.

aide (ād) n. 1. An aide-de-camp. 2. An assistant; a helper: a nurse's aide. See Synonyms at assistant. [French, from aider, to aid. See AID.]

aide-de-camp (ād'dī-kämp') n. pl. aides-de-camp. Abbr. ADC A military officer acting as secretary and confidential assistant to a superior officer of general or flag rank. [French : aide, assistant + de, of + camp, camp.]

aide-mémoire (ād'mām-wär', ěd-) n. pl. aide-mémoire or aide-mémoires. 1. A memorandum setting forth the major points of a proposed discussion or agreement, used especially in diplomatic communications. Also called position paper 2. Something, such as a mnemonic device, that serves as an aid to memory. [French : aide, aid + memoire, memory.]

AIDS (ādz) n. A severe immunological disorder caused by the retrovirus HIV, resulting in a defect in cell-mediated immune response that is manifested by increased susceptibility to opportunistic infections and to certain rare cancers, especially Kaposi's sarcoma. It is transmitted primarily by venereal routes or exposure to contaminated blood or blood products. [A(CQUIRED) I(MMUNE) D(EFFICIENCY) S(YNDROME).]

AIDS-re-lat-ed complex (ādz'rī-lā'-tīd kəm-plěks') n. ARC.

Ai-e-a (ī-ā'ə, ī-ā'ä) A city of south-central Oahu, Hawaii, a residential suburb of Honolulu. Population, 32,879.

ai-grette or ai-gret (ā-grět', ā'grět') n. 1. An ornamental tuft of upright plumes, especially the tail feathers of an egret. 2. An ornament, such as a spray of gems, resembling a tuft of plumes. [French, egret, from Old French. See EGRET.]

ai-guille (ā-gwēl') n. 1. A sharp, pointed mountain peak. 2. A needle-shaped drill for boring holes in rock or masonry. [French, needle, from Old French. See AGLET.]

ai-guil-lette (ā'gwə-lět') n. An ornamental cord worn on the shoulder of a military uniform. [French. See AGLET.]

Ai-ken (ā'kən), Conrad Potter. 1889-1973. American writer noted primarily for his poetry. He won a 1930 Pulitzer Prize for Selected Poems.

ai-ki-do (ī'kē-dō', ī-kē'dō) n. Sports. A Japanese art of self-defense that employs holds and locks and that uses the principles of nonresistance in order to debilitate the strength of the opponent. [Japanese aikidō : ai, mutual + ki, spirit + dō, art.]

ail (āl) v. ailed, ail-ing, ails. — v. intr. To feel ill or have pain. — v. tr. To cause physical or mental pain or uneasiness to; trouble. See Synonyms at trouble. [Middle English eilen, from Old English eglian, from egle, troublesome.]

ai-lan-thus (ā-lăn'thəs) n. Any of several deciduous, Asian trees of the genus Ailanthus, especially the tree-of-heaven. [New Latin Ailanthus, genus name, alteration (influenced by Greek anthos, flower), of Ambonese ai lanto.]

ai-le-ron (ā'lə-rön') n. Either of two movable flaps on the wings of an airplane that can be used to control the plane's rolling and banking movements. [French, diminutive of aile, wing, from Old French, from Latin āla.]

Ai-ley (ā'lē, ī'lē), Alvin, Jr. 1931-1989. American choreographer whose works combine the styles of modern dance, ballet, jazz, and African ethnic dance.

ail·ment (āl'mənt) n. A physical or mental disorder, especially a mild illness.

ai·lu·ro·phile (ī-lōor'ə-fil', ā-lōor'-) n. One who loves cats. [Greek ailouros, cat + -PHILE.]

ai·lu·ro·phobe (ī-lōor'ə-fōb', ā-lōor'-) n. One who hates or fears cats.

[Greek ailouros, cat + -PHOBE.] — ai·lu'ro·pho'bi·a n.

aim (ām) v. aimed, aim·ing, aims. — v. tr. To direct (a weapon or remark, for example) toward an intended goal or mark. — v. intr. 1. To direct a weapon: a gunner aiming carefully. 2. To determine a course: aim for a better education. 3. To propose to do something; intend. — n. 1. a. The act of aiming. b. Skill at hitting a target: The shooter's aim was perfect. 2. a. The line of fire of an aimed weapon. b. The degree of accuracy of a weapon. 3. A purpose or intention toward which one's efforts are directed. 4. Obsolete. A target; a mark. 5. Obsolete. A conjecture; a guess. [Middle English aimen, from Old French esmer, to estimate (from Latin aestimāre), and from Old French aesmer (from Vulgar Latin ad estimāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin aestimāre, to estimate).]

SYNONYMS: aim, direct, level, point, train. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to turn something in the direction of an intended goal or target”: aimed the camera at the guests; directing her eyes on the book; leveled criticism at the administration; pointing a finger at the suspect; trained the gun on the intruder. See also Synonyms at intention aim·less (ām'lis) adj. Devoid of direction or purpose. — aim'less·ly adv.

— aim'less·ness n.

ain (ān) adj. Scots. Own.

ain't (ānt) Non-Standard. 1. Am not. 2. Used also as a contraction for are not, is not, has not, and have not.

USAGE NOTE: The use of ain't as a contraction of am not, are not, is not, has not, and have not has a long history, but ain't has come to be regarded as a mark of illiteracy and has by now acquired such a stigma that it is beyond any possibility of rehabilitation. However, it is used by educated speakers, for example, when they want to strike a jocular or demotic note, as in fixed expressions like Say it ain't so or You ain't just whistling Dixie. • The stigmatization of ain't leaves us with no happy alternative for use in first-person questions. The widely used aren't I?, though illogical, was found acceptable for use in speech by a majority of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey, but in writing there is no acceptable substitute for the admittedly stilted am I not?

Ain·tab (īn-tāb') See Gaziantep.

Ai-nu (ī'nōō) n. pl. Ainu or Ai-nus. 1. A member of an indigenous people of Japan, now inhabiting parts of Hokkaido, Sakhalin, and the Kuril Islands. 2. The language of the Ainu.

ai•o•li (ī-ō'lē, ā-ō' -) n. A rich sauce of crushed garlic, egg yolks, lemon juice, and olive oil used especially to garnish fish and vegetables. [Provençal : ai, garlic (from Latin allium) + oli, oil (from Latin oleum); see OIL.]

air (âr) n. 1. a. A colorless, odorless, tasteless, gaseous mixture, mainly nitrogen (approximately 78 percent) and oxygen (approximately 21 percent) with lesser amounts of argon, carbon dioxide, hydrogen, neon, helium, and other gases.

b. This mixture with varying amounts of moisture and particulate matter, enveloping Earth; the atmosphere. c. The atmosphere in an enclosure. 2. a. The sky; the firmament. b. A giant void; nothingness: The money vanished into thin air.

3. An atmospheric movement; a breeze or wind. 4. Aircraft: send troops to Europe by air. 5. a. Public utterance; vent: gave air to their grievances. b. The electronic broadcast media: "often ridiculed... extremist groups on air" (Christian Science Monitor). 6. A peculiar or characteristic impression; an aura.

7. Personal bearing, appearance, or manner; mien. 8. airs. An affected, often haughty pose; affectation. See Synonyms at affectation. 9. Music. A melody or tune, especially: a. The soprano or treble part in a harmonized composition.

b. A solo with or without accompaniment. 10. Air conditioning. 11. Archaic. Breath. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: air movements; air safety. — v. aired, air-ing, airs. — v. tr. 1. To expose so that air can dry, cool, or freshen; ventilate. 2. To give vent to publicly: airing my pet peeves. See Synonyms at vent¹. 3. To broadcast on television or radio: "The ad was submitted to CBS... which accepted and aired it" (New York). — v. intr. To be broadcast on television or radio: "tidbits that will air on tonight's 6 o'clock news" (Terry Ann Knopf). — idioms. in the air. Abroad; prevalent: Excitement was in the air. up in the air. Not yet decided; uncertain. [Partly from Middle English air, gas, atmosphere (from Old French, from Latin āēr, from Greek aēr); see wer¹ in Appendix, and partly from French air, nature, quality, place of origin (from Latin ager, place, field; see agriculture, and Latin ārea, open space, threshing floor); see AREA. N., sense 9, from French air, tune from Italian aria. See ARIA.]

air bag (âr băg) n. 1. An automotive passive restraint consisting of a bag that is designed to inflate upon collision and prevent passengers from pitching forward. 2. A large inflatable bag made of strong rubber, used by rescue workers to lift a vehicle or heavy machinery or debris that has fallen upon or otherwise trapped a victim.

air ball (âr bôl) n. Basketball. A shot that misses the backboard, rim, and net.

air base (âr bās) n. A base for military aircraft.

air bladder (âˆr blăd'ər) n. Biology. 1. An air-filled structure in many fishes that functions to maintain buoyancy or, in some species, to aid in respiration.

Also called swim bladder 2. See float (n., sense 2).

air-boat (âˆr'bôt') n. Nautical. See swamp boat.

air-borne (âˆr'bôrn', -bôrn') adj. Abbr. abn 1. Carried by or through the air: airborne pollen. 2. Transported in aircraft: airborne troops. 3. In flight; flying: The plane is airborne.

air brake (âˆr brāk) n. 1. A brake, especially on a motor vehicle, that is operated by compressed air. 2. A surface, such as an aileron, that can be projected into the airstream in order to decrease the air speed of an airplane by increasing drag; a spoiler.

air-brush (âˆr'brüş') n. An atomizer using compressed air to spray a liquid, such as paint, on a surface. — v. tr. air-brushed, air-brush-ing, air-brush-es. To spray with an airbrush.

air-burst (âˆr'bûrst') n. Explosion of a bomb or shell in the atmosphere.

air chamber (âˆr chām'bər) n. 1. An enclosure filled with air for a special purpose. 2. A chamber, especially in a hydraulic system, in which air elastically compresses and expands to regulate the flow of a fluid.

air-con-dition (âˆr'kən-dīsh'ən) v. tr. air-con-ditioned, air-con-dition-ing, air-con-ditions. To provide with or ventilate by air conditioning.

air conditioner (âˆr kən-dīsh'ə-nər) n. An apparatus for controlling, especially lowering, the temperature and humidity of an enclosed space.

air conditioning (âˆr kən-dīsh'ə-nīng) n. Abbr. a.c., a/c 1. The state of temperature and humidity produced by an air conditioner. 2. A system of air conditioners.

air-cool (âˆr'kool') v. tr. air-cooled, air-cool-ing, air-cools. Abbr. ac. 1. To cool (an engine, for example) by a flow of air. 2. To air-condition.

air cover (âˆr küv'ər) n. 1. Protective use of military aircraft during ground operations. 2. The aircraft used to protect and otherwise support ground troops.

air-craft (âˆr'krăft') n. pl. aircraft. A machine or device, such as an airplane, a helicopter, a glider, or a dirigible, that is capable of atmospheric flight.

aircraft carrier (âˆr'krăft' kăr'ē-ər) n. A large naval vessel designed as a mobile air base, having a long flat deck on which aircraft can take off and land at sea.

air-crew (âˆr'krō) n. The crew operating an aircraft.

air cushion (âˆr kōosh'ən) n. 1. Trapped air that supports a vehicle a short distance above the surface of land or water. 2. A device that uses trapped air to absorb the shock of motion, especially in vehicles. Also called air spring —air-cush-ion (âˆr'kōosh'ən), air-cush-ioned (-ənd) adj.

air-cush-ion vehicle (â€™kõõsh'ən vĕ'ĩ-kəl) n. A usually propeller-driven vehicle designed for traveling over land or water on a supportive cushion of slowly moving, low-pressure air. Also called ground-effect machine, hovercraft.

air dam (â€™dăm) n. A strip of metal or plastic, running the width of a car and fitted beneath the front bumper, intended to enhance aerodynamics by blocking the flow of turbulent air under the vehicle.

air-date (â€™dât') n. The date on which a program is scheduled to be broadcast.

air door (â€™dôr) n. A strong, temperature-controlled current of air, usually directed upward, that is used instead of a door.

air-drome (â€™drôm') n. An airport.

air-drop (â€™dröp') n. A delivery, as of supplies or troops, by parachute from aircraft. — v. tr. intr. air-dropped, air-drop-ping, air-drops. To drop or be dropped from an aircraft.

air-dry (â€™drī') v. tr. air-dried, air-dry-ing, air-dries. To dry by exposure to the air. — adj. Sufficiently dry so that further exposure to air does not yield more moisture to be evaporated.

Aire-dale (â€™dāl') n. A large terrier of a breed having long legs and a wiry tan coat marked with black. [After Airedale, a valley of north-central England.]

air-fare (â€™fâr') n. Fare for travel by aircraft.

air-field (â€™fĕld') n. 1. The area of fields and runways where aircraft can take off and land. 2. An airport.

air-flow (â€™flō') n. 1. A flow of air. 2. The air currents caused by the motion of an object such as an airplane or automobile.

air-foil (â€™foil') n. A part or surface, such as a wing, propeller blade, or rudder, whose shape and orientation control stability, direction, lift, thrust, or propulsion.

air force (â€™fôrs) n. Abbr. AF 1. The aviation branch of a country's armed forces, such as the U.S. Air Force. 2. A unit of the U.S. Air Force larger than a division and smaller than a command.

air-frame (â€™frām') n. The structure of an aircraft, such as an airplane, a helicopter, or a rocket, exclusive of its power plant.

air-freight (â€™frāt') n. 1. A system of transporting freight by air. 2. The amount charged for transporting freight by air. — air/freight' v.

air gas (â€™gās) n. See producer gas.

air-glow (â€™glō') n. A low- or middle-latitude, more or less steady, faint photochemical luminescence in the upper atmosphere.

air gun (â€™gŭn) n. A gun discharged by compressed air.

air-head¹ (â€™hĕd') n. Slang. A silly, rather unintelligent person.

air-head² (â€™hĕd') n. An area of hostile or enemy-controlled territory secured by paratroops. [AIR + (BEACH)HEAD.]

air hole (âˆr hōl) n. 1. A hole or opening through which gas or air may pass.

2. An opening in the frozen surface of a body of water. 3. See air pocket.

air hunger (âˆr hŭng'gər) n. See dyspnea.

air-ing (âˆr'ɪŋ) n. 1. Exposure to air for freshening or drying. 2. Exposure to open air for exercise or health-promoting activity. 3. Exposure to public attention. 4. A radio or television broadcast.

air lane (âˆr lān) n. A regular route of travel for aircraft. Also called airway air layering (âˆr lā'ər-ɪŋ) n. A method of propagating plants by wounding a stem or branch, applying a hormone to the wound, wrapping the stem or branch with damp sphagnum moss and polyethylene plastic to encourage root formation, and finally removing the rooted stem or branch as an independent plant.

air-less (âˆr'lis) adj. 1. Having no air. 2. Lacking fresh air; stuffy. 3. Lacking movement of air; still. —air/less-ness n.

air letter (âˆr lèt'ər) n. See aerogram.

air-lift (âˆr'lift') n. 1. A system of transporting troops, civilian passengers, or supplies by air, as when surface routes are blocked. 2. A flight transporting troops, civilian passengers, or supplies, as when surface routes are blocked. — v. air-lift-ed, air-lift-ing, air-lifts. — v. tr. To transport by air, as when ground routes are blocked. — v. intr. To transport troops, civilian passengers, or supplies by air.

air-line (âˆr'līn') n. 1. A system for scheduled air transport of passengers and freight. 2. A business providing a system of scheduled air transport. In this sense, also called airway air-lin-er (âˆr'lī'nər) n. An airplane operated by an airline and adapted for carrying passengers.

air lock (âˆr lõk) n. 1. An airtight chamber, usually located between two regions of unequal pressure, in which air pressure can be regulated. 2. A bubble or pocket of air or vapor, as in a pipe, that stops the normal flow of fluid through the conducting part.

air-mail (âˆr'māl') v. tr. air-mailed, air-mail-ing, air-mails. Abbr. A.M. To send (a letter, for example) by air. — adj. Of, relating to, or for use with air mail. — n. also air mail also airmail 1. The system of conveying mail by aircraft. 2. Mail conveyed or to be conveyed by aircraft.

air-man (âˆr'mən) n. Abbr. Amn 1. a. An enlisted rank in the U.S. Air Force that is above airman basic and below airman first class. b. A person who holds this rank. 2. An enlisted person in the U.S. Navy working with aircraft. 3. An aviator.

airman basic (âˆr'mən bā'sɪk) n. Abbr. AB 1. An enlisted rank in the U.S. Air Force that is below airman and is used for recruits. 2. A person who holds this rank.

- airman first class (âr'mən fîrst klās) n. Abbr. A1C 1. An enlisted rank in the U.S. Air Force that is above airman and below sergeant. 2. A person who holds this rank.
- air mass (âr mäs) n. A large body of air with only small horizontal variations of temperature, pressure, and moisture.
- air mattress (âr măt'rîs) n. An inflatable airtight sack on which to sleep or float in water.
- Air Medal (âr mēd'l) n. A decoration awarded by the U.S. Army, Air Force, or Navy for meritorious airborne conduct.
- air mile (âr mīl) n. A unit of distance in air travel, equal to one international nautical mile (6,076.115 feet).
- air·mo·bile also air-mo-bile (âr'mō'bəl, -bēl, -bīl) adj. Capable of being transported and deployed, usually by helicopter, to a combat zone or from one site to another within a theater of operations: an airmobile infantry regiment.
- air·park (âr'pärk') n. A small airport typically located near a business area or an industrial park.
- air piracy (âr pī'rə-sē) n. Any seizure or exercise of control, by force or violence or by threat of force or violence and with wrongful intent, of an aircraft in flight in air commerce. —air pirate n.
- air·plane (âr'plān') n. Abbr. AP Any of various winged vehicles capable of flight, generally heavier than air and driven by jet engines or propellers.
- air plant (âr plānt) n. See epiphyte.
- air·play (âr'plā') n. The broadcasting of a phonograph record, tape, or compact disc on the air by a radio station.
- air pocket (âr pök'it) n. A downward air current that causes an aircraft to lose altitude abruptly. Also called air hole
- air police (âr pə-lēs') n. Abbr. AP The military police branch of an air force.
- air·port (âr'pôrt', -pôrt') n. 1. A tract of leveled land where aircraft can take off and land, usually equipped with hard-surfaced landing strips, a control tower, hangars, aircraft maintenance and refueling facilities, and accommodations for passengers and cargo. 2. Such an installation in which the landing area is on water.
- air potato or air-po-ta-to (âr'pə-tā'tō) n. A tropical Old World yam (Dioscorea bulbifera) having axillary potatolike tubers, some of which are edible after cooking. It is a weed in the tropics and Florida. Also called aerial yam, potato yam.
- air·pow·er or air power (âr'pou'ər) n. The tactical and strategic strength of a country's air force.
- air pump (âr pŭmp) n. Equipment for compressing, removing, or forcing a flow of air.

- air raid (âr rād) n. An attack by military aircraft, especially when armed with bombs and rockets.
- air rifle (âr rī'fəl) n. A low-powered rifle, such as a BB gun, that uses manually compressed air to fire small pellets.
- air rights (âr rīts) pl.n. The rights to develop further the heretofore unused space above a building or other structure, such as a turnpike.
- air sac (âr sāk) n. 1. An air-filled space in the body of a bird that forms a connection between the lungs and bone cavities and aids in breathing and temperature regulation. 2. See alveolus (n., sense 3). 3. A saclike, thin-walled enlargement in the trachea of an insect.
- air-screw (âr'skrōō') n. Chiefly British. The propeller of an airplane.
- air shed (âr shĕd) n. 1. The air supply of a given region. 2. The geographic region that shares an air supply. [AIR + (WATER)SHED.]
- air-ship (âr'shīp') n. A self-propelled lighter-than-air craft with directional control surfaces. Also called dirigible
- air shower (âr shou'ər) n. 1. A cleansing process during which jets of air blow tiny pieces of lint and dust off the clothing of employees who work in clean rooms. 2. The equipment for this process.
- air-sick (âr'sīk') adj. Suffering from airsickness.
- air-sick-ness (âr'sīk'nīs) n. Nausea, vomiting, or dizziness induced by the motion that occurs during air flight.
- air-side (âr'sīd') n. The part of an airport directly involved in the arrival and departure of aircraft. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: airside operations; airside security devices.
- air sock (âr sōk) n. See windsock.
- air-space or air space (âr'spās') n. 1. The portion of the atmosphere above a particular land area, especially that of a political subdivision such as a nation. 2. a. The space occupied by an aircraft. b. A designated sector of space, such as that in the vicinity of an airport. 3. a. Chiefly British. Space available for broadcasting within a particular frequency: "Mobile radio has to compete for air space with other services such as broadcast radio, television, and even military services" (Financial Times). b. See airtime (n., sense 1).
- air speed (âr spĕd) n. Abbr. AS, a/s The speed, especially of an aircraft, relative to the air.
- air splint (âr splīnt) n. An inflatable cylinder used to immobilize fractured or injured limbs to promote healing.
- air spring (âr sprīng) n. See air cushion (n., sense 2).
- air strike (âr strīk) n. An air attack on a ground or naval target.
- air-strip (âr'strīp') n. See landing strip.
- airt (ârt) n. Scots. A cardinal point on the compass; a direction. [Middle English art, from Scottish Gaelic aird, from Old Irish aird, point of the compass.]

air taxi (âr tăk'sē) n. A small aircraft that makes short local flights to areas not serviced by regular airlines.

air terrorism (âr tēr'ə-rīz'əm) n. The systematic use of air piracy, including acts of skyjacking, hostage-taking, bombing, and sabotage, as a means of coercion or of gaining international attention. Also called air terror air-tight (âr'tīt') adj. 1. Abbr. at. Impermeable by air. 2. Having no weak points; sound: an airtight excuse.

air-time (âr'tīm') n. 1. The time that a radio or television station is broadcasting. Also called airspace 2. The time at which a radio or television program is broadcast.

air-to-air (âr'tə-âr') adj. Operating between, launched from, or involving rockets or aircraft in flight: air-to-air missiles; air-to-air communications.

air-to-surface (âr'tə-sûr'fīs) adj. Operating from or designed to be fired from aircraft at targets on the ground: air-to-surface missiles.

air vesicle (âr vēs'ī-kəl) n. Biology. See float (n., sense 2).

air walk (âr wôk) n. A passageway enclosed with glass or plastic that connects one building with another at a level well above ground.

air-wave (âr'wāv') n. The medium used for the transmission of radio and television signals. Often used in the plural.

air-way (âr'wā') n. 1. a. A passageway or shaft in which air circulates, as in ventilating a mine. b. A covered, self-propelled passageway used for airline passenger and crew embarkation and debarkation at airport terminal gates. 2. a. See air lane. b. See airline (n., sense 2).

air-wor-thy (âr'wûr'thē) adj. air-wor-thi-er, air-wor-thi-est. Being in fit condition to fly: an airworthy helicopter; airworthy avionics. —air'-wor'thi-ness n.

air-y (âr'ē) adj. air-i-er, air-i-est. 1. Of, relating to, or having the constitution of air. 2. High in the air; lofty. 3. Open to the air: airy chambers. 4. Performed in the air; aerial. 5. Immaterial; illusory; unreal: an airy apparition. 6. Speculative, visionary, and often impractical: airy theories about socioeconomic improvement. 7. Being as light as air; delicate. 8. Displaying lofty nonchalance: dismissed us with an airy wave of the hand. 9. Light-hearted; gay: an airy mood. —air'i-ly adv. —air'i-ness n.

SYNONYMS: airy, diaphanous, ethereal, filmy, gauzy, gossamer, sheer, transparent, vaporous. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “so light and insubstantial as to resemble air or a thin film”: an airy organdy blouse; a hat with a diaphanous veil; ethereal mist; the filmy wings of a moth; gauzy clouds of dandelion down; gossamer cobwebs; sheer silk stockings; transparent chiffon; vaporous muslin.

air-y-fair-y (âr'ē-fâr'ē) Chiefly British. n. pl. air-y-fair-ies. An intellectual: "They'd wanted him for Ambassador in Paris but he'd turned it down; he'd no patience with the airy-fairies" (John le Carré). — adj. So speculative, visionary, and flimsy as to lack all substance, purpose, and practicality: "The issue... is largely obscured by an increasingly unreal debate about airy-fairy constitutional modalities" (Manchester Guardian Weekly).

A-i-sha also A-ye-sha (ä'ē-shä'), 611-678. The favorite wife of Mohammed. She led an unsuccessful revolt against Mohammed's successor, Ali.

aisle (īl) n. 1. A part of a church divided laterally from the nave by a row of pillars or columns. 2. A passageway between rows of seats, as in an auditorium or an airplane. 3. A passageway for inside traffic, as in a department store, warehouse, or supermarket. [Alteration (influenced by ISLE, and more recently by French aile, wing from Latin āla), of Middle English ele, from Old French, wing of a building, from Latin āla.]

Aisne (ān) A river of northern France rising in the Argonne Forest and flowing about 266 km (165 mi) northwest and west to the Oise River. Four major World War I battles were fought along its banks, including the final defeat of the Germans by French and American troops in September-October 1918.

ait (āt) n. Chiefly British. A small island. [Middle English eit, from Old English īgeth, diminutive of īg, īeg, island. See ISLAND.]

aitch (āch) n. The letter h. [French hache.]

aitch-bone (äch'bōn') n. 1. The rump bone, especially of cattle. 2. The cut of beef containing the rump bone. [Middle English hach-boon, from the phrase an hach-boon*, an aitchbone, alteration of a nachebon* : nache, buttock (from Old French, from Late Latin naticas, accusative pl. of natica, buttock, from Latin natis) + bōn, bone (from Old English bān).]

Aix-en-Provence (āk'sän-prō-vāns', ěk'-) A city of southeast France north of Marseilles. Founded in 123 B.C. by the Romans as a military colony near the site of mineral springs, the city has long been a popular spa and an important cultural center. Population, 121,327.

Aix-la-Chapelle (āks'lā-shā-pěl', ěks'-) See Aachen.

A-jac-cio (ä-yä'chō) A city of western Corsica, France, on the Gulf of Ajaccio, an inlet of the Mediterranean Sea. Ajaccio was the birthplace of Napoleon Bonaparte. Population, 54,089.

A-jan-ta (ə-jün'tə) A village of west-central India southwest of Amravati. Nearby caves dating from c. 200 B.C. to A.D. 650 contain remarkable examples of Buddhist art.

a-jar (ə-jär') adv. & adj. Partially opened: left the door ajar. [Middle English on char : on, in; see ON + char, turn from Old English cierr.]

A-jax¹ (ä'jäks') n. Greek Mythology. 1. The son of Telamon of Salamis and a warrior of great stature and prowess who fought against Troy. 2. The son of Ileos of Locris and a warrior of small stature and arrogant character who fought against Troy.

A-jax² (ā'jāks') A town of southeast Ontario, Canada, on Lake Erie northeast of Toronto. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 25,475.

Ajax Mountain (ā'jāks' moun'tən) A peak, 3,324.5 m (10,900 ft) high, in the Bitterroot Range of the Rocky Mountains on the Montana-Idaho border.

Aj-man (āj-män') A sheikdom of eastern Arabia, part of the federation of United Arab Emirates on the Persian Gulf. Population, 3,725.

Aj-mer (üj-mîr') A city of northwest India southwest of Delhi. Founded c. A.D. 145, it is a trade and manufacturing center. Population, 375,593.

A-jodh-ya (ə-yōd'yə) A village of northern India on the Ghaghara River near Faizabad. Long associated with Hindu legend, it is a pilgrimage center and one of the seven sites sacred to Hindus.

AK abbr. Alaska.

a.k.a. or aka abbr. Also known as.

A-kan (ä'kän') n. pl. Akan or A-kans. 1. A South Central Niger-Congo language spoken in parts of Ghana and the Ivory Coast whose two main varieties are Fante and Twi, including Ashanti. 2. A member of a people of Ghana and the Ivory Coast, including the Fante and the Twi. —A'kan' adj.

a-kar-y-o-cyte (ā-kär'ē-ō-sīt') n. A cell having no nucleus.

A-ka-shi (ä-kä'shē) A city of southwest Honshu, Japan, west of Kobe on Akashi Strait, the eastern end of the Inland Sea. Akashi is a manufacturing center. Population, 263,365.

Ak-bar (äk'bär), Known as “the Great.” 1542-1605. Mogul emperor of India (1556-1605) who conquered most of northern India and exercised religious tolerance.

AKC abbr. American Kennel Club.

ak-ee also ac-kee (äk'ē, ə-kē') n. 1. A tropical western African evergreen tree (Blighia sapida) having leathery red and yellow fruits. It is naturalized and cultivated in the tropics and in Florida. 2. The edible, fleshy, ripe aril of this tree, especially popular as a food in Jamaica. The seeds and unripe arils are poisonous. [Possibly Kru akee, or Akan (Twi) arjkyē, wild cashew..]

Ake-ley (ā'klē), Carl Ethan. 1864-1926. American naturalist, taxidermist, and sculptor who improved taxidermic techniques and invented a motion-picture camera for naturalists.

à Kem-pis (ə kēm'pīs, ä), Thomas. See Thomas à Kempis.

a-kene (ā-kēn') n. Variant of achene.

A-khe-na-ton or A-khe-na-ten (ä'kə-nät'n, äk-nät'n) also Ikh-na-ton (ik-nät'n), Originally A-men-ho-tep IV (ä'mən-hō'tēp, äm'ən-) Died c. 1358 B.C. King of Egypt (1375?-1358?) who rejected the old gods and initiated a new form of sun worship.

A·ki·ba ben Jo·seph (ä-kē'vä bën jō'zəf, -səf, ə-kē'və), A.D. 50?-132. Jewish religious leader whose scholarship, particularly a reinterpretation of the Halakah, profoundly influenced Judaism.

A·ki·hi·to (ä'kē-hē'tō), Born 1933. Emperor of Japan (since 1989). He succeeded his father, Hirohito.

a·kim·bo (ə-kīm'bō) adv. In or into a position in which the hands are on the hips and the elbows are bowed outward: children standing akimbo by the fence. — adj. 1. Placed in such a way as to have the hands on the hips and the elbows bowed outward: children standing with arms akimbo. 2. Being in a bent, bowed, or arched position: "There he remained, dead to the world, limbs akimbo, until we left" (Alex Shoumatoff). "[She] often skips into a veritable ballet of akimbo limbs" (Jack Kroll). [Middle English in kenebowe.]

a·kin (ə-kīn') adj. 1. Of the same kin; related by blood. 2. Having a similar quality or character; analogous. 3. Linguistics. Sharing a common origin or ancestral forms.

a·ki·ne·sia (ä'kī-nē'zhə, -kī-) n. Loss of normal motor function, resulting in impaired muscle movement. [Greek akinēsia : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + -kinēsia, motion (from kinēsis); see -KINESIS.] — a'ki·net'ic (-nēt'ik) adj.

A·kins (ä'kīnz), Zoë. 1886-1958. American playwright. She won a 1935 Pulitzer Prize for The Old Maid.

A·ki·ta (ä-kē'tə, ä'kī-tä') A city of northwest Honshu, Japan, on the Sea of Japan. It is a major port. Population, 296,381.

Ak·kad also Ac·cad (äk'äd', ä'käd') 1. An ancient region of Mesopotamia occupying the northern part of Babylonia. It reached the height of its power in the third millennium B.C. 2. Also A·ga·de (ə-gä'də). An ancient city of Mesopotamia and capital of the Akkadian empire.

Ak·ka·di·an (ə-kā'dē-ən) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of ancient Akkad. 2. The Semitic language of Mesopotamia. In this sense, also called Assyrian — Ak·ka'di·an adj.

Ak·ko (ä-kō', ä'kō) See Acre.

A·ko·la (ə-kō'lə) A town of west-central India west-southwest of Amravati. It is a market center in a cotton-growing region. Population, 225,412.

Ak·ron (äk'rən) A city of northeast Ohio south-southeast of Cleveland. Its first rubber factory was established in 1869 by B.F. Goodrich (1841-1888). In the early 20th century Akron was known as "the rubber capital of the world." Population, 223,019.

Ak·sum or Ax·um (äk'sōm') A town of northern Ethiopia. From the first to the eighth century A.D. it was the capital of an empire that controlled much of northern Ethiopia. According to tradition, the Ark of the Covenant was brought here from Jerusalem and placed in the Church of Saint Mary of Zion, where the rulers of Ethiopia were crowned.

Ak·tyu·binsk (äk-tyōō'bĭnsk) A city of western Kazakhstan northwest of Astrakhan. Founded in 1869, it is a metallurgical center. Population, 231,000.

Al The symbol for the element aluminum.

AL abbr. 1. Alabama. 2. American League.

al. abbr. Alcohol; alcoholic.

al- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

-al¹ suff. Of, relating to, or characterized by: parental. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -ālis, adj. suff.]

-al² suff. Action; process: retrieval. [Middle English -aille, from Old French, from Latin -ālia, from neuter pl. of -ālis.]

-al³ suff. Aldehyde: citronellal. [From AL(DEHYDE).]

a·la (ā'lə) n. pl. a·lae (ā'lē). A winglike structure or part, such as the external ear, the flattened border of some stems, fruits, and seeds, or either one of the two side petals of certain flowers in the pea family. [Latin āla, wing.]

Ala. abbr. Alabama.

à la also a la (ä'lä, ä'lə, ä'lə) prep. In the style or manner of: a poem à la Ogden Nash. [French, short for à la mode de, in the manner of.]

Al·a·bam·a¹ (äl'ə-bām'ə) n. pl. Alabama or Al·a·bam·as. 1. a. A tribe of the Creek confederacy formerly inhabiting southern Alabama and now located in eastern Texas. b. A member of this tribe. 2. The Muskogean language of the Alabama.

Al·a·bam·a² (äl'ə-bām'ə) Abbr. AL, Ala. A state of the southeast United States. It was admitted as the 22nd state in 1819. Alabama was first explored by the Spanish, and the southern section was claimed by the United States as part of the Louisiana Purchase (1803). Montgomery is the capital and Birmingham the largest city. Population, 4,062,608. —Al'a·ba'mi·an (-bā'mē-ən), Al'a·bam·'an adj. & n.

Alabama River (äl'ə-bām'ə rĭv'ər) A river formed in central Alabama north of Montgomery by the confluence of the Coosa and Tallapoosa rivers and flowing about 507 km (315 mi) southwest to join the Tombigbee River north of Mobile.

al·a·bas·ter (äl'ə-bās'tər) n. 1. A dense translucent, white or tinted fine-grained gypsum. 2. A variety of hard calcite, translucent and sometimes banded. 3. Color. A pale yellowish pink to yellowish gray. [Middle English alabastr, from Old French, from Latin alabaster, from Greek alabastros, alabastos, possibly of Egyptian origin.]

à la carte also a la carte (ä'lə kärt', ä'lə) adv. & adj. With a separate price for each item on the menu. [French : à, by + la, the + carte, menu.]

a·lack (ə-läk') interj. Used to express sorrow, regret, or alarm: “Las and fearful alack—nobody can make such high claims for the people then living in Maine” (John Gould). [On the model of ALAS. See LACK.]

a·lac·ri·ty (ə-lāk'ri-tē) n. 1. Cheerful willingness; eagerness. 2. Speed or quickness; celerity. [Latin alacritās, from alacer, lively.] —a·lac·ri·tous (-təs) adj.

A·lad·din (ə-lād'n) n. In the Arabian Nights, a boy who acquires a magic lamp and a magic ring with which he can summon two jinn to fulfill any desire.

a·lae (ā'lē) n. Plural of ala.

A·lai or A·lay (ä'lī') A mountain range of southwest Kirghiz. A western branch of the Tien Shan, it extends about 322 km (200 mi) west from the Chinese border and rises to 5,880.4 m (19,280 ft).

à la king (ä'lə kīŋ', ä'l'ə) adj. Cooked in a cream sauce with green pepper or pimiento and mushrooms.

Al Al·a·mayn (äl ä'l'ə-mān', ä'l'ə-) See El Alamein.

al·a·me·da (äl'ə-mē'də, -mā'-) n. Southwestern U.S. A tree-shaded promenade or public park. See Regional note at ramada. [Spanish, from álamo, poplar, alamo.]

Al·a·me·da (äl'ə-mē'də) A city of west-central California on an island in San Francisco Bay near Oakland. It is the site of a naval air base. Population, 76,459.

Al·a·mein (äl'ə-mān'), El. See El Alamein.

al·a·mo (äl'ə-mō') n. pl. al·a·mos. Southwestern U.S. A poplar tree, especially a cottonwood. [Spanish álamo.]

Al·a·mo (äl'ə-mō') A chapel built after 1744 as part of a mission in San Antonio, Texas. During the Texas Revolution against Mexican rule some 182 people were besieged here from February 24 to March 6, 1836. All the insurgents, including Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie, were killed.

a·la·mode (ä'lə-mōd', ä'l'ə-) n. A lustrous plain-weave silk fabric for head coverings and scarfs. [From À LA MODE.]

à la mode (ä'lə mōd', ä'l'ə) adj. 1. According to the prevailing style or fashion. 2. Served with ice cream: apple pie à la mode. [French : à, in + la, the + mode, fashion.]

Al·a·mo·gor·do (äl'ə-mə-gōr'dō) A city of south-central New Mexico northeast of Las Cruces. The first atomic bomb was exploded in a test on July 16, 1945, at the White Sands Missile Range northwest of the city. Population, 24,024.

Å·land Islands (ä'lænd ī'lændz, ö'länd') See Ahvenanmaa.

al·a·nine (äl'ə-nēn') n. A crystalline amino acid, C₃H₇NO₂, that is a constituent of many proteins. [German Alanin, ultimately from Aldehyd, aldehyde. See ALDEHYDE.]

a·lar (ā'lər) or a·la·ry (ā'lə-rē) adj. 1. Resembling, containing, or composed of wings or alae. 2. Anatomy. Concerned with the armpit; axillary. [Latin ālāris, from āla, wing.]

A·lar (ä'lär) A trademark used for daminozide.

A·lar·cón (ä'lär-kôn'), Pedro Antonio de. 1833-1891. Spanish writer noted particularly for his shorter novels, such as The Three-Cornered Hat (1874).

Al-ar-ic (äl'ər-ĭk), A.D. 370?-410. King of the Visigoths (395-410) who plundered Greece in 395 and attacked Italy, conquering Rome in 410.

a-larm (ə-lärm') n. 1. A sudden fear caused by the realization of danger. 2. A warning of existing or approaching danger. 3. Abbr. alm An electrical, electronic, or mechanical device that serves to warn of danger by means of a sound or signal. 4. The sounding mechanism of an alarm clock. 5. A call to arms. — v. tr. a-larmed, a-larm-ing, a-larms. 1. To fill with alarm; frighten. 2. To give warning to. [Middle English, from Old French alarme, from Old Italian allarme, from all'arme, to arms : alla, to the (from Latin ad illa : ad-, ad- + illa, pl. of illud, the); see al⁻¹ in Appendix + arme, arms (from Latin arma); see ar- in Appendix.] —a-larm'ing-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: alarm, alert, tocsin, warning. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a signal that warns of imminent danger”: a burglar alarm; sirens signaling a bomb alert; a tocsin ringing from church steeples; factory whistles sounding a forest-fire warning. See also Synonyms at fear frighten alarm clock (ə-lärm' klök) n. A clock that can be set to sound a bell or buzzer at a desired hour.

a-larm-ist (ə-lär'mĭst) n. A person who needlessly alarms or attempts to alarm others, as by inventing or spreading false or exaggerated rumors of impending danger or catastrophe. —a-larm'ism n.

alarm reaction (ə-lärm' rē-āk'shən) n. The initial stage in the body's response to stressful stimuli, characterized by adaptive physiological changes, such as increased hormonal activity and increased heart rate.

a-la-rum (ə-lär'əm, ə-lär'-) n. A warning or an alarm, especially a call to arms: “This instrument called television can teach and illuminate, cautioned Edward R. Murrow, but only to the extent that its operators choose to use it.... an era later... Murrow's alarum remains as up to date as tonight's news” (Harry F. Waters). [Middle English alarom, variant of alarm, alarm. See ALARM.] a-la-ry (ā'lə-rē) adj. Variant of alar.

a-las (ə-läs') interj. Used to express sorrow, regret, grief, compassion, or apprehension of danger or evil. [Middle English, from Old French a las, helas, ah (I am) miserable, from Latin lassus, weary. See lē- in Appendix.]

A-las-ka (ə-läs'kə) Abbr. AK, Alas. A state of the United States in extreme northwest North America, separated from the other mainland states by British Columbia, Canada. It was admitted as the 49th state in 1959 and is the largest state of the Union. The territory was purchased from Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000 and was known as Seward's Folly (after Secretary of State William H. Seward, who negotiated the purchase) until gold was discovered in the late 1800's.

Juneau is the capital and Anchorage the largest city. There are plans to move the capital to Willow, near Anchorage. Population, 551,947. —A-las'kan adj. & n.

Alaska, Gulf of. An inlet of the Pacific Ocean between the Alaska Peninsula and Alexander Archipelago.

Alaska cedar (ə-lās'kə sē'dər) n. 1. An evergreen tree (Chamaecyparis nootkatensis) of northwest North America. Also called Nootka cypress 2. The decay-resistant wood of this tree, used for boats, construction materials, and furniture.

Alaska Highway (ə-lās'kə hī'wā') Formerly Al-can Highway (äl'kän'). A road extending 2,450.5 km (1,523 mi) northwest from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, Alaska. Originally built by U.S. troops in 1942 as a supply route for military installations, it was opened to unrestricted traffic in 1947.

Alaskan king crab (ə-lās'kən kɪŋ kräb) n. See king crab (n., sense 1).

Alaskan malamute (ə-lās'kən mäl'ə-myōōt') n. Malamute.

Alaska Peninsula (ə-lās'kə pə-nīn'syə-lə) A peninsula of south-central to southwest Alaska. It is a continuation of the Aleutian Range between the Bering Sea and the Pacific Ocean.

Alaska Range (ə-lās'kə rānj) A mountain range of south-central Alaska rising to 6,197.6 m (20,320 ft) at Mount McKinley, the highest mountain of North America.

Alaska Standard Time (ə-lās'kə stān'dərd tīm) n. Standard time in the ninth time zone west of Greenwich, England, reckoned at 135°W and used throughout Alaska except for the western Aleutian Islands. Also called Alaska Time a-las·tor also A-las·tor (ə-lās'tər, -tôr') n. An avenging deity or spirit, the masculine personification of Nemesis, frequently evoked in Greek tragedy. [Greek alastōr, from alastos, unforgettable : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + lanthanein, lath-, to escape notice.]

A-la-Tau (äl'ə-tou', ä'lə-) Several mountain ranges of the Tien Shan in central Asia, eastern Kirghiz, and southern Russia.

a-late (ā'lāt') also a-lat-ed (ā'lā'tīd) adj. Having winglike extensions or parts; winged: alate leaves. [Latin ālātus, from āla, wing.]

Al·a·va (äl'ə-və), Cape. A cape of northwest Washington State just south of Cape Flattery. It is the westernmost point of the coterminous United States.

A-lay (ä'lī') See Alai.

alb (älb) n. A long, white linen robe with tapered sleeves worn by a priest at Mass. [Middle English albe, from Old English, from Medieval Latin alba, from (vestis) alba, white (garment), feminine of Latin albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.]

Alb. abbr. Albania; Albanian.

Al-ba (äl'bə), Duke of. See Duke of. Alva.

Al·ba·ce·te (äl'bə-sā'tē, äl'vä-thē'tè) A city of southeast Spain west-southwest of Valencia. It was the site of battles between Moors and Christians in 1145 and 1146. Population, 121,909.

al·ba·core (äl'bə-kôr', -kōr') n. pl. albacore or al·ba·cores. A large marine fish (Thunnus alalunga) of warm seas, having edible flesh that is a major source of canned tuna. [Portuguese albacor, from Arabic al-bakrah : al, the + bakrah, young camel.]

Al·ba Iu·lia (äl'bə yōō'lyə) A town of west-central Romania on the Mureșul River. It is on the site of the ancient settlement Apulum, founded by the Romans in the second century A.D. Population, 59,369.

Al·ba Lon·ga (äl'bə lông'gə, lông'-) A city of ancient Latium in central Italy southeast of Rome. It was founded before 1100 B.C. and according to legend was the birthplace of Romulus and Remus.

Al·ba·ni·a (äl-bā'nē-ə, -bān'yə, ôl-) Abbr. Alb. A country of southeast Europe on the Adriatic Sea. Long a warring ground for rulers and peoples ranging from the Romans and Turks to the Serbs and Bulgarians, Albania became a republic in 1925, then a satellite of the U.S.S.R. in 1944. In 1961 the country's leaders broke with the Soviets and developed close economic ties with China, a relationship that deteriorated after the death of Mao Zedong in 1976. Tiranë is the capital and the largest city. Population, 2,841,300.

Al·ba·ni·an (äl-bā'nē-ən, -bān'yən, ôl-) adj. Abbr. Alb. Of or relating to Albania or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or an inhabitant of Albania. 2. The Indo-European language of the Albanians.

Al·ba·no (äl-bā'nō) A lake of central Italy southeast of Rome in an extinct volcanic crater.

Al·ba·ny (ôl'bə-nē) 1. A city of western California on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay northwest of Berkeley. A U.S. Department of Agriculture research laboratory is here. Population, 16,327. 2. A city of southwest Georgia on the Flint River southeast of Columbus. It is an industrial and processing center in a pecan- and peanut-growing area. Population, 78,122. 3. The capital (since 1797) of New York, in the eastern part of the state on the west bank of the Hudson River at the head of deep-water navigation. The early 17th-century Dutch settlement Fort Orange was renamed Albany when the English took control in 1664. Population, 101,082. 4. A city of northwest Oregon on the Willamette River south of Salem. It is a lumbering and metallurgical center. Population, 29,462.

Albany River (ôl'bə-nē rĭv'ər) A river rising in western Ontario, Canada, and flowing about 982 km (610 mi) east and northeast to James Bay. It was an important fur-trading route.

al·ba·tross (äl'bə-trôs', -trôs') n. pl. albatross or al·ba·tross-es. 1. Any of several large, web-footed birds constituting the family Diomedidae, chiefly of the oceans of the Southern Hemisphere, and having a hooked beak and long, narrow wings. 2. a. A constant, worrisome burden. b. An obstacle to success. [Probably alteration (influenced by Latin albus, white), of alcatras, pelican, from Portuguese, or Spanish alcatraz from Arabic al-ġaṭṭās : al, the + ġaṭṭās, white-tailed sea eagle. Sense 2, after the albatross in The Rime of the Ancient Mariner by Samuel Taylor Coleridge, which the mariner killed and had to wear around his neck as a penance.]

al·be·do (äl-bē'dō) n. pl. al·be·dos. The fraction of incident electromagnetic radiation reflected by a surface, especially of a celestial body. [Late Latin, whiteness, from Latin albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.]

Al·bee (ôl'bē, ôl'-, äł'-), Edward Franklin. Born 1928. American playwright. Best known for Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (1962), he won a Pulitzer Prize in 1967 for A Delicate Balance and in 1975 for Seascape.

al·be·it (ôl-bē'it, äł-) conj. Even though; although; notwithstanding: clear albeit cold weather. [Middle English al be it : al, even if; see ALL + be, subjunctive of ben, to be; see BE + it, it; see IT.]

Al·be·marle (äl'bə-märl') A city of central North Carolina in the Piedmont east-northeast of Charlotte. It is a trade and processing center. Population, 15,110.

Al·be·marle (äl'bə-märl'), First Duke of. See George Monck.

Albemarle Sound (äl'bə-märl' sound) A large body of shallow, generally fresh water in northeast North Carolina. It is separated from the Atlantic Ocean by a narrow barrier island.

Al·bé·niz (äl-bā'nēs', äł-), Isaac. 1860-1909. Spanish composer and pianist. A student of Franz Liszt, he composed piano works based on Spanish folk music.

Al·bers (äl'bərz, ôł'-), Josef. 1888-1976. German-born American painter whose works, such as the series Homage to the Square (1950-1959), are characterized by simple geometric patterns of various colors.

Al·bert (äl'bərt), Prince. 1819-1861. German-born consort (1840-1861) of Victoria who strongly influenced the queen and was a patron of the arts, sciences, and industry.

Al·bert I (äl'bərt), 1875-1934. King of the Belgians (1909-1934) who during World War I led the forces that reconquered Belgium (1918).

Albert, Lake. Also Mo·bu·to Lake (mō-bōō'tō) or Albert Nyan·za (nī-än'zə, nyän'-). A shallow lake of east-central Africa in the Great Rift Valley on the border between Uganda and Zaire. It was discovered in 1864 by Sir Samuel Baker and named for Victoria's consort.

Al·ber·ta (äl-bûr'tə) Abbr. AB, Alta. A province of western Canada between British Columbia and Saskatchewan. It joined the confederation in 1905. Wheat and cattle farming were the basis of the province's economy until the discovery of oil and natural gas in the early 1960's. Edmonton is the capital and the largest city. Population, 2,237,724. —Al·ber'tan adj. & n.

Albert Lea (äl'bərt lē) A city of southern Minnesota near the Iowa border south of Minneapolis. It is a trade center in a farming area. Population, 18,310.

Albert Nile (äl'bərt nīl) Part of the upper Nile River in northwest Uganda.

Albert Nyan·za (äl'bərt nī-än'zə, nyän'-) See Lake Albert.

Al·ber·tus Mag·nus (äl-bûr'təs mäg'nəs), Saint Originally Albert, Count von Bollstadt. 1206?-1280. German religious philosopher noted as the teacher of Thomas Aquinas.

al·bes·cent (äl-bēs'ənt) adj. Becoming white or moderately white; whitish. [Latin albescēns, albescēt- present participle of albescere, to become white, from albus, white. See albo- in Appendix.]

Al·bi·gen·ses (äl'bə-jěn'sēz') pl.n. The members of a Catharist religious sect of southern France in the 12th and 13th centuries, exterminated for heresy during the Inquisition. [Medieval Latin, pl. of Albigēnsis, inhabitant of Albiga, Albi, a town of southern France where the sect was dominant.] —Al'bi·gen'sian (-shən, -sē-ən) adj. —Al'bi·gen'sian·ism n.

al·bi·nism (äl'bə-nīz'əm) n. 1. Congenital absence of normal pigmentation or coloration in a person, an animal, or a plant. 2. The condition of being an albino. [French albinisme, from German Albinismus, from Albino, albino, from Portuguese. See ALBINO.] —al'bi·nis'tic adj.

al·bi·no (äl-bī'nō) n. pl. al·bi·nos. 1. A person or an animal lacking normal pigmentation, with the result being that the skin and hair are abnormally white or milky and the eyes have a pink or blue iris and a deep-red pupil. 2. A plant that lacks chlorophyll. [Portuguese, from albo, white, from Latin albus. See albo- in Appendix.]

Al·bi·nus (äl-bī'nəs) See Alcuin.

Al·bi·on (äl'bē-ən) England or Great Britain. Often used poetically.

al·bite (äl'bīt) n. A widely distributed white feldspar, $\text{NaAlSi}_3\text{O}_8$, that is one of the common rock-forming plagioclase group. [Latin albus, white; see albo- in Appendix + *-ITE*¹.] —al·bit'ic (-bīt'ik), al·bit'i·cal (-i-kəl) adj.

Al·boin (äl'boin, -bō-ĭn), Died 572. King of the Lombards (565?-572) who led the Germanic invasion of present-day Italy, where he established the Lombard kingdom.

Ål·borg also Aal·borg (ôl'bôrg') A city of northern Denmark north-northeast of Århus. Chartered in 1342, it is a major port. Population, 154,840.

Al·bright (ôl'brīt, ôl'-), Horace Marden. 1890-1987. American conservationist and cofounder of the National Park Service.

Al·bright (ôl'brīt, ôl'-), Ivan Le Lorraine. Born 1897. American painter noted for his detailed paintings of macabre subjects.

Al·bright (ôl'brīt, ôl'-), William Foxwell. 1891-1971. American archaeologist and educator known for his excavations of biblical sites.

al·bum (äl'bəm) n. 1. A book with blank pages for the insertion and preservation of collections, as of stamps, photographs, or autographs. 2. a. A set of phonograph records stored together in jackets under one binding. b. The holder for such records. c. One or more 12-inch long-playing records in a slipcase. d. A phonograph record. e. A recording of different musical pieces. 3. A printed collection of musical compositions, pictures, or literary selections. 4. A tall, handsomely printed book, popular especially in the 19th century, often having profuse illustrations and short, sentimental texts. [Latin, blank tablet, from neuter of albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.]

al·bu·men (äl-byō'mən) n. 1. The white of an egg, which consists mainly of albumin dissolved in water. 2. See albumin. [Latin albūmen, from albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.]

al·bu·min (äl-byō'mĭn) n. A class of simple, water-soluble proteins that can be coagulated by heat and are found in egg white, blood serum, milk, and many other animal and plant juices and tissues. Also called albumen [ALBUM(EN) + -IN.] —al·bu'mi·nous adj.

al·bu·mi·noid (äl-byō'mə-noid') n. See scleroprotein. — adj. also al·bu·mi·noi·dal (-byō'mə-noid'l) Composed of or resembling albumin.

al·bu·mi·nu·ri·a (äl-byō'mə-nōōr'ē-ə, -nyōōr-) n. The presence of albumin in the urine, sometimes indicating kidney disease. —al·bu'mi·nu'ric (-nōōr'ĭk, -nyōōr'-) adj.

al·bu·mose (äl'byə-mōs', -mōz') n. A class of substances derived from albumins and formed by the enzymatic breakdown of proteins during digestion.

[French : albumine, albumin; see ALBUMIN + -ose, -ose; see *-OSE*².]

Al·bu·quer·que (äl'bə-kūr'kē) A city of central New Mexico on the upper Rio Grande southwest of Santa Fe. Founded in 1706, it is a noted health resort. Population, 384,736.

Al·bu·quer·que (äl'bə-kūr'kē, äl'bə-kūr'-), Affonso de. Known as "Affonso the Great." 1453-1515. Portuguese colonial administrator considered the founder of the Portuguese empire in the East.

alc. abbr. Alcohol; alcoholic.

Al·cae·us (äl-sē'əs), fl. 611?-580 B.C. Greek poet who reputedly invented Alcaic verse.

Al·ca·ic (äl-kā'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or being a verse form used in Greek and Latin poetry, consisting of strophes having four tetrametric lines. — n. Verse composed in strophes of four tetrametric lines. [Late Latin Alcaicus, of Alcaeus, from Greek Alkaikos, from Alkaios, Alcaeus.]

al·cai·de also al·cay·de (äl-kī'dē) n. The commander or governor of a fortress in Spain or Portugal. [Spanish, from Arabic al-qā'id, the commander : al, the + qā'id, commander (from qāda, to command).]

Al·ca·lá de He·na·res (äl'kə-lä' dā hē-när'əs, äl'kä-lä' thĕ ě-nä'rĕs) A town of central Spain east-northeast of Madrid. Cervantes and Catherine of Aragon were born here. Population, 146,994.

al·cal·de (äl-käl'dē, äl-) n. The mayor or chief judicial official of a Spanish town. [Spanish, from Arabic al-qādī: al, the + qādī, judge (from qaḍā, to judge).]

Al·ca·mo (äl'kə-mō') A city of northwest Sicily, Italy, southwest of Palermo. The ruins of the ancient Greek settlement of Segesta are nearby. Population, 42,059.

Al·can Highway (äl'kän' hī'wā') See Alaska Highway.

Al·ca·traz (äl'kə-trāz') A rocky island of western California in San Francisco Bay. It was a military prison from 1859 to 1933 and a federal prison until 1963. It is now a tourist attraction. The island has long been known as “the Rock.”

al·cay·de (äl-kī'dē) n. Variant of alcaide.

al·caz·ar (äl-kāz'ər, -kə'zər, äl'kə-zär') n. A Spanish palace or fortress, originally one built by the Moors. [Spanish alcázar, from Arabic alqaṣr: al, the + qaṣr, castle (from Latin castra, fort, pl. of castrum, camp); see kes- in Appendix.]

Al·ces·tis (äl-sĕs'tis) n. Greek Mythology. The wife of King Admetus of Thessaly, who agreed to die in place of her husband and was later rescued from Hades by Hercules.

al·che·mist (äl'kə-mĭst) n. A practitioner of alchemy. —al'che-mis'tic, al'che-mis'ti-cal adj.

al·che·mize (äl'kə-mĭz') v. tr. al·che·mized, al·che·miz·ing, al·che·miz·es. To transform by or as if by alchemy.

al·che·my (äl'kə-mē) n. 1. A medieval chemical philosophy having as its asserted aims the transmutation of base metals into gold, the discovery of the panacea, and the preparation of the elixir of longevity. 2. A seemingly magical power or process of transmuting: “He wondered by what alchemy it was changed, so that what sickened him one hour, maddened him with hunger the next” (Marjorie K. Rawlings). [Middle English alkamie, from Old French alquemie, from Medieval Latin alchymia, from Arabic al-kīmiyā': al, the + kīmiyā', chemistry (from Late Greek khēmeia, khumeia, perhaps from Greek Khēmia, Egypt).] —al·chem'i-cal (äl-kēm'-ĭ-kəl), al·chem'ic adj.

Al·ci·bi·a·des (äl'sə-bī'ə-dēz'), 450?-404 B.C. Athenian politician and general whose brilliant military career foundered during the Peloponnesian War (431-404), during which he changed allegiance three times.

Al·cin·dor (äl-sĭn'dər), Lew. See Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Al·cin·o·us (äl-sĭn'ō-əs) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Phaeacia, father of Nausicaa, who entertained Odysseus.

Alc·me·ne (älk-mē'nē) n. Greek Mythology. Amphitryon's wife, who gave birth to Hercules after being seduced by Zeus.

Al·co·ben·das (äl'kô-bën'däs) A city of central Spain, a suburb of Madrid.

Population, 66,249.

al·co·hol (äl'kə-hôl', -höl') n. 1. Abbr. al., alc. A colorless, volatile, flammable liquid, C_2H_5OH , synthesized or obtained by fermentation of sugars and starches and widely used, either pure or denatured, as a solvent and in drugs, cleaning solutions, explosives, and intoxicating beverages. Also called ethanol, ethyl alcohol, grain alcohol. 2. Intoxicating liquor containing alcohol. 3. Any of a series of hydroxyl compounds, the simplest of which are derived from saturated hydrocarbons, have the general formula $C_nH_{2n+1}OH$, and include ethanol and methanol. [Medieval Latin, fine metallic powder, especially of antimony, from Arabic al-kuḥl: al, the + kuḥl, powder of antimony.]

WORD HISTORY: The al- in alcohol may alert some readers to the fact that this is a word of Arabic descent, as is the case with algebra and alkali—al being the Arabic definite article corresponding to the in English. The origin of -cohol is less obvious, however. Its Arabic ancestor was kuḥl, a fine powder most often made from antimony and used by women to darken their eyelids; in fact, kuḥl has given us the word kohl for such a preparation. Arabic chemists came to use al-kuḥl to mean “any fine powder produced in a number of ways, including the process of heating a substance to a gaseous state and then recooling it.” The English word alcohol, derived through Medieval Latin from Arabic, is first recorded in 1543 in this sense. Arabic chemists also used al-kuḥl to refer to other substances such as essences that were obtained by distillation, a sense first found for English alcohol in 1672. One of these distilled essences, known as “alcohol of wine,” is the constituent of fermented liquors that causes intoxication. This essence took over the term alcohol for itself, whence it has come to refer to the liquor that contains this essence as well as to a class of chemical compounds such as methanol.

al·co·hol·ic (äl'kə-hô'lik, -höl'ik) adj. Abbr. al., alc. 1. Related to or resulting from alcohol. 2. Containing or preserved in alcohol. 3. Suffering from alcoholism. — n. A person who drinks alcoholic substances habitually and to excess or who suffers from alcoholism.

al·co·hol·ic·i·ty (äl'kə-hô-lis'ī-tē) n. Alcoholic content.

al·co·hol·ism (äl'kə-hô-liz'əm, -hō-) n. 1. The compulsive consumption of and psychophysiological dependence on alcoholic beverages. 2. A chronic, progressive pathological condition, mainly affecting the nervous and digestive systems, caused by the excessive and habitual consumption of alcohol. 3. Temporary mental disturbance and muscular incoordination caused by excessive consumption of alcohol.

al·co·hol·om·e·ter (äl'kə-hô-löm'i-tər) also al·co·hol·me·ter (äl'kə-hôl-mē'tər, -höl-) n. An instrument, such as a hydrometer, used to determine the amount of alcohol in a liquid. —al'co·hol·om'e·try n.

Al·co·ran (äl'kə-rän') n. See Koran. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin alcorānum, from Arabic al qur'ān : al, the + qur'ān, reading; see KORAN.]

Al·cor·cón (äl'kôr-kôn') A city of central Spain, a suburb of Madrid. Population, 144,478.

Al·cott (ôl'kət, -köt, ôl'-), Amos Bronson. 1799-1888. American educator and transcendentalist philosopher who maintained that learning should be based on pleasure and imagination instead of discipline.

Al·cott (ôl'kət, -köt, ôl'-), Louisa May. 1832-1888. American writer and reformer best known for her largely autobiographical novel Little Women (1868-1869).

al·cove (äl'kōv') n. 1. A recess or partly enclosed extension connected to or forming part of a room. 2. A secluded structure, such as a bower, in a garden. [French alcôve, from Spanish alcoba, from Arabic al-qubbah, the vault : al, the + qubbah, vault.]

Al·coy (äl-koi') A city of southeast Spain north of Alicante. It is an important manufacturing center. Population, 67,431.

Al·cuin (äl'kwīn) also Al·bi·nus (äl-bī'nəs), 735?-804. Anglo-Saxon prelate and scholar who was a leader in the revival of learning in medieval Europe.

Al·cy·o·ne (äl-sī'ə-nē) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The daughter of Aeolus who, in grief over the death of her husband Ceyx, threw herself into the sea and was changed into a kingfisher. 2. Greek Mythology. A nymph, one of the Pleiades. 3. Astronomy. The brightest star in the Pleiades, in the constellation Taurus. [Latin, from Greek Alkuonē, from alkuōn, kingfisher.]

Ald. abbr. Alderman.

Al·dab·ra Islands (äl-dăb'rə ī'ləndz) A group of four coral islands in the Indian Ocean north of Madagascar. Part of Seychelles since 1976, the islands are known for their giant tortoises and other unusual flora and fauna.

Al·dan (äl-dän') A river of southeast Russia rising in the Stanovoy Range and flowing about 2,253 km (1,400 mi) north and east around the Aldan Plateau then generally northwest to the Lena River north of Yakutsk.

Al·deb·a·ran (äl-dēb'ər-ən) n. A double star in the constellation Taurus, 68 light-years from Earth, and one of the brightest stars in the sky. [Middle English Aldeboran, from Medieval Latin Aldebaran, from Arabic ad-dabarān : al, the + dabarān, following (the Pleiades) (from dabara, to follow).]

al·de·hyde (äl'də-hīd') n. 1. Any of a class of highly reactive organic chemical compounds obtained by oxidation of primary alcohols, characterized by the common group CHO, and used in the manufacture of resins, dyes, and organic acids.

2. See acetaldehyde. [German Aldehyd, from New Latin, short for alcohol dehydrogenatum, dehydrogenized alcohol.]

Al·den (ôl'dən), John. 1599?-1687. Pilgrim colonist and political figure whose courtship of Priscilla Mullins (born c. 1602) is the subject of a popular legend.

al den·te (ăl dĕn'tē, ăl dĕn'tā) adj. Cooked enough to be firm but not soft: pasta al dente. [Italian : al, to the + dente, tooth.] —al den'te adv.

al·der (ôl'dər) n. 1. Any of various deciduous shrubs or trees of the genus Alnus, native chiefly to northern temperate regions and having alternate, simple, toothed leaves and tiny fruits in woody, conelike catkins. 2. The wood of these plants, used in carvings and for making furniture and cabinets. [Middle English, from Old English alor.]

Al·der (ăl'dər), Kurt. 1902-1958. German chemist. He shared a 1950 Nobel Prize for discoveries concerning the structure of organic matter.

al·der·man (ôl'dər-mən) n. 1. Abbr. Ald. A member of the municipal legislative body in a town or city in many jurisdictions. 2. A member of the higher branch of the municipal or borough council in England and Ireland before 1974. 3. a. A noble of high rank or authority in Anglo-Saxon England. b. The chief officer of a shire in Anglo-Saxon England. [Middle English, a person of high rank, from Old English ealdorman : ealdor, elder, chief (from eald, old); see al² in Appendix + man, man; see MAN.] —al'der·man·cy (-sē) n. —al'der·man'ic (-măn'ĭk) adj.

Al·der·ney¹ (ôl'dər-nē) A British island in the English Channel. The northernmost of the larger Channel Islands, it is separated from the French coast by a swift channel, the Race of Alderney.

Al·der·ney² (ôl'dər-nē) n. pl. Al·der·neys. One of a breed of small dairy cattle originally raised in the Channel Islands.

Al·der·shot (ôl'dər-shôt') A municipal borough of south-central England southwest of London. It is the site of a large military training center. Population, 80,800.

al·di·carb (ăl'dĭ-kărb') n. A crystalline compound, C₇H₁₄N₂O₂S, used in agriculture as a pesticide on crops such as cotton, potatoes, and sugar beets. [(PROPION)ALD(EHYDE) + (methyl)carb(amoyloxime), C₂H₁₄N₂O₂S.]

Al·ding·ton (ôl'dĭng-tən, ôl'-), Richard. 1892-1962. British writer noted for his novels, such as Death of a Hero (1929), and for his poetry. He was married to Hilda Doolittle.

al·dol (ăl'dôl', -dôl', -dôl') n. 1. A thick, colorless to pale yellow liquid, C₄H₈O₂, obtained from acetaldehyde and used in perfumery and as a solvent.

2. A similar aldehyde. [ALD(EHYDE) + -OL¹.]

al·dol·ase (ăl'də-lās') n. An enzyme present in certain living tissues, including skeletal and heart muscle tissues, that catalyzes the breakdown of a fructose ester into triose sugars.

al·dose (äl'dōs', -dōz') n. Chemistry. Any of a class of monosaccharide sugars containing an aldehyde group. [ALD(EHYDE) + -OSE¹.]

al·dos·ter·one (äl-dōs'tə-rōn') n. A steroid hormone secreted by the adrenal cortex that regulates the salt and water balance in the body. [ALD(EHYDE) + STER(OL) + -ONE.]

al·dos·ter·on·ism (äl-dōs'tə-rō-nīz'əm, äl'dō-stēr'ə-) n. A disorder marked by excessive secretion of the hormone aldosterone, which can cause weakness, cardiac irregularities, and abnormally high blood pressure.

Al·drich (ôl'drīch, ôl'-), Thomas Bailey. 1836-1907. American writer and editor best known for his editorship of the Atlantic Monthly (1881-1890) and his novel The Story of a Bad Boy (1870).

Al·dridge (ôl'drij, ôl'-), Ira Frederick. 1804?-1867. American-born actor whose tragic leading roles, most notably in Othello, were acclaimed in Europe.

al·drin (ôl'drīn) n. An insecticide containing a naphthalene-derived compound, C₁₂H₈Cl₆. [After Kurt ALDER.]

Al·drin (ôl'drīn, ôl'-), Edwin Eugene, Jr. Known as "Buzz." Born 1930. American astronaut who as a crew member of Apollo 11 became the second human being to walk on the moon (July 20, 1969).

Al·dus Ma·nu·tius (ôl'dəs mə-nōō'shəs, -shē-əs, -nyōō'-, ôl'-) See Aldus Manutius.

ale (āl) n. A fermented alcoholic beverage containing malt and hops, similar to but heavier than beer. [Middle English, from Old English ealu, alu. See alu- in Appendix.]

a·le·a·to·ry (ā'lē-ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Dependent on chance, luck, or an uncertain outcome: an aleatory contract between an oil prospector and a landowner. 2. Of or characterized by gambling: aleatory contests. 3. Also a·le·a·to·ric (ā'lē-ə-tôr'īk, -tôr'-). Music. Using or consisting of sounds to be chosen by the performer or left to chance; indeterminate: An object placed inside the piano added an aleatory element to the piece. [Latin āleātōrius, from āleātor, gambler, from ālea, dice.]

a·lec·i·thal (ä-lēs'ə-thəl) adj. Having little or no yolk: an alecithal egg. [A⁻¹ + LECITH(IN) + -AL¹.]

A·lec·to (ə-lĕk'tō) n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. One of the Furies.

a·lee (ə-lē') adv. Nautical. At, on, or to the leeward side.

al·e·gar (äl'i-gər, ā'lī-) n. Vinegar produced by the fermentation of ale. [Middle English, blend of ale, ale; see ALE, and vinegar, vinegar; see VINEGAR.]

ale·house (āl'hous') n. A place where ale is sold and served.

A·lei·chem (ä-lā'kĕm, -KHĕm), Shalom or Sholem Originally Solomon Rabinowitz. 1859-1916. Russian-born Jewish humorist whose stories and plays, originally written in Yiddish, were the basis for the musical Fiddler on the Roof.

A·leix·an·dre (ä'lək-sän'drə), Vicente. 1898-1984. Spanish poet. He won the 1977 Nobel Prize for literature.

A·lek·san·drovsk (äl'ik-sän'drəfsk, ə-līk-sän'-) See Zaporozhe.

A·le·mán (ä'lā-män'), Mateo. 1547-1610?. Spanish-born Mexican writer whose greatest work is the picaresque novel Guzmán de Alfarache (1599).

Al·e·man·ni (äl'ə-män'ni) pl.n. A group of Germanic tribes that settled in Alsace and nearby areas during the fourth century A.D. and were defeated by the Franks in 496. [Latin, of Germanic origin. See man¹ in Appendix.]

Al·e·man·nic (äl'ə-män'ik) n. 1. A group of High German dialects spoken in Alsace, Switzerland, and parts of southern Germany. 2. The Germanic dialect of the Alemanni. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the Alemannic dialects of High German. 2. Of or relating to the Alemanni or their language.

Alemán Val·dés (ä'lā-män' väl-dēs'), Miguel. 1902-1983. Mexican politician who served as president from 1946 to 1952.

A·lem·bert (äl'əm-bâr', ä-län-bēr'), Jean Le Rond d'. 1717-1783. French mathematician and philosopher who defined the laws of dynamics governing equilibrium and centrifugal force. He also contributed to Diderot's Encyclopédie.

a·lem·bic (ə-lēm'bik) n. 1. An apparatus consisting of two vessels connected by a tube, formerly used for distilling liquids. 2. A device that purifies or alters by a process comparable to distillation. [Middle English alambic, from Old French, from Medieval Latin alembicus, from Arabic al-'anbīq: al, the + 'anbīq, still (from Greek ambix, cup).]

Al·en·çon (äl-än-sōn') A town of northwest France on the Sarthe River west-southwest of Paris. Its lacework industry dates to the 17th century. Population, 31,608.

A·lep (ə-lēp') See Aleppo.

a·leph (ä'lēf, -ləf) n. The first letter of the Hebrew alphabet. [Hebrew 'alep, from 'elep, ox, from Canaanite 'alp.]

a·leph·null (ä'lēf-nūl', -ləf-) n. Mathematics. The first transfinite number.

A·lep·po (ə-lēp'ō) also A·lep (ə-lēp') A city of northwest Syria near the Turkish border. Inhabited perhaps as early as the sixth millennium B.C., Aleppo was a key point on the caravan route across Syria to Baghdad and later a major center of Christianity in the Middle East. Population, 985,413.

a·lert (ə-lûrt') adj. 1. Vigilantly attentive; watchful: alert to danger; an alert bank guard. See Synonyms at aware. 2. Mentally responsive and perceptive; quick. 3. Brisk or lively in action: the bird's alert hopping from branch to branch. — n. 1. A signal that warns of attack or danger: Sirens sounded the alert for an air raid. See Synonyms at alarm. 2. A condition or period of heightened watchfulness or preparation for action: Nuclear-armed bombers were put on alert during the crisis. — v. tr. a·lert·ed, a·lert·ing, a·lerts. To notify of approaching danger or action; warn: a flashing red light that alerted motorists to trouble ahead.

—idiom. on the alert. Watchful and prepared for danger, emergency, or opportunity: bird watchers on the alert for a rare species. [French alerte, from Italian all'erta, on the lookout : alla, to the, on the (from Latin ad illam, to that : ad-, ad- + illam, accusative of illa, that); see al-¹ in Appendix + erta, lookout, from past participle of ergere, to raise (from Latin ērigere); see ERECT.] al-eu-ron (äl'yə-rōn') also a-leu-ron (-rōn') n. A granular protein found in the endosperm of many seeds or forming the outermost layer in cereal grains. [From Greek aleurón, meal.] —al'eu-ron'ic (-rōn'ik) adj.

Al-es-san-dri-a (äl'ī-sän'drē-ə, ä'lēs-sän'-) A city of northwest Italy east-southeast of Turin. It was founded c. 1168 as a stronghold of the Lombard League. Population, 100,518.

A-leut (ə-lōōt', ä'lē-ōōt') n. pl. Aleut or A-leuts. 1. a. A Native American people inhabiting the Aleutian Islands and coastal areas of southwest Alaska. The Aleut are related culturally and linguistically to the Eskimo. b. A member of this people. 2. Either or both of the two languages of the Aleut. See Usage Note at Native American. [Russian.]

A-leu-tian (ə-lōō'shən) adj. Of or relating to the Aleut, their language, or their culture. — n. A native or inhabitant of the Aleutian Islands, especially an Aleut.

Aleutian Islands (ə-lōō'shən ī'ləndz) A chain of rugged, volcanic islands of southwest Alaska curving about 1,931 km (1,200 mi) west from the Alaska Peninsula and separating the Bering Sea from the Pacific Ocean. The islands were discovered in 1741 by Vitus Bering, a Danish explorer employed by Russia, and remained under Russian control until Alaska was purchased by the United States in 1867.

Aleutian Range (ə-lōō'shən rānj) A volcanic mountain chain of southwest Alaska extending about 965 km (600 mi) west from Anchorage along the Alaska Peninsula and continuing, partly submerged as the Aleutian Islands, to Attu Island.

A level (ā' lēv'əl) n. Chiefly British. 1. The later of two standardized tests in a secondary school subject, used as a qualification for entrance into a university. 2. The educational background and skills required to pass this test. [A(DVANCED) LEVEL.]

ale-wife¹ (āl'wif') n. A fish (Alosa pseudoharengus) closely related to the herrings and native to North American Atlantic waters and some inland lakes. [Perhaps from ALEWIFE².] ale-wife² (āl'wif') n. A woman who keeps an alehouse.

al-ex-an-der also Al-ex-an-der (äl'ig-zän'dər) n. A cocktail made with crème de cacao, sweet cream, and brandy or gin. [From the name Alexander.]

Al-ex-an-der I¹ (äl'ig-zän'dər), 1777-1825. Czar of Russia (1801-1825) whose plans to liberalize his country's government were forestalled by wars with Napoleon I.

Al·ex·an·der I² (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), Originally Alexander O·bre·no·vič (ō-brĕn'ə-vĭch') 1876-1903. King of Serbia (1889-1903) whose efforts to increase his power at the expense of the national assembly led to his assassination.

Al·ex·an·der I³ (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), 1888-1934. King of Yugoslavia (1921-1934) who unified the peoples of Serbia, Croatia, and Slovenia (1929) and was assassinated by Croatian separatists.

Al·ex·an·der I Island (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər; ī'lənd) An island of British Antarctic Territory in Bellingshausen Sea off the coast of the Antarctic Peninsula. Originally thought to be part of the Antarctic landmass, it was proved to be an island by a U.S. exploratory team in 1940.

Al·ex·an·der II (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), 1818-1881. Czar of Russia (1855-1881) who emancipated the serfs in 1861.

Al·ex·an·der III¹ (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), Known as "Alexander the Great." 356-323 B.C. King of Macedonia (336-323) and conquerer of Asia Minor, Syria, Egypt, Babylonia, and Persia. His reign marked the beginning of the Hellenistic Age.

Al·ex·an·der III² (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), Originally Orlando Bandinelli. Died 1181. Pope (1159-1181) who excommunicated Frederick I (1165) and established papal supremacy.

Al·ex·an·der VI (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər), Originally Rodrigo Borgia. 1431-1503. Pope (1492-1503) noted as a patron of the arts and for his corrupt papacy.

Al·ex·an·der Archipelago (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər är'kə-pĕl'ə-gō') A group of more than 1,000 islands off southeast Alaska. The rugged, heavily forested islands are the exposed tops of submerged coastal mountains that rise steeply from the Pacific Ocean.

Al·ex·an·der Nev·ski (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər nĕv'skĕ, nĕf'-), 1220?-1263. Russian saint and national hero named after the Neva River, where he defeated the Swedes in 1240.

Al·ex·an·der of Tu·nis (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər ūf tōō'nĭs, tyōō'-), First Earl Title of Harold Rupert Leofric George Alexander. 1891-1969. British field marshal who during World War II led maneuvers at Dunkirk and in Burma, North Africa, and Italy.

Al·ex·an·der Se·ve·rus (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər sə-vĭr'əs), Marcus Aurelius. A.D. 208?-235. Emperor of Rome (222-235) who succeeded his cousin and adoptive father, Heliogabalus.

Al·ex·an·der·son (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər-sən), Ernst Frederick Werner. 1878-1975. Swedish-born American electrical engineer and inventor who demonstrated the first practical television system (1930).

Al·ex·an·der the Great (ăl'ĭg-zăn'dər thĕ grāt) See Alexander III¹.

Al·ex·an·dra (ăl'ĭg-zăn'drə, -zăn'-), 1872-1918. Last czarina of Russia (1894-1917). The wife of Nicholas II, she was influenced by Rasputin and meddled in politics. After the Bolshevik revolution, she and her family were imprisoned and executed.

Al·ex·an·dret·ta (äl'ĭg-zăn-drĕt'ə) See Iskenderun.

Al·ex·an·dri·a (äl'ĭg-zăn'drĕ-ə) 1. A city of northern Egypt on the Mediterranean Sea at the western tip of the Nile Delta. It was founded by Alexander the Great in 332 B.C. and became a repository of Jewish, Arab, and Hellenistic culture famous for its extensive libraries. Its pharos (lighthouse) was one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Population, 2,821,000. 2. A city of central Louisiana on the Red River northwest of Baton Rouge. The original city was destroyed by Union troops in May 1864 during the Civil War. Population, 49,188. 3. An independent city of northern Virginia on the Potomac River opposite Washington, D.C. Primarily a residential suburb of the capital, the city has many historic buildings, including Gadsby's Tavern, built in 1752. George Washington helped lay out the streets in 1749. Population, 111,183.

Al·ex·an·dri·an (äl'ĭg-zăn'drĕ-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Alexander the Great: the Alexandrian conquests. 2. Of or relating to Alexandria, Egypt. 3. Of, characteristic of, or belonging to a learned school of Hellenistic literature, science, and philosophy located at Alexandria in the last three centuries B.C.: Alexandrian scholars; an Alexandrian preference for the explication of earlier works.

al·ex·an·drine also Al·ex·an·drine (äl'ĭg-zăn'drĭn) n. 1. A line of English verse composed in iambic hexameter, usually with a caesura after the third foot. 2. A line of French verse consisting of 12 syllables with a caesura usually falling after the sixth syllable. — adj. Characterized by or composed in either of these meters. [French alexandrin, from Old French, from Alexandre, title of a romance about Alexander the Great that was written in this meter.]

al·ex·an·drite (äl'ĭg-zăn'drĭt') n. A greenish chrysoberyl that appears red in artificial light, used as a gemstone. [German Alexandrit, after ALEXANDER I¹.]

a·lex·i·a (ə-lĕk'sĕ-ə) n. Loss of the ability to read, usually caused by brain lesions. Also called word blindness [A⁻¹ + Greek lexis, speech (from legein, to speak); see leg- in Appendix + -IA¹.]

a·lex·in (ə-lĕk'sĭn) n. See complement (n., sense 6). [Greek alexein, to ward off + -IN.]

A·lex·is I Mi·khai·lo·vich (ä-lĕk'sĭs; mĭ-kĭ'lə-vĭch, mə-KHĭ'-), 1629-1676. Czar of Russia (1645-1676) who approved church reforms and implemented a new code of law that established serfdom (1649).

Alexis Pe·tro·vich (ä-lĕk'sĭs pĕ-trō'vĭch), 1690-1718. Russian czarevitch who disapproved of the reforms of his father, Peter the Great, and was condemned for treason.

A·lex·i·us I Com·ne·nus (ə-lĕk'sĕ-əs; kōm-nĕ'nəs), 1048-1118. Emperor of Byzantium (1081-1118) whose reign was marked by the First Crusade (1096-1099).

al-fal-fa (äl-fäl'fə) n. A southwest Asian perennial herb (Medicago sativa) having compound leaves with three leaflets and clusters of usually blue-violet flowers. It is widely cultivated as a pasture and hay crop. [Spanish, from Arabic al-faşfaşah.]

Al Fay-yam (äl' fā-ōom', fi-, ɛl') A city of northern Egypt on the Nile River south-southwest of Cairo. The surrounding area is rich in archaeological remains. Population, 218,500.

Al-fie-ri (äl-fē-âr'ē, älfyâr'ē), Conte Vittorio. 1749-1803. Italian playwright whose works, including 19 tragedies, influenced Italian nationalism.

al-fil-a-ri-a or al-fil-e-ri-a (äl-fil'ə-rē'ə) n. An annual Mediterranean plant (Erodium cicutarium) having pinnately dissected leaves and small pink or purple flowers. It is a widespread weed and is used for spring forage in the western United States. Also called filaree, pin clover. [American Spanish alfilerillo, any of various cacti whose leaves end in sharp points, from Spanish, diminutive of alfiler, pin, from Arabic al-hīlal, the thorn : al, the + hīlal, thorn.]

Al-föld (öl'fəld) also Great Alföld An extensive plain of central Hungary extending into northern Yugoslavia and western Romania. The Little Alföld lies in northwest Hungary and southern Slovakia.

Al-fon-so I (äl-fön'sō, -zō), 1110?-1185. King of Portugal (1139-1185) who won Portuguese independence from Castile (1139) and established a monarchy.

Al-fon-so V (äl-fön'sō, -zō), 1432-1481. King of Portugal (1438-1481) noted for his victories over the Moors in Africa (1458 and 1471).

Al-fon-so XIII (äl-fön'sō, -zō), 1886-1941. King of Spain (1886-1931) who abdicated on the establishment of a republican government and died in exile.

Al-fred (äl'frīd), Known as “the Great.” 849-899. King of the West Saxons (871-899), scholar, and lawmaker who repelled the Danes and helped consolidate England into a unified kingdom.

al-fres-co (äl-frēs'kō) adv. In the fresh air; outdoors: dining al fresco. — adj. Taking place outdoors; outdoor: an al fresco conference. [Italian al fresco, in the fresh (air) : a il, in the + fresco, fresh.]

Alf-vén (äl-vän'), Hannes Olof Gösta. 1908-1995. Swedish physicist. He won a 1970 Nobel Prize for his theories on plasma physics.

alg. abbr. Mathematics. Algebra.

Alg. abbr. Algeria.

al-ga (äl'gə) n. pl. al-gae (-jē). Any of various chiefly aquatic, eukaryotic, photosynthetic organisms, ranging in size from single-celled forms to the giant kelp. Algae were once considered to be plants but are now classified separately because they lack true roots, stems, leaves, and embryos. [Latin, seaweed.] — al'gal (äl'gəl) adj.

al·gar·ro·ba or al·ga·ro·ba (ăl'gə-rō'bə) n. 1. See mesquite (n., sense 1b).

2. See carob (n., sense 2). 3. The edible pod of either the mesquite or the carob tree. [Spanish, from Arabic al-ḥarrūbah : al, the + ḥarrūbah, carob.]

Al·gar·ve (äl-gär'və) A medieval Moorish kingdom in present-day southern Portugal. It was conquered in 1253 by Alfonso III (1210-1279).

al·ge·bra (äl'jə-brə) n. Abbr. alg. Mathematics. 1. A generalization of arithmetic in which symbols, usually letters of the alphabet, represent numbers or members of a specified set of numbers and are related by operations that hold for all numbers in the set. 2. A set together with operations defined in the set that obey specified laws. [Middle English, bone-setting, and Italian, algebra both from Medieval Latin, from Arabic al-jabr, the (science of) reuniting : al, the + jabr, reunification, bone-setting.] —al'ge·bra'ist (-brā'ist) n.

al·ge·bra·ic (äl'jə-brā'ik) adj. Mathematics. 1. Of, relating to, or designating algebra. 2. Designating an expression, an equation, or a function in which only numbers, letters, and arithmetic operations are contained or used. 3. Indicating or restricted to a finite number of operations involving algebra.

—al'ge·bra'i·cal·ly adv.

algebraic language (äl'jə-brā'ik lăng'gwij) n. 1. Mathematics. The conventional method of writing expressions and formulas. 2. Computer Science. A computer language whose statements are designed to resemble algebraic expressions.

algebraic number (äl'jə-brā'ik nŭm'bər) n. Mathematics. A number that is a root of a polynomial equation with rational coefficients.

Al·ge·ci·ras (äl'ji-sîr'əs, äl'hě-thē'räs) A city of southern Spain on the Bay of Algeciras opposite Gibraltar. It is a port and tourist center. Population, 92,474.

Al·ger (äl'jər), Horatio. 1832-1899. American writer of inspirational adventure books, such as Ragged Dick (1867), featuring impoverished boys who through hard work and virtue achieve great wealth and respect.

Al·ge·ri·a (äl-jîr'ē-ə) Abbr. Alg. A country of northwest Africa bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. Algeria gained its independence from France in 1962 after a long terrorist and guerrilla campaign. Algiers is the capital and the largest city. Population, 16,948,000. —Al·ge'ri·an adj. & n.

-algia suff. Pain: neuralgia. [Greek, from algos, pain.]

al·gi·cide (äl'ji-sîd') n. A substance used to kill or inhibit the growth of algae. [ALG(A) + -CIDE.]

al·gid (äl'jîd) adj. Cold; chilly. [Latin algidus, from algēre, to be cold.]

—al·gid'i·ty (-jîd'ī-tē) n.

Al·giers (äl-jîrz') The capital and largest city of Algeria, in the north on the Bay of Algiers, an arm of the Mediterranean Sea. An ancient North African port, Algiers was captured by French forces in 1830 and was later a pivotal center of the struggle for Algerian independence. Population, 1,523,000.

al·gin (ăl'jĭn) n. Any of several derivatives, such as sodium alginate or alginic acid, of a gelatinous substance extracted from certain brown algae and widely used as a thickening, stabilizing, emulsifying, or suspending agent in industrial, pharmaceutical, and food products, such as ice cream. [ALG(A) + -IN.]

al·gi·nate (ăl'jə-nāt') n. A salt of alginic acid, such as sodium alginate.

al·gin·ic acid (ăl-jĭn'ĭk ăš'ĭd) n. An insoluble colloidal acid in the form of a carboxylated polysaccharide that is abundant in the cell walls of brown algae.

algo- pref. Pain: algophobia. [From Greek algos, pain.]

al·goid (ăl'goid') adj. Of or resembling algae.

Al·gol (ăl'göl', -gôl') n. A double, eclipsing variable star in the constellation Perseus, almost as bright as Polaris. [Arabic al-ġūl : al, the + ġūl, ghoul; see GHOUL.]

AL·GOL also Algol (ăl'göl', -gôl') n. Computer Science. An algebraic computer language for solving primarily mathematical and scientific problems using algorithms. [alg(arithmic) o(riented) l(anguage).] al·go·lag·ni·a (ăl'gō-lăg'nē-ə) n. Sexual gratification derived from inflicting or experiencing pain. [New Latin : ALGO- + Greek lagneia, lust (from lagnos, lustful); see slēg- in Appendix.] —al'go·lag'nic adj. —al'go·lag'nist n.

al·gol·o·gy (ăl-göl'ə-jē) n. See psychology. [ALG(A) + -LOGY.]

—al'go·log'i·cal (ăl'gə-lŏj'i-kəl) adj. —al'go·log'i·cal·ly adv.

—al·gol'o·gist n.

Al·gon·ki·an (ăl-gŏng'kē-ən) n. pl. Algonkian or Al-gon·ki·ans. 1. Geology. Late Proterozoic. 2. Variant of Algonquian. [After the Algonkin Indians. See ALGONQUIN.]

Al·gon·kin (ăl-gŏng'kĭn) n. pl. Algonkin or Al-gon·kins. Variant of Algonquin.

Al·gon·qui·an (ăl-gŏng'kwē-ən, -kē-ən) also Al-gon·ki·an (-kē-ən) n. pl.

Algonquian or Al-gon·qui·ans also Algonkian or Al-gon·ki·ans. 1. A family of North American Indian languages spoken or formerly spoken in an area from Labrador to the Carolinas between the Atlantic coast and the Rocky Mountains. 2. A member of a people traditionally speaking an Algonquian language. [From ALGONQUIN.] —Al-gon'qui·an adj.

Al·gon·quin (ăl-gŏng'kwĭn, -kĭn) also Al-gon·kin (-kĭn) n. pl. Algonquin or Algonquins also Algonkin or Al-gon·kins. 1. a. Any of various Native American peoples inhabiting the Ottawa River valley of Quebec and Ontario. b. A member of one of these peoples. 2. Any of the varieties of the Ojibwa language spoken by the peoples called Algonquin. [Canadian French.]

al·go·pho·bi·a (ăl'gə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of pain.

al·go·rism (ăl'gə-rĭz'əm) n. 1. The Arabic system of numeration; the decimal system. 2. Computation with Arabic figures. [Middle English algorisme, from al·go·rithm (äl'gə-rīth'əm) n. Mathematics. A step-by-step problem-solving procedure, especially an established, recursive computational procedure for solving a problem in a finite number of steps. [Variant (probably influenced by ARITHMETIC), of ALGORISM.] —al'go-rith'mic (-rīth'mīk) adj.

Old French, from Medieval Latin algorismus, after Muhammad ibn KHWARIZMI-MUSA AL-.]

algorithmic language (äl'gə-rīth'mīk lāng'gwīj) n. Computer Science. A programming language in which an algorithmic procedure can be expressed accurately.

al·gor mor·tis (äl'gər mōr'tīs) n. The cooling of the body that follows death. [Latin algor, coolness + mortis, genitive of mors, death.]

Al·gren (ôl'grīn), Nelson. 1909-1981. American writer noted for his novels about the pride and longings of impoverished people, including The Man with the Golden Arm (1949).

Al·ham·bra¹ (äl-hām'brə) A citadel and palace on a hill overlooking Granada, Spain. Built by Moorish kings in the 12th and 13th centuries, the Alhambra is the finest example of Moorish architecture in Spain.

Al·ham·bra² (äl-hām'brə) A city of southern California, a residential suburb of Los Angeles. Population, 82,106.

Al Hil·lah (äl hīl'ə, ěl) A city of central Iraq on a branch of the Euphrates River south of Baghdad. It was built c. 1100, largely of material salvaged from the nearby ruins of Babylon. Population, 215,249.

A·li (ä-lē'), 600?-661. Muslim caliph (656-661) after whose assassination Islam was divided into Sunnite and Shiite sects.

A·li (ä-lē'), Muhammad. Originally Cassius Marcellus Clay. Born 1942. American prizefighter who won the world heavyweight title in 1964, 1974, and 1978.

A·li·ák·mon (äl-yäk'môn, ä'lē-äk'-) A river, about 322 km (200 mi) long, of northern Greece. It is the longest river in the country.

a·li·as (ā'lē-əs, āl'yəs) n. 1. An assumed name: The swindler worked under various aliases. 2. Electronics. A false signal in telecommunication links from beats between signal frequency and sampling frequency. — adv. Also known as; otherwise: Johnson, alias Johns. [Latin, otherwise, from alius, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.]

A·li Ba·ba (ä'lē bā'bə, ä'l'ē) n. A poor woodcutter in the Arabian Nights who gains entrance to the treasure cave of the 40 thieves by saying the magic words "Open, Sesame!"

al·i·bi (äl'ə-bī') n. pl. al·i·bis. 1. Law. a. A form of defense whereby a defendant attempts to prove that he or she was elsewhere when the crime in question was committed. b. The fact of having been elsewhere when a crime in question was committed. 2. Usage Problem. An explanation offered to avoid blame or justify action; an excuse. — v. intr. al·i·bied, al·i·bi·ing, al·i·bis. Usage Problem. To make an excuse for oneself. [Latin, elsewhere : alius, other; see al⁻¹ in Appendix + ubi, where; see k^wo- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Alibi (noun) in its nonlegal sense of “an excuse” is acceptable in written usage to almost half of the Usage Panel. As an intransitive verb (they never alibi), it is unacceptable in written usage to a large majority of the Panel.

al·i·ble (ăl'ə-bəl) adj. Having nutrients; nourishing. [Latin alibilis, from alere, to nourish. See al⁻² in Appendix.]

Al·i·can·te (ăl'ī-kăn'tē, ă'lē-kăn'tě) A city of southeast Spain on the Mediterranean Sea south of Valencia. It is a port and tourist center. Population, 253,722.

Al·ice (ăl'īs) A city of southern Texas west of Corpus Christi. It is in a cattle-raising area that includes the enormous King Ranch. Population, 19,788.

Alice Springs (ăl'īs sprīngz) A town of Australia located near the center of the country. Tourism and mining are important to its economy. Population, 22,000.

al·i·cy·clic (ăl'ī-sī'klīk, -sīk'līk) adj. Of or relating to organic compounds having both aliphatic and cyclic characteristics or structures. [ALI(PHATIC) + CYCLIC.]

al·i·dade (ăl'ī-dād') also al·i·dad (-dād') n. 1. An indicator or a sighting apparatus on a plane table, used in angular measurement. 2. A topographic surveying and mapping instrument used for determining directions, consisting of a telescope and attached parts. [French, from Medieval Latin alidada, sighting rod, from Arabic al-īḍādah, the revolving radius of a circle, from ʿaḍud, humerus.]

a·li·en (ā'lē-ən, ăl'yən) adj. 1. Owing political allegiance to another country or government; foreign: alien residents. 2. Belonging to, characteristic of, or constituting another and very different place, society, or person; strange. See Synonyms at foreign. 3. Dissimilar, inconsistent, or opposed, as in nature: emotions alien to her temperament. See Synonyms at extrinsic. — n. 1. An unnaturalized foreign resident of a country. Also called noncitizen 2. A person from another and very different family, people, or place. 3. A person who is not included in a group; an outsider. 4. A creature from outer space: science fiction about an invasion of aliens. 5. Ecology. A plant or an animal that occurs in or is naturalized in a region to which it is not native. — v. tr. a·li·ened, a·li·en·ing, a·li·ens. Law. To transfer (property) to another; alienate. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aliēnus, from alius, other. See al⁻¹ in Appendix.]

al·ien·a·ble (ăl'yə-nə-bəl, ă'lē-ə-) adj. Law. Transferrable to the ownership of another. — al'ien·a·bil'i·ty n.

al·ien·ate (ăl'yə-nāt', ă'lē-ə-) v. tr. al·ien·at·ed, al·ien·at·ing, al·ien·ates.

1. To cause to become unfriendly or hostile; estrange: alienate a friend; alienate potential supporters by taking extreme positions. See Synonyms at estrangle.

2. To cause to become withdrawn or unresponsive; isolate or dissociate emotionally: The numbing labor tended to alienate workers. 3. To cause to be transferred;

turn away: “He succeeded... in alienating the affections of my only ward” (Oscar Wilde). 4. Law. To transfer (property or a right) to the ownership of another, especially by an act of the owner rather than by inheritance. [Latin aliēnāre, aliēnāt-, from Latin aliēnus, alien. See ALIEN.] —al’ien-a’tor n.

al·ien·a·tion (āl’yə-nā’shən, ā’lē-ə-) n. 1. The act of alienating or the condition of being alienated; estrangement: Alcoholism often leads to the alienation of family and friends. 2. Emotional isolation or dissociation. 3. Psychology. A state of estrangement between the self and the objective world or between different parts of the personality. 4. Law. The act of transferring property or title to it to another.

al·ien·ee (āl’yə-nē’, ā’lē-ə-) n. Law. One to whom or to which ownership of property is transferred.

al·ien·ist (āl’yə-nīst, ā’lē-ə-) n. Law. A physician who has been accepted by a court of law as an expert on the mental competence of principals or witnesses appearing before it. [French aliéniste, from aliéné, insane, from Latin aliēnātus, past participle of aliēnāre, to deprive of reason. See ALIENATE.]

al·ien·or (āl’yə-nôr’, ā’lē-ə-) n. Law. One that transfers ownership of property to another.

al·i·es·ter·ase (ăl’ē-ēs’tə-rās’, -rāz’) n. Chemistry. An enzyme contributing to ester-link hydrolysis, particularly in aliphatic esters. [ALI(PHATIC) + ESTERASE.]

a·li·form (ā’lə-fôrm’, äl’ə-) adj. Biology. Shaped like a wing; alar. [Latin āla, wing + -FORM.]

A·li·garh (ăl’ī-gār’, ä’lē-gūr’) A city of north-central India southeast of Delhi. It is noted for its university, established in 1875 as Anglo-Oriental College. Population, 320,861.

a·light¹ (ə-līt’) v. intr. a·light·ed or a·lit (ə-līt’), a·light·ing, a·lights. 1. To come down and settle, as after flight: a sparrow alighting on a branch. 2. To set down, as from a vehicle; dismount: The queen alighted from the carriage. 3. To come by chance: alight on a happy solution. [Middle English alighten, from Old English ālīhtan : ā-, intensive pref. + līhtan, to relieve of a burden (from līht, light); see LIGHT².]

a·light² (ə-līt’) adj. 1. Burning; lighted: The discarded match was still alight. 2. Illuminated: The sky was alight with millions of stars. [Middle English, past participle of alighten, to set on fire, from Old English ālīhtan, to illuminate : ā-, intensive pref. + līhtan, to shine (from lēoht, a light); see LIGHT¹.] —a·light’ adv.

a·lign also a·line (ə-līn’) v. a·ligned also a·lined, a·lign·ing also a·lin·ing, a·ligns also a·lines. — v. tr. 1. To arrange in a line or so as to be parallel: align the tops of a row of pictures; aligned the car with the curb. 2. To adjust (parts of a mechanism, for example) to produce a proper relationship or orientation: aligning the wheels of a truck. 3. To ally (oneself, for example) with one side of an argument or cause: aligned themselves with the free traders. — v. intr. To fall into line. [French aligner, from Old French : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + ligne, line (from Latin līnea); see LINE¹.] —a·align'er n.

a·align·ment also a·line·ment (ə-līn'mənt) n. 1. Arrangement or position in a straight line or in parallel lines. 2. a. The process of adjusting parts so that they are in proper relative position: A set of gears needs periodic alignment. b. The condition of having parts so adjusted: Binocular lenses that are out of alignment will yield a double image. 3. A ground plan: Blueprints for the building included an alignment and a profile. 4. The act of aligning or the condition of being aligned.

a·like (ə-līk') adj. Having close resemblance; similar: The twins are as alike as two peas in a pod. Friends are generally alike in background and tastes. — adv. In the same manner or to the same degree: They dress and walk alike. [Middle English alich (influenced by Old Norse ālīkr), blend of ilich (from Old English gelīc), anlich (from Old English onlīc); see lik- in Appendix.] —a·like'ness n.

al·i·ment (äl'ə-mənt) n. 1. Something that nourishes; food. 2. Something that supports or sustains. — v. tr. al·i·ment·ed, al·i·ment·ing, al·i·ments (-mənt'). To supply with sustenance, such as food: required by court order to alimment the abandoned family. [Middle English, from Latin alimentum, from alere, to nourish. See al-² in Appendix.] —al'i·men'tal (-mən'tl) adj.

—al'i·men'tal·ly adv.

al·i·men·ta·ry (äl'ə-mən'tə-rē, -trē) adj. 1. Concerned with food, nutrition, or digestion. 2. Providing nourishment.

alimentary canal (äl'ə-mən'tə-rē kə-näl') n. The mucous membrane-lined tube of the digestive system through which food passes, in which digestion takes place, and from which wastes are eliminated. It extends from the mouth to the anus and includes the pharynx, esophagus, stomach, and intestines. Also called digestive tract al·i·men·ta·tion (äl'ə-mən-tā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of giving or receiving nourishment. 2. Support; sustenance. —al'i·men'ta·tive (-tə-tīv) adj.

al·i·mo·ny (äl'ə-mō'nē) n. pl. al·i·mo·nies. 1. Law. An allowance for support made under court order to a divorced person by the former spouse, usually the chief provider during the marriage. Alimony may also be granted without a divorce, as between legally separated persons. 2. A means of livelihood; maintenance. [Latin alimōnia, sustenance, from alere, to nourish. See al-² in Appendix.]

a·line (ə-līn') v. Variant of align.

A·line (ā'līn') adj. Having a fitted top and a flared bottom: an A-line dress.

[From garments being shaped like a capital A.]

a·line·ment (ə-līn'mənt) n. Variant of alignment.

al·i·phat·ic (äl'ə-făt'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or designating a group of organic chemical compounds in which the carbon atoms are linked in open chains.

[From Greek aleiphar, aleiphat-, oil, from aleiphein, to anoint with oil. See leip- in Appendix.]

Al·i·quip·pa (äl'ī-kwīp'ə) A borough of western Pennsylvania on the Ohio River northwest of Pittsburgh. It is in a highly industrialized area. Population, 17,094.

al·i·quot (äl'ī-kwöt', -kwət) Mathematics. adj. Of, relating to, or denoting an exact divisor or factor of a quantity, especially of an integer. — n. An aliquot part. [Latin aliquot, some number : alius, some; see al¹ in Appendix + quot, how many; see k^wo- in Appendix.]

A list (ā' list) n. Informal. The most desirable guests for exclusive parties; the fashionable elite: Hollywood's A list gathered at a private party.

a·lit (ə-līt') v. A past tense and a past participle of alight¹.

a·live (ə-līv') adj. 1. Having life; living. See Synonyms at living. 2. In existence or operation; active: keep your hopes alive. 3. Full of living or moving things; abounding: a pool alive with trout. 4. Full of activity or animation; lively: a face alive with mischief. — idiom. alive to. Aware of; sensitive to: alive to the moods of others. [Middle English : a-, in a specified state; see A⁻² + live, life (from Old English līf); see LIFE.] — a·live'ness n.

a·li·yah (ä'lē-ä'yā) n. Immigration of Jews into Israel. [Hebrew 'alīyâ, ascent.]

a·liz·a·rin (ə-līz'ər-īn) also a·liz·a·rine (-īn, -ə-rēn') n. An orange-red crystalline compound, C₁₄H₆O₂(OH)₂, used in making dyes. [French alizarine, from French alizari, madder root, from Spanish, probably from Arabic al-'aṣārah, the juice : al, the + 'aṣārah, juice (from 'aṣara, to squeeze).]

al·ka·hest (äl'kə-hĕst') n. The hypothetical universal solvent once sought by alchemists. [Medieval Latin alchahest, first used by Paracelsus (1493-1541), and said to have been coined by him in imitation of Arabic words.] — al'ka·hes'tic, al'ka·hes'ti·cal adj.

al·ka·les·cent (äl'kə-lĕs'ənt) adj. Becoming alkaline; slightly alkaline.

[ALKAL(I) + -ESCENT.] — al'ka·les'cence, al'ka·les'cen·cy n.

al·ka·li (äl'kə-lī') n. pl. al·ka·lis or al·ka·lies. Chemistry. 1. A carbonate or hydroxide of an alkali metal, the aqueous solution of which is bitter, slippery, caustic, and characteristically basic in reactions. 2. Any of various soluble mineral salts found in natural water and arid soils. 3. Alkali metal. [Middle English, alkaline substance from calcined plant ashes, from Medieval Latin, from Arabic al-qalīy, the ashes of saltwort : al, the + qalīy, ashes (from qalā, to fry).]

alkali metal (äl'kə-lī' mĕt'l) n. Any of a group of soft, white, low-density, low-melting, highly reactive metallic elements, including lithium, sodium, potassium, rubidium, cesium, and francium.

al·ka·lim·e·ter (äl'kə-līm'ī-tər) n. An apparatus for measuring alkalinity. — al'ka·lim'e·try n.

al·ka·line (äl'kə-līn, -līn') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or containing an alkali.

2. Having a pH greater than 7.

al·ka·line·earth metal (äl'kə-līn-ûrth' mēt'l, -līn'-) n. Any of a group of metallic elements, especially calcium, strontium, magnesium, and barium, but generally including beryllium and radium. Also called alkaline earth al·ka·lin·i·ty (äl'kə-līn'ī-tē) n. Abbr. alky. The alkali concentration or alkaline quality of an alkali-containing substance.

al·ka·lize (äl'kə-līz') also al·ka·lin·ize (-lə-nīz') v. al·ka·lized also al·ka·lin·ized, al·ka·liz·ing also al·ka·lin·iz·ing, al·ka·liz·es also al·ka·lin·iz·es. — v. tr. To make alkaline. — v. intr. To become an alkali.

—al'ka-li·za'tion (-lī-zā'shən) n.

al·ka·loid (äl'kə-loid') n. Any of various organic compounds normally with basic chemical properties and usually containing at least one nitrogen atom in a heterocyclic ring, occurring chiefly in many vascular plants and some fungi. Many alkaloids, such as nicotine, quinine, cocaine, and morphine, are known for their poisonous or medicinal attributes. [ALKAL(I) + -OID.] —al'ka-loid'al (-loid'l) adj.

al·ka·lo·sis (äl'kə-lō'sīs) n. Abnormally high alkalinity of the blood and body fluids. [ALKAL(I) + -OSIS.] —al'ka-lot'ic (-lōt'ik) adj.

al·kane (äl'kān') n. Any member of the alkane series. [ALK(YL) + (METH)ANE.]

alkane series (äl'kān' sîr'ēz) n. Chemistry. A group of saturated open-chain hydrocarbons having the general formula C_nH_{2n+2} , the most abundant of which is methane. Also called methane series, paraffin series.

al·ka·net (äl'kə-nēt') n. 1. a. A European perennial herb (Alkanna tinctoria) having cymes of blue flowers and red roots. b. The root of this plant or the red dye extracted from the root. 2. Any of various hairy plants of the Eurasian genus Anchusa, having blue or violet flowers grouped on elongated cymes. [Middle English, from Old Spanish alcaneta, diminutive of alcana, henna, from Medieval Latin alchanna, from Arabic al-ḥinnā', the henna : al, the + ḥinnā', henna.]

al·kene (äl'kēn') n. Any of a series of unsaturated, open chain hydrocarbons with one or more carbon-carbon double bonds, having the general formula C_nH_{2n} . [ALK(YL) + -ENE.]

al·kine (äl'kīn') n. Variant of alkyne.

Alk·maar (älk'mär') A town of northern Netherlands north-northwest of Amsterdam. Chartered in 1254, it has a famous cheese market. Population, 83,892.

al·ky (äl'kē) n. pl. al·kies. Slang. An alcoholic: "Nobody ever admitted we were alkies" (Dwight Espe). [Shortening and alteration of ALCOHOLIC + -Y³.]

alky. abbr. Alkalinity.

al·kyd (äl'kīd) n. A widely used durable synthetic resin derived from glycerol and phthalic anhydride. Also called alkyd resin [ALKY(L) + (ACI)D.] al·kyl (äl'kəl) n. Chemistry. A monovalent radical, such as ethyl or propyl, having the general formula C_nH_{2n+1} . [German Alkohol, alcohol (from Medieval Latin alcohol, antimony); see ALCOHOL + -YL.]

al·kyl·ate (äl'kə-lāt') v. tr. al·kyl·at·ed, al·kyl·at·ing, al·kyl·ates. Chemistry. To add one or more alkyl groups to (a compound).

al·kyl·a·tion (äl'kə-lā'shən) n. Chemistry. A process in which an alkyl group is added to or substituted in a compound, as in the reaction of alkenes with alkanes to make high-octane fuels.

al·kyne also al·kine (äl'kīn') n. Any of a series of open-chain hydrocarbons with a carbon-carbon triple bond and the general formula C_nH_{2n-2} . [ALKY(L) + -(I)NE².]

all (ôl) adj. 1. Being or representing the entire or total number, amount, or quantity: All the windows are open. Deal all the cards. See Synonyms at whole.

2. Constituting, being, or representing the total extent or the whole: all Christendom. 3. Being the utmost possible of: argued the case in all seriousness. 4. Every: got into all manner of trouble. 5. Any whatsoever: beyond all doubt.

6. Pennsylvania. Finished; used up: The apples are all. See Regional note at gum band. 7. Informal. Being more than one: Who all came to the party? See Regional note at you-all. — n. The whole of one's fortune, resources, or energy; everything one has: The brave defenders gave their all. — pron. 1. The entire or total number, amount, or quantity; totality: All of us are sick. All that I have is yours. 2. Everyone; everything: justice for all. — adv. 1. Wholly; completely: a room painted all white; directions that were all wrong. 2. Each; apiece: a score of five all. 3. So much: I am all the better for that experience. — idioms. all along. From the beginning; throughout: saw through the disguise all along. all but. Nearly; almost: all but crying with relief. all in. Tired; exhausted. all in all.

Everything being taken into account: All in all, the criticism seemed fair. all of.

Informal. Not more than: a conversation that took all of five minutes. all that.

Informal. To the degree expected. at all. 7. In any way: unable to walk at all.

8. To any extent; whatever: not at all sorry. [Middle English al, from Old English eall. See al-³ in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The construction all that is used informally in questions and negative sentences to mean “to the degree expected,” as in I know it won an Oscar, but the film is not all that exciting. In an earlier survey, the Usage Panel rejected the use of this construction in formal writing. • Sentences of the form All X's are not Y may be ambiguous. All of the departments did not file a report may mean that some departments did not file, or that none did. If the first meaning is intended, it can be unambiguously expressed by the sentence Not all of the departments filed a report. If the second meaning is intended, a paraphrase such as None of the departments filed a report or All of the departments failed to file a report can be used. Note that the same problem can arise with other universal terms like every in negated sentences, as in the ambiguous Every department did not file a report. See Usage Note at every.

all- pref. Variant of allo-.

al·la·breve (äl'ə bräv', ä'lə bräv'ā) adv. & adj. Music. In duple or quadruple meter with the half note being the unit of time. [Italian : alla, according to the + breve, breve.]

Al·lah (äl'ə, ä'lə) n. God, especially in Islam. [Arabic Allāh.]

Al·la·ha·bad (äl'ə-hə-bäd', ä'lə-hə-bäd') A city of north-central India at the junction of the Jumna and Ganges rivers east of Varanasi. It was built on the site of an ancient Indo-Aryan holy city and is still a pilgrimage site for Hindus. Population, 616,051.

Al·lais (ä-lä'), Maurice. Born 1911. French economist. He won a 1988 Nobel Prize for his theories of market behavior and the efficient use of resources.

al·la·man·da (äl'ə-män'də) n. Any of several tropical American evergreen shrubs of the genus Allamanda, widely cultivated in warm regions for their showy yellow or purple trumpet-shaped flowers. [New Latin Allamanda, genus name, after Jean Nicholas Sébastien Allamand (1713-1787), Swiss scientist.]

all-A·mer·i·can (ôl'ə-mēr'ī-kən) adj. 1. Representative of the people of the United States or their ideals; typically American: an all-American family; their all-American generosity. 2. Sports. Chosen as the best amateur in the United States at a particular position or event: an all-American fullback. 3. Composed entirely of Americans or American materials: an all-American negotiating team; cars of all-American manufacture. 4. Of all the American nations: an all-American conference. — n. Often All-American. An all-American athlete.

al·lan·toid (ə-län'toid') also al·lan·toid·al (äl'ən-toid'l) adj. 1. Of or having an allantois. 2. Shaped like a sausage. — n. See allantois. [New Latin allantoīdes. See ALLANTOIS.]

al·lan·to·in (ə-län'tō-ĭn) n. A white, crystalline oxidation product, C₄H₆N₄O₃, of uric acid that is the metabolic end product of vertebrate purine oxidation and is used medicinally to promote tissue growth. [ALLANTO(IS) + -IN.]

al·lan·to·is (ə-län'tō-ĭs) n. pl. al·lan·to·i·des (äl'ən-tō'ī-dēz'). A membranous sac that develops from the posterior part of the alimentary canal in the embryos of mammals, birds, and reptiles. It is important in the formation of the umbilical cord and placenta in mammals. Also called allantoid [New Latin, from allantoīdes, from Greek allantoeidēs, sausage-shaped : allas, allant-, sausage + -oeidēs, -oid.] — al·lan·to·ic (äl'ən-tō'ĭk) adj.

al·lar·gan·do (ä'lär-gän'dō) adv. & adj. Music. In a gradually broadening style and slowing tempo. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, present participle of allargare, to broaden : al-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + largare, to broaden (from largo, broad, from Latin largus).]

all-a-round (ôl'ə-round') also all-round (ôl'round') adj. 1. Comprehensive in extent or depth: a good all-around education. 2. Able to do many things well; versatile: an all-around athlete. See Synonyms at versatile.

al·lay (ə-lā') v. tr. al·layed, al·lay·ing, al·lays. 1. To reduce the intensity of; relieve: allay back pains. See Synonyms at relieve. 2. To calm or pacify; set to rest: allayed the fears of the worried citizens. [Middle English aleien, from Old English āleccan, to lay down : ā-, intensive pref. + leccan, to lay; see *LAY*¹.]

—al·lay'er n.

all clear (ôl klîr) n. A signal, usually by siren, that an air raid is over or a danger has passed.

al·le·ga·tion (ăl'ī-gā'shən) n. 1. Something alleged; an assertion: allegations of disloyalty. 2. The act of alleging. 3. A statement asserting something without proof: The newspaper's charges of official wrongdoing were mere allegations. 4. Law. An assertion made by a party that must be proved or supported with evidence. [French allégation, from Latin allēgātiō, allēgātiōn-, from allēgātus, past participle of allēgāre, to dispatch, adduce : ad-, ad- + lēgāre, to depute; see LEGATE.]

al·lege (ə-lēj') v. tr. al·leged, al·leg·ing, al·leg·es. 1. To assert to be true; affirm: alleging his innocence of the charge. 2. To assert without or before proof: The indictment alleges that the commissioner took bribes. 3. To state (a plea or excuse, for example) in support or denial of a claim or accusation: The defendant alleges temporary insanity. 4. Archaic. To bring forward as an authority. [Middle English alleggen, from Old French alegier, to vindicate, justify (influenced by aleguer, to give a reason), from esligier, to pay a fine, justify oneself, from Late Latin exlītīgāre*, to clear at law : Latin ex-, out; see EX- + Latin lītīgāre, to sue; see LITIGATE.] —al·lege'a·ble adj. —al·leg'er n.

al·leged (ə-lēj'd, ə-lēj'īd) adj. Represented as existing or as being as described but not so proved; supposed. —al·leg'ed·ly (ə-lēj'īd-lē) adv.

USAGE NOTE: An alleged burglar is someone who has been accused of being a burglar but against whom no charges have been proved. An alleged incident is an event that is said to have taken place but has not yet been verified. In their zeal to protect the rights of the accused, newspapers and law enforcement officials sometimes misuse alleged. A man arrested for murder may be only an alleged murderer, for example, but he is a real, not an alleged, suspect in that his status as a suspect is not in doubt. Similarly, if the money from a safe is known to have been stolen and not merely mislaid, then we may safely speak of a theft without having to qualify our description with alleged.

Al·le·ghe·ny Mountains (ă'l'ĭ-gā'nē moun'tənz) also Al·le·ghe·nies (-nēz) A mountain range forming the western part of the Appalachian Mountains. The range extends about 805 km (500 mi) from northern Pennsylvania to southwest Virginia and rises to approximately 1,483 m (4,862 ft) in northeast West Virginia.

Allegheny River (ă'l'ĭ-gā'nē rĭv'ər) A river rising in north-central Pennsylvania and flowing about 523 km (325 mi) northwest into New York then southwest into Pennsylvania again, where it joins the Monongahela River at Pittsburgh to form the Ohio River.

Allegheny spurge (ă'l'ĭ-gā'nē spŭrj) n. A perennial herb (Pachysandra procumbens), native to the southeast United States and sometimes grown as an ornamental or ground cover for its usually mottled leaves. [After the Allegheny (Mountains).] al·le·giance (ə-lē'jəns) n. 1. Loyalty or the obligation of loyalty, as to a nation, sovereign, or cause. See Synonyms at fidelity. 2. The obligations of a vassal to a lord. [Middle English alligeaunce, alteration of ligeaunce, from Old French ligeance, from lige, liege. See LIEGE.] —al·le'giant adj.

al·le·gor·i·cal (ă'l'ĭ-gôr'ĭ-kəl, -gôr'-) also al·le·gor·ic (-ĭk) adj. Of, characteristic of, or containing allegory: an allegorical painting of Victory leading an army. —al'le·gor'i·cal·ly adv.

al·le·go·rize (ă'l'ĭ-gô-rĭz', -gô-, -gə-) v. al·le·go·rized, al·le·go·riz·ing, al·le·go·riz·es. — v. tr. 1. To express as or in the form of an allegory: a story of barnyard animals that allegorizes the fate of Soviet socialism. 2. To interpret allegorically: allegorize the quest for the Holy Grail as an inner spiritual search. — v. intr. To use or make allegory: sculptors who rendered the moral world by allegorizing. —al'le·go'ri·za'tion (-gôr'ĭ-zā'shən, -gôr', -gôr') n. —al'le·go·riz'er n.

al·le·go·ry (ă'l'ĭ-gôr'ē, -gôr'ē) n. pl. al·le·go·ries. 1. a. A literary, dramatic, or pictorial device in which characters and events stand for abstract ideas, principles, or forces, so that the literal sense has or suggests a parallel, deeper symbolic sense. b. A story, picture, or play in which this device is used. John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress and Herman Melville's Moby Dick are allegories. 2. A symbolic representation: The blindfolded figure with scales is an allegory of justice. [Middle English allegorie, from Latin allēgoria, from Greek, from allēgorein, to interpret allegorically : allos, other; see al-¹ in Appendix + agoreuein, to speak publicly (from agora, marketplace); see ger- in Appendix.] —al'le·go'rist n.

al·le·gret·to (ă'l'ĭ-grĕt'ō, ä'lĭ-) Music. adv. & adj. In a moderately quick tempo, usually considered to be slightly slower than allegro but faster than andante. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl. al·le·gret·tos. An allegretto passage or movement. [Italian, diminutive of allegro, allegro. See ALLEGRO.]

al·le·gro (ə-lĕg'rō, ə-lā'grō) Music. adv. & adj. Abbr. al·lo In a quick, lively tempo, usually considered to be faster than allegretto but slower than presto. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl. al·le·gros. Abbr. al·lo An allegro passage or movement. [Italian, from Latin alacer, lively.]

al·le·le (ə-lĕl') n. One member of a pair or series of genes that occupy a specific position on a specific chromosome. [German Allel, short for Allelomorph, allelomorph. See ALLELOMORPH.] — al·le'lic (ə-lĕ'lĭk, ə-lĕ'l'ĭk) adj. — al·le'lism n.

al·le·lo·morph (ə-lĕ'lə-môrf', ə-lĕ'l'ə-) n. An allele. [Greek allēlōn, mutually (from allos, other); see al·1 in Appendix + -MORPH.] — al·le'lo·mor'phic adj. — al·le'lo·mor'phism' n.

al·le·lop·a·thy (ə-lĕ-lōp'ə-thē, əl'ə-) n. The inhibition of growth in one species of plants by chemicals produced by another species. [Greek allēlōn, reciprocally (from allos, another); see al·1 in Appendix + -PATHY.] — al·le'lo·path'ic (ə-lĕ'lə-pāth'ĭk, ə-lĕ'l'ə-) adj.

al·le·lu·ia (əl'ə-lōō'yə) interj. Hallelujah. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin alleluia, from Late Greek allelouia, from Hebrew hallēlūyāh, praise the Lord. See HALLELUJAH.]

al·le·mande (əl'ə-mänd', -mänd', əl'ə-mänd', -mänd') n. 1. a. A stately 16th-century dance in 2/2 time. b. Music. A composition written to or as if to accompany this dance, often used as the first movement of a suite. 2. A lively, late 18th-century dance in 3/4 time. [French, feminine of allemand, German, from Latin Alemanni, an ancient Germanic tribe. See ALEMANNI.]

Al·len (əl'ən), Ethan. 1738-1789. American Revolutionary soldier whose troops, the Green Mountain Boys, helped capture Fort Ticonderoga from the British (1775).

Al·len (əl'ən), Fred. 1894-1956. American humorist famous for his dry, satirical work in vaudeville, radio, and early television.

Al·len (əl'ən), Frederick Lewis. 1890-1954. American editor and historian noted for his editorship of Harper's (1941-1953) and his books of social history, including The Big Change (1952).

Al·len (əl'ən), Grace Ethel Cecile Rosalie. Known as “Gracie.” 1906-1964. American comedienne best remembered as the confused but unflappable foil to her husband and stage partner, George Burns.

Al·len (əl'ən), Richard. 1760-1831. American religious leader and the first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church (1816-1831).

Al·len (əl'ən), William. 1532-1594. English Roman Catholic cardinal who directed the work on the Douay Bible.

Al·len (əl'ən), Woody. Born 1935. American comic actor, writer, and filmmaker whose films include Annie Hall (1977), which won two Academy Awards.

Al·len·by (ăl'ən-bē), First Viscount Title of Edmund Henry Hynman. 1861-1936. British field marshal noted for his military successes in the Middle East during World War I.

Al·len·de Gos·sens (ä-yən'dā gô'səns), Salvador. 1908-1973. Chilean politician who as president (1970-1973) was considered the first democratically elected Marxist head of government. He was killed in a coup d'état.

Allen Park (ăl'ən pārk) A city of southeast Michigan, a suburb of Detroit. Population, 31,092.

Al·len·ti·ac (ə-lən'tē-āk') n. pl. Allentiac or Al·len·ti·acs. 1. A member of a South American Indian people inhabiting west-central Argentina. 2. The extinct language of the Allentiac. [Spanish alentiaco.] —Al·len'ti·ac' adj.

Al·len·town (ăl'ən-toun') A city of eastern Pennsylvania north-northwest of Philadelphia. Founded in 1762, the city is an industrial and commercial center. Population, 105,090.

al·ler·gen (ăl'ər-jən) n. A substance, such as pollen, that causes an allergy. [German Allergen : Allergie, allergy; see ALLERGY + -gen, -gen.] —al'ler·gen'ic (-jən'ik) adj.

al·ler·gic (ə-lûr'jĭk) adj. 1. Of, characterized by, or caused by an allergy: an allergic reaction to airborne pollen. 2. Having an allergy: allergic children; highly allergic to penicillin. 3. Informal. Having a dislike; averse: allergic to work.

al·ler·gist (ăl'ər-jĭst) n. A physician specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of allergies.

al·ler·gy (ăl'ər-jē) n. pl. al·ler·gies. 1. An abnormally high sensitivity to certain substances, such as pollens, foods, or microorganisms. Common indications of allergy may include sneezing, itching, and skin rashes. 2. Informal. An adverse sentiment; antipathy: an allergy to cocktail parties. [German Allergie : Greek allos, other; see ALLO- + Greek ergon, action; see werg- in Appendix.]

al·le·thrin (ăl'ə-thrĭn') n. A synthetic clear or amber-colored viscous insecticide, C₁₉H₂₆O₃, similar to pyrethrin. [ALL(YL) + (PYR)ETHRIN.]

al·le·vi·ate (ə-lē'vē-āt') v. tr. al·le·vi·at·ed, al·le·vi·at·ing, al·le·vi·ates. To make (pain, for example) more bearable: a drug that alleviates cold symptoms. See Synonyms at relieve. [Late Latin alleviāre, alleviāt-, to lighten : Latin ad-, ad- + levis, light; see leg^wh- in Appendix.] —al·le'vi·a'tion n. —al·le'vi·a'tor n.

al·le·vi·a·tive (ə-lē'vē-ā'tĭv) also al·le·vi·a·to·ry (-ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Reducing pain or severity; palliative: alleviative treatment for an incurable disease.

al·ley¹ (ăl'ē) n. pl. al·leys. 1. A narrow street or passageway between or behind city buildings. 2. A path between flower beds or trees in a garden or park. 3. A straight, narrow course or track; a lane: an alley for lawn bowling. 4. Sports. Either of the parallel lanes at the sides of a tennis court, which widen the inbounds area for doubles play. —idiom. up (one's) alley. Informal. Compatible with one's interests or qualifications: an assignment that is right up your alley. [Middle English alei, from Old French alee, from aller, to walk, from Latin ambulāre. See AMBULATE.]

al·ley² (äl'ē) n. pl. al·leys. Games. A large playing marble, often used as the shooter. [Short for ALABASTER.]

alley cat (äl'ē kăt) n. A homeless or stray cat.

alley crop·ping (äl'ē kröp'ing) n. A method of planting in which rows of a crop are sown between rows or hedges of nitrogen-fixing plants, the roots of which enrich the soil.

alley light (äl'ē līt) n. A searchlight mounted on the side or top of a police patrol car or other such motor vehicle, used for sideways illumination.

al·ley·way (äl'ē-wā') n. A narrow passage between buildings.

all-fired (ôl'fīrd') adv. Informal. Used as an intensive: Don't be so all-fired aggressive. [Alteration of hell-fired.]

All Fools' Day (ôl fōolz dā) n. See April Fools' Day.

all fours (ôl fōrz) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb). Games. Any of several card games resembling whist and in which points are scored in four ways: for the high trump, the low trump, the jack of trumps, and the game.

all get-out also all get out (ôl gět'out') n. Informal. The utmost degree that is possible or even imaginable: "It's snowing like all get-out up here" (Hans Thorner).

all hail (ôl hāl) interj. Used to express acclamation, a welcome, or a greeting.

All·hal·low·mas (ôl'hăl'ō-məs) n. Archaic. 1. All Saints' Day. 2. The feast observed on All Saints' Day. [Middle English Alhalwemesse, from Old English ealra hālgena mæsse: ealra, genitive pl. of eall, all; see ALL + hālgena, genitive pl. of hālgā, saint (from hālig, holy); see HOLY + mæsse, Mass; see MASS.]

All·hal·lows (ôl'hăl'ōz) n. See All Saints' Day. [Middle English al halwes: al, all; see ALL + halwes, pl. of halwe, saint; see ALLHALLOWMAS.]

all-heal or all·heal (ôl'hēl') n. Any of several plants, such as the self-heal or the valerian, once thought to have broad healing powers.

al·li·a·ceous (äl'ē-ā'shəs) adj. Of or resembling onion, garlic, or similar plants of the genus Allium, particularly in taste and smell. [Latin allium, garlic + -ACEOUS.]

al·li·ance (ə-lī'əns) n. 1. a. A close association of nations or other groups, formed to advance common interests or causes: an alliance of labor unions opposing the bill. b. A formal agreement establishing such an association, especially an international treaty of friendship. 2. A connection based on kinship, marriage, or common interest; a bond or tie: the shifting alliances within a large family. 3. Close similarity in nature or type; affinity: the ancient alliance between mathematics and music. 4. The act of becoming allied or the condition of being allied:

the church, acting in alliance with community groups. [Middle English, from Old French aliance, from alier, to ally. See ALLY.]

Al·li·ance (ə-lī'əns) A city of northeast Ohio southwest of Youngstown. It was settled by Quakers in 1805. Population, 23,376.

al·lied (ə-līd', əl'id') adj. 1. Joined or united in a close relationship: allied tribes. 2. Of a similar nature; related: city planning and allied studies. 3. Allied. Of or relating to the Allies: the Allied invasion of southern Italy.

Al·lier (ä-lyā') A river rising in south-central France and flowing about 410 km (255 mi) northward past Vichy to the Loire River.

al·li·ga·tor (əl'i-gā'tər) n. 1. Either of two large reptiles, Alligator mississippiensis of the southeast United States or A. sinensis of China, having sharp teeth and powerful jaws. They differ from crocodiles in having a broader, shorter snout. 2. Leather made from the hide of one of these reptiles. 3. A tool or fastener having strong, adjustable, often toothed jaws. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an alligator pond; an alligator handbag. [Alteration of Spanish el lagarto, the lizard : el, the (from Latin ille, that); see al-¹ in Appendix + lagarto, lizard (from Latin lacertus).]

WORD HISTORY: In The Travailes of an Englishman, published in 1568, Job Hortop says that “in this river we killed a monstrous Lagarto or Crocodile.” This killing gives rise to the first recorded instance of alligator in English, obviously in a different form from the one familiar to modern speakers. Alligator, which comes to us from Spanish el lagarto, “the lizard,” was modified in pronunciation and form in several ways before taking on the form alligator. Such changes, referred to by linguists as taboo deformation, are not uncommon in a name for something that is feared and include, for example, the change in sequence of the r and t that occurred between el lagarto and alligator. An interesting parallel case is crocodile, which appears in Spanish, for example, as cocodrilo, with a similar difference in the sequence of the r. The earliest recorded form of alligator that is similar to ours appears in Shakespeare’s Romeo and Juliet (First Folio, 1623): “In his needie shop a tortoyrs hung,/An Allegater stuff.” al·li·ga·tor·ing (əl'i-gā'tər-ɪŋ) n. The formation of cracks on the surface of paint layers. [From the resemblance of the cracks to the pattern of an alligator’s scales.]

alligator pear (əl'i-gā'tər pâr) n. See avocado (n., sense 1). [By folk etymology from American Spanish aguacate, avocado (the trees are said to grow in areas infested by alligators). See AGUACATE.]

alligator snapping turtle (əl'i-gā'tər snəp'ɪŋ tûr'tl) n. A large freshwater snapping turtle (Macrochelys temmincki) of the south-central United States, having a rough carapace and powerful hooked jaws. Also called alligator snapper alligator weed (ăl'ī-gā'tər wēd) n. An aquatic South American perennial plant (Alternanthera philoxeroides) having opposite, lance-shaped leaves and tight clusters of small whitish flowers. It is a mat-forming weed in warm, freshwater habitats, such as the southeast United States.

all-im-por-tant (ôl'im-pôr'tnt) adj. Of the greatest importance; crucial.
—all'im-por'tance n.

all-in-clu-sive (ôl'in-klōō'siv) adj. Including everything; comprehensive.

al-lit-er-ate (ə-līt'ə-rāt') v. al-lit-er-at-ed, al-lit-er-at-ing, al-lit-er-ates. —
v. intr. 1. To use alliteration in speech or writing. 2. To have or contain alliteration. — v. tr. To form or arrange with alliteration. [Back-formation from ALLITERATION.]

al-lit-er-a-tion (ə-līt'ə-rā'shən) n. The repetition of the same consonant sounds or of different vowel sounds at the beginning of words or in stressed syllables, as in “on scrolls of silver snowy sentences” (Hart Crane). [From AD- + Latin littera, letter.]

al-lit-er-a-tive (ə-līt'ə-rā'tiv, -ər-ə-) adj. Of, showing, or characterized by alliteration. —al-lit'er-a'tive-ly adv. —al-lit'er-a'tive-ness n.

al-li-um (ăl'ē-əm) n. Any of numerous, usually bulbous plants of the genus Allium in the lily family, having long stalks bearing clusters of variously colored flowers and including many ornamental and food plants, such as onions, leeks, chives, garlic, and shallots. [Latin allium, garlic.]

all-night (ôl'nīt') adj. 1. Continuing all through the night: an all-night party. 2. Open all during the night: an all-night diner.

all night-er or all-night-er (ôl'nī'tər) n. Informal. A project or event lasting all through the night.

al-lo abbr. Allegro.

allo- or all- pref. 1. Other; different: allopatric. 2. Isomeric: allocholesterol. [Greek, from allos, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.]

al-lo-an-ti-bod-y (ăl'ō-ăn'tī-bōd'ē) n. See isoantibody.

al-lo-an-ti-gen (ăl'ō-ăn'tī-jən) n. See isoantigen.

al-lo-cate (ăl'ə-kāt') v. tr. al-lo-cat-ed, al-lo-cat-ing, al-lo-cates. 1. To set apart for a special purpose; designate: allocate a room to be used for storage. 2. To distribute according to a plan; allot: allocate rations for a week-long camping trip. [Medieval Latin allocāre, allocāt-: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin locāre, to place (from locus, place).] —al'lo-ca-ble (-kə-bəl) adj. —al'lo-ca'tion n.

SYNONYMS: allocate, appropriate, designate, earmark. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to set aside for a specified purpose”: allocated time for recreation; appropriated funds for public education; designated a location for the new hospital; money earmarked for a vacation. See also Synonyms at assign

- al·lo·cu·tion (ăl'ə-kyōō'shən) n. A formal and authoritative speech; an address. [Latin allocūtiō, allocūtiōn-, from allocūtus, past participle of alloquī, to speak to : ad-, ad- + loquī, to speak; see talk^{w-} in Appendix.]
- al·log·a·my (ə-lŏg'ə-mē) n. Biology. See cross-fertilization (n., sense 1).
- al·lo·ge·ne·ic (ăl'ə-jə-nē'ik) also al·lo·gen·ic (-jĕn'ik) adj. Being genetically different although belonging to or obtained from the same species: alogeneic tissue grafts. [ALLO- + Greek genea, race; see genə- in Appendix + -IC.]
- al·lo·graft (ăl'ə-grăft') n. A graft of tissue obtained from a donor genetically different from, though of the same species as the recipient. Also called homograft
- al·lo·graph (ăl'ə-grăf') n. 1. A variant shape of a letter. 2. A letter or combination of letters that can represent one phoneme, as f and gh can represent the phoneme /f/. 3. Writing, especially a signature, made by one person for another.
- al·lom·er·ism (ə-lŏm'ə-rĭz'əm) n. Consistency in crystalline form with variation in chemical composition. —al·lom'er·ous adj.
- al·lom·e·try (ə-lŏm'ĭ-trē) n. The study of the change in proportion of various parts of an organism as a consequence of growth. —al'lo·met'ric (ăl'ə-mĕt'rik) adj.
- al·lo·morph¹ (ăl'ə-môrf') n. See paramorph. —al'lo·mor'phic adj.
—al'lo·mor'phism n.
- al·lo·morph² (ăl'ə-môrf') n. Any of the variant forms of a morpheme. For example, the phonetic s of cats, z of dogs, and iz of horses and the en of oxen are allomorphs of the English plural morpheme. [ALLO- + MORPH(EME).]
—al'lo·mor'phic adj. —al'lo·mor'phism n.
- al·lo·nym (ăl'ə-nĭm') n. The name of a person, usually a historical person, assumed by a writer. [French allonyme Greek allos, other; see ALLO- + Greek onoma, name; see ONOMATOPOEIA.] —al·lon'y·mous (ə-lŏn'ə-məs) adj.
—al·lon'y·mous·ly adv.
- al·lo·path (ăl'ə-păth') also al·lop·a·thist (ə-lŏp'ə-thĭst) n. One who practices or advocates allopathy.
- al·lop·a·thy (ə-lŏp'ə-thē) n. A method of treating disease with remedies that produce effects different from those caused by the disease itself. [German Allopathie : Greek allos, other; see ALLO- + Greek patheia, suffering; see -PATHY.]
—al'lo·path'ic (ăl'ə-păth'ik) adj. —al'lo·path'i·cal·ly adv.
- al·lo·pat·ric (ăl'ə-păt'rik) adj. Ecology. Occurring in separate, nonoverlapping geographic areas. Often used of populations of related organisms unable to cross-breed because of geographic separation. [ALLO- + Greek patra, fatherland (from patēr, father); see pater- in Appendix + -IC.] —al'lo·pat'ri·cal·ly adv.
—al·lop'a·try (ə-lŏp'ə-trē) n.
- al·lo·phane (ăl'ə-fān') n. An amorphous, translucent, variously colored mineral, essentially hydrous aluminum silicate. [From Greek allophanēs, appearing otherwise : allos, other; see ALLO- + phainesthai, to appear, passive of phainein, to show; see FANTASY.]

al·lo·phone (ăl'ə-fōn') n. Linguistics. A predictable phonetic variant of a phoneme. For example, the aspirated t of top, the unaspirated t of stop, and the tt (pronounced d) of batter are allophones of the English phoneme t. [ALLO- + PHONE(ME).] —al'lo·phon'ic (-fōn'ik) adj.

al·lo·pol·y·ploid (ăl'ə-pōl'ē-ploid') adj. Having three or more complete sets of chromosomes derived from different species. — n. An organism with three or more complete sets of chromosomes derived from different species.

—al'lo·pol'y·ploi'dy n.

al·lo·pu·ri·nol (ăl'ō-pyōr'ə-nōl', -nōl', -nōl') n. A drug, C₅H₄N₄O, used to treat gout because it promotes the excretion of uric acid. [ALLO- + PURIN(E) + -OL².]

all-or-none (ôl'ər-nŭn') adj. Characterized by either a complete response or by a total lack of response or effect, as in neurological action above a threshold: “Nerve impulses follow the All or None Law—that is, a nerve impulse generated by a weak stimulus is just as strong as one generated by a strong stimulus” (Fundamentals of Biology).

all-or-noth·ing (ôl'ər-nŭth'ing) adj. 1. Involving either complete success or failure, with no intermediate result: “Downhill races are all-or-nothing events, decided on the basis of one run” (Neil Amdur). 2. Refusing to accept less than all demands; uncompromising: an all-or-nothing negotiating position.

al·lo·ster·ic (ăl'ə-stēr'ik) adj. Of or involving molecular binding to an enzyme at a site other than the enzymatically active one. —al'lo·ster'i·cal·ly adv.

—al·los'ter·y (ə-lōs'tə-rē) n.

al·lot (ə-lōt') v. tr. al·lot·ted, al·lot·ting, al·lots. 1. To parcel out; distribute or apportion: allotting land to homesteaders; allot blame. 2. To assign as a portion; allocate: allotted 20 minutes to each speaker. See Synonyms at assign.

[Middle English alotten, from Old French aloter : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + lot, portion (of Germanic origin).] —al·lot'ter n.

al·lot·ment (ə-lōt'mənt) n. 1. The act of allotting: the allotment of ration coupons. 2. Something allotted: The sailors drank their daily allotment of rum. 3. A portion of military pay that is regularly deducted and set aside, as for the payee's dependents or for insurance.

al·lo·trans·plant (ăl'ō-trăns'plănt') v. tr. al·lo·trans·plant·ed, al·lo·trans·plant·ing, al·lo·trans·plants. To transfer (an organ or body tissue) between two genetically different individuals belonging to the same species. — n. An organ or tissue transferred between genetically different individuals of the same species. —al'lo·trans'plan·ta'tion n.

al·lo·trope (ăl'ə-trōp') n. A structurally differentiated form of an element that exhibits allotropy. [Back-formation from ALLOTROPY.]

al·lot·ro·py (ə-lŏt' rə-pē) n. The existence, especially in the solid state, of two or more crystalline or molecular structural forms of an element. — al'lo-trop'ic (äl'ə-trŏp'ik, -trŏp'ik), al'lo-trop'i-cal adj. — al'lo-trop'i-cal-ly adv.

all' ot-ta·va (äl'ə-tä'və, ä'l'ō-) adv. & adj. Music. Ottava. [Italian : all', at the + ottava, octave.]

al·lot·tee (ə-lŏt' ē') n. One to whom something is allotted.

all out (ŏl out) adv. With every possible effort: worked all out to make the deadline.

all-out (ŏl'out') adj. Using all available means or resources: an all-out sprint; an all-out conservation program.

all over (ŏl ō'vər) adv. 1. Over the whole area or extent: a cloth embroidered all over with roses. 2. Everywhere: searched all over for her missing key. 3. In all respects: Carefree and fun-loving—that's him all over.

all-o-ver also all·o·ver (ŏl'ō'vər) adj. Covering an entire surface: wallpaper with an all-over pattern; an all-over tan.

all-o-vers (ŏl'ō'vərz) pl.n. Informal. A feeling of great unease or extreme nervousness.

al·low (ə-lou') v. al·lowed, al·low·ing, al·lows. — v. tr. 1. To let do or happen; permit: We allow smoking only in restricted areas. 2. To permit the presence of: No pets are allowed inside. 3. To permit to have: allow oneself a little treat. 4. To make provision for; assign: The schedule allows time for a coffee break. 5. To plan for in case of need: allow two inches in the fabric for shrinkage. 6. To grant as a discount or in exchange: allowed me 20 dollars on my old word processor. 7. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. a. To admit, grant: I allowed as how he was right. b. To suppose: "We allow he's straight" (American Speech). c. To assert: Mother allowed that we'd better come in for dinner. — v. intr. 1. To offer a possibility; admit: The poem allows of several interpretations. 2. To take a possibility into account; make allowance: In calculating profit, retailers must allow for breakage and spoilage. [Middle English allowen, to approve, permit, from Old French allouer, from Latin allaudāre, to praise (ad-, intensive pref.; see ad- + laudāre, to praise); see LAUD, and from Medieval Latin allocāre, to assign; see ALLOCATE.] — al·low'a·ble adj. — al·low'a·bly adv.

al·low·ance (ə-lou'əns) n. 1. The act of allowing. 2. An amount that is allowed or granted: finished my weekly allowance of two eggs. 3. Something, such as money, given at regular intervals or for a specific purpose: a travel allowance that covers hotel and restaurant bills. 4. A price reduction, especially one granted in exchange for used merchandise: The dealer gave us an allowance on our old car. 5. A consideration for possibilities or modifying circumstances: an allowance for breakage; made allowances for rush-hour traffic in estimating travel time. 6. An allowed difference in dimension of closely mating machine parts. — v. tr.

al·low·anced, al·low·anc·ing, al·low·anc·es. 1. To put on a fixed allowance:

cut expenses by strictly allowancing the sales representatives. 2. To dispense in fixed quantities; ration.

al·low·ed·ly (ə-lou'ɪd-lē) adv. By general admission; admittedly.

al·loy (əl'oi', ə-loi') n. 1. A homogeneous mixture or solid solution of two or more metals, the atoms of one replacing or occupying interstitial positions between the atoms of the other: Brass is an alloy of copper and zinc. 2. A mixture; an amalgam: "Television news has... always been an alloy of journalism and show business" (Bill Moyers). 3. The relative degree of mixture with a base metal; fineness. 4. Something added that lowers value or purity. — v. tr. al·loyed, al·loy·ing, al·loys (ə-loi', ə-loi'). 1. To combine (metals) to form an alloy. 2. To combine; mix: idealism that was alloyed with political skill. 3. To debase by the addition of an inferior element. [Alteration (influenced by French aloi), of obsolete allay, from Middle English alay, from Old North French allai, from allayer, to alloy, from Latin alligāre, to bind : ad-, ad- + ligāre, to bind; see leig- in Appendix.]

all·pur·pose (əl'pʊr'pəs) adj. Having many purposes or uses.

all right (əl rīt) adj. 1. a. In proper or satisfactory operational or working order: checked to see if the tires were all right. b. all-right (əl'rīt'). Informal. Satisfactory; good: an all-right fellow; an all-right movie. 2. Correct: Your answers are all right. 3. Average; mediocre: The performance was just all right, not remarkable. 4. Uninjured; safe: The passengers were shaken up but are all right. 5. Fairly healthy; well: I am feeling all right again. — adv. 1. In a satisfactory way; adequately: I held up all right under pressure. 2. Very well; yes. Used as a reply to a question or to introduce a declaration: Will you join us? All right. All right, here's the plan. 3. Without a doubt: It's cold, all right.

USAGE NOTE: All right, usually pronounced as if it were a single word, probably should have followed the same orthographic development as already and altogether. But despite its use by a number of reputable authors, the spelling alright has never been accepted as a standard variant, and the writer who chooses to risk that spelling had best be confident that readers will acknowledge it as a token of willful unconventionality rather than as a mark of ignorance.

all-round (əl'raʊnd') adj. Variant of all-around.

All Saints' Day (əl sānts dā) n. November 1, the day on which a Christian feast honoring all the saints is observed. Also called Allhallows all-seed (əl'sēd') n. Any of several plants, such as knotgrass, producing numerous seeds.

All Souls' Day (əl sōlz dā) n. Roman Catholic Church. November 2, the day on which special prayers are offered for the souls in purgatory.

all-spice (ôl'spīs') n. 1. A tropical American evergreen tree (Pimenta dioica) having opposite, simple leaves and small white flowers clustered in cymes. 2. The dried, nearly ripe berries of this plant used as a spice, especially in baking. Also called pimento all-star (ôl'stär') adj. Made up wholly of star performers: an all-star cast. — n. Sports. One chosen for a team of star players.

All-ston (ôl'stən), Washington. 1779-1843. American painter whose romantic works, such as Elijah in the Desert, often depict religious subjects.

all-ter-rain vehicle (ôl'tə-rān' vē'ī-kəl) n. Abbr. ATV A small, open motor vehicle having one seat and three or more wheels fitted with large tires. It is designed chiefly for recreational use over roadless, rugged terrain.

all the same (ôl thē sām) adv. Nevertheless: I was ill, but I finished the job all the same.

all-time (ôl'tīm') adj. Exceeding all others up to the present time: an all-time speed skating record.

all told (ôl tōld) adv. With everything considered; in all: All told, we won 100 games.

al-lude (ə-lōōd') v. intr. al-lud-ed, al-lud-ing, al-ludes. To make an indirect reference: The candidate alluded to the recent war by saying, "We've all made sacrifices." [Latin allūdere, to play with : ad-, ad- + lūdere, to play (from lūdus, game); see leid- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Allude and allusion are often used where the more general terms refer and reference would be preferable. Allude and allusion apply to indirect references in which the source is not specifically identified: "Well, we'll always have Paris," he told the travel agent, in an allusion to Casablanca. Refer and reference, unless qualified, usually imply specific mention of a source: I will refer to Hamlet for my conclusion: As Polonius says, "Though this be madness, yet there is method in't." See Usage Note at refer.

al-lure (ə-lōōr') v. al-lured, al-lur-ing, al-lures. — v. tr. To attract with something desirable; entice: Promises of quick profits allure the unwary investor. — v. intr. To be highly, often subtly attractive: charms that still allure. — n. The power to attract; enticement. [Middle English aluren, from Old French alurer : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + loirre, bait (of Germanic origin).] — al-lure'ment n. — al-lur'er n. — al-lur'ing-ly adv.

al-lu-sion (ə-lōō'zhən) n. 1. The act of alluding; indirect reference: Without naming names, the candidate criticized the national leaders by allusion. 2. An instance of indirect reference: an allusion to classical mythology in a poem. See Usage Note at allude. [Late Latin allūsiō, allūsiōn-, a playing with, from Latin allūsus, past participle of allūdere, to play with. See ALLUDE.]

al·lu·sive (ə-lōō'sīv) adj. Containing or characterized by indirect references: an allusive speech. — al·lu'sive·ly adv. — al·lu'sive·ness n.

al·lu·vi·a (ə-lōō'vē-ə) n. A plural of alluvium.

al·lu·vi·al (ə-lōō'vē-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or found in alluvium: alluvial soil; alluvial gold.

alluvial fan (ə-lōō'vē-əl fän) n. A fan-shaped accumulation of alluvium deposited at the mouth of a ravine or at the juncture of a tributary stream with the main stream.

al·lu·vi·on (ə-lōō'vē-ən) n. 1. See alluvium. 2. The flow of water against a shore or bank. 3. Inundation by water; flood. 4. Law. The increasing of land area along a shore by deposited alluvium or by the recession of water. [Latin alluviō, alluviōn-, from alluere, to wash against : ad-, ad- + -luere, to wash; see leu(ə)- in Appendix.]

al·lu·vi·um (ə-lōō'vē-əm) n. pl. al·lu·vi·ums or al·lu·vi·a (-vē-ə). Sediment deposited by flowing water, as in a riverbed, flood plain, or delta. Also called alluvion [Medieval Latin, flood, from neuter of Latin alluvius, alluvial, from alluere, to wash against. See ALLUVION.]

al·ly (ə-lī', əl'ī) v. al·lied, al·ly·ing, al·lies. — v. tr. 1. To place in a friendly association, as by treaty: Italy allied itself with Germany during World War II.

2. To unite or connect in a personal relationship, as in friendship or marriage.

— v. intr. To enter into an alliance: Several tribes allied to fend off the invaders.

— n. pl. al·lies. 1. One that is allied with another, especially by treaty: entered the war as an ally of France. 2. One in helpful association with another: legislators who are allies on most issues. See Synonyms at partner. 3. Allies. a.

The nations allied against the Central Powers of Europe during World War I. They were Russia, France, Great Britain, and later many others, including the United States. b. The nations, primarily Great Britain, France, the Soviet Union, and the United States, allied against the Axis during World War II. [Middle English allien, from Old French alier, from Latin alligāre, to bind to. See ALLOY.]

al·lyl (əl'lī) n. The univalent, unsaturated organic radical C₃H₅. [Latin allium, garlic + -YL (so called because it was first obtained from garlic).] — al·lyl'ic (əl'lī'ik) adj.

alm abbr. Alarm.

Al·ma (əl'mə) A city of south-central Quebec, Canada, on the Saguenay River. There are granite quarries in the area. Population, 26,322.

Al·ma·A·ta (əl'mə-ä'tə, əl-mä'ə-tä') The capital of Kazakhstan, in the south-east near the Chinese border south of Lake Balkash. The city was founded in the 1850's as a fort and trading center. Population, 1,068,000.

Al·ma·gest (əl'mə-jěst') n. 1. A comprehensive treatise on astronomy, geography, and mathematics compiled by Ptolemy about A.D. 150. 2. almagest. Any of several medieval treatises concerned with astronomy or alchemy. [Middle al·ma ma·ter or Al·ma Ma·ter (äl'mə mä'tər, ä'l'mə) n. 1. The school, college, or university that one has attended. 2. The anthem of an institution of higher learning. [Latin alma, nourishing + mater, mother.]

English almageste, from Old French, from Arabic al-majisti : al, the + Greek megistē (suntaxis), greatest (composition), feminine of megistos, greatest superlative of megas, great; see meg- in Appendix.]

al·ma·nac (ôl'mə-näk', ä'l'-) n. 1. An annual publication including calendars with weather forecasts, astronomical information, tide tables, and other related tabular information. 2. An annual publication composed of various lists, charts, and tables of information in one field or many unrelated fields. [Middle English almenak, from Medieval Latin almanach, perhaps from Late Greek almenikhiaka, ephemeris.]

Al Ma·nam·ah (äl' mə-näm'ə, mə-) See Manama.

al·man·dine (äl'mən-dēn') also al·man·dite (-dīt') n. A deep violet-red garnet, FeAl₂Si₃O₁₂, found in metamorphic rocks and used as a gemstone. [Alteration of obsolete alabandyne, from Middle English alabandine, from Late Latin (gemma) alabandina, (gem) of Alabanda, from Alabanda, a town of ancient Asia Minor.]

Al·ma·Tad·e·ma (äl'mə-täd'ə-mə), Sir Lawrence. 1836-1912. Dutch-born British painter noted for his romantic works of classical Greek and Roman and ancient Egyptian scenes.

Al·mei·da (äl-mā'də), Francisco de. 1450?-1510. Portuguese colonial administrator who was the first viceroy of the Portuguese possessions in India (1505-1509).

Al·me·lo (äl'mə-lō') A city of eastern Netherlands near the German border. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 62,941.

al·me·mar (äl-mē'mär) n. Judaism. See bema (n., sense 1). [Hebrew 'almēmār, from Arabic al-minbar, the pulpit.]

Al·me·rí·a (äl'mə-rē'ə, ä'l'mě-) A city of southeast Spain on the Gulf of Almería, an arm of the Mediterranean Sea. Probably founded by Phoenicians, the city is a thriving port. Population, 149,310.

al·might·y (ôl-mī'tē) adj. 1. Having absolute power; all-powerful: almighty God. 2. Informal. Great; extreme: an almighty din. — adv. Informal. Used as an intensive: almighty scared. — n. also Almighty God. Used with the. [Middle English almighti, from Old English ealmihtig : eall, all; see ALL + mihtig, mighty (from miht, might); see MIGHT¹.] — al·might'·i·ly adv.

Al·mi·ran·te Brown (äl'mī-rän'tē broun, ä'l'mē-rän'-tē) A city of eastern Argentina, a suburb of Buenos Aires. It was founded in 1873 by families fleeing a yellow fever epidemic in Buenos Aires. Population, 326,856.

al·mond (ä'mənd, äm'ənd) n. 1. a. A deciduous tree (Prunus dulcis), native to Asia and northern Africa and having alternate, simple leaves, pink flowers, and leathery fruits. b. The ellipsoidal kernel of this tree, either eaten as a nut or used for extraction of an oil for flavoring. 2. Any of several other plants, such as the Indian almond, especially those with fruits or seeds suggestive of the almond.

3. Something having the oval form of an almond. 4. Color. A pale tan. [Middle English almande, from Old French, from Late Latin amandula, alteration of Latin amygdala, from Greek amugdalē.]

al·mo·ner (äl'mə-nər, ä'mə-) n. 1. One who distributes alms. 2. Chiefly British. A hospital social worker. [Middle English aumonier, from Old French aumonnier, from amosne, alms, from Late Latin eleēmosyna, alms. See ALMS.]

al·most (ôl'mōst', ôl-mōst') adv. Slightly short of; not quite; nearly: almost time to go; almost asleep; almost finished. See Usage Note at none. [Middle English, from Old English ealmāst: eall, all; see ALL + māst, most; see MOST.]

alms (ämz) pl.n. Money or goods given as charity to the poor. [Middle English almes, from Old English ælmesse, from Late Latin eleēmosyna, from Greek eleēmosunē, from eleēmōn, pitiful, from eleos, pity.]

alms·house (ämz'hous') n. A poorhouse.

alms·man (ämz'mən) n. One dependent on alms for support.

al·ni·co (äl'nī-kō') n. Any of several hard, strong alloys of iron, aluminum, nickel, cobalt and sometimes copper, niobium, or tantalum, used to make strong permanent magnets. [AL(UMINUM) + NI(CKEL) + CO(BALT).]

al·o·ca·sia (äl'ə-kā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. Any of various tropical Asian aroids of the genus Alocasia, grown as ornamentals for their large heart-shaped or arrowhead-shaped leaves. [New Latin, probably alteration of Colocasia, from Greek kolokasia, lotus root.]

al·oe (äl'ō) n. 1. Any of various chiefly African plants of the genus Aloe, having rosettes of succulent, often spiny-margined leaves and long stalks bearing yellow, orange, or red tubular flowers. 2. See aloe vera. 3. aloes. (used with a sing. verb). A laxative drug obtained from the processed juice of a certain species of aloe. In this sense, also called bitter aloes [Middle English, from Old English aluwe, from Latin aloē, from Greek.] — al'·o·et'ic (äl'ō-ēt'ik) adj.

aloe ver·a (äl'ō vēr'ə, vīr'ə) n. 1. A species of aloe (Aloe vera) native to the Mediterranean region. 2. The mucilaginous juice or gel obtained from the leaves of this plant, widely employed in cosmetic and pharmaceutical preparations for its soothing and healing properties. Also called aloe [Latin aloē, aloe plant + vera, true.]

a·loft (ə-lôft', ə-löft') adv. 1. In or into a high place; high or higher up.

2. Nautical. At or toward the upper rigging. — prep. On or above: birds perching aloft telephone wires. [Middle English, from Old Norse ā lopt: ā, in; see an- in Appendix + lopt, air.]

a·log·i·cal (ā-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. Beyond or outside the bounds of logic.

— a·log'·i·cal·ly adv. — a·log'·i·cal·ness n.

a·lo·ha (ə-lō'ə, -hə, ä-lō'ä', -hä') interj. Chiefly Hawaii. Used as a traditional greeting or farewell. [Hawaiian.]

al·o·in (äl'ō-īn) n. A bitter, yellow crystalline compound obtained from the aloe and used as a laxative. [ALO(E) + -IN.]

a·lone (ə-lōn') adj. 1. Being apart from others; solitary. 2. Being without anyone or anything else; only. 3. Considered separately from all others of the same class. 4. Being without equal; unique. — adv. 1. Without others: sang alone while the choir listened. 2. Without help: carried the suitcases alone.

3. Exclusively; only: The burden of proof rests on the prosecution alone. [Middle English : al, all; see ALL + one, one; see ONE.] — a·lone/ness n.

SYNONYMS: alone, lonely, lonesome, solitary. These adjectives are compared as they describe lack of companionship. Alone emphasizes being apart from others but does not necessarily imply unhappiness: “I am never less alone, than when I am alone” (James Howell). Lonely often connotes painful awareness of being alone: “No doubt they are dead,’ she thought, and felt... sadder and... lonelier for the thought” (Ouida). Lonesome emphasizes a plaintive desire for companionship: “You must keep up your spirits, mother, and not be lonesome because I’m not at home” (Charles Dickens). Solitary often shares the connotations of lonely and lonesome: “Only solitary men know the full joys of friendship” (Willa Cather). Frequently, however, it stresses physical isolation that is self-imposed: She thoroughly enjoyed her solitary dinner.

a·long (ə-lōng', ə-lōng') prep. 1. Over the length of: walked along the path.

2. On a line or course parallel and close to; continuously beside: rowed along the shore; the trees along the avenue. 3. In accordance with: The committee split along party lines over the issue. — adv. 1. Forward; onward: We drove along, admiring the view. Farther along, we passed a hitchhiker. 2. As a companion: Bring your friend along. 3. In accompaniment or association; together: packed an atlas along with other books. See Usage Note at together. 4. With one; at hand: Luckily, I had my camera along. Our guests should be along soon. 5. Informal. Advanced to some degree: getting along in years. [Middle English, from Old English andlang, extending opposite : and-, facing; see ant- in Appendix + lang, long; see LONG¹.]

a·long·shore (ə-lōng'shōr', -shōr', ə-lōng'-) adv. Along, near, or by the shore.

a·long·side (ə-lōng'sīd', ə-lōng'-) adv. Along, near, at, or to the side: stood with a bodyguard alongside; honked and drove up alongside. — prep. By the side of; side by side with.

USAGE NOTE: In its prepositional use alongside may optionally be accompanied by of: The barge lay alongside, or alongside of, the pier.

A·lon·so (ə-lŏn'zō, ä-lôn'sō), Alicia. Born c. 1921. Cuban ballerina and choreographer best known for her performances in Giselle and Agnes De Mille's Fall River Legend.

a·loof (ə-lōof') adj. Distant physically or emotionally; reserved and remote: stood apart with aloof dignity. — adv. At a distance but within view; apart. [A⁻² + LUFF, windward part of a ship (obsolete).] — a·loof'ly adv. — a·loof'ness n.

al·o·pe·cia (äl'ə-pē'shə, -shē-ə) n. Loss of hair; baldness. [Latin alōpecia, fox-mange, from Greek alōpekia, from alōpēx, fox. See wlp-ē- in Appendix.] — al'o·pe'cic (-pē'sik) adj.

A·lost (ä-lōst') See Aalst.

a·loud (ə-loud') adv. 1. With use of the voice; orally: Read this passage aloud.

2. In a loud tone; loudly: crying aloud for help.

alp (älp) n. 1. A high mountain. 2. A very large mound or mass. [Back-formation from the Alps.]

ALPA abbr. Air Line Pilots Association.

al·pac·a (äl-päk'ə) n. pl. alpaca or al·pac·as. 1. A domesticated South American mammal (Lama pacos), related to the llama and having fine, long wool.

2. a. The silky wool of this mammal. b. Cloth made from alpaca. c. A coat made of this cloth. 3. A glossy cotton or rayon and wool fabric. [American Spanish, from Aymara allpaca.]

al·pen·glow (äl'pən-glō') n. A rosy glow that suffuses snow-covered mountain peaks at dawn or dusk on a clear day. [Partial translation of German Alpenglühen : Alpen, Alps + glühen, to glow.]

al·pen·horn (äl'pən-hôrn') n. A curved wooden horn, sometimes as long as 6 meters (approximately 20 feet), used by herders in the Alps to call cows to pasture. [German : Alpen, Alps + Horn, horn from Middle High German, from Old High German. See ker-1 in Appendix.]

al·pen·stock (äl'pən-stök') n. A long staff with an iron point, used by mountain climbers. [German Alpenstock : Alpen, Alps + Stock, staff (from Middle High German stoc, from Old High German).]

al·pes·trine (äl-pēs'trīn) adj. Growing at high altitudes; alpine or subalpine. [From Medieval Latin alpestris, from Latin Alpēs, the Alps.]

al·pha (äl'fə) n. 1. The first letter of the Greek alphabet. 2. The first one; the beginning. 3. Chemistry. The first position from a designated carbon atom in an organic molecule at which an atom or radical may be substituted. 4. Astronomy. The brightest or main star in a constellation. 5. The mathematical estimate of the return on a security when the return on the market as a whole is zero. Alpha is derived from a in the formula $R_i = a + bR_m$, which measures the return on a security (R_i) for a given return on the market (R_m) where b is beta. — adj. 1. First in order of importance. 2. Chemistry. Closest to the functional group of atoms in an organic molecule. 3. Alphabetical. [Greek, from Canaanite 'alp, ox.]

al·pha·ad·re·ner·gic (ăl'fə-ăd'rə-nûr'jĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or being an alpha-receptor.

alpha-adrenergic blocking agent (ăl'fə-ăd'rə-nûr'jĭk blŏk'ĭng ā'jənt) n. See alpha-blocker.

alpha-adrenergic receptor (ăl'fə-ăd'rə-nûr'jĭk rĭ-sĕp'tər) n. See alpha-receptor.

alpha and omega (ăl'fə ənd ō-mĕg'ə) n. 1. The first and the last: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord" (Revelation 1:8).

2. The most important part.

al·pha·bet (ăl'fə-bĕt', -bĭt) n. 1. The letters of a language, arranged in the order fixed by custom. 2. A system of characters or symbols representing sounds or things. 3. The basic or elementary principles; rudiments. [Middle English alphabete, from Latin alphabētum, from Greek alphabētos : alpha, alpha; see ALPHA + bēta, beta; see BETA.]

al·pha·bet·i·cal (ăl'fə-bĕt'ĭ-kəl) also al·pha·bet·ic (-bĕt'ĭk) adj. 1. Arranged in the customary order of the letters of a language. 2. Of, relating to, or expressed by an alphabet. —al'pha·bet'ĭ·cal·ly adv.

al·pha·bet·ize (ăl'fə-bĭ-tĭz') v. tr. al·pha·bet·ized, al·pha·bet·iz·ing, al·pha·bet·iz·es. 1. To arrange in alphabetical order. 2. To supply with an alphabet. —al'pha·bet'ĭ·za'tion (-bĕt'ĭ-zā'shən) n. —al'pha·bet·iz'er n.

al·pha·block·er (ăl'fə-blŏk'ər) n. Physiology. A drug that opposes the excitatory effects of norepinephrine released from sympathetic nerve endings at alpha receptors and that causes vasodilation and a decrease in blood pressure. Also called alpha-adrenergic blocking agent

Al·pha Cen·tau·ri (ăl'fə sĕn-tŏr'ē) n. A multiple star in Centaurus whose three components represent the brightest object in the constellation, 4.4 light-years from Earth.

Alpha Cru·cis (ăl'fə krŏō'sĭs) n. A double star in the constellation Southern Cross.

alpha decay (ăl'fə dĭ-kā') n. The radioactive decay of an atomic nucleus by emission of an alpha particle.

al·pha·fe·to·pro·tein (ăl'fə-fĕ'tŏ-prŏ'tĕn, -tĕ-ĭn) n. Abbr. AFP An antigen produced in the liver of a fetus that can appear in certain diseases of adults, such as liver cancer. Its level in amniotic fluid can be used in the detection of certain fetal abnormalities, including Down syndrome and spina bifida.

alpha globulin (ăl'fə glŏb'yə-lĭn) n. A type of globulin in blood plasma that exhibits great colloidal mobility in electrically charged neutral or alkaline solutions.

alpha helix (ăl'fə hĕ'lĭks) n. A common structure of proteins, characterized by a single, spiral chain of amino acids stabilized by hydrogen bonds. —al'pha·hel'ĭ·cal (ăl'fə-hĕl'ĭ-kəl, hĕ'lĭ-) adj.

al·pha·mer·ic (ăl'fə-mēr'ik) adj. Variant of alphanumeric.

al·pha·naph·thol (ăl'fə-năf'thōl, -thōl, -năp'-) n. An isomeric form of naphthol, $C_{10}H_7OH$, occurring as colorless or yellow prisms or powder, used in making dyes and perfumes and in organic synthesis.

al·pha·nu·mer·ic (ăl'fə-nōō-mēr'ik, -nyōō-) also al·pha·mer·ic (-fə-mēr'ik) adj. 1. Consisting of both letters and numbers. 2. Consisting of or utilizing alphabetic and numerical symbols and punctuation marks, mathematical symbols, and other conventional symbols: an alphanumeric code. [ALPHA(BETIC) + NUMERIC(AL).] —al'pha·nu·mer'i·cal adj. —al'pha·nu·mer'i·cal·ly adv.

alpha particle (ăl'fə pâr'tī-kəl) n. A positively charged particle, indistinguishable from a helium atom nucleus and consisting of two protons and two neutrons.

alpha privative (ăl'fə prīv'ə-tīv) n. The prefix a- or an- before vowels, used in Greek and in English words borrowed from Greek to express absence or negation.

alpha ray (ăl'fə rā) n. A stream of alpha particles or a single high-speed alpha particle.

al·pha·re·cep·tor (ăl'fə-rī-sĕp'tər) n. A site in the autonomic nervous system in which excitatory responses occur when adrenergic agents, such as norepinephrine and epinephrine, are released. Activation of alpha-receptors causes various physiological reactions, including the stimulation of associated muscles and the constriction of blood vessels. Also called alpha-adrenergic receptor alpha rhythm (ăl'fə rīth'əm) n. A pattern of smooth, regular electrical oscillations in the human brain that occur when a person is awake and relaxed. As recorded by the electroencephalograph, alpha rhythms have a frequency of 8 to 13 hertz. Also called alpha wave

Al·phen aan den Rijn (ăl'fən ən dĕn rīn') A city of southwest Netherlands northeast of Rotterdam. It has metalworking industries. Population, 54,560.

Al·phe·us (ăl'fē'əs) A river of the Peloponnesus in southern Greece flowing about 113 km (70 mi) to the Ionian Sea.

al·pine (ăl'pīn') adj. 1. Alpine. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the Alps or their inhabitants. 2. Of or relating to high mountains. 3. Biology. Living or growing on mountains above the timberline: alpine plants. 4. Sports. a. Intended for or concerned with mountaineering. b. Alpine. Of or relating to competitive downhill racing and slalom skiing events. [Middle English, from Latin Alpīnus, from Alpēs, the Alps.]

al·pin·ist also Al·pin·ist (ăl'pə-nīst) n. Sports. A mountain climber.
—al'pin·ism n.

Alps (ălps) A mountain system of south-central Europe, about 805 km (500 mi) long and 161 km (100 mi) wide, curving in an arc from the Riviera on the Mediterranean Sea through northern Italy and southeast France, Switzerland, southern Germany, Austria, and along the Adriatic coast into Albania. The highest peak is Mont Blanc, 4,810.2 m (15,771 ft), on the French-Italian border.

al·read·y (ôl-rĕd'ē) adv. 1. By this or a specified time; before: The children were already asleep when we got home. 2. So soon: Are you quitting already? 3. Non-Standard. Used as an intensive: Be quiet already. Enough already. [Middle English alredi : al, all; see ALL + redi, ready; see READY.]

al·right (ôl-rīt') adv. Non-Standard. All right: "Alright, it might be fun to hunt tigers" (Carl Icahn). See Usage Note at all right.

ALS abbr. Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

a.i.s. or A.L.S. abbr. Autograph letters, signed.

Al·sace (ăl-sās', -sās') A region and former province of eastern France between the Rhine River and the Vosges Mountains. Along with neighboring Lorraine, it was annexed by Germany in 1871 after the Franco-Prussian War and returned to France by the Treaty of Versailles (1919).

Al·sa·tian (ăl-sā'shən) adj. Of or relating to Alsace or to its inhabitants or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Alsace. 2. Chiefly British. A German shepherd.

Al·sek (ăl'sĕk') A river of northwest Canada and southeast Alaska flowing about 418 km (260 mi) to the Pacific Ocean.

al·sike clover (ăl'sīk' klō'vər) n. A perennial European clover (Trifolium hybridum) with whitish or pink flowers, naturalized over much of North America and grown as a pasture and hay plant. [After Alsike, near Uppsala in eastern Sweden.]

Al·sip (ôl'sĭp) A village of northeast Illinois, a suburb of Chicago. Population, 18,227.

al·so (ôl'sō) adv. 1. In addition; besides. 2. Likewise; too: If you will stay, I will also. — conj. And in addition: It's a pretty cat, also friendly. [Middle English, from Old English ealswā : eall, all; see al⁻³ in Appendix + swā, so; see so¹.]

SYNONYMS: also, too, likewise, besides, moreover, furthermore. These adverbs indicate the presence of or introduce something additional. The first three generally imply that the additional element or consideration is equal in weight to what precedes it. Also is more formal in tone than too: He is gentle, but he is also capable of fierce intellectual combat. If you buy a car, you'll need a parking place, too. Likewise is even more formal than also and may imply similarity between elements as well as equality: You forgot to mention that her parents were likewise going to attend the ceremony. Besides often introduces an element that reinforces what has gone before: I don't feel like cooking; besides, there's no food in the house. Moreover and furthermore frequently stress the importance of what is to come: The cellar was dark and forbidding; moreover, I knew a family of mice had nested there. I don't want you to go; furthermore, I forbid it.

USAGE NOTE: Also is sometimes held to be inappropriate when used to begin a sentence, as in The warranty covers all power-train components. Also, participating dealers back their work with a free lifetime service guarantee. This example was acceptable to 63 percent of the Usage Panel, however.

Al·sop (ôl'səp, ôl'-), Joseph Wright, Jr. 1910-1989. American journalist who with his brother Stewart (1914-1974) wrote the syndicated column "Matter of Fact" (1945-1958).

al·so·ran (ôl'sō-răn') n. 1. A horse that does not win, place, or show in a race. 2. A loser in a competition, as in an election: "had enough support to place him in the middle of the also-rans" (George F. Will). 3. One that has little talent or success: just an also-ran in the art world.

al·stroe·me·ri·a (ăl'strə-mîr'ē-ə) n. Any of several South American perennial herbs of the genus Alstroemeria, popular as cut flowers for their showy, variously colored blooms. [New Latin, genus name, after Baron Clas Alstroemer (1736-1794), Swedish naturalist.]

alt (ălt) Music. adj. Pitched in the first octave above the treble staff; high. — n. 1. The first octave above the treble staff. 2. A note or tone in the alt octave. [Latin altus, high. See al² in Appendix.]

alt. abbr. 1. Alteration. 2. Alternate. 3. Altitude.

Alta. abbr. Alberta.

Al·ta Cal·i·for·nia (ăl'tə kăl'î-fôr'nyə, -fôr'nē-ə) Also Up·per California (ÿp'ər) The Spanish possessions along the Pacific coast north of the peninsula of Baja California. Early maps of the area often depicted California as an island. When this misconception was corrected in the 18th century, the peninsula came to be called Baja California and the rest of the mainland, Alta California.

Al·ta·de·na (ăl'tə-dē'nə) An unincorporated community of southern California at the foot of the San Gabriel Mountains near Pasadena. It is mainly residential. Population, 42,658.

Al·ta·ic (ăl-tā'îk) n. A language family of Europe and Asia that includes the Turkic, Tungusic, and Mongolian subfamilies. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the Altai Mountains. 2. Of or relating to Altaic.

Al·tai Mountains or Al·tay Mountains (ăl'tî' moun'tənz) A mountain system of central Asia, mostly in eastern Kazakhstan and south-central Russia but also extending into western Mongolia and northern China. It rises to 4,508.8 m (14,783 ft).

Al·tair (ăl-tîr', -târ', ăl'tîr', -târ') n. A very bright, variable, double star in the constellation Aquila, approximately 15.7 light-years from Earth. [Arabic an-nasr aṭ-ṭā'ir: an-nasr, the eagle (al, the + nasr, eagle) + aṭ-ṭā'ir (al, the + ṭā'ir, flying).]

Al·ta·ma·ha (ôl'tə-mə-hô') A river of southeast Georgia formed by the confluence of the Oconee and Ocmulgee rivers and flowing about 220 km (137 mi) generally east-southeast to Altamaha Sound, an inlet of the Atlantic Ocean.

Al·ta·mi·ra (äl'tə-mîr'ə, ä'l'tä-mē'rä) A group of caverns of northern Spain west-southwest of Santander. The caves contain magnificent specimens of Paleolithic art discovered in 1879.

Al·ta·mont (äl'tə-mönt') An unincorporated community of southern Oregon, a suburb of Klamath Falls. Population, 18,591.

Al·ta·monte Springs (äl'tə-mönt' sprîngz) A city of east-central Florida, a residential suburb of Orlando. Population, 34,879.

Al·ta·mu·ra (äl'tə-mōor'ə, ä'l'tä-) A city of southeast Italy at the foot of the Apennines south-southwest of Bari. It is a rail junction and processing center. Population, 51,328.

al·tar (ôl'tər) n. 1. An elevated place or structure before which religious ceremonies may be enacted or upon which sacrifices may be offered. 2. A structure, typically a table, before which the divine offices are recited and upon which the Eucharist is celebrated in Christian churches. [Middle English auter, from Old English altar, and Old French auter both from Latin altāre.]

altar boy (ôl'tər boi) n. An attendant to an officiating cleric in the performance of a liturgical service; an acolyte.

altar call (ôl'tər kôl) n. A specified time at the end of a Protestant service when worshipers may come forward to make or renew a profession of faith. Regional. Also called invitation al·tar·piece (ôl'tər-pēs') n. A piece of artwork, such as a painting or carving, that is placed above and behind an altar.

altar rail (ôl'tər rāl) n. A railing in front of the altar that separates the chancel from the rest of a church.

Al·tay Mountains (äl'tī' moun'tənz) See Altai Mountains.

alt·az·i·muth (äl-tăz'ə-məth) n. 1. A mounting for astronomical telescopes that permits both horizontal and vertical rotation. 2. A telescope having such a mounting. [ALT(ITUDE) + AZIMUTH.]

Alt·dorf (äl'tôrf) A town of central Switzerland near the southeast tip of the Lake of Lucerne. A statue commemorates the legendary exploits of William Tell, marking the spot where he supposedly shot an apple off his son's head. Population, 8,200.

Al·ten·burg (äl'tən-bûrg', -böörk') A city of east-central Germany south of Leipzig. It was built on the site of early ninth-century Slavic fortifications. Population, 54,999.

al·ter (ôl'tər) v. al·tered, al·ter·ing, al·ters. — v. tr. 1. To change or make different; modify: altered my will. 2. To adjust (a garment) for a better fit. 3. To castrate or spay (an animal, such as a cat or a dog). — v. intr. To change or become different. [Middle English alteren, from Old French alterer, from Medieval Latin alterāre, from Latin alter, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.]

Al·ter (ôl'tər, ôl'-), David. 1807-1881. American physicist, physician, and inventor noted for his work in spectroscopy.

al·ter·a·ble (ôl'tər-ə-bəl) adj. That can be altered: alterable clothing; alterable conditions of employment. —al'ter·a·bil'i·ty, al'ter·a·ble·ness n.
—al'ter·a·bly adv.

al·ter·a·tion (ôl'tə-rā'shən) n. Abbr. alt. 1. The act or procedure of altering.
2. The condition resulting from altering; modification.

al·ter·a·tive (ôl'tə-rā'tiv, -tər-ə-tiv) adj. 1. Tending to alter or produce alteration. 2. Medicine. Tending to restore to normal health. — n. Medicine. A treatment or medication that restores health.

al·ter·cate (ôl'tər-kāt') v. intr. al·ter·cat·ed, al·ter·cat·ing, al·ter·cates. To argue or dispute vehemently; wrangle. [Latin altercārī, altercāt-, to quarrel, from alter, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.]

al·ter·ca·tion (ôl'tər-kā'shən) n. A vehement quarrel.

alter ego (ôl'tər ē'gō) n. 1. Another side of oneself; a second self. 2. An intimate friend or a constant companion. [Latin : alter, other + ego, I, self.]

al·ter·nar·i·a (ôl'tər-nâr'ē-ə, ăl'-) n. Any of various fungi in the genus Alternaria, many of which cause plant diseases, chiefly blights and leaf spots. [New Latin, genus name, from Latin alternus, alternate. See ALTERNATE.]

al·ter·nate (ôl'tər-nāt', ăl'-) v. al·ter·nat·ed, al·ter·nat·ing, al·ter·nates.
— v. intr. 1. To occur in successive turns: showers alternating with sunshine.

2. To pass back and forth from one state, action, or place to another: alternated between happiness and depression. — v. tr. 1. To do or execute by turns. 2. To cause to follow in turns; interchange regularly. — adj. (-nit) 1. Happening or following in turns; succeeding each other continuously: alternate seasons of the year. See Usage Note at alternative. 2. Designating or relating to every other one of a series: alternate lines. 3. Serving or used in place of another; substitute: an alternate plan. 4. Botany. a. Arranged singly at each node, as leaves or buds on a stem. b. Arranged regularly between other parts, as stamens between petals.

— n. (-nit) Abbr. alt. 1. A person acting in the place of another; a substitute.

2. An alternative. [Latin alternāre, alternāt-, from alternus, by turns, from alter, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.] —al'ter·nate·ly adv. —al'ter·nate·ness n.

al·ter·nate angle (ôl'tər-nīt äng'gəl, ăl'-) n. Mathematics. One of a pair of nonadjacent angles on opposite sides of a transversal that cuts two lines. The angles are both exterior or both interior to the two lines.

alternate host (ôl'tər-nāt' hōst) n. 1. One of two species of host on which some pathogens, such as certain rust fungi, must develop to complete their life cycles. 2. A species of host other than the principal host on which a parasite can survive.

al·ter·nat·ing current (ôl'tər-nā'tīŋg kûr'ənt, ăl'-) n. Abbr. ac, AC An electric current that reverses direction in a circuit at regular intervals.

al·ter·na·tion (ôl'tər-nā'shən, ăl'-) n. Successive change from one thing or state to another and back again.

alternation of generations (ôl'tər-nā'shən ïv jən'ə-rā'shənz) n. The regular alternation of forms or of mode of reproduction in the life cycle of an organism, such as the alternation between diploid and haploid phases, or between sexual and asexual reproductive cycles. Also called metagenesis, xenogenesis.

al·ter·na·tive (ôl-tûr'nə-tīv, ăl'-) n. 1. a. The choice between two mutually exclusive possibilities. b. A situation presenting such a choice. c. Either of these possibilities. See Synonyms at choice. 2. Usage Problem. One of a number of things from which one must be chosen. — adj. 1. Allowing or necessitating a choice between two or more things. 2. a. Existing outside traditional or established institutions or systems: an alternative lifestyle. b. Espousing or reflecting values that are different from those of the establishment: an alternative newspaper; alternative greeting cards. — al·ter'na·tive·ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: Some traditionalists hold that alternative should be used only in situations where the number of choices involved is exactly two, because of the word's historical relation to Latin alter, “the other of two.” H.W. Fowler, among others, has considered this restriction a fetish. The Usage Panel is evenly divided on the issue, with 49 percent accepting the sentence Of the three alternatives, the first is the least distasteful. • Alternative is also sometimes used to refer to a variant or substitute in cases where there is no element of choice involved, as in We will do our best to secure alternative employment for employees displaced by the closing of the factory. This sentence is unacceptable to 60 percent of the Usage Panel. • Alternative should not be confused with alternate. Correct usage requires The class will meet on alternate (not alternative) Tuesdays.

alternative school (ôl-tûr'nə-tīv skōōl) n. A school that is nontraditional, especially in educational ideals, methods of teaching, or curriculum.

al·ter·na·tor (ôl'tər-nā'tər, ăl'-) n. An electric generator that produces alternating current.

al·the·a also al·thae·a (ăl-thē'ə) n. 1. See rose of Sharon (n., sense 1). 2. See hollyhock. [Latin, mallows, from Greek althaia, from althainein, to heal. See al⁻² in Appendix.]

alt·horn (ălt'hôrn') or Alt·horn n. Music. Any of several upright, valved brass wind instruments used especially in bands. [German : alt, alto (from Italian alto); see ALTO + Horn, horn from Middle High German, from Old High German. See ker⁻¹ in Appendix.]

al-though also al-tho (ôl-thô') conj. Regardless of the fact that; even though. [Middle English : al, all; see ALL + though, though; see THOUGH.]

USAGE NOTE: As conjunctions, although and though are generally interchangeable: Although (or though) she smiled, she was angry. Although is usually placed at the beginning of its clause (as in the preceding example), whereas though may occur elsewhere and is the more common term when used to link words or phrases, as in wiser though poorer, or in constructions such as Fond though (not although) I am of opera, I'd rather not sit through the Ring cycle this weekend.

al-tim·e-ter (äl-tim'ĩ-tər) n. An instrument for determining elevation, especially an aneroid barometer used in aircraft that senses pressure changes accompanying changes in altitude. [Latin altus, high; see al⁻² in Appendix + -METER.] —al'ti-met'ric (äl'tə-mět'rik) adj. —al-tim'e-try n.

al-ti-pla-no (äl'tĩ-plä'nō) n. pl. al-ti-pla-nos. A high plateau, as in the Andean regions of Bolivia, Peru, and Argentina. [American Spanish : Latin altus, high; see al⁻² in Appendix + Latin planum, plain; see PLANE¹.]

al-ti-tude (äl'tĩ-tōod', -tyōod') n. Abbr. alt. 1. The height of a thing above a reference level, especially above sea level or above the earth's surface. See Synonyms at elevation. 2. A high location or area. 3. Astronomy. The angular distance of a celestial object above the horizon. 4. The perpendicular distance from the base of a geometric figure to the opposite vertex, parallel side, or parallel surface. 5. High position or rank. [Middle English, from Latin altitudō, from altus, high. See al⁻² in Appendix.] —al'ti-tu'di-nal (-tōod'n-əl, -tyōod'-) adj.

altitude sickness (äl'tĩ-tōod' sĭk'nĭs) n. A collection of symptoms, including shortness of breath, headache, and nosebleed, brought on by decreased oxygen in the atmosphere, such as that encountered at high altitudes.

al-to (äl'tō) n. pl. al-tos. Abbr. A. Music. 1. A low, female singing voice; a contralto. 2. A countertenor. 3. The range between soprano and tenor. 4. A singer whose voice lies within this range. 5. An instrument that sounds within this range. 6. A vocal or instrumental part written for a voice or an instrument within this range. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an alto flute; an alto balalaika. [Italian, from Latin altus, high. See al⁻² in Appendix.]

alto clef (äl'tō klĕf) n. Music. The C clef positioned to indicate that the third line from the bottom of a staff represents the pitch of middle C. al-to-cu-mu-lus (äl'tō-kyōō'myə-ləs) n. A cloud formation of rounded, fleecy, white or gray masses. [Latin altus, high; see al⁻² in Appendix + CUMULUS.]

al-to-geth-er (ôl'tə-gĕth'ər) adv. 1. Entirely; completely; utterly: lost the TV picture altogether; an altogether new approach. 2. With all included or counted; all told: There were altogether 20 people at the dinner. 3. On the whole; with everything considered: Altogether, I'm sorry it happened. — n. A state of nudity.

Often used with the: in the altogether. [Middle English al togeder : al, all; see ALL + togeder, together; see TOGETHER.]

USAGE NOTE: Altogether should be distinguished from all together. All together is used of a group to indicate that its members performed or underwent an action collectively: The nations stood all together. The prisoners were herded all together. All together can be used only if it is possible to rephrase the sentence so that all and together may be separated by other words: The books lay all together in a heap. All the books lay together in a heap. Altogether should be used only when the sense could be expressed by entirely or completely.

Al·ton (ôl'tən) A city of southwest Illinois on bluffs of the Mississippi River north of St. Louis, Missouri. Lewis and Clark spent the winter of 1803-1804 just south of the site. Population, 32,905.

Al·too·na (äl-tōō'nə) A city of central Pennsylvania on the eastern slopes of the Allegheny Mountains east of Pittsburgh. It was laid out in 1849 by the Pennsylvania Railroad as a switching point for locomotives used to cross the mountains. Population, 51,881.

al·to·re·lie·vo also al·to·ri·lie·vo (äl'tō-rī-lē'vō, äl'tō-rēl-yā'vō) n. pl. al·to·re·lie·vos also al·to·ri·lie·vi (äl'tō-rēl-yā'vē). See high relief. [Italian altorlievo : alto, high; see ALTO + rilievo, relief; see BAS-RELIEF.]

al·to·stra·tus (äl'tō-strā'təs, -strät'əs) n. An extended cloud formation of bluish or gray sheets or layers. [Latin altus, high; see al-² in Appendix + STRATUS.]

al·tri·cial (äl-trīsh'əl) adj. Helpless, naked, and blind when hatched: altricial birds. [From Latin altrix, altrīc- feminine of altōr, nourisher, from alere, to nourish. See al-² in Appendix.]

al·tru·ism (äl'trōō-iz'əm) n. Unselfish concern for the welfare of others; selflessness. [French altruisme, probably from Italian altrui, someone else, from Latin alter, other. See al-¹ in Appendix.] —al'tru·ist n. —al'tru·is'tic adj. —al'tru·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

Al·tus (äl'təs) A city of southwest Oklahoma near the Texas border southwest of Oklahoma City. It is a trade center in a farming region. Population, 21,910.

Al U·bay·yid (äl' ōō-bā'īd) also El O·beid (ël' ō-bād') A city of central Sudan southwest of Khartoum. Founded in the 1820's, it is an important transshipment center. Population, 140,000.

al·u·la (äl'yə-lə) n. pl. al·u·lae (-lē'). A small joint in the middle of a bird's wing, homologous with the thumb and bearing three or four quill-like feathers. Also called bastard wing, spurious wing. [New Latin, diminutive of Latin āla, wing.] —al'u·lar (-lər) adj.

al·um (äl'əm) n. Any of various double sulfates of a trivalent metal such as aluminum, chromium, or iron and a univalent metal such as potassium or sodium, especially aluminum potassium sulfate, $\text{AlK}(\text{SO}_4)_2 \cdot 12\text{H}_2\text{O}$, widely used in industry as clarifiers, hardeners, and purifiers and medicinally as topical astringents and styptics. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin alūmen.]

a·lu·mi·na (ə-lōō'mə-nə) n. Any of several forms of aluminum oxide, Al_2O_3 , occurring naturally as corundum, in a hydrated form in bauxite, and with various impurities as ruby, sapphire, and emery, used in aluminum production and in abrasives, refractories, ceramics, and electrical insulation. Also called aluminum oxide [New Latin alūmina, from Latin alūmen, alūmin-, alum.]

a·lu·mi·nate (ə-lōō'mə-nāt', -nīt) n. A chemical compound containing aluminum as part of a negative ion.

a·lu·mi·nifer·ous (ə-lōō'mə-nīf'ər-əs) adj. Containing or yielding aluminum, alumina, or alum. [Latin alūmen, alūmin-, alum + -ferous.]

al·u·min·i·um (äl'yə-mīn'ē-əm) n. Chiefly British. Variant of aluminum.

a·lu·mi·nize (ə-lōō'mə-nīz') v. tr. a·lu·mi·nized, a·lu·mi·niz·ing, a·lu·mi·niz·es. To coat or cover with aluminum or aluminum paint.

a·lu·mi·nous (ə-lōō'mə-nəs) adj. Of, relating to, or containing aluminum or alum.

a·lu·mi·num (ə-lōō'mə-nəm) n. Symbol Al A silvery-white, ductile metallic element, the most abundant in the earth's crust but found only in combination, chiefly in bauxite. Having good conductive and thermal properties, it is used to form many hard, light, corrosion-resistant alloys. Atomic number 13; atomic weight 26.98; melting point 660.2°C; boiling point 2,467°C; specific gravity 2.69; valence 3. [ALUMIN(A) + -(I)UM.]

aluminum oxide (ə-lōō'mə-nəm ɔk'sīd') n. See alumina.

aluminum plant (ə-lōō'mə-nəm plānt) n. A succulent herb (Pilea cadierei) often grown as a houseplant for its silver-colored leaves.

aluminum sulfate (ə-lōō'mə-nəm sŭl'fāt') n. A white crystalline compound, $\text{Al}_2(\text{SO}_4)_3$, used chiefly in papermaking, water purification, sanitation, and tanning.

a·lum·na (ə-lŭm'nə) n. pl. a·lum·nae (-nē'). A woman graduate or former student of a school, college, or university. See Usage Note at alumnus. [Latin, feminine of alumnus, pupil. See ALUMNUS.]

a·lum·nus (ə-lŭm'nəs) n. pl. a·lum·ni (-nī'). A male graduate or former student of a school, college, or university. [Latin, pupil, from alere, to nourish. See al-² in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The fact that the plural alumni of the masculine alumnus differs from the plural alumnae of the feminine alumna has created a certain amount of awkwardness with the advent of coeducational institutions. Most commonly, alumni is used for graduates of both sexes. But those who object to the choice of masculine forms in such cases may prefer the phrase alumni and alumnae or the form alumnae/i; this is the choice, for example, of many women's colleges that have begun to admit men.

Al·um·Rock (äl'əm rök) An unincorporated community of west-central California, a planned residential suburb of San Jose. Population, 17,471.

al·um·root (äl'əm-rōōt', -rōōt') n. Any of various North American perennials of the genus Heuchera having palmately lobed basal leaves and leafless stalks bearing numerous small greenish, white, or reddish flowers.

al·u·nite (äl'yə-nīt') n. A gray mineral, chiefly $K_2Al_3(OH)_6(SO_4)_3$, used in making alum and fertilizer. [French, from alun, alum, from Latin alūmen.]

Al·va (äl'və, älvä) also Al·ba (äl'bə), Duke of Title of Fernando Álvarez de Toledo. 1508-1582. Spanish general and colonial administrator of the Netherlands (1567-1573).

Al·va·ra·do (äl'və-rä'dō, älvä-rä'thō), Pedro de. 1485-1541. Spanish general and colonial administrator who took part in the conquest of Mexico and became governor of Guatemala (1530).

Al·va·rez (äl'və-rěz'), Luis Walter. 1911-1988. American physicist. He won a 1968 Nobel Prize for his study of subatomic particles.

Ál·va·rez·Quin·te·ro (äl'vä-réth' kēn-tě'rō), Serafin. 1871-1938. Spanish dramatist who collaborated with his brother Joaquín (1873-1944) on nearly 200 plays, which helped revitalize Spanish theater in the 20th century.

al·ve·o·lar (äl-vē'ə-lər) adj. 1. Of or relating to an alveolus. 2. Anatomy.

a. Relating to the jaw section containing the tooth sockets: the alveolar ridge.

b. Relating to the alveoli of the lungs. 3. Linguistics. Formed with the tip of the tongue touching or near the inner ridge of the gums of the upper front teeth, as the English t, d, and s. — n. Linguistics. An alveolar sound. —al·ve'·o·lar·ly adv.

al·ve·o·late (äl-vē'ə-līt) adj. Having a honeycombed surface. —al·ve'·o·la·tion (-lā'shən) n.

al·ve·o·lus (äl-vē'ə-ləs) *n. pl. al·ve·o·li (-lī'). 1. A small angular cavity or pit, such as a honeycomb cell. 2. A tooth socket in the jawbone. 3. A tiny, thin-walled, capillary-rich sac in the lungs where the exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide takes place. In this sense, also called air sac [Latin, small hollow, diminutive of alveus, a hollow, from alvus, belly.]*

Al·vin (äl'vīn) A city of southeast Texas south of Houston. It is chiefly residential. Population, 19,220.

al·ways (ôl'wāz, -wīz, -wēz) adv. 1. At all times; invariably: always late. 2. For all time; forever: They will always be friends. 3. At any time; in any event: You can always resign if you're unhappy. [Middle English alweis: alwei, always (from Old English ealne weg: ealne, accusative of eall, all; see all + weg, way); see wegh- in Appendix + -es, adv. suff.; see -s³.]

Al-yce clover or al-yce clover (äl'is klō'vər) n. A tropical Asiatic herb (Alysicarpus vaginalis) with alternate, simple leaves and reddish flowers, grown as a pasture and hay crop and naturalized in Florida and the West Indies. [Probably by folk etymology from New Latin Alysicarpus (vaginalis), genus name : Greek halusis, chain; see wel⁻² in Appendix + Greek karpos, fruit; see -CARP.]

a-lys-sum (ə-lis'əm) n. 1. See sweet alyssum. 2. Any of various chiefly Mediterranean weeds or ornamentals of the genus Alyssum in the mustard family, having racemes of white or yellow flowers. Also called madwort 3. See hoary alyssum. [New Latin Alyssum, genus name, from Latin alysson, kind of madder, from Greek alusson, a plant believed to cure rabies : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + lussa, rabies; see wɪk^{wo-} in Appendix.]

Alz-heim-er's disease (älts'hī-mərz dī-zēz', ältz'-, ôltz'-, ôlz'hī-mərs) n. A disease marked by progressive loss of mental capacity resulting from degeneration of the brain cells. [After Alois Alzheimer (1864-1915), German neurologist.]

am¹ (äm) v. First person singular present indicative of be. [Middle English, from Old English eom. See es- in Appendix.]

am² or AM abbr. Amplitude modulation.

Am¹ The symbol for the element americium.

Am² abbr. Bible. Amos.

Am. abbr. America; American.

A.M. abbr. 1. Airmail. 2. Or A.M.. Latin. Anno mundi (in the year of the world). 3. Also a.m. or A.M.. Ante meridiem. See Usage Note at ante meridiem. 4. Latin. Artium magister (Master of Arts).

AMA also A.M.A. abbr. American Medical Association.

A-ma-do (ə-mä'dō), Jorge. Born 1912. Brazilian writer whose novels concern social injustice.

A-ma-ga-sa-ki (ä'mə-gä-sä'kē) A city of southern Honshu, Japan, on Osaka Bay. It is a port, an industrial center, and a suburb of Osaka. Population, 509,115.

a-mah also a-ma (ä'mə, ä'mä) n. A housemaid, especially a wet nurse, in India and the Far East. [Portuguese ama, nurse, from Medieval Latin amma, mother.]

Am-a-lek-ite (äm'ə-lék'-it', ə-mäl'ī-kīt') n. A member of an ancient nomadic people of Canaan said in the Old Testament to be descendants of Esau's grandson Amalek. [Hebrew 'āmālēqî, from 'āmālēq, Amalek.]

a-mal-gam (ə-mäl'gəm) n. 1. Any of various alloys of mercury with other metals, as with tin or silver. 2. A combination of diverse elements; a mixture: an amalgam of strength, reputation, and commitment to ethical principles. See Synonyms at mixture. [Middle English, from Old French amalgame, from Medieval Latin amalgama, probably ultimately from Greek malagma, soft mass.]

a-mal-ga-mate (ə-mäl'gə-māt') v. a-mal-ga-mat-ed, a-mal-ga-mat-ing, a-mal-ga-mates. — v. tr. 1. To combine into a unified or integrated whole; unite. See Synonyms at mix. 2. To mix or alloy (a metal) with mercury. — v.

intr. 1. To become combined; unite. 2. To unite or blend with another metal.

—a·mal'ga·ma'tive adj. —a·mal'ga·ma'tor n.

a·mal·ga·ma·tion (ə-mäl'gə-mā'shən) n. 1. The act of amalgamating or the condition resulting from this act. 2. A consolidation or merger, as of several corporations. 3. The production of a metal alloy of mercury.

Am·al·the·a (äm'əl-thē'ə) n. The satellite of Jupiter that is fourth in distance from the planet. [Latin Amalthēa, nymph who nursed the infant Jupiter with goat's milk, from Greek Amaltheia.]

a·man·dine (ä'mən-dēn', äm'ən-) adj. Prepared or garnished with almonds: swordfish amandine. [French, from amande, almond, from Old French almande. See ALMOND.]

am·a·ni·ta (äm'ə-nī'tə, -nē'-) n. Any of various mushrooms in the genus Amanita, many of which are extremely poisonous. [New Latin Amanīta, genus name, from Greek amanitai, a fungus.]

a·man·ta·dine (ə-män'tə-dēn') n. An antiviral drug, C₁₀H₁₇N·HCl, also used in the treatment of Parkinson's disease. [Alteration of adamantane, a hydrocarbon + -INE².]

a·man·u·en·sis (ə-män'yoō-ēn'sis) n. pl. a·man·u·en·ses (-sēz). One who is employed to take dictation or to copy manuscript. [Latin āmanuēnsis, from the phrase (servus) ā manū, (slave) at handwriting : ā, ab, by; see AB⁻¹ + manū, ablative of manus, hand; see man⁻² in Appendix.]

am·a·ranth (äm'ə-ränth') n. 1. Any of various annuals of the genus Amaranthus having dense green or reddish clusters of tiny flowers and including several weeds, ornamentals, and food plants. 2. An imaginary flower that never fades. 3. Color. A deep reddish purple to dark or grayish, purplish red. 4. A dark red to purple azo dye. [New Latin amaranthus, genus name, alteration of Latin amarantus, from Greek amarantos, unfading : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + marainein, to wither; see mer- in Appendix.]

am·a·ran·thine (äm'ə-rän'thīn, -thīn') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling the amaranth. 2. Eternally beautiful and unfading; everlasting. 3. Color. Deep purple-red.

am·a·relle (äm'ə-rēl') n. A type of sour cherry having pale red fruit and colorless or nearly colorless juice. [German, from Medieval Latin amarellum, from Latin amārus, bitter.]

am·a·ret·to (äm'ə-rēt'ō) n. pl. am·a·ret·tos. An Italian liqueur flavored with almond. [Italian, diminutive of amaro, bitter, from Latin amārus.]

Am·a·ril·lo (äm'ə-rīl'ō, -rīl'ə) A city of northern Texas in the Panhandle north of Lubbock. The city grew after the coming of the railroad in 1887 and the discovery of gas (1918) and oil (1921). Population, 157,615.

am·a·ryl·lis (äm'ə-rīl'īs) n. 1. Any of several chiefly tropical American bulbous plants of the genus Hippeastrum grown as ornamentals for their large, showy, funnel-shaped, variously colored flowers that are grouped in umbels. 2. See belladonna lily. 3. Any of several similar or related plants. 4. Amaryllis. Used in classical pastoral poetry as a conventional name for a shepherdess. [New Latin Amaryllis, genus name, from Latin, name of a shepherdess, from Greek Amarullis.]

a·mass (ə-mäs') v. tr. a·massed, a·mass-ing, a·mass-es. To gather together for oneself, as for one's pleasure or profit; accumulate: amassed a fortune. See Synonyms at gather. [Middle English, to accumulate, from Old French amasser, to assemble : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + masser, to gather together (from Latin massa, lump, mass); see MASS.] —a·mass'a·ble adj. —a·mass'er n. —a·mass'ment n.

am·a·teur (äm'ə-tûr', -tər, -ə-choör', -chər, -työör') n. 1. Abbr. a., A. A person who engages in an art, a science, a study, or an athletic activity as a pastime rather than as a profession. 2. Abbr. a., A. Sports. An athlete who has never participated in competition for money. 3. One lacking the skill of a professional, as in an art. — adj. 1. Abbr. a., A. Of, relating to, or performed by an amateur. 2. Abbr. a., A. Made up of amateurs. 3. Not professional; unskillful. [French, from Latin amātor, lover, from amāre, to love.] —am'a·teur·ism n.

SYNONYMS: amateur, dabbler, dilettante, tyro. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “one engaging in a pursuit but lacking professional skill”: a musician who is a gifted amateur, not a professional; a dabbler in the graphic arts; a sculptor but a mere dilettante; a tyro in the art of writing poetry.

ANTONYM: professional

WORD HISTORY: When Mrs. T.W. Atkinson remarked in her 1863 Recollections of the Tartar Steppes and their Inhabitants, “I am no amateur of these melons,” she used amateur in a sense unfamiliar to us. That sense, “a lover, an admirer,” is, however, clearly descended from the senses of the word's ultimate Latin source, amātor, “lover, devoted friend, devotee, enthusiastic pursuer of an objective,” and from its immediate Latin-derived French source, amateur, with a similar range of meanings. First recorded in English in 1784 with the sense in which Mrs. Atkinson used it, amateur is found in 1786 with a meaning more familiar to us, “a person who engages in an art, for example, as a pastime rather than as a profession,” a sense that had already developed in French. Given the limitations of doing something as an amateur, it is not surprising that the word is soon after recorded in the disparaging sense we still use to refer to someone who lacks professional skill or ease in performance.

am·a·teur·ish (äm'ə-tûr'ish, -choör'-, -työör'-) adj. Characteristic of an amateur; not professional. —am'a·teur'ish·ly adv. —am'a·teur'ish·ness n.

A·ma·ti (ä-mä'tē) n. pl. A·ma·tis. Music. A violin made by Nicolò Amati or the members of his family.

A·ma·ti (ä-mä'tē), Nicolò or Nicola. 1596-1684. Italian violin maker who taught his craft to Stradivari and Guarneri.

am·a·tive (äm'ə-tiv) adj. Inclined toward love; amorous. [Medieval Latin amātivus, capable of love, from amātus, past participle of Latin amāre, to love.]
—am'a-tive'ly adv. —am'a-tive'ness n.

am·a·tol (äm'ə-tôl', -tôl') n. A highly explosive mixture of ammonium nitrate and trinitrotoluene. [From AM(MONIUM) + (TRINITRO)TOL(UENE).]

am·a·to·ry (äm'ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, or expressive of love, especially sexual love. [Latin amātōrius, from amātor, lover. See AMATEUR.]

am·au·ro·sis (äm'ô-rô'sis) n. Total loss of vision, especially when occurring without pathological changes to the eye. [Greek amaurōsis, from amauros, dark.]
—am'au-rot'ic (-rôt'ik) adj.

a·maze (ə-māz') v. tr. a·mazed, a·maz·ing, a·maz·es. 1. To affect with great wonder; astonish. See Synonyms at surprise. See Regional note at possum.

2. Obsolete. To bewilder; perplex. — n. Amazement; wonder. [From Middle English masen, to bewilder, and from amased, bewildered (from Old English āmasod) both from Old English āmasian, to bewilder : ā-, intensive pref. + masian*, to confuse.] —a·maz'ed·ly (ə-mā'zid-lē) adv. —a·maz'ed·ness n.

a·maze·ment (ə-māz'mənt) n. 1. A state of extreme surprise or wonder; astonishment. 2. Obsolete. Bewilderment; perplexity.

Am·a·zon (äm'ə-zôn', -zən) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A member of a nation of women warriors reputed to have lived in Scythia. 2. Often amazon. A tall, aggressive, strong-willed woman. [Middle English, from Latin Amāzōn, from Greek, probably of Iranian origin.]

Am·a·zo·ni·a (äm'ə-zō'nē-ə) The vast basin of the Amazon River in northern South America. It remains largely unpopulated and undeveloped, especially in the interior.

Am·a·zo·ni·an (äm'ə-zō'nē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to the Amazon River or to Amazonia. 2. Characteristic of or resembling an Amazon. 3. Often amazonian. Strong and aggressive. Used of women.

am·a·zon·ite (äm'ə-zə-nīt') n. A green variety of microcline, often used as a semiprecious stone. Also called amazon stone [After the Amazon (River).]

Amazon River (äm'ə-zōn' rīv'ər) The second-longest river in the world, flowing about 6,275 km (3,900 mi) from northern Peru across northern Brazil to a wide delta on the Atlantic Ocean. It was probably first explored by the Spanish navigator Vicente Yáñez Pinzón in 1500.

amazon stone (äm'ə-zōn' stōn) n. See amazonite.

am·bage (äm'bij) n. Archaic. 1. Often ambages. Ambiguity. 2. ambages. Winding ways or indirect proceedings. [Back-formation from Middle English ambages, equivocation, from Latin ambāges : ambi-, around; see AMBI- + agere, to drive; see ag- in Appendix.] —am·ba'gious (ăm-bā'jəs) adj.

am·ba·rel·la (ăm'bə-rĕl'ə) n. 1. A tree (Spondias cytherea) native to the Pacific islands and grown in tropical and subtropical regions for its edible fruits. 2. The orange-yellow, egg-shaped fruit of this tree, eaten fresh or pickled, or used to make preserves. Also called Otaheite apple [Sinhalese æmbarælla, from Sanskrit āmrvāṭakah, a kind of tree : āmraḥ, mango tree (from amlaḥ, tart) + vāṭakah, diminutive of vāṭaḥ, enclosure, garden; see wer-⁴ in Appendix.]

am·bas·sa·dor (ăm-bās'ə-dər, -dôr') n. 1. A diplomatic official of the highest rank appointed and accredited as representative in residence by one government or sovereign to another, usually for a specific length of time. 2. A diplomatic official heading his or her country's permanent mission to certain international organizations, such as the United Nations. 3. An authorized messenger or representative. 4. An unofficial representative: ambassadors of good will. [Middle English ambassadour, from Old French ambassadeur, from Medieval Latin ambactia, mission, from Latin ambactus, servant, ultimately of Celtic origin. See ag- in Appendix.] —am·bas'sa·do'ri·al (-dôr'ē-əl, -dôr'-) adj.

—am·bas'sa·dor·ship' n.

ambassador at large (ăm-bās'ə-dər ät lārj) n. pl. ambassadors at large.

An ambassador who is not assigned to a specific country.

am·bas·sa·dress (ăm-bās'ə-drĭs) n. Usage Problem. A woman ambassador.

See Usage Note at -ess.

Am·ba·to (ăm-bă'tō) A city of central Ecuador in a high Andean valley south of Quito. It is a commercial center and popular tourist site. Population, 100,454.

am·beer (ăm'bĭr) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. Saliva colored by tobacco chewed or held in the mouth; tobacco juice. [Alteration (influenced by BEER with reference to color and foam of the spittle), of AMBER with reference to color.]

am·ber (ăm'bər) n. 1. A hard, translucent, yellow, orange, or brownish-yellow fossil resin, used for making jewelry and other ornamental objects. 2. Color. A brownish yellow. — adj. 1. Color. Having the color of amber; brownish-yellow. 2. Made of or resembling amber: an amber necklace. [Middle English ambre, from Old French, from Medieval Latin ambra, ambar, from Arabic 'anbar, ambergris, amber.]

am·ber·gris (ăm'bər-grĭs', -grĕs') n. A waxy, grayish substance formed in the intestines of sperm whales and found floating at sea or washed ashore. It is added to perfumes to slow down the rate of evaporation. [Middle English, from Old French ambre gris : ambre, amber; see AMBER + gris, gray; see GRIZZLE.]

am·ber·jack (ăm'bər-jăk') n. pl. amberjack or am·ber·jacks. A food and game fish of the genus Seriola, native to temperate and tropical marine waters.

[AMBER + JACK, a fish.]

ambi- pref. Both: ambiversion. [Latin, around. See ambhi in Appendix.]

am·bi·ance also am·bi·ence (ăm'bē-əns, äN-byäNS') n. The special atmosphere or mood created by a particular environment: “The curriculum and intellectual ambiance are virtually identical” (Robert Kanigel). [French, from ambient, surrounding, from Latin ambiēns, ambient-. See AMBIENT.]

am·bi·dex·ter·i·ty (ăm'бі-dĕk-stĕr'ī-tē) n. 1. The state or quality of being ambidextrous. 2. Deceit or hypocrisy.

am·bi·dex·trous (ăm'бі-dĕk'strəs) adj. 1. Able to use both hands with equal facility. 2. Unusually skillful; adroit. 3. Deceptive or hypocritical. [From ambidexter, ambidextrous (archaic), from Middle English, double dealer, from Medieval Latin : Latin ambi-, on both sides; see AMBI- + Latin dexter, right-handed.]

—am'bi-dex'trous-ly adv.

am·bi·ence (ăm'bē-əns, äN-byäNS') n. Variant of ambiance.

am·bi·ent (ăm'bē-ənt) adj. Surrounding; encircling: ambient sound; ambient air. [Latin ambiēns, ambient- present participle of ambīre, to surround : ambi-, around; see AMBI- + īre, to go; see ei- in Appendix.]

am·bi·gu·i·ty (ăm'бі-gyōō'ī-tē) n. pl. am·bi·gu·i·ties. 1. Doubtfulness or uncertainty as regards interpretation: “leading a life of alleged moral ambiguity” (Anatole Broyard). 2. Something of doubtful meaning: a poem full of ambiguities.

ambiguity error (ăm'бі-gyōō'ī-tē ěr'ər) n. A gross error, usually transient, in the readout of an electronic device that is caused by imprecise synchronism, as in analog-to-digital conversion.

am·big·u·ous (ăm-bĭg'yōō-əs) adj. 1. Open to more than one interpretation: an ambiguous reply. 2. Doubtful or uncertain: “The theatrical status of her frequently derided but constantly revived plays remained ambiguous” (Frank Rich). [From Latin ambiguus, uncertain, from ambigere, to go about : ambi-, around; see AMBI- + agere, to drive; see ag- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: ambiguous, equivocal, obscure, recondite, abstruse, vague, cryptic, enigmatic. These adjectives mean lacking clarity of meaning. Ambiguous indicates the presence of two or more possible meanings: Frustrated by ambiguous instructions, the parents were never able to assemble the new toy. Something equivocal is unclear or misleading, sometimes as a result of a deliberate effort to avoid exposure of one's position: “The polling had a complex and equivocal message for potential female candidates at all levels” (David S. Broder). Obscure implies that meaning is hidden, either from lack of clarity of expression or from inherent difficulty of comprehension: Those who do not appreciate Kafka's work say his style is obscure and too complex. Recondite and abstruse connote the erudite obscurity of the scholar: “some recondite problem in historiography” (Walter Laqueur). The professor's lectures were so abstruse that students tended to avoid them. What is vague is unclear because it is expressed in indefinite form or because it reflects imprecision of thought: “Vague... forms of speech... have so long passed for mysteries of science” (John Locke). Cryptic suggests a puzzling terseness that is often intended to discourage understanding: The new insurance policy is written without cryptic or mysterious terms. Something enigmatic is mysterious, puzzling, and often challenging: I didn’t grasp the meaning of that enigmatic comment until much later.

am·bi·po·lar (ăm’bī-pō’lăr) adj. 1. Applying equally to both positive and negative ions. 2. Operating in two directions simultaneously.

am·bi·sex·u·al (ăm’bī-sĕk’shōō-əl) adj. 1. Sexually attracted to either sex indiscriminately. 2. Suited to either sex: “The patterns also are available for men because [the designer] believes in ambisexual fashion” (Women’s Wear Daily). — n. An ambisexual person or thing. — am’bi·sex’u·al’i·ty (-ăl’ī-tē) n.

am·bit (ăm’bīt) n. 1. An external boundary; a circuit. 2. Sphere or scope. See Synonyms at range. [Latin ambitus, from past participle of ambīre, to go around. See AMBIENT.]

am·bi·tion (ăm-bīsh’ən) n. 1. a. An eager or strong desire to achieve something, such as fame or power. b. The object or goal desired: Her ambition is the presidency. 2. Desire for exertion or activity; energy: had no ambition to go dancing. [Middle English ambicioun, excessive desire for honor, power, or wealth, from Old French ambition, from Latin ambitiō, ambitiōn-, from ambitus, past participle of ambīre, to go around (for votes). See AMBIENT.]

am·bi·tious (ăm-bīsh’əs) adj. 1. Full of, characterized by, or motivated by ambition. 2. Greatly desirous; eager: “I am not ambitious of ridicule” (Edmund Burke). 3. Requiring or showing much effort; challenging: an ambitious schedule. — am·bi’tious·ly adv. — am·bi’tious·ness n.

am·biv·a·lence (ăm-bīv’ə-ləns) n. 1. The coexistence of opposing attitudes or feelings, such as love and hate, toward a person, an object, or an idea.

2. Uncertainty or indecisiveness as to which course to follow. [German Ambivalenz: Latin ambi-, ambi- + Latin valentia, vigor (from valēns, valent- present participle of valēre, to be strong); see wal- in Appendix.]

am·biv·a·lent (ăm-bīv’ə-lənt) adj. Exhibiting or feeling ambivalence.

am·bi·ver·sion (ăm’bī-vûr’zhən, -shən) n. A personality trait including the qualities of both introversion and extroversion. [AMBI- + (INTRO)VERSION or (EXTRO)VERSION.] — am’bi·vert’ (-vûrt’) n.

am·ble (ăm’bəl) v. intr. am·bled, am·bling, am·bles. 1. To walk slowly or leisurely; stroll. 2. To move along at an easy gait by using both legs on one side alternately with both on the other. Used of a horse. — n. 1. An unhurried or leisurely walk. 2. An easy gait, especially that of a horse. [Middle English amblen, from Old French ambler, from Latin ambulāre, to walk.] — am’bler n.

Am·bler (ăm’blər), Eric. Born 1909. British writer noted for his suspense novels, including A Passage of Arms (1959).

am·blyg·o·nite (äm-blīg'ə-nīt') n. A white or greenish mineral, (Li,Na)Al(PO₄)(F,OH), that is an important source of lithium. [German Amblygonit, from Greek amblygōnios, obtuse-angled : amblus, blunt; see mel-¹ in Appendix + gōnia, angle; see genu-¹ in Appendix.]

am·bly·o·pi·a (äm'blē-ō'pē-ə) n. Dimness of vision, especially when occurring in one eye without apparent physical defect or disease. Also called lazy eye [New Latin, from Greek amblyōpia, from amblyōpos, dim-sighted : amblus, dim; see mel-¹ in Appendix + ōps, eye; see MYOPIA.] —am'bly·o'pic (-ō'pīk, -ōp'īk) adj.

am·bo (äm'bō') *n. pl. am·bos or am·bo·nes (äm-bō'nēz). One of the two pulpits or raised stands in early Christian churches from which parts of the service were chanted or read. [Medieval Latin, from Greek ambōn, raised edge.]*

am·boi·na (äm-boi'nə) n. Variant of amboyna.

Am·boi·na (äm-boi'nə) See Ambon.

Am·boi·nese (äm'boi-nēz', -nēs', -äm'-) n. Variant of Ambonese.

Am·boise (än-bwäz') A town of west-central France on the Loire River east of Tours. Leonardo da Vinci is said to be buried in the chapel of its Gothic chateau. Population, 10,498.

Am·bon (äm'bôn) also Am·boi·na (äm-boi'nə) An island of eastern Indonesia in the Moluccas near Ceram.

am·bo·nes (äm-bō'nēz) n. A plural of ambo.

Am·bo·nese (äm'bə-nēz', -nēs', äm'-) or Am·boi·nese (-boi-) n. pl.

Ambonese or Amboinese. 1. A native or inhabitant of Ambon. 2. The Austronesian language of Ambon.

am·boy·na also am·boi·na (äm-boi'nə) n. See padauk. [After Amboyna, (Ambon).]

am·brette (äm-brēt') n. See abelmosk. [French, from Old French, diminutive of ambre, amber. See AMBER.]

Am·brose (äm'brōz'), Saint. A.D. 340?-397. Writer, composer, and bishop of Milan (374-397) who imposed orthodoxy on the early Christian Church.

—Am·bro'sian (äm-brō'zhən) adj.

am·bro·sia (äm-brō'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. 1. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The food of the gods, thought to confer immortality. 2. Something with an especially delicious flavor or fragrance. 3. A dessert containing primarily oranges and flaked coconut. [Latin, from Greek, from ambrotos, immortal, immortalizing : a-, not; see A-¹ + -mbrotos, mortal; see mer- in Appendix.]

am·bro·sial (äm-brō'zhəl, -zhē-əl) also am·bro·sian (-zhən, -zhē-ən) adj.

1. Suggestive of ambrosia; fragrant or delicious. See Synonyms at delicious.

2. Of or worthy of the gods; divine. —am·bro'sial·ly adv.

am·bro·type (ăm'brō-tīp') n. An early type of photograph made by imaging a negative on glass backed by a dark surface. [Greek ambrotos, immortal; see AMBROSIA + TYPE.]

am·bry (ăm'brē) n. pl. am·bries. 1. Chiefly British. A pantry. 2. A niche near the altar of a church for keeping sacred vessels and vestments. [Middle English almerie, place for safekeeping, from Old French almarie, from Medieval Latin almārium, from Latin armārium, closet, from arma, tools. See ARM².]

ambs·ace (ām'zās') n. 1. Games. Double aces. 2. Bad luck; misfortune. 3. The smallest amount possible or the most worthless thing. [Middle English ambes as, from Old French, from Latin ambās ās : ambō, both + ās, unit.]

am·bu·lac·rum (ăm'byə-lăk'rəm, -lā'krəm) n. pl. am·bu·lac·ra (-lăk'rə, -lā'krə). One of the five radial areas on the undersurface of the starfish and similar echinoderms, from which the tube feet are protruded and withdrawn. [Latin, walk planted with trees, from ambulāre, to walk.] — am'bu·lac'ral adj.

am·bu·lance (ăm'byə-ləns) n. A specially equipped vehicle used to transport the sick or injured. [French, from (hôpital) ambulant, mobile (hospital), from Latin ambulāns, ambulant- present participle of ambulāre, to walk.]

ambulance chaser (ăm'byə-ləns chă'sər) n. Slang. 1. A lawyer who obtains clients by persuading accident victims to sue for damages. 2. A lawyer avid for clients.

am·bu·lant (ăm'byə-lənt) adj. Moving or walking about. [French, from Latin ambulāns, ambulant- present participle of ambulāre, to walk.]

am·bu·late (ăm'byə-lăt') v. intr. am·bu·lat·ed, am·bu·lat·ing, am·bu·lates. To walk from place to place; move about. [Latin ambulāre, ambulāt-, to walk. See ambhi in Appendix.]

am·bu·la·to·ry (ăm'byə-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or adapted for walking. 2. Capable of walking; not bedridden: an ambulatory patient. 3. Moving about. 4. Law. That can be changed or revoked, as a will during the life of the testator. — n. pl. am·bu·la·to·ries. A covered place for walking, as in a cloister. — am'bu·la·to'ri·ly adv.

am·bus·cade (ăm'bə-skād', ăm'bə-skād') n. An ambush. — v. tr.

am·bus·cad·ed, am·bus·cad·ing, am·bus·cades. To attack suddenly and without warning from a concealed place; ambush. See Synonyms at ambush. [French embuscade (from Old French embuschier, to ambush), and Old Italian imboscata, from feminine past participle of imboscare, to ambush both from Old Frankish boscu*, bush, woods.] — am'bus·cad'er n.

am·bush (ăm'bōosh) n. 1. The act of lying in wait to attack by surprise. 2. A sudden attack made from a concealed position. 3. a. Those hiding in order to attack by surprise. b. The hiding place used for this. 4. A hidden peril or trap. — v. tr. am·bush·ed, am·bush·ing, am·bush·es. To attack from a concealed position. [Middle English embush, from Old French embusche, from embuschier, to ambush, from Old Frankish boscu*, bush, woods.] —am'busch'er n.

SYNONYMS: ambush, ambuscade, bushwhack, waylay. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to attack suddenly and without warning from a place of concealment”: guerrillas ambushing a platoon of regulars; highwaymen ambuscading a stagecoach; tax collectors bushwhacked by moonshiners; a truck waylaid and its driver robbed.

Am·chit·ka (ăm-chīt'kə) n. An island off western Alaska in the Rat Islands of the western Aleutians.

a·me·ba (ə-mē'bə) n. Variant of amoeba.

am·e·bi·a·sis also am·oe·bi·a·sis (ăm'ə-bī'ə-sīs) n. An infection or a disease caused by amoebas, especially Entamoeba histolytica.

a·me·bic dysentery or a·moe·bic dysentery (ə-mē'bīk dīs'ən-tēr'ē) n. An acute disease caused by ingesting substances contaminated with the amoeba Entamoeba histolytica and characterized by severe diarrhea, nausea, and inflammation of the intestines.

a·me·bo·cyte (ə-mē'bə-sīt') n. Variant of amoebocyte.

a·me·lio·rate (ə-mēl'yə-rāt') v. tr. intr. a·me·lio·rat·ed, a·me·lio·rat·ing, a·me·lio·rates. To make or become better; improve. See Synonyms at improve. [Alteration of MELIORATE.]

a·me·lio·ra·tion (ə-mēl'yə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of ameliorating. 2. The state of being ameliorated; improvement.

a·men (ā-měn', ä-měn') interj. Used at the end of a prayer or a statement to express assent or approval. [Middle English, from Old English, from Late Latin āmēn, from Greek amēn, from Hebrew 'āmēn, certainly, verily.]

A·men also A·mon (ă'mən) n. Mythology. The Egyptian god of life and reproduction, represented as a man with a ram's head.

a·me·na·ble (ə-mē'nə-bəl, ə-měn'ə-) adj. 1. Responsive to advice, authority, or suggestion; tractable. See Synonyms at obedient. 2. Responsible to higher authority; accountable. See Synonyms at responsible. 3. Open to testing, criticism, or judgment. [Probably alteration of Middle English menable, from Old French, from mener, to lead, from Latin mināre, to drive, from minārī, to threaten, from minae, threats. See men-² in Appendix.] —a·me'na·bil'i·ty, a·me'na·ble·ness n. —a·me'na·bly adv.

amen corner (ā-měn' kôr'nər) n. 1. A place in a church reserved for persons leading congregational responses. 2. A group of ardent worshipers in a church.

a·mend (ə-mënd') v. a·mend·ed, a·mend·ing, a·mends. — v. tr. 1. To change for the better; improve: amended the earlier proposal so as to make it more comprehensive. 2. To remove the faults or errors in; correct. See Synonyms at correct. 3. To alter (a legislative measure, for example) formally by adding, deleting, or rephrasing. — v. intr. To better one's conduct; reform. [Middle English amenden, from Old French amender, from Latin ēmendāre: ex-, ex- + mendum, fault.]

a·men·da·to·ry (ə-mĕn'də-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Serving or tending to amend; corrective.

a·mend·ment (ə-mĕnd'mənt) n. 1. The act of changing for the better; improvement: "Society may sometimes show signs of repentance and amendment" (George G. Coulton). 2. A correction or an alteration, as in a manuscript.

3. a. Formal revision of, addition to, or change, as in a bill or a constitution.

b. A statement of such a change: The 19th Amendment to the Constitution gave women the right to vote.

a·mends (ə-mĕndz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Recompense for grievance or injury: The new law offers no amends to victims of crime. I assured them that no amends are necessary. You must make amends to them for the insult. See Synonyms at reparation. [Middle English amendes, from Old French, pl. of amende, reparation, from amender, to amend. See AMEND.]

A·men·ho·tep III (ä'mən-hō'tĕp, äm'ən-) also Am·e·no·phis III (äm'ə-nō'fīs) King of Egypt (1411?-1375 B.C.) who sponsored the building of many monuments.

Amenhotep IV (ä'mən-hō'tĕp) See Akhenaton.

a·men·i·ty (ə-mĕn'ī-tē, ə-mĕ'nī-) n. pl. a·men·i·ties. 1. The quality of being pleasant or attractive; agreeableness. 2. Something that contributes to physical or material comfort. 3. A feature that increases attractiveness or value, especially of a piece of real estate or a geographic location. 4. amenities. Social courtesies; pleasantries. [Middle English amenite, from Old French, from Latin amoenitās, from amoenus, pleasant.]

SYNONYMS: amenity, comfort, convenience, facility. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "something that increases physical ease or facilitates work": a sunny apartment with amenities including air conditioning; a suite with comforts such as a whirlpool bath; a kitchen with every convenience; a school with excellent facilities for students.

Am·e·no·phis III (äm'ə-nō'fəs) See Amenhotep III.

a·men·or·rhe·a or a·men·or·rhe·a (ā-mĕn'ə-rĕ'ə) n. Abnormal suppression or absence of menstruation. [A^{-1} + Greek mēn, month; see mē-² in Appendix + -RRHEA.] — a·men'or·rhe'ic adj.

a·men·sa·lism (ā-mĕn'sə-līz'əm) n. A symbiotic relationship between organisms in which one species is harmed or inhibited and the other species is unaffected. [Probably A^{-1} + (COM)MENSALISM.]

am·ent¹ (ăm'ənt, ā'mənt) n. See catkin. [Latin amentum, strap.]

a·ment² (ā'měnt', ā'mənt) n. A person whose intellectual capacity remains undeveloped. [From Latin āmēns, āment-, insane : ā-, ab-, out of; see AB⁻¹ + mēns, mind; see men⁻¹ in Appendix.]

am·en·ta·ceous (ăm'ən-tā'shəs, ā'mən-) adj. Botany. 1. Resembling or consisting of a catkin. 2. Bearing catkins.

a·men·tia (ā-měn'shə, -shē-ə) n. Insufficient mental development. [Latin amentia, madness, senselessness, from āmēns, āment-, insane. See AMENT².]

am·en·tif·er·ous (ăm'ən-tif'ər-əs, ā'mən-) adj. Botany. Bearing catkins.

Amer. abbr. America; American.

Am·er·a·sian (ăm'ə-rā'zhən, -shən) n. A person of American and Asian descent, especially one whose mother is Asian and whose father is American. [AMER(ICAN) + ASIAN.] — Am'er-a'sian adj.

a·merce (ə-mûrs') v. tr. a·merced, a·merc·ing, a·merc·es. 1. Law. To punish by a fine imposed arbitrarily at the discretion of the court. 2. To punish by imposing an arbitrary penalty. [Middle English amerçen, from Anglo-Norman amercier, from à merci, at the mercy of : à, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + merci, mercy (from Latin mercēs, wages).] — a·merce'a·ble adj. — a·merce'ment n.

A·mer·i·ca (ə-měr'ī-kə) Abbr. A., Am., Amer. 1. The United States. 2. or Also the A·mer·i·cas (-kəz) The landmasses and islands of North America, South America, Mexico, and Central America included in the Western Hemisphere.

A·mer·i·can (ə-měr'ī-kən) adj. Abbr. A., Amer. 1. Of or relating to the United States of America or its people, language, or culture. 2. Of or relating to North or South America, the West Indies, or the Western Hemisphere. 3. Of or relating to any of the Native American peoples. 4. Indigenous to North or South America. Used of plants and animals. — n. Abbr. A., Amer. 1. A native or inhabitant of America. 2. A citizen of the United States. — A·mer'ī·can·ness n.

A·mer·i·ca·na¹ (ă-měr'ī-rē-kā'nä) A city of southeast Brazil, a suburb of São Paulo. Population, 121,743.

A·mer·i·ca·na² (ə-měr'ə-kā'nə, -kăn'ə, -kā'nə) n. 1. (used with a pl. verb). Materials relating to American history, folklore, or geography or considered to be typical of American culture: Americana are featured in the exhibit. 2. (used with a sing. verb). The culture of America: Americana reflects the influence of many immigrations.

American Beauty (ə-měr'ī-kən byōō'tē) n. A type of rose bearing large, long-stemmed purplish-red flowers.

American cheese (ə-měr'ī-kən chēz) n. A smooth, mild, white to yellow cheddar.

American chestnut (ə-měr'ī-kən chēs'nüt') n. An eastern North American deciduous tree (Castanea dentata), once valuable for its timber and nuts but now found mostly as sprouts from old stumps, the aboveground parts having died from chestnut blight.

American dream also American Dream (ə-mēr'ī-kən drēm) n. An American ideal of a happy and successful life to which all may aspire: “In the deepening gloom of the Depression, the American Dream represented a reaffirmation of traditional American hopes” (Anthony Brandt).

American eagle (ə-mēr'ī-kən ē'gəl) n. See bald eagle.

American elk (ə-mēr'ī-kən ělk) n. See wapiti.

American elm (ə-mēr'ī-kən ělm) n. A North American deciduous tree (Ulmus americana) having double serrate leaves and winged fruits. It is grown chiefly as an ornamental shade tree but often dies from Dutch elm disease.

American English (ə-mēr'ī-kən ینگ'glīsh) n. The English language as used in the United States.

American Falls (ə-mēr'ī-kən fôlz) A section, 50.9 m (167 ft) high, of Niagara Falls in western New York north of Buffalo.

American foxhound (ə-mēr'ī-kən fôks'hound') n. Any of an American breed of foxhounds having drooping ears and a smooth, glossy coat that is usually black, tan, and white.

American gothic also American Gothic (ə-mēr'ī-kən gôth'ik) adj. Exceptionally conservative, hard-working, and self-disciplined: “She's tight-lipped, pinched as an American gothic farmwoman's bun” (Rita Kempley). [After the painting American Gothic by Grant Wood (1892-1942), which portrays an Iowa farmer-preacher and his daughter standing in front of a house with a Gothic window.] —American gothic, American Gothic n.

American Indian (ə-mēr'ī-kən ین'dē-ən) n. See Native American. See Usage Note at Native American.

A·mer·i·can·ism (ə-mēr'ī-kə-nīz'əm) n. 1. A custom, trait, or tradition originating in the United States. 2. A word, phrase, or idiom characteristic of English as it is spoken in the United States. 3. Allegiance to the United States and its customs and institutions.

A·mer·i·can·ist (ə-mēr'ī-kə-nīst) n. 1. One who studies a facet of America, such as its history or geology. 2. A specialist in the study of American aboriginal cultures or languages. 3. One that is sympathetic to the United States and its policies.

A·mer·i·can·ize (ə-mēr'ī-kə-nīz') v. A·mer·i·can·ized, A·mer·i·can·iz·ing, A·mer·i·can·iz·es. — v. tr. To assimilate into American culture. — v. intr. To become American, as in spirit. —A·mer'ī·can·i·za'tion (-kə-nī-zā'shən) n.

American kestrel (ə-mēr'ī-kən kēs'trəl) n. See sparrow hawk (n., sense 2).

American plan (ə-mēr'ī-kən plän) n. Abbr. AP A system of hotel management in which a guest pays a fixed daily rate for room and meals.

American Revolution (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən rĕv'ə-lōō'shən) n. The war between the American colonies and Great Britain (1775-1783), leading to the formation of the independent United States.

American saddle horse (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən sād'l hôrs) n. A three- or five-gaited high-stepping saddle horse of a breed originating in Kentucky.

American Sa-mo-a (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən sə-mō'ə) Abbr. AS An unincorporated territory of the United States in the southern Pacific Ocean northeast of Fiji comprising the eastern islands of the Samoan archipelago. American Samoa has been administered by the United States since 1899. Pago Pago, on Tutuila, the largest island of the group, is the capital. Population, 32,279.

American Sign Language (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən sĭn lāng'gwĭj) n. Abbr. ASL An American system of communication for the hearing-impaired that employs manual signs. Also called Ameslan American Spanish (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən spān'ĭsh) n. The Spanish language as used in the Western Hemisphere.

American Staf·ford·shire terrier (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən stāf'ərd-shîr' tĕr'ĕ-ər, -shər) n. A strong, muscular terrier of an American breed with powerful jaws, a broad skull, and short hair, originally developed for dogfighting. Also called pit bull, pit bull terrier, Staffordshire terrier.

American Standard Version (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kən stān'dərd vûr'zhən) n. Abbr. ASV Bible. A revised version of the King James Bible published in the United States in 1901.

A·mer·i·cas (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kəz), the. See America (sense 2).

am·er·i·ci·um (ām'ə-rĭsh'ĕ-əm) n. Symbol Am A white metallic transuranic element of the actinide series, having isotopes with mass numbers from 237 to 246 and half-lives from 25 minutes to 7,950 years. Its longest-lived isotopes, Am 241 and Am 243, are alpha-ray emitters used as radiation sources in research. Atomic number 95; specific gravity 11.7; valence 3, 4, 5, 6. [After America.]

A·mer·i·cus (ə-mĕr'ĭ-kəs) A city of southwest-central Georgia southeast of Columbus. It is a processing center for the varied resources of the region. Population, 16,120.

Am·er·in·di·an (ām'ə-rĭn'dĕ-ən) also Am·er·ind (ām'ə-rĭnd') n. See Native American. See Usage Note at Native American. [AMER(ICAN) + IND(IAN).] —Am'er-in'di-an, Am'er-ind' adj. —Am'er-in'dic adj.

A·mers·foort (ä'mərz-fōrt', -fōrt', ä'mərs-) A city of central Netherlands northeast of Utrecht. The old section of the city has medieval houses. Population, 86,896.

Ames (ānz) A city of central Iowa north of Des Moines. Iowa State University of Science and Technology (founded 1858) is here. Population, 47,198.

Am·es·lan (ām'ĭ-slān') n. See American Sign Language.

Ames test (āmz tĕst) n. A test used to determine the mutagenic potential of a substance based on the mutation rate of bacteria that are exposed to the substance. [After Bruce Ames (born 1928), American biochemist.]

am·e·thop·ter·in (ăm'ə-thŏp'tə-rĭn') n. Methotrexate. [A(MINO)- + METH- + pter(oyl), a chemical radical + -IN.]

am·e·thyst (ăm'ə-thĭst) n. 1. A purple or violet form of transparent quartz used as a gemstone. 2. A purple variety of corundum used as a gemstone.

3. Color. A moderate purple to grayish reddish purple. [Middle English amatist, from Old French, from Latin amethystus, from Greek amethystos: a-, not; see A-¹ + methustos*, intoxicated (from methuskein, to intoxicate, from methuein, to be drunk (from the belief that it was a remedy for drunkenness), from methu, wine); see medhu- in Appendix.] —am'·e·thys'tine (-thĭs'tĭn, -tĭn') adj.

am·e·tro·pi·a (ăm'ĭ-trŏ'pĕ-ə) n. An eye abnormality, such as nearsightedness, farsightedness, or astigmatism, resulting from faulty refractive ability of the eye. [Greek ametros, without measure (a-, without; see a-¹ + metron, measure); see METER¹ + -OPIA.] —am'·e·trop'ic (-trŏp'ĭk, -trŏ'pĭk) adj.

Amex abbr. American Stock Exchange.

Am·ga (ăm-gă') A river rising in eastern Russia and flowing about 1,287 km (800 mi) generally northeast to the Aldan River east of Yakutsk.

Am·gun (ăm-gŏon') A river of southeast Russia flowing about 788 km (490 mi) northeast to the Amur River.

Am·har·ic (ăm-hăř'ĭk) n. A Semitic language that is the official language of Ethiopia. [After Amhara, a former kingdom of northwest Ethiopia.]

—Am·har'ic adj.

Am·herst (ăm'ərst, -hərst) 1. A town of north-central Nova Scotia, Canada, near the New Brunswick border. It was a thriving Acadian community called Les Planches until it was occupied by the British in the 18th century. Population, 9,684. 2. A town of western Massachusetts northeast of Northampton. Amherst College (established 1821) and a branch of the University of Massachusetts (1863) are here. Emily Dickinson was born in Amherst and lived in the town her entire life. Population, 17,824. 3. A city of western New York, a suburb of Buffalo. Population, 66,100.

Am·herst (ăm'ərst), Jeffrey also Jeffery Baron Amherst. 1717-1797. British general active in North America during the French and Indian War. He seized Forts Ticonderoga and Crown Point in 1759 and captured Montreal in 1760.

a·mi·a·ble (ā'mĕ-ə-bəl) adj. 1. Friendly and agreeable in disposition; good-natured and likable. 2. Cordial; sociable; congenial: an amiable gathering. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin amicābilis. See AMICABLE.]

—a'mi·a·bil'i·ty, a'mi·a·ble·ness n. —a'mi·a·bly adv.

SYNONYMS: amiable, affable, good-natured, obliging, agreeable, pleasant. These adjectives mean willing or showing a willingness to please. Amiable implies friendliness: “an amiable villain with a cocky, sidelong grin” (Hal Hinson). Affable especially fits a person who is easy to approach, responsive in conversation, and slow to anger: She is affable enough when she is not preoccupied with business problems. Good-natured suggests a tolerant, easygoing disposition; sometimes it also implies a docile nature: You are too good-natured to resent a little criticism. Obliging specifies willingness or eagerness to be of help to others or indulge their wishes: The obliging waiter was in no hurry for us to pay the bill and leave. Agreeable suggests being in accord with one’s own feelings, nature, or tastes: “My idea of an agreeable person... is a person who agrees with me” (Benjamin Disraeli). Pleasant applies broadly to agreeable manner, behavior, or appearance: “I couldn’t handle it, I didn’t enjoy it and it probably didn’t make me a pleasant person to be around” (James Caan).

am·i·an·thus (ăm’ē-ăn’tħəs) also am·i·an·tus (-təs) n. An asbestos with fine, silky fibers. [Latin amiantus, from Greek amiantos, undefiled : a-, not; see A-¹ + miantos, defiled (from miainein, to defile).]

am·i·ca·ble (ăm’ī-kə-bəl) adj. Characterized by or exhibiting friendliness or goodwill; friendly. [Middle English, from Late Latin amicābilis, from Latin amicus, friend.] —am’i·ca·bil’i·ty, am’i·ca·ble·ness n. —am’i·ca·bly adv.

am·ice (ăm’īs) n. A liturgical vestment consisting of an oblong piece of white linen worn around the neck and shoulders and partly under the alb. [Middle English, probably from Old French amis, pl. of amit, from Latin amictus, mantle, from past participle of amicĭre, to wrap around : ambi-, around; see AMBI- + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.]

a·mi·cus cu·ri·ae (ə-mē’kəs kyōōr’ē-ī’) n. pl. a·mi·ci curiae (ə-mē’kē). Law. A party that is not involved in a particular litigation but that is allowed by the court to advise it on a matter of law directly affecting the litigation. [Latin amicus, friend + curiae, genitive of curia, court.]

a·mid (ə-mīd’) also a·midst (ə-mīdst’) prep. Surrounded by; in the middle of. [Middle English : a-, in; see A-² + mid, middle (from Old English midde, middle); see medhyo- in Appendix.]

am·ide (ăm’īd’, -īd) n. 1. An organic compound, such as acetamide, containing the CONH₂ radical. 2. A compound with a metal replacing hydrogen in ammonia, such as sodium amide, NaNH₂. [AM(MONIA) + -IDE.] —a·mid’ic (ə-mīd’īk, ă-mīd’-) adj.

am·i·dol (ăm’ī-dōl’, -dōl’, -dōl’) n. A colorless crystalline compound, C₆H₃(NH₂)₂OH·2HCl, used as a photographic developer. [German Amidol, a trademark.]

a·mid·ships (ə-mīd’shīps’) also a·mid·ship (-shīp’) adv. Nautical. Midway between the bow and the stern.

a·midst (ə-mīdstʹ) prep. Variant of amid. [Middle English amiddes : amidde; see AMID + -es, adverbial suffix; see -s³.]

Am·i·ens (āmʹē-ənz, ä-myǎNʹ) A city of northern France on the Somme River north of Paris. Settled in pre-Roman times, it has been a textile center since the Middle Ages. The city's Gothic cathedral is the largest church in France. Population, 131,332.

a·mi·go (ə-mēʹgō) n. pl. a·mi·gos. A friend. [Spanish, from Latin amicus, friend.]

A·min Da·da (ä-mēnʹ dä-däʹ, däʹdä), Idi. Born c. 1925. Ugandan dictator (1971-1979) whose brutal and repressive regime ended when he fled the country after being deposed in a coup d'état.

A·min·di·vi Islands (äʹmīn-dēʹvē īʹləndz) A group of islands in the Arabian Sea off the southwest coast of India, part of the region of Lakshadweep.

a·mine (ə-mēnʹ, ämʹēnʹ) n. Any of a group of organic compounds of nitrogen, such as ethylamine, C₂H₅NH₂, that may be considered ammonia derivatives in which one or more hydrogen atoms have been replaced by a hydrocarbon radical. [AM(MONIUM) + -INE².]

-amine suffix. Amine: diamine. [From AMINE.]

a·mi·no (ə-mēʹnō, ämʹə-nōʹ) adj. Relating to an amine or other chemical compound containing an NH₂ group combined with a nonacid organic radical. [From AMINO-.]

amino- prefix. Containing NH₂ combined with a nonacid organic radical: aminopyrine. [From AMINE.]

amino acid (ə-mēʹnō äsʹīd) n. An organic compound containing both an amino group (NH₂) and a carboxylic acid group (COOH), especially any of the 20 compounds that have the basic formula NH₂CHRCOOH, and that link together by peptide bonds to form proteins.

a·mi·no·ac·i·de·mi·a (ə-mēʹnō-äsʹī-dēʹmē-ə, ämʹə-nō-) n. A condition in which excessive amounts of amino acids are present in the blood.

a·mi·no·ac·i·du·ri·a (ə-mēʹnō-äsʹī-dōörʹē-ə, -dyōörʹ-, ämʹə-nō-) n. A disorder of protein metabolism in which excessive amounts of amino acids are excreted in the urine.

a·mi·no·ben·zo·ic acid (ə-mēʹnō-bēn-zōʹīk äsʹīd, ämʹə-nō-) n. Any of three benzoic acid derivatives, C₇H₇NO₂, especially the yellowish para form, which is part of the vitamin B complex.

a·mi·no·phe·nol (ə-mēʹnō-fēʹnōl, -nōl, ämʹə-nō-) n. One of three organic compounds with composition C₆H₄NH₂OH, used as photographic developers and dye intermediates.

a·mi·no·py·rine (ə-mēʹnō-pīʹrēnʹ, ämʹə-nō-) n. A colorless crystalline compound, C₁₃H₁₇N₃O, used to reduce fever and relieve pain. [AMINO- + (ANTI)PYRINE.]

a·mir (ə-mîr', ā-mîr') n. Variant of emir.

A·mis (ā'mīs), Kingsley. 1922-1995. British writer best known for his novels, including Lucky Jim (1954) and Jake's Thing (1978).

A·mish (ä'mīsh, äm'īsh) n. An orthodox Anabaptist sect that separated from the Mennonites in the late 17th century and exists today primarily in southeast Pennsylvania. — adj. Of or relating to this sect or its members. [German amisch, after Jacob Amman, 17th-century Swiss Mennonite bishop.]

a·miss (ə-mīs') adj. 1. Out of proper order: What is amiss? 2. Not in perfect shape; faulty. — adv. In an improper, defective, unfortunate, or mistaken way. [Middle English amis, probably from Old Norse ā mis, so as to miss : ā, on; see an- in Appendix + mis, act of missing; see mei-¹ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: amiss, afield, astray, awry, wrong. The central meaning shared by these adverbs is “not in the right way or on the proper course”: spoke amiss; straying far afield; afraid the letter would go astray; thinking awry; plans that went wrong.

ANTONYM: aright am·i·trip·tyl·ine (äm'ī-trīp'tə-lēn') n. An antidepressant drug, C₂₀H₂₃N.

[Perhaps AMI(NO)- + tript- (alteration and shortening of TRYPTOPHAN) + -YL + -INE².]

am·i·ty (äm'ī-tē) n. pl. am·i·ties. Peaceful relations, as between nations; friendship. [Middle English amite, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin amīcitās*, from Latin amīcus, friend.]

Am·man (ä-män', ä'män) The capital and largest city of Jordan, in the north-central part of the country. Occupying a site inhabited since prehistoric times, the city was known as Philadelphia while the Romans and Byzantines controlled it. Population, 777,500.

am·me·ter (äm'mē'tər) n. Abbr. A An instrument that measures electric current. [AM(PERE) + -METER.]

am·mine (äm'ēn', ä-mēn') n. Any of a class of inorganic coordination compounds of ammonia and a metallic salt. [AMM(ONIA) + -INE².] — am'mi·no' (äm'ə-nō', ə-mē'nō) adj.

am·mo (äm'ō) n. Informal. Ammunition.

am·mo·nia (ə-mōn'yə) n. 1. A colorless, pungent gas, NH₃, extensively used to manufacture fertilizers and a wide variety of nitrogen-containing organic and inorganic chemicals. 2. See ammonium hydroxide. [New Latin, from Latin (sāl) ammōniacus, (salt) of Amen, from Greek Ammōniakos, from Ammōn, Amen (from its having been obtained from a region near the temple of Amen, in Libya).]

am·mo·ni·ac¹ (ə-mō'nē-āk') also am·mo·ni·a·cal (äm'ə-nī'ə-kəl) adj. Of, containing, or similar to ammonia.

am·mo·ni·ac² (ə-mō'nē-āk') n. A strong-smelling gum resin from the stems of a plant (Dorema ammoniacum) of western Asia, formerly used in perfumery and in medicine as an expectorant and a stimulant. Also called gum ammoniac [Middle English ammoniak, from Latin ammōniacum, from Ammōniacus, of Amen, from Greek Ammōniakos. See AMMONIA.]

am·mo·ni·ate (ə-mō'nē-āt') v. tr. am·mo·ni·at·ed, am·mo·ni·at·ing, am·mo·ni·ates. To treat or combine with ammonia. — n. A compound that contains ammonia. — am·mo·ni·a·tion n.

ammonia water (ə-mōn'yə wō'tər) n. See ammonium hydroxide.

am·mon·i·fi·ca·tion (ə-mōn'ə-fī-kā'shən, ə-mō'nə-) n. 1. Impregnation with ammonia or an ammonium compound. 2. Production of ammonia or ammonium compounds in the decomposition of organic matter, especially through the action of bacteria.

am·mon·i·fy (ə-mōn'ə-fī', ə-mō'nə-) v. tr. intr. am·mon·i·fied, am·mon·i·fy·ing, am·mon·i·fies. To subject or be subjected to ammonification. — am·mon·i·fi'er n.

am·mo·nite (äm'ə-nīt') also am·mo·noid (-noid') n. The coiled, flat, chambered fossil shell of an extinct mollusk belonging to the class Cephalopoda, which was abundant in the Cretaceous period. [New Latin Ammōnītēs, from Latin (cornū) Ammōnis, (horn) of Amen, ammonite, genitive of Ammōn, Amen, from Greek.] — am·mo·nit'ic (-nīt'ik) adj.

Am·mon·ite (äm'ə-nīt') n. 1. A member of an ancient Semitic people living east of the Jordan River, mentioned frequently in the Old Testament. 2. The Semitic language of the Ammonites. [From Late Latin Ammōnītēs, the Ammonites, from Hebrew 'ammōnî, Ammonite, from 'ammōn, Ammon, from Canaanite 'amm, people, kinsman.] — Am·mon·ite' adj.

am·mo·ni·um (ə-mō'nē-əm) n. The univalent chemical ion NH₄⁺, derived from ammonia, whose compounds chemically resemble the alkali metals. [AMMON(IA) + -IUM.]

ammonium bicarbonate (ə-mō'nē-əm bī-kär'bə-nāt') n. A white crystalline salt, bicarbonate of ammonium, NH₄HCO₃, used in fire-extinguishing compounds and in baking powder.

ammonium carbamate (ə-mō'nē-əm kär'bə-māt') n. A salt, a carbonate of ammonium, NH₄NH₂CO₂, which is an intermediate in the manufacture of urea and a component of smelling salts.

ammonium carbonate (ə-mō'nē-əm kär'bə-nāt') n. 1. A carbonate of ammonium, (NH₄)₂CO₃. 2. The double salt of ammonium bicarbonate and ammonium carbamate, which is produced commercially and is a white powder with the composition NH₄HCO₃·NH₂COONH₄, used in smelling salts.

ammonium chloride (ə-mō'nē-əm klōr'īd') n. A slightly hygroscopic, white crystalline compound, NH_4Cl , used in dry cells, as a soldering flux, and as an expectorant. Also called sal ammoniac ammonium hydroxide (ə-mō'nē-əm hī-drōk'sīd') n. A colorless, basic, aqueous solution of ammonia, NH_4OH , used as a household cleanser and in the manufacture of a wide variety of products, including textiles, rayon, rubber, fertilizer, and plastic. Also called ammonia, ammonia water.

ammonium nitrate (ə-mō'nē-əm nī'trāt') n. A colorless crystalline salt, NH_4NO_3 , used in fertilizers, explosives, and solid rocket propellants.

ammonium sulfate (ə-mō'nē-əm sül'fāt') n. A brownish-gray to white crystalline salt, $(\text{NH}_4)_2\text{SO}_4$, used in fertilizers and water purification.

ammonium thiocyanate (ə-mō'nē-əm thi'ō-sī'ə-nāt') n. A colorless, crystalline compound, NH_4SCN , used in dyeing fabric, electroplating, and in making melamine.

am·mo·noid (ām'ə-noid') n. Variant of ammonite.

am·mu·ni·tion (ām'yə-nīsh'ən) n. 1. All projectiles, such as bullets and shot, together with their fuses and primers, that can be fired from guns or otherwise propelled. 2. Nuclear, biological, chemical, or explosive materiel, such as rockets or grenades, that are used as weapons. 3. An object used as a missile in offense or defense: Rocks were my only ammunition against the bear. 4. A means of attacking or defending an argument, thesis, or point of view. [Obsolete French amunition, from l'amunition, the provisioning, alteration of la munition, from Old French, from Latin mūnitiō, mūnitiōn-, fortification. See MUNITION.]

Amn abbr. Airman.

Am·ne Ma·chin Shan (ām'nē mə-jīn' shān) A range of mountains of west-central China. The highest peak is Amne Machin at 7,164.5 m (23,490 ft).

am·ne·sia (ām-nē'zhə) n. Partial or total loss of memory, usually resulting from shock, psychological disturbance, brain injury, or illness. [Greek amnēsia, forgetfulness, probably from amnēstia : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + mimnēskein, to remember; see men⁻¹ in Appendix.] —am·ne/si·ac' (-nē'zē-āk', -zhē-āk'), am·ne/sic (-zīk, -sīk) n., adj. —am·nes'tic (-nēs'tīk) adj.

am·nes·ty (ām'nī-stē) n. pl. am·nes·ties. A general pardon granted by a government, especially for political offenses. — v. tr. am·nes·tied, am·nes·ty·ing, am·nes·ties. To grant a general pardon to. [Latin amnestia, from Greek, from amnēstos, not remembered : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + mimnēskein, to remember; see men⁻¹ in Appendix.]

am·ni·a (ām'nē-ə) n. A plural of amnion.

am·ni·o·cen·te·sis (ām'nē-ō-sēn-tē'sīs) n. pl. am·ni·o·cen·te·ses (-sēz). A procedure in which a small sample of amniotic fluid is drawn out of the uterus through a needle inserted in the abdomen. The fluid is then analyzed to detect genetic abnormalities in the fetus or to determine the sex of the fetus. [New Latin amniocentēsis : AMNION + Greek kentēsis, act of pricking (from kentein, to prick); see kent- in Appendix.]

am·ni·og·ra·phy (ăm'nē-ōg'rə-fē) n. pl. am·ni·og·ra·phies. Radiographic examination of the uterine cavity and fetus following injection of a radiopaque substance into the amnion. [AMNIO(N) + -GRAPHY.]

am·ni·on (ăm'nē-ən, -ōn') n. pl. am·ni·ons or am·ni·a (-nē-ə). A thin, tough, membranous sac that encloses the embryo or fetus of a mammal, bird, or reptile. It is filled with a serous fluid in which the embryo is suspended. [Greek amniōn.] —am'ni-ot'ic (-ōt'ik), am'ni-on'ic (-ōn'ik) adj.

am·ni·os·co·py (ăm'nē-ōs'kə-pē) n. pl. am·ni·os·co·pies. Examination of the amniotic cavity and fetus using an optical instrument that is inserted directly into the amniotic cavity. [AMNIO(N) + -SCOPY.] —am'ni-o-scope' (-ə-skōp') n.

am·o·bar·bi·tal (ăm'ō-bār'bī-tāl', -tōl') n. A barbiturate, C₁₁H₁₈N₂O₃, used as a sedative and a hypnotic. [AM(YL) + BARBITAL.]

a·moe·ba also a·me·ba (ə-mē'bə) n. pl. a·moe·bas or a·moe·bae (-bē). A protozoan of the genus Amoeba or related genera, occurring in water and soil and as a parasite in other animals. An amoeba has no definite form and consists essentially of a mass of protoplasm containing one nucleus or more surrounded by a delicate, flexible outer membrane. It moves by means of pseudopods. [New Latin, genus name, from Greek amoibē, change, from ameibein, to change. See mei-¹ in Appendix.] —a·moe'bic (-bīk) adj.

am·oe·bae·an or am·oe·be·an (ăm'ə-bē'ən) adj. Answering alternately in prosody. [From Late Latin amoebaeus, from Greek amoibaiois, from amoibē, change. See AMOEB(A).]

am·oe·bi·a·sis (ăm'ə-bī'ə-sīs) n. Variant of amebiasis.

amoebic dysentery (ə-mē'bīk dīs'ən-tēr'ē) n. Variant of amebic dysentery.

a·moe·bo·cyte also a·me·bo·cyte (ə-mē'bə-sīt') n. A cell, such as a leukocyte, having amoeboid form or motion. [AMOEB(A) + -CYTE.]

a·moe·boid (ə-mē'boid') adj. 1. Of or resembling an amoeba, especially in changeability of form and means of locomotion. 2. Having an irregular or asymmetric shape: an amoeboid coffee table.

a·mok (ə-mŭk', ə-mōk') adv. & adj. Variant of amuck.

a·mo·le (ə-mō'lē) n. 1. The root, bulb, or another plant part of several chiefly western North American plants, such as certain species of Agave, Chlorogalum, and Yucca, used as a substitute for soap. 2. A plant so used. [American Spanish, from Nahuatl amolli.]

A·mon (ă'mən) n. Mythology. Variant of Amen.

a·mong (ə-mŭng') also a·mongst (ə-mŭngst') prep. 1. In the midst of; surrounded by: a pine tree among cedars. 2. In the group, number, or class of: She is among the wealthy. 3. In the company of; in association with: traveling among a group of tourists. 4. By many or the entire number of; with many: a custom popular among the Greeks. 5. By the joint action of: Among us, we will finish the job. 6. With portions to each of: Distribute this among you. 7. Each with the other: Don't fight among yourselves. See Usage Note at between. [Middle English, from Old English āmang: ā, in; see A-² + gemang, throng; see mag- in Appendix.]

a·mon·til·la·do (ə-mŏn'tl-ä'l'dō, -tē-ä'l'-) n. pl. a·mon·til·la·dos. A pale dry sherry. [Spanish : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + Montilla, a town of southern Spain.]

a·mor·al (ā-môr'əl, ā-mör'-) adj. 1. Not admitting of moral distinctions or judgments; neither moral nor immoral. 2. Lacking moral sensibility; not caring about right and wrong. —a·mor'al·ism n. —a'mo·ral'i·ty (ä'mô-räl'ī-tē, -mă-) n. —a·mor'al·ly adv.

am·o·ret·to (äm'ə-rēt'ō, ä'mə-) n. pl. am·o·ret·ti (-tē) or am·o·ret·tos. A cupid. [Italian, diminutive of Amore, Cupid, from Latin Amor, from amor, love. See AMOROUS.]

am·o·rist (äm'ər-īst) n. 1. One dedicated to love, especially sexual love. 2. One who writes about love. [Latin amor, love; see AMOROUS + -IST.]

Am·o·rite (äm'ə-rīt') n. A member of one of several ancient Semitic peoples primarily inhabiting Canaan, where they preceded the Israelites, and Babylonia. [From Hebrew 'ēmōrî, Amorite, from Akkadian amurru, westerner, Amorite.] —Am'o·rite' adj.

am·o·rous (äm'ər-əs) adj. 1. Strongly attracted or disposed to love, especially sexual love. 2. Indicative of love or sexual desire: an amorous glance. 3. Of or associated with love: an amorous poem. 4. Being in love; enamored: amorous of you since the day we met. [Middle English, from Old French amoureux, from Medieval Latin amōrōsus, from Latin amor, love, from amāre, to love.]

—am'or·ous·ly adv. —am'or·ous·ness n.

a·mor·phism (ə-môr'fiz'əm) n. The state or quality of being amorphous.

a·mor·phous (ə-môr'fəs) adj. 1. Lacking definite form; shapeless. See Synonyms at shapeless. 2. Of no particular type; anomalous. 3. Lacking organization; formless. 4. Lacking distinct crystalline structure. [From Greek amorphos: a-, without; see A-¹ + morphē, shape.] —a·mor'phous·ly adv.

—a·mor'phous·ness n.

am·or·ti·za·tion (äm'ər-tī-zā'shən, ə-môr'tī-) n. 1. a. The act or process of amortizing. b. The money set aside for this purpose. 2. In reckoning the yield of a bond bought at a premium, the periodic subtraction from its current yield of a proportionate share of the premium between the purchase date and the maturity date.

am·or·tize (äm'ər-tīz', ə-môr'tī-) v. tr. am·or·tized, am·or·tiz·ing, am·or·tiz·es. 1. To liquidate (a debt, such as a mortgage) by installment payments or payment into a sinking fund. 2. To write off an expenditure for (office equipment, for example) by prorating over a certain period. [Middle English amortisen, to alienate in mortmain, from Old French amortir, amortiss-, from Vulgar Latin admortīre*, to deaden : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin mors, mort-, death; see mer- in Appendix.] —am/or-tiz'a-ble adj.

A·mos (ā'məs) n. Bible. 1. A Hebrew prophet of the eighth century B.C. He was the earliest prophet to have a book of the Bible named for him. 2. Abbr. Am. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

a·mount (ə-mount') n. Abbr. amt. 1. The total of two or more quantities; the aggregate. 2. A number; a sum. 3. A principal plus its interest, as in a loan. 4. The full effect or meaning; import. 5. Quantity: a great amount of intelligence. — v. intr. a·mount-ed, a·mount-ing, a·mounts. 1. To add up in number or quantity: The purchases amounted to 50 dollars. 2. To add up in import or effect: That plan will never amount to anything. 3. To be equivalent or tantamount: accusations that amount to an indictment. [From Middle English amounten, to ascend, from Old French amonter, from amont, upward, from Latin ad montem, to the hill : ad, to; see ad- in Appendix + mōns, mont-, hill; see men-² in Appendix.]

a·mour (ə-mōōr') n. A love affair, especially an illicit one. [Middle English, from Old French, from Old Provençal, from Latin amor, love. See AMOROUS.] a·mour-pro-pre (ä-mōōr-prôp'rə) n. Respect for oneself; self-esteem. See Synonyms at conceit. [French : amour, love + propre, own.]

A·moy¹ (ä-moi') See Xiamen.

A·moy² (ä-moi', ə-moi') n. The dialect of Chinese spoken in and around the city of Xiamen in Fujian province in southeast China. [After Amoy (Xiamen).]

amp (ämp) n. Informal. 1. An ampere. 2. An amplifier, especially one used to amplify music.

AMP (ā'em-pē') n. A mononucleotide, C₁₀H₁₄N₅O₇P, found in animal cells and reversibly convertible to ADP and ATP; adenosine monophosphate. Also called adenylic acid [A(DENOSINE) M(ONO)P(HOSPHATE).]

am-per-age (äm'pər-ij, äm'pīr'-) n. The strength of an electric current expressed in amperes.

am-pere (äm'pīr') n. Abbr. A 1. A unit of electric current in the meter-kilogram-second system. It is the steady current that when flowing in straight parallel wires of infinite length and negligible cross section, separated by a distance of one meter in free space, produces a force between the wires of 2×10^{-7} newtons per meter of length. 2. A unit in the International System specified as one International coulomb per second and equal to 0.999835 ampere. See Table at measurement. [After André Marie AMPÈRE.]

Am-père (ăm'pîr, ân-pĕr'), André Marie. 1775-1836. French physicist and mathematician who formulated Ampère's law, a mathematical description of the magnetic field produced by a current-carrying conductor.

am-pere-hour (ăm'pîr-our') n. Abbr. amp hr, A.h. The electric charge transferred past a specified circuit point by a current of one ampere in one hour.

am-pere-turn (ăm'pîr-tûrn') n. Abbr. At A unit of magnetomotive force in the meter-kilogram-second system equal to the magnetomotive force around a path linking one turn of a conducting loop carrying a current of one ampere.

am-per-sand (ăm'pĕr-sănd') n. The character or sign (&) representing the word and. [Alteration of and per se and, & (the sign) by itself (is the word) and.]

am-phet-a-mine (ăm-fĕt'ə-mĕn', -mĭn') n. 1. A colorless, volatile liquid, C₉H₁₃N, used primarily as a central nervous system stimulant. 2. A derivative of amphetamine, such as dextroamphetamine or a phosphate or sulfate of amphetamine, used as a central nervous system stimulant in the treatment of certain conditions, such as narcolepsy and depression. [A(LPHA) + M(ETHYL) + PH(ENYL) + ET(HYL) + AMINE.]

amphi- pref. 1. Both: amphibiotic. 2. On both sides: amphistylar. 3. Around: amphithecium. [Latin, from Greek, from amphi, on both sides, around. See ambhi in Appendix.]

am-phi-ar-thro-sis (ăm'fĕ-ăr-thrō'sis) n. pl. am-phi-ar-thro-ses (-sĕz). A type of articulation between bony surfaces that permits limited motion and is connected by ligaments or elastic cartilage, such as that between the vertebrae.

am-phi-bi-an (ăm-fĭb'ĕ-ən') n. 1. A cold-blooded, smooth-skinned vertebrate of the class Amphibia, such as a frog or salamander, that characteristically hatches as an aquatic larva with gills. The larva then transforms into an adult having air-breathing lungs. 2. An animal capable of living both on land and in water. 3. An aircraft that can take off and land on either land or water. 4. A tracked or wheeled vehicle that can operate both on land and in water. [From New Latin Amphibia, class name, from Greek, neuter pl. of amphibios, amphibious : amphi-, amphi- + bios, life; see g^wei- in Appendix.]

am-phi-bi-ot-ic (ăm'fə-bī-ōt'ĭk) adj. Living in water during an early stage of development and on land during the adult stage.

am-phi-bi-ous (ăm-fĭb'ĕ-əs) adj. 1. Biology. Living or able to live both on land and in water. 2. Able to operate both on land and in water: amphibious tanks. 3. Relating to or organized for a military landing by means of combined naval and land forces. 4. Of a mixed or twofold nature. [From Latin amphibius, from Greek amphibios. See AMPHIBIAN.] —am-phi-bi-ous-ly adv.

—am-phi-bi-ous-ness n.

am-phi-bole (ăm'fə-bōl') n. Any of a large group of structurally similar hydrated double silicate minerals, such as hornblende, containing various combinations of sodium, calcium, magnesium, iron, and aluminum. [French, from am·phib·o·lite (äm-fib'ə-līt') n. A chiefly amphibole rock with minor plagioclase and little quartz. —am·phib'·o·lit'ic (-lit'ik) adj.

Late Latin amphibolus, ambiguous, from Greek amphibolos, doubtful, from amphiballein, to throw on either side : amphi-, amphi- + ballein, to throw; see g^welə- in Appendix.] —am'phi-bol'ic (-böl'ik) adj.

am·phib·o·lous (äm-fib'ə-ləs) adj. Having a grammatical structure that allows of two interpretations; equivocal. [From Late Latin amphibolus. See AMPHIBOLE.]

am·phi·brach (äm'fə-bräk') n. A trisyllabic metrical foot having one accented or long syllable between two unaccented or short syllables, as in the word remember. [Latin amphibrachys, from Greek amphibrakhus : amphi-, amphi- + brakhus, short; see mregh-u- in Appendix.]

am·phic·ty·o·ny (äm-fik'tē-ə-nē) n. pl. am·phic·ty·o·nies. A league of neighboring ancient Greek states sharing a common religious center or shrine, especially the one at Delphi. [Greek Amphiktuonia, from amphiktuones, variant of amphiktiones, neighbors : amphi-, on the periphery; see AMPHI- + ktizein, to settle; see tkei- in Appendix.] —am·phic'ty·on'ic (-ön'ik) adj.

am·phi·dip·loid (äm'fi-dīp'loid) adj. Genetics. Having a diploid set of chromosomes derived from each parent. — n. An organism or individual having a diploid set of chromosomes derived from each parent. —am'phi·dip'loid·y n.

am·phim·a·cer (äm-fim'ə-sər) n. A trisyllabic metrical foot having an unaccented or short syllable between two accented or long syllables, as in Peter Pan. Also called cretic [Latin amphimacrus, from Greek amphimakros : amphi-, amphi- + makros, long; see māk- in Appendix.]

am·phi·mix·is (äm'fə-mīk'sīs) n. pl. am·phi·mix·es (-mīk'sēz'). The union of the sperm and egg in sexual reproduction. [AMPHI- + Greek mixis, a mingling (from mignunai, mik-, to mingle); see meik- in Appendix.] —am'phi·mic'tic (-mīk'tik) adj.

Am·phi·on (äm-fī'ən) n. Greek Mythology. The son of Zeus and the twin brother of Zethus, with whom he built a wall around Thebes by charming the stones into place with the music of his magical lyre.

am·phi·ox·us (äm'fē-ök'səs) n. See lancelet. [AMPHI- + Greek oxus, sharp; see ak- in Appendix.]

am·phi·pod (äm'fə-pōd') n. A small crustacean of the order Amphipoda, such as the beach flea, having a laterally compressed body with no carapace. [From New Latin Amphipoda, order name : AMPHI- + New Latin -poda, -pod.]

am·phip·ro·style (äm-fīp'rō-stīl', äm'fi-prō'stīl') adj. Architecture. Having a prostyle or set of columns at each end but none along the sides. [Latin amphiprostylōs, from Greek amphiprostulos : amphi-, amphi- + prostulos, with pillars in front; see PROSTYLE.] —am·phip'ro·style' n.

am·phis·bae·na (ăm'fīs-bē'nə) n. Mythology. A serpent having a head at each end of its body. [Middle English amphibena, from Latin amphisbaena, from Greek amphisbaina : amphis, both ways (from amphi-, on both sides); see AMPHI- + bainein, to go; see g^wā- in Appendix.] —am'phis·bae'nic adj.

am·phi·sty·lar (ăm'fī-stī'lər) adj. Architecture. Having columns at both front and back or on each side. [From AMPHI- + Greek stulos, pillar; see stā- in Appendix.]

am·phi·the·a·ter (ăm'fə-thē'ə-tər) n. 1. An oval or a round structure having tiers of seats rising gradually outward from an open space or arena at the center.

2. An arena where contests and spectacles are held. 3. A level area surrounded by upward sloping ground. 4. An upper, sloping gallery with seats for spectators, as in a theater or an operating room. [Middle English amphitheatre, from Latin amphitheatrum, from Greek amphitheatron : amphi-, amphi- + theatron, theater; see THEATER.] —am'phi·the·at'ric (-ăt'rik), am'phi·the·at'ri·cal adj.

—am'phi·the·at'ri·cal·ly adv.

am·phi·the·ci·um (ăm'fə-thē'shē-əm, -sē-əm) n. pl. am·phi·the·ci·a (-shē-ə, -sē-ə). The outer layer of cells of the spore-containing capsule of a moss. [New Latin : AMPHI- + Greek thēkion, diminutive of thēkē, receptacle; see dhē- in Appendix.]

Am·phi·tri·te (ăm'fī-trī'tē) n. Greek Mythology. A Nereid, goddess of the sea and the wife of Poseidon.

am·phit·ro·pous (ăm-fīt'rə-pəs) adj. Botany. Partly inverted and attached near the center to the funiculus: an amphitropous ovule.

Am·phit·ry·on (ăm-fīt'rē-ən) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Thebes and the husband of Alcmene.

am·pho·ra (ăm'fər-ə) n. pl. am·pho·rae (-fə-rē') or am·pho·ras. A two-handled jar with a narrow neck used by the ancient Greeks and Romans to carry wine or oil. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek amphoreus, short for amphiphoreus : amphi-, amphi- + phoreus, bearer (from pherein, to bear); see bher-¹ in Appendix.] —am'pho·ral adj.

am·pho·ter·ic (ăm'fə-tēr'ik) adj. Having the characteristics of an acid and a base and capable of reacting chemically either as an acid or a base. [From Greek amphoterōs, each of two, from amphō, both.]

am·pho·ter·i·cin B (ăm'fə-tēr'ī-sĭn) n. An antibiotic derived from strains of the actinomycete Streptomyces nodosus and used specifically in treating systemic fungal infections. [AMPHOTERIC + -IN.]

amp hr abbr. Ampere-hour.

am·pi·cil·lin (ăm'pī-sil'ĭn) n. A type of penicillin that is effective against gram-negative and gram-positive bacteria. It is used in treating gonorrhea and infections of the intestinal, urinary, and respiratory tracts. [Blend of AMINO-, and PENICILLIN.]

am·ple (ăm'pəl) adj. am·pler, am·plest. 1. Of large or great size, amount, extent, or capacity: an ample living room. See Synonyms at spacious.

2. a. Large in degree, kind, or quantity: an ample reward. b. More than enough: ample evidence. 3. Fully sufficient to meet a need or purpose: had ample food for the party. See Synonyms at plentiful. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin amplus.] —am'ple-ness n. —am'ply (-plē) adv.

am·plex·i·caul (ăm-plĕk'sī-kōl') adj. Botany. Clasping the stem, as the bases of certain leaves do. [Latin amplexus, an embracing, from past participle of amplectī, to embrace (ambi-, amphi- + plectere, to twine); see plek- in Appendix + Latin caulis, stem.]

am·pli·fi·ca·tion (ăm'plə-fī-kā'shən) n. 1. The act or result of amplifying, enlarging, or extending. 2. a. An addition to or expansion of a statement or idea. b. A statement with such an addition. 3. Physics. a. The process of increasing the magnitude of a variable quantity, especially the magnitude of voltage, power, or current, without altering any other quality. b. The result of such a process. 4. Electronics. See gain¹ (n., sense 4).

am·pli·fi·er (ăm'plə-fī'ər) n. 1. One that amplifies, enlarges, or extends. 2. Electronics. A device, especially one using transistors or electron tubes, that produces amplification of an electrical signal.

am·pli·fy (ăm'plə-fī') v. am·pli·fied, am·pli·fy·ing, am·pli·fies. — v. tr. 1. To make larger or more powerful; increase. 2. To add to, as by illustrations; make complete. 3. To exaggerate. 4. To produce amplification of: amplify an electrical signal. — v. intr. To write or discourse at length; expatiate: Let me amplify so that you will understand the overall problem. [Middle English amplifien, from Old French amplifier, from Latin amplificāre: amplus, large + -ficāre, -fy.] am·pli·tude (ăm'plī-tōod', -tyōod') n. 1. Greatness of size; magnitude. 2. Fullness; copiousness. 3. Breadth or range, as of intelligence. 4. Astronomy. The angular distance along the horizon from true east or west to the intersection of the vertical circle of a celestial body with the horizon. 5. Physics. The maximum absolute value of a periodically varying quantity. 6. Mathematics. a. The maximum absolute value of a periodic curve measured along its vertical axis. b. The angle made with the positive horizontal axis by the vector representation of a complex number. 7. Electronics. The maximum absolute value reached by a voltage or current waveform. [Latin amplitūdō, from amplus, large.] amplitude modulation (ăm'plī-tōod' mōj'ə-lā'shən) n. Abbr. am, AM Electronics. 1. The encoding of a carrier wave by variation of its amplitude in accordance with an input signal. 2. A broadcast system that uses amplitude modulation.

am·poule also am·pule or am·pul (äm'pōol, -pyōol) n. A small glass vial that is sealed after filling and used chiefly as a container for a hypodermic injection solution. [French, from Old French, from Latin ampulla. See AMPULLA.]

am·pul·la (äm-pōol'ə, -pül'ə) n. pl. am·pul·lae (-pōol'ē, -pül'ē). 1. A nearly round bottle with two handles used by the ancient Romans for wine, oil, or perfume. 2. Ecclesiastical. A vessel for consecrated wine or holy oil. 3. Anatomy. A small dilatation in a canal or duct, especially one in the semicircular canal of the ear. [Middle English, from Old English, from Latin, diminutive of amphora. See AMPHORA.] —am·pul'lar adj.

am·pu·tate (äm'pyōō-tāt') v. tr. am·pu·tat·ed, am·pu·tat·ing, am·pu·tates. To cut off (a part of the body), especially by surgery. [Latin amputāre, amputāt-, to cut around : ambi-, around; see AMBI- + putāre, to cut; see peu- in Appendix.] —am'pu·ta'tion n. —am'pu·ta'tor n.

am·pu·tee (äm'pyōō-tē') n. A person who has had one or more limbs removed by amputation.

Am·ra·va·ti (əm-rä'və-tē, äm-) A town of central India west of Nagpur. It is the site of a stupa dating from the second century A.D. Population, 261,404.

am·ri·ta also am·ree·ta (üm-rē'tə) n. Mythology. 1. The ambrosia, prepared by the Hindu gods, that bestows immortality. 2. The immortality that is achieved by drinking this substance. [Sanskrit amṛtam : a-, without; see ne in Appendix + mṛtam, death; see mer- in Appendix.]

Am·rit·sar (əm-rīt'sər) A city of northwest India near the Pakistan border. Founded in 1577 by the fourth guru of the Sikhs, Ram Das (1534-1581), it has remained the center of the Sikh faith. In the Amritsar massacre of April 13, 1919, hundreds of Indian nationalists were killed by British-led troops. Population, 594,844.

AMS abbr. 1. Agricultural Marketing Service. 2. Auditory memory span.

Am·stel·veen (äm'stəl-vān') A town of western Netherlands, a suburb of Amsterdam. Population, 68,518.

Am·ster·dam (äm'stər-dām') 1. The constitutional capital and largest city of the Netherlands, in the western part of the country on the IJ, an inlet of the IJsselmeer. Linked to the North Sea by a ship canal, the city has an important stock exchange and is a major center of the diamond-cutting industry. Population, 676,439. 2. A city of east-central New York on the Mohawk River northwest of Albany. Settled in 1783, it was named Amsterdam because many of its early inhabitants were from the Netherlands. Population, 20,714.

amt. abbr. Amount.

am·trac also am·track (äm'trāk') n. A small, flatbottomed amphibious vehicle that moves by means of finned tracks and is used to carry troops from ship to shore. [AM(PHIBIOUS) + TRAC(TOR).]

amu abbr. Physics. Atomic mass unit.

a·muck (ə-müĕk') also a·mok (ə-müĕk', ə-mök') adv. 1. In a frenzy to do violence or kill: rioters running amuck in the streets. 2. In or into a jumbled or confused state: The plans went amuck. — adj. Crazy with murderous frenzy: amuck troops. [Malay amok.]

A·mu Dar·ya (ä'mōō dār'yə, ə-mōō' dūr-yä') Formerly Ox·us (ök'səs). A river of central Asia flowing about 2,574 km (1,600 mi) from the Pamir Mountains generally northwest to the southern Aral Sea. In ancient times it figured significantly in the history of Persia and in the campaigns of Alexander the Great.

am·u·let (äm'yə-lit) n. An object worn, especially around the neck, as a charm against evil or injury. [Latin amulētum.]

A·mund·sen (ä'mænd-sən, ä'mōōn-), Roald. 1872-1928. Norwegian explorer who in 1911 became the first person to reach the South Pole.

Amundsen Gulf (ä'mænd-sən gulf) An inlet of the Arctic Ocean in Northwest Territories, Canada, opening on the Beaufort Sea. It was first navigated completely by Roald Amundsen during his 1903-1905 expedition to the region.

Amundsen Sea (ä'mænd-sən sē) An arm of the southern Pacific Ocean off the coast of Marie Byrd Land, Antarctica. It was explored and named by a Norwegian, Nils Larsen, in the late 1920's.

A·mur River (ä-mōōr' rīv'er) also Hei·long Jiang (hā'lông' jyäng') A river of northeast Asia flowing about 2,896 km (1,800 mi) mainly along the border between China and Russia. One of the chief waterways of Asia, it drains into Tatar Strait opposite Sakhalin Island.

a·muse (ə-myōōz') v. tr. a·mused, a·mus·ing, a·mus·es. 1. To occupy in an agreeable, pleasing, or entertaining fashion. 2. To cause to laugh or smile by giving pleasure. 3. Archaic. To delude or deceive. [Middle English, from Old French amuser, to stupefy : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + muser, to stare stupidly; see MUSE.] — a·mus'·a·ble adj. — a·mus'er n.

SYNONYMS: amuse, entertain, divert, regale. These verbs refer to actions that provide pleasure, especially as a means of passing time. Amuse, the least specific, implies directing the attention away from serious matters: I amused myself with a game of solitaire. Entertain suggests acts undertaken to furnish amusement: "They [timetables and catalogs] are much more entertaining than half the novels that are written" (W. Somerset Maugham). Divert implies distraction from worrisome thought or care: "I had neither Friends or Books to divert me" (Richard Steele). To regale is to entertain with something enormously enjoyable: "He loved to regale his friends with tales about the many memorable characters he had known as a newspaperman" (David Rosenzweig).

a·muse·ment (ə-myōōz'mənt) n. 1. The state of being amused, entertained, or pleased. 2. Something that amuses, entertains, or pleases.

amusement park (ə-myōōz'mənt pārk) n. A commercially operated enterprise that offers rides, games, and other forms of entertainment.

a·mus·ing (ə-myōō'zɪŋ) adj. 1. Entertaining or pleasing. 2. Arousing laughter. —a·mus·ing·ly adv. —a·mus·ing·ness n.

a·mu·sive (ə-myōō'zɪv, -sɪv) adj. Providing or arousing amusement.

AMVETS abbr. American Veterans.

a·myg·da·la (ə-mɪg'də-lə) n. pl. a·myg·da·lae (-lē). Anatomy. An almond-shaped mass of gray matter in the anterior portion of the temporal lobe. Also called amygdaloid nucleus [Latin, almond, from Greek amugdalē.]

a·myg·dale (ə-mɪg'dāl) n. An amygdule. [From Latin amygdala, almond. See AMYGDALA.]

a·myg·da·lin (ə-mɪg'də-lɪn) n. A glycoside, C₂₀H₂₇NO₁₁, commonly found in seeds and other plant parts of many members of the rose family, such as kernels of the apricot, peach, and bitter almond, which breaks down into hydrocyanic acid, benzaldehyde, and glucose. [From Late Latin amygdalus, almond tree, from Greek amygdalos.]

a·myg·da·line (ə-mɪg'də-lɪn, -lɪn') adj. Of, relating to, or resembling an almond. [Latin amygdalinus, from Greek amugdalinos, from amugdalē, almond.]

a·myg·da·loid (ə-mɪg'də-loid') n. A volcanic rock containing many amygdules. — adj. also a·myg·da·loi·dal (ə-mɪg'də-loi'dl) 1. Shaped like an almond. 2. Anatomy. Of or relating to the amygdala. 3. Resembling a volcanic rock that contains many amygdules. [Latin amygdala, almond; see AMYGDALA + -OID.]

amygdaloid nucleus (ə-mɪg'də-loid' nōō'klē-əs) n. See amygdala.

a·myg·dule (ə-mɪg'dyōōl) n. A small gas bubble in igneous, especially volcanic, rock filled with secondary minerals such as zeolite, calcite, or quartz. [Latin amygdala, almond (from its shape); see AMYGDALA + (NOD)ULE.]

am·yl (ām'əl) n. The univalent organic radical, C₅H₁₁, occurring in many organic compounds in eight isomeric forms. Also called pentyl [Blend of AMYL-, and -YL.]

amyl- pref. Variant of amylo-.

am·y·la·ceous (ām'ə-lā'shəs) adj. Of, relating to, or resembling starch; starchy.

amyl acetate (ām'əl əs'ɪ-tāt') n. An organic compound, CH₃COOC₅H₁₁, occurring in isomeric mixtures and used as a flavoring agent, as a paint and lacquer solvent, and in the preparation of penicillin. Also called banana oil amyl alcohol (ām'əl əl'kə-hôl') n. Any of eight isomers of the alcohol composition C₅H₁₁OH, one of which is the principal constituent of fusel oil.

am·y·lase (ām'ə-lās', -lāz') n. A group of enzymes that are present in saliva, pancreatic juice, and parts of plants and help convert starch to sugar.

amyl nitrite (ăm'əl nī'trīt') n. A volatile yellow liquid, C₅H₁₁NO₂, used in medicine as a vasodilator.

amyl- or amyl- pref. Starch: amylose. [From Latin amylum, starch. See AMYLUM.]

am-y-loid (ăm'ə-loid') n. 1. A starchlike substance. 2. Pathology. A hard, waxy deposit consisting of protein and polysaccharides that results from the degeneration of tissue. — adj. Starchlike.

am-y-loid-o-sis (ăm'ə-loi-dō'sis) n. A disorder marked by the deposition of amyloid in various organs and tissues of the body. It may be associated with a chronic disease such as rheumatoid arthritis, tuberculosis, or multiple myeloma.

am-y-lol-y-sis (ăm'ə-lōl'ī-sis) n. Conversion of starch to sugars by the action of enzymes or acids. — am'y-lo-lyt'ic (-lō-līt'ik) adj.

am-y-lop-sin (ăm'ə-löp'sin) n. The starch-digesting amylase produced by the pancreas and present in pancreatic juice. [AMYLO- + (TRY)PSIN.]

am-y-lose (ăm'ə-lōs', -lōz') n. 1. The inner portion of a starch granule, consisting of relatively soluble polysaccharides having an unbranched, linear, or spiral structure. 2. A polysaccharide, such as starch or cellulose.

am-y-lum (ăm'ə-ləm) n. Starch. [Latin, from Greek amulon, starch, from neuter of amulos, not ground at a mill : a-, not; see A-¹ + mulē, mill; see mel- in Appendix.]

a-my-o-to-ni-a (ā'mī-ə-tō'nē-ə) n. Lack of muscle tone.

a-my-o-tro-phic lateral sclerosis (ā'mī-ə-trō'fik lăt'ər-əl sklə-rō'sis, -trōf'ik, ā-mī'-) n. Abbr. ALS A chronic, progressive disease marked by gradual degeneration of the nerve cells in the central nervous system that control voluntary muscle movement. The disorder causes muscle weakness and atrophy and usually results in death. Also called Lou Gehrig's disease an¹ (ən; ăn when stressed) indef.art. The form of a used before words beginning with a vowel or with an unpronounced h: an elephant; an hour. See Usage Note at a². See Usage Note at every. [Middle English, from Old English ān, one. See oi-no- in Appendix.]

an² also an' (ən, ăn when stressed) conj. Archaic. And if; if. [Middle English, short for and, and, from Old English. See AND.]

AN abbr. Airman, Navy.

an. abbr. Latin. 1. Anno (in the year). 2. Ante (before).

an- pref. Variant of a¹.

-an¹ suff. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling: brachyuran. 2. One relating to, belonging to, or resembling: librarian. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -ānus, adj. and n. suff.]

-an² suff. 1. Unsaturated carbon compound: urethan. 2. Anhydride of a carbohydrate: dextran. [Alteration of -ANE.]

an·a¹ (än'ə, ä'nə) n. pl. ana or an·as. 1. A collection of various materials that reflect the character of a person or place: definitive ana of the early American West. 2. An item in such a collection. [From New Latin -āna, as in titles of such collections. See -ANA.]

an·a² (än'ə) adv. Both in the same quantity; of each. Used to refer to ingredients in prescriptions. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin, from Greek, at the rate of. See an- in Appendix.]

ANA abbr. 1. American Newspaper Association. 2. American Nurses Association. 3. Association of National Advertisers.

ana- pref. 1. Upward; up: anabolism. 2. Backward; back: anaplasia. 3. Again; anew: anaphylaxis. [Greek, from ana, up. See an- in Appendix.]

-ana or -iana suff. A collection of items relating to a specified person or place: Americana. [New Latin -āna, from Latin -āna, neuter pl. of -ānus, adj. and n. suff.. See -AN¹.]

an·a·bae·na (än'ə-bē'nə) n. Any of various freshwater algae of the genus Anabaena that sometimes occur in drinking water and cause a bad taste and odor. [New Latin Anabaena, genus name, from Greek anabainein, to go up : ana-, ana- + bainein, to go; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

An·a·bap·tist (än'ə-băp'tist) n. A member of a radical movement of the 16th-century Reformation which believed in the primacy of the Bible, in baptism as an external witness of the believer's personal covenant of inner faith, and in separation of church from state and of believers from nonbelievers. [From Late Greek anabaptizein, to baptize again : Greek ana-, ana- + Greek baptizein, to baptize (from baptein, to dip).] —An'·a·bap'tism n.

an·a·bas (än'ə-bäs') n. A freshwater fish of the family Anabantidae, native to Africa and southeast Asia and including the gourami and climbing perch. [Greek anabas, climbing, aorist participle of anabainein, to go up. See ANABAENA.]

a·nab·a·sis (ə-năb'ə-sis) n. pl. a·nab·a·ses (-sēz'). 1. An advance; an expedition. 2. A large-scale military advance, specifically the Greek mercenary expedition across Asia Minor in 401 B.C. led by Cyrus the Younger of Persia, as described by Xenophon. It was unsuccessful, and the Greeks, led by Xenophon, retreated to the Black Sea. [Greek, from anabainein, to go up. See ANABAENA.]

an·a·bat·ic (än'ə-băt'ik) adj. Of or relating to rising wind currents. [Greek anabatikos, skilled in mounting, from anabainein, to rise. See ANABAENA.]

an·a·bi·o·sis (än'ə-bī-ō'sis) n. 1. A restoring to life from a deathlike condition; resuscitation. 2. A state of suspended animation, especially one in which certain aquatic invertebrates are able to survive long periods of drought. [Greek anabiōsis, from anabioun, to return to life : ana-, ana- + bioun, to live (from bios, life); see g^wei- in Appendix.] —an'·a·bi-ot'ic (-ōt'ik) adj.

anabolic steroid (än'ə-bōl'ik stīr'oid') n. A group of synthetic hormones that promote the storage of protein and the growth of tissue, sometimes used by athletes to increase muscle size and strength.

a·nab·o·lism (ə-nāb'ə-līz'əm) n. The phase of metabolism in which simple substances are synthesized into the complex materials of living tissue. [ANA- + (META)BOLISM.] —an'a·bol'ic (än'ə-bōl'ik) adj.

a·nach·ro·nism (ə-nāk'rə-nīz'əm) n. 1. Representation of someone as existing or something as happening in other than the chronological, proper, or historical order. 2. One that is out of its proper or chronological order: "He is interested in the spirit of the play, and he is not averse to throwing in an anachronism or two if he thinks it will help underscore a point" (Skylines). [French anachronisme, from New Latin anachronismus, from Late Greek anakhronismos, from anakronizesthai, to be an anachronism : Greek ana-, ana- + Greek khronizein, to take time (from khronos, time).] —a·nach'ro·nis'tic, a·nach'ro·nous (-nəs) adj.

—a·nach'ro·nis'ti·cal·ly, a·nach'ro·nous·ly adv.

an·a·cli·sis (än'ə-klī'sis, ə-nāk'lī-) n. Psychological dependence on others. [Greek anaklisis, a leaning back, from anaklinein, to lean on : ana-, on-; see ANA- + klinein, to lean; see klei- in Appendix.] —an'a·clit'ic (-klit'ik) adj.

an·a·co·lu·thon (än'ə-kə-lōō'thōn') n. pl. an·a·co·lu·thons or an·a·co·lu·tha (-thə). Grammar. An abrupt change within a sentence to a second construction inconsistent with the first, sometimes used for rhetorical effect; for example, I warned him that if he continues to drink, what will become of him? [Late Latin, from Late Greek anakolouthon, inconsistency in logic, from Greek, neuter of anakolouthos, inconsistent : an-, not; see A-¹ + akolouthos, following (a-, together; see sem-¹ in Appendix + keleuthos, path).] —an'a·co·lu'thic adj.

an·a·con·da (än'ə-kōn'də) n. 1. A large nonvenomous arboreal snake (Eunectes murinus) of tropical South America that kills its prey by suffocating it in its coils. 2. A similar or related snake. [Perhaps alteration of Singhalese henakandayā, whip snake.]

A·nac·re·on (ə-nāk'rē-ən), 563?-478? B.C. Greek poet noted for his songs praising love and wine.

A·nac·re·on·tic (ə-nāk'rē-ōn'tik) adj. Of or in the manner of the poems of Anacreon, especially being convivial or amatory in subject. — n. A poem written in the style of Anacreon.

an·a·cru·sis (än'ə-krōō'sis) n. 1. One or more unstressed syllables at the beginning of a line of verse, before the reckoning of the normal meter begins.

2. Music. An upbeat. [New Latin, from Greek anakrousis, beginning of a tune, from anakrouein, to strike up a song : ana-, ana- + krouein, to push.]

an·a·dam·a bread (än'ə-dām'ə brēd) n. New England. A loaf of bread made of white flour, cornmeal, and molasses. [Origin unknown.]

an·a·dem (än'ə-dēm') n. Archaic. A wreath or garland for the head. [Latin anadēma, from Greek, from anadein, to bind up : ana-, ana- + dein, to bind.]

an·a·di·plo·sis (än'ə-də-plō'sis) n. pl. an·a·di·plo·ses (-sēz). Rhetorical repetition at the beginning of a phrase of the word or words with which the previous phrase ended; for example, He is a man of loyalty—loyalty always firm. [Late Latin anadiplōsis, from Greek anadiplōsis, from anadiploun, to redouble : ana-, ana- + diploun, to double (from diploous, double); see dwo- in Appendix.]

a·nad·ro·mous (ə-năd'rə-məs) adj. Migrating up rivers from the sea to breed in fresh water. Used of fish. [From Greek anadromos, running up, from anadromē, a running back : ana-, ana- + dromos, a running.]

A·na·dyr (ă'nə-dîr') A river of northeast Russia rising in the Anadyr Plateau and flowing about 1,118 km (695 mi) south and then east to Anadyr Bay, an inlet of the Bering Sea. There are coal and gold deposits near the river's mouth.

a·nae·mi·a (ə-nē'mē-ə) n. Variant of anemia.

a·nae·mic (ə-nē'mîk) adj. Variant of anemic.

an·aer·obe (än'ə-rōb', än-âr'ōb') n. An organism, such as a bacterium, that can live in the absence of atmospheric oxygen. —an'aer·o'bic (än'ə-rō'bîk, -âr-ō'bîk) adj. —an'aer·o'bic·al·ly adv.

an·aer·o·bi·o·sis (än'ə-rō'bī-ō'sîs, än'â-rō'-) n. Life sustained by an organism in the absence of oxygen. —an'aer·o'bi·ot'ic (-ōt'îk) adj.

an·aes·the·sia (än'îs-thē'zhə) n. Variant of anesthesia.

an·aes·the·si·ol·o·gist (än'îs-thē'zē-ōl'ə-jîst) n. Variant of anesthesiologist.

an·aes·the·si·ol·o·gy (än'îs-thē'zē-ōl'ə-jē) n. Variant of anesthesiology.

an·aes·thet·ic (än'îs-thēt'îk) adj. & n. Variant of anesthetic.

a·naes·the·tist (ə-nēs'thî-tîst) n. Variant of anesthetist.

a·naes·the·tize (ənēs'thî-tîz') v. Variant of anesthetize.

an·a·gen·e·sis (än'ə-jěn'î-sîs) n. A pattern of evolution that results in linear descent with no branching or splitting of the population.

an·a·glyph (än'ə-glîf') n. 1. An ornament carved in low relief. 2. A moving or still picture consisting of two slightly different perspectives of the same subject in contrasting colors that are superimposed on each other, producing a three-dimensional effect when viewed through two correspondingly colored filters. [From Late Latin anaglyphus, carved in low relief, from Greek anaglyphos : ana-, ana- + gluphein, to carve; see gleubh- in Appendix.] —an'a·glyph'ic, an'a·glyp'tic (-glîp'tîk) adj.

an·a·go·ge also an·a·go·gy (än'ə-gō'jē) n. pl. an·a·go·ges also an·a·go·gies. A mystical interpretation of a word, passage, or text, especially scriptural exegesis that detects allusions to heaven or the afterlife. [Late Latin anagōgē, from Late Greek, spiritual uplift, from anagein, to lift up : ana-, ana- + agein, to lead; see ag- in Appendix.] —an'a-gog'ic (-gōj'ik), an'a-gog'i-cal adj. —an'a-gog'i-cal-ly adv.

an-a-gram (än'ə-grām') n. 1. A word or phrase formed by reordering the letters of another word or phrase, such as satin to stain. 2. anagrams. (used with a sing. verb). Games. A game whose object is to form words from a group of randomly picked letters. [New Latin anagramma, from Greek anagrammatismos, from anagrammatizein, to rearrange letters in a word : ana-, from bottom to top; see ANA- + gramma, grammat-, letter; see gerbh- in Appendix.]

—an'a-gram-mat'ic (-grə-mät'ik) adj. —an'a-gram-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

an-a-gram-ma-tize (än'ə-grām'ə-tīz') v. tr. an-a-gram-ma-tized, an-a-gram-ma-tiz-ing, an-a-gram-ma-tiz-es. To make an anagram of. [Late Greek anagrammatizein, to rearrange letters in a word. See ANAGRAM.]

An-a-heim (än'ə-hīm') A city of southern California southeast of Los Angeles. It is the site of Disneyland, opened in 1955. Population, 266,406.

A-ná-huac (ə-nä'wäk') An extensive plateau of central Mexico. A heavily populated and highly industrial area that includes Mexico City, it was the center of a pre-Columbian Aztec civilization.

a-nal (ā'nəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or near the anus. 2. Psychology. a. Of or relating to the second stage of psychosexual development in psychoanalytic theory, during which gratification is derived from sensations associated with the anus. b. Indicating personality traits that originated during toilet training and are distinguished as anal-expulsive or anal-retentive. [From Latin ānus, anus.] —a'nal-ly adv.

anal. abbr. 1. Analogous; analogy. 2. Analysis; analytic.

a-nal-cime (ə-näl'sēm') also a-nal-cite (-sīt') n. A white or light-colored zeolite, $\text{NaAlSi}_2\text{O}_6 \cdot \text{H}_2\text{O}$, found in certain basalts. [French, from Greek analkimos, weak (from its weak electric power) : an-, not; see A-¹ + alkimos, brave (from alkē, strength).] —a-nal-cim'ic adj.

an-a-lects (än'ə-lĕkts') also an-a-lec-ta (än'ə-lĕk'tə) pl.n. Selections from or parts of a literary work or group of works. Often used as a title. [Greek analekta, selected things, from neuter pl. of analektos, gathered together, from analegein, to gather : ana-, ana- + legein, to gather; see leg- in Appendix.] —an'a-lec'tic adj.

an-a-lem-ma (än'ə-lĕm'ə) n. A graduated scale in the shape of a figure eight, indicating the sun's declination and the equation of time for every day of the year and usually found on sundials and globes. [Latin, sundial, from Greek analēmma, from analambanein, to take up. See ANALEPTIC.] an-a-lep-tic (än'ə-lĕp'tik) adj. Restorative or stimulating, as a drug or medication. — n. A medication used as a central nervous system stimulant. [Greek analēptikos, from analambanein, to take up : ana-, ana- + lambanein, lĕp-, to take.] a·nal·ex·pul·sive (ā'nəl-īk-spŭl'siv) adj. Psychology. Indicating personality traits, such as conceit, suspicion, ambition, and generosity, originating in habits, attitudes, or values associated with infantile pleasure in the expulsion of feces.

an·al·ge·si·a (än'əl-jē'zē-ə, -zhə) n. Pathology. A deadening or absence of the sense of pain without loss of consciousness. [Greek analgēsia : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + algēsia, pain (from algein, to feel pain, from algos, pain).] —an'al·get'ic (-jēt'ik) adj.

an·al·ge·sic (än'əl-jē'zīk, -sīk) n. A medication that reduces or eliminates pain. — adj. Of or causing analgesia.

an·a·log (än'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. & adj. Variant of analogue.

analog computer also analogue computer (än'ə-lŏg' kəm-pyŏō'tər) n. Computer Science. A computer in which numerical data are represented by measurable physical variables, such as electrical signals.

an·a·log·i·cal (än'ə-lŏj'i-kəl) adj. Of, expressing, composed of, or based on an analogy: the analogical use of a metaphor. —an'a·log'i·cal·ly adv.

a·nal·o·gist (ə-näl'ə-jīst) n. One who looks for or reasons from analogies: "Learning more from books than from life, he was an analogist" (Times Literary Supplement).

a·nal·o·gize (ə-näl'ə-jīz') v. a·nal·o·gized, a·nal·o·giz·ing, a·nal·o·giz·es. — v. tr. To make an analogy to. — v. intr. To look for or reason by analogy.

a·nal·o·gous (ə-näl'ə-gəs) adj. Abbr. anal. 1. Similar or alike in such a way as to permit the drawing of an analogy. 2. Biology. Similar in function but not in structure and evolutionary origin. [From Latin analogus, from Greek analogos, proportionate : ana-, according to; see ANA- + logos, proportion; see leg- in Appendix.] —a·nal'o·gous·ly adv. —a·nal'o·gous·ness n.

an·a·logue also an·a·log (än'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. 1. Something that bears an analogy to something else: Surimi is marketed as an analogue of crabmeat. 2. Biology. An organ or structure that is similar in function to one in another kind of organism but is of dissimilar evolutionary origin. 3. Chemistry. A structural derivative of a parent compound that often differs from it by a single element. — adj. 1. Often analog. Of, relating to, or being a device in which data are represented by variable measurable physical quantities. 2. Often analog. Computer Science. Of or relating to an analog computer. [French, analogous, analogue, from Medieval Latin analogus, from Greek analogos, proportionate. See ANALOGOUS.] analogue computer (än'ə-lŏg' kəm-pyŏō'tər) n. Computer Science. Variant of analog computer.

a·nal·o·gy (ə-näl'ə-jē) n. pl. a·nal·o·gies. Abbr. anal. 1. a. Similarity in some respects between things that are otherwise dissimilar. b. A comparison based on such similarity. See Synonyms at likeness. 2. Biology. Correspondence in function or position between organs of dissimilar evolutionary origin or structure. 3. A form of logical inference or an instance of it, based on the assumption that if two things are known to be alike in some respects, then they must be alike in other respects. 4. Linguistics. a. The process by which words and morphemes are re-formed or created on the model of existing grammatical patterns in a language, as Modern English name : names for Old English nama : naman on the model of nouns like stone : stones. b. The process by which inflectional paradigms are made more regular by the replacement of an uncommon or irregular stem or affix by one that is common or regular, as bit in Modern English bit, bit-ten for Old English bāt, biten. [Middle English analogie, from Old French, from Latin analogia, from Greek, from analogos, proportionate. See ANALOGOUS.] an-al-pha-bet-ic (än-äl'fə-bět'īk) adj. 1. Not alphabetical. 2. Unable to read; illiterate. — n. One who is unable to read; an illiterate. [From Greek analphabētos, not knowing the alphabet : an-, not; see A-¹ + alphabētos, alphabet; see ALPHABET.]

a-nal-re-ten-tive (ā'nəl-rĭ-tĕn'tĭv) adj. Psychology. Indicating personality traits, such as meticulousness, avarice, and obstinacy, originating in habits, attitudes, or values associated with infantile pleasure in retention of feces.

a-nal-y-sand (ə-näl'ī-sänd') n. A person who is being psychoanalyzed. [From ANALYZE, on the model of MULTIPLICAND.]

a-nal-y-sis (ə-näl'ī-sĭs) n. pl. a-nal-y-ses (-sēz'). Abbr. anal. 1. The separation of an intellectual or substantial whole into its constituent parts for individual study. 2. Chemistry. a. The separation of a substance into its constituent elements to determine either their nature (qualitative analysis) or their proportions (quantitative analysis). b. The stated findings of such a separation or determination. 3. Mathematics. a. A branch of mathematics principally involving differential and integral calculus, sequences, and series and concerned with limits and convergence. b. The method of proof in which a known truth is sought as a consequence of a series of deductions from that which is the thing to be proved.

4. Linguistics. The use of function words such as prepositions, pronouns, or auxiliary verbs instead of inflectional endings to express a grammatical relationship; for example, the cover of the dictionary instead of the dictionary's cover.

5. Psychoanalysis. 6. Systems analysis. [Medieval Latin, from Greek analusis, a dissolving, from analuein, to undo : ana-, throughout; see ANA- + luein, to loosen; see leu- in Appendix.]

analysis of variance (ə-näl'ī-sĭs ūv vār'ē-əns) n. An analysis of the variation in the outcomes of an experiment to assess the contribution of each variable to the variation.

an-a-lyst (än'ə-lĭst) n. 1. One that analyzes. 2. A licensed practitioner of psychoanalysis. 3. A systems analyst.

an-a-lyt-ic (än'ə-lĭt'īk) or an-a-lyt-i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Abbr. anal. 1. Of or relating to analysis or analytics. 2. Dividing into elemental parts or basic principles.

3. Reasoning or acting from a perception of the parts and interrelations of a subject: “Many of the most serious pianists have turned toward more analytic playing, with a renewed focus on the architecture and ideas of music” (Annalyn Swan).

4. Expert in or using analysis, especially in thinking: an analytic mind; an analytic approach. See Synonyms at logical. 5. Logic. Following necessarily; tautologous: an analytic truth. 6. Mathematics. a. Using, subjected to, or capable of being subjected to a methodology involving algebra and calculus. b. Proving a known truth by reasoning from that which is to be proved. 7. Linguistics. Expressing a grammatical category by using two or more words instead of an inflected form. 8. Psychoanalytic. [Medieval Latin analytīcus, from Greek analutikos, from analuein, to resolve. See ANALYSIS.] —an'a-lyt'i-cal-ly adv.

analytical balance (än'ə-līt'ī-kəl bäl'əns) n. A balance for chemical analysis.

analytic geometry (än'ə-līt'īk jē-ōm'ī-trē) n. Mathematics. The analysis of geometric structures and properties principally by algebraic operations on variables defined in terms of position coordinates.

an-a-lyt-ics (än'ə-līt'īks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The branch of logic dealing with analysis.

an-a-lyze (än'ə-līz') v. tr. an-a-lyzed, an-a-lyz-ing, an-a-lyz-es. 1. To separate into parts or basic principles so as to determine the nature of the whole; examine methodically. 2. Chemistry. To make a chemical analysis of.

3. Mathematics. To make a mathematical analysis of. 4. To psychoanalyze. [Perhaps from French analyser, from analyse, analysis, from Greek analysis. See ANALYSIS.] —an'a-lyz'a-ble adj. —an'a-ly-za'tion (-lī-zā'shən) n. —an'a-lyz'er n.

SYNONYMS: analyze, anatomize, dissect, resolve. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to separate into constituent parts for study”: analyze an ore to see if it contains iron; anatomizing the doctrine of free enterprise; medical students dissecting cadavers; vapor condensing and being resolved into water.

an-am-ne-sis (än'äm-nē'sīs) n. pl. an-am-ne-ses (-sēz). 1. Psychology. A recalling to memory; recollection. 2. Medicine. The complete case history of a patient. [Greek anamnēsis, from anamimnēskein, to remind : ana-, ana- + mimnēskein, to recall; see men⁻¹ in Appendix.] —an'am-nes'tic (-nēs'tik) adj. —an'am-nes'ti-cal-ly adv.

an-a-mor-phic (än'ə-môr'fik) adj. Having, producing, or designating different optical magnification along mutually perpendicular radii: an anamorphic lens.

an-a-mor-pho-sis (än'ə-môr'fə-sīs) n. pl. an-a-mor-pho-ses (-sēz').

1. a. An image that appears distorted unless it is viewed from a special angle or with a special instrument. b. The production of such an image. 2. Evolutionary increase in complexity of form and function. [New Latin, from Late Greek anamorphoun, to transform : Greek ana-, ana- + Greek morphē, shape.]

An·a·ni·as (än'ə-nī'əs) In the New Testament, a liar who dropped dead when Peter rebuked him.

An·an·ke (ə-näng'kē, ə-nän'-) n. The satellite of Jupiter that is 14th in distance from the planet. [Greek Anankē, mother ofAdrasteia, distributor of rewards and punishments, by Jupiter, from anankē, necessity.]

an·a·pest also an·a·paest (än'ə-pěst') n. 1. A metrical foot composed of two short syllables followed by one long one, as in the word seventeen. 2. A line of verse using this meter; for example, “Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house” (Clement Clarke Moore). [Latin anapestus, from Greek anapaistos : ana-, ana- + paiein, pais-, to strike (so called because an anapest is a reversed dactyl); see peu- in Appendix.] —an'a-pest'ic adj.

an·a·phase (än'ə-fāz') n. Biology. The stage of mitosis and meiosis in which the chromosomes move to opposite ends of the nuclear spindle.

a·naph·o·ra (ə-näf'ər-ə) n. The deliberate repetition of a word or phrase at the beginning of several successive verses, clauses, or paragraphs; for example, “We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills” (Winston S. Churchill). [Late Latin, from Greek, from anapherein, to bring back : ana-, ana- + pherein, to carry; see bher-¹ in Appendix.]

an·aph·ro·dis·i·a (än-äf'rə-dīz'ē-ə, -dīzh'ə) n. Decline or absence of sexual desire. [Greek, want of power to inspire love : an-, without; see A-¹ + aphrodisia, sexual pleasures; see APHRODISIAC.] —an·aph'ro·dis'i·ac (än-äf'rə-dīz'ē-äk') adj. & n.

anaphylactic shock (än'ə-fə-läk'tik shök) n. A sudden, severe allergic reaction characterized by a sharp drop in blood pressure, urticaria, and breathing difficulties that is caused by the injection of a foreign substance, such as a drug or bee venom, into the body after a preliminary or sensitizing injection. The reaction may be fatal if emergency treatment, including the administration of epinephrine injections, is not given immediately. Also called anaphylaxis an·a·phy·lax·is (än'ə-fə-läk'sis) n. 1. Hypersensitivity especially in animals to a substance, such as foreign protein or a drug, that is induced by a small preliminary or sensitizing injection of or exposure to the substance. 2. See anaphylactic shock. [ANA- + (PRO)PHYLAXIS.] —an'a-phy-lac'tic (-läk'tik), an'a-phy-lac'toid (-toid) adj. —an'a-phy-lac'ti-cal-ly adv.

an·a·pla·sia (än'ə-plā'zhə) n. Reversion of cells to an immature or a less differentiated form, as occurs in most malignant tumors.

an·a·plas·tic (än'ə-pläs'tik) adj. 1. Medicine. Relating to the surgical restoration of a lost or absent part. 2. Of or characterized by cells that have become less differentiated.

A·ná·po·lis (ä-nä'pōō-līs) A city of central Brazil southeast of Brasília. It is a transportation hub. Population, 160,571.

an·arch (än'ärk') n. An adherent of anarchy or a leader practicing it. [Back-formation from ANARCHY.]

an·ar·chic (än-är'kīk) or an·ar·chi·cal (-kī-kəl) adj. 1. a. Of, like, or supporting anarchy: anarchic oratory. b. Likely to produce or result in anarchy.

2. Lacking order or control: an anarchic state of affairs in the office; an anarchic mobile sculpture. —an·ar'chi·cal·ly adv.

an·ar·chism (än'ər-kīz'əm) n. 1. The theory or doctrine that all forms of government are oppressive and undesirable and should be abolished. 2. Active resistance and terrorism against the state, as used by some anarchists. 3. Rejection of all forms of coercive control and authority: "He was inclined to anarchism; he hated system and organization and uniformity" (Bertrand Russell).

—an'ar·chis'tic (-kīs'tīk) adj.

an·ar·chist (än'ər-kīst) n. An advocate or a participant in anarchism.

an·ar·cho·syn·di·cal·ism (än-är'kō-sīn'dī-kə-līz'əm) n. Syndicalism.

[ANARCH(Y) + SYNDICALISM.]

an·ar·chy (än'ər-kē) n. pl. an·ar·chies. 1. Absence of any form of political authority. 2. Political disorder and confusion. 3. Absence of any cohesive principle, such as a common standard or purpose. [New Latin anarchia, from Greek anarkhia, from anarkhos, without a ruler : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + arkhos, ruler; see -ARCH.]

an·ar·thri·a (än-är'thrē-ə) n. Loss of the motor ability that enables speech.

[New Latin, from Greek anarthros, not articulated. See ANARTHROUS.]

—an·ar'thric (-thrīk) adj.

an·ar·throus (än-är'thrəs) adj. 1. Linguistics. Occurring without an article. Used especially of Greek nouns. 2. Zoology. Lacking joints. [From Greek anarthros, not articulated : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + arthron, joint; see ar- in Appendix.]

an·a·sar·ca (än'ə-sär'kə) n. A general accumulation of serous fluid in various tissues and body cavities. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin : Greek ana, throughout; see ANA- + Greek sarx, sark-, flesh.] —an'a·sar'cous (-sär'kəs) adj.

A·na·sa·zi (ä'nə-sä'zē) n. pl. Anasazi. 1. A Native American people inhabiting southern Colorado and Utah and northern New Mexico and Arizona from about A.D. 100 and whose descendants are the present-day Pueblo peoples. Anasazi culture includes an early Basket Maker phase and a later Pueblo phase marked by the construction of cliff dwellings and by expert craftsmanship in weaving and pottery. 2. A member of this people. [Navajo 'anaasázi, inhabitants of the now ruined Pueblos.]

an·as·tig·mat (än-äs'tīg-mät') n. An astigmatic lens.

an-as-tig-mat-ic (än-äs'tīg-măt'īk) adj. Free from astigmatism. Used of a compound lens in which the separate components compensate for the astigmatic effects of each lens.

a-nas-to-mose (ə-näs'tə-mōz', -mōs') v. a-nas-to-mosed, a-nas-to-mos-ing, a-nas-to-mos-es. — v. tr. To join by anastomosis. — v. intr. To be connected by anastomosis, as blood vessels. [Probably back-formation from ANASTOMOSIS.]

a-nas-to-mo-sis (ə-näs'tə-mō'sis) n. pl. a-nas-to-mo-ses (-sēz). 1. The connection of separate parts of a branching system to form a network, as of leaf veins, blood vessels, or a river and its branches. 2. Medicine. The surgical connection of separate or severed tubular hollow organs to form a continuous channel, as between two parts of the intestine. [Late Latin anastomōsis, from Greek, outlet, from anastomoun, to furnish with a mouth : ana-, ana- + stoma, mouth.]

—a-nas'to-mot'ic (-mōt'īk) adj.

a-nas-trophe (ə-näs'trə-fē) n. Grammar. Inversion of the normal syntactic order of words; for example, “Matter too soft a lasting mark to bear” (Alexander Pope). [Late Latin anastrophē, from Greek, from anastrephēin, to turn upside-down : ana-, ana- + strephein, to turn; see streb(h)- in Appendix.]

anat. abbr. Anatomical; anatomist; anatomy.

an-a-tase (än'ə-tās', -tāz') n. A rare blue or light yellow to brown crystalline mineral, the rarest of three forms of titanium dioxide, TiO₂, used as a pigment, especially in paint. [French, from Greek anataxis, extension (from its long crystals), from anateinein, to extend : ana-, ana- + teinein, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.]

a-nath-e-ma (ə-nāth'ə-mə) n. pl. a-nath-e-mas. 1. A formal ecclesiastical ban, curse, or excommunication. 2. A vehement denunciation; a curse: “the sound of a witch's anathemas in some unknown tongue” (Nathaniel Hawthorne). 3. One that is cursed or damned. 4. One that is greatly reviled, loathed, or shunned. [Late Latin, an accursed thing, from Greek anathēma, from anatithenai, to dedicate : ana-, ana- + tithenai, to put; see dhē- in Appendix.]

a-nath-e-ma-tize (ə-nāth'ə-mə-tīz') v. tr. a-nath-e-ma-tized, a-nath-e-ma-tiz-ing, a-nath-e-ma-tiz-es. To proclaim an anathema on; curse. [Late Latin anathematizāre, from Greek anathematizein, from anathema, anathemat-, anathema. See ANATHEMA.] —a-nath'e-ma-ti-za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

An-a-to-li-a (än'ə-tō'lē-ə, -tōl'yə) The Asian part of Turkey. It is usually considered synonymous with Asia Minor.

An-a-to-li-an (än'ə-tō'lē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Anatolia or its people, language, or culture. 2. Of or relating to a branch of the Indo-European language family that includes Hittite and other extinct languages of ancient Anatolia. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Anatolia. 2. The Anatolian languages.

an·a·tom·i·cal (än'ə-tōm'ī-kəl) also an·a·tom·ic (-tōm'ik) adj. Abbr. anat.

1. Concerned with anatomy. 2. Concerned with dissection. 3. Related to the structure of an organism. —an'a·tom'i·cal·ly adv.

a·nat·o·mist (ə-năt'ə-mĭst) n. Abbr. anat. An expert in or a student of anatomy.

a·nat·o·mize (ə-năt'ə-mĭz') v. tr. a·nat·o·mized, a·nat·o·miz·ing, a·nat·o·miz·es. 1. To dissect (an animal or other organism) to study the structure and relation of the parts. 2. To analyze in minute detail: "Pynchon is the devil who went beyond the grave to anatomize the remains of the modern soul" (Josephine Hendin). See Synonyms at analyze. —a·nat'o·mi·za'tion (-mĭ-zā'shən) n.

a·nat·o·my (ə-năt'ə-mē) n. pl. a·nat·o·mies. Abbr. anat. 1. The bodily structure of a plant or an animal or of any of its parts. 2. The science of the shape and structure of organisms and their parts. 3. A treatise on anatomic science. 4. Dissection of a plant or animal to study the structure, position, and interrelation of its various parts. 5. A skeleton. 6. The human body. 7. A detailed examination or analysis: the anatomy of a crime. [Middle English anatomie, from Late Latin anatomia, from Greek anatomē, dissection : ana-, ana- + tomē, a cutting (from temnein, to cut); see tem- in Appendix.]

a·nat·ro·pous (ə-năt'ɾə-pəs) adj. Botany. Completely inverted so that the micropyle is facing downward and situated near the base of the funiculus: an anatropous ovule.

a·nat·to (ə-nä'tō) n. Variant of annatto.

An·ax·ag·o·ras (än'äk-säg'ər-əs), 500?-428 B.C. Greek philosopher who correctly explained solar eclipses and believed matter to be composed of atoms.

A·nax·i·man·der (ə-näk'sə-măn'dər), 611-547 B.C. Greek philosopher and astronomer who speculated that the universe arose out of the separation of opposite qualities from one primordial substance.

anc. abbr. Ancient.

-ance suff. 1. State or condition: absorptance. 2. Action: continuance. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -antia, n. suff. (-ant, -ant + -ia, n. suff.), and from Latin -entia (-ent, -ent + -ia, n. suff.).]

an·ces·tor (än'sēs'tər) n. 1. A person from whom one is descended, especially if more remote than a grandparent; a forebear. 2. A forerunner or predecessor. 3. Law. The person from whom an estate has been inherited. 4. Biology. The actual or hypothetical organism or stock from which later kinds evolved. [Middle English auncestre, from Old French, from Latin antecessor, predecessor, from antecessus, past participle of antecēdere, to precede : ante-, ante- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: ancestor, forebear, forefather, progenitor. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a person from whom one is descended”: ancestors who were farmers; an island once owned by his forebears; methods as old as our forefathers; the wisdom of our progenitors.

ANTONYM: descendant

an·ces·tral (än-sēs'trəl) adj. Of, relating to, or evolved from an ancestor or ancestors. —an·ces'tral·ly adv.

an·ces·try (än'sēs'trē) n. pl. an·ces·tries. 1. Ancestral descent or lineage.

2. Ancestors considered as a group. [Middle English auncestrie, alteration (influenced by auncestre), of Old French ancesserie, from ancessour, ancestor, from Latin antecessor. See ANCESTOR.]

An·chi·ses (än-kī'sēz') n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The father of Aeneas who was rescued by his son during the sack of Troy.

an·chor (äng'kər) n. 1. Nautical. A heavy object attached to a vessel by a cable or rope and cast overboard to keep the vessel in place either by its weight or by its flukes, which grip the bottom. 2. A rigid point of support, as for securing a rope. 3. A source of security or stability. 4. Sports. a. An athlete, usually the strongest member of a team, who performs the last stage of a relay race or other competition. b. The end of a tug-of-war team. Also called anchorman 5. An anchorperson. — v. anchored, an·chor·ing, an·chors. — v. tr. 1. To hold fast by or as if by an anchor. See Synonyms at fasten. 2. Sports. To serve as an anchor for (a team or competition). 3. To narrate or coordinate (a newscast). 4. To provide or form an anchor store for: Two major stores anchor each end of the shopping mall. — v. intr. Nautical. To drop anchor or lie at anchor. [Middle English anker, ancher, from Old English ancor, from Latin ancora, anchora, from Greek ankura.]

WORD HISTORY: The history of the word anchor can be said to be a case study in various levels of sophistication. To begin with, the early history of the word illustrates the kind of borrowing done by the various Germanic peoples from the more advanced culture of the Roman Empire. Ancora, the Latin source of our word anchor, was borrowed into several Germanic languages, including Old English and Old High German, an indication that this appropriation occurred during the period of initial contact between Germanic peoples and the Roman Empire. If the early history of anchor illustrates borrowing from a more advanced culture by a less advanced one, a later stage in the word's history may illustrate a misplaced sophistication. The Latin word ancora itself came from Greek ankura but was sometimes spelled anchora in Latin because of a false analogy with other Greek words, in which the sound (k) was spelled ch. As far back as the 14th century English writers who were familiar with this Latin spelling inserted the ch in the word, otherwise spelled with a k or c, thus causing difficulty for many a beginning speller of later times.

an-chor-age (äng'kær-ij) n. 1. A place for anchoring. 2. A fee charged for the privilege of anchoring. 3. The act of anchoring or the condition of being at anchor. 4. A means of securing or stabilizing: The Bank of England is often regarded as the anchorage of the European financial community.

An-chor-age (äng'kær-ij) A city of southern Alaska on Cook Inlet southwest of Fairbanks. Founded in 1915 as construction headquarters for the Alaska Railroad, it is the largest city in the state. Population, 226,338.

an-cho-ress (äng'kær-ıs) n. A woman who has retired into seclusion for religious reasons. [Middle English anchoryse, ankres, from ancre, anchorite, from Old English ancra, from Old Irish anchara, from Late Latin anachōrēta. See ANCHORITE.]

an-cho-rite (äng'kæ-rīt') also an-cho-ret (-rēt') n. A person who has retired into seclusion for religious reasons. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin anchōrita, from Late Latin anachōrēta, from Late Greek anakhōrētēs, from anakhōrein, to retire : ana-, ana- + khōrein, to withdraw; see ghē- in Appendix.]
—an'cho-rit'ic (-rīt'ik) adj.

an-chor-man (äng'kær-män') n. 1. A man who narrates or coordinates a newscast in which several correspondents give reports. 2. Sports. See anchor (n., sense 4).

an-chor-per-son (äng'kær-pûr'sən) n. An anchorman or an anchorwoman.

anchor store (äng'kær stôr) n. A large business establishment, such as a department store or a supermarket, that is prominently located in a shopping mall, usually at one end. The anchor store attracts customers who are then expected to patronize the other shops in the mall.

an-chor-wom-an (äng'kær-wööm'ən) n. A woman who narrates or coordinates a newscast in which several correspondents give reports.

an-cho-vy (än'chō'vē, än-chō'vē) n. pl. anchovy or an-cho-vies. A small, herringlike marine fish of the family Engraulidae, especially the European fish (Engraulis encrasicolus), widely used in appetizers and various dishes. [Spanish anchova, possibly from Vulgar Latin apiuua*, variant of Latin aphyē*, from Greek aphuē.]

an-chy-lose (äng'kæ-lōs', -lōz') v. Variant of ankylose.

an-chy-lo-sis (äng'kæ-lō'sis) n. Variant of ankylosis.

an-cien ré-gime (än-syän' rā-zhēm') n. 1. The political and social system that existed in France before the Revolution of 1789. 2. A sociopolitical or other system that no longer exists. [French : ancien, old + régime, regime.]

an-cient¹ (än'shənt) adj. Abbr. anc. 1. Of great age; very old. 2. Of or relating to times long past, especially those of the historical period before the fall of the Western Roman Empire (A.D. 476). See Synonyms at old. 3. Old-fashioned; antiquated. 4. Having the qualities associated with age, wisdom, or long use; venerable. — n. 1. A very old person. 2. A person who lived in times long past. 3. ancients. a. The peoples of the classical nations of antiquity. b. The ancient Greek and Roman authors. [Middle English auncien, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin anteānus*: Latin ante, before; see ant- in Appendix + -ānus, adj. and n. suff.] — an'cient·ly adv. — an'cient·ness n.

an·cient² (ān'shənt) n. 1. Archaic. An ensign; a flag. 2. Obsolete. A flag-bearer or lieutenant. [Alteration of ENSIGN.]

ancient history (ān'shənt hīs'tə-rē) n. 1. The history of times long past. 2. Informal. Common knowledge, especially of a recent event that has lost its original impact or importance.

an·cil·lar·y (än'sə-lər'ē) adj. 1. Subordinate: “For Degas, sculpture was never more than ancillary to his painting” (Herbert Read). 2. Auxiliary; helping: an ancillary pump. — n. pl. an·cil·lar·ies. 1. Something, such as a workbook, that is subordinate to something else, such as a textbook. 2. Archaic. A servant. [From Latin ancilla, maidservant, feminine diminutive of anculus, servant. See k^wel-1 in Appendix.]

An·co·hu·ma (äng'kə-hōō'mə, äng'kō-ōō'mä) A mountain, about 6,554 m (21,490 ft) high, of western Bolivia near the eastern shore of Lake Titicaca.

an·con (äng'kōn') n. pl. an·con·es (-kō'nēz). A projecting bracket that is used in classical architecture to carry the upper elements of a cornice; a console. [Latin ancōn, from Greek ankōn, elbow.]

An·co·na (äng-kō'nə, än-, än-) A city of central Italy on the Adriatic Sea. It is a leading port and an industrial and commercial center. Population, 106,421.

-ancy suff. Condition or quality: buoyancy. [Latin -antia, and -entia; see -ANCE.]

an·cy·lo·sto·mi·a·sis (än'sə-lō-stō-mī'ə-sīs, äng'kə-lō-) n. A disease caused by hookworm infestation and marked by progressive anemia. Also called hookworm disease, tunnel disease. [New Latin Ancylostoma, hookworm genus (Greek ankulos, curved + Greek stoma, mouth) + -IASIS.]

An·cy·ra (än-sī'rə) See Ankara.

and (ənd, ən; änd when stressed) conj. 1. Together with or along with; in addition to; as well as. Used to connect words, phrases, or clauses that have the same grammatical function in a construction. 2. Added to; plus: Two and two makes four. 3. Used to indicate result. 4. Usage Problem. To. Used between finite verbs, such as go, come, try, write, or see: try and find it; come and see. 5. Archaic. If: and it pleases you. [Middle English, from Old English. See en in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: It is frequently asserted that sentences beginning with and or but express “incomplete thoughts” and are therefore incorrect. But this rule was ridiculed by grammarians like Wilson Follett (who ascribed it to “schoolmarmish rhetoric”) and H.W. Fowler (who called it a “superstition”), and the stricture has been ignored by writers from Shakespeare to Virginia Woolf. Members of the Usage Panel were asked whether they paid attention to the rule in their own writing: 24 percent answered “always or usually,” 36 percent answered “sometimes,” and 40 percent answered “rarely or never.” See Usage Note at both. See Usage Note at but. See Usage Note at try. See Usage Note at with.

AND (ænd) n. Computer Science. A logic operator equivalent to the sentential connective “and.” [From AND.]

and. abbr. Music. Andante.

And. abbr. Andorra.

An-da-lu-sia (än'də-lōō'zhə, -zhē-ə, -shē-ə) A region of southern Spain on the Mediterranean Sea, the Strait of Gibraltar, and the Atlantic Ocean. The area contains magnificent Moorish architecture, including the historic towns of Seville, Granada, and Córdoba. —An'da-lu'sian (-zhən, -shən) adj. & n. an-da-lu-site (än'də-lōō'sīt') n. A mineral aluminum silicate, Al_2SiO_5 , usually found in prisms of various colors. [After Andalusia.]

An-da-man-ese (än'də-mə-nēz', -nēs') n. pl. Andamanese. 1. Also An-da-man (än'də-mən). A member of an indigenous people of the Andaman Islands. 2. The language of the Andamanese, of no known linguistic affiliation.

—An'da-man-ese' adj.

An-da-man Islands (än'də-mən i'ləndz) A group of Indian islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal south of Burma. They are separated from the Malay Peninsula by the Andaman Sea, an arm of the Bay of Bengal.

an-dan-te (än-dän'tā, än-dän'tē) Music. adv. & adj. Abbr. and. In a moderately slow tempo, usually considered to be slower than allegretto but faster than adagio. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. An andante passage or movement. [Italian, from present participle of andare, to walk, ultimately perhaps from Latin ambulāre.]

an-dan-ti-no (än'dän-tē'nō, än'dän) Music. adv. & adj. In a tempo variously construed as slightly faster or slower than andante. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl. an-dan-ti-nos. An andantino passage or movement. [Italian, diminutive of andante, andante. See ANDANTE.]

An-der-lecht (än'dər-lēkt', -lēkt') A commune of central Belgium, an industrial and residential suburb of Brussels. Erasmus lived here from 1517 to 1521. Population, 92,912.

An-der-sen (än'dər-sən), Hans Christian. 1805-1875. Danish writer known for his fairy tales, including “The Princess and the Pea” and “The Ugly Duckling.”

An-der-son (än'dər-sən) 1. A city of east-central Indiana northeast of Indianapolis. There are numerous prehistoric mounds nearby. Population, 59,459.

2. A city of northwest South Carolina southwest of Greenville near the Georgia border. It is a trade and shipping center in an agricultural region. Population, 26,184.

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Carl David. Born 1905. American physicist. He won a 1936 Nobel Prize for his discovery of the positron.

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Dame Judith. 1898-1992. Australian-born actress noted for her roles in the plays of Shakespeare and Eugene O'Neill and for her chilling portrayal of Mrs. Danvers in the 1940 film Rebecca.

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Margaret Caroline. 1893?-1973. American editor who founded and edited The Little Review (1914-1929), an influential literary magazine.

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Marian. 1902-1993. American contralto. Acclaimed for her renditions of spirituals, she was the first Black singer to perform at New York City's Metropolitan Opera (1955).

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Maxwell. 1888-1959. American playwright whose works, some of which are in blank verse, include Both Your Houses, which won a 1933 Pulitzer Prize, and Winterset (1935).

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Philip Warren. Born 1923. American physicist. He shared a 1977 Nobel Prize for developments in computer memory systems.

An-der-son (än'dər-sən), Sherwood. 1876-1941. American writer whose often autobiographical works include Winesburg, Ohio (1919).

Anderson River (än'dər-sən rĭv'ər) A river of northwestern Northwest Territories, Canada, meandering about 748 km (465 mi) north, west, and north again to Liverpool Bay, an arm of the Arctic Ocean.

An-der-son-ville (än'dər-sən-vĭl') A village of southwest-central Georgia north-northeast of Americus. Its notorious Confederate prison, where more than 12,000 soldiers died during the Civil War, is now a national historic site.

An-des (än'dēz) A mountain system of western South America extending more than 8,045 km (5,000 mi) along the Pacific coast from Venezuela to Tierra del Fuego. The Andes rise at many points to more than 6,710 m (22,000 ft).

—An'de-an (än'dē-ən, än-dē'ən) adj. & n.

an-de-site (än'dī-zīt') n. A gray, fine-grained volcanic rock, chiefly plagioclase and feldspar. [After Andes.]

AND gate (änd gāt) n. Computer Science. A logic circuit with two or more input wires that emits a signal only if all input wires receive coincident signals.

and-i-ron (änd'ī'ərn) n. One of a pair of metal supports used for holding up logs in a fireplace. Also called dogRegional., dog ironRegional., firedog. [Middle English aundiren, alteration (influenced by Middle English iren, iron), of Old French andier, of Celtic origin.]

An-di-zhan (än'dī-zhän', än-dī-zhän') A city of eastern Uzbekistan east-southeast of Tashkent. It is an industrial center in a cotton-raising area. Population, 275,000.

AND NOT gate (ănd nõt gāt) n. Computer Science. A logic circuit that acts as the logical operator AND NOT. A signal is transmitted only if A is true and B is not.

and/or (ăn' dôr') conj. Used to indicate that either or both of the items connected by it are involved.

USAGE NOTE: And/or is widely used in legal and business writing. Its use in general writing to mean “one or the other or both” is acceptable but can appear stilted. See Usage Note at or¹.

AND-OR circuit (ăn'dôr' sîr'kît) n. Computer Science. A gating circuit that produces an output signal only if one of several possible combined input signals is received.

An·dor·ra (ăn-dôr'ə, -dôr-ə) Abbr. And. A tiny country of southwest Europe between France and Spain in the eastern Pyrenees. Although it pays nominal yearly homage to its suzerains in France and Spain, it is an independent republic. Andorra la Vella (population, 14,928) is the capital. The country's population is 38,051. —An·dor·ran adj. & n.

an·dou·ille (ăn-dō'ē) n. A spicy smoked sausage made with pork and garlic, used especially in Cajun cooking. [French, from Old French andoille, from Medieval Latin inductilia*, things to be introduced, from inductilis, induct-, introduce-able, from Latin inducere, to introduce into a casing. See INDUCE.]

An·do·ver (ăn'dō'vər, -də-) A town of northeast Massachusetts south of Lawrence. Phillips Andover Academy (founded 1778) is here. Population, 29,151.

andr- pref. Variant of andro-.

An·dra·da e Sil·va (ăn-dră'də ě sêl'və), José Bonifácio de. 1763?-1838.

Brazilian politician, scientist, and poet who led the movement for Brazilian independence from Portugal.

an·dra·dite (ăn-dră'dīt) n. A green to brown or black calcium-iron garnet, Ca₃Fe₂(SiO₄)₃. [After Jos ANDRADA E SILVAÉ BONIFÁCIO DE.]

An·drás·sy (ăn-drăs'ē, ôn'dră-shē), Count Gyula. 1823-1890. Hungarian politician who as prime minister (1867) helped create the Austro-Hungarian dual monarchy. His son Count Gyula (1860-1929) sought a separate peace between the Allies and Austria-Hungary during World War I.

An·dré (ăn'dră, ăn'drē), John. 1751-1780. British army officer hanged as a spy in the American Revolution for conspiring with Benedict Arnold.

An·dre·a del Sar·to (ăn-dră'ə dël sār'tō), Originally Andrea d'Agnolo di Francesco. 1486-1531. Italian painter whose works, including a fresco cycle of the life of John the Baptist, epitomize Florentine classicism.

An·dre·a·nof Islands (ăn'drē-ăn'əf ī'ləndz, -ôf, ăn'drē-ă'nəf) A group of islands of southwest Alaska in the central Aleutian Islands.

An-dre-ev or An-dre-yev (än-drā'əf, -yəf), Leonid Nikolaevich. 1871-1919. Russian writer noted for his realistic and pessimistic stories, novels, and plays.

An-drew (än'drēō), Saint. One of the 12 Apostles. According to legend, he was martyred at Patrai (c. A.D. 60).

An-drews (än'drōōz), Charles McLean. 1863-1943. American historian who published numerous works on the colonial period.

An-drews (än'drōōz), Roy Chapman. 1884-1960. American naturalist noted for his contributions to paleontology and geology.

An-dre-yev (än-drā'əf, -yəf), Leonid Nikolaevich. See Leonid Nikolaevich Andreev.

An-dri-a (än'drē-ə) A city of southern Italy west-northwest of Bari. The imposing Castel del Monte, built in the 13th century, is nearby. Population, 83,319.

An-drić (än'drič), Ivo. 1892-1975. Yugoslavian writer. He won the 1961 Nobel Prize for literature.

andro- or andr- pref. 1. Male; masculine: androgen. 2. Stamen or anther: androecium. [Greek, from anēr, andr-, man. See ner-² in Appendix.]

An-dro-cles (än'drə-klēz') also An-dro-clus (-kləs) n. A legendary Roman slave held to have been spared in the arena by a lion that remembered him as the man who had once removed a thorn from its paw.

an-droe-ci-um (än-drē'shē-əm, -shəm) n. pl. an-droe-ci-a (-shē-ə, -shə). The stamens of a flower considered as a group. [New Latin : ANDR(O)- + Greek oikion, diminutive of oikos, house; see weik-¹ in Appendix.] —an-droe'cial (-shəl) adj.

an-dro-gen (än'drə-jən) n. A steroid hormone, such as testosterone or androsterone, that controls the development and maintenance of masculine characteristics. —an'dro-gen'ic (-jən'ik) adj.

an-drog-e-nize (än-drōj'ə-nīz') v. tr. an-drog-e-nized, an-drog-e-niz-ing, an-drog-e-niz-es. To treat with male hormones, usually in large doses. —an-drog'e-ni-za'tion (-nī-zā'shən) n.

an-dro-gyne (än'drə-jīn') n. An androgynous individual. [French, from Old French, from Latin androgynus. See ANDROGYNOUS.]

an-drog-y-nous (än-drōj'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Biology. Having both female and male characteristics; hermaphroditic. 2. Being neither distinguishably masculine nor feminine, as in dress, appearance, or behavior; unisex: "The diet and exercise cult was born of a desire to develop androgynous bodies that are more muscular than softly curved" (New York Times). [From Latin androgynus, hermaphrodite, from Greek androgynos : andro-, andro- + gunē, woman; see -GYNOUS.]

—an-drog'y-nous-ly adv. —an-drog'y-ny (-ə-nē) n.

an·droid (än'droid') adj. Possessing human features. — n. An automaton that is created from biological materials and resembles a human being. Also called humanoid

An·drom·a·che (än-dröm'ə-kē) n. Greek Mythology. The faithful wife of Hector, captured by the Greeks at the fall of Troy.

an·drom·e·da (än-dröm'ī-də) n. Any of several shrubs of the genera Pieris or Andromeda or their relatives. [From ANDROMEDA.]

An·drom·e·da (än-dröm'ī-də) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The daughter of Cepheus and Cassiopeia and wife of Perseus, who had rescued her from a sea monster. 2. A constellation in the Northern Hemisphere between Lacerta and Perseus and south of Cassiopeia. It contains a large spiral galaxy visible to the naked eye. The spiral is 2.2 million light-years from Earth. [Latin, from Greek Andromedē.]

An·dro·pov (än-dröp'öf, -öv), Yuri. 1914-1984. Soviet politician who was general secretary of the Communist Party from 1982 to 1984.

An·dros (än'drəs) 1. The largest island of the Bahamas, in the western part of the archipelago. 2. (also än'drös') An island of southeast Greece in the Aegean Sea. The northernmost of the Cyclades, it was colonized by Athens in the fifth century B.C.

An·dros (än'drös, -drəs), Sir Edmund. 1637-1714. English colonial administrator in America whose attempt to unify the New England colonies under his governorship (1686-1689) was met by revolt.

An·dros·cog·gin (än'drə-skög'ĭn) A river of northeast New Hampshire and southwest Maine flowing about 253 km (157 mi) to the Kennebec River near the Maine coast.

an·dros·ter·one (än-drös'tə-rön') n. A steroid hormone excreted in urine that reinforces masculine characteristics. [ANDRO- + STER(OL) + -ONE.]

-androus suff. Having a specified number or kind of stamens: monandrous. [From New Latin -andrus, from Greek -andros, having men, from anēr, andr-, man. See ner-² in Appendix.]

-andry suff. 1. The condition of having a specified kind or number of husbands: monandry. 2. The condition of having a specified kind or number of stamens: polyandry. [Greek -andria, from anēr, andr-, man. See ner-² in Appendix.]

-ane suff. A saturated hydrocarbon: hexane. [Variant of -ENE, -INE², and -ONE.]

an·ec·dot·age (än'ĭk-dō'tĭj) n. Anecdotes considered as a group.

an·ec·dot·al (än'ĭk-dōt'l) or an·ec·dot·ic (-dōt'ĭk) also an·ec·dot·i·cal (-ĭkəl) adj. Of, characterized by, or full of anecdotes. — an'ec·dot'al·ist n. — an'ec·dot'al·ly adv.

an·ec·dote (än'ĭk-dōt') n. 1. A short account of an interesting or humorous incident. 2. pl. an·ec·dotes or an·ec·do·ta (-dō'tə). Secret or hitherto undivulged particulars of history or biography. [French, from Greek anekdota, unpublished items : an-, not; see A⁻¹ + ekdota, neuter pl. of ekdotos, published (from ekdidonai, to publish : ek-, out; see ecto- + didonai, to give); see dō- in Appendix.]

an·ec·dot·ic (än'ík-döt'ík) also an·ec·dot·i·cal (-ĩ-kəl) adj. 1. Given to telling anecdotes. 2. Variant of anecdotal. —an'ec·dot'i·cal·ly adv.

an·ec·dot·ist (än'ík-dō'tíst) n. One who tells, collects, or publishes anecdotes.

an·e·cho·ic (än'ě-kō'ík) adj. Neither having nor producing echoes: an anechoic chamber.

a·ne·mi·a also a·nae·mi·a (ə-nē'mē-ə) n. A pathological deficiency in the oxygen-carrying component of the blood, measured in unit volume concentrations of hemoglobin, red blood cell volume, or red blood cell number. [New Latin, from Greek anaimia : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + haima, blood.]

a·ne·mic also a·nae·mic (ə-nē'mík) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or suffering from anemia. 2. Lacking vitality; listless and weak: an anemic attempt to hit the baseball; an anemic economic recovery. —a·ne'mi·cal·ly adv.

anemo- pref. Wind: anemometer. [From Greek anemos, wind. See anə- in Appendix.]

a·nem·o·cho·ry (ə-nēm'ə-kô'r'ē, -kôr'ē) n. Dispersal of seeds, fruits, or other plant parts by wind.

a·nem·o·graph (ə-nēm'ə-grăf') n. A recording anemometer.

an·e·mog·ra·phy (än'ə-mōg'rə-fē) n. The science of recording anemometrical measurements.

an·e·mom·e·ter (än'ə-mōm'ĩ-tər) n. An instrument for indicating and measuring wind force and velocity.

an·e·mom·e·try (än'ə-mōm'ĩ-trē) n. Measurement of wind force and velocity. —an'e·mo·met'ri·cal adj.

a·nem·o·ne (ə-nēm'ə-nē) n. 1. Any of various perennial herbs of the genus Anemone, native chiefly to northern temperate regions and having palmately lobed leaves and large flowers with showy sepals. Also called windflower 2. A sea anemone. [Latin anemōnē, from Greek.]

anemone fish (ə-nēm'ə-nē fĭsh) n. A small, brightly colored marine fish of the genus Amphiprion, found near sea anemones. Also called clown anemone, clown fish.

an·e·moph·i·lous (än'ə-mōf'ə-ləs) adj. Pollinated by wind-dispersed pollen.

an·en·ceph·a·ly (än'ən-sěf'ə-lē) n. pl. an·en·ceph·a·lies. Congenital absence of most of the brain and spinal cord. —an'en·ce·phal'ic (-sə-făl'ík) adj.

a·nent (ə-něnt') prep. Regarding; concerning: “This question remains a vital consideration anent the debate over the possibility of limiting nuclear war to military objectives” (New York Times). [Middle English, from Old English onefn, near : on, on; see ON + efn, even.] an·er·oid (än'ə-roid') adj. Not using liquid. [French anéroïde : Greek a-, without; see A⁻¹ + Late Greek nēron, water; see newo- in Appendix.]

aneroid barometer (än'ə-roid' bə-röm'ī-tər) n. A barometer in which variations of atmospheric pressure are indicated by the relative bulges of a thin elastic metal disk covering a partially evacuated chamber.

an·es·the·sia also an·aes·the·sia (än'īs-thē'zhə) n. 1. Total or partial loss of sensation, especially tactile sensibility, induced by disease, injury, acupuncture, or an anesthetic, such as chloroform or nitrous oxide. 2. Local or general insensibility to pain with or without the loss of consciousness, induced by an anesthetic. [New Latin anaesthesia, from Greek anaisthēsia, insensibility : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + aisthēsis, feeling (from aisthanesthai, to feel); see au- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: The following passage, written on November 21, 1846, by Oliver Wendell Holmes, a physician-poet and the father of the Supreme Court justice of the same name, allows us to pinpoint the entry of anesthesia and anesthetic into English: “Every body wants to have a hand in a great discovery. All I will do is to give you a hint or two as to names—or the name—to be applied to the state produced and the agent. The state should, I think, be called ‘Anaesthesia’ [from the Greek word anaisthēsia, “lack of sensation”]. This signifies insensibility... The adjective will be ‘Anaesthetic.’ Thus we might say the state of Anaesthesia, or the anaesthetic state.” This citation is taken from a letter to William Thomas Green Morton, who in October of that year had successfully demonstrated the use of ether at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. Although anaesthesia is recorded in Nathan Bailey’s Universal Etymological English Dictionary in 1721, it is clear that Holmes really was responsible for its entry into the language. The Oxford English Dictionary has several citations for anesthesia and anesthetic in 1847 and 1848, indicating that the words gained rapid acceptance.

an·es·the·si·ol·o·gist also an·aes·the·si·ol·o·gist (än'īs-thē'zē-ol'ə-jĭst) n.

A physician specializing in anesthesiology.

an·es·the·si·ol·o·gy also an·aes·the·si·ol·o·gy (än'īs-thē'zē-öl'ə-jē) n. The medical study and application of anesthetics.

an·es·thet·ic also an·aes·thet·ic (än'īs-thēt'ĭk) adj. 1. Relating to or resembling anesthesia. 2. Causing anesthesia. 3. Insensitive. — n. 1. An agent that causes loss of sensation with or without the loss of consciousness. 2. Something likened to this in effect: Some people feel that television becomes an anesthetic for the mind after too many hours of steady viewing. [From Greek anaisthētos, without feeling : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + aisthētos, perceptible (from aisthanesthai, to feel); see ANESTHESIA.] — an'es·thet'ĭ·cal·ly adv.

a·nes·the·tist also a·naes·the·tist (ə-nēs'thĭ-tĭst) n. A person specially trained to administer anesthetics.

a·nes·the·tize also a·naes·the·tize (ə-nēs'thī-tīz') v. tr. a·nes·the·tized, a·nes·the·tiz·ing, a·nes·the·tiz·es. To induce anesthesia in.

—an·es'the·ti·za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

an·es·trus (än-ēs'trəs) n. An interval of sexual inactivity between two periods of estrus in mammals that breed cyclically.

A·ne·to (ə-nā'tō, ä-ně'-), Pico de. A peak, 3,406.2 m (11,168 ft) high, in north-east Spain near the French border. It is the highest elevation in the Pyrenees.

an·eu·ploid (än'yōō-ploid') adj. Having a chromosome number that is not a multiple of the haploid number for the species. — n. A cell or an organism characterized by an aneuploid chromosome number.

an·eu·ploi·dy (än'yə-ploid'ē) n. The state or condition of being aneuploid.

an·eu·rysm also an·eu·rism (än'yə-rīz'əm) n. A localized, pathological, blood-filled dilatation of a blood vessel caused by a disease or weakening of the vessel's wall. [Middle English aneurisme, ultimately from Greek aneurisma, from aneurein, to dilate : ana-, throughout; see ANA- + eurus, wide.] —an'eu·rys'mal (-məl) adj.

a·new (ə-nōō', ə-nyōō') adv. 1. Once more; again. 2. In a new and different way, form, or manner. [Middle English : a, of (from Old English of); see OF + new, new thing (from Old English nīwe); see NEW or a-, on; see A⁻² + new.]

ANF abbr. Atrial natriuretic factor.

An·fin·sen (än'fən-sən), Christian Boehmer. Born 1916. American biochemist. He shared a 1972 Nobel Prize for pioneering studies of enzymes.

an·frac·tu·os·i·ty (än-frāk'thōō-ōs'ī-tē) n. pl. an·frac·tu·os·i·ties. 1. The condition or quality of having many twists and turns. 2. A winding channel, passage, or crevice. 3. A complicated or involved process.

an·frac·tu·ous (än-frāk'thōō-əs) adj. Full of twists and turns; tortuous.

[From Late Latin anfractuōsus, from Latin anfractus, winding : an- (from ambi-, around); see AMBI- + fractus, past participle of frangere, to break; see bhreg- in Appendix.]

Ang. abbr. Angola.

An·ga·ra (än'gə-rä') A river of south-central Russia flowing about 1,850 km (1,150 mi) north and west from Lake Baikal to the Yenisei River.

An·garsk (än-gärsk') A city of south-central Russia on the Angara River near Irkutsk. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 256,000.

an·ga·ry (äng'gə-rē) also an·gar·i·a (äng-gâr'ē-ə) n. The legal right of a belligerent to seize, use, or destroy the property of a neutral, provided that full compensation is made. [Late Latin angaria, service to a lord, from Greek angareia, impressment for public service, from angaros, conscript courier.]

an·gel (än'jəl) n. 1. a. Theology. An immortal, spiritual being attendant upon God. In medieval angelology, there are nine orders of spiritual beings. From the highest to the lowest in rank, they are: seraphim, cherubim, thrones, dominations or diminutions, virtues, powers, principalities, archangels, and angels. b. The conventional representation of such a being in the image of a human figure with a halo and wings. 2. A guardian spirit or guiding influence. 3. a. A kind and lovable person. b. One who manifests goodness, purity, and selflessness.

4. Christian Science. God's thoughts passing to man. 5. Informal. A financial backer of an enterprise, especially a dramatic production or a political campaign. [Middle English, from Old English engel, or Old French angele both from Late Latin angelus, from Late Greek angelos, from Greek, messenger.] —an·gel'ic (än-jěl'ik), an·gel'i·cal adj. —an·gel'i·cal·ly adv.

An·gel·a Me·ri·ci (än'jə-lə mə-rē'chē), Saint. 1474-1540. Italian Roman Catholic nun who founded the Ursuline order (1535).

angel cake (än'jəl kāk) n. Angel food cake.

angel dust (än'jəl düst) n. Slang. Phencyclidine.

An·ge·le·no (än'jə-lē'nō) n. pl. An·ge·le·nos. A native or inhabitant of Los Angeles. [American Spanish Angeleño, after Los Angeles.]

An·gel Fall or Falls (än'jəl fôl) A waterfall, about 980 m (3,212 ft) high, in southeast Venezuela. It is the highest uninterrupted waterfall in the world.

an·gel·fish (än'jəl-fish') n. pl. angelfish or an·gel·fish·es. 1. A brightly colored fish of the family Chaetodontidae of warm seas, having a laterally compressed body. 2. A freshwater fish (Pterophyllum scalare), native to rivers of tropical South America and having a laterally compressed, usually striped body. It is popular in aquariums. In this sense, also called scalare angel food cake (än'jəl fōd kāk) n. An almond-flavored sponge cake made of egg whites, sugar, and flour.

an·gel·i·ca (än-jěl'i-kə) n. 1. a. Any of various herbs of the genus Angelica in the parsley family, having pinnately compound leaves and small white or greenish flowers in compound umbels, especially A. archangelica, whose roots and fruits are used in flavoring liqueurs and whose stems are candied and eaten. b. The edible stem, leaf, or root of Angelica archangelica. 2. Often Angelica. A sweet white wine or liqueur. [Medieval Latin (herba) angelica, angelic (herb), angelica, from Late Latin, feminine of angelicus, angelic, from Late Greek angelikos, from Greek, of a messenger, from angelos, messenger.]

angelica tree (än-jěl'i-kə trē) n. See Hercules' club (n., sense 1).

An·gel·i·co (än-jěl'i-kō'), Fra Also known as Giovanni da Fie·so·le (fyē'zō-lā, -zō-lě) 1400?-1455. Italian Dominican friar and painter of the Florentine school.

An·gell (än'jəl), Sir Norman. 1872-1967. British economist and pacifist. He won the 1933 Nobel Peace Prize.

an·gel·ol·o·gy (än'jəl-öl'ə-jē) n. The branch of theology having to do with angels.

angel shark (än'jəl shärk) n. Any of several raylike sharks of the genus Squatina, having a broad, flat head and body.

an·gel's trumpet (än'jəlz trüm'pīt) n. Any of several New World plants of the genera Brugmansia or Datura, having large, variously colored trumpet-shaped flowers. All parts of the plants contain the poisonous belladonna alkaloids.

An·ge·lus also an·ge·lus (än'jə-ləs) n. Roman Catholic Church. 1. A devotional prayer at morning, noon, and night to commemorate the Annunciation. 2. A bell rung as a call to recite this prayer. [Medieval Latin, from Late Latin, angel, first word of the devotion. See ANGEL.] an·ger (äng'gər) n. A strong feeling of displeasure or hostility. — v.

an·gered, an·ger·ing, an·gers. — v. tr. To make angry; enrage or provoke. — v. intr. To become angry: She angers too quickly. [Middle English, from Old Norse angr, sorrow. See angh- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: anger, rage, fury, ire, wrath, resentment, indignation. These nouns denote varying degrees of marked displeasure. Anger, the most general, is strong displeasure: suppressed her anger; threw a book in a fit of anger. Rage and fury are closely related in the sense of intense, explosive, often destructive emotion: “Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned” (William Congreve). “Beware the fury of a patient man” (John Dryden). Ire is a term for anger that is frequently encountered in literature: “The best way to escape His ire/Is, not to seem too happy” (Robert Browning). Wrath applies especially to fervid anger that seeks vengeance or punishment, often on an epic scale: rebellious words sure to kindle a parent's wrath; the wrath of God. Resentment refers to ill will and smoldering anger generated by a sense of grievance: The strike can be traced to the personal resentment of the foreman against the factory owner. Indignation is righteous anger at something regarded as being wrongful, unjust, or evil: “public indignation about takeovers causing people to lose their jobs” (Allan Sloan).

an·ger·ly (äng'gər-lē) adv. Archaic. Angrily: “Again thou blushest angerly” (Tennyson).

An·gers (än'jərz, äN-zhā') A city of western France east-northeast of Nantes. Of pre-Roman origin, Angers was the historical capital of Anjou. Population, 136,038.

An·ge·vin (än'jə-vīn) adj. 1. Of or relating to the historical region and former province of Anjou, France. 2. Of or relating to the House of Anjou, especially as represented by the Plantagenet kings of England descended from Geoffrey, Count of Anjou (died 1151). [French, from Old French, from Medieval Latin Andegavinus, from Andegavia, Anjou, France.]

an·gi·na (än-jī'nə, än'jə-) n. 1. Angina pectoris. 2. A condition, such as severe sore throat, in which spasmodic attacks of suffocating pain occur. [Latin, quinsy, from Greek ankhonē, a strangling. See angh- in Appendix.] —an·gi·nal adj. —an·gi·nose' (-jə-nōs') adj.

angina pec-to-ris (än-jī'nə pĕk'tər-īs) n. Severe paroxysmal pain in the chest associated with an insufficient supply of blood to the heart. [New Latin : Latin angina, quinsy + pectoris, genitive of pectus, chest.]

angio- pref. 1. Blood and lymph vessel: angiogram. 2. Pericarp: angiosperm. [New Latin, from Greek angeio-, from angeion, vessel, blood vessel, diminutive of angos, vessel.]

an-gi-o-car-di-og-ra-phy (än'jē-ō-kär'dē-ög'rə-fē) n. Examination of the heart and associated blood vessels using x-rays following the injection of a radiopaque substance. — an'gi-o-car'di-o-graph'ic (-ə-gräf'ik) adj.

an-gi-o-gram (än'jē-ə-gräm') n. An x-ray of one or more blood vessels produced by angiography and used in diagnosing pathological conditions of the cardiovascular system.

an-gi-og-raph-y (än'jē-ög'rə-fē) n. Examination of the blood vessels using x-rays following the injection of a radiopaque substance. — an'gi-o-graph'ic (-gräf'ik) adj.

an-gi-ol-o-gy (än'jē-öl'ə-jē) n. The study of blood and lymph vessels.

an-gi-o-ma (än'jē-ō'mə) n. pl. an-gi-o-mas or an-gi-o-ma-ta (-mə-tə). A tumor composed chiefly of lymph and blood vessels. — an'gi-o'ma-tous (-ō'mə-təs, -öm'ə-) adj.

an-gi-op-a-thy (än'jē-op'ə-thē) n. pl. an-gi-op-a-thies. Any of several diseases of the blood or lymph vessels.

an-gi-o-plas-ty (än'jē-ə-pläs'tē) n. pl. an-gi-o-plas-ties. A procedure in which a catheter equipped with a tiny balloon at the tip is inserted into an artery that has been narrowed by the accumulation of fatty deposits. The balloon is then inflated to clear the blockage and widen the artery.

an-gi-o-sar-co-ma (än'jē-ō-sär-kō'mə) n. A malignant tumor arising from vascular tissue.

an-gi-o-sperm (än'jē-ə-spŭrm') n. A plant whose ovules are enclosed in an ovary; a flowering plant.

an-gi-o-ten-sin (än'jē-ō-tĕn'sin) n. Any of three polypeptide hormones, one of which is a powerful vasoconstrictor, that function in the body in controlling arterial pressure. [ANGIO- + TENS(ION) + -IN.]

Ang-kor (äng'kôr, -kôr) A major archaeological site in northwest Cambodia and the capital of the Khmer empire from the 9th to the 15th century. The ruins include two important Hindu temple complexes, Angkor Wat (12th century) and Angkor Thom (13th century). The site has been extensively damaged by warfare.

Angl. abbr. Anglican.

an-gle¹ (äng'gəl) v. intr. an-gled, an-gling, an-gles. 1. To fish with a hook and line. 2. To try to get something by using schemes, tricks, or other artful means: angle for a promotion. — n. Obsolete. A fishhook or fishing tackle. [Middle English anglen, from angel, fishhook, from Old English.]

an·gle² (äng'gəl) n. 1. Mathematics. a. The figure formed by two lines diverging from a common point. b. The figure formed by two planes diverging from a common line. c. The rotation required to superimpose either of two such lines or planes on the other. d. The space between such lines or surfaces. e. A solid angle. 2. A sharp or projecting corner, as of a building. 3. a. The place, position, or direction from which an object is presented to view: a handsome building looked at from any angle. b. An aspect, as of a problem, seen from a specific point of view. See Synonyms at phase. 4. Slang. A devious method; a scheme. — v. an·gled, an·gling, an·gles. — v. tr. 1. To move or turn (something) at an angle: angled the chair toward the window. 2. Sports. To hit (a ball or puck, for example) at an angle. 3. Informal. To impart a biased aspect or point of view to: angled the story in such a way as to criticize the candidate. — v. intr. To continue along or turn at an angle or by angles: The road angles sharply to the left. The path angled through the woods. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin angulus.]

An·gle (äng'gəl) n. A member of a Germanic people that migrated to England from southern Jutland in the 5th century A.D., founded the kingdoms of Northumbria, East Anglia, and Mercia, and together with the Jutes and Saxons formed the Anglo-Saxon peoples. [From Latin Anglī, the Angles, of Germanic origin.]

angle bracket (äng'gəl bräk'īt) n. 1. Either of a pair of symbols, < >, used to enclose written or printed material. 2. Mathematics. Either of these symbols, used especially together to indicate the average of a contained quantity. Also called bracket angle iron (äng'gəl ī'ərn) n. A length of steel or iron bent at a right angle along its long dimension, used as a support or structural framework.

angle of attack (äng'gəl ÷v ə-tāk') n. The acute angle between the chord of an airfoil and a line representing the undisturbed relative airflow.

angle of incidence (äng'gəl ÷v ĩn'sī-dəns) n. Physics. The angle formed by a ray incident on a surface and a perpendicular to the surface at the point of incidence.

angle of reflection (äng'gəl ÷v rī-flĕk'shən) n. Physics. The angle formed by a reflected ray and a perpendicular to the surface at the point of reflection.

angle of refraction (äng'gəl ÷v rī-frāk'shən) n. Physics. The angle formed by a refracted ray and a perpendicular to the refracting surface at the point of refraction.

angle of yaw (äng'gəl ÷v yō) n. The angle between an aircraft's longitudinal axis and its line of travel, as seen from above.

angle plate (äng'gəl plāt) n. A right-angled metal bracket that is used on the faceplate of a lathe to hold the pieces that are being worked.

an·gler (äng'glər) n. 1. One who fishes with a hook. 2. A scheming person.
3. An anglerfish.

an·gler·fish (äng'glər-fish') n. pl. anglerfish or an·gler·fish·es. A marine fish of the order Lophiiformes or Pediculati, having a long dorsal fin ray that is suspended over the mouth and that serves as a lure to attract prey.

An·gle·sey or An·gle·sea (äng'gəl-sē) An island of northwest Wales in the Irish Sea. It has druidic ruins, especially dolmens, and is said to have been the last refuge of the druids from the invading Romans.

an·gle·site (äng'glī-sīt') n. A lead sulfate mineral, PbSO₄, occurring in colorless or tinted crystals and formed by the weathering of lead ore. [After Anglesey.] an·gle·worm (äng'gəl-wûrm') n. A worm, such as an earthworm, that is used as bait in fishing.

An·gli·a (äng'glē-ə) 1. The Medieval and Late Latin name for England. 2. See East Anglia.

An·gli·an (äng'glē-ən) adj. Of or relating to East Anglia or to the Angles. — n. 1. An Angle. 2. The Old English dialects of Mercia and Northumbria.

An·gli·can (äng'glī-kən) adj. Abbr. Angl. 1. Of, having to do with, or characteristic of the Church of England or any of the churches related to it in origin and communion, such as the Protestant Episcopal Church. 2. Of or relating to England or the English. — n. A member of the Church of England or of any of the churches related to it. [Medieval Latin Anglicānus, English, from Anglicus, from Late Latin Anglī, the Angles. See ANGLE.]

Anglican Church (äng'glī-kən chûrch) n. The Church of England and the churches in other nations that are in complete agreement with it as to doctrine and discipline and are in communion with the Archbishop of Canterbury. Also called Anglican Communion

An·gli·can·ism (äng'glī-kə-nīz'əm) n. The faith, doctrine, system, and practice of the Anglican Church.

An·gli·ce (äng'glī-sē') adv. In the English form: Firenze, Anglice Florence. [Medieval Latin Anglicē, from Anglicus, English. See ANGLICAN.]

An·gli·cism also an·gli·cism (äng'glī-sīz'əm) n. 1. A word, a phrase, or an idiom peculiar to the English language, especially as spoken in England; a Britishism. 2. A typically English quality. [From Medieval Latin Anglicus, English. See ANGLICAN.]

An·gli·cist (äng'glī-sīst) n. A specialist in English linguistics.

An·gli·cize also an·gli·cize (äng'glī-sīz') v. An·gli·cized, An·gli·ciz·ing, An·gli·ciz·es. — v. tr. To make English or similar to English in form, idiom, style, or character. — v. intr. To become English in form or character.

—An'gli·ci·za'tion (-sī-zā'shən) n.

an·gling (äng'glīng) n. The act, process, or art of fishing with a hook and line and usually a rod.

An·glo also an·glo (äng'glō) n. pl. An·glos. 1. Informal. An Anglo-American.
2. An English-speaking person, especially a white North American who is not of Hispanic or French descent. [Short for ANGL0-AMERICAN.] —An'glo adj.

Anglo- pref. England; English: Anglo-Saxon. [New Latin, from Medieval Latin Anglī, the English people, from Late Latin, the Angles. See ANGLE.]

An·glo-A-mer-i-can (äng'glō-ə-mēr'ī-kən) n. An American, especially an inhabitant of the United States, whose language and ancestry are English. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or between England and America, especially the United States. 2. Of or relating to Anglo-Americans.

An·glo-Cath·o·lic (äng'glō-käth'lik, -käth'ə-lik) n. A member of the Anglican Church whose religious convictions emphasize sacramental worship. —An'glo-Cath'o·lic adj.

An·glo-French (äng'glō-frēnch') adj. Of, relating to, or between England and France or their peoples; English and French. — n. See Anglo-Norman (n., sense 2).

An·glo-In-di-an (äng'glō-īn'dē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or between England and India. — n. 1. A person of English and Indian descent. 2. A person of English birth or ancestry living in India. 3. The variety of English used in India.

An·glo-I-rish (äng'glō-ī'rīsh) n. 1. A native of England living in Ireland. 2. A native of Ireland living in England. 3. A person of mixed Irish and English ancestry. 4. See Irish English. —An'glo-I'rish adj.

An·glo-Nor-man (äng'glō-nôr'mən) n. 1. One of the Normans who lived in England after the Norman Conquest of England in 1066 or a descendant of these settlers. 2. a. The dialect of Old French, derived chiefly from Norman French, that was used by the Anglo-Normans. b. The form of this dialect used in English law until the 17th century. In this sense, also called Anglo-French —An'glo-Nor'man adj.

An·glo·phile (äng'glə-fīl') also An·glo·phil (-fīl) n. One who admires England, its people, and its culture. —An'glo·phile, An'glo·phil'ic (äng'glə-fīl'ik) adj. —An'glo·phil'i-a (-fīl'ē-ə) n.

An·glo·phobe (äng'glə-fōb') n. One who dislikes or fears England, its people, or its culture. —An'glo·pho'bi-a n. —An'glo·pho'bic (-fō'bīk) adj.

An·glo·phone also an·glo·phone (än'glə-fōn') n. An English-speaking person, especially one in a country where two or more languages are spoken. —An'glo·phon'ic (-fōn'ik) adj.

An·glo-Sax·on (äng'glō-säk'sən) n. Abbr. AS, A.S. 1. A member of one of the Germanic peoples, the Angles, the Saxons, and the Jutes, who settled in Britain in the 5th and 6th centuries. 2. Any of the descendants of the Anglo-Saxons, who were dominant in England until the Norman Conquest of 1066. 3. See Old English (n., sense 1). 4. A person of English ancestry. — adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of Anglo-Saxons, their descendants, or their language or culture; English.

An·go·la (äng-gō'lə, ăn-) Abbr. Ang. A country of southwest Africa bordering on the Atlantic Ocean. Formerly a Portuguese colony, the country became independent in 1975 after a long guerrilla war and has been torn by civil strife ever since. Luanda is the capital and the largest city. Population, 8,140,000.

—An·go·lan adj. & n.

An·go·ra¹ (äng-gô'r'ə, -gôr'ə, äng'gər-ə) See Ankara.

An·go·ra² (äng-gô'r'ə, -gôr'ə) n. 1. Often angora a. The long, silky hair of the Angora goat. b. The fine, long hair of the Angora rabbit, sometimes blended with wool in fabrics. c. A yarn or fabric made from either of these fibers. 2. An Angora cat. 3. An Angora goat. 4. An Angora rabbit. [After Angora (Ankara), Turkey.]

Angora cat (äng-gô'r'ə kăt) n. A domestic cat having long, silky hair. It is now rare as a pure breed in the United States.

Angora goat (äng-gô'r'ə gōt) n. Any of a breed of domestic goats having long, silky hair.

Angora rabbit (äng-gô'r'ə räb'it) n. Any of a breed of domestic rabbits having long, soft, usually white hair.

an·gos·tu·ra bark (äng'gə-stōr'ə bärk, -styōr'ə) n. The bitter, aromatic bark of either of two South American trees (Galipea officinalis or Cusparia trifoliata), used as a flavoring in bitters and as a tonic. [After Angostura (Ciudad Bolívar), Venezuela.]

An·gou·lême (än-gōō-läm', -lēm') A city of western France north-northeast of Bordeaux. It was ceded to England in 1360 but was retaken by France in 1373. Population, 46,197.

An·gou·mois (än'gōō-mwä') A historical region and former province of western France in the Charente River valley. Occupied by Gallic peoples in pre-Roman times, it later was part of Aquitaine, was briefly ceded to England (1360-1373), and became a French duchy in 1515.

an·gry (äng'grē) adj. an·gri·er, an·gri·est. 1. Feeling or showing anger; incensed or enraged: an angry customer. 2. Indicative of or resulting from anger: an angry silence. 3. Having a menacing aspect; threatening: angry clouds on the horizon. 4. Inflamed and painful: an angry sore. [Middle English angri, from anger, anger. See ANGER.]

SYNONYMS: angry, furious, indignant, irate, ireful, mad, wrathful. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “feeling or showing anger”: an angry retort; a furious scowl; an indignant denial; irate protesters; ireful words; mad at a friend; angry young man also Angry Young Man (äng'grē yŭng mǎn) n. 1. One of a group of English writers of the 1950's whose works are characterized by vigorous social protest. 2. A vigorous critic of economic or social injustice.

angst¹ (ängkst) n. A feeling of anxiety or apprehension often accompanied by depression. [German, from Middle High German angest, from Old High German angust. See angh- in Appendix.]

angst² abbr. Angstrom.

ang·strom or ång·strom (äng'strəm) n. Abbr. angst, Å, A A unit of length equal to one hundred-millionth (10^{-8}) of a centimeter, used especially to specify radiation wavelengths. Also called angstrom unit See Table at measurement. [After Anders Jonas ÅNGSTRÖM.]

Ång·ström (äng'strəm, ông'strœm), Anders Jonas. 1814-1874. Swedish physicist and astronomer who founded the science of spectroscopy and discovered by studying the solar spectrum that there is hydrogen in the sun's atmosphere.

angstrom unit (äng'strəm yōō'nīt) n. Abbr. a.u., A.u. See angstrom.

An·guil·la (äng-gwīl'ə, ǎn-) An island of the British West Indies in the northern Leeward Islands. Settled by the British in the 17th century, it was part of the self-governing colony of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla until 1967, when it seceded unilaterally. A bid for full independence led to the landing of British troops in 1969.

an·guish (äng'gwīsh) n. Agonizing physical or mental pain; torment. See Synonyms at regret. — v. an·guished, an·guish·ing, an·guish·es. — v. tr. To cause to feel or suffer anguish. — v. intr. To feel or suffer anguish. [Middle English angwisshe, from Old French anguisse, from Latin angustiae, distress, from angustus, narrow. See angh- in Appendix.]

an·guished (äng'gwīsh) adj. Feeling, expressing, or caused by anguish: anguished victims of the earthquake; anguished screams for help.

an·gu·lar (äng'gyə-lər) adj. 1. Having, forming, or consisting of an angle or angles. 2. Measured by an angle or by degrees of an arc. 3. Bony and lean; gaunt: an angular face. 4. Lacking grace or smoothness; awkward: an angular gait. 5. Rigid, stiff, and unyielding in character or disposition: "the cold, angular brand of materialism" (David K. Willis). [Latin angulāris, from angulus, angle.] — an·gu·lar·ly adv. — an·gu·lar·ness n.

angular acceleration (äng'gyə-lər ǎk-sĕl'ə-rā'shən) n. The rate of change of angular velocity with respect to time.

an·gu·lar·i·ty (äng'gyə-lăr'ī-tē) n. pl. an·gu·lar·i·ties. 1. The quality or condition of being angular. 2. angularities. Angular forms, outlines, or corners.

angular momentum (äng'gyə-lər mō-mĕn'təm) n. 1. The vector product of the position vector (from a reference point) and the linear momentum of a particle. 2. The vector sum of the angular momentums of each component particle of an extended body.

angular velocity (äng'gyə-lər və-lös'ī-tē) n. The rate of change of angular displacement with respect to time.

an·gu·late (äng'gyə-līt, -lāt') adj. Having angles or an angular shape. — v. tr. intr. an·gu·lat·ed, an·gu·lat·ing, an·gu·lates (-lāt'). To make or become angular. — an·gu·late·ly adv.

an·gu·la·tion (äng'gyə-lā'shən) n. 1. The formation of angles. 2. An angular part, position, or formation.

an·hin·ga (än-hĩng'gə) n. Any of a genus (Anhinga) of long-necked birds having a sharp, pointed bill and inhabiting swampy regions of tropical and subtropical America. Also called darter, snakebird, water turkey. [Portuguese, from Tupi ayingá.]

An·hui (än'hwē') also An·hwei (-hwā', -wā') A province of east-central China. It was made a separate province in the 17th century under the Manchu dynasty. Hefei is the capital. Population, 51,560,000.

anhydr. abbr. Anhydrous.

an·hy·dride (än-hī'drīd') n. A chemical compound formed from another, often an acid, by the removal of water. [ANHYDR(OUS) + -IDE.]

an·hy·drite (än-hī'drīt) n. A colorless, white, gray, blue, or lilac mineral of anhydrous calcium sulfate, CaSO_4 , occurring as layers in gypsum deposits. [ANHYDR(OUS) + -ITE¹.]

an·hy·drous (än-hī'drəs) adj. Abbr. anhydr. Without water, especially water of crystallization. [From Greek anudros : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + hudōr, water; see wed⁻¹ in Appendix.]

a·ni (ä-nē') n. Any of several chiefly tropical American birds of the genus Crotophaga, related to the cuckoo and having black plumage and a long tail. [American Spanish aní, or Portuguese ani both from Tupi ani.]

an·il (än'īl) n. The indigo plant or the blue dye obtained from it. [French, from Portuguese, from Arabic an-nīl, the indigo plant, from Persian nīl, from Sanskrit nīlī, from nīla-, dark blue.]

an·ile (än'īl', ā'nīl') adj. 1. Of or like an old woman. 2. Senile. [Latin anīlis, from anus, old woman.] — a·nil'·i·ty (ə-nīl'ī-tē) n.

an·i·line also an·i·lin (än'ə-līn) n. A colorless, oily, poisonous benzene derivative, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{NH}_2$, used in the manufacture of rubber, dyes, resins, pharmaceuticals, and varnishes. — adj. Derived from aniline. [ANIL + -INE².]

a·ni·lin·gus (ā'nə-lĩng'gəs) n. Oral stimulation of the anus for sexual excitement. [New Latin : Latin ānus, anus + Latin lingere, to lick; see leigh- in Appendix.]

anim. abbr. Music. Animato.

an·i·ma (än'ə-mə) n. 1. The inner self of an individual; the soul. 2. In Jungian psychology: a. The unconscious or true inner self of an individual, as opposed to the persona, or outer aspect of the personality. b. The feminine inner personality, as present in the unconscious of the male. It is in contrast to the animus, which represents masculine characteristics. [Latin anima. See anə- in Appendix.]

an·i·mad·ver·sion (än'ə-mäd-vûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. Strong criticism. 2. A critical or censorious remark: “Witness [the] animadversions on the bleeding hearts who worried about the hostages” (Benjamin DeMott). [Latin animadversio, animadversio-, from animadversus, past participle of animadvertere, to turn the mind toward. See ANIMADVERT.]

an·i·mad·vert (än'ə-mäd-vûrt') v. intr. an·i·mad·vert·ed, an·i·mad·vert·ing, an·i·mad·verts. To remark or comment critically, usually with strong disapproval or censure: “a man... who animadverts on miserly patients, egocentric doctors, psychoanalysis and Lucky Luciano with evenhanded fervor” (Irwin Faust). [Middle English animadverten, to notice, from Latin animadvertere: animus, mind; see anə- in Appendix + advertere, to turn toward; see ADVERSE.]

an·i·mal (än'ə-məl) n. 1. A multicellular organism of the kingdom Animalia, differing from plants in certain typical characteristics such as capacity for locomotion, nonphotosynthetic metabolism, pronounced response to stimuli, restricted growth, and fixed bodily structure. 2. An animal organism other than a human being, especially a mammal. 3. A person who behaves in a bestial or brutish manner. 4. A human being considered with respect to his or her physical, as opposed to spiritual, nature. 5. A person having a specified aptitude or set of interests: “that rarest of musical animals, an instrumentalist who is as comfortable on a podium with a stick as he is playing his instrument” (Lon Tuck). — adj.

1. Relating to, characteristic of, or derived from an animal or animals: animal fat. 2. Relating to the physical as distinct from the spiritual nature of people: animal instincts and desires. See Synonyms at brute. [Middle English, from Latin, from animāle, neuter of animālis, living, from anima, soul. See anə- in Appendix.]

animal cracker (än'ə-məl kräk'ər) n. A small cookie baked in the shape of an animal.

an·i·mal·cule (än'ə-mäl'kyōōl) also an·i·mal·cu·lum (-kyə-ləm) n. pl.

an·i·mal·cules also an·i·mal·cu·la (-kyə-lə). 1. A microscopic or minute organism, such as an amoeba or a paramecium, usually considered to be an animal.

2. Archaic. A tiny animal, such as a mosquito. [New Latin animalculum, diminutive of Latin animal, animal, from anima, soul. See ANIMA.]

animal heat (än'ə-məl hēt) n. The heat generated in the body of a warm-blooded vertebrate as the result of its physiological and metabolic processes.

animal husbandry (än'ə-məl hüzbən-drē) n. The branch of agriculture concerned with the care and breeding of domestic animals such as cattle, hogs, sheep, and horses.

an·i·mal·ism (än'ə-mə-liz'əm) n. 1. Enjoyment of vigorous health and physical drives. 2. Indifference to all but the physical appetites. 3. The doctrine that the human being is purely animal with no spiritual nature. —an'i·mal·ist n. —an'i·mal·is'tic (-lis'tik) adj.

an·i·mal·i·ty (än'ə-mäl'i-tē) n. 1. The characteristics or nature of an animal. 2. Animals considered as a group; the animal kingdom. 3. The animal instincts of human beings as distinct from their spiritual nature.

an·i·mal·ize (än'ə-mə-liz') v. tr. an·i·mal·ized, an·i·mal·iz·ing, an·i·mal·iz·es. 1. To cause (another) to behave like an animal. 2. To depict or represent in the form of an animal. —an'i·mal·i·za'tion (-mə-lī-zā'shən) n.

animal kingdom (än'ə-məl kīng'dəm) n. A main classification of living organisms that includes all animals.

animal magnetism (än'ə-məl mäg'nī-tiz'əm) n. 1. A special personal power or presence held to facilitate the hypnotism of others. 2. Magnetic personal charm. 3. Sex appeal.

animal pole (än'ə-məl pōl) n. Embryology. The portion of an egg opposite the vegetal pole that contains the nucleus and most of the cytoplasm.

animal spirits (än'ə-məl spīr'its) pl.n. The vitality of good health.

animal starch (än'ə-məl stārch) n. See glycogen.

an·i·mate (än'ə-māt') v. tr. an·i·mat·ed, an·i·mat·ing, an·i·mates. 1. To give life to; fill with life. 2. To impart interest or zest to; enliven: "The party was animated by all kinds of men and women" (René Dubos). 3. To fill with spirit, courage, or resolution; encourage. See Synonyms at encourage. 4. To inspire to action; prompt. 5. To impart motion or activity to. 6. To make, design, or produce (a cartoon, for example) so as to create the illusion of motion. — adj. (än'ə-mīt) 1. Possessing life; living. See Synonyms at living. 2. Of or relating to animal life as distinct from plant life. 3. Belonging to the class of nouns that stand for living things: The word dog is animate; the word car is inanimate. [Latin animāre, animāt-, from anima, soul. See anə- in Appendix.]

an·i·mat·ed (än'ə-mā'tid) adj. 1. Having life; alive. See Synonyms at living. 2. Filled with activity, vigor, or spirit; lively. 3. Designed or constructed in the form of an animated cartoon. —an'i·mat'ed·ly adv.

animated cartoon (än'ə-mā'tid kär-tōn') n. A motion picture or television film consisting of a photographed series of drawings that simulates motion by means of very slight, continuous changes in the shapes of the drawings.

an·i·mat·ic (än'ə-mät'ik) n. A rough-draft, television test commercial with a sound track, developed by an advertising agency for its client, in which animated cutout figures replace live participants and real objects. Animatics are used in testing the effectiveness of planned, finished commercials. —an·i·mat'ic adj.

an·i·ma·tion (än'ə-mā'shən) n. 1. The act, process, or result of imparting life, interest, spirit, motion, or activity. 2. The quality or condition of being alive, active, spirited, or vigorous. 3. a. The art or process of preparing animated cartoons. b. An animated cartoon.

a·ni·ma·to (ä'nē-mä'tō) adv. & adj. Abbr. anim. Music. In an animated or lively manner. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, from animare, to animate, from Latin animāre. See ANIMATE.]

an·i·ma·tor (än'ə-mā'tər) n. 1. One that provides or imparts life, interest, spirit, or vitality. 2. One, such as an artist or a technician, who designs, develops, or produces an animated cartoon.

an·i·mism (än'ə-mīz'əm) n. 1. The attribution of conscious life to natural objects or to nature itself. 2. The belief in the existence of spiritual beings that are separable or separate from bodies. 3. The hypothesis holding that an immaterial force animates the universe. [From Latin anima, soul. See anə- in Appendix.] —an'i·mist n. —an'i·mis'tic adj.

an·i·mos·i·ty (än'ə-mōs'ī-tē) n. pl. an·i·mos·i·ties. Bitter hostility or open enmity; active hatred. See Synonyms at enmity. [Middle English animosite, from Old French, from Late Latin animōsitās, courage, from Latin animōsus, bold, from animus, soul, spirit. See anə- in Appendix.]

an·i·mus (än'ə-məs) n. 1. An attitude that informs one's actions; disposition. 2. A feeling of animosity; ill will. See Synonyms at enmity. 3. In Jungian psychology, the masculine inner personality as present in women. [Latin. See anə- in Appendix.]

an·i·on (än'ī'ən) n. A negatively charged ion, especially the ion that migrates to an anode in electrolysis. [From Greek, neuter present participle of aniēnai, to go up : ana-, ana- + ienai, to go; see ei- in Appendix.] —an'i·on'ic (-ön'ik) adj. —an'i·on'i·cal·ly adv.

anis- pref. Variant of aniso-.

an·ise (än'is) n. 1. An annual, aromatic Mediterranean herb (Pimpinella anisum) in the parsley family, cultivated for its seedlike fruits and the oil obtained from them and used to flavor foods, liqueurs, and candies. 2. Anise seed. [Middle English anis, from Old French, from Latin anīsum, from Greek anison.]

anise hyssop (än'is hīs'əp) n. A North American perennial herb (Agastache foeniculum) in the mint family, having spikelike clusters of violet-blue flowers and aromatic leaves sometimes used for tea. [Probably so called from the fragrance of its seeds.]

an·i·sei·ko·ni·a (än-ī'sī-kō'nē-ə) n. A condition in which the shape and size of the ocular image differ in each eye. [From ANIS(O)- + Greek eikōn, image.]

—an·i·sei·kon'ic (-kōn'ik) adj.

anise seed or an·i·seed (än'ĩ-sēd') n. The seedlike fruit of the anise.

an·i·sette (än'ĩ-sět', -zět') n. A liqueur flavored with anise. [French, diminutive of anis, anise, from Old French. See ANISE.]

aniso- or anis- pref. Unequal; dissimilar: anisogamy. [From Greek anisos : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + isos, equal.]

an·i·so·gam·ete (än-ĩ'sō-gām'ēt, gə-mēt', äñ'ĩ-) n. See heterogamete.

an·i·sog·a·my (än'ĩ-sög'ə-mē) n. A union between two gametes that differ in size or form. —an'·i·so·gam'ic (-sə-gām'ik) adj.

an·i·so·met·ric (än-ĩ'sə-mět'rīk, äñ'ĩ-) adj. Not isometric.

an·i·so·me·trop·i·a (än-ĩ'sə-mĩ-trō'pē-ə) n. A condition in which the refractive power of one eye differs from that of the other. [ANISO- + Greek metron, measure; see METER¹ + -OPIA.] —an'·i·so·me·trop'ic (-trōp'ik, -trō'pik) adj.

an·i·so·trop·ic (än-ĩ'sə-trōp'ik, -trō'pik) adj. 1. Not isotropic. 2. Physics. Having properties that differ according to the direction of measurement.

—an'·i·so·trop'ic·al·ly adv. —an'·i·sot'ro·pism (-söt'rə-pīz'əm), an'·i·sot'ro·py (-söt'rə-pē) n.

An·jou¹ (än'jōō', äñ-zhōō') 1. A historical region and former province of northwest France in the Loire River valley. Ruled by the powerful counts of Anjou in the early Middle Ages, it was annexed to the French crown lands by Louis XI in the 1480's. 2. A town of southern Quebec, Canada, a suburb of Montreal. Population, 37,346.

An·jou² (än'zhōō, -jōō) n. A variety of pear with green skin and firm, smooth flesh.

An·ka·ra (äng'kər-ə, äng'-) Formerly An·cy·ra (än-sī'rə) and An·go·ra (äng-gô'rə, -gôr'ə, äng'gər-ə). The capital of Turkey, in the west-central part of the country at an elevation of about 915 m (3,000 ft). An important commercial center from ancient times until the late 19th century, the city declined until it replaced Istanbul as the capital in 1923. Population, 1,877,755.

An·ke·ny (äng'kə-nē) A city of central Iowa, a suburb of Des Moines. Population, 18,482.

an·ker·ite (äng'kə-rīt') n. A white, gray, or red iron-rich dolomitic or carbonate mineral, Ca(Fe,Mg,Mn)(CO₃)₂. [After M.J. Anker (1771-1843), Austrian mineralogist.]

ankh (ängk) n. An ansate cross. [Egyptian 'nh, life.]

an·kle (äng'kəl) n. 1. The joint formed by the articulation of the lower leg bones with the talus. The ankle connects the foot with the leg. 2. The slender section of the leg immediately above the foot. [Middle English anclē, ankel, partly from Old English anclēow, and partly of Scandinavian origin.]

an·kle·bone (äng'kəl-bōn') n. See talus¹ (n., sense 1).

an·klet (äng'klīt) n. 1. An ornament worn around the ankle. 2. A sock that reaches just above the ankle.

an·ky·lose also an·chy·lose (äng'kə-lōs', -lōz') v. an·ky·losed, an·ky·los·ing, an·ky·los·es. — v. tr. To join or consolidate by ankylosis. — v. intr. To become joined or consolidated by ankylosis. [Back-formation from ANKYLOSIS.]

an·ky·lo·sis also an·chy·lo·sis (äng'kə-lō'sis) n. 1. Anatomy. The consolidation of bones or their parts to form a single unit. 2. Pathology. The stiffening and immobility of a joint as the result of disease, trauma, surgery, or abnormal bone fusion. [New Latin, from Greek ankulōsis, stiffening of the joints, from ankulon, to crook, bend, from ankulos, crooked, bent.] — an'ky·lot'ic (-lōt'ik) adj.

an·lace (än'lis) n. A two-edged medieval dagger. [Middle English anelas, possibly from alesnes, awl, of Germanic origin.]

an·la·ge also An·la·ge (än'lä'gə) n. pl. an·la·ges or an·la·gen (-gən).

1. Biology. The initial clustering of embryonic cells from which a part or an organ develops; primordium. 2. A fundamental principle; the foundation for a future development. [German, fundamental principle, from Middle High German anlāge, request : ane-, on (from Old High German ana-); see an- in Appendix + lāge, act of laying (from Old High German lāga); see legh- in Appendix.]

Ann (än), Cape. A peninsula of northeast Massachusetts projecting into the Atlantic Ocean northeast of Gloucester.

ann. abbr. 1. Annals. 2. Annual. 3. Annuity.

an·na (ä'nə) n. A copper coin formerly used in India and Pakistan. [Hindi ānā, from Sanskrit aṇu-, small.]

An·na·ba (ə-nä'bə, ä-nä') A city of northeast Algeria on the Mediterranean Sea near the Tunisian border. Founded by the Carthaginians, it was an early center of Christianity. Population, 222,607.

An·na I·va·nov·na (ä'nə ē-vä'nəv-nə), 1693-1740. Empress of Russia (1730-1740) who intervened in the War of the Polish Succession (1733-1735) and attacked Turkey (1736).

An Na·jaf (än näj'äf') A city of south-central Iraq on a lake near the Euphrates River. It is a starting point for the pilgrimage to Mecca. Population, 242,603.

an·nal·ist (än'ə-līst) n. One who writes annals; a chronicler.

an·nals (än'əlz) pl.n. Abbr. ann. 1. A chronological record of the events of successive years. 2. A descriptive account or record; a history: "the short and simple annals of the poor" (Thomas Gray). 3. A periodical journal in which the records and reports of a learned field are compiled. [Latin (librī) annālēs, yearly (books), annals, pl. of annālis, yearly, from annus, year. See at- in Appendix.]

An·nam (ə-näm', än'äm') A region and former kingdom of central Vietnam on the South China Sea between Tonkin and Cochin China. It was ruled by China from 111 B.C. until A.D. 939 and came under French control in the 19th century.

—An'na·mese' (än'ə-mēz', -mēs'), An'nam·ite' adj. & n.

An·nan·dale (än'ən-dāl') A city of northeast Virginia, a suburb of Alexandria and Washington, D.C. Population, 50,975.

An·nap·o·lis (ə-năp'ə-lis) The capital of Maryland, in the central part of the state on an inlet of Chesapeake Bay south-southeast of Baltimore. Settled in 1649, it was the site of the Annapolis Convention in 1786, which led to the federal Constitutional Convention of 1787. The U.S. Naval Academy, founded in 1845, is in Annapolis. Population, 33,187.

Annapolis Roy·al (ə-năp'ə-lis roi'əl) A town of western Nova Scotia, Canada, on an arm of the Bay of Fundy. One of the oldest settlements in Canada, it was founded as Port Royal by the French in 1605 and renamed by the British after 1710 in honor of Queen Anne.

An·na·pur·na (än'ə-pūr'nə, -pûr'-) A massif of the Himalaya Mountains in north-central Nepal. It rises to 8,083.7 m (26,504 ft) at Annapurna I in the west.

Annapurna II, in the east, is 7,942.5 m (26,041 ft) high.

Ann Ar·bor (än är'bər) A city of southeast Michigan west of Detroit. A research and educational center, it is the seat of the University of Michigan (founded 1817). Population, 109,592.

an·nat·to also a·nat·to (ə-nă'tō) also ar·nat·to (är-nă'tō) n. pl. an·nat·tos.

1. A tropical American evergreen shrub or small tree (Bixa orellana), having heart-shaped leaves and showy, rose-pink or sometimes white flowers. Also called lipstick tree 2. The seed of this plant, used as a coloring and sometimes as a flavoring, especially in Latin American cuisine. 3. A yellowish-red dyestuff obtained from the seed aril of this plant, used especially to dye fabric and to color food products such as margarine and cheese. [Of Cariban origin.]

Anne (än), 1665-1714. Queen of Great Britain and Ireland (1702-1714). The last monarch of the Stuart line, she was also the last English ruler to exercise the royal veto over Parliament (1707).

an·neal (ə-nēl') v. an·nealed, an·neal·ing, an·neals. — v. tr. 1. To subject (glass or metal) to a process of heating and slow cooling in order to toughen and reduce brittleness. 2. To strengthen or harden. — v. intr. To become strengthened or hardened: “the time she needed for opinion to anneal around her policy” (Alexander M. Haig, Jr.). [Middle English anelen, from Old English onælan, to set fire to : on, on; see ON + ælan, to kindle.]

An·ne·cy (än'ə-sē', än-sē') A city of southern France in the Alps on Lake Annecy east-northeast of Lyon. It is a popular resort and tourist center. Population, 49,965.

an·ne·lid (än'ə-lid) also an·nel·i·dan (ə-něl'i-dən) n. Any of various worms or wormlike animals of the phylum Annelida, characterized by an elongated, cylindrical, segmented body and including the earthworm and leech. — adj. Of or belonging to the phylum Annelida. [From New Latin Annelida, phylum name, from French annelés, pl. past participle of anneler, to ring, from Old French anel, ring, from Latin ānellus, diminutive of ānus, ring.]

Anne of Aus-tri-a (än ūf ô'strē-ə), 1601-1666. Wife of Louis XIII of France and regent (1643-1661) for her son Louis XIV.

Anne of Cleves (än ūf klēvz), 1515-1557. Queen of England (January-July 1540) as the fourth wife of Henry VIII.

an·nex (ə-nĕks', ä'n'ĕks') v. tr. an·nexed, an·nex·ing, an·nex·es. 1. To append or attach, especially to a larger or more significant thing. 2. To incorporate (territory) into an existing political unit such as a country, state, county, or city. 3. To add or attach, as an attribute, a condition, or a consequence. — n. (än'ĕks', ä'n'ĭks) 1. A building added on to a larger one or an auxiliary building situated near a main one. 2. An addition, such as an appendix, that is made to a record or other document. [Middle English annexen, from Old French annexer, from Latin annectere, annex-, to connect : ad-, ad- + nectere, to bind; see ned- in Appendix.] — an'nex·a'tion (än'ĭk-sā'shən) n. — an'nex·a'tion·al adj. — an'nex·a'tion·ism n. — an'nex·a'tion·ist n.

an·nexe (än'ĭks) n. Chiefly British. Variant of annex.

An·nie Oak·ley (än'e ōk'lē) n. A free ticket or pass. [After Annie OAKLEY (from the association of the punched ticket with one of her bullet-riddled targets).]

an·ni·hi·late (ə-nī'ə-lāt') v. an·ni·hi·lat·ed, an·ni·hi·lat·ing, an·ni·hi·lates. — v. tr. 1. a. To destroy completely: The naval force was annihilated during the attack. b. To reduce to nonexistence. c. To defeat decisively; vanquish. 2. To nullify or render void; abolish. — v. intr. Physics. To participate in annihilation, as do an electron and a positron. [Late Latin annihilāre, annihilāt- : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin nihil, nothing; see ne in Appendix.] — an·ni'hi·la·bil'i·ty (-lə-bĭl'ĭ-tē) n. — an·ni'hi·la·ble (-lə-bəl) adj. — an·ni'hi·la'tor n.

an·ni·hi·la·tion (ə-nī'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of annihilating. b. The condition or result of having been annihilated; utter destruction. 2. Physics. The phenomenon in which a particle and an antiparticle, such as an electron and a positron, meet and are converted completely to energy approximately equivalent to the sum of their masses.

an·ni·hi·la·tive (ə-nī'ə-lā'tĭv, -ə-lə-) adj. Capable of causing utter destruction or serving to destroy utterly: "The possession of annihilative power has not slowed down the drive toward even more fiendish modes of inflicting wholesale death" (Saturday Review).

An·nis·ton (än'ĭ-stən) A city of northeast Alabama in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains east-northeast of Birmingham. It was founded in 1872 as an iron-manufacturing company town and opened to noncompany settlers in 1883. Population, 26,623.

an·ni·ver·sa·ry (ăn'ə-vûr'sə-rē) n. pl. an·ni·ver·sa·ries. 1. The annually recurring date of a past event, especially one of historical, national, or personal importance: a wedding anniversary; the anniversary of the founding of Rome. 2. A celebration commemorating such a date. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an anniversary party; an anniversary ring. [Middle English anniversarie, from Medieval Latin (diēs) anniversāria, anniversary (day), from Latin, feminine of anniversārius, returning yearly : annus, year; see at- in Appendix + versus, past participle of vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.]

an·no Dom·i·ni (ăn'ō dōm'ə-nī', dōm'ə-nē) adv. Abbr. A.D., A.D. In a specified year of the Christian era. [Medieval Latin : annō, in the year + Domini, genitive of Dominus, Lord.]

an·no·tate (ăn'ō-tāt') v. an·no·tat·ed, an·no·tat·ing, an·no·tates. — v. tr. To furnish (a literary work) with critical commentary or explanatory notes; gloss. — v. intr. To gloss a text. [Latin annotāre, annotāt-, to note down : ad-, ad- + notāre, to write (from nota, note); see gnō- in Appendix.] — an'no·ta'tive adj. — an'no·ta'tor n.

an·no·ta·tion (ăn'ō-tā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of furnishing critical commentary or explanatory notes. 2. A critical or explanatory note; a commentary.

an·nounce (ə-nouns') v. an·nounced, an·nounc·ing, an·nounc·es. — v. tr. 1. To make known publicly. 2. To proclaim the presence or arrival of: announce a caller. 3. To provide an indication of beforehand; foretell: The invention of the microchip announced a new generation of computers. 4. To serve as an announcer for: announce a football game on TV. — v. intr. 1. To declare one's candidacy: Presidential candidates announce two years in advance of the elections. 2. To serve as an announcer. [Middle English announcen, from Old French anoncier, from Latin annūntiāre : ad-, ad- + nūntiāre, to report (from nūntius, message); see neu- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: announce, advertise, broadcast, declare, proclaim, promulgate, publish. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to bring to public notice”: announced a cease-fire; advertise a forthcoming concert; broadcasting their beliefs; declared her intention to run for office; proclaiming his opinions; promulgated a policy of nonresistance; publishing the marriage banns.

WORD HISTORY: The injunction not to shoot the messenger could as well be not to shoot the announcer, given the etymology of the word announce. First recorded in English before 1500 in the sense “to proclaim, make known,” announce came into English via Old French from Latin. The Latin source annūntiāre is made up of the directional prefix ad- and the verb nūntiāre, “to bring word of a fact or occurrence.” This verb is in turn derived from the noun nūntium, “a message,” which also yielded nūntius, “a messenger.”

an·nounce·ment (ə-nouns/mənt) n. 1. a. The act of making known publicly. b. Something announced. 2. An engraved or printed formal statement or notice, as of a wedding or a relocation.

an·nounc·er (ə-noun/sər) n. One that announces, especially a radio or television employee who provides program continuity, delivers announcements, or gives running comments on sports events.

an·noy (ə-noi/) v. an·noyed, an·noy·ing, an·noys. — v. tr. 1. To cause slight irritation to (another) by troublesome, often repeated acts. 2. To harass or disturb by repeated attacks. — v. intr. To be annoying. [Middle English anoien, from Old French anoier, ennuyer, from Vulgar Latin inodiāre*, to make odious, from Latin in odio, odious : in, in; see IN-² + odiō, ablative of odium, hatred; see od- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: annoy, irritate, bother, irk, vex, provoke, aggravate, peeve, rile. These verbs mean to disturb or disquiet a person so as to evoke moderate anger. Annoy refers to mild disturbance caused by an act that tries one’s patience: The sound of footsteps on the bare floor annoyed the downstairs neighbors. Irritate is closely related but somewhat stronger: Your interruptions only serve to irritate the entire staff. Bother implies troublesome imposition: Hasn’t he bothered them enough with his phone calls? Irk connotes a wearisome quality: The city council’s failure to take action on the legislation irked the community. Vex applies to an act capable of arousing anger or perplexity: Hecklers in the crowd asked irrelevant questions for the sole purpose of vexing the speaker. Provoke implies strong and often deliberate incitement to anger: Her behavior was enough to provoke an angel. Aggravate is an approximate equivalent: “Threats only served to aggravate people in such cases” (Thackeray). Peeve, somewhat informal in tone, suggests rather minor disturbance that produces a querulous, resentful response: The flippancy of your answer peevied me. To rile is to upset one’s equanimity and stir one up: It riled me no end to listen to such lies.

an·noy·ance (ə-noi/əns) n. 1. The act of annoying or the state of being annoyed. 2. A cause of irritation or vexation; a nuisance.

an·noy·ing (ə-noi/ɪŋ) adj. Causing vexation or irritation; troublesome: an annoying cough. —an·noy·ing·ly adv.

an·nu·al (ăn/yōō-əl) adj. Abbr. ann. 1. Recurring, done, or performed every year; yearly: an annual trip to Paris. 2. Of, relating to, or determined by a year: an annual income. 3. Botany. Living or growing for only one year or season. — n. 1. A periodical published yearly; a yearbook. 2. Botany. A plant that completes its entire life cycle in a single growing season. [Middle English annuel, from Old French, from Late Latin annuālis, ultimately from Latin annus, year.

See at- in Appendix.] —an'nu-al·ly adv.

an·nu·al·ize (än'yōō-ə-līz') v. tr. an·nu·al·ized, an·nu·al·iz·ing, an·nu·al·iz·es. To adjust or calculate so as to reflect a rate that is based on a full year: Brokers annualize a yield on an investment by multiplying weekly dividends by 52 and dividing the answer by the net asset value per share.

annual ring (än'yōō-əl rīŋ) n. Botany. The layer of wood formed in a plant during a single year. Annual rings appear concentric when viewed in cross section.

an·nu·i·tant (ə-nōō'ī-tənt, ə-nyōō'-) n. 1. One that receives or is qualified to receive an annuity. 2. An officially retired U.S. intelligence officer who is actually still on the government's payroll and is available for assignments.

an·nu·i·ty (ə-nōō'ī-tē, ə-nyōō'-) n. pl. an·nu·i·ties. Abbr. ann. 1. a. The annual payment of an allowance or income. b. The right to receive this payment or the obligation to make this payment. 2. An investment on which one receives fixed payments for a lifetime or for a specified number of years. [Middle English annuite, from Anglo-Norman, from Medieval Latin annuitās, from Latin annuus, yearly, from annus, year. See at- in Appendix.]

an·nul (ə-nŭl') v. tr. an·nulled, an·nul·ling, an·nuls. 1. To make or declare void or invalid, as a marriage or a law; nullify. 2. To obliterate the effect or existence of: "The significance of the past... is annulled in idle gusts of electronic massacre" (Alexander Cockburn). [Middle English annullen, from Old French annuller, from Late Latin annullāre: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin nullus, none; see ne in Appendix.]

an·nu·lar (än'yə-lər) adj. Shaped like or forming a ring. [Latin ānulāris, from ānulus, ring. See ANNULUS.]

annular eclipse (än'yə-lər i-klīps') n. A solar eclipse in which the moon covers all but a bright ring around the circumference of the sun.

annular ligament (än'yə-lər līg'ə-mənt) n. The fibrous band of tissue that surrounds the ankle joint or the wrist joint.

an·nu·late (än'yə-līt, -lāt') also an·nu·lat·ed (-lā'tīd) adj. Having or consisting of rings or ringlike segments. [Latin ānulātus, from ānulus, ring. See ANNULUS.]

an·nu·la·tion (än'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of forming rings. 2. A ringlike structure, segment, or part.

an·nu·let (än'yə-līt) n. Architecture. A ringlike molding around the capital of a pillar. [Latin ānulus, ring; see ANNULUS + -ET.]

an·nu·li (än'yə-lī') n. A plural of annulus.

an·nul·ment (ə-nŭl'mənt) n. 1. An act of making or declaring void. 2. The retrospective as well as prospective invalidation of a marriage, as for nonconsum-mation, effected by means of a declaration stating that the marriage was never valid.

an·nu·lus (än'yu-ləs) n. pl. an·nu·lus·es or an·nu·li (-lī'). 1. A ringlike figure, part, structure, or marking, such as a growth ring on the scale of a fish. 2. a. A ring or group of thick-walled cells around the sporangia of many ferns that functions in spore release. b. The ringlike remains of a broken partial veil, found around the stipes of certain mushrooms. 3. Mathematics. The figure bounded by and containing the area between two concentric circles. [Latin ānulus, ring, diminutive of ānus.]

an·nun·ci·ate (ə-nŭn'sē-āt') v. tr. an·nun·ci·at·ed, an·nun·ci·at·ing, an·nun·ci·ates. To announce; proclaim: "They do not so properly affirm, as annunciate it" (Charles Lamb). [Latin annūntiāre, annūntiāt-. See ANNOUNCE.]

an·nun·ci·a·tion (ə-nŭn'sē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of announcing. 2. An announcement; a proclamation. 3. Annunciation. a. The angel Gabriel's announcement to the Virgin Mary of the Incarnation. b. The Christian feast celebrating this event. c. March 25, the day on which this feast is observed.

an·nun·ci·a·tor (ə-nŭn'sē-ā'tər) n. One that announces, especially an electrical signaling device used in hotels or offices to indicate the sources of calls on a switchboard.

an·nus mi·rab·i·lis (än'əs mī-răb'ə-līs) n. pl. an·ni mi·ra·bi·les (än'ī mī-răb'ə-lēz, än'ē). A year notable for disasters or wonders; a fateful year: "Hungary's blood bath was the saddest event in that annus mirabilis" (C.L. Sulzberger). [New Latin : Latin annus, year + Latin mīrābilis, wondrous.]

a·no·a (ə-nō'ə) n. A small buffalo (Bubalus or Anoa depressicornis) of Celebes and the Philippines, having short, pointed horns. [Native word in Celebes.]

an·ode (än'ōd') n. Abbr. a. 1. A positively charged electrode, as of an electrolytic cell, a storage battery, or an electron tube. 2. The negatively charged terminal of a primary cell or of a storage battery that is supplying current. [Greek anodos, a way up : ana-, ana- + hodos, way.]

an·o·dize (än'ə-dīz') v. tr. an·o·dized, an·o·diz·ing, an·o·diz·es. To coat (a metallic surface) electrolytically with a protective or decorative oxide. [ANOD(E) + -IZE.] — an·o·di·za'tion (-dī-zā'shən) n.

an·o·dyne (än'ə-dīn') adj. 1. Capable of soothing or eliminating pain. 2. Relaxing: anodyne novels about country life. 3. Watered-down; insipid: "At the time, I thought that passage was pretty anodyne" (Conor Cruise O'Brien). — n.

1. A medicine, such as aspirin, that relieves pain. 2. A source of soothing comfort. [Latin anōdynus, from Greek anōdunos, free from pain : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + odunē, pain; see ed- in Appendix.]

a·noint (ə-noint') v. tr. a·noint·ed, a·noint·ing, a·noints. 1. To apply oil, ointment, or a similar substance to. 2. To put oil on during a religious ceremony as a sign of sanctification or consecration. 3. To choose by or as if by divine intervention. [Middle English enointen, from Old French enoint, past participle of enoinde, from Latin inungere, inūct- : in-, on; see IN⁻² + ungere, to smear.]

—a·noint'ment n.

a·noint·ing of the sick (ə·noin'tiŋ ÷v thə sɪk) n. Roman Catholic Church.

The sacrament of anointing a critically ill or weak person, with prayers for recovery and an act of penance or confession.

A·no·ka (ə·nō'kə) A city of eastern Minnesota north-northwest of Minneapolis. It was originally a trading post and lumber town. Population, 17,192.

a·no·le (ə·nō'lē) n. Any of various chiefly tropical New World lizards of the genus Anolis, characterized by a distensible throat flap and the ability to change color. Also called chameleon [French anolis, of Cariban origin.]

a·nom·a·lous (ə·nŏm'ə-ləs) adj. 1. Deviating from the normal or common order, form, or rule. 2. Equivocal, as in classification or nature. [From Late Latin anōmalos, from Greek, uneven : probably from an-, not; see A⁻¹ + homalos, even (from homos, same); see sem⁻¹ in Appendix.]

a·nom·a·ly (ə·nŏm'ə-lē) n. pl. a·nom·a·lies. 1. Deviation or departure from the normal or common order, form, or rule: "NASA's system for tracking anomalies for flight readiness reviews failed" (Presidential Commission Report on the Challenger Disaster). 2. One that is peculiar, irregular, abnormal, or difficult to classify: "Both men are anomalies: they have... likable personalities but each has made his reputation as a heavy" (David Pauly). 3. Astronomy. The angular deviation, as observed from the sun, of a planet from its perihelion.

—a·nom'a·lis'tic (-lɪs'tɪk), a·nom'a·lis'ti·cal adj. —a·nom'a·lis'ti·cal·ly adv.

an·o·mic (ə·nŏm'ɪk, ə·nō'mɪk) adj. Socially unstable, alienated, and disorganized: "anomic loners musing over their fate" (Francine du Plessix Gray). — n. A socially unstable, alienated person: "The picture [is] about two anomics who inch their way to spiritual rebirth" (Pauline Kael).

an·o·mie or an·o·my (än'ə-mē) n. 1. Social instability caused by steady erosion of standards and values. 2. Alienation and purposelessness experienced by a person or a class as a result of a lack of standards and values. 3. Personal disorganization resulting in unsocial behavior. [French, from Greek anomia, lawlessness, from anomos, lawless : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + nomos, law; see nem- in Appendix.]

a·non (ə·nŏn') adv. 1. At another time; later. 2. In a short time; soon.

3. Archaic. At once; forthwith. —idiom. ever and anon (or now and anon). Time after time; now and then. [Middle English, at once, from Old English on ān : on, in; see ON + ān, one; see oi-no- in Appendix.]

anon. abbr. Anonymous.

an·o·nym (än'ə-nɪm') n. 1. An anonymous person. 2. A pseudonym. [French anonyme, from Late Latin anōnymus, anonymous. See ANONYMOUS.]

an·o·nym·i·ty (ăn'ə-nīm'ī-tē) n. pl. an·o·nym·i·ties. 1. The quality or state of being unknown or unacknowledged. 2. One that is unknown or unacknowledged.

a·non·y·mous (ə-nŏn'ə-məs) adj. Abbr. anon., a. 1. Having an unknown or unacknowledged name: an anonymous author. 2. Having an unknown or withheld authorship or agency: an anonymous letter; an anonymous phone call.

3. Having no distinctive character or recognition factor: “a very great, almost anonymous center of people who just want peace” (Alan Paton). [From Late Latin anōnymus, from Greek anōnumos, nameless : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + onuma, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.]

a·noph·e·les (ə-nŏf'ə-lēz') n. Any of various mosquitoes of the genus Anopheles, which can carry the malaria parasite and transmit the disease to human beings. [From Greek anōphelēs, useless : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + ophelos, advantage.] —a·noph·e·line' (-līn', -līn) adj.

an·o·rak (ăn'ə-rāk') n. A heavy jacket with a hood; a parka. [Greenlandic Eskimo annoraaq, formerly spelled ánorâk.]

an·o·rec·tic (ăn'ə-rĕk'tīk) also an·o·ret·ic (-rĕt'īk) adj. 1. Marked by loss of appetite. 2. Suppressing or causing loss of appetite. 3. Of or affected with anorexia nervosa. — n. 1. One who is affected with anorexia nervosa. 2. An anorectic drug. [From Greek anorektos : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + orektos from oregein, to reach out for. See reg- in Appendix.]

an·o·rex·i·a (ăn'ə-rĕk'sē-ə) n. Loss of appetite, especially as a result of disease. [Greek : an-, without; see A⁻¹ + orexis, appetite (from oregein, to reach out for); see reg- in Appendix.]

anorexia nerv·o·sa (ăn'ə-rĕk'sē-ə nŭr-vŏ'sə) n. A psychophysiological disorder usually occurring in teenage women that is characterized by an abnormal fear of becoming obese, a distorted self-image, a persistent aversion to food, and severe weight loss. It is often accompanied by self-induced vomiting, amenorrhea, and other physiological changes. [New Latin : anorexia, anorexia + nervosa, nervous.]

an·o·rex·ic (ăn'ə-rĕk'sīk) adj. 1. Suffering from or afflicted with anorexia nervosa. 2. Anorectic. 3. Characterized by severe economy of style and expression: “The book consists of nineteen rather anorexic stories, stripped of all but vestigial traces of emotion and often of plot” (Madison Bell). —an'·o·rex'ic n.

an·or·thite (ăn-ôr'thīt) n. A rare plagioclase feldspar with high calcium oxide content occurring in igneous rocks. [From Greek an-, not; see A⁻¹ + orthos, straight (from its oblique crystals).]

an·or·tho·site (ăn-ôr'thə-sīt') n. A variety of diorite consisting chiefly of feldspar. [French anorthose, a kind of feldspar (Greek an-, not; see a⁻¹ + Greek orthos, straight) + *-ITE*¹.]

an·os·mi·a (än-öz'mē-ə) n. Loss of the sense of smell. [New Latin : Greek an-, without; see A⁻¹ + Greek osmē, odor.] —an·os'mic adj.

an·oth·er (ə-nüth'ər) adj. 1. One more; an additional: had another cup of coffee. 2. Distinctly different from the first: took another route to town. 3. Some other: put it off to another day. — pron. 1. An additional one: one encore followed by another. 2. A different one: This shirt is too big; I'll try another. 3. One of an undetermined number or group: for one reason or another. See Usage Note at each other. [Middle English on other : on, one; see ONE + other, other; see OTHER.]

A·nou·ilh (ä-nōo'ē), Jean. 1910-1987. French playwright whose works, such as Antigone (1944), juxtapose harsh reality and fantasy.

an·ov·u·lant (än'öv'yə-lənt) n. A drug that suppresses ovulation. [AN- + OVUL(ATION) + -ANT.] —an·ov'u·lant adj.

an·o·vu·la·tion (än-ō'vyə-lā'shən, -öv'yə-) n. The failure, cessation, or suppression of ovulation.

an·o·vu·la·to·ry (än-ō'vyə-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē, -öv'yə-) adj. 1. Relating to or causing the suppression of ovulation: an anovulatory drug. 2. Not associated with or influenced by ovulation.

an·ox·e·mi·a (än'ök-sē'mē-ə) n. An abnormal reduction in the oxygen content of the blood. [AN- + OX(O)- + -EMIA.] —an'ox·e'mic adj.

an·ox·i·a (än'ök'sē-ə) n. 1. Absence of oxygen. 2. A pathological deficiency of oxygen, especially hypoxia. [AN- + OX(O)- + -IA¹.] —an·ox'ic (-ök'sik) adj.

ans. abbr. Answer.

an·sate (än'sāt') adj. Having a handle or a part resembling a handle. [Latin ānsātus, from ānsa, handle.]

ansate cross (än'sāt' krōs) n. A cross shaped like a T with a loop at the top; an ankh.

An·schluss (än'shlōös') n. A political union, especially the one unifying Nazi Germany and Austria in 1938. [German, annexation, from anschiessen, to enclose, annex : an, on (from Middle High German ane, from Old High German ana); see an- in Appendix + schliessen, to close (from Middle High German slietzen, from Old High German sliozan).]

An·selm (än'sēlm), Saint. 1033-1109. Italian-born English prelate, philosopher, and theologian who founded Scholasticism and is best known for his ontological argument for the existence of God.

an·ser·ine (än'sə-rīn', -rīn) adj. 1. Of or belonging to the subfamily Anserinae, which comprises the geese. 2. Of or resembling a goose; gooselike. [Latin ānserīnus, pertaining to geese, from ānser, goose. See ghans- in Appendix.]

An·shan (än'shän') A city of northeast China south-southwest of Shenyang. It has an enormous integrated iron and steel complex. Population, 1,280,000.

An·so·ni·a (ăn-sō'nē-ə, -sōn'yə) A city of southwest Connecticut west-northwest of New Haven. It was first settled in 1651. Population, 18,403.

an·swer (ăn'sər) n. Abbr. ans., a., A. 1. a. A spoken or written reply, as to a question. b. A correct reply. 2. a. A solution, as to a problem. b. A correct solution. 3. An act in retaliation or response: Our only possible answer was to sue. 4. Something markedly similar to another of the same class: cable TV's answer to the commercial networks' sportscasts. 5. Law. A defendant's defense against charges. — v. an·swered, an·swer·ing, an·swers. — v. intr. 1. To speak, write, or act as a return, as to a question. 2. To be liable or accountable: You must answer for your actions. 3. To serve the purpose; suffice: "Often I do use three words where one would answer" (Mark Twain). 4. To correspond; match: I found a dog answering to that description. — v. tr. 1. To speak, write, or act as a return to; respond to. 2. To respond correctly to. 3. To fulfill the demands or needs of; serve: "My fortune has answered my desires" (Isaak Walton). 4. To conform or correspond to: The suspect answers the description given by the police. [Middle English answere, from Old English andswaru. See swer- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: answer, respond, reply, retort. These verbs relate to action taken in return to a stimulus. Answer, respond, and reply, the most general, all mean to speak, write, or act in response: "the attempt to answer questions, without first discovering precisely what question it is which you desire to answer" (G.E. Moore). You didn't really expect the President to respond personally to your letter, did you? The opposing team scored three runs; the home team replied with two of their own. Respond also denotes a reaction to something that stimulates one to a course of action, often voluntary (A bystander responded immediately to the victim's obvious need for help), or to an involuntary emotional response (She responded in spite of herself to the antics of the puppy). To retort is to answer verbally in a quick, caustic, or witty manner: "You don't need to worry about appearing too intelligent," retorted his opponent. See also Synonyms at satisfy an·swer·a·ble (ăn'sər-ə-bəl) adj. 1. Subject to being called to answer; accountable. See Synonyms at responsible. 2. That can be answered or refuted: an answerable charge. 3. Archaic. a. Suitable. b. Corresponding. —an'swer·a·bil'i·ty, an'swer·a·ble·ness n. —an'swer·a·bly adv.

an·swer·back (ăn'sər-băk') n. A response to a transmission made over a two-way radio.

an·swer·ing machine (ăn'sər-ĭng mə-shēn') n. An electrical or electronic device for answering one's telephone and recording callers' messages.

answering service (ăn'sər-ĭng sūr'vīs) n. A business service that answers its clients' telephones and conveys messages to the clients.

ant (ănt) n. Any of various social insects of the family Formicidae, characteristically having wings only in the males and fertile females and living in colonies that have a complex social organization. —idiom. ants in (one's) pants. Slang. A state of restless impatience: “She’s got ants in her pants” (Bobbie Ann Mason).

[Middle English amte, from Old English æmete.]

ant. abbr. 1. Antenna. 2. Antiquarian; antiquary; antiquity. 3. Antonym.

Ant. abbr. Antarctica.

ant- pref. Variant of anti-.

-ant suff. 1. a. Performing, promoting, or causing a specified action: acceptant. b. Being in a specified state or condition: flippant. 2. a. One that performs, promotes, or causes a specified action: deodorant. b. One that undergoes a specified action: inhalant. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -āns, -ant- present participle suff. of verbs in -āre.]

an·ta (ăn'tə) n. pl. an·tae (-tē). Architecture. 1. A thickening of the projecting end of the lateral wall of a Greek temple. 2. A pier that constitutes one boundary of the porch. [From Latin antae, pilasters.]

ant·ac·id (ănt-ăs'id) adj. Counteracting or neutralizing acidity, especially of the stomach. — n. A substance, such as magnesia or sodium bicarbonate, that neutralizes acid.

an·tae (ăn'tē) n. Architecture. Plural of anta.

an·tag·o·nism (ăn-tăg'ə-nīz'əm) n. 1. Hostility that results in active resistance, opposition, or contentiousness. See Synonyms at enmity. 2. The condition of being an opposing principle, force, or factor: the inherent antagonism of capitalism and socialism. 3. Biochemistry. Interference in the physiological action of a chemical substance by another having a similar structure.

an·tag·o·nist (ăn-tăg'ə-nīst) n. 1. One who opposes and contends against another; an adversary. See Synonyms at opponent. 2. The principal character in opposition to the protagonist or hero of a narrative or drama. 3. Physiology. A muscle that counteracts the action of another muscle, the agonist.

4. Biochemistry. A chemical substance that interferes with the physiological action of another, especially by combining with and blocking its nerve receptor.

—an·tag·o·nis'tic adj. —an·tag·o·nis'ti·cal·ly adv.

an·tag·o·nize (ăn-tăg'ə-nīz') v. tr. an·tag·o·nized, an·tag·o·niz·ing, an·tag·o·niz·es. 1. To incur the dislike of. 2. To counteract. [Greek antagōnizesthai, to struggle against : anti-, anti- + agōnizesthai, to struggle (from agōn, contest); see AGONY.]

An·ta·kya (ăn-tăk'yä) See Antioch (sense 2).

An·tal·ya (ăn-tăl'-yä) A city of southwest Turkey on the Gulf of Antalya, an inlet of the Mediterranean Sea. The city is situated on a steep cliff and surrounded by an old wall. Population, 173,501.

An·ta·na·na·ri·vo (än'tə-nän'ə-rē'vō, än'tə-nä'nə-) Formerly Ta·nan·a·rive (tə-nän'ə-rēv', tä-nä-nä-rēv'). The capital and largest city of Madagascar, in the east-central part of the country. It was founded in the 17th century as a walled citadel. Population, 700,000.

Ant·arc·ti·ca (änt-ärk'ti-kə, -är'ti-) Abbr. Ant. A continent lying chiefly within the Antarctic Circle and asymmetrically centered on the South Pole. Some 95 percent of Antarctica is covered by an icecap averaging 1.6 km (1 mi) in thickness. The region was first explored in the early 1800's, and although there are no permanent settlements, many countries have made territorial claims. The Antarctic Treaty of 1959, signed by 12 nations, prohibited military operations on the continent and provided for the interchange of scientific data. —Ant·arc·tic adj. & n.

Antarctic Archipelago (änt-ärk'tik är'kə-pěl'ə-gō') See Palmer Archipelago.

Antarctic Circle (änt-ärk'tik sūr'kəl) The parallel of latitude approximately 66°33' south. It forms the boundary between the South Temperate and South Frigid zones.

Antarctic Ocean (änt-ärk'tik ō'shən) The waters surrounding Antarctica, actually the southern extensions of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Indian oceans.

Antarctic Peninsula (änt-ärk'tik pə-nīn'syə-lə) also Palm·er Peninsula (pə'mər pə-nīn'syə-lə) A region of Antarctica extending about 1,931 km (1,200 mi) north toward South America.

An·tar·es (än-târ'ēz, -târ'-) n. A giant, red, double and variable star, the brightest in the constellation Scorpio, about 424 light-years from Earth. [Greek antarēs: anti, instead of; see ANTI- + Arēs, Mars.]

ant bear (änt bâr) n. A large anteater (Myrmecophaga jubata), native to South America and characterized by white stripes that run along both sides of its body.

ant cow (änt kou) n. An aphid that yields a honeylike substance on which ants feed.

an·te (än'tē) n. 1. Games. The stake that each poker player must put into the pool before receiving a hand or before receiving new cards. See Synonyms at bet. 2. A price to be paid, especially as one's share; cost: "Whether they could actually turn back Soviet policy depended on many factors that Moscow might yet choose to test by upping the ante" (Foreign Affairs). — v. an·ted or an·teed, an·te·ing, an·tes. — v. tr. 1. Games. To put (one's stake) into the pool in poker. 2. To pay: Let's ante up the bill. — v. intr. To pay up. [From Latin, before. See ant- in Appendix.]

ante- pref. 1. Prior to; earlier: antenatal. 2. In front of; before: anteroom. [Latin, from ante, before. See ant- in Appendix.]

ant·eat·er (än'tē'tər) n. 1. Any of several tropical American mammals of the family Myrmecophagidae, which lack teeth and feed on ants and termites, especially Myrmecophaga tridactyla, having an elongated, narrow snout, a long, sticky tongue, and an extended, shaggy-haired tail. 2. Any of several other animals, including the echidna, armadillo, and pangolin, that feed on ants.

an·te·bel·lum (ăn'tē-bĕl'əm) adj. Belonging to the period before a war, especially the American Civil War. [Latin ante bellum : ante, before + bellum, war.]

an·te·cede (ăn'tī-sĕd') v. tr. an·te·ced·ed, an·te·ced·ing, an·te·cedes. To precede. [Latin antecēdere : ante-, ante- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

an·te·ce·dence (ăn'tī-sĕd'ns) n. Precedence.

an·te·ce·dent (ăn'tī-sĕd'nt) adj. Going before; preceding. — n. 1. One that precedes another. 2. a. A preceding occurrence, cause, or event. See Synonyms at cause. b. antecedents. The important events and occurrences in one's early life. 3. antecedents. One's ancestors. 4. Grammar. The word, phrase, or clause to which a pronoun refers. 5. Mathematics. The first term of a ratio. 6. Logic. The conditional member of a hypothetical proposition. —an'te·ce'/dent·ly adv.

an·te·cham·ber (ăn'tē-chām'bər) n. A smaller room serving as an entryway into a larger room. [French antichambre : anti, before (from Latin ante-, ante-) + chambre, chamber (from Old French chaumbre); see CHAMBER.] an·te·choir (ăn'tī-kwīr') n. A place in front of the choir reserved for the clergy and choir members.

an·te·date (ăn'tī-dāt') v. tr. an·te·dat·ed, an·te·dat·ing, an·te·dates.

1. To be of an earlier date than; precede in time. 2. a. To assign to a date earlier than that of the actual occurrence. b. To date as of a time before that of actual execution: antedate a contract; antedate a check. — n. A date given to an event or a document that is earlier than the actual date.

an·te·di·lu·vi·an (ăn'tī-də-lōō'vĕ-ən) adj. 1. Extremely old and antiquated. See Synonyms at old. 2. Occurring or belonging to the era before the Flood written about in the Bible. [From ANTE- + diluvium, flood; see DILUVIAL.]

—an'te·di·lu/vi·an n.

an·te·fix (ăn'tē-fīks') n. pl. an·te·fix·es or an·te·fix·a (-fīk'sə). Architecture. An upright ornament along the eaves of a tiled roof designed to conceal the joints between the rows of tiles. [From Latin antefixa, pl. of antefixum, something fastened in front, from antefixus, fastened in front : ante-, ante- + fixus, fastened, past participle of fīgere, to fasten; see dhīg^w- in Appendix.] —an'te·fix'al adj.

an·te·lope (ăn'tl-ōp') n. pl. antelope or an·te·lopes. 1. a. Any of various swift-running ruminant mammals of the family Bovidae, native to Africa and Asia and having long horns and a slender build. b. An animal, such as the pronghorn, that resembles a true antelope. 2. Leather made from the hide of the African and Asian ruminant. [Middle English, heraldic beast, probably from Old French antelop, savage beast with sawlike horns, from Medieval Latin anthalopus, from Late Greek antholops.]

an·te·me·rid·i·an (ăn'tē-mə-rĭd'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or taking place in the morning. [Latin antemeridiānus : ante-, ante- + meridiānus, of noon; see MERIDIAN.]

an·te me·rid·i·em (ăn'tē mə-rĭd'ē-əm) adv. & adj. Abbr. A.M., a.m., A.M. Before noon. Used chiefly in the abbreviated form to specify the hour: 10:30 A.M.; an A.M. appointment. [Latin ante, before + meridiem, accusative of meridiēs, noon.]

USAGE NOTE: Strictly speaking, 12 A.M. denotes midnight, and 12 P.M. denotes noon, but there is sufficient confusion over these uses to make it advisable to use 12 noon and 12 midnight where clarity is required.

an·te·mor·tem (ăn'tē-môr'təm) adj. Preceding death. [Latin ante, before; see ANTE- + mortem accusative of mors, mort-, death. See MORTAL.]

an·te·na·tal (ăn'tē-nāt'l) adj. Occurring before birth; prenatal: antenatal diagnostic procedures. —an'te·na'tal·ly adv.

an·ten·na (ăn-tĕn'ə) n. pl. an·ten·nae (-tĕn'ē). Abbr. ant. 1. a. Zoology. One of the paired, flexible, segmented sensory appendages on the head of an insect, a myriapod, or a crustacean functioning primarily as an organ of touch.

b. Something likened to this sensory appendage, as in function or form: sensitive public relations antennae. 2. pl. an·ten·nas. A metallic apparatus for sending or receiving electromagnetic waves. In this sense, also called aerial [Medieval Latin, from Latin, sail yard, translation of Greek keraiā, insect feeler, yardarm.]

—an·ten'nal adj.

an·ten·nule (ăn-tĕn'yool) n. Zoology. A small antenna or similar organ, especially one of the first pair of small antennae on the head of a crustacean. [French, diminutive of antenne, antenna, from Medieval Latin antenna, sail yard. See ANTENNA.]

an·te·pen·di·um (ăn'tē-pĕn'dē-əm) n. pl. an·te·pen·di·a (-dē-ə). A decorative hanging for the front of an altar, a lectern, or a pulpit. [Medieval Latin : Latin ante-, ante- + pendĕre, to hang; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

an·te·pe·nult (ăn'tē-pĕ'nŭlt', -pĭ-nŭlt') n. The third syllable from the end in a word, such as te in antepenult. [Short for Late Latin antepaenultima, from feminine of antepaenultimus, antepenultimate. See ANTEPENULTIMATE.]

an·te·pe·nult·ti·mate (ăn'tē-pĭ-nŭl'tə-mĭt) adj. Coming before the next to the last in a series. — n. An antepenult. [From Late Latin antepaenultimus : Latin ante-, ante- + Latin paenultimus, next to last; see PENULT.]

an·te·ri·or (ăn-tĭr'ē-ər) adj. Abbr. a. 1. Placed before or in front. 2. Occurring before in time; earlier. 3. Anatomy. a. Located near or toward the head in lower animals. b. Located on or near the front of the body in higher animals.

c. Located on or near the front of an organ or on the ventral surface of the body in human beings. 4. Botany. In front of and facing away from the axis or stem. [Latin, comparative of ante, before. See ant- in Appendix.] —an-te'/ri-or-ly adv.

An-te-ro (än-târ'ō), Mount. A peak, 4,352 m (14,269 ft) high, in the Sawatch Mountains of central Colorado.

an-te-room (än'tē-rōom', -rōom') n. An outer room that opens into another room, often used as a waiting room.

An-theil (än'tīl), George. 1900-1959. American pianist and composer whose Ballet Mécanique (1927) is scored for player pianos, car horns, and other nontraditional instruments.

ant-he-li-on (änt-hē'lē-ən, änthē'-) n. pl. ant-he-li-a (-lē-ə) or ant-he-li-ons. A luminous, white, halolike area occasionally seen in the sky opposite the sun on the parhelic circle. [Greek anthēlion, from neuter of anthēlios, opposite the sun : anti-, anti- + hēlios, sun; see sāwel- in Appendix.]

ant-hel-min-tic (änt'hěl-mīn'tīk, änthěl'-) also ant-hel-min-thic (-thīk) adj.

Acting to expel or destroy parasitic intestinal worms. — n. An agent that destroys or causes the expulsion of parasitic intestinal worms. [ANT(I)- + Greek helmins, helminth-, worm; see wel-² in Appendix.]

an-them (än'thəm) n. 1. A hymn of praise or loyalty. 2. A sacred composition set to words from the Bible. 3. A modern ballad accompanied by rock music instrumentation. [Middle English anteme, from Old English antefn, from Late Latin antiphōna, from Late Greek, from neuter pl. of antiphōnos, sounding in answer : anti-, in return; see ANTI- + phōnē, voice; see bhā-² in Appendix.]

an-the-mi-on (än-thē'mē-ən) n. pl. an-the-mi-a (-mē-ə). A pattern of honeysuckle or palm leaves in a radiating cluster, used as a motif in Greek art. [Greek, diminutive of anthemon, flower, from anthos.]

an-ther (än'thər) n. Botany. The pollen-bearing part of the stamen. [Medieval Latin anthēra, pollen, from Latin, a medicine extracted from flowers, from Greek, from feminine of anthēros, flowery, from anthos, flower.]

an-ther-id-i-um (än'thə-rīd'ē-əm) n. pl. an-ther-id-i-a (-ē-ə). Botany. A sperm-producing organ occurring in seedless plants, fungi, and algae. [New Latin : anthēra, anther; see ANTHER + -idium, diminutive suff. (from Greek -idion).]

an-ther-o-zoid (än'thər-ə-zō'id) n. Botany. A male gamete produced by an antheridium.

an-the-sis (än-thē'sīs) n. Botany. The period during which a flower is fully open and functional. [Greek anthēsis, flowering, from anthein, to bloom, from anthos, flower.]

ant-hill (änt'hīl') n. A mound of soil, sand, or dirt formed by ants or termites in digging or building a nest.

antho- pref. Flower: anthocyanin. [Greek, from anthos, flower.]

an·tho·cy·a·nin (än'thō-sī'ə-nĭn) also an·tho·cy·an (-sī'ən, -än') n. Any of various water-soluble pigments that impart to flowers and other plant parts colors ranging from violet and blue to most shades of red. [ANTHO- + CYANIN(E).]

an·thol·o·gize (än-thōl'ə-jīz') v. an·thol·o·gized, an·thol·o·giz·ing, an·thol·o·giz·es. — v. intr. To compile or publish an anthology. — v. tr. To include (material) in an anthology. — an·thol'ogist n.

an·thol·o·gy (än-thōl'ə-jē) n. pl. an·thol·o·gies. 1. A collection of literary pieces, such as poems, short stories, or plays. 2. A miscellany, an assortment, or a catalog, as of complaints, comments, or ideas: “The Irish love their constitution for what it is: an anthology of the clerical-nationalist ideas of 1936, when it was drawn up” (Economist). [Medieval Greek anthologia, collection of epigrams, from Greek, flower gathering, from anthologeîn, to gather flowers : antho-, antho- + logos, a gathering (from legeîn, to gather); see leg- in Appendix.]

—an'tho·log'i·cal (än'thə-lōj'i-kəl) adj.

An·tho·ny (än'thə-nē), Saint. A.D.250?-350?. Egyptian ascetic monk considered to be the founder of Christian monasticism.

An·tho·ny (än'thə-nē), Susan Brownell. 1820-1906. American feminist leader and suffragist who was instrumental in the passage of legislation that gave married women legal rights over their children, property, and wages. In 1869 she cofounded the National Woman Suffrage Association.

Anthony of Pad·u·a (än'thə-nē ūv päj'ōō-ə, päd'yōō-ə), Saint. 1195-1231. Portuguese-born Franciscan monk who, according to legend, once preached to an attentive school of fish.

an·tho·zo·an (än'thə-zō'ən) n. Any of a class (Anthozoa) of marine organisms, such as the corals and sea anemones, that have radial segments and grow singly or in colonies. —an'tho·zo'an, an'tho·zo'ic (-zō'ik) adj.

an·thra·cene (än'thrə-sēn') n. A crystalline hydrocarbon, C₁₄H₁₀, extracted from coal tar and used in the manufacture of dyes and organic chemicals. [Greek anthrax, anthrak-, charcoal + -ENE.]

an·thra·ces (än'thrə-sēz') n. Plural of anthrax (n., sense 2).

an·thra·cite (än'thrə-sīt') n. A dense, shiny coal that has a high carbon content and little volatile matter and burns with a clean flame. Also called hard coal [Probably ultimately from Greek anthrakitis, a kind of coal, from anthrax, anthrak-, charcoal.] —an'thra·cit'ic (-sīt'ik) adj.

an·thrac·nose (än-thrāk'nōs) n. Any of several diseases of plants caused by certain fungi and characterized by dead spots on the leaves, twigs, or fruits. [French : Greek anthrax, anthrak-, carbuncle + Greek nosos, disease.]

an·thra·co·sis (än'thrə-kō'sis) n. See black lung. [New Latin : Greek anthrax, anthrak-, charcoal + -OSIS.]

an·thrax (än'thräks') n. 1. An infectious, usually fatal disease of warm-blooded animals, especially of cattle and sheep, caused by the bacterium Bacillus anthracis. The disease can be transmitted to human beings through contact with contaminated animal substances, such as hair, feces, or hides, and is characterized by ulcerative skin lesions. 2. pl. an·thra·ces (-thrə-sēz'). A lesion caused by anthrax. [Middle English antrax, malignant boil, from Latin anthrax, carbuncle, from Greek.]

anthrop. abbr. 1. Anthropological. 2. Anthropology.

an·throp·ic (än-thröp'ik) also an·throp·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. Of or relating to human beings or the era of human life. [Greek anthrōpikos, from anthrōpos, human being.]

anthropo- pref. Human being: anthropometry. [Greek, from anthrōpos, human being.]

an·thro·po·cen·tric (än'thrə-pə-sən'trīk) adj. 1. Regarding human beings as the central element of the universe. 2. Interpreting reality exclusively in terms of human values and experience. — an'tthro·po·cen'tri·cal·ly adv.

— an'tthro·po·cen'trism n.

an·thro·po·gen·e·sis (än'thrə-pə-jən'i-sīs) n. The scientific study of the origin and development of human beings. — an'tthro·po·gen'ic (-jən'ik) adj.

an·thro·poid (än'thrə-poid') adj. 1. Resembling a human being, especially in shape or outward appearance. 2. Of or belonging to the group of great apes of the family Pongidae, which includes the gorilla, chimpanzee, and orangutan.

3. Resembling or characteristic of an ape; apelike. — n. An ape of the family Pongidae. Also called anthropoid ape — an'tthro·poid'al (-poid'l) adj.

an·thro·pol·ogy (än'thrə-pōl'ə-jē) n. Abbr. anthrop. 1. The scientific study of the origin, the behavior, and the physical, social, and cultural development of human beings. 2. That part of Christian teaching concerning the genesis, nature, and future of human beings: "changing the church's anthropology to include more positive images of women" (Priscilla Hart). — an'tthro·po·log'i·cal (-pə-lōj'i-kəl), an'tthro·po·log'ic (-ik) adj. — an'tthro·po·log'i·cal·ly adv.

— an'tthro·pol'o·gist n.

an·thro·pom·e·try (än'thrə-pōm'i-trē) n. The study of human body measurement for use in anthropological classification and comparison.

— an'tthro·po·met'ric (-pə-mět'rīk), an'tthro·po·met'ri·cal (-rī-kəl) adj.

— an'tthro·po·met'ri·cal·ly adv. — an'tthro·pom'e·trist n.

an·thro·po·mor·phism (än'thrə-pə-môr'fīz'əm) n. Attribution of human motivation, characteristics, or behavior to inanimate objects, animals, or natural phenomena. — an'tthro·po·mor'phic adj. — an'tthro·po·mor'phi·cal·ly adv.

an·thro·po·mor·phize (än'thrə-pə-môr'fīz') v. an·thro·po·mor·phized, an·thro·po·mor·phiz·ing, an·thro·po·mor·phiz·es. — v. tr. To ascribe human characteristics to. — v. intr. To ascribe human characteristics to things not human.

an·thro·po·mor·phous (än'thrə-pə-môr'fəs) adj. 1. Having or suggesting human form and appearance. 2. Ascribing human motivation, characteristics, or behavior to things not human, such as inanimate objects, animals, or natural phenomena.

an·thro·pop·a·thism (än'thrə-pöp'ə-thiz'əm) n. Attribution of human feelings to things not human, such as inanimate objects, animals, or natural phenomena. [Late Greek anthrōpopathēs, involved in human suffering (from Greek, having human feelings, from anthrōpopathein, to have human feelings : anthrōpo-, anthropo- + pathos, feeling); see PATHOS + -ISM.]

an·thro·poph·a·gus (än'thrə-pöf'ə-gəs') *n. pl. an·thro·poph·a·gi (-jī'). An eater of human flesh; a cannibal. [Latin anthrōpophagus, from Greek anthrōpophagos, man-eating : anthrōpo-, anthropo- + -phagos, -phagous.]*

—an·thro·po·phag'ic (-pə-fāj'ik), an·thro·poph'a·gous (-pöf'ə-gəs) adj.

—an·thro·poph'a·gy (-jē) n.

an·thro·pos·o·phy (än'thrə-pös'ə-fē) n. The doctrines and beliefs of a modern religious sect derived from theosophy and claiming to develop knowledge and realization of spiritual reality. [ANTHROPO- + (THEO)SOPHY.]

—an·thro·po·soph'i·cal (-pə-söf'ī-kəl) adj. —an·thro·pos'o·phist n.

an·thur·i·um (än-thöör'ē-əm) n. Any of various evergreen tropical American plants of the genus Anthurium, grown as ornamentals for their attractive leaves and their showy, often red spathes. [New Latin Anthurium, genus name : ANTH(O)- + Greek oura, tail; see ors- in Appendix.]

an·ti (än'tī, -tē) n. pl. an·tis. A person who is opposed to something, such as a group, policy, proposal, or practice. — adj. Opposed: “Douglas MacArthur had a coterie of worshipers, balanced off by an equal number... who were vehemently anti” (Joseph C. Harsch). — prep. Opposed to; against. [From ANTI-.]

anti- or ant- pref. 1. a. Opposite: antimere. b. Opposing; against: antiapartheid. c. Counteracting; neutralizing: antibody. 2. Inverse: antilogarithm. [Greek, from anti, opposite. See ant- in Appendix.]

an·ti·a·bor·tion (än'tē-ə-bôr'shən, än'tī-) adj. Opposed to abortion: the antiabortion movement. —an'ti·a·bor'tion·ist n.

an·ti·air·craft (än'tē-âr'kräft', än'tī-) adj. Abbr. AA, A.A. Designed for defense, especially from a surface position, against aircraft or missile attack. — n. An anti-aircraft weapon.

an·ti·al·ler·gic (än'tē-ə-lûr'jĭk, än'tī-) adj. Preventing or relieving allergies.

an·ti·A·mer·i·can (än'tē-ə-mēr'ī-kən, än'tī-) adj. Opposed or hostile to the government, official policies, or people of the United States. —an'ti·A·mer'i·can·ism n.

an·ti·an·ti·bod·y (än'tē-än'tī-böd'ē, än'tī-) n. An antibody that attacks other antibodies, especially one produced in response to the injection of another antibody.

an·ti·an·xi·e·ty (ăn'tē-ăng-zī'i-tē, ăn'tī-) adj. Preventing or reducing anxiety: an antianxiety drug.

an·ti·a·part·heid (ăn'tē-ə-pärt'hīt', -hāt', ăn'tī-) adj. Opposing the system of official racial segregation in South Africa: antiapartheid activism.

an·ti·ar·rhyth·mic (ăn'tē-ə-rīth'mīk, ăn'tī-) adj. Preventing or alleviating irregularities in the force or rhythm of the heart. — n. An antiarrhythmic substance, such as lidocaine.

an·ti·art (ăn'tē-ärt', ăn'tī-) n. Art, specifically Dada, that rejects traditional art forms and theories.

an·ti·at·om (ăn'tē-ăt'əm, ăn'tī-) n. An atom composed of antiparticles.

an·ti·bac·ter·i·al (ăn'tē-băk-tīr'ē-əl, ăn'tī-) adj. Destroying or inhibiting the growth of bacteria. — an·ti·bac·ter·i·al n.

an·ti·bal·lis·tic missile (ăn'tī-bə-līs'tīk mīs'əl, ăn'tī-) n. A defensive missile designed to intercept and destroy a ballistic missile in flight. Also called ABM an·ti·bar·y·on (ăn'tē-băr'ē-ōn', ăn'tī-) n. The antiparticle of a baryon.

An·tibes (ăn-tēb') A city of southeast France on the Riviera between Nice and Cannes. A seaport and fashionable resort, it is the center of one of Europe's largest flower-growing regions. Population, 62,859.

an·ti·bi·o·sis (ăn'tē-bī-ō'sīs, ăn'tī-) n. 1. An association between two or more organisms that is detrimental to at least one of them. 2. The antagonistic association between an organism and the metabolic substances produced by another.

an·ti·bi·ot·ic (ăn'tī-bī-ōt'īk, ăn'tī-) n. A substance, such as penicillin or streptomycin, produced by or derived from certain fungi, bacteria, and other organisms, that can destroy or inhibit the growth of other microorganisms. Antibiotics are widely used in the prevention and treatment of infectious diseases. — adj.

1. Of or relating to antibiotics. 2. Of or relating to antibiosis. 3. Destroying life or preventing the inception or continuance of life. — an·ti·bi·ot·i·cal·ly adv.

an·ti·Black or an·ti·black (ăn'tē-blăk', ăn'tī-) adj. Hostile or opposed to Black people: "Many... are... trying to mitigate their... anti-black attitudes... by forming a renewed identification with 'blackness' and the ghetto" (Alvin F. Pous-saint).

an·ti·bod·y (ăn'tī-bōd'ē, ăn'tī-) n. 1. A protein substance produced in the blood or tissues in response to a specific antigen, such as a bacterium or a toxin. Antibodies destroy or weaken bacteria and neutralize organic poisons, thus forming the basis of immunity. 2. An object composed of antimatter.

an·ti·busi·ness (ăn'tē-bīz'nīs, ăn'tī-) adj. Hostile to business, especially to big corporations.

an·ti·bus·ing (ăn'tē-būs'īng, ăn'tī-) adj. Opposed to the busing of students as a means of achieving racial balance in public schools.

an·tic (ăn'tīk) n. 1. A ludicrous or extravagant act or gesture; a caper.

2. Archaic. A buffoon, especially a performing clown. — adj. Ludicrously odd; fantastic. [From Italian antico, ancient (used of grotesque designs on some ancient Roman artifacts), from Latin antīquus, former, old. See ant- in Appendix.] —an'ti-cal·ly adv.

an·ti·can·cer (ăn'tī-kăn'sər, ăn'tī-) also an·ti·can·cer·ous (-sər-əs) adj.

Effective in treating cancer: anticancer drugs.

an·ti·cat·a·lyst (ăn'tē-kăt'l-ĭst, ăn'tī-) n. 1. A substance that retards or arrests a chemical reaction. 2. A substance that reduces or destroys the effectiveness of a catalyst.

an·ti·cath·ode (ăn'tē-kăth'ōd', ăn'tī-) n. An electrode that is the target in a cathode-ray tube, especially in an x-ray tube.

an·ti·chlor (ăn'tī-klôr', -klôr', ăn'tī-) n. A substance, such as sodium thiosulfate, used to neutralize the excess chlorine or hypochlorite left after bleaching textiles, fiber, or paper pulp. [ANTI- + CHLOR(INE).] —an'ti·chlo·ris'tic (-klăr-ĭs'tĭk) adj.

an·ti·choice (ăn'tē-chois', ăn'tī-) adj. Opposed to the right of women to choose or reject abortion.

an·ti·cho·lin·er·gic (ăn'tē-kō'lə-nûr'jĭk, ăn'tī-) adj. Inhibiting or blocking the physiological action of acetylcholine at a receptor site: anticholinergic drugs. —an'ti·cho·lin·er·gic n.

an·ti·cho·lin·es·ter·ase (ăn'tē-kō'lə-nēs'tə-rās', -rāz', ăn'tī-) n. A substance that inhibits the activity of cholinesterase.

an·ti·christ (ăn'tī-krĭst', ăn'tī-) n. 1. An enemy of Christ. 2. Antichrist. The epithet of the great antagonist who was expected by the early Church to set himself up against Christ in the last days before the Second Coming. 3. A false Christ. [Middle English Antecrist, from Old French, and from Old English both from Late Latin Antichristus, from Late Greek Antikhrīstos : Greek anti-, anti- + Greek Khrīstos, Christ; see CHRIST.]

an·tic·i·pant (ăn-tĭs'ə-pənt) adj. 1. Coming or acting in advance: clouds anticipant of a storm. 2. Expectant; anticipating: a team anticipant of victory. — n. One who anticipates.

an·tic·i·pate (ăn-tĭs'ə-păt') v. tr. an·tic·i·pat·ed, an·tic·i·pat·ing, an·tic·i·pates. 1. To feel or realize beforehand; foresee. 2. To look forward to, especially with pleasure; expect. 3. To act in advance so as to prevent; forestall. 4. To foresee and fulfill in advance. See Synonyms at expect. 5. To cause to happen in advance; accelerate. 6. To use in advance, as income not yet available. 7. To pay (a debt) before it is due. [Latin anticipāre, anticipāt-, to take before : ante-, ante- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.] —an·tic'i·pat'a·ble adj.

—an·tic'i·pa'tor n. —an·tic'i·pa-to'ry (-pə-tôr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

USAGE NOTE: Some people hold that anticipate is improperly used as a simple synonym for expect; they would restrict its use to situations in which advance action is taken either to forestall (anticipate her opponent's next move) or to fulfill (anticipate my desires). In earlier surveys, however, a majority of the Usage Panel accepted the use of anticipate to mean “to feel or to realize beforehand” and “to look forward to.” The word unanticipated, however, is not established as a synonym for unexpected. Thus 77 percent of the Usage Panel rejected the sentence They always set aside a little extra food for unanticipated guests, inasmuch as guests for whom advance provision has been made cannot be said to be unanticipated, though they may very well be unexpected.

an·tic·i·pa·tion (än-tīs'ə-pā'shən) n. 1. The act of anticipating. 2. An expectation. 3. Foreknowledge, intuition, and presentiment. 4. The use or assignment of funds, especially from a trust fund, before they are legitimately available for use. 5. Music. Introduction of one note of a new chord before the previous chord is resolved.

an·tic·i·pa·tive (än-tīs'ə-pā'tiv, -pə-tiv) adj. Expectant. —an·tic'i·pa-tive·ly adv.

an·ti·cit·y (än'tē-sīt'ē, äñ'tī-) adj. Hostile to cities and urban environments: anticity development trends.

an·ti·cler·i·cal (än'tē-klēr'ī-kəl, äñ'tī-) adj. Opposed to the influence of the church or the clergy in political affairs. —an'ti·cler'i·cal·ism n.

an·ti·cli·max (än'tē-klī'mäks', äñ'tī-) n. 1. A decline viewed in disappointing contrast with a previous rise: the anticlimax of a brilliant career. 2. Something trivial or commonplace that concludes a series of significant events: After a week of dramatic negotiations, all that followed was anticlimax. 3. A sudden descent in speaking or writing from the impressive or significant to the ludicrous or inconsequential, or an instance of it: “Waggish non-Yale men never seem weary of calling 'for God, for Country and for Yale' the outstanding single anticlimax in the English language” (Time). —an'ti·cli·mac'tic (-klī-mäk'tik) adj.

—an'ti·cli·mac'ti·cal·ly adv.

an·ti·cli·nal (än'tē-klī'nəl, äñ'tī-) adj. 1. Sloping downward in opposite directions, as in an anticline. 2. Botany. Of or relating to the plane of a cell division perpendicular to the surface of a plant organ.

an·ti·cline (än'tī-klīn') n. Geology. A fold with strata sloping downward on both sides from a common crest.

an·ti·clock·wise (än'tē-klök'wīz, äñ'tī-) adv. & adj. Counterclockwise.

an·ti·co·ag·u·lant (än'tē-kō-äg'yə-lənt, äñ'tī-) n. A substance that prevents the clotting of blood. — adj. Acting as an anticoagulant.

an·ti·co·don (än'tē-kō'dön, äñ'tī-) n. A sequence of three adjacent nucleotides in transfer RNA designating a specific amino acid that binds to a corresponding codon in messenger RNA during protein synthesis.

an·ti·col·li·sion also an·ti·col·li·sion (än'tē-kə-līzh'ən, än'tī-) adj. Serving to prevent midair collisions: aircraft anti-collision devices.

an·ti·com·pet·i·tive (än'tē-kəm-pět'ī-tīv, än'tī-) adj. That discourages competition among businesses: anticompetitive foreign trade restrictions.

an·ti·con·vul·sant (än'tē-kən-vül'sənt, än'tī-) n. A drug that prevents or relieves convulsions. —an'ti·con·vul'sive (-siv) adj.

An·ti·cos·ti (än'tī-kô'stē, -kös'tē) An island of eastern Quebec, Canada, at the head of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It was discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534.

an·ti·crime (än'tē-krīm', än'tī-) adj. Intended to curb or eradicate criminal activity: an anticrime bill; anticrime efforts in the neighborhoods.

an·ti·cy·clone (än'tē-sī'klōn', än'tī-) n. An extensive system of winds spiraling outward from a high-pressure center, circling clockwise in the Northern Hemisphere and counterclockwise in the Southern Hemisphere.

—an'ti·cy·clon'ic (-klōn'ik) adj.

an·ti·de·pres·sant (än'tē-dī-prēs'ənt, än'tī-) n. A drug used to prevent or relieve mental depression. —an'ti·de·pres'sive (-prēs'iv) adj.

an·ti·deu·ter·on (än'tē-dōō'tə-rōn', -dyōō'-, än'tī-) n. The antimatter equivalent of deutron.

an·ti·di·ar·rhe·al (än'tē-dī'ə-rē'əl, än'tī-) n. A substance used to prevent or treat diarrhea. —an'ti·di·ar·rhe'al adj.

an·ti·di·u·ret·ic hormone (än'tē-dī'ə-rēt'ik hōr'mōn', än'tī-) n. Abbr. ADH See vasopressin.

an·ti·dote (än'tī-dōt') n. 1. A remedy or other agent used to neutralize or counteract the effects of a poison. 2. An agent that relieves or counteracts: jogging as an antidote to nervous tension. [Middle English, from Latin antidotum, from Greek antidoton, from antididonai, to give as a remedy against : anti-, anti- + didonai, do-, to give; see dō- in Appendix.] —an'ti·dot'al (än'tī-dōt'l) adj.
—an'ti·dot'al·ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: Antidote may be followed by to, for, or against: an antidote to boredom; an antidote for snakebite; an antidote against inflation.

an·ti·dump·ing (än'tē-düm'pīng, än'tī-) adj. Intended to discourage importation and sale of foreign-made goods at prices substantially below domestic prices for the same items.

an·ti·e·lec·tron (än'tē-ĭ-lĕk'trōn', än'tī-) n. See positron.

an·ti·en·zyme (än'tē-ĕn'zīm', än'tī-) n. A substance that neutralizes or counteracts the actions of an enzyme. —an'ti·en·zy·mat'ic (-zī-măt'ik, -zī-), an'ti·en·zy'mic (-zī'mĭk) adj.

an·ti·es·tab·lish·ment (än'tē-ī-stäb'lish-mənt, ä'n'tī-) adj. Marked by opposition or hostility to conventional social, political, or economic values or principles.

An·tie·tam (än-tē'təm) A creek of north-central Maryland emptying into the Potomac River. The bloody and inconclusive Civil War Battle of Antietam (or Sharpsburg, as it is often called in the South) was fought along its banks on September 17, 1862.

an·ti·feb·rile (än'tē-fēb'rəl, -fē'brəl, -brīl', ä'n'tī-) adj. Capable of reducing fever; antipyretic. — n. An agent that reduces fever.

an·ti·fed·er·al·ist also An·ti·fed·er·al·ist (än'tē-fēd'ər-ə-līst, -fēd'rə-līst, ä'n'tī-) n. An opponent of the ratification of the U.S. Constitution.

—an·ti·fed'er·al·ist adj. —an·ti·fed'er·al·ism n.

an·ti·fem·i·nist (än'tē-fēm'ə-nīst, ä'n'tī-) adj. Characterized by ideas or behavior reflecting a disbelief in the economic, political, and social equality of the sexes. —an·ti·fem'i·nism n. —an·ti·fem'i·nist n.

an·ti·fer·til·i·ty (än'tē-fər-tīl'ī-tē, ä'n'tī-) adj. Capable of reducing or eliminating fertility; contraceptive.

an·ti·fluor·i·da·tion·ist (än'tē-flōr'ī-dā'shə-nīst, -flōr'-, -flōr'-, ä'n'tī-) n. One who is strongly opposed to the fluoridation of public water supplies.

an·ti·foul·ing paint (än'tē-fou'ling pānt, ä'n'tī-) n. Paint that counteracts or prevents the fouling of underwater surfaces, such as the undersides of boats.

an·ti·freeze (än'tī-frēz') n. A substance, often a liquid such as ethylene glycol or alcohol, mixed with another liquid to lower its freezing point.

an·ti·fun·gal (än'tē-fūng'gəl, ä'n'tī-) adj. Destroying or inhibiting the growth of fungi. —an·ti·fun'gal n.

an·ti·gal·ax·y (än'tē-gäl'ək-sē, ä'n'tī-) n. A galaxy that is made up of antimatter.

an·ti·gen (än'tī-jən) also an·ti·gene (-jēn') n. A substance that when introduced into the body stimulates the production of an antibody. Antigens include toxins, bacteria, foreign blood cells, and the cells of transplanted organs.

—an·ti·gen'ic (-jēn'īk) adj. —an·ti·gen'i·cal·ly adv. —an·ti·ge·nic'ī·ty (-jə-nīs'ī-tē) n.

An·tig·o·ne (än-tīg'ə-nē) n. Greek Mythology. The daughter of Oedipus and Jocasta. She performed funeral rites over her brother's body in defiance of her uncle Creon.

An·tig·o·nus I (än-tīg'ə-nəs), 382-301 B.C. King of Macedonia (306-301). One of Alexander III's generals, he tried to gain sole control of Asia after Alexander's death but was killed in battle.

an·ti·grav·i·ty (än'tē-grāv'ī-tē, ä'n'tī-) n. The hypothetical effect of reducing or canceling a gravitational field. —an·ti·grav'i·ty adj.

an·ti·green·mail (än'tē-grēn'mäl', ä'n'tī-) adj. Intended to counteract green-mail: antigreenmail strategies; antigreenmail legislation.

An·ti·gua and Bar·bu·da (än-tē'gə änd bär-bōō'də) A country in the northern Leeward Islands of the Caribbean Sea, comprising the island of Antigua and the smaller islands of Barbuda and Redonda. The country became independent in 1981. St. John's is the capital. Population, 72,000. —An·ti'guan adj. & n.

an·ti·he·li·um (än'tē-hē'lē-əm, ä'n'tī-) n. The antimatter equivalent of helium.

an·ti·he·mo·phil·ic factor (än'tē-hē'mə-fil'ik fāk'tər, ä'n'tī-) n. Abbr. AHF A protein substance in blood plasma that participates in and is essential for the blood-clotting process. Most cases of hemophilia are caused by a deficiency of this factor. Also called antihemophilic globulin, factor VIII.

an·ti·he·ro also an·ti·he·ro (än'tē-hîr'ō, ä'n'tī-) n. pl. an·ti·he·roes. A main character in a dramatic or narrative work who is characterized by a lack of traditional heroic qualities, such as idealism or courage. —an'ti·her·o'ic (-hî-rō'ik) adj. —an'ti·her·o·ism (-hēr'ō-iz'əm) n.

an·ti·her·o·ine or an·ti·her·o·ine (än'tē-hēr'ō-în, ä'n'tī-) n. 1. A woman protagonist, as in a play or book, characterized by a lack of traditional heroic qualities. 2. A woman protagonist whose character and behavior are contrary to those of the traditional heroine.

an·ti·his·ta·mine (än'tē-his'tə-mēn', -mîn) n. A drug used to counteract the physiological effects of histamine production in allergic reactions and colds. —an'ti·his'ta·min'ic (-mîn'ik) adj.

an·ti·hy·dro·gen (än'tē-hî'drə-jən, ä'n'tī-) n. The antimatter equivalent of hydrogen.

an·ti·hy·per·ten·sive (än'tē-hî'pər-těn'siv, an'tī-) adj. Reducing or controlling high blood pressure. —an'ti·hy'per·ten'sive n.

an·ti·in·fec·tive (än'tē-în-fěk'tiv, ä'n'tī-) adj. Capable of preventing or counteracting infection: an anti-infective agent. —an'ti·in·fec'tive n.

an·ti·in·flam·ma·to·ry (än'tē-în-fläm'ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē, ä'n'tī-) adj. Preventing or reducing inflammation. —an'ti·in·flam'ma·to'ry n.

an·ti·in·tel·lec·tu·al (än'tē-în'tl-ĕk'chōō-əl, ä'n'tī-) adj. Opposed or hostile to intellectuals or intellectual views. —an'ti·in'tel·lec'tu·al n. —an'ti·in'tel·lec'tu·al·ism n.

an·ti·knock (än'tī-nök') n. A substance, such as tetraethyl lead, added to gasoline to reduce engine knock.

An·ti·Leb·a·non Range (än'tē-lēb'ə-nən rānj) A mountain range on the Syria-Lebanon border, rising to 2,815.8 m (9,232 ft) at Mount Hermon.

an·ti·lep·ton (än'tē-lēp'tön, ä'n'tī-) n. The antiparticle of a lepton.

- An·til·les (än-tīl'ēz) The islands of the West Indies except for the Bahamas, separating the Caribbean Sea from the Atlantic Ocean and divided into the Greater Antilles to the north and the Lesser Antilles to the east.
- an·ti·log (än'tē-lôg', -lög', ä'n'tī-) n. An antilogarithm.
- an·ti·log·a·rithm (än'tē-lô'gə-rīth'əm, -lög'ə-, ä'n'tī-) n. The number for which a given logarithm stands; for example, where $\log x$ equals y , the x is the antilogarithm of y . —an'ti·log'a·rith'mic adj.
- an·ti·ma·cas·sar (än'tē-mə-käs'ər) n. A protective covering for the backs of chairs and sofas. [ANTI- + Macassar, a brand of hair oil.]
- an·ti·mag·net·ic (än'tē-măg-nět'ik, ä'n'tī-) adj. Impervious to the effect of a magnetic field; resistant to magnetization.
- an·ti·ma·lar·i·al (än'tē-mə-lâr'ē-əl, ä'n'tī-) adj. Preventing or relieving the symptoms of malaria. — n. A drug used to treat malaria.
- an·ti·mat·ter (än'tī-măt'ər, ä'n'tī-) n. A hypothetical form of matter that is identical to physical matter except that its atoms are composed of antielectrons, antiprotons, and antineutrons.
- an·ti·mere (än'tī-mîr') n. Zoology. A part or division in the body of a bilaterally or radially symmetric animal that corresponds to an opposite or similar part. —an'ti·mer'ic (-mēr'ik) adj.
- an·ti·me·tab·o·lite (än'tē-mī-tăb'ə-līt', ä'n'tī-) n. A substance that closely resembles an essential metabolite and therefore interferes with physiological reactions involving it.
- an·ti·mi·cro·bi·al (än'tē-mī-krō'bē-əl, ä'n'tī-) also an·ti·mi·cro·bic (-bīk) adj. Capable of destroying or inhibiting the growth of microorganisms: antimicrobial drugs. —an'ti·mi·cro'bial n.
- an·ti·mis·sile missile (än'tē-mīs'əl mīs'əl, ä'n'tī-) n. A missile designed to intercept and destroy another missile in flight.
- an·ti·mi·tot·ic (än'tē-mī-tōt'ik, ä'n'tī-) adj. Preventing or interfering with mitosis: an antimetotic drug. —an'ti·mi·tot'ic n.
- an·ti·mo·ni·al (än'tə-mō'nē-əl) adj. Of or containing antimony. — n. A medicine containing antimony.
- an·ti·mo·ny (än'tə-mō'nē) n. Symbol Sb A metallic element having four allotropic forms, the most common of which is a hard, extremely brittle, lustrous, silver-white, crystalline material. It is used in a wide variety of alloys, especially with lead in battery plates, and in the manufacture of flame-proofing compounds, paint, semiconductor devices, and ceramic products. Atomic number 51; atomic weight 121.75; melting point 630.5°C; boiling point 1,380°C; specific gravity 6.691; valence 3, 5. [Middle English antimonie, from Medieval Latin antimōnium, perhaps from Arabic al-'itmid, perhaps from Greek stimmī.]
- an·ti·ne·o·plas·tic (än'tē-nē'ə-plăs'tīk, ä'n'tī-) adj. Inhibiting or preventing the growth or development of malignant cells. —an'ti·ne'o·plas'tic n.

an·ti·neu·tri·no (ǎn'tē-nōō-trē'nō, -nyōō-, ǎn'tī-) n. pl. an·ti·neu·tri·nos.

The antiparticle of the neutrino.

an·ti·neu·tron (ǎn'tē-nōō'trōn', -nyōō'-, ǎn'tī-) n. The antiparticle of the neutron.

an·ti·node (ǎn'tī-nōd') n. For a standing wave, the region or point of maximum amplitude between adjacent nodes.

an·ti·noise (ǎn'tē-noiz', ǎn'tī-) adj. Designed to reduce environmental noise, as in a community: an antinoise ordinance.

an·ti·nome (ǎn'tə-nōm') n. One that is contradictory or contrary to another; an opposite. [ANTI- + Greek nomos, law; see ANTINOMY.]

an·ti·no·mi·an (ǎn'tī-nō'mē-ən) n. An adherent of antinomianism. — adj.
1. Of or relating to the doctrine of antinomianism. 2. Opposed to or denying the fixed meaning or universal applicability of moral law: “By raising segregation and racial persecution to the ethical level of law, it puts into practice the antinomian rules of Orwell’s world. Evil becomes good, inhumanity is interpreted as charity, egoism as compassion” (Elie Wiesel). [From Medieval Latin Antinomī, antinomians, pl. of antinomus, opposed to the moral law : Greek anti-, anti- + Greek nomos, law; see nem- in Appendix.]

an·ti·no·mi·an·ism (ǎn'tī-nō'mē-ə-nīz'əm) n. 1. Theology. The doctrine or belief that the Gospel frees Christians from required obedience to any law, whether scriptural, civil, or moral, and that salvation is attained solely through faith and the gift of divine grace. 2. The belief that moral laws are relative in meaning and application as opposed to fixed or universal.

an·tin·o·my (ǎn-tīn'ə-mē) n. pl. an·tin·o·mies. 1. Contradiction or opposition, especially between two laws or rules. 2. A contradiction between principles or conclusions that seem equally necessary and reasonable; a paradox. [Latin antinomia, from Greek : anti-, anti- + nomos, law; see nem- in Appendix.]

—an'ti·nom'ic (ǎn'tī-nōm'ik) adj.

an·ti·nov·el also an·ti·nov·el (ǎn'tē-nōv'əl, ǎn'tī-) n. A fictional work characterized by the absence of traditional elements of the novel, such as coherent plot structure, consistent point of view, and realistic character portrayal.

—an'ti·nov'el·ist n.

an·ti·nu·cle·ar (ǎn'tē-nōō'klē-ər, -nyōō'-, ǎn'tī-) adj. 1. Opposing the production or use of nuclear power or nuclear weaponry; anti-nuke. 2. Reacting with the components of a cell nucleus: antinuclear antibodies.

an·ti·nu·cle·on (ǎn'tē-nōō'klē-ōn', -nyōō'-, ǎn'tī-) n. The antiparticle of a nucleon.

an·ti·nuke or an·ti·nuke (ǎn'tē-nōōk', -nyōōk', ǎn'tī-) adj. Antinuclear.
—an'ti·nuk'er n.

An·ti·och (ǎn'tē-ōk') 1. An ancient town of Phrygia north of present-day Antalya, Turkey. It was a center of Hellenistic influence and was visited by Saint Paul in biblical times. 2. Also An·ta·kya (än-täk'yä). A city of southern Turkey on the Orontes River near the Mediterranean Sea. Founded c. 300 B.C. by Seleucus I, it was an important military and commercial center in the Roman era and an early center of Christianity. Population, 94,942. 3. A city of western California northeast of Oakland on the San Joaquin River near the mouth of the Sacramento River. It is a processing and shipping center. Population, 62,195.

An·ti·o·chus (än-tī'ə-kəs) A Seleucid dynasty ruling in Syria (280-64 B.C.). Its most important member was Antiochus III, known as "the Great" (242-187, ruled 223-187), who conquered much of Asia Minor but was defeated by the Romans in 190.

an·ti·ox·i·dant (än'tē-ök'si-dənt, än'tī-) n. A chemical compound or substance that inhibits oxidation.

an·ti·par·a·sit·ic (än'tē-pär'ə-sit'ik, än'tī-) adj. Destroying or inhibiting the growth and reproduction of human or animal parasites. —an'ti·par'a·sit'ic n.

an·ti·par·ti·cle (än'tē-pär'ti-kəl, än'tī-) n. A subatomic particle, such as a positron, an antiproton, or an antineutron, having the same mass, average lifetime, spin, magnitude of magnetic moment, and magnitude of electric charge as the particle to which it corresponds but having the opposite sign of electric charge, opposite intrinsic parity, and opposite direction of magnetic moment.

an·ti·pas·to (än'tē-päs'tō) n. pl. an·ti·pas·tos or an·ti·pas·ti (-tē). An appetizer usually consisting of an assortment of ingredients, such as smoked meats, cheese, fish, and vegetables. [Italian : anti-, before (from Latin ante-); see ANTE- + pasto, food (from Latin pastus, past participle of pāscere, to feed); see pā- in Appendix.]

An·tip·a·ter (än-tīp'ə-tər), 398?-319 B.C. Macedonian general and regent (334-323) who governed the empire during Alexander III's military campaigns. He served again as regent in 321 to 319.

an·tip·a·thet·ic (än-tīp'ə-thēt'ik) also an·tip·a·thet·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj.

1. a. Having or showing a strong aversion or repugnance: antipathetic to new ideas. b. Opposed in nature or character; antagonistic: antipathetic factions within the party. 2. Causing a feeling of antipathy; repugnant: "The whole place and everything about it was antipathetic to her" (Anthony Trollope).

—an·tip'a·thet'i·cal·ly adv.

an·tip·a·thy (än-tīp'ə-thē) n. pl. an·tip·a·thies. 1. A strong feeling of aversion or repugnance. See Synonyms at enmity. 2. An object of aversion. [Latin antipathia, from Greek antipatheia, from antipathēs, of opposite feelings : anti-, anti- + pathos, feeling; see PATHOS.] an·ti·pe·ri·od·ic (än'tē-pîr'ē-öd'ik, än'tī-) adj. Preventing regular recurrence of the symptoms of a disease, as in malaria. —an'ti·pe'ri·od'ic n.

an·ti·per·son·nel (än'tē-pîr'sə-nəl, än'tī-) adj. Abbr. AP Designed to inflict death or bodily injury rather than material destruction: antipersonnel grenades.

an·ti·per·spi·rant (ăn'tē-pûr'spər-ənt, ăn'tī-) n. An astringent preparation applied to the skin to decrease perspiration. —an'ti·per'spi·rant adj.

an·ti·phlo·gis·tic (ăn'tē-flə-jis'tik, ăn'tī-) adj. Reducing inflammation or fever; anti-inflammatory. —an'ti·phlo·gis'tic n.

an·ti·phon (ăn'tə-fōn') n. 1. A devotional composition sung responsively as part of a liturgy. 2. a. A short liturgical text chanted or sung responsively preceding or following a psalm, psalm verse, or canticle. b. Such a text formerly used as a response but now rendered independently. 3. A response; a reply: “It would be truer... to see [conservation] as an antiphon to the modernization of the 1950s and 1960s” (Raphael Samuel). [Late Latin antiphōna, sung responses. See ANTHEM.]

an·tiph·o·nal (ăn-tif'ə-nəl) adj. 1. Relating to or resembling an antiphon. 2. Answering responsively, as in antiphony. 3. Occurring or responding in turns; alternating: “this curious antiphonal relationship between the two men” (Henry A. Kissinger). — n. An antiphonary. —an·tiph'o·nal·ly adv.

an·tiph·o·nar·y (ăn-tif'ə-nēr'ē) n. pl. an·tiph·o·nar·ies. A bound collection of antiphons, especially of the responsive choral parts of the Divine Office.

an·tiph·o·ny (ăn-tif'ə-nē) n. pl. an·tiph·o·nies. 1. Responsive or antiphonal singing or chanting. 2. A composition that is sung responsively; an antiphon. 3. A responsive or reciprocal interchange, as of ideas or opinions: “Sheridan's play shows both sides of the coin. He establishes an antiphony of cynicism and sentimentality” (Jonathan Miller).

an·tiph·ra·sis (ăn-tif'rə-sis) n. The use of a word or phrase in a sense contrary to its normal meaning for ironic or humorous effect, as in a mere babe of 40 years. [Late Latin, from Greek, from antiphrazein, to express by the opposite : anti-, anti- + phrazein, to speak; see PHRASE.]

an·tip·o·dal (ăn-tip'ə-dəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or situated on the opposite side or sides of the earth: Australia and Great Britain occupy antipodal regions. 2. Diametrically opposed; exactly opposite.

an·ti·pode (ăn'ti-pōd') n. A direct or diametrical opposite: “We just sit and listen to the fullness of the quiet, as an antipode to focused busyness” (Kathryn A. Knox). [Back-formation from ANTIPODES.]

an·tip·o·des (ăn-tip'ə-dēz') pl.n. 1. Any two places or regions that are on diametrically opposite sides of the earth. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Something that is the exact opposite or contrary of another; an antipode. [Middle English, people with feet opposite ours, from Latin, from Greek, from pl. of antipous, with the feet opposite : anti-, anti- + pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix.] —an·tip'o·de'an adj.

An·tip·o·des (ăn-tip'ə-dēz') 1. Australia and New Zealand. Usually used informally. 2. A group of rocky islands of the southern Pacific Ocean southeast of New Zealand, to which they belong. They were discovered by British seamen in 1800 and are so named because they are diametrically opposite Greenwich, England.

an·ti·pol·lu·tion (ăn'tē-pə-lōo'shən, ăn'tī-) adj. Intended to counteract or eliminate environmental pollution: antipollution filters; antipollution laws.

—an'ti·pol·lu'tion·ist n.

an·ti·pope (ăn'tī-pōp') n. A person claiming to be or elected pope in opposition to the one chosen by church law, as during a schism. [Middle English, from Old French antipape, from Medieval Latin antipāpa: Latin anti-, anti- + pāpa, pope; see POPE.]

an·ti·pov·er·ty (ăn'tē-pöv'ər-tē, ăn'tī-) adj. Created or intended to alleviate poverty: antipoverty programs.

an·ti·pro·ton (ăn'tē-prō'tōn', ăn'tī-) n. The antiparticle of the proton.

an·ti·pru·rit·ic (ăn'tē-prōō-rīt'ik, ăn'tī-) adj. Preventing or relieving itching: an antipruritic agent. —an'ti·pru·rit'ic n.

an·ti·psy·chot·ic (ăn'tē-sī-kōt'ik, ăn'tī-) adj. Counteracting or diminishing the symptoms of psychotic disorders, such as schizophrenia, paranoia, and manic-depressive psychosis. —an'ti·psy·chot'ic n.

an·ti·py·ret·ic (ăn'tē-pī-rēt'ik, ăn'tī-) adj. Reducing or tending to reduce fever. — n. A medication that reduces fever. —an'ti·py·re'sis (-rē'sīs) n.

an·ti·py·rine (ăn'tē-pī'rēn) n. A toxic white powder, C₁₁H₁₂N₂O, formerly used to reduce fever and relieve pain. [Originally a trademark.]

antiq. abbr. 1. Antiquarian; antiquary. 2. Antiquities. 3. Antiquity.

an·ti·quar·i·an (ăn'tī-kwâr'ē-ən) adj. Abbr. antiq., ant. 1. Of or relating to antiquaries or to the study or collecting of antiquities. 2. Dealing in or having to do with old or rare books. — n. One who studies, collects, or deals in antiquities. —an'ti·quar'i·an·ism n.

an·ti·quark (ăn'tē-kwōrk', ăn'tī-) n. The antiparticle of a quark.

an·ti·quar·y (ăn'tī-kwēr'ē) n. pl. an·ti·quar·ies. Abbr. antiq., ant. An antiquarian. [Latin antīquārius, from antīquus, old. See ANTIQUE.]

an·ti·quate (ăn'tī-kwāt') v. tr. an·ti·quat·ed, an·ti·quat·ing, an·ti·quates.

1. To make obsolete or old-fashioned. 2. To antique. [Late Latin antīquāre, antīquāt-, to make old, from Latin, to leave in an old state, from antīquus, old. See ANTIQUE.] —an'ti·qua'tion n.

an·ti·quat·ed (ăn'tī-kwā'tīd) adj. 1. Too old to be fashionable, suitable, or useful; outmoded. See Synonyms at old. 2. Very old; aged: “The antiquated Earth, as one might say, / Beat like the heart of Man” (William Wordsworth).

—an'ti·quat'ed·ness n.

an·tique (ăn-tēk') adj. 1. Belonging to, made in, or typical of an earlier period. See Synonyms at old. 2. Of or belonging to ancient times, especially of, from, or characteristic of ancient Greece or Rome. 3. Of or dealing in antiques. 4. Old-fashioned: wore a suit of rather antique appearance. — n. 1. An object having special value because of its age, especially a domestic item or piece of furniture or handicraft esteemed for its artistry, beauty, or period of origin. 2. The style or manner of ancient times, especially that of ancient Greek or Roman art: an admirer of the antique. — v. an-tiqued, an-tiqu-ing, an-tiques. — v. tr. To give the appearance of an antique to: antiqued an oak chest. — v. intr. To hunt or shop for antiques. [French, from Latin antīquus. See ant- in Appendix.]

—an-tique'ly adv. —an-tique'ness n.

an-tiqu-er (än-tē'kər) n. One who treats or finishes new furniture so as to make it appear old or antique.

an-tiq-ui-ty (än-tīk'wī-tē) n. pl. an-tiq-ui-ties. Abbr. antiq., ant. 1. Ancient times, especially the times preceding the Middle Ages. 2. The people, especially the writers and artisans, of ancient times: inventions unknown to antiquity.

3. The quality of being old or ancient; considerable age: a carving of great antiquity. 4. Often antiquities. Something, such as an object or a relic, belonging to or dating from ancient times.

an-ti-ra-chit-ic (än'tē-rə-kīt'īk, än'tī-) adj. Curing or preventing rickets: anti-rachitic drugs. —an'ti-ra-chit'ic n.

an-ti-roll bar (än'tē-rōl' bär, än'tī-) n. See anti-sway bar.

An-ti-sa-na (än'tī-sä'nə) An active volcano, about 5,760 m (18,885 ft) high, of north-central Ecuador in the Andes southeast of Quito.

an-ti-sat-el-lite or an-ti-sat-el-lite (än'tē-sät'l-īt, än'tī-) adj. Abbr. ASAT, Asat. Directed against enemy satellites: anti-satellite weapons.

an-ti-scor-bu-tic (än'tē-skôr-byōō'tīk, än'tī-) adj. Curing or preventing scurvy: an antiscorbutic vitamin. —an'ti-scor-bu'tic n.

an-ti-se-cre-to-ry (än'tē-sī-krē'tə-rē, än'tī-) adj. Inhibiting or decreasing secretion, especially gastric secretions. —an'ti-se-cre'to-ry n.

an-ti-Sem-ite (än'tē-sēm'īt', än'tī-) n. One who discriminates against or who is hostile toward or prejudiced against Jews. —an'ti-Se-mit'ic (-sə-mīt'īk) adj.

an-ti-Sem-i-tism (än'tē-sēm'ī-tīz'əm, än'tī-) n. 1. Hostility toward or prejudice against Jews or Judaism. 2. Discrimination against Jews.

an-ti-sep-sis (än'tī-sēp'sīs) n. Destruction of disease-causing microorganisms to prevent infection.

an-ti-sep-tic (än'tī-sēp'tīk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or producing antisepsis.

2. Capable of preventing infection by inhibiting the growth of microorganisms.

3. Thoroughly clean; aseptic. See Synonyms at clean. 4. Of or associated with the use of antiseptics. 5. a. Devoid of enlivening or enriching qualities: "This is... not at all lighthearted or amiable music. In fact, the tone is unremittingly sober and antiseptic" (Donal Henahan). b. Free of disturbing or unpleasant features; sanitized: an antiseptic version of history. — n. A substance that inhibits the growth and reproduction of disease-causing microorganisms. —an'ti-sep'ti-cal-ly adv.

an·ti·se·rum (än'tī-sîr'əm) n. pl. an·ti·se·rums or an·ti·se·ra (-sî'rə).

Human or animal serum containing antibodies that are specific for one or more antigens.

an·ti·slav·er·y (än'tē-slā'və-rē, -slāv'rē, ä'n'tī-) adj. Opposed to the practice or institution of slavery. —an'ti·slav'er·y n.

an·ti·smog (än'tē-smög', -smôg', ä'n'tī-) adj. Intended to reduce pollutants that cause smog: antismog devices for cars and power plants.

an·ti·smok·ing (än'tē-smô'king, ä'n'tī-) adj. Opposed to or prohibiting the smoking of tobacco, especially in public: an antismoking campaign; an antismoking ordinance.

an·ti·so·cial (än'tē-sō'shəl, ä'n'tī-) adj. 1. Shunning the society of others; not sociable. 2. Hostile to or disruptive of the established social order; marked by or engaging in behavior that violates accepted mores: Criminal behavior or conduct that violates the rights of other individuals is antisocial. 3. Disrespectful of others; rude. —an'ti·so'cial·ly adv.

an·ti·spas·mod·ic (än'tē-spāz-môd'ik, ä'n'tī-) adj. Relieving or preventing spasms, especially of smooth muscle. — n. An antispasmodic agent. Also called spasmolytic an·ti·stat·ic (än'tē-stăt'ik, ä'n'tī-) also an·ti·stat (-tē-stăt', -tī-) adj. Preventing or inhibiting the buildup of static electricity. —an'ti·stat'ic n.

An·tis·the·nes (än-tis'thə-nēz'), 444?-371? B.C. Greek philosopher who founded the Cynic school.

an·tis·tro·phe (än-tis'trə-fē) n. 1. The second stanza, and those like it, in a poem consisting of alternating stanzas in contrasting metric form. 2. The second division of the triad of a Pindaric ode, having the same stanza form as the strophe. 3. a. The choral movement in classical Greek drama following and in the same meter as the strophe, sung while the chorus moves in the opposite direction from that of the strophe. b. The part of a choral ode sung while this movement is executed. [Late Latin antistrophē, antistrophe of Greek tragedy, from Greek, strophic correspondence, from antistrophein, to turn back : anti-, back; see ANTI- + strophein, to turn; see STROPHE.] —an'ti·stroph'ic (än'tī-strôf'ik) adj.

—an'ti·stroph'i·cal·ly adv.

an·ti·sub·ma·rine (än'tē-süb'mə-rēn', -süb'mə-rēn', ä'n'tī-) adj. Abbr. AS Directed against enemy submarines.

an·ti·sway·bar (än'tē-swā' bär, ä'n'tī-) n. A metal bar connecting the left and right suspension systems at the front or rear of an automobile or a truck, used to stabilize the chassis against sway. Also called anti-roll bar, stabilizer bar, sway bar.

an·ti·take·o·ver (än'tē-tāk'ō'vər, ä'n'tī-) adj. Of, relating to, or constituting measures or statutes intended to prevent acquisition of a target company by another company hostile to the target's management.

an·ti·tank (än'tē-tängk', ä'n'tī-) adj. Abbr. AT, a/t Designed for combat or defense against armored vehicles, especially tanks.

an·ti·ter·ror·ist (än'tē-tēr'ər-ist, ä'n'tī-) adj. Intended to prevent or counteract terrorism; counterterror: antiterrorist measures. —an'ti·ter'ror-ism n.

an·ti·theft (än'tē-thěft', ä'n'tī-) adj. Designed to prevent theft: an antitheft automotive device.

an·tith·e·sis (än-tith'ī-sīs) n. pl. an·tith·e·ses (-sēz'). 1. Direct contrast; opposition. 2. The direct or exact opposite: Hope is the antithesis of despair. 3. a. A figure of speech in which sharply contrasting ideas are juxtaposed in a balanced or parallel phrase or grammatical structure, as in "Hee for God only, shee for God in him" (John Milton). b. The second and contrasting part of such a juxtaposition. 4. The second stage of the Hegelian dialectic process, representing the opposite of the thesis. [Late Latin, from Greek, from antitithenai, to oppose : anti-, anti- + tithenai, the-, to set; see dhē- in Appendix.]

an·ti·thet·i·cal (än'tī-thět'ī-kəl) also an·ti·thet·ic (-īk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or marked by antithesis. 2. Being in diametrical opposition. See Synonyms at opposite. [From Medieval Latin antitheticus, from Greek antithetikos, from antitithenai, to oppose. See ANTI-THESIS.] —an'ti·thet'i·cal·ly adv.

an·ti·tox·ic (än'tē-tök'sīk) adj. 1. Counteracting a toxin or poison. 2. Of, relating to, or containing an antitoxin: an antitoxic serum.

an·ti·tox·in (än'tē-tök'sīn) n. 1. An antibody formed in response to and capable of neutralizing a specific toxin of biological origin. 2. An animal or human serum containing antitoxins. It is used in medicine to prevent or treat diseases caused by the action of biological toxins, such as tetanus, botulism, and diphtheria.

an·ti·trade (än'tī-trād') n. The westerly winds above the surface trade winds of the tropics, which become the prevailing westerly winds of the middle latitudes. Often used in the plural.

an·ti·trust (än'tē-trüst', ä'n'tī-) adj. Opposing or intended to regulate business monopolies, such as trusts or cartels: antitrust legislation.

an·ti·tu·mor (än'tī-tōō'mər, -tyōō'-) also an·ti·tu·mor·al (-mər-əl) adj. Counteracting or preventing the formation of malignant tumors; anticancer.

an·ti·tus·sive (än'tē-tūs'iv, ä'n'tī-) adj. Capable of relieving or suppressing coughing. —an'ti·tus'sive n.

an·ti·type (än'tī-tīp') n. 1. One that is foreshadowed by or identified with an earlier symbol or type, such as a figure in the New Testament who has a counterpart in the Old Testament. 2. An opposite or contrasting type. [Medieval Latin antitypus, from Late Greek antitupos, copy, antitype, from Greek, corresponding, representing : anti-, equal to, like; see ANTI- + tupos, print, impression.]

—an'ti·typ'i·cal (-tīp'ī-kəl) adj.

an-ti-u-to-pi-a (än'tē-yōō-tō'pē-ə, än'tī-) n. 1. An imaginary place or society characterized by human misery and oppression; a dystopia. 2. A work describing such a place or society. —an'ti-u-to/pi-an adj. & n.

an-ti-ven-in (än'tē-vēn'īn, än'tī-) n. 1. An antitoxin active against the venom of a snake, spider, or other venomous animal or insect. 2. An animal serum containing antivenins. It is used in medicine to treat poisoning caused by animal or insect venom. [ANTI- + VEN(OM) + -IN.]

an-ti-vi-ral (än'tē-vī'rəl, än'tī-) adj. Destroying or inhibiting the growth and reproduction of viruses: an antiviral drug. —an'ti-vi'ral n.

an-ti-vi-ta-min (än'tē-vī'tə-mīn, än'tī-) n. A substance that destroys or inhibits the metabolic action of a vitamin.

an-ti-war (än'tē-wôr', än'tī-) adj. Opposed to war: an antiwar protest.

an-ti-white (än'tē-hwīt', wīt', än'tī-) adj. Hostile or opposed to white people: “To talk about black does not mean we are anti-white” (Ron Clark).

ant-ler (änt'lər) n. One of a pair of hornlike, bony, deciduous growths, usually elongated and branched, on the head of a deer, moose, elk, caribou, or other member of the deer family. [Middle English aunteler, from Old French antoillier, from Vulgar Latin antoculāre*, anteoculāre : Latin ante-, ante- + Latin oculāris, of the eye; see OCULAR.] —ant'lered adj.

Ant-li-a (änt'lē-ə) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near Hydra and Vela. [Latin antlia, pump, from Greek, ship's hold, bilge-water, from antlos.]

ant lion (änt lī'ən) n. 1. Any of various insects of the family Myrmeleontidae, the adults of which resemble dragonflies. 2. The large-jawed larva of the ant lion, which digs a conical crater in the sand designed to trap ants and other insects for food. In this sense, also called doodlebug

An-to-fa-gas-ta (än'tō-fə-gä'stə) A city of northern Chile on the Pacific Ocean. It is a shipping center for minerals found in the area. Population, 185,486.

An-to-nel-lo da Mes-si-na (än'tō-něl'ō dä mē-sē'nä), 1430?-1479. Italian painter who studied Flemish techniques and reputedly introduced oil paints to Italy.

An-to-ni-nus Pi-us (än'tə-nī'nəs pī'əs), A.D. 86-161. Emperor of Rome (138-161) who was the adopted son and successor of Hadrian.

An-to-ni-on-i (än-tō'nē-ō'nē), Michelangelo. Born 1912. Italian filmmaker whose works, notably L'Avventura (1959), are rich character studies.

An-to-ni-us (än-tō'nē-əs), Marcus. See Mark Antony.

an-to-no-ma-sia (än'tə-nə-mā'zhə) n. 1. The substitution of a title or epithet for a proper name, as in calling a sovereign “Your Majesty.” 2. The substitution of a personal name for a common noun to designate a member of a group or class, as in calling a traitor a “Benedict Arnold.” [Latin, from Greek antonomazein, to name instead : anti-, instead of; see ANTI- + onomazein, to name (from onoma, name); see nō-men- in Appendix.]

An·to·ny (än-tə-nē') A city of north-central France, a mainly residential suburb of Paris. Population, 54,610.

an·to·nym (än'tə-nīm') n. Abbr. ant. A word having a meaning opposite to that of another word: The word wet is an antonym of the word dry. [ANT(I)- + -ONYM.] —an'to·nym'ic adj. —an·ton'y·mous (än-tōn'ə-məs) adj.

—an·ton'y·my n.

an·tra (än'trə) n. Plural of antrum.

an·tre (än'tər) n. A cavern; a cave. [French, from Latin antrum. See ANTRUM.]

an·trorse (än'trōrs') adj. Biology. Directed forward and upward, as the hairs on certain plant stems. [New Latin antrōrsum, from Latin anterior, before (perhaps after intrōrsum, inwards, from interior, inside). See ANTERIOR.] —an'trorse'ly adv.

an·trum (än'trəm) n. pl. an·tra (-trə). 1. A cavity or chamber, especially one in a bone. 2. Either of the sinuses in the bones of the upper jaw, opening into the nasal cavity. [Late Latin, cavity in the body, from Latin, cave, from Greek antron.] —an'tral adj.

ant·sy (änt'sē) adj. ant·si·er, ant·si·est. Slang. 1. Restless or impatient; fidgety: The long wait made the children antsy. 2. Nervous; apprehensive: "Camps got shot up all the time, but if there wasn't a shoot-up, they'd get antsy" (Harper's). [Perhaps from the incessant motions of ants.]

An·tung (än'tōōng') See Dandong.

Ant·werp (än'twərp) also An·vers (än-vâr') A city of northern Belgium on the Scheldt River north of Brussels. One of Europe's busiest ports, it has been a center of the diamond industry since the 15th century. The first stock exchange was founded here in 1460. Population, 490,524.

a·ñu also an·yu (ä'nyō) n. 1. A twining Andean herb (Tropaeolum tuberosum) having large flowers with yellow petals and long red spurs. 2. The edible tubers of this plant. [American Spanish añú, from Quechua áñu.]

A·nu·bis (ə-nōō'bīs, ə-nyōō'-) n. Mythology. A jackal-headed Egyptian god and the son of Osiris. He conducted the dead to judgment.

A·nu·ra·dha·pur·a (үн'ə-rä'də-pōōr'ə, ə-nōōr'ə-) A town of north-central Sri Lanka north-northeast of Colombo. The ancient capital of Singhalese kings of Ceylon, it has extensive ruins and is a Buddhist pilgrimage center. Population, 36,000.

a·nu·ran (ə-nōōr'ən, ə-nyōōr'-) n. See salientian. [From New Latin Anura, order of frogs and toads : A⁻¹ + Greek oura, tail; see ors- in Appendix.]

an·u·re·sis (än'yə-rē'sīs) n. 1. Inability to urinate. 2. See anuria. [A⁻¹ + Greek ourēsis, urination from ourein, to urinate, from ouron, urine.]

—an'u·ret'ic (-rēt'ik) adj.

a·nu·ri·a (ə-nōōr'ē-ə, ə-nyōōr'-) n. The absence of urine formation. Also called anuresis —a·nu'ric (ə-nōōr'ik, ə-nyōōr'-) adj.

a·nu·rous (ə-nōōr'əs, ə-nyōōr'-) adj. Having no tail; tailless.

a·nus (ā'nəs) n. pl. a·nus·es. The opening at the lower end of the alimentary canal through which solid waste is eliminated from the body. [Middle English, from Latin.]

An·u·skie·wicz (än'ə-skā'vitch), Richard Joseph. Born 1930. American painter whose works of vibrant complementary colors and precise geometric patterns create the illusion of vibration.

An·vers (än-vâr') See Antwerp.

an·vil (än'vil) n. 1. A heavy block of iron or steel with a smooth, flat top on which metals are shaped by hammering. 2. The fixed jaw in a set of calipers against which an object to be measured is placed. 3. Anatomy. See incus (n., sense 1). [Middle English anfilt, from Old English. See pel⁵ in Appendix.]

anx·i·e·ty (äng-zī'ī-tē) n. pl. anx·i·e·ties. 1. a. A state of uneasiness and apprehension, as about future uncertainties. b. A cause of anxiety: For some people, air travel is a real anxiety. 2. Psychiatry. A state of intense apprehension, uncertainty, and fear resulting from the anticipation of a threatening event or situation, often to a degree that the normal physical and psychological functioning of the affected individual is disrupted. 3. Eager, often agitated desire: my anxiety to make a good impression. [Latin ānxiētās, from ānxius, anxious. See ANXIOUS.]

SYNONYMS: anxiety, worry, care, concern, solicitude. These nouns are compared as they refer to troubled states of mind. Anxiety suggests feelings of fear and apprehension, especially when these emotions seem unrelated to objective sources: "Feelings of resentment and rage over this devious form of manipulation cannot surface in the child... because he does not see through the subterfuge. At the most, he will experience feelings of anxiety, shame, insecurity, and helplessness" (Alice Miller). Worry implies persistent doubt or fear that disturbs one's peace of mind: "Rich people have about as many worries as poor ones, I think" (Louisa May Alcott). Care denotes a burdened state of mind arising from heavy responsibilities: "To be happy one must be... well fed, unhounded by sordid cares" (H.L. Menck-en). Concern stresses involvement in the source of mental unrest; it combines serious thought with emotion: "Concern for man himself and his fate must always form the chief interest of all technical endeavors" (Albert Einstein). Solicitude is active and sometimes excessive concern for the well-being of another or others: "An-imosity had given way first to grudging concessions of admiration and then to worried solicitude for Lindbergh's safety" (Warren Trabant).

anx·i·ous (ängk'shəs, äng'shəs) adj. 1. Uneasy and apprehensive about an uncertain event or matter; worried. 2. Attended with, showing, or causing anxiety: spent an anxious night waiting for the test results. 3. Usage Problem. Eagerly or earnestly desirous. [From Latin ānxius, from angere, to torment. See angh- in Appendix.] —anx'ious-ly adv. —anx'ious-ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Anxious has a long history of use roughly as a synonym for eager, but many would prefer that the distinction between the two words be maintained and that anxious be used only when its subject is worried or uneasy about the anticipated event. In the traditional view, one may say We are anxious to see the strike settled soon but not We are anxious to see the new show of British sculpture at the museum. Fifty-two percent of the Usage Panel rejects anxious in the latter sentence. But general adoption of anxious to mean “eager” is understandable, at least in colloquial discourse, since it provides a means of adding emotional urgency to an assertion, in its implication that the subject’s desire for a certain outcome is so strong that frustration of that desire will lead to unhappiness. Note, in this connection, the analogous use of sentences such as I’m dying to see your new baby in informal style.

an·y (ən'ē) adj. 1. One, some, every, or all without specification: Take any book you want. Are there any messages for me? Any child would love that. Give me any food you don't want. 2. Exceeding normal limits, as in size or duration: The patient cannot endure chemotherapy for any length of time. — pron. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Any one or more persons, things, or quantities. — adv. To any degree or extent; at all: didn't feel any better. [Middle English ani, from Old English ǣnig. See oi-no- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Used as a pronoun, any can take either a singular or plural verb, depending on how it is construed: Any of these books is suitable (that is, any one). But are any (that is, some) of them available? • The construction of any is often used in informal contexts to mean “of all,” as in He is the best known of any living playwright. In an earlier survey this example was unacceptable in writing to 67 percent of the Usage Panel. • Any is also used to mean “at all” before a comparative adjective or adverb in questions and negative sentences: Is she any better? Is he doing any better? He is not any friendlier than before. This usage is entirely acceptable. The related use of any to modify a verb is considered informal. In writing, one should avoid sentences like It didn't hurt any or If the child cries any, give her the bottle. See Usage Note at every. See Usage Note at he¹.

An·yang (än'yäng') 1. A city of eastern China north-northeast of Zhengzhou. It was a capital of the Shang dynasty and one of the earliest centers of Chinese civilization. Population, 250,000. 2. A city of northwest South Korea, a suburb of Seoul. Population, 274,093.

an·y·bod·y (ən'ē-bōd'ē, -būd'ē) pron. Any person; anyone. See Usage Note at anyone. — n. A person of consequence: Everybody who is anybody was at the reception. See Usage Note at every. See Usage Note at he¹.

an·y·how (ən'ē-hou') adv. 1. In whatever way or manner; however: I'll cook it anyhow you like. They came anyhow they could—by boat, train, or plane. 2. In a careless way; haphazardly: clothes stuffed anyhow into the suitcase. 3. a. In any case; at least: I think they're asleep; anyhow, they're quiet. b. Nevertheless: It sounds crazy, but I believe it anyhow.

an·y·more (ən'ē-mōr', -mōr') adv. 1. a. Any longer; at the present: Do they make this model anymore? b. From now on: We promised not to quarrel anymore. 2. Regional. Nowadays.

REGIONAL NOTE: In standard American English the word anymore is often found in negative sentences: They don't live here anymore. But anymore is widely used in regional American English in positive sentences with the meaning “nowadays”: “We use a gas stove anymore” (Oklahoma informant in DARE). Its use, which appears to be spreading, is centered in the South Midland and Midwestern states—Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Oklahoma, and Iowa—and the Western states that received settlers from those areas. The earliest recorded examples are from Northern Ireland, where the positive use of anymore still occurs.

an·y·one (ən'ē-wūn', -wən) pron. Any person.

USAGE NOTE: The one-word form anyone is used to mean “any person.” The two-word form any one is used to mean “whatever one (person or thing) of a group.” Anyone may join means that admission is open to everybody. Any one may join means that admission is open to one person only. When followed by of, only any one can be used: Any one (not anyone) of the boys could carry it by himself. • Anyone is often used in place of everyone in sentences like She is the most thrifty person of anyone I know. In an earlier survey 64 percent of the Usage Panel found this sentence unacceptable in writing. • Anyone and anybody are singular terms and always take a singular verb. See Usage Note at he¹.

an·y·place (ən'ē-plās') adv. To, in, or at any place; anywhere. See Usage Note at everyplace.

an·y·thing (ən'ē-thīng') pron. Any object, occurrence, or matter whatever.

— adv. To any degree or extent; at all: They aren't anything like last year's team.

— n. Something or someone of importance: “You had to be something to start with, and Jeremy never was anything” (Anne Tyler). —idiom. anything but.

By no means; not at all: I was anything but happy about going.

an·y·time (ən'ē-tīm') adv. At any time.

an·yu (ä'nyō) n. Variant of añu.

an·y·way (ĕn'ē-wā') adv. 1. In any way or manner whatever: Get the job done anyway you can. 2. In any case; at least: I don't know if it was lost or stolen; anyway, it's gone. 3. Nevertheless; regardless: It was raining but they played the game anyway.

an·y·ways (ĕn'ē-wāz') adv. Non-Standard. In any case.

an·y·where (ĕn'ē-hwâr', -wâr') adv. 1. To, in, or at any place. 2. To any extent or degree; at all: The project isn't anywhere near completion. 3. Used to indicate limits of variation: Anywhere from 300 to 400 patients suffered secondary infections. — n. Any place whatsoever.

an·y·wise (ĕn'ē-wīz') adv. Non-Standard. In any case.

An·za (ăn'zə, ăn'să), Juan Bautista de. 1735-1788?. Spanish explorer and colonial administrator who founded San Francisco (1776).

An·zac (ăn'zăk') n. A soldier from New Zealand or Australia. [A(ustralian and) N(ew) Z(ealand) A(rmy) C(orps).] — An'zac' adj.

An·zhe-ro-Sud·zhensk (ăn-zhĕr'ə-sōod-zhĕnsk', -sōod'zhĭnsk') A city of central Russia northeast of Novosibirsk. It is one of the oldest coal-mining centers in the Kuznetsk Basin. Population, 110,000.

An·zi·o (ăn'zē-ō, ăn'tsyô) A town of central Italy on the Tyrrhenian Sea south-southeast of Rome. In World War II Allied troops landed at Anzio on January 22, 1944. Population, 27,094.

a/o abbr. Account of.

ao dai (ou' dī, ô') n. pl. ao dais. The traditional dress of Vietnamese women, consisting of a long tunic that is slit on the sides and worn over loose trousers. [Vietnamese áo dài : áo, tunic (of Chinese origin) + dài, long.]

AOH abbr. Ancient Order of Hibernians.

A-OK also A-O·kay (ā'ō-kā') adj. Informal. Being in perfect condition or order. — A-OK adv. & n.

Ao·mo·ri (ou'mə-rĕ, ä'ô-môr'ĕ) A city of extreme northern Honshu, Japan, on Aomori Bay. Opened to foreign trade in 1906, it is now the chief port of northern Honshu. Population, 294,050.

A-one also A-1 (ā'wŭn') adj. Informal. First-class; excellent. [From classification for ships in The Lloyd's Register of Shipping.]

aor. abbr. Grammar. Aorist.

A·o·rang·i (ä'ō-răng'gĕ) See Mount Cook (sense 1). a·o·rist (ä'ər-ĭst) Grammar. n. Abbr. aor. 1. A form of a verb in some languages, such as Classical Greek, that expresses action without indicating its completion or continuation. 2. A form of a verb in some languages, such as Classical Greek or Sanskrit, that in the indicative mood expresses past action. [From Greek aoristos, indefinite, aorist tense : a-, not; see A^{-1} + horistos, definable (from horizein, to define); see HORIZON.] — a'·o·ris'tic adj. — a'·o·ris'ti·cal·ly adv.

a·or·ta (ā-ôr'tə) n. pl. a·or·tas or a·or·tae (-tē). Anatomy. The main trunk of the systemic arteries, carrying blood from the left side of the heart to the arteries of all limbs and organs except the lungs. [New Latin, from Greek aortē, from aeirein, to lift. See wer¹ in Appendix.] —a·or'tal, a·or'tic adj.

aortic arch (ā-ôr'tik ärch) n. Anatomy. One of a series of paired arteries in a vertebrate embryo that connects the ventral arterial system to the dorsal arterial system.

a·or·tog·ra·phy (ā'ôr-tög'rə-fē) n. Examination of the aorta using x-rays following the injection of a radiopaque substance. —a·or'to·graph'ic (-tə-gräf'ik) adj.

a·ou·dad (ä'oo-däd', ou'däd') n. A wild sheep (Ammotragus lervia) of northern Africa, having long, curved horns and a beardlike growth of hair on the neck and chest. Also called Barbary sheep [French, from Berber, audad.]

AP abbr. 1. Advanced placement. 2. Airplane. 3. Air police. 4. American plan. 5. Antipersonnel. 6. Also A.P. Associated Press.

ap. abbr. Apothecary.

a.p. abbr. 1. Additional premium. 2. Author's proof.

ap¹ pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

ap² pref. Variant of apo-.

APA abbr. 1. American Philological Association. 2. American Philosophical Association. 3. American Psychiatric Association. 4. American Psychological Association.

a·pace (ə-pās') adv. 1. At a rapid pace; swiftly. 2. In such a way or at such a speed as to keep up the requisite momentum; abreast. [Middle English a pas, from Old French : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + pas, step; see PACE¹.]

a·pache (ə-pāsh', ä-pāsh') n. pl. a·paches (ə-pāsh', ä-pāsh'). 1. A member of the Parisian underworld. 2. A thug; a ruffian. [French, from Apache, Apache Indian. See APACHE.]

A·pach·e (ə-päch'ē) n. pl. Apache or A·pach·es. 1. a. A Native American people inhabiting the southwest United States and northern Mexico. Various Apache tribes offered strong resistance to encroachment on their territory in the latter half of the 19th century. Present-day Apache populations are located in Arizona, New Mexico, and Oklahoma. b. A member of this people. 2. Any of the Apachean languages of the Apache. [American Spanish.]

A·pach·e·an (ə-päch'ē-ən) n. 1. The subgroup of Athabaskan comprising the languages of the Apache and Navajo. 2. A speaker of any of these languages.

Ap·a·lach·i·co·la (äp'ə-läch'ī-kō'lə) A river of northwest Florida flowing about 180 km (112 mi) southward from the Georgia border to Apalachicola Bay, an inlet of the Gulf of Mexico.

ap·a·nage (äp'ə-nij) n. Variant of appanage.

Ap·a·po·ris (ä'pə-pōr'ēs, -pōr'-) A river rising in south-central Colombia and flowing about 805 km (500 mi) southeast to the Japurá River on the Brazilian border.

ap·a·re·jo (äp'ə-rā'hō, -rā'ō) n. pl. ap·a·re·jos. Southwestern U.S. A packsaddle made of a stuffed leather pad. [American Spanish, from Spanish, equipment, from aparejar, to prepare, from Vulgar Latin appariculāre*. See APPAREL.]

a·part (ə-pärt') adv. 1. a. At a distance in place, position, or time: railings spaced two feet apart; born three years apart. b. Away from another or others: grew apart over the years; decided to live apart. 2. In or into parts or pieces: split apart. 3. One from another: I can't tell the twins apart. 4. Aside or in reserve, as for a separate use or purpose: funds set apart for the project. 5. As a distinct item or entity: Quality sets it apart. 6. So as to except or exclude from consideration; aside: All joking apart, I think you're crazy. — adj. Set apart; isolated. Used after a noun or in the predicate: a people who have existed over the centuries as a world apart. [Middle English, from Old French a part : a, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + part, side (from Latin pars, part-); see PART.] — a·part'ness n.

apart from (ə-pärt' früm) prep. With the exception of; besides: Apart from a few scratches, the car was undamaged.

a·part·heid (ə-pärt'hīt', -hāt') n. 1. An official policy of racial segregation practiced in the Republic of South Africa, involving political, legal, and economic discrimination against nonwhites. 2. Any policy or practice of separating or segregating groups. 3. The condition of being separated from others; segregation. [Afrikaans : Dutch apart, separate (from French à part, apart); see APART + -heid, -hood.]

WORD HISTORY: Although South Africa has not furnished a great number of words that have achieved general currency in British and American English, one in particular, apartheid, has gained wide circulation. The first recorded use of apartheid as an English term, in the Cape Times on October 24, 1947, is an ironic commentary on much of the word's use since then: "Mr. Hofmeyr said apartheid could not be reconciled with a policy of progress and prosperity for South Africa." According to the March 15, 1961, issue of the London Times, the word self-development was supposed to replace apartheid as the official term used by the South African Broadcasting Corporation for "the Government's race policies." And in Move Your Shadow, published in 1985, Joseph Lelyveld says that the "word is [now] shunned, even resented by the [National Party's] high priests as if it were an epithet fashioned by the country's enemies." But apartheid as a word and as a reality has been slow to disappear. The history of apartheid, however, offers a possible model for change in this policy, for the word is an example of a mixture and combination of resources, in this case linguistic. Apartheid is an English word that came into South African English from Afrikaans, the language of the Dutch settlers of South Africa. They in turn had made up the word from the Dutch word apart, “separate,” and the suffix -heid, which corresponds to our suffix -hood. Thus apartheid literally means “separateness.” The Dutch had earlier borrowed the word apart, as did we, from the French phrase à part, meaning “to one side.”

a·part·ment (ə-pärt'mənt) n. Abbr. apt. 1. A room or suite of rooms designed as a residence and generally located in a building occupied by more than one household. 2. An apartment house: a row of high-rise apartments. 3. A room. 4. apartments. Chiefly British. A suite of rooms within a larger building set aside for a particular purpose or person. [French appartement, from Italian appartamento, from appartare, to separate, from a parte, apart : a, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + parte, side (from Latin pars, part-); see PART.] apartment house (ə-pärt'mənt hous) n. A building divided into apartments. Also called apartment building ap·a·tet·ic (äp'ə-tět'ik) adj. Zoology. Relating to or characterized by coloration serving as natural camouflage. [Greek apatētikos, deceptive, from apatētēs, deceiver, from apateuein, to cheat, from apatē, deceit.]

ap·a·thet·ic (äp'ə-thět'ik) also ap·a·thet·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. 1. Feeling or showing a lack of interest or concern; indifferent. 2. Feeling or showing little or no emotion; unresponsive. [From APATHY, on the model of PATHETIC.]

—ap'·a·thet/i·cal·ly adv.

ap·a·thy (äp'ə-thē) n. 1. Lack of interest or concern, especially regarding matters of general importance or appeal; indifference. 2. Lack of emotion or feeling; impassiveness. [Latin apathia, from Greek apatheia, from apathēs, without feeling : a-, without; see *A-*¹ + pathos, feeling; see k^went(h)- in Appendix.]

ap·a·tite (äp'ə-tīt') n. A natural, variously colored calcium fluoride phosphate, $\text{Ca}_5\text{F}(\text{PO}_4)_3$, with chlorine, hydroxyl, or carbonate sometimes replacing the fluoride. It is a source of phosphorus for plants and is used in the manufacture of fertilizers. [From Greek apatē, deceit (from its often being mistaken for other minerals).]

APB abbr. All points bulletin.

ape (āp) n. 1. a. Any of various large, tailless Old World primates of the family Pongidae, including the chimpanzee, gorilla, gibbon, and orangutan. b. A monkey. 2. A mimic or an imitator. 3. Informal. A clumsy or boorish person. — v. tr. aped, ap·ing, apes. To mimic slavishly but often with an absurd result. See Synonyms at imitate. — adj. Informal. Completely unrestrained, especially with enthusiasm: The fans at the concert were really ape. — idiom. go ape. Informal. To become wildly excited or enthusiastic. [Middle English, from Old English apa.] — ap'er n.

a·peak (ə-pēk') adv. & adj. Nautical. In a vertical or almost vertical position or direction: rowers holding their oars apeak. [Alteration of apike, probably from French à pic : à, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + pic, peak (from Old French).]

A·pel·doorn (ăp'əl-dôrn', -dôrn', -ă'pəl-) A city of east-central Netherlands north of Arnhem. It is a popular tourist center. Population, 144,108.

A·pel·les (ə-pěl'ēz), fl. fourth century B.C. Greek painter whose works, none of which survives, are described in ancient writings.

ape-man (āp'măn') n. 1. Any of various extinct primates, such as pithecanthropus, sometimes considered intermediate in evolution between the anthropoid apes and modern human beings. 2. A person or creature held to combine characteristics of apes and humans, as: a. A brawny or brutish man. b. An archetype of the primitive or instinctual aspect of human nature: "The superman has created the airplane and the radio, the ape-man has got hold of them" (Los Angeles Times).

Ap·en·nines (ăp'ə-nīnz') A mountain system extending about 1,352 km (840 mi) from northwest Italy south to the Strait of Messina. The highest peak is Mount Corno, rising to 2,915.8 m (9,560 ft).

a·per·çu (ă'pěr-sü') n. pl. a·per·çus (-sü'). 1. A discerning perception; an insight. 2. A short outline or summary; a synopsis. [French, from past participle of apercevoir, to perceive : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + perceivre, to perceive; see PERCEIVE.]

a·pe·ri·ent (ə-pîr'ē-ənt) adj. Gently stimulating evacuation of the bowels; laxative. — n. A mild laxative. [Latin aperiēns, aperient- present participle of aperire, to open. See wer-4 in Appendix.]

a·pe·ri·od·ic (ă'pîr-ē-ōd'ik) adj. 1. Occurring without periodicity; irregular. 2. Physics. Without periodic vibrations. — a'pe·ri·od'i·cal·ly adv.
— a·pe'ri·o·dic'i·ty (-ə-dīs'ī-tē) n.

a·pé·ri·tif (ă-pěr'ī-tēf') n. An alcoholic drink taken as an appetizer before a meal. [French, from Old French aperitif, purgative, from Medieval Latin aperitīvus, from Late Latin apertīvus, from Latin apertus, past participle of aperire, to open. See wer-4 in Appendix.]

ap·er·ture (ăp'ər-chər) n. 1. An opening, such as a hole, gap, or slit. 2. a. A usually adjustable opening in an optical instrument, such as a camera or a telescope, that limits the amount of light passing through a lens or onto a mirror. b. The diameter of such an opening, often expressed as an f-number. c. The diameter of the objective of a telescope. [Middle English, from Latin apertūra, from apertus, past participle of aperire, to open. See wer-4 in Appendix.]

— ap'er·tur'al adj.

aperture card (ăp'ər-chər kărd) n. A punched card on which frames of a microfilmed document are mounted.

a·pet·al·ous (ā-pět'1-əs) adj. Botany. Having no petals. —a·pet'al·y (ā-pět'1-ē) n.

a·pex (ā'pěks) *n. pl. a·pex·es or a·pi·ces (ā'pī-sēz', āp'ī-). 1. The highest point; the vertex: the apex of a triangle; the apex of a hill. 2. The point of culmination. See Synonyms at summit. 3. The usually pointed end of an object; the tip: the apex of a leaf. [Latin.]*

Ap·gar score (āp'gār skōr) n. A system of assessing the general physical condition of a newborn infant based on a rating of 0, 1, or 2 for five criteria: heart rate, respiration, muscle tone, skin color, and response to stimuli. The five scores are added together, with a perfect score being 10. [After Virginia Apgar (1909-1974), American physician.]

a·phaer·e·sis or a·pher·e·sis (ə-fēr'ī-sīs) n. pl. a·phaer·e·ses (-sēz'). Linguistics. The loss of one or more sounds from the beginning of a word, as in till for until. [Late Latin, from Greek aphairesis, from aphairein, to take away : apo-, apo- + hairein, to take.] —aph'ae·ret'ic (āf'ə-rět'ik) adj.

a·pha·gi·a (ə-fā'jē-ə, -jə) n. Loss of the ability to swallow.

aph·a·nite (āf'ə-nīt') n. A dense, homogeneous rock with constituents so fine that they cannot be seen by the naked eye. [From Greek aphanēs, unseen : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + phainesthai, phan-, to appear (from phainein, to show); see PHE-NOMENON.] —aph'a·nit'ic (-nīt'ik) adj.

a·pha·sia (ə-fā'zhə) n. Partial or total loss of the ability to articulate ideas or comprehend spoken or written language, resulting from damage to the brain caused by injury or disease. [Greek, from aphatos, speechless : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + phatos, spoken, speakable (from phanai, to speak); see -PHASIA.] —a·pha'si·ac' (-zē-āk') n. —a·pha'sic (-zīk, -sīk) adj. & n.

a·phe·li·on (ə-fē'lē-ən, ə-fēl'yən) n. pl. a·phe·li·a (-lē-ə). The point on the orbit of a celestial body that is farthest from the sun. [From New Latin aphelium : Greek apo-, apo- + Greek hēlios, sun; see sāwel- in Appendix.]

a·pher·e·sis (ə-fēr'ī-sīs) n. 1. Linguistics. Variant of aphaeresis. 2. Medicine. A procedure in which blood is drawn from a donor and separated into its components, some of which are retained, such as plasma or platelets, and the remainder returned by transfusion to the donor. Also called hemapheresis aph·e·sis (āf'ī-sīs) n. pl. aph·e·ses (-sēz'). Linguistics. The loss of an initial, usually unstressed vowel, as in cute from acute. [Greek, a release, from aphienai, to let go : apo-, apo- + hienai, he-, to send; see DIESIS.] —a·phet'ic (ə-fēt'ik) adj. —a·phet'i·cal·ly adv.

a·phid (ā'fid, āf'id) n. Any of various small, soft-bodied insects of the family Aphididae that have mouthparts specially adapted for piercing and feed by sucking sap from plants. Also called plant louse [New Latin Aphis, Aphid-, type genus. See APHIS.] —a·phid'i·an (ə-fid'ē-ən) adj. & n.

a·phi·des (ā'fi-dēz', āf'ī-) n. Plural of aphis.

aphid lion (ā'fīd lī'ən) n. The larva of any of several insects of the family Chrysopidae, such as the lacewing, that feed on aphids.

a·phis (ā'fīs, āf'īs) n. pl. a·phi·des (ā'fī-dēz', āf'ī-). An aphid, especially one of the genus Aphis. [New Latin Aphis, genus name.]

a·pho·ni·a (ā-fō'nē-ə) n. Loss of the voice resulting from disease, injury to the vocal cords, or various psychological causes, such as hysteria. [New Latin, from Greek aphōnia, speechlessness, from aphōnos, voiceless : a-, without; see A-¹ + phōnē, voice; see bhā-² in Appendix.] —a·phon'ic (ā-fōn'ik, ā-fō'nīk) adj.

aph·o·rism (āf'ə-rīz'əm) n. 1. A tersely phrased statement of a truth or opinion; an adage. See Synonyms at saying. 2. A brief statement of a principle. [French aphorisme, from Old French, from Late Latin aphorismus, from Greek aphorismos, from aphorizein, to delimit, define : apo-, apo- + horizein, to delimit, define; see HORIZON.] —aph'o·rist n. —aph'o·ris'tic (-rīs'tīk) adj.

—aph'o·ris'ti·cal·ly adv.

aph·o·rize (āf'ə-rīz') v. intr. aph·o·rized, aph·o·riz·ing, aph·o·riz·es. To express oneself in or as if in aphorisms.

a·pho·tic (ā-fō'tīk) adj. 1. Having no light. 2. Of or relating to the region of a body of water that is not reached by sunlight and in which photosynthesis is unable to occur.

aph·ro·dis·i·ac (āf'rə-dīz'ē-āk', -dē'zē-) adj. Arousing or intensifying sexual desire. — n. Something, such as a drug or food, having such an effect. [Greek aphrodisiakos, from aphrodisia, sexual pleasures, from Aphroditē, Aphrodite.]

—aph'ro·di·si'a·cal (-dī-zī'ī-kəl) adj.

aph·ro·di·te (āf'rə-dī'tē) n. A brightly colored butterfly (Argynnis aphrodite) of North America. [From APHRODITE.]

Aph·ro·di·te (āf'rə-dī'tē) n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of love and beauty. Also called Cytherea [Greek Aphroditē.]

a·phyl·lous (ā-fīl'əs) adj. Botany. Bearing no leaves; leafless. [From New Latin aphyllus, from Greek aphullos : a-, without; see A-¹ + phullon, leaf; see -PHYLLOUS.]

—a'phyl'ly (ā'fīl'ē) n.

A·pi·a (ə-pē'ə, ā'pē-ā') The capital of Western Samoa, on the northern coast of Upolo island in the southern Pacific Ocean. Population, 33,170.

a·pi·an (ā'pē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or having the characteristics of bees. [From Latin apis, bee.]

a·pi·ar·i·an (ā'pē-ār'ē-ən) adj. Relating to bees or to the keeping and care of bees.

a·pi·a·rist (ā'pē-ə-rīst, -ēr'īst) n. One who keeps bees, specifically one who cares for and raises bees for commercial or agricultural purposes. Also called bee-keeper a·pi·ar·y (ā'pē-ēr'ē) n. pl. a·pi·ar·ies. A place where bees and beehives are kept, especially a place where bees are raised for their honey. [Latin apiarium, beehive, from apis, bee.]

a·pi·cal (ā'pī-kəl, ăp'ī-) adj. 1. Of, relating to, located at, or constituting an apex. 2. Linguistics. Of, relating to, or articulated with the tip of the tongue, as t, d, and s. [From Latin apex, apic-, top.] —ap'i·cal·ly adv.

apical dominance (ā'pī-kəl dōm'ə-nəns) n. Botany. The inhibitory influence on the growth of lateral buds exerted by the terminal bud of a growing plant shoot.

apical meristem (ā'pī-kəl mēr'ī-stēm') n. Botany. A meristem located at the tip of a plant shoot or root.

a·pi·ces (ā'pī-sēz', ăp'ī-) n. A plural of apex.

a·pic·u·late (ə-pīk'yə-līt) adj. Ending abruptly with a sharp, flexible tip: an apiculate leaf. [From New Latin apiculus, sharp point, diminutive of Latin apex, apic-, point.]

a·pi·cul·ture (ā'pī-kŭl'chər) n. The raising and care of bees for commercial or agricultural purposes. [Latin apis, bee + CULTURE.] —a'pi·cul'tur·al adj.

—a'pi·cul'tur·ist n.

a·piece (ə-pēs') adv. To or for each one; each: There is enough bread for everyone to have two slices apiece. [Middle English a pece : a, a; see A² + pece, piece; see PIECE.]

a·pi·o (ä'pē-ō) n. pl. a·pi·os. See arracacha. [American Spanish, from Spanish, celery, from Latin apium, perhaps from apis, bee.]

A·pis (ā'pīs) n. A sacred bull of the ancient Egyptians.

ap·ish (ā'pīsh) adj. 1. Resembling an ape. 2. Slavishly or foolishly imitative: "My own performances were apish imitations of Olivier's stirring cadences" (Robert Brustein). 3. Silly; outlandish. —ap'ish·ly adv. —ap'ish·ness n.

a·piv·o·rous (ā-pīv'ər-əs) adj. Zoology. Feeding on bees. [Latin apis, bee + -VOROUS.]

APL (ā'pē-ĕl') n. Computer Science. A programming language designed for use at remote terminals. It has specific capabilities for handling arrays. [A P(rogramming) L(anguage).]

a·pla·cen·tal (ā'plə-sĕn'tl) adj. Having no placenta, as marsupials and monotremes.

ap·la·nat·ic (ăp'lə-năt'īk) adj. Of or relating to optical systems that correct for spherical aberration. [From A⁻¹ + Greek planasthai, to wander; see pelə⁻² in Appendix.]

a·pla·sia (ə-plā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. Defective development resulting in the absence of all or part of an organ or tissue.

a·plas·tic (ā-plās'tīk) adj. 1. Lacking form. 2. Pathology. a. Unable to form or regenerate tissue. b. Of, relating to, or characterized by aplasia.

aplastic anemia (ā-plās'tik ə-nē'mē-ə) n. A form of anemia in which the capacity of the bone marrow to generate red blood cells is defective. This anemia may be caused by bone marrow disease or exposure to toxic agents, such as radiation, chemicals, or drugs. Also called pancytopenia a·plen·ty (ə-plēn'tē) adj. In plentiful supply; abundant: “There were warning signs aplenty for their candidates as well” (Michael Gelb). —a·plen'ty adv.

ap·lite (äp'lit') also hap·lite (häp'lit') n. A fine-grained, light-colored granitic rock consisting primarily of orthoclase and quartz. [German Aplit, from Greek haplous, single. See HAPLOID.] —ap·lit'ic (ä-plit'ik) adj.

a·plomb (ə-plōm', ə-plūm') n. Self-confident assurance; poise. See Synonyms at confidence. [French, from Old French a plomb, perpendicularly : a, according to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + plomb, lead weight (from Latin plumbum, lead).]

ap·ne·a also ap·noe·a (äp'nē-ə, äp-nē'ə) n. Temporary absence or cessation of breathing. [New Latin, from Greek apnoia : a-, without; see A-¹ + pnoia, breathing from pnein, to breathe. See pneu- in Appendix.] —ap·ne'ic adj. & n.

A·po (ä'pō) The highest mountain, 2,956.1 m (9,692 ft), of the Philippines, an active volcano on southeast Mindanao.

APO or A.P.O. abbr. Army Post Office.

apo- or ap- pref. 1. a. Away from; off: aphelion. b. Separate: apocarpous.

2. Without; not: apogamy. 3. Related to; derived from: apomorphine.

4. Metasomatic: apophyllite. [Greek, from apo, away from. See apo- in Appendix.]

Apoc. abbr. Bible. 1. Apocalypse. 2. Apocrypha; Apocryphal.

a·poc·a·lypse (ə-pök'ə-lips') n. 1. a. Apocalypse. Abbr. Apoc. Bible. The Book of Revelation. b. Any of a number of anonymous Jewish or Christian texts from around the second century B.C. to the second century A.D. containing prophetic or symbolic visions, especially of the imminent destruction of the world and the salvation of the righteous. 2. Great or total devastation; doom: the apocalypse of nuclear war. 3. A prophetic disclosure; a revelation. [Middle English Apocalipse, from Late Latin Apocalypsis, from Greek apokalupsis, revelation, Apocalypse, from apokaluptein, to uncover : apo-, apo- + kaluptein, to cover; see kel-¹ in Appendix.]

a·poc·a·lyp·tic (ə-pök'ə-lip'tik) also a·poc·a·lyp·ti·cal (-tī-kəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to an apocalypse. 2. Involving or portending widespread devastation or ultimate doom: “now speaks in apocalyptic terms about the probable conflict ahead” (Financial Times). 3. Characterized by usually exaggerated predictions of or allusions to a disastrous outcome: “Stripped of its apocalyptic tone, what this amounts to is an advocacy of teaching names, dates and places by rote” (Stefan Kanfer). 4. Of a revelatory or prophetic nature. —a·poc'a·lyp'ti·cal·ly adv.

a·poc·a·lyp·ti·cism (ə-pök'ə-līp'tī-sīz'əm) n. Belief in apocalyptic prophecies, especially regarding the imminent destruction of the world and the foundation of a new world order as a result of the triumph of good over evil.

ap·o·car·pous (äp'ə-kär'pəs) adj. Having carpels that are free from one another. Used of a single flower with two or more separate pistils, as in roses.

—ap'·o·car'py (äp'ə-kär'pē) n.

ap·o·chro·mat·ic (äp'ə-krō-mät'ik) adj. Corrected for both chromatic and spherical aberration, as a lens.

a·poc·o·pe (ə-pök'ə-pē) n. Linguistics. The loss of one or more sounds from the end of a word, as in Modern English sing from Middle English singen. [Late Latin, from Greek apokopē, from apokoptein, to cut off : apo-, apo- + koptein, to cut.]

ap·o·crine (äp'ə-krīn, -krīn', -krēn') adj. Of or relating to a type of glandular secretion in which the apical portion of the secreting cell is released along with the secretory products. [Probably from Greek apokrinein, to set apart : apo-, apo- + krinein, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

A·poc·ry·pha (ə-pök'rə-fə) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. Abbr. Apoc. Bible. The 14 books of the Septuagint included in the Vulgate but considered uncanonical by Protestants because they are not part of the Hebrew Scriptures. The Roman Catholic canon accepts 11 of these books and includes them in the Douay Bible. See Table at Bible. 2. Abbr. Apoc. Various early Christian writings proposed as additions to the New Testament but rejected by the major canons. 3. apocrypha. Writings or statements of questionable authorship or authenticity. [Middle English apocripha, not authentic, from Late Latin Apocrypha, the Apocrypha, from Greek Apokrupha, neuter pl. of apokruphos, secret, hidden, from apokruptein, to hide away : apo-, apo- + kruptein, kruph-, to hide.]

a·poc·ry·phal (ə-pök'rə-fəl) adj. 1. Of questionable authorship or authenticity. 2. Erroneous; fictitious: “Wildly apocryphal rumors about starvation in Petrograd... raced through Russia’s trenches” (W. Bruce Lincoln). 3. Apocryphal. Abbr. Apoc. Bible. Of or having to do with the Apocrypha. —a·poc'ry·phal·ly adv.

ap·o·dal (äp'ə-dl) also ap·o·dous (-dəs) adj. Having no limbs, feet, or footlike appendages. [From Greek apous : a-, without; see A^{-1} + pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix.]

ap·o·dic·tic (äp'ə-dīk'tik) adj. Necessarily or demonstrably true; incontrovertible. [Latin apodicticus, from Greek apodeiktikos, from apodeiktos, demonstrable, from apodeiknunai, to demonstrate : apo-, apo- + deiknunai, to show; see deik- in Appendix.] —ap'·o·dic'ti·cal·ly adv.

a·pod·o·sis (ə-pöd'ə-sīs) n. pl. a·pod·o·ses (-sēz'). The main clause of a conditional sentence, as The game will be canceled in The game will be canceled if it rains. [Late Latin, from Greek, from apodidonai, to give back : apo-, apo- + didonai, to give; see dō- in Appendix.]

ap·o·dous (ăp'ə-dəs) adj. Variant of apodal.

ap·o·en·zyme (ăp'ō-ĕn'zīm) n. The protein component of an enzyme, to which the coenzyme attaches to form an active enzyme.

a·pog·a·my (ə-pŏg'ə-mē) n. Botany. The development of an embryo without the occurrence of fertilization. —ap'ō·gam'ic (ăp'ə-găm'ik), a·pog'a·mous adj.

ap·o·gee (ăp'ə-jē) n. 1. a. The point in the orbit of the moon or of an artificial satellite most distant from the center of the earth. b. The point in an orbit most distant from the body being orbited. 2. The farthest or highest point; the apex: "The golden age of American sail, which began with the fast clipper ships in 1848, reached its apogee in the Gold Rush years" (Los Angeles Times). [French apogée, from New Latin apogaeum, from Greek apogaion, from neuter of apogaios, far from the earth : apo-, apo- + gaia, earth.] —ap'ō·ge'an (-jē'an) adj.

a·po·lit·i·cal (ā'pə-līt'i-kəl) adj. 1. Having no interest in or association with politics. 2. Having no political importance: an apolitical event.

—a'po·lit'i·cal·ly adv.

A·pol·li·naire (ə-pŏl'ə-nâr'), Guillaume. Originally Wilhelm Apollinaris de Kostrowitzky. 1880-1918. French poet and leading figure in avant-garde literary and artistic circles.

A·pol·lo (ə-pŏl'ō) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The god of prophecy, music, medicine, and poetry, sometimes identified with the sun. 2. apollo. pl. apol·los. A young man of great physical beauty. [Latin, from Greek Apollōn.]

Ap·ol·lo·ni·an (ăp'ə-lŏ'nē-ən) adj. 1. Greek Mythology. Of or relating to Apollo or his cult. 2. Often apollonian. a. Characterized by clarity, harmony, and restraint. b. In the philosophy of Friedrich Nietzsche, of or embodying the power of critical reason as opposed to the creative-intuitive. 3. Often apollonian. Serenely high-minded; noble.

Ap·ol·lo·ni·us of Per·ga (ăp'ə-lŏ'nē-əs ŭf pûr'gə), 262?-190? B.C. Greek mathematician who first defined the conic sections called the parabola, hyperbola, and ellipse.

Ap·ol·lo·ni·us of Rhodes (ăp'ə-lŏ'nē-əs ŭf rŏdz), Third-second century B.C. Greek poet whose epic Argonautica recounts the adventures of the Argonauts. He was also librarian at Alexandria.

a·pol·o·get·ic (ə-pŏl'ə-jět'ik) also a·pol·o·get·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. 1. Offering or expressing an apology or excuse: an apologetic note; an apologetic smile. 2. Self-deprecating; humble: an apologetic manner. 3. Justifying or defending in speech or writing. — n. A formal defense or apology. See Synonyms at apology. [Middle English, formal defense, from Latin apologēticus, from Greek apologētikos, suitable for defense, from apologeisthai, to defend oneself verbally, from apologos, apology, story. See APOLOGUE.] —a·pol·o·get'i·cal·ly adv.

a·pol·o·get·ics (ə-pŏl'ə-jět'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. The branch of theology that is concerned with defending or proving the truth of Christian doctrines. 2. Formal argumentation in defense of something, such as a position or system.

ap·o·lo·gi·a (ăp'ə-lŏ'jē-ə, -jə) n. A formal defense or justification. See Synonyms at apology. [Latin, apology, from Greek apologia. See APOLOGY.]

a·pol·o·gist (ə-pŏl'ə-jĭst) n. A person who argues in defense or justification of something, such as a doctrine, a policy, or an institution.

a·pol·o·gize (ə-pŏl'ə-jĭz') v. intr. a·pol·o·gized, a·pol·o·giz·ing, a·pol·o·giz·es. 1. To make excuse for or regretful acknowledgment of a fault or offense. 2. To make a formal defense or justification in speech or writing.

—a·pol'·o·giz'er n.

ap·o·logue (ăp'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. A moral fable, especially one having animals or inanimate objects as characters. [French, from Latin apologus, from Greek apologos: apo-, apo- + logos, speech; see leg- in Appendix.]

a·pol·o·gy (ə-pŏl'ə-jē) n. pl. a·pol·o·gies. 1. An acknowledgment expressing regret or asking pardon for a fault or offense. 2. a. A formal justification or defense. b. An explanation or excuse: “The consequence of those measures will be the best apology for my conduct” (Daniel Defoe). 3. An inferior substitute: The sagging cot was a poor apology for a bed. [Latin apologia, from Greek : apo-, apo- + logos, speech; see leg- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: apology, apologetic, apologia, defense, justification. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a statement that justifies or defends something, such as a past action or a policy”: a report that is an apology for capital punishment; an apologetic for fascism; a version of the story that is an apologia for malfeasance; offered a defense based on ignorance of the circumstances; an intellectually untenable justification for police brutality.

a·po·lune (ăp'ə-lŏn') n. The point of an orbit around the moon farthest from the moon's center. [APO- + Latin luna, moon; see LUNE.]

ap·o·mict (ăp'ə-mĭkt') n. A plant that reproduces by or is reproduced by apomixis. [Back-formation from apomictic, produced by apomixis : APO- + Greek miktos, mixed (from mignunai, to mix); see APOMIXIS.] —ap'·o·mic'tic adj.

—ap'·o·mic'tic·al·ly adv.

ap·o·mix·is (ăp'ə-mĭk'sĭs) n. Reproduction without meiosis or formation of gametes. [APO- + Greek mixis, a mingling (from mignunai, to mingle); see meik- in Appendix.]

ap·o·mor·phine (ăp'ə-mŏr'fēn') n. A poisonous white crystalline alkaloid, C₁₇H₁₇NO₂, derived from morphine and used medicinally to induce vomiting.

ap·o·neu·ro·sis (ăp'ə-nōō-rō'sīs, -nyōō-) n. pl. ap·o·neu·ro·ses (-sēz'). A sheetlike fibrous membrane, resembling a flattened tendon, that serves as a fascia to bind muscles together or as a means of connecting muscle to bone. [Greek aponeurōsis, from aponeurousthai, to become tendinous : apo-, apo- + neuron, sinew; see (s)neū- in Appendix.] —ap'·o·neu·rot'ic (-rōt'ik) adj.

a·poph·a·sis (ə-pŏf'ə-sīs) n. Allusion to something by denying that it will be mentioned, as in I will not bring up my opponent's questionable financial dealings. [Late Latin, from Greek, from apophanai, to say no : apo-, apo- + phanai, to say; see bhā-² in Appendix.]

ap·o·phthegm (ăp'ə-thēm') n. Variant of apothegm.

a·poph·y·ge (ə-pŏf'ə-jē) n. Architecture. The outward curve at the top and bottom of a column where the shaft joins the capital or base. [Greek apophugē, from apopheuein, to flee : apo-, apo- + pheuein, phug-, to flee.]

a·poph·yl·lite (ə-pŏf'ə-līt', ăp'ə-fil'īt') n. A white, pale pink, or pale green crystalline mineral, essentially $\text{KCa}_4\text{Si}_8\text{O}_{20}(\text{F},\text{OH})\cdot 8\text{H}_2\text{O}$.

a·poph·y·sis (ə-pŏf'ī-sīs) n. pl. a·poph·y·ses (-sēz'). 1. Anatomy. A natural swelling, projection, or outgrowth of an organ or part, such as the process of a vertebra. 2. Geology. A branch from a dike or vein. [New Latin, from Greek apophusis, from apophuein, to send out branches : apo-, apo- + phuein, to grow; see bheuə- in Appendix.] —a·poph'y·sate' (-sāt'), a·poph'y·se'al (-sē'əl) adj.

ap·o·plec·tic (ăp'ə-plĕk'tik) adj. 1. Of, resembling, or produced by apoplexy: an apoplectic fit. 2. a. Having or inclined to have apoplexy. b. Exhibiting symptoms associated with apoplexy. 3. Extremely angry; furious: "members of Congress who otherwise become apoplectic about wasteful government spending" (Dan Morgan). —ap'·o·plec'ti·cal·ly adv.

ap·o·plex·y (ăp'ə-plĕk'sē) n. 1. Sudden impairment of neurological function, especially that resulting from a cerebral hemorrhage; a stroke. 2. A sudden effusion of blood into an organ or tissue. 3. A fit of extreme anger; rage: "The proud... members suffered collective apoplexy, and this year they are out for blood" (David Finch). [Middle English apoplexie, from Old French, from Late Latin apoplēxia, from Greek, from apoplēssein, to cripple by a stroke : apo-, intensive prefix; see apo- + plēssein, plĕk-, to strike; see plāk-² in Appendix.]

a·port (ə-pŏrt', ə-pōrt') adv. Nautical. On or toward the port or left side of a ship.

ap·o·se·mat·ic coloration (ăp'ə-sə-măt'ik kül'ə-rā'shən) n. See warning coloration.

ap·o·si·o·pe·sis (ăp'ə-sī'ə-pē'sīs) n. pl. ap·o·si·o·pe·ses (-sēz). A sudden breaking off of a thought in the middle of a sentence, as though the speaker were unwilling or unable to continue. [Late Latin aposiōpēsis, from Greek, from aposiōpan, to become silent : apo-, intensive pref.; see apo- + siōpan, to be silent (from siōpē, silence).] —ap'·o·si·o·pet'ic (-pĕt'ik) adj.

ap·o·spor·y (ăp'ə-spôr'ē, -spōr'ē, ə-pōs'pə-rē) n. The development of a gametophyte directly from a sporophyte without the occurrence of meiosis or spore formation. —a·pos'por·ous (ə-pōs'pər-əs) adj.

a·pos·ta·sy (ə-pōs'tə-sē) n. pl. a·pos·ta·sies. Abandonment of one's religious faith, a political party, one's principles, or a cause. [Middle English apostasie, from Old French, from Late Latin apostasia, defection, from Late Greek, from Greek apostasis, revolt, from aphistanai, to revolt : apo-, apo- + histanai, to stand, place; see stā- in Appendix.]

a·pos·tate (ə-pōs'tāt', -tīt) n. One who practices apostasy. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin apostata, from Greek apostatēs, from aphistanai, to revolt. See APOSTASY.] —a·pos'tate' adj.

a·pos·ta·tize (ə-pōs'tə-tīz') v. intr. a·pos·ta·tized, a·pos·ta·tiz·ing, a·pos·ta·tiz·es. To abandon one's religious faith, a political party, one's principles, or a cause.

a pos·te·ri·o·ri (ă' pō-stīr'ē-ôr'ē, -ôr'ī, -ōr'ē, -ōr'ī, ā') adj. Derived by or designating the process of reasoning from facts or particulars to general principles or from effects to causes; inductive; empirical. [Medieval Latin : Latin a, from + Latin posteriori, ablative of posterior, later.]

a·pos·tle (ə-pōs'əl) n. 1. a. Apostle. One of a group made up especially of the 12 disciples chosen by Jesus to preach the gospel. b. A missionary of the early Christian Church. c. A leader of the first Christian mission to a country or region. 2. Mormon Church. One of the 12 members of the administrative council. 3. a. One who pioneers an important reform movement, cause, or belief: an apostle of conservation. b. A passionate adherent; a strong supporter. [Middle English, from Old English apostol, and from Old French apostle both from Late Latin apostolus, from Greek apostolos, messenger, from apostellein, to send off : apo-, apo- + stellein, to send; see stel- in Appendix.] —a·pos'tle·hood' n.

—a·pos'tle·ship' n.

A·pos·tles' Creed (ə-pōs'əlz krēd) n. A Christian creed traditionally ascribed to the 12 Apostles and used typically in public worship services.

a·pos·to·late (ə-pōs'tə-lāt', -līt) n. 1. The office, duties, or mission of an apostle. 2. An association of individuals for the dissemination of a religion or a doctrine. [Late Latin apostolātus, from apostolus, apostle. See APOSTLE.]

ap·os·tol·ic (ăp'ə-stōl'ik) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or contemporary with the 12 Apostles. 2. Of or relating to the faith, teaching, or practice of the 12 Apostles. 3. a. Of or relating to a succession of spiritual authority from the 12 Apostles, regarded by Anglicans, Roman Catholics, Eastern Orthodox, and some others to have been perpetuated by successive ordinations of bishops and to be requisite for valid orders and administration of sacraments. b. Roman Catholic Church. Of or relating to the pope as the successor of Saint Peter; papal.

apostolic delegate (äp'ə-stöl'ik děl'i-gät') n. Roman Catholic Church. An ecclesiastical representative of the Vatican to a country having no formal diplomatic relations with it.

Ap·os·tol·ic Father (äp'ə-stöl'ik fä'thər) n. A church father of the first or second century A.D. who was believed to have received personal instruction from the 12 Apostles or from their disciples.

a·pos·tro·phe¹ (ə-pös'trə-fē) n. The superscript sign (') used to indicate the omission of a letter or letters from a word, the possessive case, and the plurals of numbers, letters, and abbreviations. [French, from Late Latin apostrophus, from Greek apostrophos, from apostrephein, to turn away : apo-, apo- + strephein, to turn; see streb(h)- in Appendix.] —ap'os·troph'ic (äp'ə-ströf'ik) adj.

a·pos·tro·phe² (ə-pös'trə-fē) n. The direct address of an absent or imaginary person or of a personified abstraction, especially as a digression in the course of a speech or composition. [Late Latin apostrophē, from Greek, from apostrephein, to turn away. See APOSTROPHE¹.] —ap'os·troph'ic (äp'ə-ströf'ik) adj.

a·pos·tro·phize (ə-pös'trə-fīz') v. tr. intr. a·pos·tro·phized, a·pos·tro·phiz·ing, a·pos·tro·phiz·es. To address by or speak or write in apostrophe.

a·poth·e·car·ies' measure (ə-pöth'i-kēr'ēz mēzh'ər) n. A system of liquid volume measure used in pharmacy.

apothecaries' weight (ə-pöth'i-kēr'ēz wāt) n. A system of weights used in pharmacy and based on an ounce equal to 480 grains and a pound equal to 12 ounces.

a·poth·e·car·y (ə-pöth'i-kēr'ē) n. pl. a·poth·e·car·ies. Abbr. ap. 1. One that prepares and sells drugs and other medicines; a pharmacist. 2. See pharmacy (n., sense 2). [Middle English apotecarie, from Old French apotecaire, and from Medieval Latin apothēcarius both from Late Latin, clerk, from Latin apothēca, storehouse, from Greek apothēkē : apo-, away; see APO- + thēkē, receptacle; see dhē- in Appendix.]

ap·o·the·ci·um (äp'ə-thē'sē-əm, -shē-) n. pl. ap·o·the·ci·a (-sē-ə, -shē-ə). A disk-shaped or cup-shaped ascocarp of some lichens and the fungi Ascomycetes. [From Latin apothēca, storehouse. See APOTHECARY.] —ap'o·the'cial (-shəl) adj.

ap·o·thegm also ap·o·phthegm (äp'ə-thēm') n. A terse, witty, instructive saying; a maxim. [Greek apophthegma, from apophthengesthai, to speak plainly : apo-, intensive pref.; see APO- + phthengesthai, phtheg-, to speak.]

—ap'o·theg·mat'ic (-thēg-mät'ik), ap'o·theg·mat'i·cal (-i-kəl) adj.

—ap'o·theg·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

ap·o·them (äp'ə-thēm') n. Mathematics. The perpendicular distance from the center of a regular polygon to any of its sides. [APO- + Greek thema, something laid down; see THEME.]

a·poth·e·o·sis (ə-pōth'ē-ō'sis, ăp'ə-thē'ə-sis) n. pl. a·poth·e·o·ses (-sēz').

1. Exaltation to divine rank or stature; deification. 2. An exalted or glorified example: Their leader was the apotheosis of courage. [Late Latin apotheōsis, from Greek, from apotheoun, to deify : apo-, change; see APO- + theos, god; see dhēs- in Appendix.]

ap·o·the·o·size (ăp'ə-thē'ə-sīz', ə-pōth'ē-ə-sīz') v. tr. ap·o·the·o·sized, ap·o·the·o·sizing, ap·o·the·o·sized, ap·o·the·o·sized. To glorify; exalt.

ap·o·tro·pa·ic (ăp'ə-trō-pā'ik) adj. Intended to ward off evil: an apotropaic symbol. [From Greek apotropaios, from apotrepein, to ward off : apo-, apo- + trepein, to turn; see trep- in Appendix.] —ap'·o·tro·pa'i·cal·ly adv.

app. abbr. 1. Apparatus. 2. Appendix. 3. Applied. 4. a. Appoint.

b. Appointed. 5. Apprentice.

Ap·pa·la·chi·a (ăp'ə-lā'chē-ə, -chə, -lăch'ē-ə, -lăch'ə) A region of the eastern United States including the Appalachian Mountains.

Ap·pa·la·chi·an Mountains (ăp'ə-lā'chē-ən moun'tənz, -chən, -lăch'ē-ən, -lăch'ən) A mountain system of eastern North America extending about 2,574 km (1,600 mi) southwest from Newfoundland, New Brunswick, and southern Quebec, Canada, to central Alabama. The range includes the Allegheny, Blue Ridge, and Cumberland mountains. Mount Mitchell in western North Carolina is the highest peak, rising to 2,038.6 m (6,684 ft).

Appalachian tea (ăp'ə-lā'chē-ən tē) n. See withe rod.

Appalachian Trail (ăp'ə-lā'chē-ən trāl) A hiking path of the eastern United States extending about 3,298 km (2,050 mi) from Mount Katahdin in central Maine to Springer Mountain in northern Georgia. It is the world's longest continuous mountain trail.

ap·pall (ə-pôl') v. tr. ap·palled, ap·palling, ap·palls. To fill with consternation or dismay. See Synonyms at dismay. [Middle English apallen, to grow faint, from Old French apalir : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + palir, to grow pale (from pale, pale, from Latin pallidus, from pallēre, to grow pale); see pel-¹ in Appendix.]

ap·pall·ing (ə-pôl'ing) adj. Causing consternation or dismay; frightful: appalling working conditions; appalling violence. —ap·pall'ing·ly adv.

ap·pa·loo·sa (ăp'ə-lōō'sə) n. A breed of saddle horse developed in northwest North America, characteristically having a spotted rump. [Origin unknown.]

ap·pa·nage also ap·a·nage (ăp'ə-nij) n. 1. A source of revenue, such as land, given by a sovereign for the maintenance of a member of the ruling family.

2. Something extra offered to or claimed by a party as due; a perquisite: The leaders of the opposition party agreed to accept another government's appanages, and in doing so became an officially paid agency of a foreign power. 3. A rightful or customary accompaniment or adjunct. [French apanage, from Old French, from apaner, to make provisions for, possibly from Medieval Latin appānāre : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin pānis, bread; see pā- in Appendix.]

ap·pa·rat (äp'ə-rät', ä'pə-rät') n. See apparatus (n., sense 1). [Russian, the government organization or staff, from German Apparat, a political organization, from Latin apparātus, preparation. See APPARATUS.]

ap·pa·ra·tchik (ä'pə-rä'čhik) n. pl. ap·pa·ra·tchiks or ap·pa·ra·tchi·ki (-chī-kē). 1. A member of a Communist apparat. 2. An unquestioningly loyal subordinate, especially of a political leader or organization. [Russian, from apparat, apparat. See APPARAT.]

ap·pa·ra·tus (äp'ə-rā'təs, -rät'əs) n. pl. apparatus or ap·pa·ra·tus·es. Abbr. app. 1. a. The totality of means by which a designated function is performed or a specific task executed, as in a system of government. b. A political organization or an underground political movement. Also called apparatus. 2. a. An appliance or device for a particular purpose: an x-ray apparatus. b. An integrated group of materials or devices used for a particular purpose: dental apparatus. See Synonyms at equipment. 3. Physiology. A group or system of organs that collectively perform a specific function or process: the respiratory apparatus; the digestive apparatus. [Latin apparātus, preparation, from past participle of apparāre, to prepare : ad-, ad- + parāre, to prepare; see perə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

ap·par·el (ə-pär'əl) n. 1. Clothing, especially outer garments; attire. 2. A covering or an adornment: trees with their apparel of foliage. — v. tr. ap·par·eled or ap·par·elled, ap·par·el·ing or ap·par·el·ing, ap·par·els or ap·par·els.

1. To clothe or dress. 2. To adorn or embellish. [Middle English appareil, from Old French apareil, preparation, from apareillier, to prepare, possibly from Vulgar Latin appariculāre*, from Latin apparāre. See APPARATUS.]

ap·par·ent (ə-pär'ənt, ə-pär'-) adj. 1. Readily seen; visible. 2. Readily understood; clear or obvious. 3. Appearing as such but not necessarily so; seeming: an apparent advantage. [Middle English, from Old French aparant, present participle of aparoir, to appear. See APPEAR.] —ap·par'ent·ly adv. —ap·par'ent·ness n.

SYNONYMS: apparent, clear, clear-cut, distinct, evident, manifest, obvious, patent, plain. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “readily seen, perceived, or understood”: Angry for no apparent reason; a clear danger; clear-cut evidence of tampering; distinct fingerprints; evident hostility; manifest pleasure; obvious errors; patent advantages; making my meaning plain.

USAGE NOTE: Used before a noun, apparent means “seeming”: For all his apparent wealth, Pat had no money to pay the rent. Used after a form of the verb be, however, apparent can mean either “seeming” (as in His virtues are only apparent) or “obvious” (as in The effects of the drought are apparent to anyone who sees the parched fields). Writers should take care that the intended meaning is clear from the context.

apparent horizon (ə-pär'ənt hə-rī'zən) n. See horizon (n., sense 1). apparent magnitude (ə-pär'ənt mäg'nī-tōd') n. Astronomy. See magnitude (n., sense 2).

ap·pa·ri·tion (äp'ə-rīsh'ən) n. 1. A ghostly figure; a specter. 2. A sudden or unusual sight. 3. The act of appearing; appearance. [Middle English apparicioun, from Old French apparition, from Late Latin appāritiō, appāritiōn-, an appearance, from Latin appāritus, past participle of appārere, to appear. See APPEAR.] —ap'pa·ri'tion-al adj.

ap·par·i·tor (ə-pär'i-tər) n. An official who was formerly sent to carry out the orders of a civil or ecclesiastical court. [Middle English, from Latin appāritor, from appārere, to appear. See APPEAR.]

ap·peal (ə-pēl') n. 1. An earnest or urgent request, entreaty, or supplication. 2. A resort or application to a higher authority, as for sanction, corroboration, or a decision: an appeal to reason. 3. Law. a. The transfer of a case from a lower to a higher court for a new hearing. b. A case so transferred. c. A request for a new hearing. 4. The power of attracting or of arousing interest: a city with appeal for tourists. — v. ap·pealed, ap·peal·ing, ap·peals. — v. intr. 1. To make an earnest or urgent request, as for help. 2. To have recourse, as for corroboration; resort: I appeal to your sense of justice. 3. Law. To make or apply for an appeal. 4. To be attractive or interesting. — v. tr. Law. To transfer or apply to transfer (a case) to a higher court for rehearing. [Middle English apel, from Old French, from apeler, to appeal, from Latin appellāre, to entreat. See pel⁻⁵ in Appendix.] —ap·peal'a·bil'i·ty n. —ap·peal'a·ble adj. —ap·peal'er n.

ap·pear (ə-pîr') v. intr. ap·peared, ap·pear·ing, ap·pears. 1. To become visible: a plane appearing in the sky. 2. To come into existence: New strains of viruses appear periodically. 3. To seem or look to be: appeared unhappy. 4. To seem likely: They will be late, as it appears. 5. To come before the public: has appeared in two plays; appears on the nightly news. 6. Law. To present oneself formally before a court as defendant, plaintiff, or counsel. [Middle English aperen, from Old French aparoir, aper-, from Latin appārere: ad-, ad- + pārere, to show.]

SYNONYMS: appear, emerge, issue, loom, materialize, show. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to come into view”: a ship appearing on the horizon; a star that emerged from behind a cloud; a diver issuing from the water; a peak that loomed through the mist; a flash of lightning that seemed to materialize from nowhere; a ruffle showing at the edge of the sleeve. See also Synonyms at seem ap·pear·ance (ə-pîr'əns) n. 1. The act or an instance of coming into sight. 2. The act or an instance of coming into public view: The author made a rare per- sonal appearance. 3. Outward aspect: an untidy appearance. 4. Something that appears; a phenomenon. 5. A superficial aspect; a semblance: keeping up an appearance of wealth. 6. appearances. Outward indications; circumstances: a cheerful person, to all appearances.

ap·pease (ə-pēz') v. tr. ap·peased, ap·peas·ing, ap·peas·es. 1. To bring peace, quiet, or calm to; soothe. 2. To satisfy or relieve: appease thirst. 3. To pacify or attempt to pacify (an enemy) by granting concessions, often at the expense of principle. See Synonyms at pacify. [Middle English appesen, from Old French apesier : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + pais, peace (from Latin pāx); see pag- in Appendix.] —ap·peas'able adj. —ap·peas'a·bly adv. —ap·peas'er n.

ap·pease·ment (ə-pēz'mənt) n. 1. a. An act of appeasing. b. The condition of being appeased. 2. The policy of granting concessions to potential enemies to maintain peace.

ap·pel (ə-pěl') n. Sports. A quick stamp of the foot used in fencing as a feint to produce an opening. [French, from appeler, to call, from Old French apeler, to appeal. See APPEAL.]

ap·pel·lant (ə-pěl'ənt) Law. adj. Of or relating to an appeal; appellate. — n. One that appeals a court decision. [Middle English, from Old French apelant, from present participle of apeler, to appeal. See APPEAL.]

ap·pel·late (ə-pěl'it) adj. Law. Having the power to hear appeals and to review court decisions. [Latin appellātus, past participle of appellāre, to entreat. See APPEAL.]

ap·pel·la·tion (əp'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. A name, title, or designation. See Synonyms at name. 2. The act of naming. [Middle English appelacion, from Old French appelation, from Latin appellātiō, appellātiōn-, from appellātus, past participle of appellāre, to entreat. See APPEAL.]

ap·pel·la·tive (ə-pěl'ə-tiv) adj. 1. Of or relating to the assignment of names. 2. Grammar. Of or relating to a common noun. — n. A name or descriptive epithet. [Middle English, common (noun), from Old French appelatif, from Late Latin appellātīvus, from Latin appellātus, past participle of appellāre, to call upon, entreat. See APPEAL.] —ap·pel'la·tive·ly adv.

ap·pel·lee (əp'ə-lē') n. Law. One against whom an appeal is taken. [French appelé, from Old French apele, from past participle of apeler, to appeal. See APPEAL.]

ap·pend (ə-pënd') v. tr. ap·pend·ed, ap·pend·ing, ap·pends. 1. To add as a supplement or an appendix: appended a list of errors to the report. 2. To fix to; attach: append a charm to the bracelet. [Latin appendere, to hang upon : ad-, ad- + pendere, to hang; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

ap·pend·age (ə-pĕn'dĭj) n. 1. Something added or attached to an entity of greater importance or size; an adjunct. 2. Biology. A part or an organ, such as an arm, a leg, a tail, or a fin, that is joined to the axis or trunk of a body.

SYNONYMS: appendage, appurtenance, adjunct, accessory, attachment. These nouns denote subordinate elements that are added to another entity. An appendage supplements without being essential: “Water jets can be angled to either side, making rudders unnecessary, and the complete absence of appendages at the stern decreases hull resistance” (R.J.L. Dicker). An appurtenance belongs naturally as a subsidiary attribute, part, or member to that with which it is associated: “an internationally known first-class hotel... equipped with such appurtenances as computers, word processors, copiers and telex” (Oscar Millard). An adjunct is added as an auxiliary to something else but is often self-sustaining: “Intelligence analysts say they believe that of all the countries of the Middle East, none use terrorism more effectively as an adjunct to diplomacy than Syria” (Elaine Sciolino). An accessory is usually nonessential but desirable and adds to the effect of something already complete in itself: We bought a car with such accessories as air conditioning, stereo, and a sunroof. An attachment contributes a supplementary function to the principal thing, to which it can be physically linked: The food processor has an attachment for making pasta.

ap·pen·dant (ə-pĕn'dənt) adj. 1. Affixed as an appendage. 2. Accompanying; attendant: faith and its appendant hope. 3. Belonging to a land grant as a subsidiary right in English law. —ap·pen·dant n.

ap·pen·dec·to·my (ăp'ən-dĕk'tə-mĕ) n. pl. ap·pen·dec·to·mies. Surgical removal of the vermiform appendix. [APPEND(IX) + -ECTOMY.]

ap·pen·di·ces (ə-pĕn'dĭ-sĕz') n. A plural of appendix.

ap·pen·di·ci·tis (ə-pĕn'dĭ-sĭ'tĭs) n. Inflammation of the vermiform appendix. [New Latin, from Latin appendix, appendic-, appendage. See APPENDIX.]

WORD HISTORY: Even though the word appendicitis was in use in 1885, the year in which the Oxford English Dictionary published the section “Anta-Battening” that would have contained the word, the editor, James Murray, omitted this “crack-jaw medical and surgical word” on the advice of Oxford’s Regius Professor of Medicine, Sir Henry Wentworth Acland. As K.M. Elisabeth Murray, the granddaughter and biographer of James Murray, points out, “The problem of what scientific words to include was a continuing one, and James Murray was always under pressure—from his advisers... who thought the emphasis should be on words from good literature and from those in the [Oxford University] Press who wanted to save cost and time—not to include scientific words of recent origin.” In 1902 no less a person than Edward VII had his appendix removed, and his coronation was postponed because of the operation. Appendicitis hence came into widespread use and has remained so, thereby pointing up the lexicographer's difficult task of selecting the new words that people will look for in their dictionaries.

ap·pen·dic·u·lar (ăp'ən-dĭk'yə-lər) adj. Of, relating to, or consisting of an appendage or appendages, especially the limbs: the appendicular skeleton. [From Latin appendicula, diminutive of appendix, appendic-, appendix. See APPENDIX.]

ap·pen·dix (ə-pĕn'dĭks) *n. pl. ap·pen·dix·es or ap·pen·di·ces (-dĭ-sēz'). Abbr. app. 1. a. An appendage. b. A collection of supplementary material, usually at the end of a book. 2. The vermiform appendix. 3. Anatomy. A supplementary or accessory part of a bodily organ or structure. [Latin, from appendere, to hang upon. See APPEND.]*

ap·per·ceive (ăp'ər-sēv') v. tr. ap·per·ceived, ap·per·ceiv·ing, ap·per·ceives. Psychology. To perceive in terms of past experiences. [From APPERCEPTION.]

ap·per·cep·tion (ăp'ər-sĕp'shən) n. Psychology. 1. Conscious perception with full awareness. 2. The process of understanding by which newly observed qualities of an object are related to past experience. [New Latin apperceptiō, apperceptiōn-: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin perceptiō, perception; see PERCEPTION.]

—ap'per·cep'tive (-sĕp'tĭv) adj.

ap·per·tain (ăp'ər-tān') v. intr. ap·per·tained, ap·per·tain·ing, ap·per·tains. To belong as a proper function or part; pertain: problems appertaining to social reform. [Middle English appertenen, from Old French apartenir, from Vulgar Latin appartenēre*, from Late Latin appertinēre: ad-, ad- + pertinēre, to belong; see PERTAIN.]

ap·pe·stat (ăp'i-stăt') n. The area in the brain that is believed to regulate appetite and food intake. [APPE(TITE) + -STAT.]

ap·pe·tence (ăp'i-tĕns) n. 1. A strong craving or desire. 2. A tendency or propensity. 3. A natural attraction or affinity. [Probably French appétence, from Latin appetentia, from appetēns, appetent- present participle of appetere, to strive after. See APPETITE.]

ap·pe·ten·cy (ăp'i-tĕn-sĕ) n. pl. ap·pe·ten·cies. Appetence. [Latin appetentia. See APPETENCE.]

ap·pe·tite (ăp'i-tĭt') n. 1. An instinctive physical desire, especially one for food or drink. 2. A strong wish or urge: an appetite for learning. [Middle English apetit, from Old French, from Latin appĕtĭtus, strong desire, from past participle of appetere, to strive after: ad-, ad- + petere, to seek; see pet- in Appendix.]

—ap'pe-ti'tive (ăp'i-tĭ'tĭv, ə-pĕt'i'tĭv) adj.

ap·pe·tiz·er (ăp'i-tĭ'zər) n. A food or drink served usually before a meal to stimulate the appetite.

ap·pe·tiz·ing (ăp'ī-tī'zīng) adj. Appealing to or stimulating the appetite.

—ap'pe-tiz'ing·ly adv.

Ap·pi·an Way (ăp'ē-ən wā) An ancient Roman road between Rome and Capua, begun in A.D. 312 and later extended to Brindisi, with a total length of more than 563 km (350 mi).

appl. abbr. Applied.

ap·plaud (ə-plôd') v. ap·plaud·ed, ap·plaud·ing, ap·plauds. — v. intr.

To express approval, especially by clapping the hands. — v. tr. 1. To express approval of (someone or something) especially by such clapping. 2. To commend highly; praise: applauded her decision to complete her degree. [Middle English applauden, from Latin applaudere : ad-, ad- + plaudere, to clap.]

—ap·plaud'a·ble adj. —ap·plaud'a·bly adv. —ap·plaud'er n.

SYNONYMS: applaud, cheer, root. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to express approval or encouragement in audible form, especially by clapping”: applauded at the end of the concert; cheered when the home team scored; rooting for the underdog in the tennis championship.

ap·plause (ə-plôz') n. 1. Approval expressed especially by the clapping of hands. 2. Praise; commendation: a scientific discovery that won critical applause. [Medieval Latin applausus, from past participle of Latin applaudere, to applaud. See APPLAUD.]

ap·ple (ăp'əl) n. 1. a. A deciduous Eurasian tree (Malus pumila) having alternate simple leaves and white or pink flowers. b. The firm, edible, usually rounded fruit of this tree. 2. a. Any of several other plants, especially those with fruits suggestive of the apple, such as the crab apple or custard apple. b. The fruit of any of these plants. —idiom. apple of (one's) eye. One that is treasured: Her grandson is the apple of her eye. [Middle English appel, from Old English æppel.]

apple green (ăp'əl grēn) n. Color. A moderate or vivid yellow green to light or strong yellowish green. —ap'ple-green' (ăp'əl-grēn') adj.

ap·ple·jack (ăp'əl-jăk') n. 1. Brandy distilled from hard cider. 2. An alcoholic drink made from hard cider that has been frozen.

apple of Peru (ăp'əl ūv pə-rōō') n. An annual Peruvian plant (Nicandra physalodes), grown as an ornamental for its pale violet-blue, bell-shaped flowers and fruits enclosed in papery, inflated calyxes. Also called shoo-fly plant ap·ple·pie (ăp'əl-pī') adj. Informal. 1. Nearly perfect: put the room in apple-pie order. 2. Often apple pie. Of, relating to, or marked by values regarded as distinctively American: “Family, neighborhood, community are apple pie virtues, unassailable and unavoidable in political rhetoric” (Ronald Brownstein).

ap·ple·pol·ish (ăp'əl-pŏl'ish) v. ap·ple·pol·ished, ap·ple·pol·ish·ing, ap·ple·pol·ish·es. Informal. — v. intr. To seek favor by toadying. — v. tr. To seek favor with; flatter. See Synonyms at fawn¹. — apple polisher, ap'ple-pol'ish·er n.

ap·ple·sauce (ăp'əl-sôs') n. 1. Apples stewed to a pulp, sweetened, and sometimes spiced. 2. Slang. Nonsense; foolishness.

Ap·ple·seed (ăp'əl-sēd'), Johnny. See John Chapman.

Ap·ple·ton (ăp'əl-tən) A city of eastern Wisconsin on the Fox River southwest of Green Bay. The first hydroelectric plant in the United States was built here in 1882. Population, 65,695.

Ap·ple·ton (ăp'əl-tən), Sir Edward Victor. 1892-1965. British physicist. He won a 1947 Nobel Prize for his discovery of the F layer of the ionosphere.

Ap·ple Valley (ăp'əl văl'ē) A city of southeast Minnesota, a residential suburb of Minneapolis-St. Paul. Population, 34,598.

ap·pli·ance (ə-plī'əns) n. 1. A device or instrument designed to perform a specific function, especially an electrical device, such as a toaster, for household use. See Synonyms at tool. 2. A dental or surgical device designed to perform a therapeutic or corrective function. [From APPLY.]

ap·pli·ca·ble (ăp'li-kə-bəl, ə-plīk'ə-) adj. That can be applied; appropriate: gave applicable examples to support her argument. — ap'pli·ca·bil'i·ty n. — ap'pli·ca·bly adv.

ap·pli·cant (ăp'li-kənt) n. One that applies, as for a job. [Middle English, from Latin applicāns, present participle of applicāre, to affix. See APPLY.]

ap·pli·ca·tion (ăp'li-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of applying. 2. Something applied, such as a cosmetic or curative agent. 3. a. The act of putting something to a special use or purpose: an application of a new method. b. A specific use to which something is put: the application of science to industry. 4. The capacity of being usable; relevance: Geometry has practical application in aviation and navigation. 5. Close attention; diligence: shows application to her work. See Synonyms at effort. 6. a. A request, as for assistance, employment, or admission to a school. b. The form or document on which such a request is made. — adj.

also applications Computer Science. Of or being a computer program designed for a specific task or use: applications software for a missile guidance system. [Middle English applicacion, from Old French, from Latin applicātiō, applicātiōn-, from applicātus, past participle of applicāre, to affix. See APPLY.]

ap·pli·ca·tive (ăp'li-kā'tiv, ə-plīk'ə-) adj. 1. Characterized by actual application; applied. 2. Practical; applicatory. — ap'pli·ca'tive·ly adv.

ap·pli·ca·tor (ăp'li-kā'tər) n. An instrument for applying something, such as medicine or glue.

ap·pli·ca·to·ry (ăp'li-kə-tŏr'ē, -tŏr'ē, ə-plīk'ə-) adj. Readily applicable; practical.

ap·plied (ə-plīd') adj. Abbr. app., appl. Put into practice or a particular use: applied physics.

ap·pli·qué (ăp'li-kā') n. A decoration or ornament, as in needlework, made by cutting pieces of one material and applying them to the surface of another. — v. tr. ap·pli·quéd, ap·pli·qué·ing, ap·pli·qués. To decorate by cutting pieces of one material and applying them to the surface of another. [French, past participle of appliquer, to apply, from Latin applicāre, to affix. See APPLY.] ap·ply (ə-plī') v. ap·plied, ap·ply·ing, ap·plies. — v. tr. 1. To bring into nearness or contact with something; put on, upon, or to: applied glue sparingly to the paper. 2. To put to or adapt for a special use: applies all her money to her mortgage. 3. To put into action: applied the brakes. 4. To devote (oneself or one's efforts) to something: applied myself to my studies. — v. intr. 1. To be pertinent or relevant: a rule that applies to everyone. 2. To request or seek assistance, employment, or admission: will apply to college. See Synonyms at resort. [Middle English applien, from Old French aplier, from Latin applicāre, to affix : ad-, ad- + plicāre, to fold together; see plek- in Appendix.]

ap·pog·gia·tu·ra (ə-pŏj'ə-tŏr'ə) n. Music. An embellishing note, usually one step above or below the note it precedes and indicated by a small note or special sign. [Italian, from appoggiato, past participle of appoggiare, to lean on, from Vulgar Latin appodiāre* : Latin ad-, ad- + podium, support (from Greek podion, base, from pous, pod-, foot); see ped- in Appendix.]

ap·point (ə-pŏint') v. tr. ap·point·ed, ap·point·ing, ap·points. Abbr. app., appt. 1. To select or designate to fill an office or position: appointed her the chief operating officer of the company. 2. To fix or set by authority or by mutual agreement: will appoint a date for the examination. 3. To furnish; equip: a house that is comfortably appointed. 4. Law. To direct the disposition of (property) to a person or persons in exercise of a power granted for this purpose by a preceding deed. [Middle English appointen, from Old French apointier, to arrange, from a point, to the point : a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + point, point; see POINT.]

SYNONYMS: appoint, designate, name, nominate, tap. The central meaning shared by these verbs is "to select for an office or position": was appointed chairperson of the committee; expects to be designated leader of the opposition; a new commissioner of public safety named by the mayor; wants to be nominated as her party's candidate; was tapped for fraternity membership. See also Synonyms at furnish ap·point·ee (ə-pŏin'tē', ăp'ŏin-) n. 1. One who is appointed to an office or position. 2. Law. One to whom a power of appointment of property is granted.

ap·point·ive (ə-pŏin'tiv) adj. Relating to or filled by appointment: an appointive office.

ap·point·ment (ə-poin'tmənt) n. Abbr. appt. 1. a. The act of appointing or designating for an office or position. b. The office or position to which one has been appointed. 2. An arrangement to do something or meet someone at a particular time and place. See Synonyms at engagement. 3. appointments. Furnishings, fittings, or equipment. 4. Law. The act of directing the disposition of property by virtue of a power granted for this purpose.

ap·poin·tor (ə-poin'tər, ə-poin'tôr') n. Law. One that executes a power of appointment of property.

Ap·po·mat·tox (äp'ə-mät'əks) A town of south-central Virginia east of Lynchburg. Confederate general Robert E. Lee surrendered to Union general Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse on April 9, 1865, ending the Civil War. The site is now a national historical park. Population, 1,345.

Appomattox River (äp'ə-mät'əks rĭv'ər) A river rising in south-central Virginia and flowing about 220 km (137 mi) eastward to the James River near Petersburg.

ap·por·tion (ə-pôr'shən, ə-pōr'-) v. tr. ap·por·tioned, ap·por·tion·ing, ap·por·tions. To divide and assign according to a plan; allot. See Synonyms at assign. [French apportioner, from Old French : a-, to (from Latin ad-, ad-) + portionner, to divide into portions (from portion, portion); see PORTION.]

ap·por·tion·ment (ə-pôr'shən-mənt, ə-pōr'-) n. 1. a. The act of apportioning. b. The condition of having been apportioned. 2. a. The proportional distribution of the number of members of the U.S. House of Representatives on the basis of the population of each state. b. Allotment of direct taxes on the basis of state population.

ap·pose (ä-pōz') v. tr. ap·posed, ap·pos·ing, ap·pos·es. To place in proximity; juxtapose. [Probably AD- + -pose (as in COMPOSE).]

ap·po·site (äp'ə-zīt) adj. Strikingly appropriate and relevant. See Synonyms at relevant. [Latin appositus, past participle of appōnere, to put near : ad-, ad- + pōnere, to put; see apo- in Appendix.] —ap'po·site·ly adv. —ap'po·site·ness n.

ap·po·si·tion (äp'ə-zĭsh'ən) n. 1. Grammar. a. A construction in which a noun or noun phrase is placed with another as an explanatory equivalent, both having the same syntactic relation to the other elements in the sentence; for example, Copley and the painter in The painter Copley was born in Boston. b. The relationship between such nouns or noun phrases. 2. A placing side by side or next to each other. 3. Biology. The growth of successive layers of a cell wall. [Middle English apposicioun, from Latin appositiō, appositiōn-, from appositus, past participle of appōnere, to put near. See APPPOSITE.] —ap'po·si·tion·al adj. —ap'po·si·tion·al·ly adv.

ap·pos·i·tive (ə-pōz'ĭ-tĭv) adj. Of, relating to, or being in apposition. — n. Grammar. A word or phrase that is in apposition. —ap·pos'itive·ly adv.

ap·prais·al (ə-prā'zəl) n. 1. The act or an instance of appraising. 2. An expert or official valuation, as for taxation.

ap·praise (ə-prāz') v. tr. ap·praised, ap·prais·ing, ap·prais·es. 1. To evaluate, especially in an official capacity. 2. To estimate the quality, amount, size, and other features of; judge. See Synonyms at estimate. [Middle English appreisen, possibly from Old French aprisier, from Late Latin appretiāre: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin pretium, price; see per-⁵ in Appendix.] —ap·prais'able adj.

—ap·praise'ment n. —ap·prais'er n.

ap·pre·cia·ble (ə-prē'shə-bəl) adj. Possible to estimate, measure, or perceive: appreciable changes in temperature. See Synonyms at perceptible. —ap·pre'cia·bly adv.

ap·pre·ci·ate (ə-prē'shē-āt') v. ap·pre·ci·at·ed, ap·pre·ci·at·ing, ap·pre·ci·ates. — v. tr. 1. To recognize the quality, significance, or magnitude of: appreciated their freedom. 2. To be fully aware of or sensitive to; realize: I appreciate your problems. 3. To be thankful or show gratitude for: I really appreciate your help. 4. To admire greatly; value. 5. To raise in value or price, especially over time. — v. intr. To increase in value or price, especially over time. [Late Latin appretiāre, appretiāt-, to appraise. See APPRAISE.] —ap·pre'ci·a'tor n. —ap·pre'cia·to'ry (-shə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

SYNONYMS: appreciate, value, prize, esteem, treasure, cherish. These verbs mean to have a favorable opinion of someone or something. Appreciate applies especially when high regard is based on critical assessment, comparison, and judgment: “As students so far from home, we have learned to appreciate those of life’s pleasures that are not readily available in the People’s Republic of China” (Sports Illustrated). Value implies high regard for the importance or worth of the object: “In principle, the modern university values nothing more than the free exchange of ideas necessary for the pursuit of knowledge” (Eloise Salholz). Prize often suggests pride of possession: “the nonchalance prized by teen-agers” (Elaine Louie). Esteem implies respect of a formal sort: “If he had never esteemed my opinion before, he would have thought highly of me then” (Jane Austen). Treasure and cherish stress solicitous care for what is considered precious and often suggest affectionate regard: We treasure our freedom. “They seek out the Salish Indian woman for the wisdom of her 86 years, and to learn the traditions she cherishes” (Tamara Jones).

ap·pre·ci·a·tion (ə-prē'shē-ā'shən) n. 1. Recognition of the quality, value, significance, or magnitude of people and things. 2. A judgment or opinion, especially a favorable one. 3. An expression of gratitude. 4. Awareness or delicate perception, especially of aesthetic qualities or values. 5. A rise in value or price, especially over time.

ap·pre·cia·tive (ə-prē'shə-tív, -shē-ā'tív) adj. Capable of or showing appreciation. — ap·pre·cia·tive·ly adv.

ap·pre·hend (ăp'rĭ-hĕnd') v. ap·pre·hend·ed, ap·pre·hend·ing, ap·pre·hends. — v. tr. 1. To take into custody; arrest: apprehended the murderer. 2. To grasp mentally; understand: a candidate who apprehends the significance of geopolitical issues. 3. To become conscious of, as through the emotions or senses; perceive. — v. intr. To understand something. [Middle English apprehenden, from Old French apprehender, from Latin apprehendere, to seize : ad-, ad- + prehendere, to grasp; see ghend- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: apprehend, comprehend, understand, grasp. These verbs are compared as they denote perception of the nature and significance of something. Apprehend can imply awareness or consciousness that comes through the emotions or senses: “We should not pretend to understand the world only by the intellect; we apprehend it just as much by feeling” (Carl Jung). Apprehend also denotes taking in with the mind: “Intelligence is quickness to apprehend” (Alfred North Whitehead). Both comprehend and understand stress complete realization and knowledge: “To comprehend is to know a thing as well as that thing can be known” (John Donne). “No one who has not had the responsibility can really understand what it is like to be President” (Harry S Truman). To grasp is to seize and hold an idea firmly: “We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount” (Omar N. Bradley).

ap·pre·hen·si·ble (ăp'rĭ-hĕn'sə-bəl) adj. Capable of being understood: apprehensible truths. — ap·pre·hen·si·bly adv.

ap·pre·hen·sion (ăp'rĭ-hĕn'shən) n. 1. Fearful or uneasy anticipation of the future; dread. 2. The act of seizing or capturing; arrest. 3. The ability to apprehend or understand; understanding. [Middle English apprehencioun, perception, from Old French apprehension, from Late Latin apprehēnsiō, apprehēnsiōn-, from Latin apprehēnsus, past participle of apprehendere, to seize. See APPREHEND.]

SYNONYMS: apprehension, foreboding, presentiment, misgiving. These nouns denote consternation that something untoward may be impending. Apprehension is fearful anticipation that something adverse is going to happen: The student looked around the examination room with apprehension. Foreboding is a sense of coming misfortune that is less clearly based on a definite reason: “The second half of the book builds a steadily escalating sense of foreboding” (Sven Birkerts). Presentiment denotes a somewhat nonspecific feeling that something, but not necessarily something unpleasant, is imminent: The lawyer had a presentiment that the judge would dismiss the case against her client. Misgiving suggests mistrust or uncertainty, as from loss of confidence in a decision made or from fearful doubts about a course of action undertaken: “A prudent mind can see room for misgiving, lest he who prospers should one day suffer reverse” (Sophocles).

ap·pre·hen·sive (ăp'ri-hĕn'siv) adj. 1. Anxious or fearful about the future; uneasy. See Synonyms at afraid. 2. Capable of understanding and quick to apprehend. — ap'pre-hen/sive·ly adv. — ap'pre-hen/sive-ness n.

ap·pren·tice (ə-prĕn'tis) n. Abbr. app. 1. One bound by legal agreement to work for another for a specific amount of time in return for instruction in a trade, an art, or a business. 2. One who is learning a trade or occupation, especially as a member of a labor union. 3. A beginner; a learner. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an apprentice electrician; an apprentice sailor. — v. tr. ap·pren·ticed, ap·pren·tic·ing, ap·pren·tic·es. To place or take on as a beginner or learner. [Middle English apprentis, from Old French aprentis, from Vulgar Latin apprenditicius*, from apprenditus*, alteration of Latin apprehēsus, past participle of apprehendere, to seize. See APPREHEND.]

— ap·pren'tice·ship n.

ap·pressed (ə-prĕst') adj. Lying flat or pressed closely against something, as hairs on certain plant stems. [From Latin apressus, past participle of apprimere, to press down : ad-, ad- + primere, to press; see per-⁴ in Appendix.]

ap·prise (ə-prīz') v. tr. ap·prised, ap·pris·ing, ap·pris·es. To give notice to; inform: apprised us of our rights. [French apprendre, appris-, from Old French aprendre, to learn, from Vulgar Latin apprendere, from Latin apprehendere. See APPRENTICE.]

ap·prize (ə-prīz') v. tr. ap·prized, ap·priz·ing, ap·priz·es. To appreciate; value.

ap·proach (ə-prōch') v. ap·proached, ap·proach·ing, ap·proach·es. — v. intr. 1. To come near or nearer, as in space or time: Spring approaches. 2. Sports. To make an approach in golf. — v. tr. 1. To come or go near or nearer to: approached the tunnel. 2. To come close to, as in appearance, quality, or condition; approximate: The performance approaches perfection. 3. To make a proposal or overtures to with a specific end in view: approached the administration for a raise. 4. To begin to deal with or work on: approached the task with dread. — n. 1. The act of approaching: the approach of night. 2. A fairly close resemblance; an approximation. 3. A way or means of reaching something; an access: an approach to the bridge. 4. The method used in dealing with or accomplishing: a logical approach to the problem. 5. An advance or overture made by one person to another. 6. Sports. a. The golf stroke following the drive from the tee with which a player tries to get the ball onto the putting green. b. The steps taken by a bowler before delivering the ball. c. The part of the area behind the foul line in a bowling alley used by a bowler in delivering the ball. [Middle English approchen, from Old French aprochier, from Late Latin appropriāre : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin proprius, nearer, comparative of prope, near; see per¹ in Appendix.]

ap·proach·a·ble (ə-prō'chə-bəl) adj. 1. Possible to approach; accessible: a retreat in the mountains approachable in winter only by helicopter. 2. Easy to talk to or deal with; friendly. —ap·proach'a·bil'i·ty n.

ap·pro·bate (ăp'rə-bāt') v. tr. ap·pro·bat·ed, ap·pro·bat·ing, ap·pro·bates. To sanction officially; authorize. [Middle English approbaten, from Latin approbāre, approbāt-, to approve. See APPROVE.] —ap'pro·ba'tive, ap·pro'ba·to'ry (ə-prō'bə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

ap·pro·ba·tion (ăp'rə-bā'shən) n. 1. An expression of warm approval; praise. 2. Official approval.

ap·pro·pri·a·ble (ə-prō'prē-ə-bəl) adj. That can be appropriated: appropriate funds.

ap·pro·pri·ate (ə-prō'prē-īt) adj. Suitable for a particular person, condition, occasion, or place; fitting. — v. tr. ap·pro·pri·at·ed, ap·pro·pri·at·ing, ap·pro·pri·ates (-āt'). 1. To set apart for a specific use: appropriating funds for education. 2. To take possession of or make use of exclusively for oneself, often without permission: Lee appropriated my unread newspaper and never returned it. [Middle English appropriat, from Late Latin appropriātus, past participle of appropriāre, to make one's own : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin proprius, own; see per¹ in Appendix.] —ap·pro'pri·ate·ly adv. —ap·pro'pri·ate·ness n. —ap·pro'pri·a'tive (-ā'tiv) adj. —ap·pro'pri·a'tor n.

SYNONYMS: appropriate, arrogate, commandeer, confiscate, preempt, usurp. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to seize for oneself or as one’s right”: appropriated the family car; arrogating to himself the most interesting tasks; commandeered a plane for the escape; confiscating alien property; preempted the glory for herself; usurped the throne. See also Synonyms at allocate fit¹ ap·pro·pri·a·tion (ə-prō'prē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of appropriating. 2. a. Something appropriated, especially public funds set aside for a specific purpose. b. A legislative act authorizing the expenditure of a designated amount of public funds for a specific purpose.

ap·prov·al (ə-prōv'vəl) n. 1. The act of approving. 2. An official approbation; sanction. 3. Favorable regard; commendation. —idiom. on approval. For examination or trial by a customer without the obligation to buy: took the dress on approval.

ap·prove (ə-prōv'vəl) v. ap·proved, ap·prov·ing, ap·proves. — v. tr. 1. To consider right or good; think or speak favorably of. 2. To consent to officially or formally; confirm or sanction. 3. Obsolete. To prove or attest. — v. intr. To show, feel, or express approval: didn't approve of the decision. [Middle English approven, from Old French aprover, from Latin approbāre : ad-, ad- + probāre, to test (from probus, good); see per¹ in Appendix.] —ap·prov′a·ble adj.

—ap·prov′ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: approve, endorse, sanction, certify, accredit, ratify. These verbs mean to express a favorable opinion or to signify satisfaction or acceptance. Though approve, the most widely applicable, often means simply to consider right or good (knew my parents wouldn't approve of what I had done), it can also denote official consent: "The colonel or commanding officer approves the sentence of a regimental court-martial" (Charles James). Endorse implies the expression of support, often by public statement: The senator will give a speech endorsing her party's gubernatorial candidate. Sanction usually implies not only approval (Public opinion ought not to sanction the use of force) but also official authorization (The privilege of voting is a right sanctioned by law). Certify and accredit imply official approval based on compliance with requirements or standards: "The proper officers, comparing every article with its voucher, certified them to be right" (Benjamin Franklin). The board of higher education will accredit only those institutions offering a sufficiently rigorous curriculum. To ratify is to invest with legal authority by giving official sanction: "Amendments... shall be valid... when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States" (U.S. Constitution, Article V).

ap·proved school (ə-prōvd' skool) n. Chiefly British. A school for young offenders; a reform school.

approx. abbr. 1. Approximate. 2. Approximately.

ap·prox·i·mate (ə-prōk'sə-mīt) adj. Abbr. approx. 1. Almost exact or correct: the approximate time of the accident. 2. Very similar; closely resembling: sketched an approximate likeness of the suspect. 3. Botany. Close together but not united. — v. ap·prox·i·mat·ed, ap·prox·i·mat·ing, ap·prox·i·mates (-māt'). — v. tr. 1. To come close to; be nearly the same as: This meat substitute approximates the real thing. 2. To bring near. 3. To bring together, as cut edges of tissue. — v. intr. To come near or close, as in degree, nature, or quality. [Middle English, from Late Latin approximātus, past participle of approximāre, to approach : Latin ad-, ad- + proximāre, to come near (from proximus, nearest); see per¹ in Appendix.] —ap·prox′i·mate·ly adv.

ap·prox·i·ma·tion (ə-prōk'sə-mā'shən) n. 1. The act, process, or result of approximating. 2. Mathematics. An inexact result adequate for a given purpose. —ap·prox′i·ma'tive (-mā'tiv) adj. —ap·prox′i·ma'tive·ly adv.

appt. abbr. ApPOINT; apPOINTment.

apptd. abbr. ApPOINTed.

ap·pur·te·nance (ə-pūr'tn-əns) n. 1. Something added to another, more important thing; an appendage. See Synonyms at appendage.

2. appurtenances. Equipment, such as clothing, tools, or instruments, used for a specific purpose or task; gear. 3. Law. A right, privilege, or property that is considered incident to the principal property for purposes such as passage of title, conveyance, or inheritance. [Middle English appurtenaunce, from Anglo-Norman apurtenance, from Vulgar Latin appertinentia*, from Late Latin appertinēns, appertinent- present participle of appertinēre, to appertain. See APPERTAIN.]

—ap·pur'te·nant adj.

APR abbr. Annual percentage rate.

Apr. or Apr abbr. April.

A·pra Harbor also Port Ap·ra (ä'prə här'bər) A seaport of western Guam in the Mariana Islands of the western Pacific. It is the only good harbor on the island.

a·prax·i·a (ā-prāk'sē-ə) n. Total or partial loss of the ability to perform coordinated movements or manipulate objects in the absence of motor or sensory impairment. [Greek, inaction : a-, without; see *A-*¹ + praxis, action; see PRAXIS.]

—a·prac'tic (ā-prāk'tik), a·prax'ic (ā-prāk'sik) adj.

a·près (ä'prā, äp'rā) prep. After. Often used in combination: an après-dinner entertainment; a concert après dinner. [French, from Old French, from Late Latin ad pressum : ad, to; see AD- + pressum, nearby (from neuter of Latin pressus, past participle of premere, to press closely); see PRESS¹.]

a·près-ski (ä'prā-skē', äp'rā-) n. Social events or activities that take place after skiing. — adj. Concerned with or designed for use after skiing: après-ski wear. [French : après, after + ski, skiing.]

a·pri·cot (äp'rī-köt', äp'rī-) n. 1. a. A deciduous Asian tree (Prunus armenica) having alternate leaves and clusters of usually white flowers. b. The edible, yellow-orange fruit of this tree. 2. Color. A moderate, light, or strong orange to strong orange yellow. [Alteration of earlier abrecock, ultimately from Arabic al-barqūq, the plum : al, the + Greek praikokion, apricot (from Latin praecoquus, ripe early : prae-, pre- + coquere, to cook, ripen); see pek^{w-} in Appendix.]

A·pril (ä'prəl) n. Abbr. Apr., Apr The fourth month of the year in the Gregorian calendar. See Table at calendar. [Middle English, from Latin aprīlis.]

April fool (ä'prəl fōl) n. 1. The victim of a joke or trick played on April Fools' Day. 2. The joke or trick so played.

April Fools' Day (ä'prəl fōlz dā) n. April 1, celebrated in various countries, such as the United States and Great Britain, and marked by the playing of practical jokes. Also called All Fools' Day a pri·o·ri (ä' prē-ōr'ē, -ōr'ē, ä' prī-ōr'ī, -ōr'ī) adj. 1. Proceeding from a known or assumed cause to a necessarily related effect; deductive. 2. Based on a hypothesis or theory rather than on experiment or experience. 3. Made before or without examination; not supported by factual study. [Medieval Latin ā priōrī : ā, from + priōrī, former.] —a' pri·o·ri adv. —a' pri·or'i·ty (-ōr'ī-tē, -ōr'-) n.

a·pron (ā'prən) n. 1. a. A garment, usually fastened in the back, worn over all or part of the front of the body to protect clothing. b. Something, such as a protective shield for a machine, that resembles this garment in appearance or function. 2. The paved strip in front of and around airport hangars and terminal buildings. 3. The part of a stage in a theater extending in front of the curtain. 4. A platform, as of planking, at the entrance to a dock. 5. a. A covering or structure along a shoreline for protection against erosion. b. A platform serving a similar purpose below a dam or in a sluiceway. 6. A continuous conveyor belt. 7. An area covered by sand and gravel deposited at the front of a glacial moraine.

— v. tr. a·proned, a·pron-ing, a·prons. To cover, protect, or provide with an apron. [Middle English, from an apron, alteration of a napron, from Old French naperon, diminutive of nape, tablecloth, from Latin mappa, napkin. See MAP.]

apron string (ā'prən strɪŋ) n. The string of an apron. Usually used in the plural with tied to indicate complete control or dominance: a grown man still tied to his mother's apron strings.

ap·ro·pos (ăp'rə-pō') adj. Being at once opportune and to the point. See Synonyms at relevant. — adv. 1. At an appropriate time; opportunely. 2. By the way; incidentally: Apropos, where were you yesterday? — prep. With regard to; concerning: Apropos our date for lunch, I can't go. [French à propos : à, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + propos, purpose (from Latin prōpositum, from prōponere, prōposit-, to intend); see PROPOSE.]

apropos of (ăp'rə-pō' ŭv) prep. With reference to; speaking of: a funny story apropos of politics.

apse (ăps) n. 1. Architecture. A semicircular or polygonal, usually domed projection of a building, especially the altar or east end of a church. 2. Astronomy. Apsis. [Variant of AP SIS.] — ap'si·dal (ăp'si-dəl) adj.

ap·sis (ăp'sis) n. pl. ap·si·des (-sī-dēz'). 1. Architecture. An apse.

2. Astronomy. The point of greatest or least distance of the orbit of a celestial body from a center of attraction. [Late Latin apsis, from Latin, arch, vault, from Greek hapsis, from haptēin, to fasten.]

apt (ăpt) adj. 1. Exactly suitable; appropriate: an apt reply. See Synonyms at fit¹. 2. Having a natural tendency; inclined: She is apt to take offense easily. See Usage Note at liable. See Usage Note at likely. 3. Quick to learn or understand: an apt student. [Middle English, from Old French apte, from Latin aptus, past participle of apere, to fasten.] — apt'ly adv. — apt'ness n.

APT (ā'pē-tē') n. Computer Science. A language designed for programming numerically controlled machine tools. [A(utomatically) P(rogrammed) T(ool).] apt. abbr. Apartment.

ap·ter·al (ăp'tər-əl) adj. Architecture. Having no columns along the sides. Used especially of a classical temple. [From Greek apteros, wingless : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + pteron, wing; see -PTER.]

ap-ter-ous (äp'tər-əs) adj. Biology. Having no wings or winglike extensions: an apterous insect.

ap-ter-yx (äp'tə-rīks') n. See kiwi (n., sense 1). [New Latin : A⁻¹ + Greek pterus, wing; see pet- in Appendix.]

ap-ti-tude (äp'ti-tōod', -tyōod') n. 1. An inherent ability, as for learning; a talent. See Synonyms at ability. 2. Quickness in learning and understanding; intelligence. 3. The condition or quality of being suitable; appropriateness. [Middle English, tendency, from Late Latin aptitūdō, aptitude, from Latin aptus, apt. See APT.] aptitude test (äp'ti-tōod' tĕst) n. A standardized test designed to measure the ability of a person to develop skills or acquire knowledge.

Ap-u-lei-us (äp'yə-lē'əs), Lucius. fl. second century A.D. Roman philosopher and satirist whose best-known work is The Golden Ass.

A-pu-lia (ə-pōol'yə) also Pu-glia (pōō'lyä) A region of southeast Italy bordering on the Adriatic Sea, Strait of Otranto, and Gulf of Taranto. Its southern portion forms the heel of the Italian "boot."

A-pu-re (ə-pōör'ā) A river of west-central Venezuela originating in the Andes of Colombia and flowing about 805 km (500 mi) eastward to the Orinoco River.

A-pu-rí-mac (ä'pə-rē'mäk) A river of southern Peru rising in the Andes and flowing about 885 km (550 mi) generally northwest to join the Urubamba River and form the Ucayali River.

A-pus (ā'pəs) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near Musca and Pavo. [Latin apus, a kind of swallow, from Greek apous, without feet, sand martin : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + pous, foot; see ped- in Appendix.]

ap-y-rase (äp'ə-rās', -rāz') n. Any of various enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of ATP, causing the release of phosphate and energy. [A(DENOSINE) + PYR(O)- + (PHOSPHAT)ASE.]

aq. abbr. 1. Aqua. 2. Aqueous.

A-qa-ba (ä'kə-bə, äk'ə-), Gulf of. An arm of the Red Sea between the Sinai Peninsula and northwest Saudi Arabia. It has long been of strategic importance in the Middle East.

aq-ua (äk'wə, ä'kwə) n. pl. aq-uae (äk'wē, ä'kwī') or aq-uas. Abbr. aq.

1. Water. 2. An aqueous solution. 3. Color. A light bluish green to light greenish blue. [Middle English, from Latin. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.] —aq'ua adj.

aqua- pref. Water: aquacade. [From Latin aqua, water. See AQUA.] aq-ua-cade (äk'wə-kād', ä'kwə-) n. An entertainment spectacle of swimmers and divers, often performing in unison to the accompaniment of music. [AQUA- + (CAVAL)CADE.]

aq-ua-cul-ture (äk'wə-kül'chər, ä'kwə-) also aq-ui-cul-ture (äk'wī-kül'chər, ä'kwī-) n. 1. The science, art, and business of cultivating marine or freshwater food fish or shellfish, such as oysters, clams, salmon, and trout, under controlled conditions. 2. Botany. Hydroponics. —aq'ua·cul'tur-al adj. —aq'ua·cul'tur-ist n.

aq·uae (ăk'wē, ä'kwī') n. A plural of aqua.

aqua for·tis also aq·ua·for·tis (ăk'wə-fôr'tis, ä'kwə-) n. See nitric acid.

[New Latin : Latin aqua, water + Latin fortis, strong.]

Aq·ua·Lung (ăk'wə-lŭng', ä'kwə-) A trademark used for an underwater breathing apparatus.

aq·ua·ma·rine (ăk'wə-mə-rēn', ä'kwə-) n. 1. A transparent blue-green variety of beryl, used as a gemstone. 2. Color. A pale blue to light greenish blue.

[Latin aqua marīna, sea water : aqua, water; see AQUA + marīna, of the sea; see MARINE.]

aq·ua·naut (ăk'wə-nôt', ä'kwə-) n. A person trained to live in underwater installations and conduct, assist in, or be a subject of scientific research. Also called oceanaut [AQUA- + Greek nautēs, sailor; see nāu- in Appendix.]

aq·ua·plane (ăk'wə-plān', ä'kwə-) n. A board pulled over the water by a motorboat and ridden by a person standing up. — v. intr. aq·ua·planed, aq·ua·plan-ing, aq·ua·planes. To ride on such a board. [AQUA- + PLANE¹.]

aqua re·gi·a (ăk'wə-rē'jē-ə, rē'jə) n. A corrosive, fuming, volatile mixture of hydrochloric and nitric acids, used for testing metals and dissolving platinum and gold. Also called nitrohydrochloric acid [New Latin : Latin aqua, water + Latin rēgia, royal (because it dissolves gold, the “royal metal”).]

aq·ua·relle (ăk'wə-rēl', ä'kwə-) n. A drawing done in transparent watercolors. [French, from obsolete Italian acquarella, water color, diminutive of acqua, water, from Latin aqua. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.] —aq'ua·rel'list n.

a·quar·i·a (ə-kwâr'ē-ə) n. A plural of aquarium.

A·quar·i·an (ə-kwâr'ē-ən) n. One who is born under the sign of Aquarius.

—A·quar'i-an adj.

a·quar·ist (ə-kwâr'ist) n. One who maintains an aquarium.

a·quar·i·um (ə-kwâr'ē-əm) n. pl. a·quar·i·ums or a·quar·i·a (-ē-ə). 1. A tank, bowl, or other water-filled enclosure in which living fish or other aquatic animals and plants are kept. 2. A place for the public exhibition of live aquatic animals and plants. [Latin aquārium, source of water, from neuter of aquārius, of water, from aqua, water. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.]

A·quar·i·us (ə-kwâr'ē-əs) n. 1. A constellation in the equatorial region of the Southern Hemisphere near Pisces and Aquila. Also called Water Bearer 2. a. The 11th sign of the zodiac in astrology. Also called Water Bearer b. One who is born under this sign. [Middle English, from Latin, water carrier, the constellation Aquarius, from aqua, water. See AQUA.]

a·quat·ic (ə-kwăt'ik, ə-kwöt'-) adj. 1. Consisting of, relating to, or being in water: an aquatic environment. 2. Living or growing in, on, or near the water: aquatic animals and plants. 3. Taking place in or on the water: an aquatic sport.

— n. 1. An organism that lives in, on, or near the water. 2. aquatics. Sports. Athletic activities performed in or on the water. [Middle English aquatique, from Old French, from Latin aquāticus, from aqua, water. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.]

—a·quat'·i·cal·ly adv.

aq·ua·tint (ăk'wə-tînt', ä'kwə-) n. 1. A process of etching capable of producing several tones by varying the etching time of different areas of a copper plate so that the resulting print resembles the flat tints of an ink or wash drawing. 2. An etching made by this process. [French aquatinte, from Italian acquatinta : acqua, water (from Latin aqua); see AQUA + tinta, dyed (from Latin tinctoria, feminine past participle of tingere, to dye).] —aq'ua·tint' v. —aq'ua·tint'er, aq'ua·tint'ist n.

a·qua·vit (ä'kwə-vēt') n. A strong, clear Scandinavian liquor distilled from potato or grain mash and flavored with caraway seed. [Swedish, Danish, and Norwegian akvavit from Medieval Latin aqua vitæ, highly distilled spirits : Latin aqua, water; see AQUA + Latin vītæ, genitive of vīta, life; see VITAL.]

aqua vi·tæ (ăk'wə vī'tē) n. Strong distilled alcohol, especially a strong liquor such as whiskey or brandy. [Middle English aqua vite, from Medieval Latin aqua vitæ. See AQUAVIT.]

aq·ue·duct (ăk'wī-dŭkt') n. 1. a. A pipe or channel designed to transport water from a remote source, usually by gravity. b. A bridgelike structure supporting a conduit or canal passing over a river or low ground. 2. Anatomy. A channel or passage in an organ or a body part, especially such a channel for conveying fluid. [Latin aquaeductus : aquæ, genitive of aqua, water; see AQUA + ductus, a leading; see DUCT.]

a·que·ous (ă'kwē-əs, ä'kwē-) adj. Abbr. aq. 1. Relating to, similar to, containing, or dissolved in water; watery. 2. Geology. Formed from matter deposited by water, as certain sedimentary rocks. [From Medieval Latin aqueus, from Latin aqua, water. See AQUA.]

aqueous humor (ă'kwē-əs hyōō'mər) n. Anatomy. The clear, watery fluid circulating in the chamber of the eye between the cornea and the lens.

aqui- pref. Water: aquifer. [Latin, from aqua, water. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.]

aq·ui·cul·ture (ăk'wī-kŭl'chər, ä'kwī-) n. Variant of aquaculture.

—aq'ui·cul'tur·al adj. —aq'ui·cul'tur·ist n.

A·quid·neck Island (ə-kwīd'nĕk ī'lənd) See Rhode Island¹.

aq·ui·fer (ăk'wə-fər, ä'kwə-) n. An underground bed or layer of earth, gravel, or porous stone that yields water. —a·quif'er·ous (ə-kwīf'ər-əs) adj.

A·qui·la¹ (ăk'wə-lə, ä'kwē-lä) See L'Aquila.

Aq·ui·la² (ăk'wə-lə) n. A constellation in the Northern Hemisphere and the Milky Way near Aquarius and Serpens Cauda. [Middle English, from Latin aquila, eagle, the constellation Aquila.]

aq·ui·le·gi·a (äk'wə-lē'jē-ə, -lē'jə) n. See columbine. [Medieval Latin aquilē-gia.]

A·qui·le·ia (ä'kwə-lā'ə, ä'kwē-lē'yä) A town of northeast Italy near the Adriatic Sea. Founded by the Romans as a military outpost in 181 B.C., it was frequently destroyed by invaders, including Attila (A.D. 452).

aq·ui·line (äk'wə-līn', -līn) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or having the characteristics of an eagle. 2. Curved or hooked like an eagle's beak: an aquiline nose. [Latin aquilīnus, from aquila, eagle.] —aq'ui·lin'i·ty (-līn'ītē) n.

A·qui·nas (ə-kwī'nəs), Saint Thomas. 1225-1274. Italian Dominican monk, theologian, and philosopher. The outstanding representative of Scholasticism, he applied Aristotelian methods to Christian theology. His masterwork is Summa Theologica (1266-1273).

A·qui·no (ä-kē'nō), Corazón Cojuangco. Born 1933. Philippine political leader. After the assassination of her husband, Benigno S. Aquino, Jr. (1932-1983), on his return to the Philippines from political exile, she ran for president (1986) against 20-year incumbent Ferdinand Marcos. Following the apparently fraudulent election, Marcos fled the country and Aquino became president.

Aq·ui·taine (äk'wī-tān') A historical region of southwest France between the Pyrenees and the Garonne River. The duchy of Aquitaine was joined with France after the marriage of Eleanor of Aquitaine to King Louis VII in 1137, but its possession was disputed after her subsequent marriage to Henry II of England.

Aq·ui·ta·ni·a (äk'wī-tā'nē-ə) A Roman division of southwest Gaul extending from the Pyrenees to the Garonne River and roughly coextensive with the historical region of Aquitaine. Its Iberian peoples were conquered by Julius Caesar in 56 B.C. The region passed to the Franks in A.D. 507.

a·quiv·er (ə-kwiv'ər) adj. Marked by quivering: The children were aquiver with anticipation before the circus parade.

ar¹ (är) n. Variant of are².

ar² (är) n. The letter r. [Middle English arre, from Late Latin er.]

Ar The symbol for the element argon.

AR abbr. 1. Also A/R. Account receivable. 2. Arkansas.

ar. abbr. Arrival; arrive.

Ar. abbr. 1. Arabia; Arabian. 2. Arabic. 3. Arabist.

A.R. abbr. Army regulation.

-ar suff. Of, relating to, or resembling: polar. [Middle English, from Old French -er, from Latin -āris, alteration of -ālis, -al.]

A·ra (âr'ə) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near the constellations Norma and Telescopium. [Latin āra, altar, the constellation Ara. See as- in Appendix.]

Ar·ab (är'əb) n. 1. A member of a Semitic people inhabiting Arabia, whose language and Islamic religion spread widely throughout the Middle East and northern Africa from the seventh century. 2. A member of an Arabic-speaking people.

3. An Arabian horse. 4. Offensive Slang. A waif. [French Arabe, from Latin Arabs, from Greek Araps, Arab-, from Arabic 'arab.] — Ar'ab adj.

Arab. abbr. 1. Arabian. 2. Arabic. 3. Arabist.

ar·a·besque (är'ə-bĕsk') n. 1. A ballet position in which the dancer bends forward while standing on one straight leg with the arm extended forward and the other arm and leg extended backward. 2. A complex, ornate design of intertwined floral, foliate, and geometric figures. 3. Music. A usually short, whimsical composition especially for the piano that features many embellished passages.

4. An intricate or elaborate pattern or design: "the fluctuating shapes of a cloud-scape, the complex arabesque of a camera movement, the blink of a character's eye" (Nigel Andrews). — adj. In the fashion of or formed as an arabesque. [French, from Italian arabesco, in Arabian fashion, from Arabo, an Arab, from Latin Arabus, from Arabs. See ARAB.]

A·ra·bi·a (ə-rā'bĕ-ə) also A·ra·bi·an Peninsula (-bĕ-ən) Abbr. Ar. A peninsula of southwest Asia between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. Politically, it includes Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain, and Kuwait. Arabia has an estimated one third of the world's oil reserves.

A·ra·bi·an (ə-rā'bĕ-ən) adj. Abbr. Ar., Arab. Of or concerning Arabia or the Arabs; Arab. — n. Abbr. Ar., Arab. 1. A native or inhabitant of Arabia. 2. An Arabian horse.

Arabian camel (ə-rā'bĕ-ən kām'əl) n. See dromedary.

Arabian Desert (ə-rā'bĕ-ən dĕz'ərt) A desert of eastern Egypt between the Nile Valley and the Red Sea. Porphyry, granite, and sandstone found here have been used as building materials since ancient times.

Arabian Gulf (ə-rā'bĕ-ən gŭlf) See Persian Gulf.

Arabian horse (ə-rā'bĕ-ən hōrs) n. Any of a breed of swift, intelligent, graceful horses native to Arabia.

Arabian Peninsula (ə-rā'bĕ-ən pə-nĭn'syə-lə) See Arabia.

Arabian Sea (ə-rā'bĕ-ən sĕ) The northwest part of the Indian Ocean between Arabia and western India. It has long been an important trade route between India and the West.

Ar·a·bic (är'ə-bĭk) adj. Of or relating to Arabia, the Arabs, their language, or their culture. — n. Abbr. Ar., Arab. A Semitic language consisting of numerous dialects that is the principal language of Arabia, Jordan, Syria, Iraq, Lebanon, Egypt, and parts of northern Africa.

Arabic numeral (är'ə-bĭk nō' mər-əl) n. One of the numerical symbols 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, or 0.

a·rab·i·nose (ə-rāb'ə-nōs', är'ə-bə-) n. A crystalline pentose sugar, C₅H₁₀O₅, obtained from plant polysaccharides such as gums and hemicelluloses. [(GUM) ARAB(IC) + -IN + -OSE².]

Ar-ab-ist (är'ə-bīst) n. 1. Abbr. Ar., Arab. A specialist in the Arabic language or culture. 2. One who is favorably disposed toward Arab concerns and policies.

ar-a-ble (är'ə-bəl) adj. Fit for cultivation, as by plowing. — n. Land fit to be cultivated. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin arābilis, from arāre, to plow.] — ar'a-bil/i-ty n.

A-ra-ca-ju (ä-rä'kä-zhō') A city of east-central Brazil near the Atlantic Ocean south-southeast of Recife. It is a commercial center in a cotton- and sugar-producing region. Population, 287,934.

A-ra-ça-tu-ba (ä'rə-sə-tō'bə) A city of southeast Brazil on the Tietê River northwest of São Paulo. It is a trade center in an agricultural area. Population, 113,925.

ar-a-chi-don-ic acid (är'ə-kī-dŏn'ik əs'īd) n. An unsaturated fatty acid, $C_{20}H_{32}O_2$, found in animal fats, that is essential in human nutrition and is a precursor in the biosynthesis of some prostaglandins. [From arachidic, of the groundnut, from New Latin Arachis, groundnut genus, from Greek arakis, arakid- diminutive of arakos, a leguminous plant.]

A-rach-ne (ə-räk'nē) n. Greek Mythology. A maiden who was transformed into a spider by Athena for challenging her to a weaving contest.

a-rach-nid (ə-räk'nīd) n. Any of various arthropods of the class Arachnida, such as spiders, scorpions, mites, and ticks, characterized by four pairs of segmented legs and a body that is divided into two regions, the cephalothorax and the abdomen. Also called arachnoid [From New Latin Arachnida, class name, from Greek arakhnē, spider.] — a-rach'ni-dan (-nī-dən) adj. & n.

a-rach-noid (ə-räk'noid') adj. 1. Anatomy. Of or relating to a delicate membrane enclosing the spinal cord and brain. 2. Of, relating to, or resembling arachnids. 3. Covered with or consisting of thin, soft, entangled hairs or fibers resembling those of a cobweb or spider's web. — n. 1. See arachnid.

2. Anatomy. A delicate membrane that encloses the spinal cord and brain, and lies between the pia mater and dura mater. [New Latin arachnoidēs, from Greek arakhnoeidēs, cobweblike : arakhnē, spider + -oeidēs, -oid.]

a-rach-no-pho-bi-a (ə-räk'nə-fō'bē-ə, -nō-) n. An abnormal fear of spiders. [ARACHN(ID) + -PHOBIA.]

A-rad (ä-räd') A city of western Romania on the Mureșul River near the Hungarian border. Ruled by Turkey and later by Hungary, it became part of Romania in 1920. Population, 183,774.

Ar-a-fat (är'ə-fät', är'ə-fät'), Yasir. Born 1929. Leader of Al Fatah, an Arab guerrilla group, and the Palestine Liberation Organization, both of which advocate the establishment of an independent Palestinian state. He shared the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize with Itzhak Rabin.

A-ra-fu-ra Sea (ä'rə-fō'rə sē) A shallow part of the western Pacific Ocean between the Timor and Coral seas, separating New Guinea from Australia.

Ar·a·gon (är'ə-gõn') A region and former kingdom of northeast Spain. It was united with Castile in 1479 to form the nucleus of modern Spain.

—Ar'a·go·nese' (är'ə-gə-nēz', -nēs') adj. & n.

A·ra·gon (är-ä-gõn'), Louis. 1897-1982. French writer who was a founder of literary surrealism.

a·rag·o·nite (ə-räg'ə-nīt', är'ə-gə-) n. An orthorhombic mineral form of crystalline calcium carbonate, dimorphous with calcite. [After Aragon.]

A·ra·guaí·a or A·ra·gua·ya (är'ə-gwī'ə) A river rising in central Brazil and flowing about 2,092 km (1,300 mi) generally northward to the Tocantins River. There are numerous falls on the river.

A·rak (ə-räk') A city of west-central Iran southwest of Tehran. It is a transportation hub noted for its carpets. Population, 210,000.

a·ra·li·a (ə-rā'lē-ə, ə-rāl'yə) n. Any of several plants in the genera Aralia and Polyscias, cultivated as ornamentals. [Of unknown origin.]

Ar·al Sea (är'əl sē) An inland sea between southern Kazakhstan and northwest Uzbekistan. Once the fourth-largest inland body of water in the world, it is fast disappearing because of diversion of its two sources, the Amu Darya and the Syr Darya.

Ar·am (âr'əm, är'-, ā'rām) In the Old Testament, an ancient country of southwest Asia, roughly coextensive with present-day Syria.

Ar·a·mae·an (är'ə-mē'ən) adj. & n. Variant of Aramean.

Ar·a·ma·ic (är'ə-mā'ik) n. A Semitic language, comprising several dialects, originally of the ancient Arameans but widely used by non-Aramean peoples throughout southwest Asia from the seventh century B.C. to the seventh century A.D. Also called Aramean, Chaldean. —Ar'a·ma'ic adj.

ar·a·me (är'ə-mā, ə-rä'-) n. An edible, mild-flavored seaweed. [Japanese.]

Ar·a·me·an or Ar·a·mae·an (är'ə-mē'ən) adj. Of or relating to Aram, its inhabitants, their language, or their culture. — n. 1. One of a group of Semitic peoples inhabiting Aram and parts of Mesopotamia from the 11th to the 8th century B.C. 2. See Aramaic.

Ar·an Islands (är'ən ī'ləndz) Three small islands of western Ireland at the entrance to Galway Bay. The barren, primitive islands have many prehistoric and early Christian remains.

A·rap·a·ho also A·rap·a·hoe (ə-răp'ə-hō') n. pl. Arapaho or A·rap·a·hos also Arapahoe or A·rap·a·hoes. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting eastern Colorado and southeast Wyoming, with present-day populations in Oklahoma and central Wyoming. Traditional Arapaho life was based on the buffalo-hunting culture of the Great Plains. b. A member of this people. 2. The Algonquian language of the Arapaho. [Crow aaraxpéahu, those with lots of tattoos.]

A·rap·a·hoe Peak (ə-răp'ə-hō' pĕk) A mountain, 4,119.3 m (13,506 ft) high, of north-central Colorado in the Front Range of the Rocky Mountains east of Boulder.

ar·a·pai·ma (ăr'ə-pī'mə) n. A large South American freshwater food fish (Arapaima gigas) that typically attains a length of 3 meters (10 feet). Also called pirarucu [American Spanish, or Portuguese.]

Ar·a·rat (ăr'ə-răt'), Mount. A massif of extreme eastern Turkey near the Iranian border rising to about 5,168 m (16,945 ft). It is the traditional resting place of Noah's ark.

A·ras (ə-răs') Formerly A·rax·es (ə-răk'sēz). A river rising in northeast Turkey and flowing about 965 km (600 mi) generally eastward along the Turkey-Armenia and Azerbaijan-Iran borders.

A·rau·ca (ə-rou'kə) A river rising in northern Colombia and flowing about 805 km (500 mi) eastward to the Orinoco River in central Venezuela.

Ar·au·ca·ni·an (ăr'ô-kā'nĕ-ən) also A·rau·can (ə-rô'kən) n. 1. A member of a widespread group of South American Indian peoples of south-central Chile and the western pampas of Argentina. 2. The language of the Araucanians, which constitutes an independent language family. [Spanish araucano, from Arauco, a former region of southern Chile.] —Ar'au·ca'ni·an adj.

ar·au·car·i·a (ăr'ô-kăr'ĕ-ə) n. Any of several evergreen coniferous trees of the genus Araucaria native to South America and Australia, having awl-shaped leaves and whorled branches and including the monkey puzzle and Norfolk Island pine. [From Spanish Araucaria, (tree) of Arauco, a former province of south-central Chile.]

Ar·a·wak (ăr'ə-wăk') n. pl. Arawak or Ar·a·waks. 1. A member of a South American Indian people formerly inhabiting much of the Greater Antilles and now living chiefly in certain regions of Guiana. 2. The Arawakan language of the Arawak.

Ar·a·wa·kan (ăr'ə-wă'kən) n. pl. Arawakan or Ar·a·wa·kans. 1. A member of a widespread group of Indian peoples living in an area of South America that includes parts of Colombia, Venezuela, Guiana, the Amazon basin of Brazil, Paraguay, Bolivia, Peru, and formerly most of the Greater Antilles. 2. The largest and most important Indian linguistic family in South America, consisting of the languages spoken by the Arawakan peoples. —Ar'a·wa'kan adj.

A·rax·es (ə-răk'sēz) See Aras.

arb (ərb) n. Informal. An arbitrageur. [Short for ARBITRAGEUR.]

ar·ba·lest also ar·ba·list (ăr'bə-lĭst) n. A medieval missile launcher designed on the principle of the crossbow. [Middle English arblast, from Old English, from Old French arbaleste, from Late Latin arcuballista: Latin arcus, bow + Latin ballista, ballista; see BALLISTA.] —ar'ba·lest'er (-lĕs'tər) n.

Ar-be-la (är-bē'lə) An ancient town of Assyria in present-day northern Iraq. Its name is sometimes given to the battle fought at Gaugamela, about 97 km (60 mi) away, in which Alexander the Great defeated Darius III in 331 B.C.

Ar-ber (är'bər), Werner. Born 1929. Swiss microbiologist. He shared a 1978 Nobel Prize for the discovery of restriction enzymes and their application to molecular genetics.

ar-bi-ter (är'bī-tər) n. 1. One chosen or appointed to judge or decide a disputed issue; an arbitrator. 2. One who has the power to judge or ordain at will: an arbitrator of fashion. See Synonyms at judge. [Middle English arbitre, from Old French, from Latin arbitrator.]

ar-bi-tra-ble (är'bī-trə-bəl) adj. 1. Subject to arbitration: an arbitrable wage and health benefits policy. 2. Appropriate for referral to an arbitrator: an arbitrable dispute.

ar-bi-trage (är'bī-trāzh') n. The purchase of securities on one market for immediate resale on another market in order to profit from a price discrepancy. — v. intr. ar-bi-traged, ar-bi-trag-ing, ar-bi-trag-es. To be involved in arbitrage. [Middle English, arbitration, from Old French, from arbitrer, to judge, from Latin arbitrārī, to give judgment. See ARBITRATE.]

ar-bi-tra-geur (är'bī-trä-zhūr') n. One that engages in arbitrage. [French, from arbitrage, arbitration. See ARBITRAGE.]

ar-bit-ra-ment (är-bit'rə-mənt) n. 1. The act of arbitrating; arbitration. 2. The judgment of an arbitrator or arbiter. [Middle English arbitrement, from Old French, from arbitrer, to judge. See ARBITRAGE.]

ar-bi-trar-y (är'bī-trēr'ē) adj. 1. Determined by chance, whim, or impulse, and not by necessity, reason, or principle: stopped at the first motel we passed, an arbitrary choice; arbitrary division of the group into halves. 2. Based on or subject to individual judgment or preference: The diet imposes overall calorie limits, but daily menus are arbitrary. 3. Established by a court or judge rather than by a specific law or statute: an arbitrary penalty. 4. Not limited by law; despotic: the arbitrary rule of a dictator. [Middle English arbitrarie, from Latin arbitrārius, from arbitrator, arbitr-, arbitrator.] — ar'bi-trar'i-ly (-trār'ə-lē) adv.

— ar'bi-trar'i-ness n.

SYNONYMS: arbitrary, capricious, whimsical. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “determined by or arising from whim or caprice rather than judgment or reason”: an arbitrary decision; a capricious refusal; the butt of whimsical persecution.

ar-bi-trate (är'bī-trāt') v. ar-bi-trat-ed, ar-bi-trat-ing, ar-bi-trates. — v. tr. 1. To judge or decide in or as in the manner of an arbitrator: arbitrate a dispute between neighbors. 2. To submit to settlement or judgment by arbitration:

Management and labor agreed to arbitrate their remaining differences. — v. intr.

1. To serve as an arbitrator or arbiter. 2. To submit a dispute to arbitration.

[Latin arbitrārī, arbitrāt-, to give judgment, from arbiter, arbitr-, arbiter.]

ar·bi·tra·tion (är'bī-trā'shən) n. The process by which the parties to a dispute submit their differences to the judgment of an impartial person or group appointed by mutual consent or statutory provision.

ar·bi·tra·tor (är'bī-trā'tər) n. 1. A person chosen to settle the issue between parties engaged in a dispute. See Synonyms at judge. 2. One having the ability or power to make authoritative decisions; an arbiter.

ar·bor¹ (är'bər) n. A shady resting place in a garden or park, often made of rustic work or latticework on which plants, such as climbing shrubs or vines, are grown. [Middle English erber, from Old French erbier, garden, from erbe, herb. See HERB.] ar·bor² (är'bər) n. 1. An axis or shaft supporting a rotating part on a lathe. 2. A bar for supporting cutting tools. 3. A spindle of a wheel, as in watches and clocks. 4. pl. ar·bo·res (är'bə-rēz'). A tree, as opposed to a shrub. [French arbre, from Latin arbor, tree.]

Ar·bor Day (är'bər dā) n. An unofficial holiday observed in all 50 states of the United States, most often on the last Friday in April, for the public planting of trees.

ar·bo·re·al (är-bôr'ē-əl, -bôr'-) adj. 1. Relating to or resembling a tree.

2. Living in trees; arboreal: arboreal apes. [From Latin arboreus, from arbor, tree.] —ar·bo·re·al·ly adv.

ar·bo·re·ous (är-bôr'ē-əs, -bôr'-) adj. 1. Having many trees; wooded.

2. Resembling or characteristic of a tree; treelike. 3. Arboreal.

ar·bo·res (är'bə-rēz') n. Plural of arbor² (n., sense 4).

ar·bo·res·cent (är'bə-rēs'ənt) adj. Having the size, form, or characteristics of a tree; treelike. [Latin arborēscēns, arborēscēt- present participle of arborēscere, to grow to be a tree, from arbor, tree.] —ar·bo·res'cence n.

ar·bo·re·tum (är'bə-rē'təm) *n. pl. ar·bo·re·tums or ar·bo·re·ta (-tə). A place where an extensive variety of woody plants are cultivated for scientific, educational, and ornamental purposes. [Latin arborētum, a place grown with trees, from arbor, tree.]*

ar·bo·ri·cul·ture (är'bər-ī-kül'chər, är-bôr'ī-, -bôr'-) n. The planting and care of woody plants, especially trees.

ar·bor·ist (är'bər-īst) n. A specialist in the care of woody plants, especially trees. [From Latin arbor, tree.]

ar·bo·ri·za·tion (är'bər-ī-zā'shən) n. 1. A branching, treelike shape or arrangement, as that of the dendrite of a nerve cell. 2. The formation of a treelike shape or arrangement.

ar·bo·rize (är'bə-rīz') v. intr. ar·bo·rized, ar·bo·riz·ing, ar·bo·riz·es. To have or produce branching formations, as the bronchial tubes of the lungs.

ar·bor·vi·tae also ar·bor vi·tae (är'bər-vī'tē) n. 1. a. Any of several North American or eastern Asian evergreen trees or shrubs of the genus Thuja, having flattened branchlets with opposite, scalelike leaves and small cones. They are grown as ornamentals and for timber. b. Any similar plant of the genus Platyclusus or Thujopsis. Also called thuja 2. Anatomy. The white nerve tissue of the cerebellum, which has a treelike outline in a median section. [Latin arbor, tree + vītae, genitive of vīta, life; see VITAL.] ar·bour (är'bər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of arbor¹.

ar·bo·vi·rus (är'bə-vī'rəs) n. Any of a large group of viruses transmitted by arthropods, such as mosquitoes and ticks, that include the causative agents of encephalitis, yellow fever, and dengue. [ar(thropod-)-bo(rne) virus.]

—ar'bo·vi'ral adj. —ar'bo·vi·rol'o·gy (är'bō-vī-rōl'ə-jē) n.

Ar·buth·not (är-büth'nət, är'bəth-nöt'), John. 1667-1735. Scottish physician and writer noted for his satirical anti-Whig pamphlets published as Law Is a Bottomless Pit (1712) and later retitled The History of John Bull.

ar·bu·tus (är-byōō'təs) n. 1. Any of various broad-leaved evergreen trees or shrubs of the genus Arbutus, including the madroña and strawberry tree, that are native chiefly to warm regions in the Americas and Europe. 2. The trailing arbutus. [Latin arbutus, arbutus.]

arc (ärk) n. 1. Something shaped like a curve or an arch: the vivid arc of a rainbow. 2. Mathematics. A segment of a circle. 3. Electricity. A luminous discharge of current that is formed when a strong current jumps a gap in a circuit or between two electrodes. 4. Astronomy. The apparent path of a celestial body as it rises above and falls below the horizon. — v. intr. arced or arcked (ärkt), arc·ing or arck·ing (är'kīng), arcs. 1. To form an arc. 2. To move or seem to move in a curved path: the stars that arc across the sky. [Middle English ark, from Old French arc, from Latin arcus.]

ARC¹ (ärk) n. A combination of symptoms, including fever, lymphadenopathy, blood abnormalities, and susceptibility to opportunistic infections. The complex was first considered to be a precursor to AIDS, but it is now thought of as a milder form of the disease. [A(IDS)-R(ELATED) C(OMPLEX).]

ARC² abbr. American Red Cross.

ar·cade (är-kād') n. 1. An arched, roofed building or part of a building. 2. A series of arches supported by columns, piers, or pillars. 3. A roofed passageway or lane, especially one with shops on either side. 4. A commercial establishment featuring rows of coin-operated games. — v. tr. ar·cad·ed, ar·cad·ing, ar·cades. To provide with or form into an arcade: closed off and arcaded the narrow street. [French, from Italian arcata, from arco, arch, from Latin arcus.]

Ar-cade (är-kād') A community of north-central California, a suburb of Sacramento. Population, 37,600.

Ar-ca-di-a¹ (är-kā'dē-ə) 1. Also Ar-ca-dy (är'kə-dē). A region of ancient Greece in the Peloponnesus. Its inhabitants, relatively isolated from the rest of the known civilized world, proverbially lived a simple, pastoral life. 2. A city of southern California, a residential suburb of Los Angeles at the foot of the San Gabriel Mountains. Population, 48,290.

Ar-ca-di-a² also ar-ca-di-a (är-kā'dē-ə) n. A region offering rural simplicity and contentment.

Ar-ca-di-an (är-kā'dē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to the ancient Greek region of Arcadia or its people, language, or culture. 2. Often arcadian. Rustic, peaceful, and simple; pastoral: a country life of arcadian contentment. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of the ancient Greek region of Arcadia. 2. Often arcadian. One who leads or prefers a simple, rural life. 3. The dialect of ancient Greek used in Arcadia.

Ar-ca-dy (är'kə-dē) See Arcadia¹ (sense 1).

ar-ca-na (är-kā'nə) n. A plural of arcanum.

ar-cane (är-kān') adj. Known or understood by only a few: arcane economic theories. See Synonyms at mysterious. [Latin arcānus, secret, from arca, chest.]

ar-ca-num (är-kā'nəm) n. pl. ar-ca-na (-nə) or ar-ca-nums. 1. A deep secret; a mystery. 2. Often arcana. Specialized knowledge or detail that is mysterious to the average person: "knows the arcana of police procedure and the intricacies of litigation" (George F. Will). 3. A secret essence or remedy; an elixir. [Latin, from neuter of arcānus, secret. See ARCANE.]

Ar-car-o (är-kâr'ō), George Edward. Known as "Eddie." Born 1916. American jockey who rode to victory in the Kentucky Derby five times.

arc-bou-tant (är'bōō-tän') n. pl. arcs-bou-tants (är'bōō-tän'). Architecture. See flying buttress. [French : arc, arch (from Old French); see ARC + boutant, present participle of bouter, to thrust (from Old French); see BUTT¹.]

arc cosecant (ärk kō-sē'kănt') n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the cosecant of an angle.

arc cosine (ärk kō'sīn') n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the cosine of an angle.

arc cotangent (ärk kō-tän'jənt) n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the cotangent of an angle.

arch¹ (ärch) n. 1. A structure, especially one of masonry, forming the curved, pointed, or flat upper edge of an open space and supporting the weight above it, as in a bridge or doorway. 2. A structure, such as a freestanding monument, shaped like an inverted U. 3. A curve with the ends down and the middle up: the arch of a raised eyebrow. 4. Anatomy. An organ or structure having a curved or bowl-like appearance, especially either of two arched sections of the bony structure of the foot. — v. arched, arch-ing, arch-es. — v. tr. 1. To provide with an arch: arch a passageway. 2. To cause to form an arch or similar curve. 3. To bend backward: The dancers alternately arched and hunched their backs. 4. To span: “the rude bridge that arched the flood” (Ralph Waldo Emerson). — v. intr. To form an arch or archlike curve: The high fly ball arched toward the stands. [Middle English, from Old French arche, from Vulgar Latin arca*, from Latin arcus.]

arch² (ärch) adj. 1. Chief; principal: their arch foe. 2. Mischievous; roguish: an arch glance. [From ARCH-¹.] —arch/ly adv. —arch/ness n.

arch. abbr. 1. Archaic; archaism. 2. Archery. 3. Archipelago. 4. a. Architect; architecture. b. Architectural.

Arch. abbr. Archbishop.

arch-¹ pref. 1. Chief; highest; most important: archenemy. 2. Extreme or most characteristic of its kind: archconservative. [Middle English arche-, from Old English ærce-, and from Old French arche- both from Latin archi-, from Greek arkhi-, archi-.]

arch-² pref. Variant of archi-.

-arch suff. Ruler; leader: matriarch. [Middle English -arche, from Old French, from Late Latin -archa, from Latin -archēs, from Greek -arkhēs, from arkhos, ruler, from arkhein, to rule.]

Ar·chae·an (är-kē'ə'n) adj. Variant of Archean.

archaeo- or archeo- pref. Ancient; earlier; primitive: archaeopteryx. [New Latin, from Greek arkhaio-, from arkhaios, ancient. See ARCHAIC.]

ar·chae·ol·o·gy or ar·che·ol·o·gy (är'kē-öl'ə-jē) n. Abbr. archaeol. The systematic recovery and study of material evidence, such as graves, buildings, tools, and pottery, remaining from past human life and culture. [French archéologie, from New Latin archaeologia, from Greek arkhaiologia, antiquarian lore : arkhaio-, archaeo- + -logia, -logy.] —ar'chae·o·log'i·cal (-ə-lŏj'ī-kəl), ar'chae·o·log'ic adj. —ar'chae·ol'o·gist n.

ar·chae·op·ter·yx (är'kē-ŏp'tər-īks) n. An extinct primitive bird (genus Archaeopteryx) of the Jurassic period, having lizardlike characteristics, such as teeth and a long, bony tail. It may represent a transitional form between reptiles and birds. [New Latin : ARCHAEO- + Greek pteryx, bird, wing; see pet- in Appendix.]

Ar·chae·o·zo·ic (är'kē-ə-zō'īk) adj. & n. Variant of Archeozoic.

ar·cha·ic (är-kā'īk) also ar·cha·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Abbr. arch. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a much earlier, often more primitive period: an archaic bronze statuette. 2. No longer current or applicable; antiquated: archaic laws. See Synonyms at old. 3. Of, relating to, or characteristic of words and language that were once common but are now used chiefly to suggest an earlier style or period. [Greek arkhaikos, old-fashioned, from arkhaios, ancient, from arkhē, beginning, from arkhein, to begin.] —ar·cha'i·cal·ly adv.

archaic smile (är-kā'īk smīl) n. A representation of the human mouth with slightly upturned corners, characteristic of early Greek sculpture produced before the fifth century B.C. ar·cha·ism (är'kē-īz'əm, -kā-) n. Abbr. arch. 1. An archaic word, phrase, idiom, or other expression. 2. An archaic style, quality, or usage. [New Latin archaeismus, from Greek arkhaismos, from arkhaios, ancient. See ARCHAIIC.]

—ar'cha·ist n. —ar'cha·is'tic (-īs'tīk) adj.

ar·cha·ize (är'kē-īz', -kā-) v. ar·cha·ized, ar·cha·iz·ing, ar·cha·iz·es. — v. tr. To give an archaic quality or character to; make archaic. — v. intr. To use archaisms, as in prose, to suggest the past. —ar'cha·iz'er n.

arch·an·gel (ärk'ān'jəl) n. 1. A high-ranking angel. 2. archangels. The eighth of the nine orders of spiritual beings in medieval angelology. [Middle English, from Old French archangele, from Late Latin archangelus, from Late Greek arkhangelos: Greek arkh-, archi- + Greek angelos, angel.]

—arch'an·gel'ic (-än-jəl'īk) adj.

Arch·an·gel (ärk'ān'jəl) See Arkhangelsk.

arch·bish·op (ärch-bīsh'əp) n. Abbr. abp., Abp., Arch., Archbp. A bishop of the highest rank, heading an archdiocese or a province. [Middle English archebishop, from Old English arcebisceop, from Late Latin archiepiscopus, from Late Greek arkhiepiskopos: Greek arkhi-, archi- + episkopos, bishop; see BISHOP.]

arch·bish·op·ric (ärch-bīsh'əp-rīk) n. 1. The rank, office, or term of an archbishop. 2. The area under an archbishop's jurisdiction; an archdiocese.

Archbp. abbr. Archbishop.

arch·con·ser·va·tive (ärch'kən-sūr'və-tīv) adj. Highly conservative, especially in political viewpoint. —arch'con·ser'va·tive n.

arch·dea·con (ärch-dē'kən) n. A church official, as in the Anglican Church, who is in charge of temporal and other affairs in a diocese, with powers delegated from the bishop. [Middle English archedeken, from Old English arcediakon, from Late Latin archidiāconus, from Late Greek arkhidiakonos: Greek arkhi-, archi- + diakonos, deacon.] —arch·dea'con·ate (-kə-nīt) n. —arch·dea'con·ship' n.

arch·dea·con·ry (ärch-dē'kən-rē) n. pl. arch·dea·con·ries. 1. The rank or office of an archdeacon. 2. The district or residence of an archdeacon.

arch·di·o·cese (ärch-dī'ə-sīs, -sēs', -sēz') n. The district under an archbishop's jurisdiction. —arch'di·oc'e·san (-ös'ī-sən) adj.

arch·du·cal (ärch-dōō'kəl, -dyōō'-) adj. Of or having to do with an archduke or an archduchy. [French archiducal, from archiduc, archduke. See ARCHDUKE.]

arch·duch·ess (ärch-düch'īs) n. 1. The wife or widow of an archduke. 2. A woman, especially an Austrian princess, holding an archduchy in her own right. 3. Used as a title for such a noblewoman. [French archiduchesse, feminine of archiduc, archduke. See ARCHDUKE.]

arch-duck-y (ärch-düch'ē) n. pl. arch-duck-ies. The territory over which an archduke or an archduchess has authority. [French archiduché, from obsolete French archeduché: arche-, arch- + duché, duchy; see DUCHY.]

arch-duke (ärch-dōök', -dyōök') n. 1. In certain royal families, especially that of imperial Austria, a nobleman having a rank equivalent to that of a sovereign prince. 2. Used as a title for such a nobleman. [Obsolete French archeduc: arche-, arch- + duc, duke; see DUKE.]

Ar-che-an also Ar-chaе-an (är-kē'ən) adj. Of or relating to the oldest known rocks, those of the Precambrian era, that are predominantly igneous in composition. [From Greek arkhaios, ancient. See ARCHAIC.]

arched (ärcht) adj. 1. Forming an arch or a curve like that of an arch.

2. Provided, made, or covered with an arch.

ar-che-go-ni-um (är'kī-gō'nē-əm) n. pl. ar-che-go-ni-a (-nē-ə). A multicellular, often flask-shaped, egg-producing organ occurring in mosses, ferns, and most gymnosperms. [New Latin, from Greek arkhegonos, original: arkhe-, arkhi-, archi- + gonos, offspring; see genə- in Appendix.] — ar'che-go'ni-al adj. — ar'che-go'ni-ate (-īt) adj.

arch-en-ceph-a-lon (är'kēn-sēf'ə-lōn') n. The part of the primitive embryonic brain from which the forebrain and midbrain develop.

arch-en-e-my (ärch-ēn'ə-mē) n. 1. A principal enemy. 2. Often Archenemy. Theology. The Devil; Satan. Used with the.

ar-chen-ter-on (är-kēn'tə-rōn', -tər-ən) n. The central cavity of the gastrula, which ultimately becomes the intestinal or digestive cavity. — ar'chen-ter'ic (är'kēn-tēr'ik) adj.

archeo- pref. Variant of archaeo-.

ar-che-ol-o-gy (är'kē-ōl'ə-jē) n. Variant of archaeology.

Ar-che-o-zo-ic also Ar-chaе-o-zo-ic (är'kē-ə-zō'ik) adj. Of, belonging to, or designating the earlier of two divisions of the Precambrian era. — n. The Archeozoic era.

arch-er (är'chər) n. One that shoots with a bow and arrow. [Middle English, from Old French archier, from Late Latin arcārius, alteration of arcuārius, maker of bows, from Latin arcus, bow.]

Arch-er (är'chər) n. See Sagittarius.

Ar-cher (är'chər), William. 1856-1924. British critic, dramatist, and translator whose best-known play is The Green Goddess (1921).

arch-er-fish (är'chər-fish') n. pl. archerfish or arch-er-fish-es. Any of various freshwater fishes of the family Toxotidae that spit drops of water at insects and prey on those knocked to the surface of the water.

arch-er-y (är'chə-rē) n. 1. Abbr. arch. The art, sport, or skill of shooting with a bow and arrow. 2. The equipment of an archer. 3. A group of archers.

ar-che-type (är'kī-tīp') n. 1. An original model or type after which other similar things are patterned; a prototype: “Frankenstein’... ‘Dracula’... ‘Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde’... the archetypes that have influenced all subsequent horror stories” (New York Times). 2. An ideal example of a type; quintessence: an archetype of the successful entrepreneur. [Latin archetypum, from Greek arkhetupon, from neuter of arkhetupos, original : arkhe-, arkhi-, archi- + tupos, model, stamp.]

—ar'che-typ'al (-tī'pəl), ar'che-typ'ic (-tīp'ik) , ar'che-typ'i-cal adj.

—ar'che-typ'i-cal-ly adv.

arch-fiend (ärch-fēnd') n. 1. A principal fiend. 2. Archfiend. Theology. The Devil; Satan. Used with the.

archi- or arch- pref. 1. Chief; highest; most important: archiepiscopal.

2. Earlier; primitive: archenteron. [French archi-, and Italian arci- both from Latin archi-, from Greek arkhi-, arkh-, from arkhein, to begin, rule.]

ar-chi-di-ac-o-nal (är'kī-dī-äk'ə-nəl) adj. Of or having to do with an archdeacon or an archdeacon's office. [Middle English, from Late Latin archidiāconus, archdeacon. See ARCHDEACON.]

ar-chi-di-ac-o-nate (är'kī-dī-äk'ə-nīt) n. The office or position of an archdeacon. [Medieval Latin archidiāconātus, from Late Latin archidiāconus, archdeacon. See ARCHDEACON.]

ar-chi-e-pis-co-pal (är'kē-ī-pīs'kə-pəl) adj. Of or having to do with an archbishop or an archbishopric. [Medieval Latin archiepiscopeālis, from Late Latin archiepisopus, archbishop. See ARCHBISHOP.] —ar'chi-e-pis'co-pal'i-ty (-pāl'ī-tē) n. —ar'chi-e-pis'co-pal-ly adv. —ar'chi-e-pis'co-pate n.

ar-chil (är'kīl, -chīl) n. Variant of orchil.

ar-chi-man-drite (är'kə-män'drīt') n. Eastern Orthodox Church. 1. A cleric ranking below a bishop. 2. The head of a monastery or a group of monasteries. [Late Latin archimandrīta, from Late Greek arkhimandritēs : Greek arkhi-, archi- + mandra, monastery (from Greek, cattle pen).]

Archimedean screw (är'kə-mē'dē-ən skrōō) n. An ancient apparatus for raising water, consisting of either a spiral tube around an inclined axis or an inclined tube containing a tight-fitting, broad-threaded screw. Also called Archimedes' screw Ar-chi-me-des (är'kə-mē'dēz), 287?-212 B.C. Greek mathematician, engineer, and physicist. Among the most important intellectual figures of antiquity, he discovered formulas for the area and volume of various geometric figures, applied geometry to hydrostatics and mechanics, devised numerous ingenious mechanisms, such as the Archimedean screw, and discovered the principle of buoyancy.

—Ar'chi-me'de-an (-mē'dē-ən, -mī-dē'-) adj.

Ar-chi-me-des' screw (är'kə-mē'dēz skrōō) n. See Archimedean screw.

ar·chine also ar·shin (är-shēn') n. A unit of length formerly used in Russia and Turkey, equal to about 71 centimeters (28 inches). [Russian arshin, from Tatar arshyn, an ell; akin to Turkish arşin, of Persian origin.]

ar·chi·pel·a·go (är'kə-pěl'ə-gō') n. pl. ar·chi·pel·a·goes or ar·chi·pel·a·gos. 1. Abbr. arch. A large group of islands: the Philippine archipelago. 2. A sea, such as the Aegean, containing a large number of scattered islands.

[Italian Arcipelago, the Aegean Sea : arci- (from Greek arkhi-, archi-) + Italian pelago, sea (from Latin pelagus, from Greek pelagos, sea); see plāk-¹ in Appendix.] —ar'chi·pe·lag'ic (-pə-lāj'ik) adj.

Ar·chi·pen·ko (är'kə-pěng'kō), Alexander Porfirievich. 1887-1964. Russian-born American sculptor noted for his cubist and purely abstract works, such as Dual (1955).

archit. abbr. Architecture.

ar·chi·tect (är'kī-těkt') n. 1. Abbr. arch., archt. One who designs and supervises the construction of buildings or other large structures. 2. One that plans or devises: a country considered to be the chief architect of war in the Middle East.

[Latin architectus, from Greek arkhitektōn : arkhi-, archi- + tektōn, builder; see teks- in Appendix.]

ar·chi·tec·ton·ic (är'kī-těk-tōn'ik) also ar·chi·tec·ton·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj.

1. Of or relating to architecture or design. 2. Having qualities, such as design and structure, that are characteristic of architecture: a work of art forming an architectonic whole. 3. Philosophy. Of or relating to the scientific systematization of knowledge. [Latin architectonicus, architectural, from Greek arkhitektonikos, from arkhitektōn, architect. See ARCHITECT.] —ar'chi·tec·ton'i·cal·ly adv.

ar·chi·tec·ton·ics (är'kī-těk-tōn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. The science of architecture. 2. Structural design: the architectonics of an elaborate fugue.

3. Philosophy. The scientific systematization of knowledge.

ar·chi·tec·ture (är'kī-těk'chər) n. Abbr. archit., arch. 1. The art and science of designing and erecting buildings. 2. Buildings and other large structures: the low, brick-and-adobe architecture of the Southwest. 3. A style and method of design and construction: Byzantine architecture. 4. Orderly arrangement of parts; structure: the architecture of the federal bureaucracy; the broad architecture of a massive novel; computer architecture.

[Latin architectūra, from architectus, architect. See ARCHITECT.] —ar'chi·tec'tur·al adj. —ar'chi·tec'tur·al·ly adv.

ar·chi·trave (är'kī-trāv') n. 1. The lowermost part of an entablature in classical architecture that rests directly on top of a column. Also called epistyle 2. The molding around a door or window. [French, from Old French, from Old Italian : archi-, archi- + trave, beam (from Latin trabs, trab-); see treb- in Appendix.]

ar·chi·val (är-kī'vəl) adj. Of, relating to, kept in, or suitable for archives: "An archival material should have a neutral or slightly alkaline pH; it should also... have good aging properties" (Artist's Magazine).

ar·chive (är'kīv') n. 1. Often archives. A place or collection containing records, documents, or other materials of historical interest: old land deeds in the municipal archives; the studio archives, a vast repository of silent-film prints and outtakes. 2. A repository for stored memories or information: the archive of the mind. [From French archives, from Latin archīva, from Greek arkheia, pl. of arkheion, town hall, from arkhē, government, from arkhein, to rule.] —ar'chive' v.

ar·chi·vist (är'kə-vīst, -kī'-) n. One who is in charge of archives.

ar·chi·volt (är'kə-vōlt') n. Architecture. A decorative molding carried around an arched wall opening. [French archivolte, or Italian archivolto (French, from Italian) arco, arch (from Latin arcus) + volta, vault (from Latin volūta); see VAULT¹.]

arch·lib·er·al (ärch'lib'ər-əl, -lib'rəl) adj. Highly liberal, especially in political viewpoint. —arch'lib'er-al n.

ar·chon (är'kōn', -kən) n. 1. A high official; a ruler. 2. One of the nine principal magistrates of ancient Athens. 3. An authoritative figure; a leader: archons of cultural modernism. [Latin archōn, from Greek arkhōn, from present participle of arkhein, to rule.] —ar'chon-ship' n.

arch·priest (ärch'prēst') n. Roman Catholic Church. 1. a. Used formerly as a title for a priest holding first rank among the members of a cathedral chapter, acting as chief assistant to a bishop. b. An honorific title applied to a priest, which may be accompanied by a specific function. 2. Eastern Orthodox Church. The highest rank a married priest can hold. [Middle English archeprest, from Old French archeprestre, from Late Latin archipresbyter, from Late Greek arkhipresbuteros: Greek arkhi-, archi- + presbuteros, priest; see PRESBYTER.] arch·ri·val (ärch'rī'vəl) n. A principal rival.

archit. abbr. Architect.

arch·way (ärch'wā') n. 1. A passageway under an arch. 2. An arch over an entrance or passageway.

-archy suff. Rule; government: oligarchy. [From words such as (MON)ARCHY.]

ar·ci·form (är'sə-fōrm') adj. Formed in the shape of an arc. [Latin arci- (from arcus, bow) + -FORM.]

arc·jet engine (ärk'jēt' ěn'jĭn) n. A rocket engine that operates by heating the propellant gas with an electric arc.

arcked (ärkt) v. A past tense and a past participle of arc.

arck·ing (är'kĭng) v. A present participle of arc.

arc lamp (ärk lämp) n. An electric light in which a current traverses a gas between two incandescent electrodes and generates an arc that produces light. Also called arc light arc secant (ärk sē'kănt') n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the secant of an angle.

arc sine (ärk sīn) n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the sine of an angle.

arc tangent (ärk täñ'jənt) n. Mathematics. The inverse function of the tangent of an angle.

arc-tic (ärk'tik, är'tik) adj. Extremely cold; frigid. See Synonyms at cold. — n. A warm, waterproof overshoe. [Alteration (influenced by Latin arcticus), of Middle English artic, northern, from Medieval Latin articus, from Latin arcticus, from Greek arktikos, from arktos, bear, the northern constellation Ursa Major. See rtko- in Appendix.]

Arc-tic (ärk'tik, är'tik) A region between the North Pole and the northern timberlines of North America and Eurasia. —Arc'tic adj.

Arctic Archipelago (ärk'tik är'kə-pěl'ə-gō') A group of more than 50 large islands of Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Ocean between North America and Greenland.

arctic char (ärk'tik chär) n. A char (Salvelinus alpinus) native to the fresh waters of Alaska and northern Canada.

Arctic Circle (ärk'tik sūr'kəl) The parallel of latitude approximately 66°33' north. It forms the boundary between the North Temperate and North Frigid zones.

arctic fox (ärk'tik fōks) n. A fox (Alopex lagopus) of Arctic regions, having fur that is white or light gray in winter and brown or blue-gray in summer.

Arctic Ocean (ärk'tik ō'shən) The waters surrounding the North Pole between North America and Eurasia. The smallest ocean in the world, it is covered by pack ice throughout the year.

Arctic Red River (ärk'tik rēd rīv'ər) A river rising in the Mackenzie Mountains of western Northwest Territories, Canada, and flowing about 499 km (310 mi) generally north-northwest to the Mackenzie River.

arctic tern (ärk'tik tûrn) n. A tern (Sterna paradisaea) that is noted for its extremely long migrations, typically from the Arctic to the Antarctic and back each year.

Arc-tu-rus (ärk-tōōr'əs, -tyōōr'-) n. The fourth brightest star in the sky and the brightest star in the constellation Boötes, approximately 36 light-years from Earth. [Middle English, from Latin Arctūrus, from Greek Arktouros : arktos, bear; see rtko- in Appendix + ouros, guard, from its position behind Ursa Major; see wer-³ in Appendix.]

ar-cu-ate (är'kyōō-īt, -āt') also ar-cu-at-ed (-ā'tid) adj. Having the form of a bow; curved. [Latin arcuātus, past participle of arcuāre, to bend like a bow, from arcus, bow.] —ar'cu-ate-ly adv.

arcuate nucleus (är'kyōō-īt nōō'klē-əs) n. Any of various specialized groups of nerve cells in the medulla oblongata, thalamus, or hypothalamus of the brain.

ar-cu-a-tion (är'kyōō-ā'shən) n. 1. The process of curving or the condition of being curved. 2. The use of arches or vaults in building.

-ard or -art suff. One that habitually or excessively is in a specified condition or performs a specified action: drunkard. [Middle English, from Old French, of Germanic origin. See kar- in Appendix.]

Ar-da-bil (är'də-bēl') See Ardebil.

ar-deb (är'dēb') n. A unit of dry measure in several countries of the Middle East, standardized in Egypt to equal 198 liters (5.62 U.S. bushels) but varying widely elsewhere. [Arabic dialectal 'ardabb, from Aramaic 'rdb, or from Coptic artab or from Greek artabē all probably of Old Persian origin.]

Ar-de-bil also Ar-da-bil (är'də-bēl') A town of northwest Iran near the Azerbaijan border and the Caspian Sea. It was probably founded in the fifth century A.D. Population, 222,000.

Ar-den (är'dn) An unincorporated city of north-central California, a residential suburb of Sacramento. Population, 49,130.

Ar-den (är'dn), Elizabeth. 1884?-1966. Canadian-born American businesswoman whose original beauty salon, founded in 1910, grew into an international cosmetics corporation.

Arden, Forest of. A wooded area, formerly very extensive, of central England west of Stratford-upon-Avon. It provided the setting for Shakespeare's As You Like It.

Ar-dennes (är-dēn') A plateau region of northern France, southeast Belgium, and northern Luxembourg east and south of the Meuse River. It was the scene of heavy fighting in World War I and World War II, notably during the Battle of the Bulge in December 1944 and January 1945.

ar-dent (är'dnt) adj. 1. Expressing or characterized by warmth of feeling; passionate: an ardent lover. 2. Displaying or characterized by strong enthusiasm or devotion; fervent: "an impassioned age, so ardent and serious in its pursuit of art" (Walter Pater). 3. a. Burning; fiery. b. Glowing; shining: ardent eyes. [Middle English ardaunt, from Old French ardant, from Latin ārdēns, ārdent- present participle of ārdēre, to burn. See as- in Appendix.] —ar'den-cy (-dn-sē) n. —ar'dent-ly adv.

ardent spirits (är'dnt spīr'its) pl.n. Strong alcoholic liquors, such as whiskey or gin.

Ard-more (ärd'môr, -mōr) A city of southern Oklahoma near the Texas border south-southeast of Oklahoma City. It is a commercial and industrial center. Population, 23,079.

ar-dor (är'dər) n. 1. Fiery intensity of feeling. See Synonyms at passion. 2. Strong enthusiasm or devotion; zeal: "The dazzling conquest of Mexico gave a new impulse to the ardor of discovery" (William Hickling Prescott). 3. Intense heat or glow, as of fire. [Middle English ardour, from Old French, from Latin ārdor, from ārdēre, to burn. See as- in Appendix.]

ar-dour (är'dər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of ardor.

ar-du-ous (är'jōō-əs) adj. 1. Demanding great effort or labor; difficult: “the arduous work of preparing a Dictionary of the English Language” (Macaulay). 2. Testing severely the powers of endurance; strenuous: a long, arduous, and exhausting war. 3. Hard to traverse, climb, or surmount. See Synonyms at burdensome. See Synonyms at hard. [From Latin arduus, high, steep.]
—ar'du-ous-ly adv. —ar'du-ous-ness n.

are¹ (är) v. Second person singular and plural and first and third person plural present indicative of be. [Middle English aren, from Old English aron. See er⁻¹ in Appendix.]

are² (âr, är) also ar (är) n. Abbr. a, A. A metric unit of area equal to 100 square meters (119.6 square yards). [French, from Latin ārea, open space. See AREA.]

ar·e·a (âr'ē-ə) n. Abbr. A, A., a. 1. A roughly bounded part of the space on a surface; a region: a farming area; the New York area. 2. A surface, especially an open, unoccupied piece of ground: a landing area; a playing area. 3. A distinct part or section, as of a building, set aside for a specific function: a storage area in the basement. 4. A division of experience, activity, or knowledge; a field: studies in the area of finance; a job in the health-care area. 5. An open, sunken space next to a building; an areaway. 6. Abbr. A The extent of a planar region or of the surface of a solid measured in square units. 7. Computer Science. A section of storage set aside for a particular purpose. [Latin ārea, open space possibly akin to ārēre, to be dry. See ARID.]

SYNONYMS: area, region, belt, zone, district, locality. These nouns all denote extents of space, especially on a surface, that can be differentiated from others by particular qualities or characteristics. Area and region are the most inclusive: a dialect spoken over a large area; a blighted urban area; a recreation area; tropical regions of South America; polar regions; pain in the abdominal region. A belt is a tract, frequently but not always longer than it is wide, that is distinguished from others in a single stated respect: the Corn Belt; a snow belt. A zone may be an area that encircles, as on a map (the Torrid Zone); it may also be an area with strictly defined, often arbitrarily set boundaries (a residential zone; a demilitarized zone; a nuclear-free zone). If the area is a subdivision for administrative purposes, it is called a district: a congressional district. District can also refer to a less specific area with respect to such features as its use: the financial district. A locality is an area with vague or undefined limits: The turnout of voters was low in many localities.

Ar·e·a Code (âr'ē-ə kōd) also area code n. A number, often with three digits, assigned to a telephone area, as in the United States and Canada, and used when placing a call to that area.

area rug (âr'ē-ə rŭg) n. A rug that covers a limited area of floor space in a room.

ar·e·a·way (âr'ē-ə-wā') n. 1. A small, sunken area allowing access or light and air to basement doors or windows. 2. An often narrow passageway between buildings.

a·re·ca (ə-rē'kə, ăr'ī-kə) n. Any of certain tropical Old World palms, such as those in the genera Areca and Chrysalidocarpus. [Portuguese, from Malayalam aṭekka, areca nut, from Tamil āṭaikkāy.]

areca nut (ə-rē'kə nüt) n. See betel nut.

A·re·ci·bo (ä'rə-sē'bō) A city of northern Puerto Rico on the Atlantic Ocean. It is a commercial and industrial center. Population, 48,779.

a·re·na (ə-rē'nə) n. 1. A large modern building for the presentation of sports events and spectacles. 2. A place or scene where forces contend or events unfold: withdrew from the political arena; the world as an arena of moral conflict. 3. The area in the center of an ancient Roman amphitheater where contests and other spectacles were held. [Latin harēna, arēna, sand, a sand-strewn place of combat in an amphitheater, perhaps of Etruscan origin.]

WORD HISTORY: Fans watching contact sports such as boxing, hockey, or football in modern arenas might be struck by the connection between the word arena and the notion of gladiatorial combat. This word is from Latin harēna (also spelled arēna), “sand.” Harēna then came to mean the part of a Roman amphitheater that was covered with sand to absorb the blood spilled by the combatants. Arena is first recorded in English during the 17th century, denoting this area of a Roman amphitheater.

ar·e·na·ceous (är'ə-nā'shəs) adj. 1. Resembling, derived from, or containing sand. 2. Growing in sandy areas. [From Latin harēnāceus, arēnāceus: harēna, arēna, sand; see ARENA + -āceus, -aceous.]

arena theater (ə-rē'nə thē'ə-tər) n. A theater without a proscenium, in which the stage is at the center of the auditorium and is surrounded by seats. Also called theater-in-the-round

A·rendt (âr'ənt, ăr'-), Hannah. 1906-1975. German-born American historian whose major published works include The Origins of Totalitarianism (1951) and On Revolution (1963).

ar·e·nic·o·lous (är'ə-nīk'ə-ləs) adj. Growing, living, or burrowing in sand: arenicolous worms. [Latin harēna, arēna, sand; see ARENA + -COLOUS.] aren't (ärnt, ăr'ənt) Are not. See Usage Note at ain't.

a·re·o·la (ə-rē'ə-lə) also ar·e·ole (âr'ē-ōl') n. pl. a·re·o·lae (-lē') or a·re·o·las also ar·e·oles (-ōlz'). 1. areole. a. Biology. A small space or interstice in a tissue or part, such as the area bounded by small veins in a leaf or the wing of an insect. b. A small, specialized, cushionlike area on a cactus from which hairs, glochids, spines, branches, or flowers may arise. 2. Anatomy. A small ring of color around a center portion, as about the nipple of the breast or the part of the iris surrounding the pupil of the eye. [Latin āreola, small open space, diminutive of ārea, open place. See AREA.] —a-re'o-lar, a-re'o-late (-līt) adj. —a-re'o-la'tion n.

Ar-e-op-a-gite (är'ē-öp'ə-jīt', -gīt') n. A member of the council of the Areopagus. —Ar'e-op-a-git'ic (-jīt'ik, gīt'-) adj.

Ar-e-op-a-gus (är'ē-öp'ə-gəs) n. The highest judicial and legislative council of ancient Athens. [Latin, from Greek Areios pagos, Areopagus, hill of Ares (where the tribunal met) : Areios, of Ares (from Arēs, Ares) + pagos, stiff mass, hill (from pēgnunai, pag-, to stick, stiffen); see pag- in Appendix.]

A-re-qui-pa (är'ə-kē'pə, ä'rě-kē'pä) A city of southern Peru at the foot of El Misti. Founded in 1540 on the site of an Incan village, it is the commercial center of southern Peru and northern Bolivia. Population, 108,023.

Ar-es (âr'ēz) n. Greek Mythology. The god of war.

a-rête (ə-rāt') n. A sharp, narrow mountain ridge or spur. [French, from Old French areste, fishbone, spine, from Late Latin arista, awn, fishbone, from Latin, awn.]

ar-e-thu-sa (är'ə-thōō-zə, -sə) n. See swamp pink. [From ARETHUSA.]

Ar-e-thu-sa (är'ə-thōō-zə, -sə) n. Greek Mythology. A wood nymph who was changed into a fountain by Artemis. [Latin, from Greek Arethousa.]

A-re-ti-no (är'ə-tē'nō, är'-), Pietro. 1492-1556. Italian writer and satirist best known for his literary attacks on his wealthy and powerful contemporaries and for six volumes of letters.

A-rez-zo (ä-rēt'sō) A city of central Italy on the Arno River southeast of Florence. It was originally an Etruscan settlement and later a Roman military station and colony. Population, 91,535.

arg. abbr. Heraldry. Argent.

Arg. abbr. 1. Argentina. 2. Argentine.

ar-gal (är'gəl) n. Variant of argol.

ar-ga-li (är'gə-lē) n. pl. argali or ar-ga-lis. A large wild sheep (Ovis ammon) of the mountains of central and northern Asia, having large, spirally curved horns. [Mongolian, mountain ewe.]

Ar-gall (är'gôl, -gəl), Sir Samuel. 1572?-1626. English colonial administrator who was deputy governor of the Virginia colony (1617-1619).

ar-gent (är'jənt) n. 1. Abbr. arg. Heraldry. The metal silver, represented by the color white. 2. Archaic. Silver or something resembling it. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin argentum, silver. See arg- in Appendix.]

Ar-gen-teuil (är-zhän-tœ'yə) A city of northern France, a residential and industrial suburb of Paris on the Seine River. It grew around a convent founded by Charlemagne in the seventh century. Population, 95,347.

ar-gen-tic (är-jěn'tik) adj. Of or containing silver.

ar-gen-tif-er-ous (är'jən-tif'ər-əs) adj. Bearing or producing silver.

Ar·gen·ti·na (är'jən-tē'nə) Abbr. Arg. A country of southeast South America stretching about 3,701 km (2,300 mi) from its border with Bolivia to southern Tierra del Fuego, an island it shares with Chile. Argentina is one of the most highly developed Latin American countries, with an economy based both on agriculture and on diversified industry. It proclaimed its independence from Spain in 1816. Buenos Aires is the capital and the largest city. Population, 27,947,446.

—Ar'gen·tine' (-tēn', -tīn'), Ar'gen·tin'e·an (-tīn'ē-ən) adj. & n.

ar·gen·tine (är'jən-tīn', -tēn') adj. Relating to or resembling silver; silvery.

— n. 1. Silver. 2. Any of various silvery metals. [Middle English, from Old French argentín, from Latin argentīnus, from argentum, silver. See arg- in Appendix.]

ar·gen·tite (är'jən-tīt') n. A valuable silver ore, Ag_2S , with a lead-gray color and metallic luster that is often tarnished a dull black.

ar·gil (är'jīl) n. Clay, especially a white clay used by potters. [Middle English argilla, from Latin, from Greek argillos. See arg- in Appendix.]

ar·gil·la·ceous (är'jə-lā'shəs) adj. Containing, made of, or resembling clay; clayey. [From Latin argillāceus: argilla, argil; see ARGIL + -āceus, -aceous.]

ar·gil·lite (är'jə-līt') n. A metamorphic rock, intermediate between shale and slate, that does not possess true slaty cleavage. [Latin argilla, argil; see ARGIL + *-ITE*¹.]

ar·gi·nase (är'jə-nās', -nāz) n. An enzyme found primarily in the liver that catalyzes the hydrolysis of arginine to form urea and ornithine. [From German Arginin, arginine. See ARGININE.]

ar·gi·nine (är'jə-nēn') n. An amino acid, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{14}\text{N}_4\text{O}_2$, obtained from the hydrolysis or digestion of plant and animal protein. [German Arginin, possibly from Greek arginoeis, bright. See arg- in Appendix.]

Ar·give (är'jīv', -gīv') adj. 1. Of or relating to Argos or the ancient region of Argolis. 2. Of or relating to Greece or the Greeks. — n. A Greek, especially an inhabitant of Argos or Argolis. [Latin Argīvus, from Greek Argeios, from Argos.]

Ar·go (är'gō') n. 1. Greek Mythology. The ship in which Jason sailed in search of the Golden Fleece. 2. Formerly, a constellation in the Southern Hemisphere, lying between Canis Major and the Southern Cross, now divided into four smaller constellations, Carina, Puppis, Pyxis, and Vela. [Latin Argō, from Greek.]

ar·gol (är'gôl') also ar·gal (-gəl) n. Crude potassium bitartrate, a by-product of winemaking. [Middle English argoile, from Anglo-Norman argoil, ultimately from Latin argilla, clay. See ARGIL.]

Ar·go·lis (är'gə-līs) An ancient region of southern Greece in the northeast Peloponnesus, dominated by the city of Argos.

Argolis, Gulf of. An inlet of the Aegean Sea on the eastern coast of the Peloponnesus in southern Greece.

ar-gon (är'gön') n. Symbol Ar A colorless, odorless, inert gaseous element constituting approximately one percent of Earth's atmosphere, from which it is commercially obtained by fractionation for use in electric light bulbs, fluorescent tubes, and radio vacuum tubes and as an inert gas shield in arc welding. Atomic number 18; atomic weight 39.94; melting point -189.2°C ; boiling point -185.7°C . [Greek, neuter of argos, idle, inert : a-, without; see A^{-1} + ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix.]

ar-go-naut (är'gə-nôt') n. See paper nautilus. [Latin, Argonaut. See ARGONAUT.]

Ar-go-naut (är'gə-nôt') n. 1. Greek Mythology. One who sailed with Jason on the Argo in search of the Golden Fleece. 2. Also argonaut. A person who is engaged in a dangerous but rewarding quest; an adventurer. [Latin Argonauta, from Greek Argonautēs : Argō, the ship Argo + nautēs, sailor (from naus, ship); see nāu- in Appendix.]

Ar-gonne (är-gön', är'gön) A wooded and hilly region of northeast France between the Meuse and Aisne rivers. The area was a major battleground during World War I.

Ar-gos (är'gös, -gəs) A city of ancient Greece in the northeast Peloponnesus near the head of the Gulf of Argolis. Inhabited from the early Bronze Age, it was one of the most powerful cities of ancient Greece until the rise of Sparta.

ar-go-sy (är'gə-sē) n. pl. ar-go-sies. 1. Nautical. a. A large merchant ship. b. A fleet of ships. 2. A rich source or supply: an argosy of adventure lore. [Alteration of obsolete ragusye, from Italian ragusea, vessel of Ragusa (Dubrovnik).]

ar-got (är'gō, -gət) n. A specialized vocabulary or set of idioms used by a particular group: thieves' argot. See Synonyms at dialect. [French.]

ar-gu-a-ble (är'gyō-ə-bəl) adj. 1. Open to argument: an arguable question, still unresolved. 2. That can be argued plausibly; defensible in argument: three arguable points of law. —ar'gu-a-bly adv.

ar-gue (är'gyō) v. argued, ar-gu-ing, ar-gues. — v. tr. 1. To put forth reasons for or against; debate: "It is time to stop arguing tax-rate reductions and to enact them" (Paul Craig Roberts). 2. To attempt to prove by reasoning; maintain or contend: The speaker argued that more immigrants should be admitted to the country. 3. To give evidence of; indicate: "Similarities cannot always be used to argue descent" (Isaac Asimov). 4. To persuade or influence (another), as by presenting reasons: argued the clerk into lowering the price. — v. intr. 1. To put forth reasons for or against something: argued for dismissal of the case; argued against an immediate counterattack. 2. To engage in a quarrel; dispute. [Middle English arguen, from Old French arguer, from Latin argūtāre, to babble, chatter, frequentative of arguere, to make clear. See arg- in Appendix.] —ar'gu-er n.

SYNONYMS: argue, quarrel, wrangle, squabble, bicker. These verbs denote verbal exchange expressing conflict of positions or opinions. To argue is to present reasons or facts in an attempt to persuade an adversary in debate or to induce another to espouse a cause or point of view one advocates: “I am not arguing with you—I am telling you” (James McNeill Whistler). Quarrel stresses animosity and often a suspension of amicable relations: There’s no point in quarreling about the past. Wrangle refers to loud, contentious argument: “audiences... who can be overheard wrangling about film facts in restaurants and coffee houses” (Sheila Benson). Squabble suggests disagreeable argument, usually over a petty or trivial matter: “The one absolutely certain way of bringing this nation to ruin... would be to permit it to become a tangle of squabbling nationalities” (Theodore Roosevelt). Bicker connotes sharp, persistent, bad-tempered exchange: “The same reason that makes us bicker with a neighbor creates a war between princes” (Montaigne). See also Synonyms at discuss indicate ar·gu·fy (är'gyə-fī') v. ar·gu·fied, ar·gu·fy·ing, ar·gu·fies. Chiefly Southern U.S. — v. tr. To dispute (a point). — v. intr. To argue aimlessly; wrangle. See Regional note at absquatulate. — ar'gu·fi'er n.

ar·gu·ment (är'gyə-mənt) n. 1. a. A discussion in which disagreement is expressed; a debate. b. A quarrel; a dispute. c. Archaic. A reason or matter for dispute or contention: “sheath'd their swords for lack of argument” (Shakespeare). 2. a. A course of reasoning aimed at demonstrating truth or falsehood: presented a careful argument for extraterrestrial life. b. A fact or statement put forth as proof or evidence; a reason: The current low mortgage rates are an argument for buying a house now. 3. a. A summary or short statement of the plot or subject of a literary work. b. A topic; a subject: “You and love are still my argument” (Shakespeare). 4. Logic. The minor premise in a syllogism. 5. Mathematics. a. The independent variable of a function. b. The amplitude of a complex number. 6. Computer Science. A value used to evaluate a procedure or subroutine. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin argūmentum, from arguere, to make clear. See ARGUE.]

SYNONYMS: argument, dispute, controversy. These nouns denote discussion involving conflicting points of view. Argument stresses the advancement by each side of facts and reasons buttressing its contention and intended to persuade the other side: Emotions are seldom swayed by argument. Dispute stresses division of opinion by its implication of contradictory points of view and often implies animosity: A dispute arose among union members about the terms of the new contract. Controversy is especially applicable to major differences of opinion involving large groups of people rather than individuals: The use of nuclear power is the subject of widespread controversy.

ar·gu·men·ta (är'gyə-mĕn'tə) n. Plural of argumentum.

ar·gu·men·ta·tion (är'gyə-mĕn-tā'shən) n. 1. The presentation and elaboration of an argument or arguments. 2. Deductive reasoning in debate. 3. A debate.

ar·gu·men·ta·tive (är'gyə-mĕn'tə-tiv) adj. 1. Given to arguing; disputatious. 2. Of or characterized by argument: an argumentative discourse.
—ar'gu·men'ta·tive·ly adv. —ar'gu·men'ta·tive·ness n.

SYNONYMS: argumentative, combative, contentious, disputatious, quarrelsome, scrappy. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “given to or fond of arguing”: an intelligent but argumentative child; combative impulses; a contentious mood; a disputatious lawyer; is quarrelsome when drinking; a scrappy litigator.

ar·gu·men·tum (är'gyə-mĕn'təm) n. pl. ar·gu·men·ta (-tə). Logic. An argument, demonstration, or appeal to reason. [Latin. See ARGUMENT.]

Ar·gun River (är-gōon'riv'ər) also Er·gun He (ĕr'gōon'hĕ', ĕr'gün'hə') A river of east-central Asia rising in northeast China and flowing about 1,529 km (950 mi) west then generally northeast along the Russia-China border.

Ar·gus (är'gəs) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A giant with 100 eyes who was made guardian of Io and was later slain by Hermes. 2. An alert or watchful person; a guardian. [Latin, from Greek Argos.]

Ar·gus·eyed (är'gəs-īd') adj. Extremely observant; vigilant.

ar·gus pheasant (är'gəs fĕz'ənt) n. A large bird (Argusianus argus) of southern Asia and the East Indies, having long tail feathers marked with brilliantly colored, eyelike spots. [After ARGUS, whose hundred eyes were given to a peacock's tail.]

ar·gy·bar·gy (är'gē-bär'gē) n. pl. ar·gy·bar·gies. Chiefly British. A lively or disputatious discussion. [Scots, reduplication of argie, argument, from ARGUE.]

ar·gyle also ar·gyll (är'gīl') n. 1. A knitting pattern of varicolored, diamond-shaped areas on a solid background. 2. A sock knit in this pattern. [After Clan Campbell of Argyle, Argyll, a former county of western Scotland, originally from the pattern of their tartan.]

Ar·gy·rol (är'jə-rōl', -rōl', -rōl') A trademark used for a silver-protein compound employed as a local antiseptic.

ar·hat (är'hət) n. Buddhism. One who has attained enlightenment. [Sanskrit, from present participle of arhati, he deserves.] —ar'hat·ship' n.

År·hus also Aar·hus (ôr'hōos') A city of central Denmark, a commercial and industrial center on Århus Bay, an arm of the Kattegat. First mentioned in the mid-tenth century, Århus is one of the country's oldest cities. Population, 250,404.

a·ri·a (är'ē-ə) n. Music. 1. A solo vocal piece with instrumental accompaniment, as in an opera. 2. An air; a melody. [Italian, from Latin āera, accusative of āēr, air, from Greek aēr. See wer¹ in Appendix.]

Ar·i·ad·ne (är'ē-äd'nē) n. Greek Mythology. The daughter of Minos and Pasiphaë who gave Theseus the thread with which he found his way out of the Minotaur's labyrinth.

Ar·i·an¹ (âr'ē-ən, är'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to Arianism: the Arian heresy. 2. Of or relating to Arius. — n. A believer in Arianism.

Ar·i·an² (är'ē-ən, âr'-) n. One who is born under the sign of Aries. — Ar'·i·an adj.

-arian suff. Believer in; advocate of: utilitarian. [Latin -ārius, -ary + *-AN*¹.]

Ar·i·an·ism (âr'ē-ən'iz'əm, är'-) n. Theology. The doctrines of Arius, denying that Jesus was of the same substance as God and holding instead that he was only the highest of created beings.

A·ri·as San·chez (ä'rē-äs sän'chēs), Oscar. Born 1941. Costa Rican politician who as president (since 1986) proposed an accord to bring peace to Central America. He won the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize.

a·ri·bo·fla·vi·no·sis (ā-rī'bō-flā'və-nō'sīs, -bə-) n. A condition caused by the dietary deficiency of riboflavin that is characterized by mouth lesions, seborrhea, and vascularization of the cornea.

A·ri·ca (ə-rē'kə, ä-rē'kä) A city of northern Chile on the Pacific Ocean near the Peruvian border. Claimed by both Peru and Chile until 1929, it is a free port and popular resort. Population, 139,320.

ar·id (är'īd) adj. 1. Lacking moisture, especially having insufficient rainfall to support trees or woody plants: an arid climate. 2. Lacking interest or feeling; lifeless and dull: a technically perfect but arid musical performance. [Latin āridus, from ārēre, to be dry. See as- in Appendix.] — a·rid'·i·ty (ə-rīd'ī-tē), ar'id·ness n.

Ar·i·el (âr'ē-əl) n. 1. A mischievous spirit in Shakespeare's The Tempest. 2. The satellite of Uranus that is second in distance from the planet.

Ar·ies (âr'ēz, âr'ē-ēz') n. 1. A constellation in the Northern Hemisphere near Taurus and Pisces. 2. a. The first sign of the zodiac in astrology. b. One who is born under this sign. Also called Ram [Middle English, zodiacal sign Aries, from Latin ariēs, ram, zodiacal sign Aries.]

a·ri·et·ta (ä'rē-ēt'ə) also a·ri·ette (-ēt') n. Music. A short aria. [Italian, diminutive of aria, aria. See ARIA.]

a·right (ə-rīt') adv. In a proper manner; correctly. [Middle English, from Old English ariht: a-, on; see A² + riht, right; see RIGHT.]

A·rik·a·ra (ə-rik'ər-ə) n. pl. Arikara or A·rik·a·ras. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting the Missouri River valley from Kansas into the Dakotas and now located in western North Dakota. Traditional Arikara life was based on agriculture and trade with the Plains Indians to the west. b. A member of this people. 2. The Caddoan language of the Arikara.

ar·il (är'əl) n. A fleshy, usually brightly colored cover of a seed, arising from the hilum or funiculus. [Medieval Latin arillus, grape seed.] —ar'iled adj.

—ar'il·late' (-lāt', -līt) adj.

a·ri·o·so (ä'rē-ō'sō, -zō) Music. n. pl. a·ri·o·sos. 1. a. A declamatory style used in opera and oratorio, similar to recitative but having greater melodic variation.

b. A passage rendered in this style. 2. A short vocal solo having the melodic style but not the form of an aria. — adv. & adj. In a melodic style like that of an aria. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, from aria, aria. See ARIA.]

A·ri·os·to (är'ē-ōs'tō, -ō'stō, är'-), Ludovico or Lodovico. 1474-1533. Italian writer primarily known for his epic comic poem Orlando Furioso (1532).

a·rise (ə-rīz') v. intr. a·rose (ə-rōz'), a·ris·en (ə-rīz'ən), a·ris·ing, a·ris·es.

1. To get up, as from a sitting or prone position; rise. 2. To move upward; ascend. 3. To come into being; originate: hoped that a new spirit of freedom was arising. 4. To result, issue, or proceed: mistakes that arise from a basic misunderstanding. See Synonyms at stem¹. [Middle English arisen, from Old English ārīsan : ā-, intensive pref. + rīsan, to rise.]

a·ris·ta (ə-rīs'tə) n. pl. a·ris·tae (-tē) or a·ris·tas. A bristlelike part or appendage, such as the awn of grains and grasses or the process near the tip of the antenna of certain flies. [Latin, beard of grain, spike.] —a·ris'tate (-tāt) adj.

Ar·is·tar·chus (är'ī-stär'kəs), 217?-145? B.C. Greek grammarian and critic noted for his arrangement of and commentary on the Iliad and the Odyssey.

Aristarchus of Sa·mos (är'ī-stär'kəs üv sā'mōs', sām'ōs', sā'mōs), fl. 270 B.C. Greek astronomer who was among the first to propose that the sun is the center of the universe and that the earth moves around the sun.

Ar·is·ti·des also Ar·is·tei·des (är'ī-stī'dēz), Known as “the Just.” 530?-468? B.C. Athenian statesman and general who fought in the Battle of Marathon (490) and in the victory over the Persians at Salamis (480). He was a central figure in the confederation of Greek states known as the Delian League (478).

Ar·is·tip·pus of Cy·re·ne (är'ī-stīp'əs üf sī-rē'nē), 435?-366? B.C. Greek philosopher who founded the Cyrenaic school, based on the pursuit of pleasure tempered by prudence to avoid discomfort.

ar·is·toc·ra·cy (är'ī-stōk'rə-sē) n. pl. ar·is·toc·ra·cies. 1. A hereditary ruling class; nobility. 2. a. Government by a ruling class. b. A state or country having this form of government. 3. a. Government by the citizens deemed to be best qualified to lead. b. A state having such a government. 4. A group or class considered superior to others. [Late Latin aristocratia, government by the best, from Greek aristokratia : aristos, best; see ar- in Appendix + kratos, power; see -CRACY.]

a·ris·to·crat (ə-rīs'tə-krät', är'is-) n. 1. A member of a ruling class or of the nobility. 2. A person having the tastes, manners, or other characteristics of the aristocracy: a natural aristocrat who insists on the best accommodations. 3. A person who advocates government by an aristocracy. 4. One considered the best of its kind: the aristocrat of cars. [French aristocrate, from aristocratie, aristocracy, from Old French, from Late Latin aristocratia. See ARISTOCRACY.]

—a·ris'to·crat'ic, a·ris'to·crat'i·cal adj. —a·ris'to·crat'i·cal·ly adv.

Ar·is·toph·a·nes (är'ī-stōf'ə-nēz), 448?-388? B.C. Athenian playwright considered to be the greatest ancient writer of satirical comedy. Among his surviving plays are The Clouds (423) and Lysistrata (411).

Aristophanes of By·zan·ti·um (är'ī-stōf'ə-nēz ÷v bī-zän'shē-əm, -tē-əm), 257?-180? B.C. Greek philologist who systematized the punctuation, pronunciation, and accentuation of Greek.

Ar·is·to·te·li·an also Ar·is·to·te·le·an (är'ī-stə-tē'lē-ən, -tēl'yən, ə-rīs'tə-) adj. Of or relating to Aristotle or to his philosophy. — n. 1. A follower of Aristotle or his teachings. 2. A person whose thinking and methods tend to be empirical, scientific, or commonsensical. —Ar'is-to-te/li-an-ism n.

Aristotelian logic (är'ī-stə-tē'lē-ən löj'ik) n. 1. Aristotle's deductive method of logic, especially the theory of the syllogism. 2. The formal logic based on Aristotle's and dealing with the relations between propositions in terms of their form instead of their content.

Ar·is·tot·le (är'ī-stōt'l), 384-322 B.C. Greek philosopher. A pupil of Plato, the tutor of Alexander the Great, and the author of works on logic, metaphysics, ethics, natural sciences, politics, and poetics, he profoundly influenced Western thought. In his philosophical system theory follows empirical observation and logic, based on the syllogism, is the essential method of rational inquiry.

a·rith·me·tic (ə-rīth'mī-tīk) n. Mathematics. 1. The mathematics of integers, rational numbers, real numbers, or complex numbers under addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division. 2. A book on this kind of mathematics. [Middle English arsmetike, arithmetic, from Old French arismetique, from Late Latin arismetica, alteration of Latin arithmētica, from Greek arithmētikē tekhnē, (the art) of counting, from arithmein, to count, from arithmos, number. See ar- in Appendix.] —ar'ith-met'ic (är'ith-mēt'ik), ar'ith-met'i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. —ar'ith-met'i·cal·ly adv. —a·rith'me·ti'cian (-tīsh'ən) n.

arithmetic mean (ə-rīth'mī-tīk mēn) n. Mathematics. The value obtained by dividing the sum of a set of quantities by the number of quantities in the set. Also called average arithmetic progression (ə-rīth'mī-tīk prə-grēsh'ən) n. Mathematics. A sequence, such as the odd integers 1, 3, 5, 7, ..., in which each term after the first is formed by adding a constant to the preceding term.

-arium suff. A place or device containing or associated with: planetarium.
[Latin, neuter of -ārius, -ary.]

A·ri·us (ə-rī'əs, ār'ē-, ār'-), A.D. 256?-336. Greek Christian theologian and founder of Arianism, a doctrine that led to his condemnation as a heretic.

Ar·i·zo·na (är'ī-zō'nə) Abbr. AZ, Ariz. A state of the southwest United States on the Mexican border. It was admitted as the 48th state in 1912. First explored by the Spanish in 1539, the area was acquired by the United States in 1848 through the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. Phoenix is the capital and the largest city. Population, 3,677,985. —Ar'ī-zo'nan, Ar'ī-zo'ni-an adj. & n.

Ar·ju·na (är'jə-nə, -jō-) n. Hinduism. The prince in the Bhagavad-Gita to whom Krishna expounds the nature of being, the nature of God, and the way human beings can come to know God.

ark (ärk) n. 1. Often Ark. Bible. In the Old Testament, the chest containing the Ten Commandments written on stone tablets, carried by the Hebrews during their desert wanderings. Also called Ark of the Covenant 2. Often Ark. Judaism. The Holy Ark 3. Bible. In the Old Testament, the boat built by Noah for survival during the Flood. 4. Nautical. A large, commodious boat. 5. A shelter or refuge. [Middle English, from Old English arc, from Germanic arca*, from Latin arca, chest.]

Ar·kan·sas (är'kən-sô') Abbr. AR, Ark. A state of the south-central United States bordered on the east by the Mississippi River. It was admitted as the 25th state in 1836. The region was first explored by members of Hernando de Soto's expedition in 1541 and passed to the United States in 1803 as part of the Louisiana Purchase. Little Rock is the capital and the largest city. Population, 2,362,239. —Ar·kan'san (är-kän'zən) adj. & n.

Ar·kan·sas River (är'kən-sô' rīv'ər, är-kän'zəs) A river of the south-central United States rising in the Rocky Mountains in central Colorado and flowing about 2,333 km (1,450 mi) generally southeastward to the Mississippi River in southeast Arkansas. It was an important trade and travel route in the 19th century.

Ar·kan·sas stone (är'kən-sô' stōn) n. A stone used for sharpening and grinding metals, especially the metal blades of knives.

Ark·han·gelsk (är-kän'gělsk, -KHän'-) or Arch·an·gel (ärk'än'jəl) A city of northwest Russia on the Northern Dvina River near its mouth on the White Sea. Although icebound much of the year, it is a leading port and can generally be opened to navigation by icebreakers. Population, 408,000.

Ark of the Covenant (ärk üv thē küv'ə-nənt) n. Bible. See ark (n., sense 1).

Ark-wright (ärk'rit'), Sir Richard. 1732-1792. British inventor and manufacturer who patented a machine for spinning cotton thread (1769) and established cotton mills that were among the first to use machinery on a large scale.

Arl-berg (ärl'bûrg, -bërk) An Alpine pass, 1,813.5 m (5,946 ft) high, in western Austria. The rail tunnel crossing the pass was built in 1880-1884 and is 10 km (6.2 mi) long.

Ar-len (är'lən), Harold. 1905-1986. American composer of more than 500 songs, including the 1939 Oscar winner "Over the Rainbow."

Ar-len (är'lən), Michael. 1895-1956. Armenian-born British writer noted for his novels about London society, including The Green Hat (1924).

Arles (ärlz, ärl) 1. A medieval kingdom of eastern and southeast France. It was formed in 933 and gradually split up after 1246. 2. A city of south-central France on the Rhone River delta. A flourishing city in Roman times, it has an arena built in the second century A.D. that is now used for bullfights. Population, 37,571.

Ar-ling-ton (är'lîng-tən) 1. A town of eastern Massachusetts, a residential suburb of Boston. Population, 44,630. 2. A city of northern Texas midway between Dallas and Fort Worth. It has a huge industrial park. Population, 261,721. 3. A county and unincorporated city of northern Virginia across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C. Mainly residential, it is the site of Arlington National Cemetery, where American war dead and other notables, including William Howard Taft and John F. Kennedy, are buried. The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier commemorates members of the Armed Forces who were killed in World War I, World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War. Population, 170,936.

Arlington Heights (är'lîng-tən hîts) A village of northeast Illinois, a manufacturing and residential suburb of Chicago. Population, 75,460.

arm¹ (ärm) n. 1. An upper limb of the human body, connecting the hand and wrist to the shoulder. 2. A part similar to a human arm, such as the forelimb of an animal or a long part projecting from a central support in a machine. 3. Something, such as a sleeve on a garment or a support on a chair, that is designed to cover or support the human arm. 4. A relatively narrow extension jutting out from a large mass: an arm of the sea. See Synonyms at branch. 5. An administrative or functional branch, as of an organization. 6. Power or authority: the long arm of the law. —idioms. an arm and a leg. Slang. An excessively high price: a cruise that cost an arm and a leg. at arm's length. At such a distance that physical or social contact is discouraged: kept the newcomer at arm's length at first. with open arms. With great cordiality and hospitality. [Middle English, from Old English earm. See ar- in Appendix.]

arm² (ärm) n. 1. A weapon, especially a firearm: troops bearing arms; ICBMs, bombs, and other nuclear arms. 2. A branch of a military force: infantry, armor, and other combat arms. 3. arms. a. Warfare: a call to arms against the invaders. b. Military service: several million volunteers under arms; the profession of arms.

4. arms. a. Heraldry. Bearings. b. Insignia, as of a state, an official, a family, or an organization. — v. armed, arm-ing, arms. — v. intr. 1. To supply or equip oneself with weaponry. 2. To prepare oneself for warfare or conflict. — v. tr. 1. To equip with weapons: armed themselves with loaded pistols; arm a missile with a warhead; arm a nation for war. 2. To equip with what is needed for effective action: tax advisers who were armed with the latest forms. 3. To provide with something that strengthens or protects: a space reentry vehicle that was armed with a ceramic shield. 4. To prepare (a weapon) for use or operation, as by releasing a safety device. — idiom. up in arms. Extremely upset; indignant. [Middle English armes, weapons, from Old French, from Latin arma. V., from Middle English armen from Old French armer, from Latin armāre, from arma, arms. See ar- in Appendix.] — arm'er n.

Arm. abbr. Armenia; Armenian.

ar·ma·da (är-mä'də, -mä'-) n. 1. A fleet of warships. 2. A large group of moving things: an armada of ants crossing the lawn. [Spanish, from Medieval Latin armāta. See ARMY.] ar·ma·dil·lo (är'mə-dīl'ō) n. pl. ar·ma·dil·los. Any of several omnivorous, burrowing, edentate mammals (family Dasypodidae), native to southern North America and South America and characterized by an armorlike covering consisting of jointed, bony plates. [Spanish, diminutive of armado, armored past participle of armar, to arm, from Latin armāre, from arma, arms. See ar- in Appendix.]

Ar·ma·ged·don (är'mə-gěd'n) n. 1. Bible. The scene of a final battle between the forces of good and evil, prophesied to occur at the end of the world. 2. A decisive or catastrophic conflict. [Late Latin Armagedōn, from Greek, from Hebrew har mēgiddō, mēgiddōn, the mountain region of Megiddo.]

Ar·magh (är-mä', är'mä') An urban district of southern Northern Ireland. Reputedly founded by Saint Patrick, it is the seat of both the Roman Catholic and Protestant primates of Ireland. Population, 12,700.

Ar·ma·gnac¹ (är'mən-yăk') A historical region and former countship of southwest France in Gascony. Added to the French royal domain in 1607, the area is now noted for its viniculture.

Ar·ma·gnac² (är'mən-yăk') n. A dry brandy.

ar·ma·ment (är'mə-mənt) n. 1. The weapons and supplies of war with which a military unit is equipped. 2. Often armaments. All the military forces and war equipment of a country. 3. A military force equipped for war. 4. The process of arming for war. [Latin armāmenta, tools, from arma, arms. See ARM².]

ar·ma·men·tar·i·um (är'mə-měn-târ'ē-əm) n. pl. ar·ma·men·tar·i·ums or ar·ma·men·tar·i·a (-ē-ə). The complete equipment of a physician or medical institution, including books, supplies, and instruments. [Latin, arsenal, from armāmenta, tools. See ARMAMENT.] ar·ma·ture (är'mə-chöör', -chər) n. 1. Electricity. a. The rotating part of a dynamo, consisting essentially of copper wire wound around an iron core. b. The moving part of an electromagnetic device such as a relay, buzzer, or loud-speaker. c. A piece of soft iron connecting the poles of a magnet. 2. Biology. A protective covering, structure, or organ of an animal or a plant, such as teeth, claws, thorns, or the shell of a turtle. 3. A framework serving as a supporting core for clay sculpture. [Middle English, armor, from Old French, from Latin armātūra, equipment, from armātus, past participle of armāre, to arm, from arma, arms. See ar- in Appendix.]

arm·chair (ärm'châr') n. A chair with side structures to support the arms or elbows. — adj. Remote from active involvement: armchair warriors in the Pentagon; an armchair traveler.

armed forces (ärmd fôr'sîz) pl.n. The military forces of a country. Also called armed services

Ar·me·ni·a¹ (är-mē'nē-ə, -mēn'yə) Abbr. Arm. A country of Asia Minor south of Georgia. Formerly a kingdom that extended into northeast Turkey and northwest Iran, it was probably the first state to adopt Christianity as a national religion (c. A.D. 303). Acquired by Russia from Persia in 1828, Armenia became a Soviet republic in 1921 and was a constituent republic from 1936 to 1991. Yerevan is the capital. Population, 3,317,000.

Ar·me·nia² (är-mē'nē-ə, -nyə, -nyä) A city of west-central Colombia west of Bogotá. It is an industrial center and transportation hub. Population, 179,727.

Ar·me·ni·an (är-mē'nē-ən, -mēn'yən) adj. Abbr. Arm. Of or relating to Armenia or its people, language, or culture. — n. Abbr. Arm. 1. a. A native or inhabitant of Armenia. b. A person of Armenian ancestry. 2. The Indo-European language of the Armenians.

Ar·me·ni·an Church (är-mē'nē-ən chûrch, -mēn'yən) n. An autonomous Christian church established in Armenia in the fourth century A.D. It differs from other Eastern churches in professing a form of Monophysitism.

Ar·men·tières (är'mən-tîrz', -män-tyēr') A city of northern France west-northwest of Lille. It became known through the World War I song "Mademoiselle from Armentières." Population, 24,834.

ar·met (är'mět') n. A medieval light helmet with a neck guard and movable visor. [Old French, alteration (influenced by Old Italian elmetto, helmet), of arme, weapon. See ARM².]

arm·ful (ärm'fööl') n. The amount that an arm or arms can hold.

arm·hole (ärm'höl') n. An opening in a garment for an arm.

ar·mi·ger (är'mə-jər) n. 1. A bearer of armor for a knight; a squire. 2. A person entitled to bear heraldic arms. [Medieval Latin, from Latin, arms-bearing: arma, arms; see ARM² + gerere, to carry.]

Ar-mi-jo (är-mē'hō) A community of central New Mexico, a suburb of Albuquerque. Population, 18,900.

ar-mil-lar-y sphere (är'mə-lēr'ē sfīr, är-mīl'ə-rē) n. An old astronomical model with solid rings, all circles of a single sphere, used to display relationships among the principal celestial circles. [Translation of French sphère armillaire, from Latin armilla, bracelet, from armus, shoulder. See ar- in Appendix.]

Ar-min (är-mēn') See Arminius.

Ar-min-i-an (är-mīn'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to the theology of Jacobus Arminius and his followers, who believed that predestination was conditioned by God's foreknowledge of human free choices. —Ar-min'i-an n.

—Ar-min'i-an-ism n.

Ar-min-i-us (är-mīn'ē-əs) also Ar-min (-mēn'), 17? B.C.-A.D. 21. German hero who led the defeat of three legions of Romans in the Teutoburger Wald (A.D. 9), thereby liberating the Germans from Roman rule.

Ar-min-i-us (är-mīn'ē-əs), Jacobus. 1560-1609. Dutch theologian and founder of Arminianism, which opposed the absolute predestinarianism of John Calvin and was influential throughout Europe.

ar-mi-stice (är'mī-stīs) n. A temporary cessation of fighting by mutual consent; a truce. [French, from New Latin armistitium: Latin arma, arms; see ARM² + Latin -stitium, a stopping; see stā- in Appendix.]

Ar-mi-stice Day (är'mī-stīs dā) n. November 11, formerly observed in the United States in commemoration of the signing of the armistice ending World War I in 1918. Since 1954 it has been incorporated into the observances of Veterans Day.

arm-let (ärm'līt) n. 1. A band worn on the arm for ornament or identification. 2. A small arm, as of the sea.

arm-load (ärm'lōd') n. The amount that can be carried in one arm or both arms: an armload of laundry.

ar-moire (ärm-wär', ärn'wär) n. A large, often ornate cabinet or wardrobe. [French armoire, from Old French armaire, from Latin armārium, chest, from arma, tools. See ar- in Appendix.]

ar-mor (är'mər) n. 1. A defensive covering, such as chain mail, worn to protect the body against weapons. 2. A tough, protective covering, such as the bony scales covering certain animals or the metallic plates on tanks or warships. 3. A safeguard or protection: faith, the missionary's armor. 4. a. The combat arm that deploys armored vehicles, such as tanks. b. The armored vehicles of an army.

— v. tr. ar-mored, ar-mor-ing, ar-mors. To cover with armor. [Middle English armure, from Old French armeure, from Latin armātūra, equipment. See ARMATURE.]

ar-mor-clad (är'mər-klād') adj. Covered with or wearing armor: armor-clad warships.

ar·mor·er (är'mər-ər) n. 1. A manufacturer of weapons, especially firearms. 2. An enlisted person in charge of maintenance and repair of the small arms of a military unit. 3. One that makes or repairs armor.

ar·mo·ri·al (är-môr'ē-əl, -môr'-) adj. Heraldry. Of or relating to heraldry or heraldic arms. — n. A book or treatise on heraldry. [From Middle English armorie, arms, from Old French armeurerie, from armeure, armor. See ARMOR.]

Ar·mor·ic (är-môr'ik, -môr'-) also Ar·mor·i·can (-i-kən) adj. Of or relating to Armorica or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Armorica. 2. See Breton (n., sense 2).

Ar·mor·i·ca (är-môr'i-kə, -môr'-) An ancient and literary name for the northwest part of France, especially Brittany.

armor plate (är'mər plāt) n. Specially formulated hard steel plate used to cover warships, vehicles, and fortifications. — är'mor-plat'ed (är'mər-plā'tid) adj.

ar·mor·y (är'mə-rē) n. pl. ar·mor·ies. 1. a. A storehouse for arms; an arsenal. b. A building for storing arms and military equipment, especially one serving as headquarters for military reserve personnel. 2. An arms factory.

ar·mour (är'mər) n. & v. Chiefly British. Variant of armor.

Ar·mour (är'mər), Philip Danforth. 1832-1901. American industrialist active in the meat-packing business.

arm·pit (ärm'pīt') n. 1. The hollow under the upper part of the arm at the shoulder. 2. Slang. A thoroughly disreputable or disgusting thing, place, or situation: “I think of PCP as the armpit of drugs. It is dirty, explosive, poisonous” (Ray Brett).

arm·rest (ärm'rĕst') n. A support for the arm, as on a piece of furniture or within a motor vehicle.

Arm·strong (ärm'strông'), Edwin Howard. 1890-1954. American engineer and inventor whose improvements to radio communication included the development of frequency modulation (1933).

Arm·strong (ärm'strông'), Hamilton Fish. 1893-1973. American writer and editor who founded Foreign Affairs in 1920 and edited the magazine from 1928 until 1972.

Arm·strong (ärm'strông'), Louis. Known as “Satchmo.” 1900-1971. American jazz trumpeter. A virtuoso musician and popular, gravelly voiced singer, he greatly influenced the development of jazz.

Arm·strong (ärm'strông'), Neil Alden. Born 1930. American astronaut who as commander of Apollo 11 became the first human being to walk on the moon (July 20, 1969).

arm·twist (ärm'twĭst') v. arm--twist·ed, arm--twist·ing, arm--twists. Informal. — v. intr. To engage in the use of personal or political pressure to persuade or to gain support: “headed off to Capitol Hill to cajole and arm-twist” (Evan Thomas). — v. tr. To subject to or induce by the use of personal or political pressure: The government arm-twisted the manufacturers into accepting new anti-pollution standards. — arm twister, arm'-twist'er n.

arm-twist-ing (ärm'twɪs'tɪŋ) n. Informal. The use of personal or political pressure in an effort to persuade or to gain support.

arm-wres-tle (ärm'rɛs'əl) v. intr. tr. arm-wres-tled, arm-wres-ting, arm-wres-tles. Sports. To engage in or subject (another) to arm wrestling. — arm wrestler, arm'-wres'tler n.

arm wrestling (ärm rɛs'lɪŋ) n. Sports. A form of wrestling in which two opponents sit facing each other with usually right hands interlocked and elbows firmly planted, as on a table surface, and attempt to force each other's arm down. Also called Indian wrestling ar-my (är'mē) n. pl. ar-mies. 1. a. A large body of people organized and trained for land warfare. b. Often Army. The entire military land forces of a country. c. A tactical and administrative military unit consisting of a headquarters, two or more corps, and auxiliary forces. 2. A large group of people organized for a specific cause: the construction army that built the Panama Canal. 3. A multitude; a host: An army of waiters served at the banquet. See Synonyms at multitude. [Middle English armee, from Old French, from Medieval Latin armāta, from Latin armāta, feminine past participle of armāre, to arm, from arma, arms. See ar- in Appendix.]

army ant (är'mē änt) n. Any of various rapacious tropical ants of the family Formicidae that move in swarms and that subsist on other insects. Also called driver ant, legionary ant.

army brat (är'mē brät) n. The child of a member, typically a career officer, of the U.S. Army.

ar-my-worm (är'mē-wûrm') n. A caterpillar belonging to either of two genera of moth, Pseudaletia or Spodoptera, large groups of which destroy crops and other vegetation.

ar-nat-to (är-nä'tō) n. Variant of annatto.

Arne (ärn), Thomas Augustine. 1710-1778. British composer noted for his songs, oratorios, and operas, including Alfred (1740), which introduced the song "Rule, Britannia."

Arn-hem (ärn'hĕm', är'nəm) A city of eastern Netherlands on the lower Rhine River east-southeast of Utrecht. In World War II British airborne troops suffered a major defeat here in September 1944. Population, 128,598.

Arn-hem Land (är'nəm länd) A region of northern Australia west of the Gulf of Carpentaria. The country's largest aboriginal reservation is here.

ar-ni-ca (är'nĭ-kə) n. 1. Any of various perennial herbs of the genus Arnica in the composite family, having opposite, simple leaves and mostly radiate heads of yellow flowers. 2. A tincture of the dried flower heads of the European species A.

montana, applied externally to reduce the pain and inflammation of bruises and sprains. [New Latin Arnica, genus name.]

Ar·no (är'nō) A river of central Italy rising in the northern Apennines and flowing about 241 km (150 mi) to the Ligurian Sea. Flooding of the Arno has caused severe damage to art treasures in Florence.

Ar·no (är'nō), Peter. 1904-1968. American cartoonist whose satirical drawings of high society were regularly featured in the New Yorker.

Ar·nold (är'nəld) A city of eastern Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis. Population, 18,828.

Ar·nold (är'nəld), Benedict. 1741-1801. American Revolutionary general and traitor whose plan to surrender West Point to the British for 20,000 pounds was foiled when his accomplice John André was captured (1780). Arnold fled to New York and then to England (1781).

Ar·nold (är'nəld), Henry Harley. Known as "Hap." 1886-1950. American general whose efforts helped establish what is now the U.S. Air Force.

Ar·nold (är'nəld), Matthew. 1822-1888. British poet and critic whose poems, such as "Dover Beach" (1867), express moral and religious doubts. His classic study Culture and Anarchy (1869) is a polemic against Victorian materialism.

Ar·nold (är'nəld), Thomas. 1795-1842. British educator and historian who as headmaster of Rugby School (1827-1842) introduced classes in mathematics, modern languages, and modern history into the classical curriculum.

Ar·nold·son (är'nəld-sən), Klas Pontus. 1844-1916. Swedish politician and pacifist. He shared the 1908 Nobel Peace Prize for efforts to keep peace between Sweden and Norway.

Arns·berg (ärnz'bərg, ärns'bėrk) A city of west-central Germany south-southeast of Münster. It was founded in 1077 and received a municipal charter in 1237. Population, 75,135.

A·roe Islands (ä'rōō ī'ləndz) See Aru Islands.

ar·oid (är'oid', är'-) n. Any of various perennial herbs in the arum family, including houseplants such as the anthurium, dieffenbachia, and philodendron and having tiny flowers crowded in a spadix that is subtended by a spathe.

[AR(UM) + -OID.] —ar'oid' adj.

a·roint (ə-roint') v. tr. a·roint·ed, a·roint·ing, a·roints. Archaic. Begone; avaunt: "Aroint thee, witch!" (Shakespeare). [Origin unknown.]

a·ro·ma (ə-rō'mə) n. 1. a. A quality that can be perceived by the olfactory sense: the aroma of garlic and onions. See Synonyms at smell. b. A pleasant characteristic odor, as of a plant, spice, or food: the aroma of roses. See Synonyms at fragrance. 2. A distinctive, intangible quality; an aura: the aroma of success. [Alteration (influenced by Latin arōma, spice), of Middle English aromat, aromatic substance, from Old French, from Latin arōmata, pl. of arōma, from Greek, aromatic herb.]

a·ro·ma·ther·a·py (ə-rō'mə-thēr'ə-pē) n. pl. a·ro·ma·ther·a·pies. The use of selected fragrant substances in lotions and inhalants in an effort to affect mood and promote health.

ar·o·mat·ic (är'ə-mät'ik) adj. 1. Having an aroma; fragrant or sweet-smelling: aromatic herbs. 2. Chemistry. Of, relating to, or containing one or more six-carbon rings characteristic of the benzene series and related organic groups. — n. An aromatic plant or substance, such as a medication. — ar'·o·mat'i·cal·ly adv. — ar'·o·mat'ic·ness n.

ar·o·ma·tic·i·ty (är'ə-mə-tis'i-tē, ə-rō'mə-) n. Aromatic quality or character, especially the distinctive structure or properties of the aromatic chemical compounds.

a·ro·ma·tize (ə-rō'mə-tīz') v. tr. a·ro·ma·tized, a·ro·ma·tiz·ing, a·ro·ma·tiz·es. 1. To make aromatic or fragrant: swirled the wine to aromatize it. 2. Chemistry. To subject to a reaction that converts a substance into an aromatic compound. — a·ro'ma·ti·za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

A·roos·took (ə-roōs'tək, -rōōs'-) A river rising in northern Maine and flowing about 225 km (140 mi) generally eastward to the St. John River in New Brunswick, Canada.

a·rose (ə-rōz') v. Past tense of arise.

a·round (ə-round') adv. 1. a. On all sides: dirty clothes lying around. b. In close to all sides from all directions: a field bordered around with tall trees. 2. In a circle or with a circular motion: spun around twice. 3. In circumference or perimeter: a pond two miles around. 4. In succession or rotation. 5. In or toward the opposite direction or position: wheeled around. 6. a. To or among various places; here and there: wander around. b. To a specific place: Come around again sometime. 7. In or near one's current location: waited around for the next flight. 8. From the beginning to the end: frigid weather the year around. 9. Approximately; about: weighed around 30 pounds; around $1.3 billion in debt. — prep. 1. On all sides of: trees around the field. 2. In such a position as to encircle or surround: a sash around the waist. 3. a. Here and there within; throughout: on the political stump around the country. b. In the immediate vicinity of; near: She lives around Norfolk. 4. On or to the farther side of: the house around the corner. 5. So as to pass, bypass, or avoid: a way around an obstacle; got around the difficulty somehow. 6. Approximately at: woke up around seven. 7. In such a way as to have a basis or center in: an economy focused around farming and light industry. — adj. 1. Being in existence: Our old dog is no longer around. 2. Being in evidence; present: asked if the store manager was around. — idiom. been around. Informal. Having had many and varied experiences: a young executive who has been around. [Middle English : probably a-, in; see A⁻² + round, circle; see *ROUND*¹.]

a·round·the·clock (ə-round'thə-klōk') adj. Variant of round-the-clock.

a·rouse (ə-rouz') v. a-roused, a-rous-ing, a-rous-es. — v. tr. 1. To awaken from or as if from sleep. 2. To stir up; excite: The odd sight aroused our curiosity. See Synonyms at provoke. — v. intr. To be or become aroused; stir. [From ROUSE, on the model of such pairs as RISE, ARISE.] —a-rous'al n.

Arp (ärp), Jean or Hans. 1887-1966. French artist and a founder of Dada. He is particularly noted for his abstract reliefs and three-dimensional sculptures.

Ar·pád (är'pád), Died 907. Hungarian national hero who founded the first Hungarian dynasty (c. 884).

ar·peg·gi·o (är-pěj'ē-ō', -pěj'ō) n. pl. ar·peg·gi·os. Music. 1. The playing of the tones of a chord in rapid succession rather than simultaneously. 2. A chord played or sung in this manner. [Italian, from arpeggiare, to play the harp, from arpa, harp, of Germanic origin. See HARP.]

ar·pent (är-pän') n. Any of various French units of land measurement, especially one used in parts of Canada and the southern United States and equal to about 0.4 hectare (0.85 acre). [French, from Old French, from Latin arepennis, half acre. See per¹ in Appendix.]

ar·que·bus (är'kə-bəs, -kwə-) n. Variant of harquebus.

arr. abbr. 1. Arranged. 2. a. Arrival; arrive. b. Arrived.

ar·ra·ca·cha (ä'rä-kä'chä) n. A perennial Andean herb (Arracacia xanthorrhiza) in the parsley family, grown for its large, fleshy, edible roots. Also called apio [Spanish, from Quechua aracacha.]

ar·rack (är'æk, ə-räk') n. A strong alcoholic drink of the Middle East and the Far East, usually distilled from fermented palm sap, rice, or molasses. [Arabic 'araq, sweet juice, as in 'araq at-tamr, fermented juice of the date.]

ar·raign (ə-rān') v. tr. ar-raigned, ar-raign-ing, ar-raigns. 1. Law. To call (an accused person) before a court to answer the charge made against him or her by indictment, information, or complaint. 2. To call to account; accuse: "Johnson arraigned the modern politics of this country as entirely devoid of all principle" (James Boswell). [Middle English arreinen, from Old French araisnier, from Vulgar Latin adratiōnāre*, to call to account : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin ratio, *ratio*n-, account; see REASON.] —ar-raign'er n. —ar-raign'ment n.

Ar·ran (är'ən) A granite island of western Scotland in the Firth of Clyde. It is a resort area noted for its scenery and its hunting and fishing.

ar·range (ə-rānj') v. ar-ranged, ar-rang-ing, ar-rang-es. — v. tr. 1. To put into a specific order or relation; dispose: arrange shoes in a neat row. 2. To plan or prepare for: arrange a picnic. 3. To bring about an agreement concerning; settle: "It has been arranged for him by his family to marry a girl of his own class" (Edmund Wilson). 4. Music. To reset (a composition) for other instruments or voices or for another style of performance. — v. intr. 1. To come to an agreement. 2. To make preparations; plan: arrange for a big wedding. [Middle English arengen, from Old French arengier : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + rengier, to put in a line (from reng, line); see sker-² in Appendix.] —ar-rang'er n.

SYNONYMS: arrange, marshal, order, organize, sort, systematize. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to distribute or dispose persons or things properly or methodically”: arranging figures in numerical sequence; marshal all the relevant facts for the presentation; tried to order my chaotic life; organizing and coordinating fund-raising efforts; sorted the sweaters according to color; systematizing a vast assortment of rules into a cohesive whole.

ANTONYM: disarrange

ar-range-ment (ə-rānj'mənt) n. 1. The act or process of arranging: the arrangement of a time and place for the meeting. 2. The condition, manner, or result of being arranged; disposal: provided flowers and saw to their arrangement. 3. A collection of things that have been arranged: the circular arrangement of megaliths called Stonehenge. 4. Often arrangements. A provision or plan made in preparation for an undertaking: made arrangements for surgery. 5. An agreement or settlement; a disposition: Our dog will be looked after by arrangement with a neighbor. 6. Music. a. An adaptation of a composition for other instruments or voices or for another style of performance. b. A composition so arranged.

ar-rant (ər'ənt) adj. Completely such; thoroughgoing: an arrant fool; the arrant luxury of the ocean liner. [Variant of ERRANT.] —ar'rant-ly adv.

ar-ras (ər'əs) n. 1. A wall hanging; a tapestry. 2. A curtain or a wall hanging, especially one of Flemish origin. [Middle English, after Arras.]

Ar-ras (ər'əs, ə-räs') A city of northern France south-southwest of Lille. It was a famous woolen and tapestry center in the Middle Ages. Population, 41,736.

Ar-rau (ä-rou'), Claudio. 1903-1991. Chilean-born American pianist particularly noted for his interpretation of Beethoven's piano works.

ar-ray (ə-rā') v. tr. ar-rayed, ar-ray-ing, ar-rays. 1. To set out for display or use; place in an orderly arrangement: arrayed the whole regiment on the parade ground. 2. To dress in finery; adorn. — n. 1. An orderly, often imposing arrangement: an array of royal jewels. 2. An impressively large number, as of persons or objects: an array of heavily armed troops; an array of spare parts. See Synonyms at display. 3. Splendid attire; finery. 4. Mathematics. a. A rectangular arrangement of quantities in rows and columns, as in a matrix. b. Numerical data linearly ordered by magnitude. 5. Computer Science. An arrangement of memory elements in one or several planes. [Middle English arraien, from Anglo-Norman arraier, from Vulgar Latin arrēdāre*. See reidh- in Appendix.]

ar-ray-al (ə-rā'əl) n. 1. The act or process of arranging in an orderly or imposing manner. 2. Something so arranged; an array.

ar·rear·age (ə-rîr'ij) n. 1. The state of being behind in the fulfillment of obligations or of being overdue in payment. 2. A payment owed.

ar·rears (ə-rîrz') pl.n. 1. An unpaid, overdue debt or an unfulfilled obligation. 2. The state of being behind in fulfilling obligations: an account in arrears. [Middle English arrers, from arrere, behind, from Old French arere, from Vulgar Latin ad retrō*, backward : Latin ad, to; see AD- + Latin retrō, behind; see re- in Appendix.]

ar·rest (ə-rĕst') v. ar·rest·ed, ar·rest·ing, ar·rests. — v. tr. 1. To stop; check: a brake that automatically arrests motion; arrested the growth of the tumor. 2. To seize and hold under the authority of law. 3. To capture and hold briefly (the attention, for example); engage. — v. intr. 1. To undergo cardiac arrest: The patient arrested en route to the hospital. 2. To behave in a certain manner when taken into legal detention: a suspect who did not arrest well. — n. 1. a. The act of detaining in legal custody: the arrest of a criminal suspect. b. The state of being so detained: a criminal under arrest. 2. A device for stopping motion, especially of a moving part. [Middle English aresten, from Old French arester, from Vulgar Latin arrestāre* : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin restāre, to stand still (re-, re- + stāre, to stand); see stā- in Appendix.] — ar·rest'er, ar·res'tor n. — ar·rest'ment n.

ar·rest·ee (ə-rĕs-tĕ') n. One who is under arrest.

ar·rest·ing (ə-rĕs'ting) adj. Attracting and holding the attention; striking. See Synonyms at noticeable. — ar·rest'ing·ly adv.

Ar·rhe·ni·us (ə-rĕ'nĕ-əs, ə-rā'-), Svante August. 1859-1927. Swedish physicist and chemist. He won a 1903 Nobel Prize for his electrolytic theory of dissociation.

ar·rhyth·mi·a (ə-rĭth'mĕ-ə) n. An irregularity in the force or rhythm of the heartbeat. [New Latin, from Greek arruthmia, lack of rhythm, from arruthmos, unrhythmical : a-, without; see A-¹ + rhuthmos, rhythm; see RHYTHM.]

ar·rhyth·mic (ə-rĭth'mik) adj. Lacking rhythm or regularity of rhythm: "a slight arrhythmic imperfection when the car idles" (Garrison Keillor).

— ar·rhyth'mi·cal·ly adv.

ar·ri·ba (ə-rĕ'bə) interj. Used as an exclamation of pleasure, approval, or elation. [Spanish, from Latin ad rĭpam, on the shore : ad, to; see AD- + rĭpa, shore.]

ar·ri·ère·ban (ăr'ĕ-âr-băn', -băn') n. 1. A medieval royal proclamation by which vassals were summoned to military service. 2. The vassals summoned. [French, from Old French arriere-ban, alteration (influenced by arere, behind), of herban. See koro- in Appendix.]

ar·ri·ère·pen·sée (ăr'ĕ-âr'păN-sā') n. A mental reservation, as about the validity of something. [French : arrière, in back (from Old French arere); see ARREARS + pensée, thought (from penser, to think); see PENSIVE.]

ar-ris (är'is) n. pl. arris or ar-ris-es. The sharp edge or ridge formed by two surfaces meeting at an angle, as in a molding. [Alteration of Old French areste, fishbone, spine. See ARÊTE.]

ar-ri-val (ə-rī'vəl) n. Abbr. ar., arr. 1. The act of arriving. 2. One that arrives or has arrived. 3. The reaching of a goal or an objective as a result of effort or a process: our ultimate arrival at a compromise.

ar-rive (ə-rīv') v. intr. ar-rived, ar-riv-ing, ar-rives. Abbr. ar., arr. 1. To reach a destination. 2. To come at length; take place: The day of reckoning has arrived. 3. To achieve success or recognition: He had finally arrived as a designer.

—phrasal verb. arrive at. To reach through effort or a process: arrive at a decision after much thought. [Middle English ariven, from Old French ariver, from Vulgar Latin arrīpāre*, to reach the shore : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin rīpa, shore.] —ar-riv'er n.

ar-ri-viste (ä-rē-vēst') n. 1. A person who has recently attained high position or great power without due effort or merit; an upstart. 2. An unscrupulous, vulgar social climber; a bounder. [French, from arriver, to arrive, from Old French ariver. See ARRIVE.]

ar-ro-ba (ə-rō'bə) n. 1. A unit of weight formerly used in Spanish-speaking countries, equal to about 11.3 kilograms (25 pounds). 2. A unit of weight formerly used in Portuguese-speaking countries, equal to about 14.4 kilograms (32 pounds). 3. A liquid measure formerly used in Spanish-speaking countries, having varying value but equal to about 16.2 liters (17 quarts) when used to measure wine. [Spanish, and Portuguese both from Arabic ar-rub', the quarter (of a quintal) : al, the + rub', quarter.]

Ar-roe Islands (ä'rōō ī'ləndz) See Aru Islands.

ar-ro-gance (är'ə-gəns) n. The state or quality of being arrogant; overbearing pride.

ar-ro-gant (är'ə-gənt) adj. 1. Making or disposed to make claims to unwarranted importance or consideration out of overbearing pride. 2. Marked by or arising from arrogance: an arrogant contempt for the weak. See Synonyms at proud. [Middle English arrogant, from Old French, from Latin arrogāns, arrogant- present participle of arrogāre, to arrogate. See ARROGATE.] —ar'ro-gant-ly adv.

ar-ro-gate (är'ə-gāt') v. tr. ar-ro-gat-ed, ar-ro-gat-ing, ar-ro-gates. 1. To take or claim for oneself without right; appropriate: Presidents who have arrogated the power of Congress to declare war. See Synonyms at appropriate. 2. To ascribe on behalf of another in an unwarranted manner. [Latin arrogāre, arrogāt- : ad-, ad- + rogāre, to ask; see reg- in Appendix.] —ar'ro-ga'tion n.

—ar'ro-ga'tive adj. —ar'ro-ga'tor n.

ar-ron-disse-ment (ä-rôn'dēs-män') n. 1. The chief administrative subdivision of a department in France. 2. A municipal subdivision in some large French cities. [French, from Old French, rounded projection on a wall, from arrondir, arrondiss-, to round out : a, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + rondir, to make round (from rond, round); see *ROUND*¹.]

ar·row (är'ō) n. 1. A straight, thin shaft with a pointed head at one end and often flight-stabilizing vanes at the other, meant to be shot from a bow.

2. Something, such as a directional symbol, that is similar to an arrow in form or function. [Middle English arwe, from Old English.]

Ar·row (är'ō), Kenneth Joseph. Born 1921. American economist. He shared a 1972 Nobel Prize for theories that help assess business risks and governmental economic policies.

arrow arum (är'ō är'əm) n. An emergent perennial herb (Peltandra virginica) of eastern North America, having arrowhead-shaped leaves and an elongate, pointed spathe. Also called tuckahoe ar·row·head (är'ō-hěd') n. 1. The pointed, removable striking tip of an arrow. 2. Something, such as a mark indicating a limit on a drawing, that is shaped like the head of an arrow. 3. a. Any of various aquatic or wetland perennial plants of the genus Sagittaria, having arrowhead-shaped leaves and panicles of white, unisexual flowers. b. The edible tubers of the Eurasian species S. sagittifolia or of the North American species S. latifolia.

ar·row·root (är'ō-rōōt', -rōōt') n. 1. a. A starch obtained from the rhizomes of a tropical American perennial herb (Maranta arundinacea). It is used especially in cooking as a thickener. b. The rhizome of this plant, cooked and eaten as a vegetable or used for starch extraction. c. The plant itself. 2. a. The edible starch obtained from the rhizomes or tubers of plants in the genera Canna and Tacca. b. Any of these plants. [By folk etymology from Arawak aru-aru, meal of meals (because it was used to draw poison from arrow wounds).]

WORD HISTORY: The arrowroot is just one of many plants that the European settlers and explorers discovered in the New World. The Arawak, a people who formerly lived on the Caribbean Islands and continue to inhabit certain regions of Guiana, named this plant aru-aru, meaning “meal of meals,” so called because they thought very highly of the starchy, nutritious meal made from the arrowroot. The plant also had medicinal value because its tubers could be used to draw poison from wounds inflicted by poison arrows. The medicinal application of the roots provided the impetus for English speakers to remake aru-aru into arrowroot, first recorded in English in 1696. Folk etymology—the process by which an unfamiliar element in a word is changed to resemble a more familiar word, often one that is semantically associated with the word being refashioned—has triumphed once again, thus denying us the direct borrowing of aru-aru and giving us arrowroot instead.

ar·row·wood (är'ō-wōōd') n. Any of several North American species of viburnum, such as Viburnum dentatum, having straight, tough stems formerly used by certain Native American peoples to make arrows.

arrow worm (är'ō wûrm) n. Any of various small, slender marine worms of the phylum Chaetognatha having a narrow, almost transparent body and sickle-shaped bristles on each side of the mouth.

ar·roy·o (ə-roï'ō) n. pl. ar·roy·os. 1. A deep gully cut by an intermittent stream; a dry gulch. 2. A brook; a creek. [Spanish, from Vulgar Latin arrugiu*, gold mine, underground passage, masculine variant of Latin arrugia, a galleried mine.]

ARS abbr. Agricultural Research Service.

arse (ärs) n. Chiefly British. Variant of ass².

ar·se·nal (är'sə-nəl) n. 1. A governmental establishment for the storing, development, manufacturing, testing, or repairing of arms, ammunition, and other war materiel. 2. A stock of weapons. 3. A store or supply: an arsenal of retorts. [Italian arsenale, from obsolete Italian arzanale, from Arabic dār-aṣ-ṣinā'ah : dār, house + aṣ-, the + ṣinā'ah, manufacture (from ṣana'a, to make).]

ar·se·nate (är'sə-nīt, -nāt') n. A salt or ester of arsenic acid.

ar·se·nic (är'sə-nīk) n. 1. Symbol As A highly poisonous metallic element having three allotropic forms, yellow, black, and gray, of which the brittle, crystalline gray is the most common. Arsenic and its compounds are used in insecticides, weed killers, solid-state doping agents, and various alloys. Atomic number 33; atomic weight 74.922; valence 3, 5. Gray arsenic melts at 817°C (at 28 atm pressure), sublimates at 613°C, and has a specific gravity of 5.73. 2. Arsenic trioxide. — adj. also ar·sen·ic (är-sən'īk) Of or containing arsenic, especially with valence 5. [Middle English arsenik, from Old French, from Latin arsenicum, from Greek arsenikon, yellow orpiment, alteration of Syriac zarnīkā, from Middle Persian zarnīk*, from Old Iranian zarna-*, golden. See ghel⁻² in Appendix.]

ar·sen·ic acid (är-sən'īk äs'īd) n. A poisonous, white, translucent crystalline compound, H₃AsO₄, used to manufacture arsenates.

ar·sen·i·cal (är-sən'ī-kəl) adj. Of or containing arsenic. — n. A drug or preparation containing arsenic.

ar·se·nic trioxide (är'sə-nīk trī-ōk'sīd') n. A poisonous, white amorphous powder, As₂O₃, used in insecticides, rat poisons, and weed killers.

ar·se·nide (är'sə-nīd') n. A compound of arsenic with a more electropositive element.

ar·se·ni·ous (är-sē'nē-əs) adj. Of or containing arsenic, especially with valence 3.

ar·se·no·py·rite (är'sə-nō-pī'rīt) n. A silver-white to gray arsenic ore, essentially FeAsS. Also called mispickel ar·shin (är-shēn') n. Variant of archine.

ar·sine (är-sēn', är'sēn') n. A colorless, flammable, very poisonous gas, H₃As, having an odor like garlic and used in chemical warfare, as a solid-state doping agent, and in organic synthesis. [ARS(ENIC) + -INE².]

ar·sis (är'sis) n. pl. ar·ses (-sēz'). 1. a. The short or unaccented part of a metrical foot, especially in quantitative verse. b. The accented or long part of a metrical foot, especially in accentual verse. 2. Music. The upbeat or unaccented part of a measure. [Middle English, raising of the voice, from Late Latin, raising of the voice, accented part of a metrical foot, from Greek, raising of the foot, marking the upbeat, the unaccented part of a metrical foot, from aeirein, to lift. See wer¹ in Appendix.]

ar·son (är'sən) n. The crime of maliciously, voluntarily, and willfully setting fire to the building, buildings, or other property of another or of burning one's own property for an improper purpose, as to collect insurance. [Anglo-Norman, from Late Latin ārsiō, ārsiōn-, from Latin ārsus, past participle of ārdēre, to burn. See as- in Appendix.] —ar·son·ist n.

ars·phen·a·mine (ärs-fēn'ə-mēn') n. A yellow hygroscopic powder, C₁₂H₁₂As₂N₂O₂·2HCl·2H₂O, formerly used to treat syphilis. [ARS(ENIC) + PHEN(YL) + AMINE.]

art¹ (ärt) n. 1. Human effort to imitate, supplement, alter, or counteract the work of nature. 2. a. The conscious production or arrangement of sounds, colors, forms, movements, or other elements in a manner that affects the sense of beauty, specifically the production of the beautiful in a graphic or plastic medium. b. The study of these activities. c. The product of these activities; human works of beauty considered as a group. 3. High quality of conception or execution, as found in works of beauty; aesthetic value. 4. A field or category of art, such as music, ballet, or literature. 5. A nonscientific branch of learning; one of the liberal arts. 6. a. A system of principles and methods employed in the performance of a set of activities: the art of building. b. A trade or craft that applies such a system of principles and methods: the art of the lexicographer. 7. a. Skill that is attained by study, practice, or observation: the art of the baker; the blacksmith's art. b. Skill arising from the exercise of intuitive faculties: "Self-criticism is an art not many are qualified to practice" (Joyce Carol Oates). 8. a. arts. Artful devices, stratagems, and tricks. b. Artful contrivance; cunning. 9. Printing. Illustrative material. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin ars, art-. See ar- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: art, craft, expertise, knack, know-how, technique. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "skill in doing or performing that is attained by study, practice, or observation": the art of expressing oneself clearly; pottery that reveals craft and fine workmanship; political expertise; a knack for teaching; the know-how to sew one's own clothes; an outstanding keyboard technique.

art² (ərt; ärt when stressed) v. Archaic. A second person singular present indicative of be. [Middle English, from Old English earth. See er¹ in Appendix.]

art. abbr. 1. Article. 2. Artificial. 3. Artillery. 4. Artist.

-art suff. Variant of -ard.

Ar-ta-xer-xes I (är'tə-zûrk'sēz'), Died 424 B.C. King of Persia (465-425) who sanctioned the practice of Judaism in Jerusalem.

Ar-ta-xer-xes II (är'tə-zûrk'sēz'), Died 359 B.C. King of Persia (404-359) whose reign was marked by many rebellions and by a peace agreement with Sparta (386).

art dec-o also Art Dec-o (ärt dĕk'ō) n. A decorative and architectural style of the period 1925-1940, characterized by geometric designs, bold colors, and the use of plastic and glass. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: art deco furnishings; art deco jewelry. [French Art Déco, from Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs et Industriels Modernes, a 1925 exposition in Paris, France.]

ar-te-fact (är'tə-fäkt') n. Variant of artifact.

Ar-te-mis (är'tə-mīs) n. Greek Mythology. The virgin goddess of the hunt and the moon and twin sister of Apollo. [Greek.]

ar-te-mis-i-a (är'tə-mīzh'ē-ə, -mīzh'ə, -mīz'ē-ə) n. Any of various aromatic plants of the genus Artemisia in the composite family, having green or grayish foliage and usually numerous small discoid flower heads and including the mugwort, sagebrush, tarragon, and wormweed. [Middle English artemesie, mugwort, from Old French, from Latin artemisia, from Greek, wormwood, after ARTEMIS, to whom it was sacred.]

ar-te-ri-al (är-tîr'ē-əl) adj. 1. Of, like, or in an artery or arteries. 2. Of, relating to, or being the blood in the arteries that has absorbed oxygen in the lungs and is bright red. 3. Being a main road or channel with many branches: an arterial highway; an arterial route. — n. A through road or street. — ar-te'ri-al-ly adv.

ar-te-ri-al-ize (är-tîr'ē-əl-īz') v. tr. ar-te-ri-al-ized, ar-te-ri-al-iz-ing, ar-te-ri-al-iz-es. To convert (venous blood) into bright red arterial blood by absorption of oxygen in the lungs. — ar-te'ri-al-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

arterio- pref. Artery: arteriovenous. [Greek artērio-, from artēria, artery. See wer¹ in Appendix.]

ar-te-ri-og-ra-phy (är-tîr'ē-ög'rə-fē) n. Examination of the arteries using x-rays following injection of a radiopaque substance. — ar-te'ri-o-gram' (-ə-grām') n. — ar-te'ri-o-graph'ic (-ə-gräf'ik) adj.

ar-te-ri-ole (är-tîr'ē-ōl') n. One of the small terminal branches of an artery, especially one that connects with a capillary. [New Latin arteriola, diminutive of Latin artēria, artery, from Greek. See wer-¹ in Appendix.] —ar-te'ri-o'lar (-ō'lər, -ə-lər) adj.

ar-te-ri-o-scle-ro-sis (är-tîr'ē-ō-skłə-rō'sîs) n. A chronic disease in which thickening, hardening, and loss of elasticity of the arterial walls result in impaired blood circulation. —ar-te'ri-o-scle-rot'ic (-röt'ik) adj.

ar-te-ri-o-ve-nous (är-tîr'ē-ō-vē'nəs) adj. Of, relating to, or connecting both arteries and veins.

ar-te-ri-tis (är'tə-rî'tîs) n. Inflammation of an artery.

ar-ter-y (är'tə-rē) n. pl. ar-ter-ies. 1. Anatomy. Any of a branching system of muscular, elastic tubes that carry blood away from the heart to the cells, tissues, and organs of the body. 2. A major route of transportation into which local routes flow. See Synonyms at way. [Middle English arterie, from Latin artēria, from Greek. See wer-¹ in Appendix.]

ar-te-sian well (är-tē'zhən wĕl) n. A well drilled through impermeable strata to reach water capable of rising to the surface by internal hydrostatic pressure. [French artésien, from Old French, of Artois, from Arteis, Artois, France.]

Ar-te-vel-de (är'tə-vĕl'də), Jacob van. Called “the Brewer of Ghent.” 1290?-1345. Flemish political leader who maintained the neutrality of Flanders during hostilities between England and France and encouraged Edward III to claim the French throne.

art film (ärt fîlm) n. A film intended to be a serious artistic work, often experimental and not designed for mass appeal.

art form (ärt fôrm) n. An activity or a piece of artistic work that can be regarded as a medium of artistic expression.

art-ful (ärt'fəl) adj. 1. Exhibiting art or skill: “The furniture is an artful blend of antiques and reproductions” (Michael W. Robbins). 2. Skillful in accomplishing a purpose, especially by the use of cunning or craft. See Synonyms at sly.

3. Artificial. —art'ful-ly adv. —art'ful-ness n.

arthr- pref. Variant of arthro-.

ar-thral-gia (är-thräl'jə, -jē-ə) n. Neuralgic pain in a joint or joints. —ar-thral'gic (-jĭk) adj.

ar-thri-tis (är-thrî'tîs) n. Inflammation of a joint or joints resulting in pain and swelling. —ar-thrit'ic (-thrĭt'ik) adj., n. —ar-thrit'i-cal-ly adv.

arthro- or arthr- pref. Joint: arthropathy. [Greek, from arthron, joint. See ar- in Appendix.]

ar-throd-e-sis (är-thröd'ĭ-sîs) n. The surgical fixation of a joint, ultimately resulting in bone fusion. Basically, the procedure is artificially induced ankylosis performed to relieve pain or provide support in a diseased or injured joint. [ARTHRO- + Greek desis, binding together (from dein, to bind).]

ar·thro·gry·po·sis (är-thrög'grä-fē) n. Examination of the interior of a joint using x-rays following the injection of a radiopaque substance.

—ar'thro·gram' (är'thrə-gräm') n.

ar·thro·gry·po·sis (är'thrə-grə-pō'sis) n. 1. The permanent fixation of a joint in a contracted position. 2. A congenital disorder marked by generalized stiffness of the joints, often accompanied by muscle and nerve degeneration, which results in severely impaired mobility of the limbs. Also called arthrogryposis multiplex congenita [ARTHRO- + Late Latin grypōsis, hooking (from Late Greek, from Greek grupousthai, to become hooked, from grupos, hook-nosed).]

ar·thro·mere (är'thrə-mîr') n. One of the segments or divisions in the body of a jointed animal, such as an arthropod. —ar'thro·mer'ic (är'thrə-mēr'ik, -mîr'ik) adj.

ar·throp·a·thy (är-thröp'ə-thē) n. A disease or an abnormality of a joint.

ar·thro·pod (är'thrə-pöd') n. Any of numerous invertebrate animals of the phylum Arthropoda, including the insects, crustaceans, arachnids, and myriapods, that are characterized by a chitinous exoskeleton and a segmented body to which jointed appendages are articulated in pairs. [From New Latin Arthropoda, phylum name : ARTHRO- + New Latin -poda, -pod.] —ar'thro·pod adj.

—ar·throp'o·dous (är-thröp'ə-dəs), ar·throp'o·dal (-dəl) adj.

ar·thros·co·py (är-thrös'kə-pē) n. pl. ar·thros·co·pies. Examination of the interior of a joint, such as the knee, using a type of endoscope that is inserted into the joint through a small incision. —ar'thro·scope' (är'thrə-sköp') n.

—ar'thro·scop'ic (-sköp'ik) adj. —ar'thro·scop'ic·al·ly adv.

ar·thro·sis (är-thrō'sis) n. pl. ar·thro·ses (-sēz). 1. Anatomy. An articulation or a joint between bones. 2. A degenerative disease of a joint. [Greek arthrōsis, from arthron, from arthron, joint. See ARTHRO-.]

ar·throt·o·my (är-thröt'ə-mē) n. Surgical incision into a joint.

Ar·thur (är'thər) n. A legendary British hero, said to have been king of the Britons in the sixth century A.D. and to have held court at Camelot.

Ar·thur (är'thər), Chester Alan. 1829-1886. The 21st President of the United States (1881-1885) who became President after the assassination of James A. Garfield. He supported the 1883 Pendleton Act, which created the Civil Service Commission to regulate federal appointments.

Ar·thu·ri·an (är-thōr'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table.

ar·ti·choke (är'ti-chök') n. 1. a. A Mediterranean thistlelike plant (Cynara scolymus) in the composite family, having pinnately divided leaves and large discoid heads of bluish flowers. b. The edible, immature flower head of this plant. Also called globe artichoke 2. The Jerusalem artichoke. [Ultimately from Old Spanish alcarchofa, from Arabic al-ḥaršūf.]

WORD HISTORY: Those who have been warned to watch out for the sharp-tipped bracts toward the innermost part of an artichoke may have wondered whether the name of this vegetable has anything to do with choking. Originally it did not. Our word goes back to an Arabic word for the same plant, al-ḥaršūf. The Arabic word passed into Spanish, a not uncommon occurrence given the fact that Muslims ruled much of Spain for several centuries during the Middle Ages. The Old Spanish word alcarchofa was variously modified as it passed through Italian, a Northern dialect form being articiocco, which looks more like artichoke than al-ḥaršūf. In English, where the word is first recorded in the early 16th century, a potpourri of spellings and explanations of it are found. For example, people who did not know the long history of the word explained it by the notion that the flower had a “choke,” that is, something that chokes, in its “heart.”

ar·ti·cle (är'tī-kəl) n. Abbr. art. 1. An individual thing or element of a class; a particular object or item: an article of clothing; articles of food. 2. A particular section or item of a series in a written document, as in a contract, constitution, or treaty. 3. A nonfictional literary composition that forms an independent part of a publication, as of a newspaper or magazine. 4. Grammar. Any of a class of words used to signal nouns and to specify their application. In English, the indefinite articles are a and an and the definite article is the. 5. A particular part or subject; a specific matter or point. — v. tr. ar·ti·cled, ar·ti·cling, ar·ti·cles. To bind by articles set forth in a contract, such as one of apprenticeship. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin articulus, part, diminutive of artus, joint. See ar- in Appendix.]

article of faith (är'tī-kəl ðv fāth) n. pl. articles of faith. A very basic belief not to be doubted.

ar·tic·u·la·ble (är-tīk'yə-lə-bəl) adj. That can be articulated: articulable doubts.

ar·tic·u·lar (är-tīk'yə-lər) adj. Of or relating to a joint or joints: the articular surfaces of bones. [Middle English articuler, from Latin articulāris, from articulus, small joint. See ARTICLE.] — ar·tic·u·lar·ly adv.

ar·tic·u·late (är-tīk'yə-līt) adj. 1. Endowed with the power of speech. 2. Composed of distinct, meaningful syllables or words, as human speech. 3. Expressing oneself easily in clear and effective language: an articulate speaker. 4. Characterized by the use of clear, expressive language: an articulate essay. 5. Anatomy. Consisting of sections united by joints; jointed. — v.

ar·tic·u·lat·ed, ar·tic·u·lat·ing, ar·tic·u·lates (är-tīk'yə-lāt'). — v. tr. 1. To pronounce distinctly and carefully; enunciate. 2. To utter (a speech sound) by making the necessary movements of the speech organs. 3. To express in coherent verbal form; give words to: couldn't articulate my fears. 4. To fit together into a coherent whole; unify: articulate statewide nursing programs. 5. Anatomy. To unite by forming a joint or joints. — v. intr. 1. To speak clearly and distinctly. 2. To utter a speech sound. 3. Anatomy. To form a joint; be jointed: The thigh-bone articulates with the bones of the hip. [Latin articulātus, past participle of articulāre, to divide into joints, utter distinctly, from articulus, small joint. See ARTICLE.] —ar·tic·u·late·ly adv. —ar·tic·u·late·ness, ar·tic·u·la·cy n.

ar·tic·u·la·tion (är-tik'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. The act of vocal expression; utterance or enunciation: an articulation of the group's sentiments. 2. a. The act or manner of producing a speech sound. b. A speech sound, especially a consonant. 3. a. A jointing together or being jointed together. b. The method or manner of jointing. 4. Anatomy. a. A fixed or movable joint between bones. b. A movable joint between inflexible parts of the body of an animal, as the divisions of an appendage in arthropods. 5. Botany. a. A joint between two separable parts, as a leaf and a stem. b. A node or a space on a stem between two nodes.

—ar·tic·u·la·to·ry (-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē), ar·tic·u·la·tive (-lā'tiv, -lə'tiv) adj.

ar·tic·u·la·tor (är-tik'yə-lā'tər) n. 1. One that articulates: an articulator of the students' concerns. 2. One of the organs of speech, such as the lips or tongue.

ar·ti·fact also ar·te·fact (är'tə-fäkt') n. 1. An object produced or shaped by human craft, especially a tool, a weapon, or an ornament of archaeological or historical interest. 2. A typical product or result: "The very act of looking at a naked model was an artifact of male supremacy" (Philip Weiss). 3. Biology. A structure or substance not normally present but produced by an external agent or action, such as a structure seen in a microscopic specimen after fixation that is not present in the living tissue. [Latin arte, ablative of ars, art; see ART¹ + factum, something made, from neuter past participle of facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.] —ar·ti·fac·tu·al (-fäk'chō-əl) adj.

ar·ti·fice (är'tə-fis) n. 1. An artful or crafty expedient; a stratagem. 2. Subtle but base deception; trickery. 3. Cleverness or skill; ingenuity. [French, from Old French, craftsmanship, from Latin artificium, from artifex, artific-, craftsman : ars, art-, art; see ART¹ + -fex, maker; see dhē- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: artifice, trick, ruse, wile, feint, stratagem, maneuver, dodge. These nouns are compared as they denote means for achieving an end by indirection. Artifice refers to something especially contrived to lead to a desired result or create a desired effect: "His sincerity, although often aided by the actor's artifice, seems genuine" (Richard Cohen). Trick in this sense implies willful deception and often less than honorable motivation: "The... boys... had all sorts of tricks to prevent us from winning" (W.H. Hudson). Ruse stresses the creation of a false impression: Her pretended deafness was a ruse to enable her to learn their plans. Wile suggests deceiving and entrapping a victim by playing on his or her weak points: "He did not fail to see/His uncle's cunning wiles and treachery" (William Morris). Feint denotes a deceptive act calculated to distract attention from one's real purpose: One person bumped into me as a feint while the other stole my wallet. Stratagem implies careful planning for achieving an objective or obtaining an advantage: That you have used every ruthless stratagem to win the much-coveted promotion hasn't endeared you to your rivals. Maneuver applies to calculated and skillful tactics and often to a single strategic move: "To this day they always speak of that Reform Bill as if it had been a dishonest maneuver" (Standard). Dodge stresses shifty and ingenious deception: "It was all false, of course?" 'All, sir,' replied Mr. Weller, '... artful dodge'" (Charles Dickens).

ar·tif·icer (är-tif'ĭ-sər) n. 1. A skilled worker; a craftsman. 2. One that contrives, devises, or constructs something: "The labyrinth... was built by Daedalus, a most skillful artificer" (Thomas Bulfinch).

ar·ti·fi·cial (är'tə-fĭsh'əl) adj. Abbr. art. 1. a. Made by human beings; produced rather than natural. b. Brought about or caused by sociopolitical or other human-generated forces or influences: set up artificial barriers against women and minorities; an artificial economic boom. 2. Made in imitation of something natural; simulated. 3. Not genuine or natural: an artificial smile. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin artificiālis, belonging to art, from artificium, craftsmanship. See ARTIFICE.] —ar'ti-fi'ci-al'i-ty (-fĭsh'ē-äl'ĭ-tē) n.

—ar'ti-fi'cial-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: artificial, synthetic, ersatz, simulated. These adjectives are compared as they refer to what is made by human beings rather than natural in origin. Of these terms artificial is broadest in meaning and connotation: an artificial sweetener; artificial flowers. Synthetic often implies the use of a chemical process to produce a substance that will look or function like the original, often with certain advantages, such as enhanced durability or convenience of use or care: synthetic rubber; a synthetic fabric. An ersatz product is a transparently inferior imitation: ersatz coffee; ersatz mink. Simulated refers to what is made to resemble or substitute for another often costlier substance: a purse of simulated alligator hide; simulated mahogany paneling.

artificial horizon (är'tə-fĭsh'əl hə-rĭ'zən) n. An instrument displaying a line on a flight indicator that lies within the horizontal plane and about which the pitching and banking movements of an aircraft are shown.

artificial insemination (är'tə-fĭsh'əl ĭn-sēm'ə-nā'shən) n. Abbr. AI Introduction of semen into the vagina or uterus without sexual contact.

artificial intelligence (är'tə-fĭsh'əl ĭn-tel'ə-jəns) n. Abbr. AI Computer Science. 1. The ability of a machine to perform those activities that are normally thought to require intelligence. 2. The branch of computer science concerned with the development of machines having this ability.

artificial language (är'tə-fish'əl läng'gwij) n. 1. A language invented for a specific purpose and based on a set of prescribed rules. 2. Computer Science. A language designed for use in a specific field.

artificial respiration (är'tə-fish'əl rës'pə-rā'shən) n. A procedure used to restore or maintain respiration in a person who has stopped breathing. The method uses mechanical or manual means to force air into and out of the lungs in a rhythmic fashion.

artificial selection (är'tə-fish'əl sĭ-lĕk'shən) n. Human intervention in animal or plant reproduction to ensure that certain desirable traits are represented in successive generations.

ar-til-ler-ist (är-tĭl'ər-ĭst) n. A soldier in the artillery; a gunner.

ar-til-ler-y (är-tĭl'ə-rē) n. Abbr. arty., art. 1. Large-caliber weapons, such as cannon, howitzers, and missile launchers, that are operated by crews. 2. The combat arm that specializes in the use of such weapons. 3. The science of the use of guns; gunnery. 4. Weapons, such as catapults, arbalests, and other early devices, used for discharging missiles. [Middle English artillerie, from Old French, from artillier, to equip, perhaps alteration of atiller, from Vulgar Latin apticulāre*, from Latin aptāre, to fit, adapt, from aptus, apt. See APT.]

ar-til-ler-y-man (är-tĭl'ə-rē-mən) n. A soldier in the artillery.

artillery plant (är-tĭl'ə-rē plānt) n. A tropical American plant (Pilea microphylla) having fleshy leaves and an explosive discharge of pollen.

ar-ti-o-dac-tyl (är'tē-ō-dāk'təl) n. Any of various hoofed mammals of the order Artiodactyla, which includes cattle, deer, camels, hippopotamuses, sheep, and goats, that have an even number of toes, usually two or sometimes four, on each foot. [From New Latin Artiodactyla, order name : Greek artios, even; see ar- in Appendix + Greek daktulos, toe.] —ar'ti-o-dac'tyl, ar'ti-o-dac'ty-lous (-tə-ləs) adj.

ar-ti-san (är'tĭ-zən, -sən) n. A skilled manual worker; a craftsperson. [Probably French, from Italian artigiano, from Vulgar Latin artitiānus*, from Latin artĭtus, skilled in the arts, past participle of artĭre, to instruct in the arts, from ars, art-, art. See ar- in Appendix.] —ar'ti-san-ship' n.

art-ist (är'tĭst) n. Abbr. art. 1. One, such as a painter or sculptor, who is able by virtue of imagination and talent to create works of aesthetic value, especially in the fine arts. 2. A person whose work shows exceptional creative ability or skill: You are an artist in the kitchen. 3. One, such as an actor or a singer, especially one who works in the performing arts. 4. One who is adept at an activity, especially one involving trickery or deceit: a con artist. [French artiste, from Old French, lettered person, from Medieval Latin artista, from Latin ars, art-. See ar- in Appendix.]

ar·tiste (är-tēs't/) n. 1. A public performer or entertainer, especially a singer or dancer. 2. A person with artistic pretensions. [French. See ARTIST.]

ar·tis·tic (är-tīs'tik) adj. 1. Of or relating to art or artists: the artistic community. 2. Sensitive to or appreciative of art or beauty: an artistic temperament. 3. Showing imagination and skill: an artistic design. —ar·tis'ti·cal·ly adv.

art·ist·ry (är'tī-strē) n. 1. Artistic ability: a sculptor of great artistry. 2. Artistic quality or craft: the artistry of a poem.

art·ist's video or art·ists' video (är'tists vīd'ē-ō') n. A videotape that concentrates on an artist's life, method, and works, with the main goals being rejection of the commercial qualities of network television and a deep exploration into the subject matter through the use of new techniques in imagery and sound. Also called video art art·less (ärt'lis) adj. 1. Having or displaying no guile, cunning, or deceit. See Synonyms at naive. 2. Free of artificiality; natural: artless charm. 3. Lacking art, knowledge, or skill; uncultured and ignorant. 4. Poorly made or done; crude. —art'less·ly adv. —art'less·ness n.

art nou·veau also Art Nou·veau (är' nōō-vō', ärt') n. A style of decoration and architecture of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, characterized particularly by the depiction of leaves and flowers in flowing, sinuous lines. [French : art, art + nouveau, new.]

Ar·tois (är-twä') A historical region and former province of northern France near the English Channel between Picardy and Flanders. It was ruled at various times by Flanders, Burgundy, Austria, and Spain.

art runner (ärt rŭn'ər) n. A private art dealer who functions as a broker in sales transactions by linking prospective buyers and sellers of works of art. After an exhibition or an auction, the art runner moves unsold works from one gallery to another to stimulate sales.

arts medicine (ärts mēd'ĭ-sĭn) n. A branch of medicine dealing with the special health needs of performers, such as the injuries and disorders suffered by musicians that result from playing a musical instrument.

art song (ärt sōng) n. Music. A lyric song intended to be sung in recital, usually accompanied by a piano.

art·sy·craft·sy (ärt'sē-kräft'sē) adj. Informal. 1. Decorative rather than functional: artsy-craftsy furniture. 2. Pretentiously or self-consciously artistic.

art·work (ärt'wŭrk') n. 1. Work in the graphic or plastic arts, especially small handmade decorative or artistic objects. 2. An illustrative and decorative element, such as a line drawing or a photograph, used in a printed work, such as a book.

art·y (är'tē) adj. art·i·er, art·i·est. Informal. Showily or affectedly artistic. —art'i·ly adv. —art'i·ness n.

arty. abbr. Artillery.

A·ru·ba (ə-rōō'bə) An island of the Netherlands in the Leeward Islands north of the Venezuela coast. It is a popular Caribbean resort area.

a·ru·gu·la (ə-rōō'gə-lə) n. See rocket² (n., sense 1). [Probably Italian dialectal, from Latin ērūca, colewort.]

A·ru Islands also A·roe Islands or Ar·roe Islands (ä'rōō ī'ləndz) An island group of eastern Indonesia, part of the Moluccas in the Arafura Sea southwest of New Guinea. The islands were discovered by the Dutch and colonized by them after 1623.

ar·um (är'əm, âr'-) n. 1. Any of several Old World plants, such as the cuckoopint, of the genus Arum, having basal, arrowhead-shaped leaves. 2. Any of several related plants, such as the arrow arum and water arum. [Latin, wake-robin, from Greek aron.]

arum lily (är'əm līl'ē) n. Chiefly British. The calla lily.

a·rus·pex (ə-rūs'pěks') n. Variant of haruspex.

A·ru·wi·mi (är'ə-wē'mē, är'-) A river of central Africa rising in northeast Zaire near Lake Albert and flowing about 1,287 km (800 mi) generally westward to the Congo River.

ARV abbr. Bible. American Revised Version.

Ar·vad·a (är-văd'ə) A city of north-central Colorado, a residential suburb of Denver. Population, 89,235.

ARVIN abbr. Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

-ary suff. 1. Of or relating to: bacillary. 2. One that relates to or is connected with: boundary. [Middle English -arie, from Old French, from Latin -ārius, adj. and n. suff.]

Ar·y·an (är'ē-ən, är'-) n. 1. See Indo-Iranian. 2. A member of the people who spoke the parent language of the Indo-European languages. 3. A member of any people speaking an Indo-European language. 4. In Nazism, a Caucasian Gentile, especially of Nordic type. — adj. 1. Of or relating to Indo-Iranian. 2. Of or relating to the Indo-European languages or the hypothetical language from which they are derived. 3. Of or relating to a speaker of an Indo-European language. 4. In Nazism, of or relating to a Caucasian Gentile. [From Sanskrit ārya-, noble, Aryan.]

ar·y·te·noid (är'ī-tē'noid', ə-rīt'n-oid') Anatomy. n. 1. Either of two small pitcher-shaped cartilages at the back of the larynx to which the vocal cords are attached. 2. A muscle connected to either of these cartilages. 3. Any of several small mucous glands located in front of these cartilages. — adj. Of or relating to these cartilages or an associated muscle or gland. [New Latin arytaenoīdēs, from Greek arutainoīdēs, shaped like a ladle : arutaina, ladle (from aruein, to draw water) + -oīdēs, -oid.] — ar'y·te·noid'al adj.

as¹ (ăz; əz when unstressed) adv. 1. To the same extent or degree; equally: The child sang as sweetly as a nightingale. 2. For instance: large carnivores, as the bear or lion. 3. When taken into consideration in a specified relation or form: this definition as distinguished from the second one. — conj. 1. To the same degree or quantity that. Often used as a correlative after so or as: You are as sweet as sugar. The situation is not so bad as you suggest. 2. In the same manner or way that: Think as I think. 3. At the same time that; while: slipped on the ice as I ran home. 4. For the reason that; because: went to bed early, as I was exhausted. 5. With the result that: He was so foolish as to lie. 6. Though: Great as the author was, he proved a bad model. Ridiculous as it seems, the tale is true. 7. In accordance with which or with the way in which: The hotel is quite comfortable as such establishments go. The sun is hot, as everyone knows. 8. Informal. That: I don't know as I can answer your question. — pron. 1. That; which; who. Used after same or such: I received the same grade as you did. 2. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. Who, whom, which, or that: Those as want to can come with me. — prep. 1. In the role, capacity, or function of: acting as a mediator. 2. In a manner similar to; the same as: On this issue they thought as one. — idioms. as is. Informal. Just the way it is, with no changes or modifications: bought the samovar as is from an antique dealer. as it were. In a manner of speaking; as if such were so. [Middle English, from Old English ealswā. See ALSO.]

USAGE NOTE: Traditionally, a distinction has been drawn between comparisons using as... as and comparisons using so... as. The so... as construction is traditionally required in negative sentences (as in Shakespeare's "'tis not so deep as a well"), in questions (as in Is it so bad as she says?), and in certain if clauses (as in If it is so bad as you say, you ought to leave). But this so... as construction is becoming increasingly rare in American English, and the use of as... as is now entirely acceptable in all contexts. • In a comparison involving both as... as and than, the second as should be retained in written style. One writes He is as smart as, or smarter than, his brother, not He is as smart or smarter than his brother, which is considered unacceptable in formal style. • In many dialects, as is used in place of that in sentences like We are not sure as we want to go or It's not certain as he left. This construction is not sufficiently well established to be used in writing. • As should be preceded by a comma when it expresses a causal relation, as in She won't be coming, as we didn't invite her. When used to express a time relation, as is not preceded by a comma: She was finishing the painting as I walked into the room. When a clause introduced by as begins a sentence, care should be taken that it is clear whether as is used to mean "because" or "at the same time as." The sentence As they were leaving, I walked to the door may mean either that I walked to the door because they left or at the same time that they were leaving. • As is sometimes used superfluously to introduce the complements of verbs like consider, deem, and account, as in They considered it as one of the landmark decisions of the civil rights movement. The measure was deemed as unnecessary. This usage may have arisen by analogy to regard and esteem, where as is standardly used in this way: We regarded her as the best writer among us. But the use of as with verbs like consider is not sufficiently well established to be acceptable in writing. See Usage Note at because. See Usage Note at equal. See Usage Note at like². See Usage Note at so¹. See Usage Note at than.

REGIONAL NOTE: American dialects often vary from Standard English in the form and usage of relative pronouns. Where Standard English has three relative pronouns—who, which, and that—regional dialects, particularly those of the South and Midlands, allow as and what as relative pronouns: “Them as thinks they can whup me jest come ahead” (Publication of the American Dialect Society). The car what hit him never stopped.

as² (äs) n. pl. as·ses (äs'ēz', äs'īz). 1. An ancient Roman coin of copper or copper alloy. 2. An ancient Roman unit of weight equal to about one troy pound. [Latin ās.]

As The symbol for the element arsenic (n., sense 1).

AS abbr. 1. Also a/s. Air speed. 2. American Samoa 3. Also A.S.. Anglo-Saxon. 4. Antisubmarine. 5. Associate in Science.

As. abbr. Asia; Asian.

as- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

as·a·fet·i·da also as·a·foet·i·da (äs'ə-fět'ī-də) n. A brownish, bitter, foul-smelling resinous material obtained from the roots of several plants of the genus Ferula in the parsley family and formerly used in medicine. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin : asa, gum (from Persian azā, mastic) + Latin fetida, feminine of fetidus, stinking; see FETID.]

A·sa·hi·ka·wa (ä'sə-hē-kä'wə, ä'sä-hē'kä-wä) also A·sa·hi·ga·wa (ä'sə-hē-gä'wə, ä'sä-hē'gä-wä) A city of west-central Hokkaido, Japan. It is the commercial, industrial, and transportation center of a fertile agricultural area. Population, 363,630.

A·sa·ma (ə-sä'mə), Mount. A volcano, 2,543.7 m (8,340 ft) high, of central Honshu, Japan, near Nagano. One of the largest and most active volcanoes in Japan, it erupted violently in 1783.

A·san·te (ə-sän'tē) n. Variant of Ashanti¹.

ASAP or asap abbr. As soon as possible.

ASAT also Asat. abbr. Anti-satellite.

as·bes·tos also as·bes·tus (äs-bēs'təs, äz-) n. Abbr. asb. Either of two incombustible, chemical-resistant, fibrous mineral forms of impure magnesium silicate, used for fireproofing, electrical insulation, building materials, brake linings, and chemical filters. — adj. Of, made of, or containing one or the other of these two mineral forms. [Middle English asbestos, from Latin asbestos, mineral or gem, from Greek, mineral or gem, unslaked lime, from asbestos, unquenchable :

a-, not; see A⁻¹ + sbennunai, sbes-, to quench.] —as-bes'tine (-tĭn), as-bes'tic (-tĭk) adj.

as-bes-to-sis (ăs'bēs-tō'sĭs, ăz'-) n. A chronic, progressive lung disease caused by prolonged inhalation of asbestos particles. [ASBEST(OS) + -OSIS.]

—as'bes-tot'ic (-töt'ĭk) adj.

as-bes-tus (ăs-bēs'təs, ăz-) n. & adj. Variant of asbestos.

As-bur-y (ăz'bə-rē), Francis. 1745-1816. British-born American religious leader and first Methodist Episcopal cleric to become a bishop in the colonies (1784).

As-bur-y Park (ăz'bēr'ē pārk, -bə-rē) A city of eastern New Jersey on the Atlantic Ocean. It is a popular resort. Population, 16,799.

ASCAP abbr. American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers.

a-scared (ə-skârd') adj. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. Afraid. [Probably a- (variant of γ-, past participle pref.); see YCLEPT + scared, past participle of SCARE.]

as-ca-ri-a-sis (ăs'kə-rĭ'ə-sĭs) n. Infestation with or disease caused by a parasitic roundworm Ascaris lumbricoides. [ASCAR(ID) + -IASIS.]

as-ca-rid (ăs'kə-rĭd) n. Any of various nematode worms of the family Ascaridae, which includes the common intestinal parasite Ascaris lumbricoides. [Sing. of ascarides, intestinal worms, from Late Latin, from Greek askarides, pl. of askaris, intestinal worm.]

ASCE abbr. American Society of Civil Engineers.

as-cend (ə-sĕnd') v. as-cend-ed, as-cend-ing, as-cends. — v. intr. 1. To go or move upward; rise. See Synonyms at rise. 2. To slope upward. — v. tr.

1. To move upward upon or along; climb: ascended the mountain. 2. To succeed to; occupy: ascended the throne upon the death of her father. [Middle English ascenden, from Old French ascendre, from Latin ascendere: ad-, ad- + scandere, to climb; see skand- in Appendix.] —as-cend'a-ble, as-cend'i-ble adj.

as-cen-dance also as-cen-dence (ə-sĕn'dəns) n. Ascendancy.

as-cen-dan-cy also as-cen-den-cy (ə-sĕn'dən-sĕ) n. Superiority or decisive advantage; domination: "Germany only awaits trade revival to gain an immense mercantile ascendancy" (Winston S. Churchill).

as-cen-dant also as-cen-dent (ə-sĕn'dənt) adj. 1. Inclining or moving upward; ascending or rising. 2. Dominant in position or influence; superior. — n. 1. The position or state of being dominant or in control: a conservative policy currently in the ascendant. 2. The point of the ecliptic or the sign of the zodiac that rises in the east at the time of a person's birth or other event. 3. An ancestor.

as-cend-er (ə-sĕn'dər) n. 1. Printing. The part of the tall lowercase letters, such as b, d, and h, that extends above the other lowercase letters. 2. A letter with such a part.

as-cend-ing (ə-sĕn/'dĩng) adj. 1. Moving, going, or growing upward: an ascending minor scale. 2. Botany. Growing or directing upward from a curved or slanted base, as certain plant stems. —as-cend/ing-ly adv.

ascending rhythm (ə-sĕn/'dĩng rĩth/'əm) n. See rising rhythm.

as-cen-sion (ə-sĕn/'shən) n. 1. The act or process of ascending; ascent. 2. Astronomy. The rising of a star above the horizon. 3. Ascension. Theology. The bodily rising of Jesus into heaven on the 40th day after his Resurrection. [Middle English ascensioun, from Old French ascention, from Latin ascēnsiō, ascēnsiōn-, from ascēnsus, past participle of ascendere, to ascend. See ASCEND.] —as-cen/sion-al adj.

Ascension Day (ə-sĕn/'shən dā) n. The 40th day after Easter, on which the Christian feast of the Ascension is observed. Also called Holy Thursday Ascension Island (ə-sĕn/'shən i'lənd) An island in the southern Atlantic northwest of St. Helena. Discovered by the Portuguese on Ascension Day in 1501, it was taken by the British in 1815 and has been administered by St. Helena since 1922.

as-cent (ə-sĕnt') n. 1. The act or process of rising or going upward. 2. An advancement, especially in social status. 3. An upward slope or incline. 4. A going back in time or upward in genealogical succession. [From ASCEND, on the model of DESCENT.]

as-cer-tain (äs'ər-tān') v. tr. as-cer-tained, as-cer-tain-ing, as-cer-tains.

1. To discover with certainty, as through examination or experimentation. See Synonyms at discover. 2. Archaic. To make certain, definite, and precise. [Middle English acertainen, to inform, from Old French acertener, ascertain- : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + certain, certain; see CERTAIN.] —as'cer-tain/a-ble adj. —as'cer-tain/a-ble-ness n. —as'cer-tain/a-bly adv. —as'cer-tain/ment n.

as-cet-ic (ə-sĕt/'ĩk) n. A person who renounces material comforts and leads a life of austere self-discipline, especially as an act of religious devotion. — adj.

1. Leading a life of self-discipline and self-denial, especially for spiritual improvement. See Synonyms at severe. 2. Pertaining to or characteristic of an ascetic; self-denying and austere: an ascetic existence. [Late Greek askētikos, from Greek askētēs, practitioner, hermit, monk, from askein, to work.]

—as-cet/i-cal-ly adv.

as-cet-i-cism (ə-sĕt/'ĩ-sĩz'əm) n. 1. The principles and practices of an ascetic; extreme self-denial and austerity. 2. The doctrine that the ascetic life releases the soul from bondage to the body and permits union with the divine.

Asch (ăsh), Sholem or Shalom. 1880-1957. Polish-born American Yiddish writer who sought to reconcile Judaism and Christianity in his controversial novels, such as The Nazarene (1939).

A·schaf·fen·burg (ä-shä'fən-bərg, -böörk') A city of west-central Germany on the Main River. Once the site of a Roman garrison, it became part of Bavaria in 1814. Population, 59,088.

As·cham (äs'kəm), Roger. 1515-1568. English scholar who as Latin secretary to Edward VI, Mary I, and Elizabeth I advocated the use of the vernacular in literature.

as·ci (äs'ī', -kī') n. Botany. Plural of ascus.

as·cid·i·an (ə-sīd'ē-ən) n. See sea squirt. [From New Latin Ascidia, genus name, from Greek askidion, diminutive of askos, wineskin.]

as·cid·i·um (ə-sīd'ē-əm) n. pl. as·cid·i·a (ə-sīd'ē-ə). Botany. A pitcher-shaped or bottle-shaped part or organ, such as the hollow tubular leaf of a pitcher plant. [New Latin, from Greek askidion, diminutive of askos, wineskin.] —as·cid'iate' adj. —as·cid'i·form' (-ə-fōrm') adj.

ASCII (äs'kē) n. Computer Science. 1. A standard for defining codes for information exchange between equipment produced by different manufacturers. 2. A code that follows this standard. [A(merican) S(tandard) C(ode for) I(nformation) I(nterchange).] as·ci·tes (ə-sī'tēz) n. pl. ascites. An abnormal accumulation of serous fluid in the abdominal cavity. [Middle English aschites, from Late Latin ascītēs, from Greek askitēs, from askos, belly, wineskin.] —as·cit'ic (-sīt'ik) adj.

As·cle·pi·us (ə-sklē'pē-əs) n. Greek Mythology. Apollo's son, the god of medicine.

asco- pref. Ascus: ascospore. [New Latin, from Greek askos, bag, wineskin.]

as·co·carp (äs'kə-kärp') n. Botany. An ascus-bearing structure found in ascomycetous fungi.

as·co·go·ni·um (äs'kə-gō'nē-əm) n. pl. as·co·go·ni·a (-nē-ə). Botany. The female reproductive organ of ascomycetous fungi.

A·sco·li Pi·ce·no (ä'skə-lē pī-chēn'ō) A city of central Italy northeast of Rome. It has extensive Roman ruins. Population, 54,193.

as·co·my·cete (äs'kō-mī'sēt', -mī-sēt') n. Botany. Any of various members of a large group of fungi characterized by the presence of sexually produced spores formed within an ascus. Also called sac fungus —as'co·my·ce'tous (-sē'təs) adj.

a·sco·r·bate (ə-skôr'bāt, -bīt) n. A salt of ascorbic acid. [ASCORB(IC ACID) + -ATE².]

a·sco·r·bic acid (ə-skôr'bik äs'īd) n. A white, crystalline vitamin, C₆H₈O₆, found in citrus fruits, tomatoes, potatoes, and leafy green vegetables and used to prevent scurvy. Also called vitamin C [A⁻¹ + SCORB(UT)IC.]

as·co·spore (äs'kə-spôr', -spōr') n. A sexually produced fungal spore formed within an ascus. —as'co·spo'rous (-spôr'əs, -spōr'-, äs-kōs'pər-əs), as'co·spor'ic (-spōr'ik, -spōr'-) adj.

as·cot (äs'kət, -köt') n. A broad neck scarf knotted so that its ends are laid flat with one end upon the other. [After the racetrack near Ascot.]

As·cot (äs'kət) A village of south-central England southwest of London. The Royal Ascot horseraces, initiated by Queen Anne in 1711, are held annually in June on Ascot Heath.

as·cribe (ə-skrib') v. tr. as·cribed, as·crib·ing, as·cribes. 1. To attribute to a specified cause, source, or origin: ascribed the poor harvest to drought. See Synonyms at attribute. 2. To assign as a quality or characteristic: ascribed jealousy to the critics. [Middle English ascriben, from Old French ascrivre, from Latin ascribere: ad-, ad- + scribere, to write; see skribh- in Appendix.]

as·crip·tion (ə-skrip'shən) n. 1. The act of ascribing. 2. A statement that ascribes. [Latin ascriptiō, ascriptiōn-, addendum, from ascriptus, past participle of ascribere, to ascribe. See ASCRIBE.] —as·crip'tive adj.

ASCU abbr. Association of State Colleges and Universities.

As·cu·lum (äs'kyə-ləm) An ancient Roman town of southeast Italy south of present-day Foggia. Pyrrhus of Epirus defeated a Roman force here in 279 B.C. but suffered a heavy loss of troops.

as·cus (äs'kəs) n. pl. as·ci (äs'ī', -kī'). Botany. A membranous, often club-shaped structure in which typically eight ascospores are formed through sexual reproduction of ascomycetes. [New Latin, from Greek askos, bag.]

ASE abbr. American Stock Exchange.

-ase suff. Enzyme: amylase. [From DIASTASE.]

a·sep·a·lous (ā-sěp'ə-ləs) adj. Botany. Having no sepals.

a·sep·sis (ə-sěp'sis, ā-) n. 1. The state of being free of pathogenic microorganisms. 2. The process of removing pathogenic microorganisms or protecting against infection by such organisms.

a·sep·tic (ə-sěp'tik, ā-) adj. 1. a. Free of pathogenic microorganisms: aseptic surgical instruments. b. Using methods to protect against infection by pathogenic microorganisms: aseptic surgical techniques. 2. Lacking animation or emotion: an aseptic smile. —a·sep'ti·cal·ly adv. —a·sep'ti·cism n.

a·sex·u·al (ā-sěk'shōō-əl) adj. 1. Having no evident sex or sex organs; sexless. 2. Relating to, produced by, or involving reproduction that occurs without the union of male and female gametes, as in binary fission or budding. 3. Lacking interest in or desire for sex. —a·sex'u·al'i·ty (-ăl'ī-tē) n. —a·sex'u·al·ly adv.

as far as (ăz făr ăz) conj. To the degree or extent that: They returned at nine, as far as we know.

as for (ăz fôr) prep. With regard to.

asg. abbr. 1. Assigned. 2. Assignment.

As·gard (ăs'gärd', äz'-) n. Mythology. The heavenly residence of the Norse gods and slain heroes of war.

asgd. abbr. Assigned.

asgmt. abbr. Assignment.

ash¹ (ăsh) n. 1. The grayish-white to black powdery residue left when something is burned. 2. Geology. Pulverized particulate matter ejected by volcanic eruption. 3. ashes. Ruins: the ashes of a lost culture. 4. ashes. Human remains, especially after cremation or decay. [Middle English asshe, from Old English æsce. See as- in Appendix.]

ash² (ăsh) n. 1. Any of various chiefly deciduous ornamental or timber trees of the genus Fraxinus, having opposite, pinnately compound leaves, clusters of small flowers, and one-seeded winged fruits. 2. The strong, elastic wood of this tree, used for furniture, tool handles, and sporting goods such as baseball bats. 3. Linguistics. The letter æ in Old English and some modern phonetic alphabets, representing the vowel sound of Modern English ash. [Middle English asshe, from Old English æsc.]

a-shamed (ə-shāmd') adj. 1. Feeling shame or guilt: Are you ashamed for having lied? 2. Feeling inferior, inadequate, or embarrassed: ashamed of my torn coat. 3. Reluctant through fear of humiliation or shame: ashamed to ask for help. [Middle English, from Old English āsceamod, past participle of āsceamian, to feel shame : ā-, intensive pref. + sceamian, to feel shame.]

A-shan-ti¹ (ə-shăn'tē, ə-shăn'-) also A-san-te (-săn'tē) n. pl. Ashanti or A-shan-tis also Asante or A-san-tes. 1. A member of an Akan people of Ghana, formerly united in the Ashanti kingdom. 2. The Twi language of the Ashanti.

A-shan-ti² (ə-shăn'tē, -shăn'-) A region and former kingdom of western Africa in present-day central Ghana. The powerful Ashanti confederation of states, formed in the late 17th century, was defeated by the British in 1896 and annexed to the British Gold Coast colony in 1901.

ash-cake (ăsh'kāk') n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See johnnycake. See Regional note at johnnycake. [From its being baked in hot ashes.]

ash-can or ash can (ăsh'kăn') n. 1. A large, usually metal receptacle for trash. 2. Slang. A depth change.

Ash-can school (ăsh'kăn' skōol) n. A group of U.S. painters of the early 20th century who painted realistic scenes of everyday urban life.

Ash-croft (ăsh'krôft', -krôft'), Dame Peggy. Originally Edith Margaret Emily Ashcroft. 1907-1991. British actress who won an Academy Award for A Passage to India (1984).

Ash-dod (ăsh'död', ăsh-dōd') A city of southwest Israel on the Mediterranean Sea west of Jerusalem near the site of ancient Ashdod, an important Philistine city-state that was settled as early as the Bronze Age. Population, 68,900.

Ashe (ăsh), Arthur Robert, Jr. 1943-1993. American tennis player who was the first Black player to win the U.S. Open singles championship (1968) and the Wimbledon singles title (1975).

Ash·bor·o (ăsh'bür-ō', -bür-ō) A city of central North Carolina in the Piedmont south of Greensboro. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 15,252.

ash·en¹ (ăsh'ən) adj. 1. Consisting of ashes. 2. Resembling ashes, especially in color; very pale: A face ashen with grief.

ash·en² (ăsh'ən) adj. Of, relating to, or made from the wood of the ash tree.

Ash·er (ăsh'ər) In the Old Testament, a son of Jacob and the forebear of one of the tribes of Israel.

Ash·ville (ăsh'vīl') A city of western North Carolina in the Blue Ridge west-northwest of Charlotte. A popular tourist center, it is the site of Thomas Wolfe's home and of Biltmore, a magnificent mansion with extensive parks and gardens built by George Washington Vanderbilt. Population, 61,607.

Ash·ke·lon (ăsh'kə-lŏn', ăsh'kĕ-lŏn') See Ashqelon.

Ash·ke·naz·i (ăsh'kə-nă'zē) n. pl. Ash·ke·naz·im (-nă'zīm, -nă'zīm). A member of the branch of European Jews, historically Yiddish-speaking, who settled in central and northern Europe. [From Medieval Hebrew Ashkenaz, Germany, from Hebrew Ashkēnāz, one of Noah's grandsons, name of a neighboring but unidentified nation.] —Ash'ke·naz'ic (-nă'zīk) adj.

Ash·ke·na·zy (ăsh'kə-nă'zē), Vladimir Davidovitch. Born 1937. Soviet pianist noted for his intellectual interpretation of classical, romantic, and modern music.

Ash·kha·bad (ăsh'kă-bād', -KHă-băt') The capital of Turkmenistan, in the south-central part near the Iranian border. It was founded as a fortress in 1881. A major earthquake in 1948 virtually destroyed the old city. Population, 356,000.

Ash·land (ăsh'lænd) 1. A city of northeast Kentucky on the Ohio-West Virginia border. Settled in 1786, it is a shipping point with varied industries. Population, 23,622. 2. A city of north-central Ohio southeast of Cleveland. It is a manufacturing center in an agricultural region. Population, 20,079.

ash·lar (ăsh'lər) n. 1. a. A squared block of building stone. b. Masonry of such stones. 2. A thin, dressed rectangle of stone for facing walls. [Middle English assheler, from Old French aisselier, board, from aisselle, from Medieval Latin axicellus, from Latin assis.]

ash-leaved maple (ăsh'lēvd' mă'pəl) or ash-leaf maple (-lēf') n. See box elder.

a·shore (ə-shôr', ə-shōr') adv. 1. To or onto the shore: driven ashore by the wind. 2. On land: spent the day ashore.

as how (ăz hou) conj. Informal. That: The child allowed as how he had already done his homework.

Ash·qe·lon or Ash·ke·lon (ăsh'kə-lŏn', ăsh'kĕ-lŏn') An ancient city of southwest Palestine on the Mediterranean Sea. Inhabited as early as the third millennium B.C., it was a seat of worship for the goddess Astarte.

ash·ram (ăsh'ram) n. Hinduism. A usually secluded residence of a religious community and its guru. [Sanskrit āśramaḥ : ā-, to + śramaḥ, toil, penance, austerity (from śramati, he toils, practices austerity).]

Ash·ta·bu·la (ăsh'tă-byōō'lă) A city of northeast Ohio on Lake Erie northeast of Cleveland. It is an industrial center in an agricultural region. Population, 21,6333.

Ash·ton (ăsh'tən), Sir Frederick. 1904-1988. British choreographer whose ballets include The Dream (1964) and A Month in the Country (1976).

Ash·ton·un·der·Lyne (ăsh'tən-ün-dăr-līn') A borough of northwest England, an industrial suburb of Manchester. Population, 218,800.

Ash·to·reth (ăsh'tă-rĕth') n. Mythology. The ancient Syrian and Phoenician goddess of sexual love and fertility.

ash·tray (ăsh'tră') n. A receptacle for tobacco ashes and cigarette butts.

A·shur (ă'shōōr') also As·sur (ă'sōōr', ä'shōōr') n. The principal Assyrian deity.

A·shur·ba·ni·pal (ă'shōōr-bă'nă-păl') also As·sur·ba·ni·pal (ă'sōōr-), fl. seventh century B.C. King of Assyria (669-626) who was a noted patron of literature and the arts.

Ash Wednesday (ăsh wĕnz'dĕ) n. The seventh Wednesday before Easter and the first day of Lent, on which many Christians receive a mark of ashes on the forehead as a token of penitence and mortality.

ash·y (ăsh'ĕ) adj. ash·i·er, ash·i·est. 1. Of, relating to, or covered with ashes. 2. Having the color of ashes; pale. —ash·i·ness n.

ASI abbr. Air speed indicator.

A·sia (ă'zhă, ā'shă) Abbr. As. The world's largest continent. It occupies the eastern part of the Eurasian landmass and its adjacent islands and is separated from Europe by the Ural Mountains.

Asia Minor (ă'zhă mī'năr) A peninsula of western Asia between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean Sea. It is generally coterminous with Asian Turkey and is usually considered synonymous with Anatolia.

A·sian (ă'zhən, ā'shən) adj. Abbr. As. Of or relating to Asia or its peoples, languages, or cultures. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Asia. 2. A person of Asian descent.

USAGE NOTE: The term Asian is now preferred for persons of South and East Asian ancestry (Indians, Southeast Asians, Chinese, Koreans, Japanese, Indonesians, Filipinos, and others) in place of the term Oriental, an older usage that denotes some of these groups. Oriental has been objected to on two grounds: because it suggests racial, rather than cultural identity, and because it identifies the place of origin in terms of its location relative to the West (i.e., “from the East”), rather than in absolute terms.

Asian American (ā'zhən ə-mēr'ī-kən) n. A U.S. citizen or resident of Asian descent.

Asian influenza (ā'zhən ɪn'flō-ən'zə) n. Influenza caused by a strain of the most common influenza virus (type A), which was first isolated in China during the 1957 epidemic. Also called Asian flu

A-sian-i-za-tion (ā'zhə-nī-zā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of making or becoming Asian in character, culture, or outlook. 2. Development of more complex, integral relations among Asian nations, apart from external involvements.

Asian pear (ā'zhən pâr) n. See sand pear.

Asian tiger mosquito (ā'zhən tī'gər mə-skē'tō) n. A mosquito (Aedes albopictus), once confined to Asia but now present in parts of tropical and subtropical America, that transmits dengue and yellow fever.

A-si-at-ic (ā'zhē-ăt'ik, -shē-, -zē-) adj. Asian: the Asiatic reaches of the Soviet Union; a tropical Asiatic plant.

Asiatic cholera (ā'zhē-ăt'ik kōl'ər-ə) n. See cholera (n., sense 1).

a-side (ə-sīd') adv. 1. To or toward the side: step aside. 2. Out of one's thoughts or mind: put my doubts aside. 3. Apart: a day set aside for relaxing. 4. In reserve; away: put a little money aside. 5. Set out of the way; dispensed with: All joking aside, can you swim 15 miles? — n. 1. A piece of dialogue intended for the audience and supposedly not heard by the other actors on stage. 2. A remark made in an undertone so as to be inaudible to others nearby. 3. A parenthetical departure; a digression.

aside from (ə-sīd' frūm) prep. Excluding; except for: Aside from a mild fever, the patient feels fine.

as if (əz ɪf) conj. 1. In the same way that it would be if: looked as if she were made of ice. 2. That: It seemed as if the meeting would never end.

As-i-mov (əz'ī-môf', -mōf'), Isaac. 1920-1992. Russian-born American scientist and prolific writer whose works include popular explanations of scientific principles and volumes of science fiction, including The Foundation Trilogy (1963).

as-i-nine (əs'ə-nīn') adj. 1. Utterly stupid or silly: asinine behavior. 2. Of, relating to, or resembling an ass. [Latin asininus, of an ass, from asinus, ass.]

ask (ăsk) v. asked, ask-ing, asks. — v. tr. 1. To put a question to. 2. To seek an answer to: ask a question. 3. To seek information about: asked directions.

4. To make a request of or for: asked me for money; asking a favor. 5. To require or call for as a price or condition: asked ten dollars for the book. 6. To expect or demand: ask too much of a child. 7. To invite: asked them to dinner. 8. Archaic. To publish, as marriage banns. — v. intr. 1. To make inquiry; seek information.

2. To make a request: asked for help. — idiom. ask for it (or ask for trou- ble). Informal. To persist in an action despite the likelihood that it will result in difficulty or punishment. [Middle English asken, from Old English āscian. See ais- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: ask, question, inquire, query, interrogate, examine, quiz. These verbs mean to seek information from a person. Ask is the most neutral term: asked her what was wrong; asked the way to the library; ask too many questions. Question often implies the asking of a series of questions, as in determining the scope of a problem: The prosecutor questioned the witness in great detail. Inquire, which often implies a comprehensive search for knowledge or truth, in this sense refers to a simple request for information: inquired where the books were kept; will inquire how we can be of help; inquired about her health. Query usually suggests questioning to settle a doubt: The proofreader queried the spelling of the word. Interrogate, a more formal word, applies especially to official questioning: The suspects were called in and interrogated by detectives. Examine refers particularly to close and detailed questioning to ascertain the extent of a person's knowledge or the adequacy of his or her qualifications: At the end of the semester students are examined in every subject. Only lawyers who have been examined and certified by the bar association are admitted to practice. Quiz is used most frequently to denote the informal examination of students to verify their comprehension of classwork or reading: The teacher quizzed the pupils on the multiplication tables.

a·skance (ə-skāns') also a·skant (ə-skānt') adv. 1. With disapproval, suspicion, or distrust. 2. With a sideways glance; obliquely. [Origin unknown.]

a·skew (ə-skyōō') adv. & adj. To one side; awry: rugs lying askew. [Probably A-² + SKEW.]

ask·ing price (ăs'kīng prīs) n. The price at which an item is offered for sale.

ASL abbr. American Sign Language.

a·slant (ə-slānt') adv. & adj. At a slant; obliquely. — prep. Obliquely over or across.

a·sleep (ə-slēp') adj. 1. In a state of sleep; sleeping. 2. a. Inactive; dormant.

b. Indifferent: politicians who are asleep to the needs of their constituents.

3. Numb: My leg is asleep. 4. Dead. — adv. 1. In or into a state of sleep. 2. In or into a state of apathy or indifference. 3. Into the sleep of the dead.

as long as (ăz lông ăz) conj. 1. Since: As long as you've offered, I accept. 2. On the condition that: I will cooperate as long as I am notified on time.

a·slope (ə-slōp') adv. & adj. At a slope or slant.

a·slosh (ə-slōsh') adv. & adj. Awash.

As·ma·ra (ăz-mă'rə) The capital and largest city of Eritrea, in the central part of the country near the Red Sea at an altitude of about 2,227 m (7,300 ft). It was used as a base for the Italian invasion of Ethiopia (1935-1936). Population, 474,241.

ASME abbr. American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

As-mo-de-us (ăz'mə-dē'əs, ăs'-) n. The king of the demons in Jewish demonology.

As-nières-sur-Seine (ä-nyēr'sür-sān', -sĕn') A city of north-central France, a residential suburb of Paris. Population, 71,077.

A-so (ä'sō'), Mount. Also Aso-san (ä'sō-sän'). A volcanic mountain of central Kyushu, Japan. It is topped by one of the world's largest calderas, containing five volcanic cones, one of which is active. The highest cone rises to 1,593 m (5,223 ft).

a-so-cial (ā-sō'shəl) adj. 1. Not social: "Bears are asocial, secretive animals" (David Graber). 2. Avoiding or averse to the society of others; not sociable: "It's not that you're so asocial, but a man who likes people doesn't wind up in the Antarctic" (Saul Bellow). 3. Unable or unwilling to conform to normal standards of social behavior; antisocial: "crime, riots, drug use and other asocial behavior" (Derek Shearer). 4. Inconsiderate of others; self-centered. — n. One that exhibits behavior and characteristics deemed asocial: "the other, and usually neglected, victims... the asocials... those who violated the Nazi work ethic and social norms" (Mary Nolan).

as of (ăz ũv) prep. On; at: The project was terminated as of January 1.

A-so-ka (ə-sō'kə), Known as "the Great." Died 232 B.C. King of Magadha (273-232) who was converted to Buddhism and adopted it as the state religion.

A-so-san (ä'sō-sän') See Mount Aso.

asp (ăsp) n. Any of several venomous snakes of Africa, Asia, and Europe, such as the small cobra (Naja haje) or the horned viper (Cerastes cornutus). [Middle English aspis, from Latin, from Greek.]

as-par-a-gin-ase (ə-spär'ə-jə-nās', -nāz') n. An enzyme isolated from bacteria that catalyzes the hydrolysis of asparagine and is used in the chemotherapeutic treatment of leukemia.

as-par-a-gine (ə-spär'ə-jĕn') n. A crystalline amino acid, C₄H₈N₂O₃, found in many plants, that is easily hydrolyzed to aspartic acid. [ASPARAG(US) + -INE².]

as-par-a-gus (ə-spär'ə-gəs) n. 1. The tender young shoots of a Eurasian plant (Asparagus officinalis), eaten as a vegetable. 2. Any of various perennial plants of the Old World genus Asparagus having leaflike stems, scalelike leaves, and small flowers. [Latin, from Greek asparagos.]

asparagus bean (ə-spär'ə-gəs bĕn) n. See yard-long bean.

asparagus beetle (ə-spär'ə-gəs bĕt'l) n. A small, spotted beetle (Crioceris asparagi) that infests and damages asparagus plants.

asparagus fern (ə-spär'ə-gəs fûrn) n. A fernlike, evergreen, southern African plant (Asparagus setaceus) having small whitish flowers and red or purple-black berries.

asparagus pea (ə-spär'ə-gəs pē) n. An Asiatic twining herb (Psophocarpus tetragonolobus) having tuberous roots and long, four-angled pods. Also called winged bean as·par·tame (äs'pär-tām', ə-spär'-) n. An artificial sweetener, $C_{14}H_{18}N_2O_5$, formed from aspartic acid. [ASPART(IC ACID) + (PHENYL)A(LANINE) + M(ETHYL) + E(STER).]

as·par·tate (ə-spär'tāt) n. A salt or ester of aspartic acid. [ASPART(IC ACID) + -ATE².]

as·par·tic acid (ə-spär'tik äs'ɪd) n. A nonessential amino acid, $C_4H_7NO_4$, found especially in young sugar cane and sugar-beet molasses. [From ASPARAGUS (from its being obtained from an amino acid found in asparagus).]

as·par·to·kin·ase (ə-spär'tō-kī'nās) n. An enzyme that catalyzes aspartic acid phosphorylation by ATP. [ASPART(IC ACID) + KINASE.]

As·pa·sia (ä-spā'zhə), fl. c. 440 B.C. Greek courtesan and lover of Pericles who was noted for her wisdom, wit, and beauty.

A.S.P.C.A. abbr. American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

as·pect (äs'pēkt) n. 1. A particular look or facial expression; mien: "He was serious of aspect but wholly undistinguished" (Louis Auchincloss). 2. Appearance to the eye, especially from a specific vantage point. 3. A way in which something can be viewed by the mind: looked at all aspects of the situation. See Synonyms at phase. 4. A position facing or commanding a given direction; exposure. 5. A side or surface facing in a particular direction: the ventral aspect of the body.

6. a. The configuration of the stars or planets in relation to one another. b. This configuration, thought by astrologers to influence human affairs. 7. Grammar. A category of the verb designating primarily the relation of the action to the passage of time, especially in reference to completion, duration, or repetition.

8. Archaic. An act of looking or gazing. [Middle English, from Latin aspectus, a view, from past participle of aspicere, to look at : ad-, ad- + specere, to look; see spek- in Appendix.]

aspect ratio (äs'pēkt rā'shō) n. 1. The width-to-height ratio of a television image. 2. The span-to-mean-chord ratio of an airfoil.

as·pen (äs'pən) n. Any of several trees of the genus Populus having leaves attached by flattened leafstalks so that they flutter readily in the wind. — adj.

1. Of or relating to one of these trees. 2. Shivering or trembling like the leaves of one of these trees. [Middle English aspe, from Old English æspe.]

As·pen (äs'pən) A city of west-central Colorado in the Sawatch Range of the Rocky Mountains. Founded c. 1879 by silver prospectors, it is now a fashionable ski resort. Population, 5,049.

as-per-ate (ăs'pə-rāt') v. tr. as-per-at-ed, as-per-at-ing, as-per-ates. To make uneven; roughen. [Latin asperāre, asperāt-, from asper, rough.]

as-per-ges (ə-spûr'jēz) n. Roman Catholic Church. The ceremony of sprinkling the altar, clergy, and congregation with holy water. [From Latin asperges (me), you will sprinkle (me), the first words of the rite, from aspergere, to sprinkle. See ASPERSE.]

as-per-gill (ăs'pər-jīl) n. Roman Catholic Church. Variant of aspergillum.

as-per-gil-lo-sis (ăs'pər-jə-lō'sis) n. An infection or a disease caused by fungi of the genus Aspergillus. [ASPERGILL(US) + -OSIS.]

as-per-gil-lum (ăs'pər-jīl'əm) or as-per-gill (-jīl) n. pl. as-per-gil-la (-jīl'ə) or as-per-gil-lums. Roman Catholic Church. An instrument, such as a brush or a perforated container, used for sprinkling holy water. [New Latin, from Latin aspergere, to sprinkle. See ASPERSE.]

as-per-gil-lus (ăs'pər-jīl'əs) n. pl. as-per-gil-li (-jīl'ī'). Any of various fungi of the genus Aspergillus, which includes many common molds. [New Latin, from aspergillum, aspergill (from its resemblance to an aspergillum brush). See ASPERGILLUM.]

as-per-i-ty (ă-spēr'ī-tē) n. pl. as-per-i-ties. 1. a. Roughness or harshness, as of surface, sound, or climate: the asperity of northern winters. b. Severity; rigor.

2. Harshness of manner; ill temper or irritability. [Middle English asperite, from Old French asprete, from Latin asperitās, from asper, rough.]

as-per-se (ə-spûrs') v. tr. as-pers-ed, as-pers-ing, as-pers-es. 1. To spread false or damaging charges or insinuations against. See Synonyms at malign.

2. To sprinkle, especially with holy water. [Middle English, to besprinkle, from Latin aspergere, aspers- : ad-, ad- + spargere, to strew.]

as-per-sion (ə-spûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. a. An unfavorable or damaging remark; slander: Don't cast aspersions on my honesty. b. The act of defaming or slandering. 2. A sprinkling, especially with holy water.

as-phalt (ăs'fôlt') n. 1. A brownish-black solid or semisolid mixture of bitumens obtained from native deposits or as a petroleum byproduct, used in paving, roofing, and waterproofing. 2. Mixed asphalt and crushed stone gravel or sand, used for paving or roofing. — v. tr. as-phalt-ed, as-phalt-ing, as-phalts. To pave or coat with this mixture. [Middle English aspalt, from Medieval Latin asphaltus, from Greek asphaltos.] — as-phal'tic adj.

as-phal-tite (ăs'fôl-tīt') n. A solid, dark-colored complex of hydrocarbons found in natural veins and deposits.

asphalt jungle (ăs'fôlt' jüŋg'gəl) n. A huge city or a specified urban area, typically congested and crime-ridden.

a-spher-ic (ā-sfîr'ik, ā-sfēr'-) also a-spher-i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Varying slightly from sphericity and having only slight aberration, as a lens.

as-pho-del (ăs'fə-děl') n. 1. a. Any of several chiefly Mediterranean plants of the genera Asphodeline and Asphodelus in the lily family, having linear leaves and elongate clusters of white, pink, or yellow flowers. b. Any of several other plants, such as the bog asphodel. 2. In Greek poetry and mythology, the flowers of Hades and the dead, sacred to Persephone. 3. In early English and French poetry, the daffodil. [Latin asphodelus, from Greek asphodelos.]

as-phyx-i-a (ăs-fĭk'sē-ə) n. A condition in which an extreme decrease in the amount of oxygen in the body accompanied by an increase of carbon dioxide leads to loss of consciousness or death. Asphyxia can be induced by choking, drowning, electric shock, injury, or the inhalation of toxic gases. [New Latin, from Greek asphuxia, stopping of the pulse : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + sphuxis, heartbeat (from sphuzēin, sphug-, to throb).]

as-phyx-i-ant (ăs-fĭk'sē-ənt) adj. Inducing or tending to induce asphyxia. — n. A substance, such as a toxic gas, or an event, such as drowning, that induces asphyxia.

as-phyx-i-ate (ăs-fĭk'sē-āt') v. as-phyx-i-at-ed, as-phyx-i-at-ing, as-phyx-i-ates. — v. tr. To cause asphyxia in; smother. — v. intr. To undergo asphyxia; suffocate. — as-phyx'i-a'tion n. — as-phyx'i-a'tor n.

as-pic¹ (ăs'pĭk) n. A clear jelly typically made of stock and gelatin and used as a glaze or garnish or to make a mold of meat, fish, or vegetables. [French, from aspic, asp (from the resemblance of the jelly's coloration to an asp's). See *ASPIC*².]

as-pic² (ăs'pĭk) n. Archaic. An asp. [French, from Old French, alteration of aspe, from Latin aspis. See ASP.]

as-pi-dis-tra (ăs'pĭ-dĭs'trə) n. Any of several eastern Asian plants of the genus Aspidistra in the lily family, especially A. elatior, which has large evergreen basal leaves and small, brownish bell-shaped flowers and is widely cultivated as a houseplant. Also called cast-iron plant [New Latin Aspidistra, genus name, from Greek aspis, aspid-, shield.]

as-pi-rant (ăs'pər-ənt, ə-spĭr'-) n. One who aspires, as to advancement, honors, or a high position. — adj. Seeking recognition, distinction, or advancement.

as-pi-rate (ăs'pə-rāt') v. tr. as-pi-rat-ed, as-pi-rat-ing, as-pi-rates.

1. Linguistics. a. To pronounce (a vowel or word) with the initial release of breath associated with English h, as in hurry. b. To follow (a consonant, especially a stop consonant) with a puff of breath that is clearly audible before the next sound begins, as in English pit or kit. 2. To draw (something) into the lungs; inhale.

3. Medicine. To remove (liquids or gases) by means of a suction device. — n. (-pər-ĭt) Linguistics. 1. a. The speech sound represented by English h. b. The puff of air accompanying the release of a stop consonant. c. A speech sound followed by a puff of breath. 2. Medicine. Matter removed by aspiration. [Latin aspirāre, aspirāt-, to breathe on : ad-, ad- + spirāre, to breathe.]

as·pi·ra·tion (äs'pə-rā'shən) n. 1. Expulsion of breath in speech.

2. Linguistics. a. The pronunciation of a consonant with an aspirate. b. A speech sound produced with an aspirate. 3. The act of breathing in; inhalation.

4. Medicine. The process of removing fluids or gases from the body with a suction device. 5. a. A strong desire for high achievement. b. An object of such desire; an ambition.

as·pi·ra·tor (äs'pə-rā'tər) n. 1. A device for removing liquids or gases by suction, especially an instrument that uses suction to remove substances, such as mucus or serum, from a body cavity. 2. A suction pump used to create a partial vacuum.

as·pir·a·to·ry (ə-spīr'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, or suited for breathing or suction.

as·pire (ə-spīr') v. intr. as·pired, as·pir·ing, as·pires. 1. To have a great ambition or ultimate goal; desire strongly: aspired to stardom. 2. To strive toward an end: aspiring to great knowledge. 3. To soar. [Middle English aspiren, from Old French aspirer, from Latin aspīrāre, to desire. See ASPIRATE.] —as·pir'er n. —as·pir'ing·ly adv.

as·pi·rin (äs'pər-ĭn, -prĭn) n. 1. A white, crystalline compound, $\text{CH}_3\text{COOC}_6\text{H}_4\text{COOH}$, derived from salicylic acid and commonly used in tablet form to relieve pain and reduce fever and inflammation. Also called acetylsalicylic acid 2. A tablet of aspirin. [Originally a trademark.]

a·s·quint (ə-skwĭnt') adv. & adj. With a sidelong glance. [Middle English : a-, on; see A-² + -squint; akin to -skwynin Middle English of skwyn, obliquely.]

As·quith (äs'kwĭth), Herbert Henry First Earl of Oxford and Asquith. 1852-1928. British Liberal politician and prime minister (1908-1916) who introduced unemployment insurance and old-age pensions and supported the Parliament Act of 1911, which established salaries for elected members and restricted the power of veto in the House of Lords.

ASR abbr. Air-sea rescue.

as regards (ăz rĭ-gărd'z) prep. In regard to.

ass¹ (ăs) n. pl. ass-es (ăs'ĭz). 1. Any of several hoofed mammals of the genus Equus, resembling and closely related to the horses but having a smaller build and longer ears, and including the domesticated donkey. 2. A vain, self-important, silly, or aggressively stupid person. [Middle English asse, from Old English assa, perhaps of Celtic origin, ultimately from Latin asinus.]

ass² (ăs) n. pl. ass-es (ăs'ĭz). Vulgar Slang. 1. a. The buttocks. b. The anus. 2. Sexual intercourse. [Middle English ars, from Old English ears. See ors- in Appendix.]

As·sad (ă-săd'), Hafez al-. Born c. 1928. Syrian political leader who seized control of the government in 1970 and was elected president in 1971.

as·sa·gai (ăs'ə-gī') n. Variant of assegai.

as·sai¹ (ä-sī') n. 1. Any of several feather-leaved South American palms, especially Euterpe edulis and E. oleracea, which are important sources of heart of palm. 2. A beverage made from the fleshy purple fruit of one of these palms. [Portuguese assaí, from Tupi assahi.]

as·sai² (ä-sī') adv. Music. Very. Used in tempo directions: allegro assai. [Italian, from Vulgar Latin ad satis*, to sufficiency. See ASSET.]

as·sail (ə-sāl') v. tr. as·sailed, as·sail·ing, as·sails. 1. To attack with or as if with violent blows; assault. 2. To attack verbally, as with ridicule or censure. See Synonyms at attack. 3. To trouble; beset: was assailed by doubts. [Middle English assailen, from Old French asalir, asaill-, from Vulgar Latin assalīre*, variant of Latin assilīre, to jump on : ad-, onto; see AD- + salīre, to jump; see sel- in Appendix.] —as·sail/a·ble adj. —as·sail/a·ble·ness n. —as·sail'er n. —as·sail'ment n.

as·sail·ant (ə-sā'lənt) n. A person who attacks another.

As·sam (ä-sām') A former kingdom of extreme northeast India, now a state separated from the rest of the country by Bangladesh. The kingdom was founded by invaders from Burma and China in the 13th century.

As·sam·ese (äs'ə-mēz', -mēs') adj. Of or relating to Assam or its people, language, or culture. — n. pl. Assamese. 1. A native or inhabitant of Assam. 2. The Indic language of the Assamese.

as·sas·sin (ə-sās'in) n. 1. One who murders by surprise attack, especially one who carries out a plot to kill a prominent person. 2. Assassin. A member of a secret order of Muslim fanatics who terrorized and killed Christian Crusaders and others. [French, from Medieval Latin assassinus, from Arabic ḥaššāšīn, pl. of ḥaššāš, hashish user, from ḥašīš, hashish.]

WORD HISTORY: At first glance, one would be hard-pressed to find a link between pleasure and the acts of assassins. Such was not the case, however, with those who gave us the word assassin. They were members of a secret Islamic order originating in the 11th century who believed it was a religious duty to harass and murder their enemies. The most important members of the order were those who actually did the killing. Having been promised paradise in return for dying in action, the killers, it is said, were made to yearn for paradise by being given a life of pleasure that included the use of hashish. Hence, the name for the secret order as a whole, ḥaššāšīn, “hashish users.” After passing through French or Italian, the word came into English and is recorded in 1603 with reference to the Muslim assassins.

as·sas·si·nate (ə-sās'ə-nāt') v. tr. as·sas·si·nat·ed, as·sas·si·nat·ing, as·sas·si·nates. 1. To murder (a prominent person) by surprise attack, as for political reasons. 2. To destroy or injure treacherously: assassinate a rival's character. —as-sas'si-na'tion n. —as-sas'si-na'tive adj. —as-sas'si-na'tor n.

assassin bug (ə-sās'īn bŭg) n. Any of various predatory bugs of the family Reduviidae, which have short, curved, powerful beaks used to prey on other insects or, in certain genera, modified to suck blood from mammals. Also called reduviid

As-sa-teague Island (ăs'ə-tēg' ī'lənd) A long narrow island along the coast of Maryland and Virginia separating Chincoteague Bay from the Atlantic Ocean. It is a popular resort area.

as-sault (ə-sôlt') n. 1. A violent physical or verbal attack. 2. a. A military attack, such as one launched against a fortified area or place. b. The concluding stage of an attack in which close combat occurs with the enemy. 3. Law. a. An unlawful threat or attempt to do bodily injury to another. b. The act or an instance of unlawfully threatening or attempting to injure another. 4. a. Law. Sexual assault. b. The crime of rape. — v. as-sault-ed, as-sault-ing, as-saults. — v. tr. 1. To make an assault upon; attack. See Synonyms at attack. 2. To rape. — v. intr. To make an assault. [Middle English assaut, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin assaltus*, variant of Latin assultus, from past participle of assilīre, to jump on. See ASSAIL.] —as-sault'er n.

assault and battery (ə-sôlt' ənd băt'ə-rē) n. Law. An assault upon a victim that is carried out by striking the victim, knocking the victim down, or otherwise doing violence to the victim.

as-saul-tive (ə-sôl'tīv) adj. Inclined to or suggestive of violent attack.

assault rifle (ə-sôlt' rī'fəl) n. An automatic or semiautomatic rifle designed for use in military attacks.

as-say (ăs'ā', ă-sā') n. 1. a. Qualitative or quantitative analysis of a substance, especially of an ore or drug, to determine its components. b. A substance to be so analyzed. c. The result of such an analysis. 2. An analysis or examination. 3. Archaic. An attempt; an essay. — v. as-sayed, as-say-ing, as-says (ă-sā', ăs'ā'). — v. tr. 1. To subject to chemical analysis. 2. To examine by trial or experiment; put to a test: assay one's ability to speak Chinese. 3. To evaluate; assess: assayed the situation before taking action. See Synonyms at estimate. 4. To attempt; try. — v. intr. To be shown by analysis to contain a certain proportion of usually precious metal. [Middle English, from Old French essai, assai. See ESSAY.] —as-say'a-ble adj. —as-say'er n.

as-se-gai or as-sa-gai (ăs'ə-gī') n. 1. A light spear or lance, especially one with a short shaft and long blade for close combat, used by southern African tribesmen. 2. A southern African tree (Curtisia dentata) having wood used for making spears or lances. [Obsolete French azagaie, probably from Old Spanish azagayah, from Arabic az-zağāyah: al, the + Berber zaghāyah, spear.]

as-sem-blage (ə-sēm'blīj) n. 1. a. The act of assembling. b. The state of being assembled. 2. A collection of people or things; a gathering. 3. A fitting together of parts, as those in a machine. 4. A sculptural composition consisting of an arrangement of miscellaneous objects, such as pieces of metal, cloth, and string. —as-sem'blag-ist n.

as-sem-ble (ə-sēm'bləl) v. as-sem-bled, as-sem-bling, as-sem-bles. — v. tr. 1. To bring or call together into a group or whole: assembled the jury. 2. To fit together the parts or pieces of: assemble a machine; assemble data. — v. intr. To gather together; congregate. See Synonyms at gather. [Middle English assemblen, from Old French assembler, from Vulgar Latin assimulāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin simul, together; see sem-¹ in Appendix.]

as-sem-bler (ə-sēm'blər) n. 1. One that assembles, as a worker who puts together components of an item being manufactured. 2. Computer Science. A program operating on symbolic input data to produce the equivalent executable machine code. 3. Computer Science. See assembly language.

as-sem-bly (ə-sēm'blē) n. pl. as-sem-blies. Abbr. assy. 1. a. The act of assembling. b. The state of being assembled. 2. A group of persons gathered together for a common reason, as for a legislative, religious, educational, or social purpose. 3. Assembly. The lower house of the legislature in certain U.S. states. 4. a. The putting together of manufactured parts to make a completed product, such as a machine or an electronic circuit. b. A set of parts so assembled. 5. A signal by bugle or drum for troops to come together in formation. 6. Computer Science. The automatic translation of symbolic code into machine code.

assembly language (ə-sēm'blē lǎng'gwīj) n. Computer Science. A programming language that is a close approximation of the binary machine code. Also called assembler assembly line (ə-sēm'blē līn) n. 1. An arrangement of workers, machines, and equipment in which the product being assembled passes consecutively from operation to operation until completed. Also called production line 2. A process in which finished products are turned out in a mechanically efficient, though impersonal, manner: a university that functions as a sports assembly line.

as-sem-bly-man (ə-sēm'blē-mən) n. A man who is a member of a legislative assembly.

Assembly of God (ə-sēm'blē ūv gōd) n. A Pentecostal congregation founded in the United States in 1914.

assembly time (ə-sēm'blē tīm) n. Computer Science. The time required for an assembler to translate symbolic language into machine instructions.

as-sem-bly-wom-an (ə-sēm'blē-wōm'ən) n. A woman who is a member of a legislative assembly.

as-sent (ə-sēnt') v. intr. as-sent-ed, as-sent-ing, as-sents. To agree, as to a proposal; concur. — n. 1. Agreement; concurrence: reached assent on a course of action. 2. Acquiescence; consent: gave my assent to the plan. [Middle English assenten, from Old French assentir, from Latin assentāri: ad-, ad- + sentire, to feel; see sent- in Appendix.] —as-sent'er, as-sen'tor n. —as-sent'ing-ly adv. —as-sen'tive adj. —as-sen'tive-ness n.

SYNONYMS: assent, agree, accede, acquiesce, consent, concur, subscribe. These verbs denote concurrence with another's views, proposals, or actions. Assent implies agreement, as with a statement or a proposal, especially when it results from deliberation: They readily assented to our suggestion. Agree and accede are related in the sense that assent has been reached after discussion or efforts at persuasion, but accede implies that one person or group has yielded, as to the insistence of the other: "It was not possible to agree to a proposal so extraordinary and unexpected" (William Robertson). "In an evil hour this proposal was acceded to" (Mary E. Herbert). Acquiesce suggests passive assent, often despite reservations, because of inability or unwillingness to oppose: I had to acquiesce in her decision despite my private opinion. Consent implies voluntary acquiescence to the desire or proposal of another: Her parents refused to consent to her marriage. Concur refers to agreement with another's position and may suggest that one has reached the same conclusion independently: "I concurred with our incumbent in getting up a petition against the Reform Bill" (George Eliot). Subscribe indicates hearty consent or approval: "I am contented to subscribe to the opinion of the best-qualified judge of our time" (Sir Walter Scott).

as-sen-ta-tion (äs'ĕn-tā'shən) n. Hasty, typically servile agreement with another's opinions.

As-ser (ä'sər), Tobias Michael Carel. 1838-1913. Dutch statesman and jurist. He shared the 1911 Nobel Peace Prize.

as-sert (ə-sûrt') v. tr. as-sert-ed, as-sert-ing, as-serts. 1. To state or express positively; affirm: asserted his innocence. 2. To defend or maintain (one's rights, for example). 3. To put (oneself) forward boldly or forcefully in an effort to make an opinion known, for example: I had to assert myself in the meeting in order to ensure acquisition of the new book. [Latin asserere, assert-: ad-, ad- + serere, to join; see ser-² in Appendix.] —as-sert'a-ble, as-sert'i-ble adj. —as-sert'er, as-ser'tor n.

SYNONYMS: assert, asseverate, declare, affirm, aver, avow. These verbs all mean to make a positive statement. To assert is to state one's opinion confidently but often without proof to support it: "I have endeavored to assert nothing but what I had good authority for" (William Sewel). Asseverate connotes sober sincerity of assertion: "The taxpayer also asseverates that his return from Greece proves conclusively that his intentions were and are honorable" (Daily Report for Executives).

Declare has the approximate force of assert but may suggest formality of statement and authority in the speaker: Congress declared that it would reduce the budget deficit. Affirm and aver stress the speaker's confidence in the validity of the statement: Scientists cannot affirm the existence of life on other planets. She averred that solitude was necessary for creative work. Avow implies frank and open acknowledgment or admission: "thinks the book succeeds in achieving its avowed purpose: to explain how the Court's current role evolved through history" (Tony Mauro).

as-sert-ed (ə-sûr'tîd) adj. Confidently stated to be so but without proof; alleged: the asserted value of a painting. —as-sert'ed-ly adv.

as-ser-tion (ə-sûr'shən) n. 1. The act of asserting. 2. Something declared or stated positively, often with no support or attempt at proof. —as-ser'tion-al adj.

as-ser-tive (ə-sûr'tiv) adj. Inclined to bold or confident assertion; aggressively self-assured. —as-ser'tive-ly adv. —as-ser'tive-ness n.

assertiveness training (ə-sûr'tiv-nîs trā'nîŋ) n. A method of training a person to become more self-confident and boldly affirmative in his or her interpersonal relationships.

as-ses¹ (ăs'ēz', ăs'îz) n. Plural of as².

ass-es² (ăs'îz) n. Plural of ass¹.

ass-es³ (ăs'îz) n. Vulgar Slang. Plural of ass².

as-sess (ə-sēs') v. tr. as-sessed, as-sess-ing, as-sess-es. 1. To estimate the value of (property) for taxation. 2. To set or determine the amount of (a payment, such as a tax or fine). 3. To charge (a person or property) with a special payment, such as a tax or fine. 4. To determine the value, significance, or extent of; appraise. See Synonyms at estimate. [Middle English assessen, from Old French assesser, from Latin assidēre, assess-, to sit by as an assistant judge : ad-, ad- + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.] —as-sess'a-ble adj.

as-sess-ment (ə-sēs'mənt) n. 1. The act of assessing; appraisal. 2. An amount assessed, as for taxation.

as-ses-sor (ə-sēs'ər) n. 1. An official who evaluates property for taxation. 2. An assistant to a judge or magistrate, usually selected for special knowledge in a particular area. —as'ses-so'ri-al (ăs'ə-sôr'ē-əl, -sôr'-) adj.

as-set (ăs'ět') n. 1. A useful or valuable quality, person, or thing; an advantage or a resource: An agreeable personality is a great asset; proved herself an asset to the company. 2. A valuable item that is owned. 3. A spy working in his or her own country and controlled by the enemy: "One of our assets working out of Leningrad managed to take a drive out of town" (Frederick Forsyth). 4. assets.

a. Accounting. The entries on a balance sheet showing all properties, tangible and intangible, and claims against others that may be applied, directly or indirectly, to cover the liabilities of a person or business, such as cash, stock, and goodwill.

b. The entire property owned by a person, especially a bankrupt, that can be used to settle debts. [Back-formation from English assets, sufficient goods to settle a testator's debts and legacies, from Anglo-Norman asetz, from asez, enough, from Vulgar Latin ad satis*, to sufficiency : Latin ad-, ad- + satis, enough; see sā- in Appendix.]

as·sev·er·ate (ə-sěv'ə-rāt') v. tr. as·sev·er·at·ed, as·sev·er·at·ing, as·sev·er·ates. To declare seriously or positively; affirm. See Synonyms at assert. [Latin assevērāre, assevērāt- : ad-, ad- + sevērus, serious; see wēro- in Appendix.] —as·sev'er-a'tion n.

ass·hole (ăs'hōl') n. Vulgar Slang. 1. The anus. 2. A thoroughly contemptible, detestable person. [ASS² + HOLE.]

as·sib·i·late (ə-sīb'ə-lāt') v. tr. as·sib·i·lat·ed, as·sib·i·lat·ing, as·sib·i·lates.

To pronounce with a hissing sound; make sibilant. [AD- + SIBILATE.]

—as·sib'i-la'tion n.

as·si·du·i·ty (ăs'ī-dōō'ī-tē, -dyōō'-) n. pl. as·si·du·i·ties. 1. Persistent application or diligence; unflagging effort. 2. Often assiduities. Constant personal attention and often obsequious solicitude.

as·sid·u·ous (ə-sij'ōō-əs) adj. 1. Constant in application or attention; diligent: an assiduous worker who strove for perfection. See Synonyms at busy.

2. Unceasing; persistent: assiduous research. [From Latin assiduus, from assidēre, to attend to : ad-, ad- + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.] —as·sid'u·ous·ly adv. —as·sid'u·ous·ness n.

as·sign (ə-sīn') v. tr. as·signed, as·sign·ing, as·signs. 1. To set apart for a particular purpose; designate. 2. To select for a duty or office; appoint. 3. To give out as a task; allot. 4. To ascribe; attribute. 5. Law. To transfer (property, rights, or interests) from one to another. 6. To place (a person or a military unit) under a specific command. — n. Law. An assignee. [Middle English assignen, from Old French assigner, from Latin assignāre : ad-, ad- + signāre, to mark (from signum, sign); see sek^{w-1} in Appendix.] —as·sign'a·bil'i·ty n.

—as·sign'a·ble adj. —as·sign'a·bly adv. —as·sign'er n.

SYNONYMS: assign, allot, apportion, allocate. These verbs mean to set aside or give out in portions or shares. Both assign, which applies to an authoritative act, and allot refer to arbitrary distribution, but neither implies equality or fairness of division: The hardest work was assigned to the strongest laborers. We allot a half hour a day for recreation. To apportion is to divide according to prescribed rules and implies fair distribution: "The first duty of a legislator is to apportion penalties" (Walter Savage Landor). Allocate usually means to set something apart from a larger quantity, as of money, for a specific purpose or for a particular person or group: A portion of the budget was allocated for the education of each student. See as-sig-nat (ăs'ĭg-năt', ăs'ĕn-yă') n. Any of the notes issued as paper currency in France (1789-1796) by the revolutionary government and secured by confiscated lands. [French, from Latin assignātus, past participle of assignāre, to assign. See ASSIGN.]

as-sig-na-tion (ăs'ĭg-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of assigning. 2. Something assigned, especially an allotment. 3. An appointment for a meeting between lovers; a tryst. See Synonyms at engagement. —as'sig-na'tion-al adj.

as-signed risk (ə-sīnd' rĭsk) n. A poor risk that an insurance company is compelled to cover under state laws.

as-sign-ee (ə-sī'nĕē', ăs'ĭ-nĕē') n. Law. 1. A party to which a transfer of property, rights, or interest is made. 2. One appointed to act for another; a deputy or an agent.

as-sign-ment (ə-sīn'mənt) n. Abbr. asg., asgmt. 1. The act of assigning. 2. Something, such as a task, that is assigned. See Synonyms at task. 3. A position or post of duty to which one is assigned. 4. Law. a. The transfer of a claim, right, interest, or property from one to another. b. The instrument by which this transfer is effected.

as-sign-or (ə-sī'nôr', ə-sī'nər, ăs'ə-nôr') n. Law. One that makes an assignment.

as-sim-i-la-ble (ə-sĭm'ə-lə-bəl) adj. That can be assimilated: assimilable nutrients; assimilable information. —as-sim'i-la-bil'i-ty n.

as-sim-i-late (ə-sĭm'ə-lāt') v. as-sim-i-lat-ed, as-sim-i-lat-ing, as-sim-i-lates. — v. tr. 1. Physiology. a. To consume and incorporate nutrients into the body after digestion. b. To transform (food) into living tissue by the process of anabolism; metabolize constructively. 2. To incorporate and absorb into the mind: assimilate knowledge. 3. To make similar; cause to resemble. 4. Linguistics. To alter (a sound) by assimilation. 5. To absorb (immigrants or a culturally distinct group) into the prevailing culture. — v. intr. To become assimilated. [Middle English assimilaten, from Latin assimilāre, assimilāt-, to make similar to : ad-, ad- + similis, like; see sem-¹ in Appendix.] —as-sim'i-la-tor n.

as-sim-i-la-tion (ə-sĭm'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of assimilating. b. The state of being assimilated. 2. Physiology. The conversion of nutriment into living tissue; constructive metabolism. 3. Linguistics. The process by which a sound is modified so that it becomes similar or identical to an adjacent or nearby sound. For example, the prefix in- becomes im- in impossible by assimilation to the labial p of possible. 4. The process whereby a minority group gradually adopts the customs and attitudes of the prevailing culture.

as-sim-i-la-tion-ism (ə-sīm'ə-lā'shə-nīz'əm) n. A policy of furthering cultural or racial assimilation. — as-sim'i-la'tion-ist adj. & n.

as-sim-i-la-tive (ə-sīm'ə-lā'tiv) also as-sim-i-la-to-ry (-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.
Marked by or causing assimilation.

As-sin-i-boin also As-sin-i-boine (ə-sīn'ə-boin') n. pl. Assiniboin or As-sin-i-boins also Assiniboine or As-sin-i-boines. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting southern Manitoba, now located in Montana, Alberta, and Saskatchewan. The Assiniboin became nomadic buffalo hunters after migrating to the northern Great Plains in the 18th century. b. A member of this people. 2. The Siouan language of the Assiniboin. [French Assiniboine, of Ojibwa origin.] — As-sin'i-boin' adj.

As-sin-i-boine (ə-sīn'ə-boin') A river of south-central Canada rising in southern Saskatchewan and flowing about 949 km (590 mi) generally eastward to the Red River at Winnipeg, Manitoba. Its valley is one of Canada's leading wheat-growing areas.

Assiniboine, Mount. A mountain, 3,620.4 m (11,870 ft) high, in the Canadian Rocky Mountains on the Alberta-British Columbia border near Banff.

As-si-si (ə-sē'sēzē, -sē, ə-sīs'ē) A town of central Italy east-southeast of Perugia. Saint Francis of Assisi was born here in 1182 and died here in 1226. The town is a religious and tourist center. Population, 19,000.

as-sist (ə-sist') v. as-sist-ed, as-sist-ing, as-sists. — v. tr. To give help or support to, especially as a subordinate or supplement; aid: The clerk assisted the judge by looking up related precedents. Her breathing was assisted by a respirator. — v. intr. 1. To give aid or support. See Synonyms at help. 2. To be present, as at a conference. — n. 1. An act of giving aid; help. 2. Sports. a. A fielding and throwing of a baseball in such a way that enables a teammate to put out a runner. b. A pass of a basketball or an ice hockey puck that enables a teammate to score a goal. c. The action of a soccer player who enables a teammate to score by presenting the ball for a goal. d. Official credit that is given for such an act. 3. A mechanical device providing aid. [Middle English assisten, from Old French assister, from Latin assistere: ad-, ad- + sistere, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.] — as-sist'er n.

as-sis-tance (ə-sis'təns) n. 1. The act of assisting. 2. Aid; help: financial assistance.

as-sis-tant (ə-sis'tənt) n. Abbr. asst. One that assists; a helper. — adj.
1. Holding an auxiliary position; subordinate. 2. Giving aid; auxiliary.

SYNONYMS: assistant, aide, coadjutant, coadjutor, helper, lieutenant, second. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "a person who holds a position auxiliary to another and assumes some of his or her responsibilities": an editorial assistant; a senator's aide; the general's coadjutant; a bishop's coadjutor; a teacher's helper; a politician's lieutenant; a prizefighter's second.

assistant professor (ə-sɪs'tənt prə-fēs'ər) n. A college or university teacher who ranks above an instructor and below an associate professor.

as-sis-tant-ship (ə-sɪs'tənt-shɪp') n. An academic position that carries a stipend and usually involves part-time teaching or research, given to a qualified graduate student.

as-size (ə-sīz') n. 1. a. A session of a court. b. A decree or edict rendered at such a session. 2. a. An ordinance regulating weights and measures and the weights and prices of articles of consumption. b. The standards so established. 3. Law. A judicial inquest, the writ by which it is instituted, or the verdict of the jurors. 4. assizes. a. One of the periodic court sessions formerly held in each of the counties of England and Wales for the trial of civil or criminal cases. b. The time or place of such sessions. [Middle English assise, from Old French, from past participle of asseoir, to seat, from Latin assidēre, to sit beside : ad-, ad- + sed-ēre, to sit; see ASSIDUOUS.]

assn. abbr. Association.

assoc. abbr. 1. Associate. 2. Association.

as-so-ci-a-ble (ə-sō'shē-ə-bəl, -shə-bəl) adj. That can be associated: words associable with politics. — as-so'ci-a-bil'i-ty, as-so'ci-a-ble-ness n.

as-so-ci-ate (ə-sō'shē-āt', -sē-) v. as-so-ci-at-ed, as-so-ci-at-ing, as-so-ci-ates. — v. tr. 1. To join as a partner, ally, or friend. 2. To connect or join together; combine. 3. To connect in the mind or imagination: "I always somehow associate Chatterton with autumn" (John Keats). — v. intr. 1. To join in or form a league, union, or association. See Synonyms at join. 2. To keep company. — n. (-īt, -āt') Abbr. assoc. 1. A person united with another or others in an act, an enterprise, or a business; a partner or colleague. 2. A companion; a comrade. 3. One that habitually accompanies or is associated with another; an attendant circumstance. 4. A member of an institution or society who is granted only partial status or privileges. 5. Often Associate. A degree conferred by a two-year college after the prescribed course of study has been successfully completed: an Associate in Arts. — adj. (-īt, -āt') 1. Joined with another or others and having equal or nearly equal status: an associate editor. 2. Having partial status or privileges: an associate member of the club. 3. Following or accompanying; concomitant. [Middle English associaten, from Latin associāre, associāt- : ad-, ad- + socius, companion; see sek^{w-1} in Appendix.]

associate professor (ə-sō'shē-āt' prə-fēs'ər) n. A college or university professor who ranks above an assistant professor and below a professor.

as-so-ci-a-tion (ə-sō'sē-ā'shən, -shē-) n. 1. The act of associating or the state of being associated. 2. Abbr. assn., assoc. An organized body of people who have an interest, an activity, or a purpose in common; a society. 3. a. A mental connection or relation between thoughts, feelings, ideas, or sensations. b. A remembered or imagined feeling, emotion, idea, or sensation linked to a person, object, or idea. 4. Chemistry. Any of various processes of combination, such as hydration, solvation, or complex-ion formation, depending on relatively weak chemical bonding. 5. Ecology. A large number of organisms in a specific geographic area constituting a community with one or two dominant species.

—as-so'ci-a'tion-al adj.

association area (ə-sō'sē-ā'shən âr'ē-ə) n. An area of the cerebral cortex where motor and sensory functions are integrated.

association football (ə-sō'sē-ā'shən fōot'bôl') n. Chiefly British. Soccer.

as-so-ci-a-tion-ism (ə-sō'sē-ā'shə-nīz'əm, ə-sō'shē-) n. The psychological theory that association is the basic principle of all mental activity.

—as-so'ci-a'tion-ist adj., n. —as-so'ci-a'tion-is'tic adj.

as-so-ci-a-tive (ə-sō'shē-ā'tiv, -sē-, -shə-tiv) adj. 1. Of, characterized by, resulting from, or causing association. 2. Mathematics. Independent of the grouping of elements. For example, if $a + (b + c) = (a + b) + c$, the operation indicated by + is associative. —as-so'ci-a'tive-ly adv.

associative learning (ə-sō'shē-ā'tiv lûr'nîng) n. A learning principle based on the belief that ideas and experiences reinforce one another and can be mentally linked to enhance the learning process.

associative neuron (ə-sō'shē-ā'tiv nōor'ōn') n. A nerve cell found within the central nervous system that links sensory and motor neurons.

as-soil (ə-soil') v. tr. as-soiled, as-soil-ing, as-soils. Archaic. 1. To absolve; pardon. 2. To atone for. [Middle English assoilen, from Old French assoldre, assoil-, from Latin absolvere, to set free : ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + solvere, to loosen; see leu- in Appendix.]

as-so-nance (ăs'ə-nəns) n. 1. Resemblance of sound, especially of the vowel sounds in words, as in: “that dolphin-torn, that gong-tormented sea” (William Butler Yeats). 2. The repetition of identical or similar vowel sounds, especially in stressed syllables, with changes in the intervening consonants, as in the phrase tilting at windmills. 3. Rough similarity; approximate agreement. [French, from Latin assonāre, to respond to : ad-, ad- + sonāre, to sound; see swen- in Appendix.] —as'so-nant adj., n. —as'so-nan'tal (-nănt'l) adj.

as-sort (ə-sôrt') v. as-sort-ed, as-sort-ing, as-sorts. — v. tr. 1. To separate into groups according to kind; classify. 2. To supply with (an appropriate variety or assortment, as of goods). — v. intr. 1. To agree in kind; fall into the same class. 2. To associate with others; keep company. [Middle English assorte, from Old French assorter : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + sorte, kind (from Latin sors, sort-, chance, lot); see ser⁻² in Appendix.] —as-sort'a-tive (ə-sôr'tə-tiv) adj. —as-sort'er n.

as-sort-ed (ə-sôr'tîd) adj. Abbr. asstd. 1. Consisting of a number of different kinds: assorted sizes. See Synonyms at miscellaneous. 2. Separated according to kind or class. 3. Suited or matched. Often used in combination: well-assorted accessories; an ill-assorted set of ski equipment.

as-sort-ment (ə-sôrt'mənt) n. 1. The act of assorting; separation into classes. 2. A collection of various kinds; a variety.

A.S.S.R. or ASSR abbr. Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic.

asst. abbr. Assistant.

asstd. abbr. 1. Assisted. 2. Assorted.

as-suage (ə-swāj') v. tr. as-suaged, as-suag-ing, as-suag-es. 1. To make (something burdensome or painful) less intense or severe: assuage her grief. See Synonyms at relieve. 2. To satisfy or appease (hunger or thirst, for example). 3. To pacify or calm: assuage their chronic insecurity. [Middle English assuagen, from Old French assuagier, from Vulgar Latin assuāviāre* : Latin ad-, ad- + suāvis, sweet; see swād- in Appendix.] —as-suage-ment n.

as-sua-sive (ə-swā'sīv, -zīv) adj. Soothing; calming. [AD- + SUASIVE (sense influenced by ASSUAGE).]

as-sume (ə-sōm') v. tr. as-sumed, as-sum-ing, as-sumes. 1. To take upon oneself: assume responsibility; assume another's debts. 2. To undertake the duties of (an office): assumed the presidency. 3. To take on; adopt: "The god assumes a human form" (John Ruskin). 4. To put on; don: The queen assumed a velvet robe. 5. To affect the appearance or possession of; feign. See Synonyms at pretend. 6. To take for granted; suppose: assumed that prices would rise. See Synonyms at presume. 7. To take over without justification; seize: assume control. 8. Theology. To take up or receive into heaven. [Middle English assumen, from Latin assumere : ad-, ad- + sūmere, to take; see em- in Appendix.]

—as-sum'a-ble adj. —as-sum'a-bly adv. —as-sum'er n.

as-sumed (ə-sōmd') adj. 1. Taken up or used so as to deceive; pretended: an assumed name. 2. Taken for granted; supposed: an assumed increase in population. —as-sum'ed-ly (ə-sōd'mīd-lē) adv.

as-sum-ing (ə-sōd'mīŋ) adj. Presumptuous; arrogant. — conj. On the assumption that; supposing: Assuming the house is for sale, would you buy it? —as-sum'ing-ly adv.

as-sump-sit (ə-sŭmp'sīt) n. Law. 1. An agreement or promise made orally or in writing not under seal; a contract. 2. A legal action to enforce or recover damages for a breach of such an agreement. [New Latin, from third person sing. past tense of Latin assumere, to undertake. See ASSUME.]

as-sump-tion (ə-sŭmp'shən) n. 1. The act of taking to or upon oneself: assumption of an obligation. 2. The act of taking over: assumption of command. 3. The act of taking for granted: assumption of a false theory. 4. Something taken for granted or accepted as true without proof; a supposition: a valid assumption.

5. Presumption; arrogance. 6. Logic. A minor premise. 7. Assumption.

a. Theology. The bodily taking up of the Virgin Mary into heaven after her death.

b. A Christian feast celebrating this event. c. August 15, the day on which this feast is observed. [Middle English assumpcion, from Latin assumptiō, assumptiōn-, adoption, from assumptus, past participle of assumere, to adopt. See ASSUME.]

as-sump-tive (ə-sŭmp'tiv) adj. 1. Characterized by assumption. 2. Taken for granted; assumed. 3. Presumptuous; assuming. —as-sump'tive-ly adv.

As-sur (ä'sŭör', ä'shŭör') n. Variant of Ashur.

as-sur-ance (ə-shŭör'əns) n. 1. The act of assuring. 2. A statement or indication that inspires confidence; a guarantee or pledge: gave her assurance that the plan would succeed. 3. Freedom from doubt; certainty: set sail in the assurance of favorable winds. See Synonyms at certainty. 4. Self-confidence. See Synonyms at confidence. 5. Excessive self-confidence; presumption. 6. Chiefly British.

Insurance, especially life insurance.

As-sur-ba-ni-pal (ä'sŭör-bä'nə-päl') See Ashurbanipal.

as-sure (ə-shŭör') v. tr. as-sured, as-sur-ing, as-sures. 1. To inform positively, as to remove doubt: assured us that the train would be on time. 2. To cause to feel sure: assured her of his devotion. 3. To give confidence to; reassure. 4. To make certain; ensure: “Nothing in history assures the success of our civilization” (Herbert J. Muller). 5. To make safe or secure. 6. Chiefly British. To insure, as against loss. [Middle English assuren, from Old French assurer, from Vulgar Latin assēcūrāre*, to make sure : Latin ad-, ad- + sēcūrus, secure; see SECURE.]

—as-sur'a-ble adj. —as-sur'er n.

USAGE NOTE: Assure, ensure, and insure all mean “to make secure or certain.” Only assure is used with reference to a person in the sense of “to set the mind at rest”: assured the leader of his loyalty. Although ensure and insure are generally interchangeable, only insure is now widely used in American English in the commercial sense of “to guarantee persons or property against risk.”

as-sured (ə-shŭörd') adj. 1. Made certain; guaranteed: an assured income.

2. Exhibiting confidence or authority: paints with an assured hand. 3. Chiefly British. Insured. — n. pl. assured or assureds. See insured. —as-sur'ed-ly (-id-lē) adv. —as-sur'ed-ness n.

as-sur-gent (ə-sŭr'jənt) adj. 1. Rising or tending to rise. 2. Botany. Slanting or curving upward; ascending. [Latin assurgēns, assurgent- present participle of assurgere, to rise up to : ad-, ad- + surgere, to rise; see SURGE.] —as-sur'gen-cy n.

assy. abbr. Assembly.

As-syr-i-a (ə-sîr'ē-ə) An ancient empire and civilization of western Asia in the upper valley of the Tigris River. In its zenith between the ninth and seventh centuries B.C. the empire extended from the Mediterranean Sea across Arabia and Armenia.

As-syr-i-an (ə-sîr'ē-ən) adj. Abbr. Assyr. Of or relating to Assyria or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Assyria. 2. See Akkadian (n., sense 2). 3. The Assyrian dialects of Akkadian.

As-syr-i-ol-o-gy (ə-sîr'ē-öl'ə-jē) n. The study of the ancient civilization and language of Assyria. — As-syr'i-ol'o-gist n.

-ast suff. One associated with: ecdysiast. [From Latin -astēs, from Greek -astēs, n. suff.]

A-staire (ə-stâr'), Fred. 1899-1987. American dancer and actor noted for his elegant style and his partnership with Ginger Rogers in several motion pictures, including Top Hat (1935).

As-tar-te (ə-stâr'tē) n. Mythology. A Near Eastern goddess traditionally associated with love and fertility.

a-sta-sia (ə-stā'zhə) n. Inability to stand because of motor incoordination. [Greek, unsteadiness, from astatos, unsteady : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + statos, standing; see stā- in Appendix.]

a-stat-ic (ā-stăt'ik) adj. 1. Unsteady; unstable. 2. Physics. Having no particular directional characteristics. — a-stat'i-cal-ly adv. — a-stat'i-cism n.

as-ta-tine (ăs'tə-tēn', -tīn) n. Symbol At A highly unstable radioactive element, the heaviest of the halogen series, that resembles iodine in solution. Its longest lived isotope has a mass number of 210 and has a half-life of 8.3 hours. Atomic number 85; melting point 302°C; boiling point 337°C; valence probably 1, 3, 5, 7. [Greek astatos, unstable; see ASTASIA + *-INE*².]

as-ter (ăs'tər) n. 1. Any of various plants of the genus Aster in the composite family, having radiate flower heads with white, pink, or violet rays and a usually yellow disk. 2. The China aster. 3. Biology. A star-shaped structure formed in the cytoplasm of a cell and having raylike fibers that surround the centrosome during mitosis. [Latin astēr, a plant, star, from Greek astēr. See ster⁻³ in Appendix.]

as-te-ri-at-ed (ă-stîr'ē-ă'tīd) adj. Mineralogy. Exhibiting asterism. [From Greek asterios, starry, from astēr, star. See ster⁻³ in Appendix.]

as-ter-isk (ăs'tə-rīsk') n. 1. A star-shaped figure (*) used in printing to indicate an omission or a reference to a footnote. 2. Linguistics. An asterisk used to indicate an unattested sound, affix, or word. — v. tr. as-ter-isk-ed, as-ter-isk-ing, as-ter-isks. To mark with an asterisk. [Middle English, from Late Latin asteriscus, from Greek asteriskos, diminutive of astēr, star. See ster⁻³ in Appendix.]

as-ter-ism (ăs'tə-rīz'əm) n. 1. Printing. Three asterisks in triangular form used to call attention to a following passage. 2. Astronomy. A cluster of stars smaller than a constellation. 3. Mineralogy. A six-rayed starlike figure optically produced in some crystal structures by reflected or transmitted light. [Greek asterismos, constellation, from astēr, star. See ster-³ in Appendix.] —as'ter-is'mal adj.

a·stern (ə-stûrn') adv. & adj. Nautical. 1. Behind a vessel. 2. At or to the stern of a vessel. 3. With or having the stern foremost; backward.

a·ster·nal (ā-stûr'nəl) adj. Anatomy. 1. Not connected to the sternum. 2. Lacking a sternum.

as·ter·oid (äs'tə-roid') n. 1. Astronomy. Any of numerous small celestial bodies that revolve around the sun, with orbits lying chiefly between Mars and Jupiter and characteristic diameters between a few and several hundred kilometers. Also called minor planet, planetoid. 2. Zoology. See starfish. — adj. also as·ter·oi·dal (äs'tə-roid'l) Star-shaped. [Greek asteroeidēs, starlike : astēr, star; see ster-³ in Appendix + -oeidēs, -oid.]

As·ter·o·pe (ă-stēr'ə-pē') n. Variant of Sterope.

aster yel·lows (äs'tər yĕl'ōz) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb). A widespread disease of plants caused by a mycoplasma, usually resulting in stunted growth and yellowing of infected individuals.

as·the·ni·a (äs-thē'nē-ə) n. Loss or lack of bodily strength; weakness; debility. [New Latin, from Greek astheneia, from asthenēs, weak : a-, without; see A-¹ + sthenos, strength.]

as·then·ic (äs-thĕn'ĭk) adj. 1. Relating to or exhibiting asthenia; weak. 2. Having a slender, lightly muscled physique. — n. A person having such a physique.

as·the·no·pi·a (äs'thə-nō'pē-ə) n. Weakness or fatigue of the eyes, usually accompanied by headache and dimming of vision. [ASTHEN(IA) + -OPIA.]

—as'the·nop'ic (-nŏp'ĭk) adj.

as·then·o·sphere (äs-thĕn'ə-sfĭr') n. A zone of the earth's mantle that lies beneath the lithosphere and consists of several hundred kilometers of deformable rock. [Greek asthenēs, weak; see ASTHENIA + SPHERE.]

asth·ma (ăz'mə, ăs'-) n. A chronic respiratory disease, often arising from allergies, that is characterized by sudden recurring attacks of labored breathing, chest constriction, and coughing. [Middle English asma, from Medieval Latin, from Greek asthma.] —asth·mat'ic (-măt'ĭk) adj., n. —asth·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

as though (ăz thō) conj. As if: looked as though they had been quarreling.

As·ti (ă'stē) A city of northwest Italy southeast of Turin. It is noted for its sparkling wines. Population, 76,950.

a·stig·ma·tism (ə-stĭg'mə-tĭz'əm) n. 1. A refractive defect of a lens or other optical system that prevents light rays from converging at a single point, resulting in a blurred or imperfect image. 2. A visual defect in which the unequal curvature of one or more refractive surfaces of the eye, usually the cornea, prevents light rays from focusing clearly at one point on the retina, resulting in blurred vision. [A⁻¹ + Greek stigma, stigmat-, point (from stizein, stig-, to tattoo); see steig- in Appendix.] —as'tig-mat'ic (äs'tĭg-măt'ĭk) adj., n.

—as'tig-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

a·stil·be (ə-stĭl'bē) n. Any of various chiefly eastern Asian perennial herbs of the genus Astilbe, having compound basal leaves and showy panicles of tiny colorful flowers. Also called spirea [New Latin astilbē: A⁻¹ + Greek stilbos, glittering.]

a·stir (ə-stŭr') adj. 1. Moving about; being in motion. 2. Having gotten out of bed.

ASTM abbr. American Society for Testing and Materials.

as to (ăz tōō) prep. 1. With regard to: We are puzzled as to how it happened.

2. According to: candidates who were chosen as to ability.

As-to-lat (ăs'tə-lŏt', -lăt') n. In Arthurian legend, an English town, possibly located in present-day Surrey.

as-told-to (ăz-tŏld'tōō) adj. Informal. Written by a professional author based on conversations with the subject: one of those quickie, as-told-to autobiographies.

a·stom·a·tous (ā-stŏm'ə-təs, ā-stŏ'mə-) also as·tom·ous (ăs'tə-məs) or a·stom·a·tal (ā-stŏm'ə-təl, ā-stŏ'mə-) adj. Having no mouth or oral opening.

As·ton (ăs'tən), Francis William. 1877-1945. British chemist and physicist. He won a 1922 Nobel Prize for developments that led to the discovery of isotopes in nonradioactive elements.

a·ston·ied (ə-stŏn'ēd) adj. Archaic. Being in a bewildered state; dazed. [Middle English astonied, past participle of astonien, to amaze. See ASTONISH.] a·ston·ish (ə-stŏn'ĭsh) v. tr. as·ton·ished, as·ton·ish·ing, as·ton·ish·es. To fill with sudden wonder or amazement. See Synonyms at surprise. [Probably alteration of Middle English astonien, from Old French estoner, from Vulgar Latin extonāre*: Latin ex-, ex- + Latin tonāre, to thunder; see (s)tenə- in Appendix.]

—a·ston'ish·ing·ly adv.

a·ston·ish·ment (ə-stŏn'ĭsh-mənt) n. 1. Great surprise or amazement. 2. A cause of amazement; a marvel.

As·tor (ăs'tər), John Jacob. 1763-1848. German-born American fur trader and capitalist who became the wealthiest man of his time in the United States.

As·tor (ăs'tər), Nancy Witcher Langhorne Viscountess Astor. 1879-1964. American-born British politician. In 1919 she became the first woman to sit in the House of Commons, serving there until 1945.

As·tor (ăs'tər), William Waldorf First Viscount Astor of Hever Castle. 1848-1919. American-born British capitalist who used his considerable family fortune to buy interests in newspapers and endow public causes.

As-to-ri-a (ă-stŏr'ē-ə, -stŏr'-) A city of northwest Oregon near the mouth of the Columbia River. Fort Astoria, a fur-trading post established in 1811 by John Jacob Astor's Pacific Fur Company, was the first permanent American settlement along the Pacific coast. Population, 10,069.

a·stound (ə-stound′) v. tr. a·stound·ed, a·stound·ing, a·stounds. To astonish and bewilder. See Synonyms at surprise. [From Middle English astoned, past participle of astonen, to amaze. See ASTONISH.] —a·stound′ing·ly adv.

astr- pref. Variant of astro-.

as·tra·chan (äs′trə-kän′, -kən) n. Variant of astrakhan.

a·strad·dle (ə-sträd′l) adv. 1. In a straddling position; astride. 2. Across or over both sides. — prep. So as to straddle or bridge; astride.

As·trae·a (ă-strē′ə) n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of justice.

as·tra·gal (äs′trə-gəl) n. Architecture. A narrow convex molding often having the form of beading. [Latin astragalus, from Greek astragalos. See ost- in Appendix.]

as·trag·a·lus (ə-sträg′ə-ləs) n. pl. as·trag·a·li (-lī′). See talus¹ (n., sense 1). [New Latin, from Greek astragalos, vertebra. See ost- in Appendix.]

—as·trag′a·lar adj.

as·tra·khan also as·tra·chan (äs′trə-kän′, -kən) n. 1. The curly, wavy fur made of the skins of young lambs from Astrakhan. 2. A fabric with a curly, looped pile, made to resemble this fur.

As·tra·khan (äs′trə-kän′, ä-strä-KHän′) A city of southwest Russia on the Volga River delta. The Tartar city was conquered by Ivan the Terrible in 1556. Population, 493,000.

as·tral (äs′trəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, emanating from, or resembling the stars. 2. Biology. Of, relating to, or shaped like the mitotic aster; star-shaped. [Late Latin astrālis, from Latin astrum, star, from Greek astron. See ster-³ in Appendix.] —as′tral·ly adv.

astral body (äs′trəl böd′ē) n. A supersensible body believed by theosophists to coexist with and survive the death of the human physical body.

as·tra·pho·bi·a (äs′trə-fō′bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of lightning and thunder. [Greek astrapē, lightning; see ster-³ in Appendix + -PHOBIA.]

a·stray (ə-strā′) adv. 1. Away from the correct path or direction. See Synonyms at amiss. 2. Away from the right or good, as in thought or behavior; straying to or into wrong or evil ways. [Middle English, from Old French estraie, past participle of estraier, to stray. See STRAY.] —a·stray′ adj.

a·stride (ə-strīd′) adv. 1. With a leg on each side: riding astride. 2. With the legs wide apart. — prep. 1. On or over and with a leg on each side of. 2. Situated on both sides of. 3. Lying across or over; spanning.

as·trin·gent (ə-strīn′jənt) adj. 1. Medicine. Tending to draw together or constrict tissues; styptic. 2. Sharp and penetrating; pungent or severe: astrigent remarks. — n. A substance or preparation, such as alum, that draws together or constricts body tissues and is effective in stopping the flow of blood or other secretions. [Latin astringēns, astringent- present participle of astringere, to bind fast : ad-, ad- + stringere, to bind; see streig- in Appendix.] —as·trin/gen·cy n.

—as·trin/gent·ly adv.

as·tri·on·ics (ăs'trē-ōn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. Electronics used in astronautics. 2. The adaptation of electronics for astronautics. [ASTR(ONAUTIC) + (AV)IONICS.]

astro- or astr- pref. 1. a. Star: astrophysics. b. Celestial body: astrometry. c. Outer space: astronaut. 2. The aster of a cell: astrosphere. [Greek, from astron, star. See ster³ in Appendix.]

as·tro·bi·ol·o·gy (ăs'trō-bī-ōl'ə-jē) n. See exobiology.

—as'tro·bi'o·log'i·cal (-ə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —as'tro·bi·ol'o·gist n.

as·tro·bleme (ăs'trə-blēm', -blēm') n. A scar on the earth's surface left from the impact of a meteorite. [ASTRO- + Greek blēma, missile, wound (from ballein, to throw); see g^welə- in Appendix.]

as·tro·chem·is·try (ăs'trō-kēm'ī-strē) n. The chemistry of stars and interstellar space. —as'tro·chem'ist n.

as·tro·cyte (ăs'trə-sīt') n. A star-shaped cell, especially a neuroglial cell of nervous tissue. —as'tro·cyt'ic (-sīt'ik) adj.

as·tro·cy·to·ma (ăs'trō-sī-tō'mə) n. pl. as·tro·cy·to·mas or as·tro·cy·to·ma·ta (-mə-tə). A malignant tumor of nervous tissue composed of astrocytes.

as·tro·dome (ăs'trə-dōm') n. A transparent dome on the top of an aircraft, through which celestial observations are made for navigation.

as·tro·dy·nam·ics (ăs'trō-dī-nām'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The dynamics of natural and human-made bodies in outer space. —as'tro·dy·nam'ic adj.

as·tro·gate (ăs'trə-gāt') v. intr. as·tro·gat·ed, as·tro·gat·ing, as·tro·gates.

To navigate a spacecraft, as in celestial flight. [ASTRO- + (NAVI)GATE.]

—as'tro·ga'tion n. —as'tro·ga'tor n.

as·tro·ge·ol·o·gy (ăs'trō-jē-ōl'ə-jē) n. The geology of celestial bodies.

—as'tro·ge·ol'o·gist n.

astrol. abbr. 1. Astrologer; astrological. 2. Astrology.

as·tro·labe (ăs'trə-lāb') n. A medieval instrument, now replaced by the sextant, that was once used to determine the altitude of the sun or other celestial bodies. [Middle English astrelabie, from Old French astrelabe, from Medieval Latin astrolabium, from Greek astrolabon, planisphere : astro-, astro- + lambanein, lab-, to take.]

as·trol·o·gy (ə-strōl'ə-jē) n. Abbr. astrol. 1. The study of the positions and aspects of celestial bodies in the belief that they have an influence on the course of natural earthly occurrences and human affairs. 2. Obsolete. Astronomy.

[Middle English astrologie, from Old French, from Latin astrologia, from Greek : astro-, astro- + -logia, -logy.]

—as·trol'o·ger n. —as'tro·log'i·cal (ăs'trə-lōj'ī-kəl), as'tro·log'ic adj. —as'tro·log'i·cal·ly adv.

as-trom·e-try (ə-ström'ī-trē) n. The scientific measurement of the positions and motions of celestial bodies. —as'tro-met'ric (äs'trō-mēt'rik), as'tro-met'ri-cal adj.

astron. abbr. Astronomer; astronomical; astronomy.

as-tro-naut (äs'trə-nôt') n. A person trained to pilot, navigate, or otherwise participate in the flight of a spacecraft. [ASTRO- + Greek nautēs, sailor (from naus, ship); see nāu- in Appendix.]

as-tro-nau-tics (äs'trə-nô'tiks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The science and technology of space flight. —as'tro-nau'tic, as'tro-nau'ti-cal adj. —as'tro-nau'ti-cal-ly adv.

as-tro-nav-i-ga-tion (äs'trō-nāv'ī-gā'shən) n. See celestial navigation. —as'tro-nav'ī-ga'tor n.

as-tron-om-er (ə-strön'ə-mər) n. Abbr. astron. One that specializes in astronomy.

as-tro-nom-i-cal (äs'trə-nöm'ī-kəl) also as-tro-nom-ic (-nöm'ik) adj. 1.

Abbr. astron. Of or relating to astronomy. 2. Of enormous magnitude; immense: an astronomical increase in the deficit. —as'tro-nom'ī-cal-ly adv.

astronomical distance (äs'trə-nöm'ī-kəl dīs'təns) n. The distance from one celestial body to another, measured in light-years, parsecs, or astronomical units.

astronomical unit (äs'trə-nöm'ī-kəl yōō'nīt) n. Abbr. A.U. A unit of length used in measuring astronomical distances within the solar system equal to the mean distance from Earth to the sun, approximately 150 million kilometers (93 million miles).

astronomical year (äs'trə-nöm'ī-kəl yîr) n. See solar year.

as-tron-om-y (ə-strön'ə-mē) n. Abbr. astron. The scientific study of matter in outer space, especially the positions, dimensions, distribution, motion, composition, energy, and evolution of celestial bodies and phenomena. [Middle English astronomie, from Old French, from Latin astronomia, from Greek : astro-, astro- + -nomia, -nomy.]

as-tro-pho-tog-ra-phy (äs'trō-fə-tōg'rə-fē) n. Astronomical photography. —as'tro-pho'to-graph'ic (-fō'tə-gräf'ik) adj.

as-tro-phys-ics (äs'trō-fiz'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of astronomy that deals with the physics of stellar phenomena. —as'tro-phys'i-cal adj. —as'tro-phys'i-cist (-fiz'ī-sist) n.

as-tro-sphere (äs'trō-sfîr') n. 1. The central portion of a cell aster exclusive of the rays. 2. The entire cell aster with the exception of the centrosome.

As-tro-Turf (äs'trō-tûrf') A trademark used for an artificial grasslike ground covering.

As·tu·ri·as (ăs-tōōr'ē-əs, -tyōōr', ăs-tōō'ryäs) A region and former kingdom of northwest Spain south of the Bay of Biscay. The original Iberian inhabitants were conquered by Rome in the second century B.C. —As·tu·ri·an adj. & n.

As·tu·ri·as (ə-stōōr'ē-əs, ä-stōōr'yäs), Miguel Angel. 1899-1974. Guatemalan writer whose El Señor Presidente (1946) is often considered his greatest novel. He won the 1966 Nobel Prize for literature.

as·tute (ə-stōōt', ə-styōōt') adj. Having or showing shrewdness and discernment, especially with respect to one's own concerns. See Synonyms at shrewd. [Latin astūtus, from astus, craft. See wes-¹ in Appendix.] —as·tute'ly adv.
—as·tute'ness n.

As·ty·a·nax (ə-stī'ə-näks') n. Greek Mythology. The young son of Hector and Andromache, killed when the Greeks conquered Troy.

a·sty·lar (ā-stī'lər) adj. Architecture. Not having columns or pilasters. [A-¹ + Greek stulos, pillar; see stā- in Appendix + -AR.]

A·sun·ción (ä-sōōn'syōn') The capital and largest city of Paraguay, in the southern part of the country on the Paraguay River. It is Paraguay's chief port and industrial center. Population, 455,517.

a·sun·der (ə-sūn'dər) adv. 1. Into separate parts or pieces: broken asunder.
2. Apart from each other either in position or in direction: The curtains had been drawn asunder. [Middle English, from Old English on sundran : on, on; see ON + sundran, separately (from sunder, apart).] —a·sun'der adj.

ASV abbr. Bible. American Standard Version.

As·wan (ăs'wän, ăs-wän', ăs-) A city of southern Egypt at the First Cataract of the Nile River near the Aswan High Dam. Construction of the dam, dedicated in 1971, required the relocation of some 90,000 people and numerous archaeological treasures. The city's population is 182,700.

a·swarm (ə-swōrm') adj. Filled or overrun, as with moving objects or beings; teeming: The playground was aswarm with children.

as well as (ăz wĕl ăz) conj. And in addition: courageous as well as strong. — prep. In addition to: The editors as well as the proofreaders are working overtime.

a·swirl (ə-swŭrl') adj. Moving with a swirling or whirling motion: couples aswirl on the dance floor.

a·swoon (ə-swōōn') adv. & adj. In a faint or swoon: fairly aswoon with delight. [Middle English aswowne, ultimately from Old English geswōgen, fainted, past participle of swōgan*, to lose consciousness.]

a·sy·lum (ə-sī'ləm) n. 1. An institution for the care of people, especially those with physical or mental impairments, who require organized supervision or assistance. 2. A place offering protection and safety; a shelter. 3. A place, such as a church, formerly constituting an inviolable refuge for criminals or debtors.

4. The protection afforded by a sanctuary. See Synonyms at shelter.

5. Protection and immunity from extradition granted by a government to a political refugee from another country. [Middle English asilum, refuge, from Latin asylum, from Greek asulon, sanctuary, from neuter of asulos, inviolable : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + sulon, right of seizure.]

a·sym·met·ri·cal (ā'sī-mět'rikəl) also a·sym·met·ric (-rik) adj. Having no balance or symmetry. —a'sym·met'ri·cal·ly adv.

a·sym·me·try (ā-sīm'i-trē) n. Lack of balance or symmetry.

a·symp·to·mat·ic (ā'sīmp-tə-măt'ik) adj. Neither causing nor exhibiting symptoms of disease. —a'symp·to·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

as·ymp·tote (äs'im-tōt', -īmp-) n. Mathematics. A line considered a limit to a curve in the sense that the perpendicular distance from a moving point on the curve to the line approaches zero as the point moves an infinite distance from the origin. [Ultimately from Greek asumptōtos, not intersecting : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + sumptōtos, intersecting (from sumpiptein, to converge : sun-, syn- + piptein, ptō-, to fall); see pet- in Appendix.] —as'ymp·tot'ic (-tōt'ik), as'ymp·tot'i·cal adj. —as'ymp·tot'i·cal·ly adv.

a·syn·ap·sis (ā'sī-năp'sis) n. The failure of homologous chromosomes to pair during meiosis.

a·syn·chro·nism (ā-sīng'krə-nīz'əm) or a·syn·chro·ny (-krə-nē) n. Lack of temporal concurrence; absence of synchronism. —a·syn'chro·nous (-nəs) adj. —a·syn'chro·nous·ly adv.

a·syn·de·ton (ə-sīn'dī-tōn') n. The omission of conjunctions from constructions in which they would normally be used, as in “Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, / Shrunken to this little measure?” (Shakespeare). [Late Latin, from Greek asundeton, from neuter of asundetos, without conjunctions : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + sundetos, bound together (from sundein, to bind together : sun-, syn- + dein, to bind).] —as'yn·det'ic (äs'in-dēt'ik) adj. —as'yn·det'i·cal·ly adv.

a·syn·tac·tic (ā'sīn-tăk'tik) adj. Not conforming to accepted patterns of syntax.

As·yut (ä-syōōt') A city of east-central Egypt on the Nile River. It is an industrial and trade center. Population, 274,400.

at¹ (ăt; ət when unstressed) prep. 1. a. In or near the area occupied by; in or near the location of: at the market; at our destination. b. In or near the position of: always at my side; at the center of the page. 2. To or toward the direction or location of, especially for a specific purpose: Questions came at us from all sides. 3. Present during; attending: at the dance. 4. Within the interval or span of: at the dinner hour; at a glance. 5. In the state or condition of: at peace with one's conscience. 6. In the activity or field of: skilled at playing chess; good at math. 7. To or using the rate, extent, or amount of; to the point of: at 30 cents a pound; at high speed; at 20 paces; at 350°F. 8. On, near, or by the time or age of: at three o'clock; at 72 years of age. 9. On account of; because of: rejoice at a victory. 10. By way of; through: exited at the rear gate. 11. In accord with; following: at my request. 12. Dependent upon: at the mercy of the court. 13. Occupied with: at work. — idiom. at it. Informal. Engaged in verbal or physical conflict; arguing or fighting: The neighbors are at it again. [Middle English, from Old English æt. See ad- in Appendix.]

at² (ät) n. pl. at. A unit of currency in Laos. See Table at currency. [Thai.]

aT abbr. Attotesla.

At¹ The symbol for the element astatine.

At² abbr. Ampere-turn.

AT abbr. 1. Air temperature. 2. Also a/t. Antitank. 3. Automatic transmission.

at. abbr. 1. Airtight. 2. Atomic.

at- pref. Variant of ad- (pref., sense 1).

A·ta·ba·li·pa (ä'tə-bä'li-pä') See Atahualpa.

At·a·brine (ät'ə-brīn, -brēn') A trademark used for an antimalarial preparation of quinacrine hydrochloride.

At·a·ca·ma Desert (ät'ə-käm'ə dəz'ərt, ä'tä-kä'mä) An arid region of northwest Chile. One of the driest areas in the world, it has yielded great nitrate and copper wealth.

at·a·ghan (ät'ə-gän', -gən) n. Variant of yataghan.

A·ta·hual·pa (ä'tə-wäl'pə) also A·ta·ba·li·pa (-bä'li-pä'), 1502?-1533. Last Incan emperor of Peru (1525-1533). He was captured by the Spaniards, convicted of plotting against Pizarro, and executed by garrote despite his agreement to a vast ransom.

At·a·lan·ta (ät'ə-län'tə) n. Greek Mythology. A maiden hunter who agreed to marry any man who could defeat her in a footrace. She was outrun by Hippomenes, who won by dropping along the course three golden apples, which she paused to pick up.

at·a·man (ät'ə-män') n. pl. at·a·mans. A Cossack chief. Also called hetman [Russian, from South Turkic, leader of an armed band : ata, father + -man, augmentative suff..]

at·a·mas·co lily (ät'ə-mäs'kō līl'ē) n. A bulbous plant (Zephyranthes atamasco) of the southeast United States, having a showy, solitary, white to pinkish flower on a long stalk. [Virginia Algonquian attamusco.]

at·a·rac·tic (ät'ə-räk'tik) also at·a·rax·ic (-räk'sik) adj. Relating to or producing calmness and peace of mind. — n. A drug that reduces nervous tension; a tranquilizer. [From Greek ataraktos, undisturbed : a-, not; see *A-*¹ + taraktos, disturbed (from tarassein, tarak-, to disturb).]

at·a·rax·i·a (ät'ə-räk'sē-ə) n. Peace of mind or emotional tranquillity; calmness. [Greek, from ataraktos, undisturbed. See ATARACTIC.] at·a·rax·ic (ät'ə-räk'sik) adj. & n. Variant of ataractic.

A-tas-ca-de-ro (ə-tās'kə-dâr'ō, ə-tās'-) An unincorporated community of southwest California north of San Luis Obispo. It was founded in 1913 as a model community. Population, 23,138.

At-a-türk (ăt'ə-tûrk', ä-tä-tûrk'), Kemal. See Kemal Atatürk.

at-a-vism (ăt'ə-vîz'əm) n. 1. The reappearance of a characteristic in an organism after several generations of absence, usually caused by the chance recombination of genes. 2. An individual or a part that exhibits atavism. Also called throwback 3. The return of a trait or recurrence of previous behavior after a period of absence. [French atavisme, from Latin atavus, ancestor : atta, father + avus, grandfather; see awo- in Appendix.] —at'a-vist n. —at'a-vis'tic adj. —at'a-vis'ti-cal-ly adv.

a-tax-i-a (ə-tăk'sē-ə) also a-tax-y (ə-tăk'sē) n. Loss of the ability to coordinate muscular movement. [Greek, disorder : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + taxis, order.] —a-tax'ic adj. & n.

At-ba-ra (ăt'bər-ə,ăt'-) A river of northeast Africa rising in northwest Ethiopia and flowing about 805 km (500 mi) to the Nile River in eastern Sudan.

at bat or at-bat (ăt-băt') n. Baseball. A player's official turn to bat, counted in figuring a batting average unless there is interference from the catcher or unless the player is hit by the ball, makes a sacrifice hit, or is walked.

A-tchaf-a-lay-a (ə-chăf'ə-lî'ə) A river of south-central Louisiana flowing about 362 km (225 mi) into Atchafalaya Bay, an inlet of the Gulf of Mexico.

At-chi-son (ăch'î-sən) A city of northeast Kansas northwest of Kansas City. The city was an important outfitting point for westward travelers, especially after the foundation of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railroad in 1859. Population, 10,656.

ate (āt) v. Past tense of eat.

A-te (ā'tē, ä'tē, ä'tā) n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of criminal rashness and consequent punishment.

-ate¹ suff. 1. a. Having: nervate. b. Characterized by: Latin. c. Resembling: lyrate. 2. a. One that is characterized by: lamin. b. Rank; office: rabbinate. 3. To act upon in a specified manner: acidulate. [Ultimately from Latin -ātus, past participle suff. of verbs in -āre.]

-ate² suff. 1. A derivative of a specified chemical compound or element: alumi. 2. A salt or ester of a specified acid whose name ends in -ic: acetate. [New Latin -ātum, from Latin, neuter of -ātus past participle suff. of verbs in -āre.]

A-team (ā'tēm') n. 1. A detachment of 12 soldiers in the Special Forces.

2. Informal. A group having a special mission, especially in a leadership role: "America is the A-team among nations, bursting with energy, courage and determination" (Ronald Reagan). [Informal name for A-detachment : *A*¹, first in a series + DETACHMENT.]

at·e·lec·ta·sis (ăt'1-ĕk'tə-sīs) n. 1. Total or partial collapse of the lung. 2. A congenital condition characterized by the incomplete expansion of the lungs at birth. [New Latin : Greek atelēs, incomplete (a-, not; see a¹ + telos, end); see TELO- + Greek ektasis, stretching out (from ekteinein, to stretch out : ek-, out; see ecto- + teinein, to stretch); see EPITASIS.]

at·el·ier (ăt'1-yā') n. A workshop or studio, especially for an artist or a designer. [French, from Old French astelier, carpenter's shop, from astele, splinter, from Late Latin astella, alteration of Latin astula, diminutive of assis, board.]

a·te·moy·a (ă'tə-moi'ə, ăt'ə-) n. 1. A conical or heart-shaped green fruit with edible, sweet, white flesh. 2. The tree producing this fruit, a hybrid between the cherimoya and the sweetsop. [Philippine English ates, sweetsop (from Tagalog átis) + (CHERI)MOYA.]

a tem·po (ä tĕm'pō) adv. & adj. Music. In the time originally designated; resuming the initial tempo of a section or movement after a specified deviation from it. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian : a, in + tempo, time.]

a·tem·po·ral (ā-tĕm'pər-əl) adj. Independent of time; timeless.

A·ten (ăt'n) n. Mythology. Variant of Aton.

A·te·ri·an (ə-tīr'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to a northern African Paleolithic culture, largely Mousterian but using tanged points and leaf-shaped spearheads. [French atérien, after Bir el Ater (Constantine), a city of northeast Algeria.]

Ath·a·bas·ca or Ath·a·bas·ka (ăth'ə-bās'kə) A river rising in the Rocky Mountains of southwest Alberta, Canada, and flowing about 1,231 km (765 mi) east and north to Lake Athabasca on the border of northern Alberta and Saskatchewan. The river and lake are important constituents of the Mackenzie River system.

Ath·a·bas·kan or Ath·a·bas·can (ăth'ə-bās'kən) also Ath·a·pas·can (-pās'-) n. 1. A group of related North American Indian languages including the Apachean languages and languages of Alaska, northwest Canada, and coastal Oregon and California. 2. A member of an Athabaskan-speaking people. [After Lake Athabasca, from Cree athapaskaaw, there is scattered grass.]

—Ath' a·bas'kan adj.

Ath·a·na·sian (ăth'ə-nā'zhən) adj. Of or relating to Athanasius. — n. A follower of Athanasius, especially in opposition to Arianism.

Athanasian Creed (ăth'ə-nā'zhən krĕd) n. A Christian creed of the early fifth century, originally attributed to Athanasius but now considered to be of unknown origin.

Ath·a·na·sius (ăth'ə-nā'shəs), Saint Known as “the Great.” A.D.293?-373. Greek patriarch of Alexandria and leading defender of Christian orthodoxy against Arianism.

Ath·a·pas·can (ăth'ə-pās'kən) n. Variant of Athabaskan.

a·the·ism (ā'thē-iz'əm) n. 1. a. Disbelief in or denial of the existence of God or gods. b. The doctrine that there is no God or gods. 2. Godlessness; immorality. [French athéisme, from athée, atheist, from Greek atheos, godless : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + theos, god; see dhēs- in Appendix.]

a·the·ist (ā'thē-ist) n. One that disbelieves or denies the existence of God or gods.

a·the·is·tic (ā'thē-iz'tik) also a·the·is·ti·cal (-tī-kəl) adj. 1. Relating to or characteristic of atheism or atheists. 2. Inclined to atheism. —a'the·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

ath·e·ling (äth'ə-līng, äth' -) n. An Anglo-Saxon nobleman or prince, especially the heir to a throne. [Middle English, from Old English ætheling.]

Ath·el·stan (äth'əl-stän'), 895?-939. King of Mercia and Wessex (924?-939) who was the first Saxon ruler to establish his authority over all of England.

A·the·na (ə-thē'nə) also A·the·ne (-nē) n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of wisdom, the practical arts, and warfare.

ath·e·nae·um also ath·e·ne·um (äth'ə-nē'əm) n. 1. An institution, such as a literary club or scientific academy, for the promotion of learning. 2. A place, such as a library, where printed materials are available for reading. [Late Latin Athēnaeum, a Roman school, after Greek Athēnaion, the temple of Athena, from Athēna, Athena.]

Ath·ens (äth'ənz) 1. The capital and largest city of Greece, in the eastern part of the country near the Saronic Gulf. It was at the height of its cultural achievements and imperial power in the fifth century B.C. during the time of Pericles. Athens became the capital of modern Greece in 1834, two years after the country achieved its independence from Turkey. Population, 885,737. 2. A city of northeast Georgia east-northeast of Atlanta. It was founded in 1785 as the site of the University of Georgia (established 1801). Population, 45,734. 3. A city of southeast Ohio in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains west of Marietta. Settled c. 1797, it is a processing and manufacturing center. Population, 21,265.

a·the·o·ret·i·cal (ā'thē-ə-rēt'i-kəl) adj. Unrelated to or lacking a theoretical basis.

ath·er·o·gen·e·sis (äth'ər-ō-jěn'i-sīs) n. Formation of atheromatous deposits, especially on the innermost layer of arterial walls. [ATHERO(MA) + -GENESIS.]

—ath'er·o·gen'ic (-jěn'ik) adj. —ath'er·o·gen-i'ci·ty (-jə-nīs'itē) n.

ath·er·o·ma (äth'ə-rō'mə) n. pl. ath·er·o·mas or ath·er·o·ma·ta (-mə-tə).

A deposit or degenerative accumulation of lipid-containing plaques on the innermost layer of the wall of an artery, especially on one of the larger arteries. [Latin athērōma, tumor full of pus that is like gruel, from Greek, from athēra, gruel.]

—ath'er·o·ma·to'sis (-tō'sis) n. —ath'er·om'a·tous (-rōm'ə-təs, -rō'mə-) adj.

ath·er·o·scl·e·ro·sis (ăth'ə-rō-skĕ-rō'sīs) n. A form of arteriosclerosis characterized by the deposition of atheromatous plaques containing cholesterol and lipids on the innermost layer of the walls of large and medium-sized arteries.

[ATHERO(MA) + SCLEROSIS.] —ath'er·o·scl·e·rot'ic (-rōt'ik) adj.

—ath'er·o·scl·e·rot'i·cal·ly adv.

Ath·er·ton (ăth'ər-tən), Gertrude Franklin Horn. 1857-1948. American writer whose numerous novels include The Doomswoman (1892) and The Sophisticates (1931).

a·thirst (ə-thûrst') adj. 1. Strongly desirous; eager: athirst for freedom.

2. Archaic. Thirsty.

athl. abbr. Athlete; athletic; athletics.

ath·lete (ăth'lēt') n. Abbr. athl. A person possessing the natural or acquired traits, such as strength, agility, and endurance, that are necessary for physical exercise or sports, especially those performed in competitive contexts. [Middle English, from Latin athlēta, from Greek athlētēs, contestant, from athlein, to contend, possibly from athlos, contest.]

WORD HISTORY: Athletes who believe that winning is the most important aspect of athletics have etymological support for their view, even if the way one plays the game is more important than winning a prize. The word athlete may ultimately go back to the Greek word athlos, “contest, especially a contest for a prize.” Two other possible sources are athlon, “prize won in a contest,” and athleus, “one who competes.” The Greek word athlētēs, derived from at least one of these sources, meant “combatant, champion,” and was used especially for competitors in games. Our word athlete, borrowed from Greek by way of Latin, is first recorded in Middle English (possibly before 1425) with reference to wrestlers.

ath·lete's foot (ăth'lēts fōot) n. A contagious fungal infection of the skin usually affecting the feet and sometimes the hands, characterized by itching, blisters, cracking, and scaling.

ath·let·ic (ăth-lēt'ik) adj. 1. Abbr. athl. Of, relating to, or befitting athletics or athletes. 2. Physically strong; muscular. See Synonyms at muscular.

3. Anthropology. Having a large skeletal structure and well-developed muscles; mesomorphic. —ath·let'i·cal·ly adv. —ath·let'i·cism (-lēt'ī-sīz'əm) n.

ath·let·ics (ăth-lēt'iks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Abbr. athl. 1. Activities, such as sports, exercises, and games, that require physical skill and stamina.

2. The principles or system of training and practice for such activities.

athletic supporter (ăth-lēt'ik sə-pôrt'ər) n. An elastic support for the male genitals, worn especially in athletic or other strenuous activity.

ath·o·dyd (ăth'ə-dīd') n. A simple, essentially tubular jet engine, such as a ramjet. [A(ERO)- + TH(ERM)ODY(NAMIC) + D(UCT).]

at-home or at home (ət-hōm', ət-) n. An informal reception in one's home.

— adj. 1. Being, occurring, or functioning in one's home: at-home workers; at-home care. 2. Designed for or appropriate for one's home: at-home fashions.

Ath-os (ăth'ŏs, ă'thŏs, ă'thŏs), Mount. A peak, about 2,034 m (6,670 ft) high, of northeast Greece. It is the site of the virtually independent monastic community of Mount Athos, originally founded in the tenth century.

a·thwart (ə-thwōrt') adv. 1. From side to side; crosswise or transversely. 2. So as to thwart, obstruct, or oppose; perversely. — prep. 1. From one side to the other of; across: "the Stars that shoot athwart the Night" (Alexander Pope).

2. Contrary to; against. 3. Nautical. Across the course, line, or length of. [Middle English : a-, on; see A-² + thwert, across; see THWART.]

a·tilt (ə-tīlt') adv. & adj. 1. In a tilted position; inclined upward. 2. Tilting or as if tilting with a lance.

a·tin·gle (ə-tīng'gəl) adj. Experiencing a prickling sensation, as from excitement; being in a state of tingling.

-ation suff. 1. a. Action or process: strangulation. b. The result of an action or process: acculturation. 2. State, condition, or quality of: eburnation. [Middle English -acioun, from Old French -ation, from Latin -ātiō, -ātiōn-, n. suff. : -ā-, stem vowel of verbs in -āre + -tiō, -tiōn-, abstract n. suff.]

A·ti·tlán (ă'tē-tlän') A volcanic lake of southwest Guatemala. Among the lofty mountains nearby are three inactive volcanoes, including Atitlán, rising to 3,539.2 m (11,604 ft).

-ative suff. Of, relating to, or associated with: talkative. [Middle English, from Old French -atif, -ative, from Latin -ātīvus, from -ātus, past participle suff.. See -ATE¹.]

At·ka Island (ăt'kə ī'lənd, ăt'-) An island of southwest Alaska in the Andreanof group of the central Aleutian Islands. It was the site of a major U.S. military base during World War II.

Atka mackerel (ăt'kə māk'ər-əl) n. A food fish (Pleurogrammus monoptyerygius) native to northern Pacific waters.

At·kin·son (ăt'kīn-sən), (Justin) Brooks. 1894-1984. American theater critic of the New York Times (1925-1942 and 1946-1960).

Atl. abbr. Atlantic.

At·lan·ta (ăt-lăn'tə) The capital and largest city of Georgia, in the northwest part of the state. It was founded in 1837 at the end of the railroad line as Terminus and renamed Atlanta in 1845. Almost entirely burned on November 15, 1864, before the start of Union general William Tecumseh Sherman's march to the sea, the city was rapidly rebuilt and became the permanent state capital in 1877. Population, 394,017. —At·lan'tan n.

At·lan·te·an¹ (ăt'lä̃n-tē'ən, ät-län'tē-) adj. Of, relating to, or like Atlas, especially in having a fundamental role or great strength. [From Greek Atlas, Atlant-, Atlas. See ATLAS.]

At·lan·te·an² (ăt'lä̃n-tē'ən, ät-län'tē-) adj. Of or relating to Atlantis.

at·lan·tes (ät-län'tēz) n. Architecture. Plural of atlas² (n., sense 1).

At·lan·tic (ät-län'tik) adj. 1. Abbr. Atl. Of, in, near, upon, or relating to the Atlantic Ocean. 2. Of, on, near, or relating to the eastern coast of the United States. 3. Of or concerning countries bordering the Atlantic Ocean, especially those of Europe and North America. [Middle English Atlantik, from Latin (mare) Atlanticum, Atlantic (sea), from Greek (pelagos) Atlantikos, from Atlas, Atlant-, Atlas. See telə- in Appendix.]

Atlantic City (ät-län'tik sīt'ē) A city of southeast New Jersey on the Atlantic Ocean. It is a popular resort and convention center with a famous boardwalk. Legalized gambling was introduced in 1978. Population, 37,986.

Atlantic croaker (ät-län'tik krō'kər) n. A small, silvery food fish (Micropogonias undulatus) common in Atlantic waters south of Massachusetts.

Atlantic In·tra·coast·al Waterway (ät-län'tik in'trə-kō'stəl wō'tər-wā') A system of inland waterways including rivers, bays, and canals along the Atlantic coast of the United States. It extends from Cape Cod to southern Florida and forms part of the Intracoastal Waterway that affords protected passage from Massachusetts to southern Texas.

At·lan·ti·cism (ät-län'tī-sīz'əm) n. A doctrine assuming the mutuality of western European and North American interests and advocating cooperative political and economic action, especially on defense issues. —At·lan'ti·cist n.

Atlantic Ocean (ät-län'tik ō'shən) The world's second-largest ocean, divided into the North Atlantic and the South Atlantic. It extends from the Arctic in the north to the Antarctic in the south between the eastern Americas and western Europe and Africa.

Atlantic Provinces (ät-län'tik prōv'in-sīz) The eastern Canadian provinces of New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland.

Atlantic salmon (ät-län'tik sām'ən) n. A species of salmon (Salmo salar) native to northern Atlantic waters and valued as a food fish.

Atlantic Standard Time (ät-län'tik stän'dərd tīm) n. Standard time in the fourth time zone west of Greenwich, England, reckoned at 60° west and used, for example, in Puerto Rico and the Canadian Maritime Provinces. Also called Atlantic Time

At·lan·tis (ät-län'tis) n. Mythology. A legendary island in the Atlantic Ocean west of Gibraltar, said by Plato to have sunk beneath the sea during an earthquake.

at·las¹ (ät'ləs) n. pl. at·las·es. 1. A book or bound collection of maps, sometimes with supplementary illustrations and graphic analyses. 2. A volume of tables, charts, or plates that systematically illustrates a particular subject: an anatomical atlas. 3. A large size of drawing paper, measuring 26×33 or 26×34 inches. [After Atlas, legendary king of northern Africa, sometimes identified with, or considered descended from, the Titan Atlas.]

at·las² (ăt'ləs) n. pl. at·las·es. 1. pl. at·lan·tes (ăt-lăn'tēz). Architecture. A standing or kneeling figure of a man used as a supporting column for an entablature. 2. Anatomy. The top or first cervical vertebra of the neck, which supports the skull. [From ATLAS.]

At·las (ăt'ləs) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A Titan condemned by Zeus to support the heavens upon his shoulders. 2. The satellite of Saturn that is closest to the planet. 3. atlas. A person who supports a great burden. [Greek. See telə- in Appendix.]

At·las (ăt'ləs), Charles. 1894-1972. Italian-born American bodybuilder who taught his method of bodybuilding, called "dynamic tension," in gymnasiums and through correspondence.

Atlas cedar (ăt'ləs sē'dər) n. A northern African evergreen tree (Cedrus atlantica), having green to silvery-blue foliage and widely grown as an ornamental. [After the Atlas Mountains.]

Atlas Mountains (ăt'ləs moun'tənz) A system of ranges and plateaus of northwest Africa extending from southwest Morocco to northern Tunisia between the Sahara Desert and the Mediterranean Sea and rising to 4,167.8 m (13,665 ft).

at·la·tl (ăt-lăt'l) n. A spear-throwing device usually consisting of a stick fitted with a thong or socket to steady the butt of the spear during the throw. [Nahuatl, from atla, to throw.]

At·li (ăt'lē) n. A legendary king corresponding to the historical figure of Attila. In the Volsunga Saga he is the second husband of Gudrun.

atm or atm. abbr. Physics. Atmosphere; atmospheric.

ATM abbr. Automated teller machine; automatic teller machine.

at·man (ăt'mən) n. Hinduism. 1. The individual soul or essence. 2. Atman. The essence that is eternal, unchanging, and indistinguishable from the essence of the universe. [Sanskrit ātman, breath, spirit.]

at·mom·e·ter (ăt-mōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument that measures the rate of water evaporation. [Greek atmos, vapor; see ATMOSPHERE + -METER.]

—at'mo·met'ric (-mō-mēt'rik) adj. —at·mom'e·try n.

atmos. abbr. Physics. Atmosphere; atmospheric.

at·mos·phere (ăt'mə-sfīr') n. 1. Abbr. atm, atm., atmos. The gaseous mass or envelope surrounding a celestial body, especially the one surrounding Earth, and retained by the celestial body's gravitational field. 2. The air or climate in a specific place. 3. Abbr. atm, atm. Physics. A unit of pressure equal to the air pressure at sea level, approximately equal to 1.01325×10^5 newtons per square meter. See Table at measurement. 4. A dominant intellectual or emotional tone or attitude, especially one related to a specific environment or state of affairs: a prevailing atmosphere of distrust. 5. The dominant tone or mood of a work of art. 6. An aesthetic quality or effect, especially a distinctive and pleasing one, associated with a particular place: a restaurant with an Old World atmosphere. [New Latin atmosfera : Greek atmos, vapor; see wet-¹ in Appendix + Latin sphaera, sphere; see SPHERE.]

at·mos·pher·ic (ăt'mə-sfēr'īk, -sfīr'-) also at·mos·pher·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj.

Abbr. atm, atm., atmos. 1. Of, relating to, or existing in the atmosphere.

2. Produced by, dependent on, or coming from the atmosphere. 3. Resembling or representing the atmosphere; having or giving the effect of translucence: a painting suffused with a hazy, atmospheric glow. 4. Intended to evoke a particular emotional tone or aesthetic quality: lush atmospheric touches in every room.

—at'mos·pher'i·cal·ly adv.

atmospheric pressure (ăt'mə-sfēr'īk prēsh'ər) n. Pressure caused by the weight of the atmosphere. At sea level it has a mean value of one atmosphere but reduces with increasing altitude.

at·mos·pher·ics (ăt'mə-sfēr'īks, -sfīr'-) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb).

a. Electromagnetic radiation produced by natural phenomena such as lightning.

b. Radio interference produced by electromagnetic radiation. Also called sferics

2. (used with a pl. verb). a. Features, events, or statements intended to create a particular mood or attitude. b. A consciously created mood or attitude, often without substantive basis: "Soviet sensitivities are not so tender; their calculations are based on an assessment of their interests, not on atmospheric" (Henry A. Kissinger).

at·mo·spher·i·um (ăt'mə-sfēr'ē-əm) n. An optical device designed to project images of atmospheric phenomena, such as clouds, on the inside of a dome.

[ATMOSPHER(E) + (PLANETAR)IUM.]

at. no. also at no abbr. Atomic number.

a·toll (ăt'ôl', -ôl', ā'tôl', ā'tôl') n. A ringlike coral island and reef that nearly or entirely encloses a lagoon. [Perhaps ultimately from Tamil aṭar, to be close together, thick, crowded.]

at·om (ăt'əm) n. 1. a. A part or particle considered to be an irreducible constituent of a specified system. b. The irreducible, indestructible material unit postulated by ancient atomism. 2. An extremely small part, quantity, or amount.

3. Chemistry & Physics. a. A unit of matter, the smallest unit of an element, having all the characteristics of that element and consisting of a dense, central, positively charged nucleus surrounded by a system of electrons. The entire structure has an approximate diameter of 10^{-8} centimeter and characteristically remains undivided in chemical reactions except for limited removal, transfer, or exchange of certain electrons. b. This unit regarded as a source of nuclear energy. [Middle atom bomb (ăt'əm böm) n. 1. An explosive weapon of great destructive power derived from the rapid release of energy in the fission of heavy atomic nuclei, as of uranium 235. Also called A-bomb, atomic bomb, fission bomb. 2. A bomb deriving its destructive power from the release of nuclear energy.

English atome, from Latin atomus, from Greek atomos, indivisible, atom : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + tomos, cutting (from temnein, to cut); see tem- in Appendix.]

a·tom·ic (ə-töm'ik) adj. 1. Abbr. at. Of or relating to an atom or atoms. 2. Of or employing nuclear energy: an atomic submarine; atomic weapons. 3. Very small; infinitesimal. —a·tom'ic·al·ly adv.

atomic age also Atomic Age (ə-töm'ik āj) n. The current era as characterized by the discovery, technological applications, and sociopolitical consequences of nuclear energy.

atomic bomb (ə-töm'ik böm) n. See atom bomb (n., sense 1).

atomic clock (ə-töm'ik klök) n. An extremely precise timekeeping device regulated in correspondence with a characteristic invariant frequency of an atomic or molecular system.

atomic energy (ə-töm'ik ěn'ər-jē) n. See nuclear energy.

at·o·mic·i·ty (ăt'ə-mis'ī-tē) n. 1. The state of being composed of atoms.

2. Chemistry. a. The number of atoms in a molecule. b. Valence.

atomic mass (ə-töm'ik mäs) n. The mass of an atom, usually expressed in atomic mass units.

atomic mass unit (ə-töm'ik mäs yōō'nīt) n. Abbr. amu A unit of mass equal to 1/12 the mass of the most abundant isotope of carbon, carbon 12, which is assigned a mass of 12. Also called dalton atomic number (ə-töm'ik nŭm'bər) n. Symbol Z Abbr. at. no., at no The number of protons in an atomic nucleus.

atomic theory (ə-töm'ik thē'ə-rē) n. The physical theory of the structure, properties, and behavior of the atom.

atomic veteran (ə-töm'ik vēt'ər-ən) n. A former member of the armed forces who was exposed to radioactivity during the testing or use of atom bombs in or after World War II.

atomic weight (ə-töm'ik wāt) n. Abbr. at wt The average mass of an atom of an element, usually expressed relative to the mass of carbon 12, which is assigned 12 atomic mass units.

at·om·ism (ăt'ə-miz'əm) n. 1. Philosophy. The ancient theory of Democritus, Epicurus, and Lucretius, according to which simple, minute, indivisible, and indestructible particles are the basic components of the entire universe.

2. Philosophy. A theory according to which social institutions, values, and processes arise solely from the acts and interests of individuals, who thus constitute the only true subject of analysis. 3. a. The division of or tendency to divide a society into subclasses, groups, or units. b. The understanding of society as a set of independent wills, based on a belief in the priority of individual over cooperative values: “the kind of atomism and individualism that is implicit in what might be called the John Wayne conception of society and the individual” (Saturday Review).

—at'om·ist n.

at·om·is·tic (ăt'ə-mīs'tīk) also at·om·is·ti·cal (-tī-kəl) adj. 1. Of or having to do with atoms or atomism. 2. Consisting of many separate, often disparate elements: an atomistic culture. —at'om·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

at·om·ize (ăt'ə-mīz') v. tr. at·om·ized, at·om·iz·ing, at·om·iz·es. 1. To reduce to or separate into atoms. 2. To reduce to tiny particles or a fine spray. 3. To break into small fragments. 4. To subject to bombardment with atomic weapons. —at'om·i·za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

at·om·iz·er (ăt'ə-mī'zər) n. A device for converting a substance, especially a perfume or medicine, to a fine spray.

atom smasher (ăt'əm smāsh'ər) n. See accelerator (n., sense 3).

at·o·my¹ (ăt'ə-mē) n. pl. at·o·mies. Archaic. 1. A tiny particle; a mote. 2. A tiny being. [From Latin atomī, pl. of atomus, atom. See ATOM.] at·o·my² (ăt'ə-mē) n. pl. at·o·mies. Archaic. A gaunt person; a skeleton. [From an atomy, respelling of ANATOMY.]

A·ton also A·ten (ăt'n) n. Mythology. An Egyptian god of the sun, regarded during the reign of Akhenaton as the only god.

a·to·nal (ā-tō'nəl) adj. Music. Lacking a tonal center or key; characterized by atonality. —a·to·nal·ly adv.

a·to·nal·ism (ā-tō'nə-līz'əm) n. Music. Atonal composition or the theory of atonal composition. —a·to·nal·ist adj., n. —a·to·nal·is'tic adj.

a·to·nal·i·ty (ā'tō-nāl'ī-tē) n. pl. a·to·nal·i·ties. Music. The absence of a tonal center and of harmonies derived from a diatonic scale corresponding to such a center; lack of tonality.

a·tone (ə-tōn') v. a·toned, a·ton·ing, a·tones. — v. intr. 1. To make amends, as for a sin or fault: These crimes must be atoned for. 2. Archaic. To agree. — v. tr. 1. To expiate. 2. Archaic. To conciliate; appease: “So heaven, atoned, shall dying Greece restore” (Alexander Pope). 3. Obsolete. To reconcile or harmonize. [Middle English atonen, to be reconciled, from at one, in agreement : at, at; see AT¹ + one, one; see ONE.] —a·ton'a·ble, a·tone'a·ble adj.

—a·ton'er n.

a·tone·ment (ə-tōn'mənt) n. 1. Amends or reparation made for an injury or wrong; expiation. 2. a. Theology. Reconciliation or an instance of reconciliation between God and human beings. b. Atonement. The redemptive life and death of Jesus. c. Atonement. The reconciliation of God and human beings brought about by Jesus. 3. Christian Science. The radical obedience and purification, exemplified in the life of Jesus, by which humanity finds oneness with God. 4. Obsolete. Reconciliation; concord.

a·ton·ic (ā-tŏn'ik) adj. 1. Not accented: an atonic syllable. 2. Pathology. Relating to, caused by, or exhibiting lack of muscle tone. — n. A word, syllable, or sound that is unaccented. [From Greek atonos. See ATONY.] —at'o·nic'i·ty (ăt'ə-nĭs'ĭ-tē, ăt'n-ĭs-) n.

at·o·ny (ăt'ə-nē, ăt'n-ē) n. 1. Lack of normal muscle tone. 2. Lack of accent or stress. [Late Latin atonia, from Greek, from atonos, slack : a-, without; see A⁻¹ + tonos, stretching, tone; see TONE.]

a·top (ə-tŏp') adv. To, on, or at the top. — prep. On top of. —a·top' adj.

a·top·ic (ā-tŏp'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or caused by a hereditary predisposition toward the development of certain hypersensitivity reactions, such as hay fever, asthma, or chronic urticaria, upon exposure to specific antigens: atopic dermatitis. [From Greek atopia, unusualness, from atopos, out of the way : a-, not; see A⁻¹ + topos, place.] —at'o·py (ăt'ə-pē) n.

-ator suff. One that acts in a specified manner: radiator. [Latin -ātor : -ā-, stem vowel of verbs in -āre + -tor, agent n. suff. (later reanalyzed as -ātus, -ate + -or, -or).]

-atory suff. 1. a. Of or relating to: perspiratory. b. Tending to: amendatory. 2. One that is connected with: reformatory. [From Latin -ātōrius, and -ātōrium both from -ātor, -ator.]

a·tox·ic (ā-tŏk'sik) adj. Not poisonous or toxic.

ATP (ā'tē'pē') n. An adenosine-derived nucleotide, C₁₀H₁₆N₅O₁₃P₃, that supplies large amounts of energy to cells for various biochemical processes, including muscle contraction and sugar metabolism, through its hydrolysis to ADP.

[A(DENOSINE) T(RI)P(HOSPHATE).]

ATP·ase (ā'tē-pē'ās, -āz) n. An enzyme that catalyzes the hydrolysis of ATP; adenosine triphosphatase.

at·ra·bil·ious (ăt'rā-bĭl'yəs) also at·ra·bil·i·ar (-bĭl'ē-ər) adj. 1. Inclined to melancholy. 2. Having a peevish disposition; surly. [From Latin ātra bilis, black bile (translation of Greek melankhōlia); see MELANCHOLY : ātra, black; see āter- in Appendix + bĭlis, bile.] —at'ra·bil'ious·ness n.

a·trem·ble (ə-trēm'bəl) adj. Being in a state of shaking or trembling, as from fear or excitement.

a·tre·sia (ə-trē'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. 1. The absence or closure of a normal body orifice or tubular passage such as the anus, intestine, or external ear canal. 2. The degeneration and resorption of one or more ovarian follicles before a state of maturity has been reached. [New Latin : Greek a-, not, without; see A⁻¹ + trēsis, perforation, orifice; see terə⁻¹ in Appendix.] —a·tre·sic (-zĭk, -sĭk) adj.

A·treus (ā'trōōs', ā'trē-əs) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Mycenae, brother of Thyestes and father of Agamemnon and Menelaus.

a·tri·a (ā'trē-ə) n. A plural of atrium.

atrial na·tri·u·ret·ic factor (nā'trē-yōō-rēt'īk nā'trē-yōō-rēt'īk fāk'tər) n.

Abbr. ANF A hormonal substance produced by the right atrium of the heart that stimulates the excretion of sodium and water by the kidneys and helps regulate blood pressure. [ATRIAL + natrium, sodium (from NATRON) + URETIC + FACTOR.]

a·tri·o·ven·tric·u·lar (ā'trē-ō-vĕn-trīk'yə-lər) adj. Of, relating to, or involving the atria and the ventricles of the heart.

atrioventricular node (ā'trē-ō-vĕn-trīk'yə-lər nōd) n. A small mass of specialized cardiac muscle fibers, located in the wall of the right atrium of the heart, that receives heartbeat impulses from the sinoatrial node and directs them to the walls of the ventricles. Also called AV node a·trip (ə-trīp') adj. Nautical. Just clear of the bottom. Used of an anchor.

a·tri·um (ā'trē-əm) *n. pl. a·tri·a (ā'trē-ə) or a·tri·ums. 1. Architecture. A rectangular court, as: a. A usually skylighted central area, often containing plants, in some modern buildings, especially of a public or commercial nature. b. The open area in the center of an ancient Roman house. c. The forecourt of a building, such as an early Christian church, enclosed on three or four sides with porticoes. 2. Anatomy. A bodily cavity or chamber, especially either of the upper chambers of the heart that receives blood from the veins and forces it into a ventricle. In this sense, also called auricle [Latin atrium. See āter- in Appendix.]*

—a'tri·al adj.

a·tro·cious (ə-trō'shəs) adj. 1. Extremely evil or cruel; monstrous: an atrocious crime. See Synonyms at outrageous. 2. Exceptionally bad; abominable: atrocious decor; atrocious behavior. [From Latin atrōx, atrōc-, frightful, cruel. See āter- in Appendix.] —a·tro'cious·ly adv. —a·tro'cious·ness n.

a·troc·i·ty (ə-trōs'ī-tē) *n. pl. a·troc·i·ties. 1. Appalling or atrocious condition, quality, or behavior; monstrousness. 2. a. An appalling or atrocious action, situation, or object. b. An act of cruelty and violence inflicted by an enemy armed force on civilians or prisoners: wartime atrocities.*

at·ro·phy (ăt'rə-fē) *n. pl. at·ro·phies. 1. Pathology. A wasting or decrease in size of a bodily organ, tissue, or part owing to disease, injury, or lack of use: muscular atrophy of a person affected with paralysis. 2. A wasting away, deterioration, or diminution: intellectual atrophy. — v. at·ro·phied, at·ro·phy·ing, at·ro·phies. — v. tr. To cause to wither or deteriorate; affect with atrophy. — v. intr. To waste away; wither or deteriorate. [Late Latin atrophia, from Greek, from atrophos, ill-nourished : a-, without; see A-¹ + trophē, food.] —a·troph'ic (ā-trōf'īk) adj.

at·ro·pine (ăt'rə-pĕn', -pĭn) also at·ro·pin (-pĭn) n. A poisonous, bitter, crystalline alkaloid, C₁₇H₂₃NO₃, obtained from belladonna and other related plants. It is used to dilate the pupils of the eyes and as an antispasmodic. [From New Latin Atropa, genus name of belladonna, from Greek atropos, unchangeable. See ATROPOS.]

At-ro-pos (ät'rə-pös', -pəs) n. Greek Mythology. One of the three Fates, the cutter of the thread of destiny. [Greek, from atropos, inexorable : a-, not; see *A-*¹ + tropos, changeable; see -TROPOUS.]

At-si-na (ät-sē'nə) n. pl. Atsina or At-si-nas. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting the plains of northern Montana and southern Saskatchewan, with a present-day population in north central Montana. b. A member of this people. 2. The Algonquian language of the Atsina, dialectally related to Arapaho. Also called Gros Ventre att. abbr. 1. Attached. 2. Attention. 3. Law. Attorney.

at-tach (ə-täch') v. at-tached, at-tach-ing, at-tach-es. — v. tr. 1. To fasten, secure, or join. 2. To connect as an adjunct or associated condition or part: Many major issues are attached to this legislation. They gained influence by attaching themselves to prominent city institutions. 3. To affix or append; add: We attached several riders to the document. 4. To ascribe or assign: attached no significance to the threat. 5. To bind by emotional ties, as of affection or loyalty: I am attached to my family. 6. To assign (personnel) to a military unit on a temporary basis. 7. Law. To seize (persons or property) by legal writ. — v. intr. To adhere, belong, or relate: Very little prestige attaches to this position. [Middle English attachen, from Old French attachier, alteration of estachier, from estache, stake, of Germanic origin.] — at-tach/a-ble adj. — at-tach'er n.

at-ta-ché (ät'ə-shā', ä-tä-) n. 1. A person officially assigned to the staff of a diplomatic mission to serve in a particular capacity: a cultural attaché; a military attaché. 2. An attaché case. [French, from past participle of attacher, to attach. See ATTACH.]

attaché case (ät'ə-shā' kās) n. A slim briefcase with flat, rigid sides, hinges, and usually a lock.

at-tached (ə-tächt') adj. 1. Abbr. att. Architecture. Joined to or by a wall, especially by sharing a wall with another building; not freestanding: a block of attached houses. 2. Biology. Living in a permanently fixed state in the adult stage, as the barnacle.

at-tach-ment (ə-täch'mənt) n. 1. The act of attaching or the condition of being attached. 2. Something, such as a tie, band, or fastener, that attaches one thing to another. 3. A bond, as of affection or loyalty; fond regard. 4. A supplementary part; an accessory. See Synonyms at appendage. 5. Law. a. Legal seizure of property or a person. b. The writ ordering such a seizure.

at-tack (ə-tāk') v. at-tacked, at-tack-ing, at-tacks. — v. tr. 1. To set upon with violent force. 2. To criticize strongly or in a hostile manner. 3. To start work on with purpose and vigor: attack a problem. 4. To begin to affect harmfully: The disease had already attacked the central nervous system. — v. intr. To make an attack; launch an assault: The enemy attacked during the night. — n. 1. The act or an instance of attacking; an assault. 2. An expression of strong criticism; hostile comment: vicious attacks in all the newspapers. 3. Sports. a. An offensive action in a sport or game. b. The players executing such an action. 4. The initial movement in a task or undertaking: made an optimistic attack on the pile of paperwork. 5. An episode or onset of a disease, especially an occurrence of a chronic disease: an asthma attack. 6. The experience or beginning of a feeling, need, or desire: an attack of hunger; an attack of melancholy. 7. a. Music. The beginning or manner of beginning a piece, passage, or tone. b. Decisiveness and clarity in artistic expression: a careful performance, but one lacking the rigorous attack the work demands. [French attaquer, from Old French, from Old Italian estaccare*, of Germanic origin.] —at·tack'er n.

SYNONYMS: attack, bombard, assail, storm, assault, beset. These verbs mean to set upon, physically or figuratively. Attack applies to offensive action, physical or verbal, and especially to the onset of planned aggression: The commandos attacked the outpost at dawn. The governor was attacked by the press for failing to keep a campaign promise. Bombard suggests showering with bombs or shells (The fleet anchored in the bay and bombarded the town) or figuratively with words (The television star was bombarded with invitations). Assail implies repeated attacks: an area assailed by enemy forces from both directions; a novel assailed by critics; a member of the jury assailed by doubts. Storm refers to a sudden, sweeping attempt to achieve a victory: Some of the rebels were killed in the act of storming the citadel. "Yet, only a few months after triumphantly storming the country, [the President] is obliged to storm Capitol Hill, with greater difficulty and with less than complete success" (Economist). Assault usually implies sudden, intense violence: Muggers often assault their victims on dark streets. Strobe lights assaulted my eyes. Beset suggests beleaguerment from all sides by an enemy force or by adversity: The fox was beset by hunters and hounds. The city council is beset by problems.

at·tain (ə-tān') v. at·tained, at·tain·ing, at·tains. — v. tr. 1. To gain as an objective; achieve. 2. To arrive at, as by virtue of persistence or the passage of time. See Synonyms at reach. — v. intr. To succeed in a directed effort, process, or progression: attained to high office; eventually attained to wisdom. [Middle English atteignen, from Old French ataindre, ataign-, to reach to, from Vulgar Latin attangere*, from Latin attingere: ad-, ad- + tangere, to touch; see tag- in Appendix.] —at·tain'a·bil'i·ty, at·tain'a·ble·ness n. —at·tain'a·ble adj.
at·tain·der (ə-tān'dər) n. 1. In the ancient common law, the state into which an offender was placed when a sentence against him for a capital offense was handed down. 2. Obsolete. Dishonor. [Middle English atteindre, act of attaining, from Old French ataindre, to convict, affect, attainder. See ATTAIN.]

at·tain·ment (ə-tān'mənt) n. 1. The act of attaining or the condition of being attained. 2. Something, such as an accomplishment or achievement, that is attained.

at·taint (ə-tānt') v. tr. at·taint·ed, at·taint·ing, at·taints. 1. To impart stigma to; disgrace: "No breath of calumny ever attainted the personal purity of Savonarola" (Henry Hart Milman). 2. To pass a sentence of attainder against. 3. Archaic. To infect or corrupt, as with illness or vice. 4. Archaic. To accuse. — n. 1. Obsolete. Attainder. 2. Archaic. A disgrace; a stigma. [Middle English attainten, from Old French ataint, past participle of ataindre, to affect. See ATTAIN.]

at·tar (ät'ər) also ot·tar (öt'ər) or ot·to (öt'ō) n. A fragrant essential oil or perfume obtained from flowers: attar of roses. [Persian 'atir, perfumed, from Arabic 'itr, perfume.]

At·tar (ät'ər, ə-tär'), Died c. 1229. Persian poet and mystic whose masterpiece, Conference of the Birds, is an allegorical survey of Sufism.

At·ta·wa·pis·kat (ät'ə-wə-pis'kət) A river, about 748 km (465 mi) long, of northern Ontario, Canada, flowing from Attawapiskat Lake east and northeast into James Bay.

at·te·let (ät'l-ä') n. A slender skewer, usually ornamented at the top, used decoratively, especially in serving garnishes. [French, variant of hâtelet, from Old French hastelet. See HASLET.]

at·tempt (ə-těmpt') v. tr. at·tempt·ed, at·tempt·ing, at·tempts. 1. a. To make an effort; endeavor: I attempted to read the entire novel in one sitting. b. To try to perform, make, or achieve: We attempted the difficult maneuver without assistance. 2. Archaic. To tempt. 3. Archaic. To attack with the intention of subduing. — n. 1. An effort or a try. 2. An attack; an assault: an attempt on someone's life. [Middle English attempten, from Old French attempter, from Latin attemptāre: ad-, ad- + temptāre, to test.] — at·tempt'able adj. — at·tempt'er n.

at·tend (ə-těnd') v. at·tend·ed, at·tend·ing, at·tends. — v. tr. 1. To be present at: attended class. 2. To accompany as a circumstance or follow as a result: The speech was attended by wild applause. 3. a. To accompany or wait upon as a companion or servant. b. To take care of (a sick person, for example). See Synonyms at tend². 4. To take charge of: They attended our affairs during our absence. 5. To listen to; heed: attended my every word. 6. Archaic. To wait for; expect. — v. intr. 1. To be present. 2. To take care; give attention: We'll attend to that problem later. 3. To apply or direct oneself: attended to their business. 4. To pay attention: attended disinterestedly to the debate. 5. To remain ready to serve; wait. 6. Obsolete. To delay or wait. [Middle English attenden, from Old French attendre, from Latin attendere, to heed : ad-, ad- + tendere, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.] — at·tend'er n.

at·ten·dance (ə-tĕn'dəns) n. 1. The act of attending. 2. The persons or number of persons that are present. 3. The frequency with which a person is present.

at·ten·dant (ə-tĕn'dənt) n. 1. One who attends or waits on another. 2. One who is present. 3. An accompanying thing or circumstance; a concomitant. — adj. 1. Being present: ships and attendant sailors. 2. Accompanying or following as a result: attendant circumstances. —at·tend·ant·ly adv.

at·tend·ee (ə-tĕn'dē', ä'tĕn-) n. One who is present at or attends a function. See Usage Note at -ee¹.

at·tend·ing (ə-tĕn'dĩng) adj. 1. Being the principal physician supervising a patient's care. 2. Being a physician on the regular medical staff of a hospital. — n. 1. The principal physician supervising a patient's care. 2. A staff physician in a hospital.

at·ten·tion (ə-tĕn'shən) n. Abbr. att., attn. 1. Concentration of the mental powers upon an object; a close or careful observing or listening. 2. The ability or power to concentrate mentally. 3. Observant consideration; notice: Your suggestion has come to our attention. 4. Consideration or courtesy: attention to others' feelings. 5. attentions. Acts of courtesy, consideration, or gallantry, especially by a suitor. 6. A military posture, with the body erect, eyes to the front, arms at the sides, and heels together. — interj. Used as a command to assume an erect military posture. [Middle English attencioun, from Latin attentiō, attentiōn-, from attentus, past participle of attendere, to heed. See ATTEND.] —at·ten·tion·al adj.

attention deficit disorder (ə-tĕn'shən dəf'i-sīt dīs-ôr'dər) n. Abbr. ADD A childhood syndrome characterized by impulsiveness, hyperactivity, and short attention span, which often leads to learning disabilities and various behavioral problems.

attention span (ə-tĕn'shən spän) n. The length of time during which a person can concentrate or focus attention on a particular object or idea without diversion.

at·ten·tive (ə-tĕn'tiv) adj. 1. Giving care or attention; watchful: attentive to detail. 2. Marked by or offering devoted and assiduous attention to the pleasure or comfort of others. See Synonyms at thoughtful. 3. Expressing affectionate interest through close observation and gallant gestures: He played the attentive suitor, complete with roses and bonbons. —at·ten·tive·ly adv. —at·ten·tive·ness n.

at·ten·u·ate (ə-tĕn'yōō-āt') v. at·ten·u·at·ed, at·ten·u·at·ing, at·ten·u·ates. — v. tr. 1. To make slender, fine, or small. 2. To reduce in force, value, amount, or degree; weaken. 3. To lessen the density of; rarefy. 4. Biology. To make (bacteria or viruses) less virulent. 5. Electronics. To reduce (the amplitude of an electrical signal) with little or no distortion. — v. intr. To become thin, weak, or fine. — adj. (-yōō-īt) 1. Reduced or weakened, as in strength, value, or virulence. 2. Botany. Gradually tapering to a slender point. [Latin attenuāre, attenuāt- : ad-, ad- + tenuāre, to make thin (from tenuis, thin); see ten- in Appendix.] —at·ten'·u·a'tion n.

at·ten·u·a'tor (ə-tĕn'yōō-ā'tər) n. A device that attenuates an electrical signal.

at·test (ə-tĕst') v. at·test·ed, at·test·ing, at·tests. — v. tr. 1. To affirm to be correct, true, or genuine. 2. a. To certify by signature or oath. b. To certify in an official capacity. 3. To supply or be evidence of: splendid tombs that attested their power. See Synonyms at indicate. 4. To put under oath. — v. intr. To bear witness; give testimony: attested to their good faith. — n. Archaic. Attestation. [Latin attestārī : ad-, ad- + testārī, to be witness (from testis, witness); see trei- in Appendix.] —at·test'ant n. —at'tes-ta'tion (ăt'ĕs-tā'shən, ăt'ə-stā'-) n. —at·test'er, at·tes'tor n.

Att. Gen. abbr. Law. Attorney general.

at·tic (ăt'ĭk) n. 1. A story or room directly below the roof of a building, especially a house. 2. A low wall or story above the cornice of a classical façade.

[From Attic story, story of a building enclosed by one decorative structure placed above another, much taller decorative structure, usually involving the Attic order, an architectural order having square columns of any of the basic five orders, from French attique, from attique, Attic, from Latin Atticus. See ATTIC.]

At·tic (ăt'ĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of ancient Attica, Athens, or the Athenians. 2. Characterized by purity, simplicity, and elegant wit: Attic prose. — n. The ancient Greek dialect of Attica, in which the bulk of classical Greek literature is written. [Latin Atticus, from Greek Attikos, from Attikē, Attica.]

At·ti·ca (ăt'ĭ-kə) An ancient region of east-central Greece around Athens.

According to Greek legend, the four Attic tribes were unified into a single state by the Athenian king Theseus.

At·ti·cism (ăt'ĭ-sĭz'əm) n. 1. A characteristic feature of Attic Greek.

2. atticism. An expression characterized by conciseness and elegance.

At·ti·la (ăt'l-ə, ə-tĭl'ə), Called “the Scourge of the Gods.” A.D. 406?-453. King of the Huns (433?-453) and the most successful of the barbarian invaders of the Roman Empire.

at·tire (ə-tĭr') v. tr. at·tired, at·tir·ing, at·tires. To dress or clothe, especially in elaborate or splendid garments. — n. 1. Clothing or array; apparel. 2. The antlers of a deer. [Middle English atiren, from Old French atirier : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + tire, order, rank; see TIER¹.]

at·ti·tude (ăt'ĭ-tōōd', -tyōōd') n. 1. A position of the body or manner of carrying oneself: stood in a graceful attitude. See Synonyms at posture. 2. A state of mind or a feeling; disposition: an attitude of open hostility. 3. The orientation of an aircraft's axes relative to a reference line or plane, such as the horizon.

4. The orientation of a spacecraft relative to its direction of motion. 5. A position similar to an arabesque in which a ballet dancer stands on one leg with the other raised either in front or in back and bent at the knee. [French, from Italian attitudine, from Late Latin aptitūdō, aptitūdin-, faculty, from Latin aptus, fit. See APTITUDE.] —at·ti·tu·di·nal (ăt'ī-tōōd'n-əl, -tyōōd'-) adj.

at·ti·tu·di·nize (ăt'ī-tōōd'n-īz', -tyōōd'-) v. intr. at·ti·tu·di·nized, at·ti·tu·di·niz·ing, at·ti·tu·di·niz·es. To assume an affected attitude; posture.

At·tle·bor·o (ăt'l-bûr'ō, -bûr'ō) A city of southeast Massachusetts northeast of Providence, Rhode Island. Its jewelry industry began in 1780. Population, 38,383.

Att·lee (ăt'lē), Clement Richard. 1883-1967. British politician who as prime minister (1945-1951) formed the Labor government that established the National Health Service, expanded public ownership of industry, and granted independence to India (1947) and Burma (1948).

attn. abbr. Attention.

atto- pref. One quintillionth (10^{-18}): attotesla. [From Danish, or Norwegian atten, eighteen from Old Norse ātījān. See oktō(u) in Appendix.]

at·torn (ə-tûrn') v. intr. at·torned, at·torn·ing, at·torns. Law. To agree to remain as a tenant of property after its ownership has been transferred. [Middle English attournen, from Old French atorner, to assign to : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + torner, to turn; see TURN.] —at·torn·ment n.

at·tor·ney (ə-tûr'nē) n. pl. at·tor·neys. Abbr. att., atty. Law. A person legally appointed by another to act as his or her agent in the transaction of business, specifically one qualified and licensed to act for plaintiffs and defendants in legal proceedings. See Synonyms at lawyer. [Middle English attourney, from Old French atorne, from past participle of atorner, to appoint. See ATTORN.]

—at·tor·ney·ship' n.

attorney at law or at·tor·ney·at·law (ə-tûr'nē-ət-lô') n. pl. attorneys at law or at·tor·neys·at·law (-nēz-). Law. An attorney.

attorney general (ə-tûr'nē jĕn'ər-əl) n. pl. attorneys general or attorney generals. Abbr. A.G., AG, Att. Gen., Atty. Gen. 1. The chief law officer and legal counsel of the government of a state or nation. 2. Attorney General. The head of the U.S. Department of Justice and a member of the President's cabinet.

at·to·tes·la (ăt'ō-tĕs'lə) n. Abbr. aT One-quintillionth (10^{-18}) of a tesla.

at·tract (ə-trăkt') v. at·tract·ed, at·tract·ing, at·tracts. — v. tr. 1. To cause to draw near or adhere; direct to or toward itself or oneself: Magnetic poles are attracted to their opposites. The fire attracted significant coverage from the media.

2. To arouse or compel the interest, admiration, or attention of: We were attracted by the display of lights. — v. intr. To possess or use the power of attraction. [Middle English attracten, from Latin attrahere, attrāct- : ad-, ad- + trahere, pull.] —at·tract·a·ble adj. —at·tract·er, at·tract·or n.

at·trac·tion (ə-trāk'shən) n. 1. The act or capability of attracting. 2. The quality of attracting; charm. 3. a. A feature or characteristic that attracts. b. A person, place, thing, or event that is intended to attract: The main attraction was a Charlie Chaplin film.

at·trac·tive (ə-trāk'tiv) adj. 1. Having the power to attract. 2. Pleasing to the eye or mind; charming. —at·trac'tive·ly adv. —at·trac'tive·ness n.

attrib. abbr. Grammar. Attribute; attributive.

at·trib·ute (ə-trīb'yoot) v. tr. at·trib·ut·ed, at·trib·ut·ing, at·trib·utes.

1. To relate to a particular cause or source; ascribe. 2. To regard as the work of a specified agent or creator: attributed the painting to Titian. — n. (ăt'rə-byoot')

1. A quality or characteristic inherent in or ascribed to someone or something.

2. An object associated with and serving to identify a character, a personage, or an office: Lightning bolts are an attribute of Zeus. 3. Abbr. attrib. Grammar.

A word or phrase syntactically subordinate to another word or phrase that it modifies; for example, my sister's and brown in my sister's brown dog. [Latin attribuere, attribūt- : ad-, ad- + tribuere, to allot; see TRIBUTE.] —at·trib'ut·a·ble adj.

—at·trib'ut·er, at·trib'u·tor n.

SYNONYMS: attribute, ascribe, impute, credit, assign, refer. These verbs mean to consider as resulting from, proper to, or belonging to a person or thing. Attribute and ascribe, often interchangeable, have the widest application: a symphony attributed to Mozart; an invention ascribed to the 15th century. Impute is often used in laying guilt or fault to another: “We usually ascribe good; but impute evil” (Samuel Johnson). Credit frequently applies to an accomplishment or virtue: “Some excellent remarks were made on immortality, but mainly borrowed from and credited to Plato” (Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr.). Assign and refer are often used to classify or categorize according to character or chronology: Program music as a genre is usually assigned to the Romantic period. “A person thus prepared will be able to refer any particular history he takes up to its proper place in universal history” (Joseph Priestley). See also Synonyms at quality symbol at·tri·bu·tion (ăt'rə-byoot'shən) n. 1. The act of attributing, especially of establishing a particular person, place, or time as the creator, provenance, or era of a work of art. 2. Something, such as a quality or characteristic, that is related to a particular possessor; an attribute. —at'tri·bu'tion·al adj.

at·trib·u·tive (ə-trīb'yə-tiv) n. Abbr. attrib. Grammar. A word or word group, such as an adjective, that is placed adjacent to the noun it modifies without a linking verb; for example, pale in the pale girl. — adj. 1. Abbr. attrib. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being an attributive, as an adjective. 2. Of or having the nature of an attribution or attribute. —at·trib'u·tive·ly adv. —at·trib'u·tive·ness n.

- at·trit (ə-trīt′) also at·trite (ə-trīt′) v. tr. at·trit·ted also at·trit·ed, at·trit·ting also at·trit·ing, at·trits also at·trites. 1. To lose (personnel, for example) by attrition. 2. To destroy or kill (troops, for example) by use of fire-power: “Pro-active counterattacks are a useful way to attrit the enemy” (John H. Cushman, Jr.). [Back-formation from ATTRITION.]
- at·tri·tion (ə-trīsh′ən) n. 1. A rubbing away or wearing down by friction. 2. A gradual diminution in number or strength because of constant stress. 3. A gradual, natural reduction in membership or personnel, as through retirement, resignation, or death. 4. Theology. Repentance for sin motivated by fear of punishment rather than by love of God. [Middle English attricioun, regret, breaking, from Old French attrition, abrasion, from Late Latin attritiō, attritiōn-, act of rubbing against, from Latin attrītus, past participle of atterere, to rub against : ad-, against; see AD- + terere, to rub; see terə-¹ in Appendix.]
- At·tu (ăt′tōō′) An island of southwest Alaska, the westernmost of the Aleutians. In World War II it was occupied by the Japanese from June 1942 until June 1943.
- At·tucks (ăt′əks), Crispus. 1723?-1770. American patriot who was among the five persons killed in the Boston Massacre.
- at·tune (ə-tōōn′, ə-tyōōn′) v. tr. at·tuned, at·tun·ing, at·tunes. 1. To bring into a harmonious or responsive relationship: an industry that is not attuned to the demands of the market. 2. Music. To put (an instrument) into correct tune.
- atty. abbr. Law. Attorney.
- Atty. Gen. abbr. Law. Attorney General.
- ATV abbr. All-terrain vehicle.
- At·wa·ter (ăt′wô′tər, -wôt′ər) A city of central California west-northwest of Merced. It is a commercial center in an irrigated farming area. Population, 22,282.
- a·twit·ter (ə-twīt′ər) adj. Being in a state of nervous excitement; twittering: a crowd atwitter with expectation.
- at wt abbr. Atomic weight.
- a·typ·i·cal (ā-tīp′ī-kəl) also a·typ·ic (-īk) adj. Not conforming to type; unusual or irregular. —a′typ·i·cal′i·ty (-kāl′ī-tē) n. —a·typ·i·cal·ly adv.
- au abbr. Author.
- Au The symbol for the element gold (n., sense 1a). [From Latin aurum, gold.]
- a.u. or A.u. abbr. Angstrom unit.
- A.U. abbr. Astronomical unit.
- au·bade (ō-bād′) n. 1. Music. A song or instrumental composition concerning, accompanying, or evoking daybreak. 2. A poem or song of or about lovers separating at dawn. [French, from Old French albade, from Old Provençal albada, from alba, dawn, aubade, from Latin alba, feminine of albus, white. See albo- in Appendix.]

Aube (ōb) A river of northeast France flowing about 225 km (140 mi) to the Seine River north-northwest of Troyes.

Au-ber (ō-bēr'), Daniel François Esprit. 1782-1871. French operatic composer whose works include La Muette de Portici (1828) and Fra Diavolo (1829).

au-ber-gine (ō'bēr-zhēn', ō'bər-jēn) n. See eggplant (n., sense 1). [French, from Catalan albergina, from Arabic al-bādīnjān, the eggplant, from Persian bādingān.]

Au-ber-vil-liers (ō'bər-vēl-yā') A town of north-central France northeast of Paris. It is an important industrial center. Population, 67,719.

Au-brey (ô'brē), John. 1626-1697. English antiquarian and writer whose Brief Lives, published posthumously, contains character sketches of his notable friends, including Thomas Hobbes, John Milton, and Francis Bacon.

au-burn (ô'bərn) n. Color. A moderate reddish brown to brown. [Middle English, from Old French aborne, blond, from Latin alburnus, whitish, from albus, white. See albho- in Appendix.] —au'burn adj.

Au-burn (ô'bərn) 1. A city of eastern Alabama north-northeast of Tuskegee. It is the seat of Auburn University (founded 1856). Population, 33,830. 2. A city of southern Maine on the Androscoggin River opposite Lewiston. It was settled in 1765. Population, 24,309. 3. A city of west-central New York in the Finger Lakes region west-southwest of Syracuse. Founded in 1793, it is a manufacturing center. Population, 31,258. 4. A city of western Washington east-northeast of Tacoma. It is a center of the state's aircraft industry. Population, 33,102.

Au-bus-son (ō'bə-sən, -sōn') n. A tapestry or usually pileless, densely patterned carpet woven in Aubusson, a city of central France, or similar to the ones made there.

A.U.C. abbr. Latin. 1. Ab urbe condita (from the founding of the city [of Rome in 753? B.C.]). 2. Anno urbis conditae (in the year from the founding of the city [of Rome in 753? B.C.]).

Auck-land (ôk'lənd) The largest city of New Zealand, on an isthmus of north-west North Island. It is a major port and an industrial center. Metropolitan area population, 860,000.

au cou-rant (ō' kō-rān') adj. 1. Informed on current affairs; up-to-date. 2. Fully familiar; knowledgeable. [French : au, in the + courant, current.]

auc-tion (ôk'shən) n. 1. A public sale in which property or items of merchandise are sold to the highest bidder. 2. Games. a. The bidding in bridge.

b. Auction bridge. — v. tr. auc-tioned, auc-tion-ing, auc-tions. To sell at or by an auction: auctioned off the remaining inventory. [Latin auctiō, auctiōn-, from auctus, past participle of augēre, to increase. See aug- in Appendix.]

auction bridge (ôk'shən brīj) n. Games. A variety of bridge in which tricks made in excess of the contract are scored toward game.

auc-tion·eer (ôk'shə-nîr') n. One that conducts an auction. — v. tr.

auc-tion·eered, auc-tion·eer-ing, auc-tion·eers. To sell at auction.

auc-to-ri-al (ôk-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. Of or relating to an author. [From Latin auctor, author. See AUTHOR.]

au-cu·ba (ô'kyə-bə) n. Any of several eastern Asian evergreen shrubs of the genus Aucuba, especially A. japonica, grown as an ornamental chiefly for its glossy, leathery leaves. [New Latin : possibly from Japanese auku, green + Japanese ba, leaved.]

aud. abbr. 1. Audit; auditor. 2. Audition.

au-da-cious (ô-dā'shəs) adj. 1. Fearlessly, often recklessly daring; bold. See Synonyms at adventurous. See Synonyms at brave. 2. Unrestrained by convention or propriety; insolent. 3. Spirited and original: an audacious interpretation of two Jacobean dramas. [French audacieux, from Old French audace, boldness, from Latin audācia, from audāx, audāc-, bold, from audēre, to dare, from avidus, avid. See AVID.] — au-da'ciously adv. — au-da'cious-ness n.

au-dac-i-ty (ô-dās'ĭ-tē) n. pl. au-dac-i-ties. 1. Fearless daring; intrepidity. 2. Bold or insolent heedlessness of restraints, as of those imposed by prudence, propriety, or convention. See Synonyms at temerity. 3. An act or instance of intrepidity or insolent heedlessness.

Au-den (ôd'n), W(ystan) H(ugh). 1907-1973. British-born American writer and critic whose poems, published in collections such as The Dance of Death (1933) and The Double Man (1941), established his importance in 20th-century literature.

au-di-al (ô'dē-əl) adj. Of or relating to the sense of hearing; aural. [AUDI(O)- + -AL¹.]

au-di-ble (ô'də-bəl) adj. That is heard or that can be heard. — n. Football. A new or substitute offensive play called by the quarterback or a defensive formation called by a linebacker at the line of scrimmage as an adjustment to the opposing side's formation. Also called automatic [Late Latin audibilis, from Latin audire, to hear. See au- in Appendix.] — au'di-bil'i-ty n. — au'di-ble-ness n. — au'di-bly adv.

au-di-ence (ô'dē-əns) n. 1. a. The spectators or listeners assembled at a performance, for example, or attracted by a radio or television program. b. The readership for printed matter, as for a book. 2. A body of adherents; a following: The tenor expanded his audience by recording popular songs as well as opera. 3. A formal hearing, as with a religious or state dignitary. 4. An opportunity to be heard or to express one's views. 5. The act of hearing or attending. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin audientia, from audiēns, present participle of audire, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au-dile (ô'dîl') adj. 1. Capable of learning chiefly from auditory, rather than tactile or visual, stimuli. 2. Auditory. — n. An audile person. [From Latin audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au-di-o (ô'dē-ō') adj. 1. Of or relating to humanly audible sound. 2. a. Of or relating to the broadcasting or reception of sound. b. Of or relating to high-fidelity sound reproduction. — n. pl. au-di-os. 1. The part of television or motion-picture equipment that has to do with sound. 2. The broadcasting, reception, or reproduction of sound. 3. Audible sound. 4. A sound signal. [From AUDIO-.]

audio- pref. 1. Hearing: audio-lingual. 2. Sound: audiophile. [From Latin audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

audio book (ô'dē-ō' böök) n. A taped reading of a book or book condensation reproduced in cassette form.

au-di-o-cas-sette (ô'dē-ō-kə-sět', -kă-) n. 1. A cassette containing blank or prerecorded audiotape. 2. A tape recording reproduced in cassette form.

audio frequency (ô'dē-ō' frē'kwən-sē) n. Abbr. AF A range of frequencies, usually from 15 hertz to 20,000 hertz, characteristic of signals audible to the normal human ear.

au-di-o-gram (ô'dē-ə-grām') n. A graphic record of hearing ability for various sound frequencies that is used to measure hearing loss.

au-di-o-lin-gual (ô'dē-ō-līng'gwəl) adj. Relating to or involving a system of language acquisition that focuses intensively on listening and speaking.

au-di-ol-o-gy (ô'dē-ōl'ə-jē) n. The study of hearing, especially hearing defects and their treatment. — au'di-o-log'i-cal (-ə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. — au'di-ol'o-gist n.

au-di-om-e-ter (ô'dē-ōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument for measuring hearing activity for pure tones of normally audible frequencies. Also called sonometer — au'di-o-met'ric (-ō-mět'rik) adj. — au'di-om'e-try n.

au-di-o-phile (ô'dē-ə-fīl') n. A person having an ardent interest in stereo or high-fidelity sound reproduction.

au-di-o-tape (ô'dē-ō-tāp') n. 1. A relatively narrow magnetic tape used to record sound for subsequent playback. 2. A tape recording of sound. — v. tr.

au-di-o-taped, au-di-o-tap-ing, au-di-o-tapes. To record (sound) on magnetic tape: audiotaped the interview for replay on radio.

au-di-o-typ-ing (ô'dē-ō-tī'pīng) n. Typing done directly from an audiotape. — au'di-o-typ'ist n.

au-di-o-vis-u-al also au-di-o-vis-u-al (ô'dē-ō-vīzh'ōō-əl) adj. Abbr. AV, A.V. 1. Both audible and visible. 2. Of or relating to materials, such as films and tape recordings, that present information in audible and pictorial form: a corporation's audio-visual department. — n. An aid, other than printed matter, that uses sight or sound to present information: language tapes, videocassettes, and other audio-visuals.

au·dit (ô'dīt) n. Abbr. aud. 1. An examination of records or financial accounts to check their accuracy. 2. An adjustment or correction of accounts. 3. An examined and verified account. — v. au·dit·ed, au·dit·ing, au·dits. — v. tr. 1. To examine, verify, or correct the financial accounts of: Independent accountants audit the company annually. The IRS audits questionable income tax returns. 2. To attend (a course) without requesting or receiving academic credit. — v. intr. To examine financial accounts. [Middle English (influenced by auditor, auditor), from Latin audītus, a hearing, from past participle of audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au·di·tion (ô-dīsh'ən) n. 1. The sense or power of hearing. 2. The act of hearing. 3. Abbr. aud. A trial performance, as by an actor, dancer, or musician, to demonstrate suitability or skill. — v. au·di·tion·ed, au·di·tion·ing, au·di·tions. — v. intr. To take part in a trial performance: auditioned for the role and got it. — v. tr. To evaluate (a person) in a trial performance. [Latin audītiō, audītiōn-, from audītus, past participle of audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au·di·tive (ô'dī-tīv) adj. Of or relating to hearing; auditory.

au·di·tor (ô'dī-tər) n. Abbr. aud. 1. One that audits accounts. 2. One who audits a course. 3. One who hears; a listener. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman auditour, from Latin audītor, listener, from audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au·di·to·ri·um (ô'dī-tôr'ē-əm, -tôr'-) n. pl. au·di·to·ri·ums or au·di·to·ri·a (-tôr'ē-ə, -tôr'-). 1. A large room to accommodate an audience in a building such as a school or theater. 2. A large building for public meetings or performances. [Latin, from audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

au·di·to·ry (ô'dī-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Of or relating to hearing, the organs of hearing, or the sense of hearing. [Late Latin audītōrius, from Latin audīre, to hear. See au- in Appendix.]

auditory nerve (ô'dī-tôr'ē nŭrv) n. Anatomy. See acoustic nerve.

Au·du·bon (ô'də-bŏn', -bən), John James. 1785-1851. Haitian-born American ornithologist and artist whose extensive observations of eastern North American avifauna led to the publication of The Birds of America (1827-1838), a collection of his engravings that is considered a classic work in ornithology and American art.

Au·er (ou'ər), Leopold. 1845-1930. Hungarian-born violinist and teacher of several notable musicians, including Jascha Heifetz and Efrem Zimbalist.

Au·er·bach (ou'ər-bäk', -bākH'), Berthold. 1812-1882. German writer who was strongly influenced by Spinoza and is primarily known for his stories about rural life.

Auf-klä-rung (ouf'klā'rōōng) n. The Enlightenment. [German : auf, up (from Middle High German ūf, from Old High German); see upo in Appendix + Klärung, a making clear (from klären, to make clear, from Middle High German klæren, from klār, clear, from Latin clārus); see CLEAR.]

auf Wie-der-seh-en (ouf vē'dər-zā'ən) interj. Used to express farewell. [German : auf, until + Wiedersehen, seeing again.]

aug. abbr. Grammar. Augmentative.

Aug. abbr. August.

Au-ge-an (ô-jē'ən) adj. 1. Exceedingly filthy from long neglect. 2. Requiring heroic efforts of cleaning or correction: the Augean task of reforming the bureaucracy. [After Augeas, legendary Greek king who did not clean his stable for thirty years.]

au-gend (ô'jënd') n. Mathematics. A quantity to which the addend is added. [Latin augendum, a thing to be increased, from neuter gerundive of augēre, to increase. See aug- in Appendix.]

au-ger (ô'gər) n. 1. A tool for boring holes in wood or ice. 2. A large tool for boring into the earth. [Middle English, from an auger, alteration of a nauger, from Old English nafogār, auger. See nobh- in Appendix.]

ought¹ also ought (ôt) pron. Anything whatever: “Neither of his parents had ought but praise for him” (Louis Auchincloss). — adv. Archaic. In any respect; at all. [Middle English, from Old English āuht. See aiw- in Appendix.]

ought² also ought (ôt) n. 1. A cipher; zero. 2. Archaic. Nothing. [From an ought, alteration of a naught. See NAUGHT.]

Au-gier (ô-zhyā'), (Guillaume Victor) Émile. 1820-1889. French playwright whose comedies lauded middle-class life.

au-gite (ô'jit') n. A dark-green to black pyroxene mineral, (Ca,Na)(Mg,Fe,Al)(Si,Al)₂O₆, that contains large amounts of aluminum, iron, and magnesium. [Latin augītis, a precious stone, from Greek augitēs, from augē, brightness.]

aug-ment (ôg-měnt') v. aug-ment-ed, aug-ment-ing, aug-ments. — v. tr. 1. To make (something already developed or well under way) greater, as in size, extent, or quantity: Continuing rains augmented the flood waters. 2. To add an augment to. — v. intr. To become augmented. See Synonyms at increase. — n. (ôg'měnt') 1. An enlargement or increase. 2. The prefixation of a vowel accompanying a past tense, especially of Greek and Sanskrit verbs. [Middle English augmenten, from Old French augmenter, from Late Latin augmentāre, from Latin augmentum, an increase, from augēre, to increase. See aug- in Appendix.] — aug-ment'a-ble adj. — aug-ment'er n.

aug-men-ta-tion (ôg'měn-tā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of augmenting. 2. The condition of being augmented. 3. Something that augments. 4. Music. The repetition of a theme in notes of usually double time value.

aug·men·ta·tive (ôg-měň'tə-tív) adj. 1. Having the ability or tendency to augment. 2. Grammar. Indicating an increase in the size, force, or intensity of the meaning of an adjacent word, as up does in eat up. — n. Abbr. aug. Grammar. An augmentative word.

aug·ment·ed (ôg-měň'tid) adj. Music. Larger by a semitone than the corresponding major or perfect interval.

au gra·tin (ô grät'n, grät'n, gră-tăN') adj. Covered with bread crumbs and sometimes butter and grated cheese, and then browned in an oven: potatoes au gratin. [French : au, with the + gratin, scraping from the pan.]

Augs·burg (ôgz'bûrg', ouks'böörk') A city of southern Germany west-northwest of Munich. Founded by Augustus as a Roman garrison c. 14 B.C., it was a major commercial and banking center in the 15th and 16th centuries. Population, 244,400.

au·gur (ô'gər) n. 1. One of a group of ancient Roman religious officials who foretold events by observing and interpreting signs and omens. 2. A seer or prophet; a soothsayer. — v. au·gured, au·gur·ing, au·gurs. — v. tr. 1. To predict, especially from signs or omens; foretell. See Synonyms at foretell.

2. To serve as an omen of; betoken: trends that augur change in society. — v. intr. 1. To make predictions from signs or omens. 2. To be a sign or omen: A smooth dress rehearsal augured well for the play. [Middle English, from Latin. See aug- in Appendix.] — au'gu·ral (ô'gyə-rəl) adj.

au·gu·ry (ô'gyə-rē) n. pl. au·gu·ries. 1. The art, ability, or practice of auguring; divination. 2. A sign of something coming; an omen. [Middle English augurie, from Old French, from Latin augurium, from augur, augur. See AUGUR.]

au·gust (ô-güst') adj. 1. Inspiring awe or admiration; majestic: the august presence of the monarch. See Synonyms at grand. 2. Venerable for reasons of age or high rank. [Latin augustus. See aug- in Appendix.] — au·gust'ly adv.

—au·gust'ness n.

Au·gust (ô'gəst) n. Abbr. Aug. The eighth month of the year in the Gregorian calendar. See Table at calendar. [Middle English, from Old English, from Latin (mēnsis) Augustus, (month) of Augustus, after AUGUSTUS.]

Au·gus·ta (ô-güs'tə, ə-güs'-) 1. A city of eastern Georgia on the South Carolina border north-northwest of Savannah. It is a popular resort known especially for its golf tournaments. Population, 44,639. 2. The capital of Maine, in the southwest part of the state on the Kennebec River north-northeast of Portland. A trading post was established here in 1628. Population, 21,325.

Au·gus·tan (ô-güs'tən) adj. 1. Of or characteristic of Augustus or his reign or times. 2. Of or characteristic of English literature during the early 18th century.

—Au·gus'tan n.

Au·gus·tine¹ (ô'gə-stēn', ô-güs'tin), Saint. A.D. 354-430. Early Christian church father and philosopher who served (396-430) as the bishop of Hippo (in present-day Algeria). He wrote the autobiographical Confessions (397) and the voluminous City of God (413-426).

Au-gus-tine² (ô'gə-stēn', ô-gūs'tīn) also Aus-tin (ô'stən), Saint Called "Apostle of the English." Died c. 604. Italian-born missionary and prelate who introduced Christianity to southern Britain and in 598 was ordained as the first archbishop of Canterbury.

Au-gus-tin-i-an (ô'gə-stīn'ē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Saint Augustine of Hippo or his doctrines. 2. Being or belonging to any of several religious orders following or influenced by the rule of Saint Augustine. — n. 1. A follower of the principles and doctrines of Saint Augustine. 2. A monk or friar belonging to any of the Augustinian orders. — Au'gus-tin'i-an-ism, Au-gus'tin-ism (ô-gūs'tī-nīz'əm) n.

Au-gus-tus (ô-gūs'təs), Originally Oc-ta-vi-an (ôk-tā'vē-ən) 63 B.C.-A.D. 14. First emperor of Rome (27 B.C.-A.D. 14) and grand-nephew of Julius Caesar. He defeated Mark Antony and Cleopatra in 31 and subsequently gained control over the empire. In 29 he was named emperor, and in 27 he was given the honorary title Augustus.

au jus (ô zhōōs', zhü') adj. Served with the natural juices or gravy: roast beef au jus. [French : au, with the + jus, juice.]

auk (ôk) n. Any of several diving sea birds (family Alcidae) of northern regions, such as the razor-billed auk, having a chunky body, short wings, and webbed feet. [Norwegian alk, from Old Norse ālka.]

auk-let (ôk'līt) n. Any of various small auks (genus Aethia and related genera) of northern Pacific coasts and waters.

auld (ôld) adj. Scots. Old.

auld lang syne (ôld' lăng zīn', sīn') n. The good old days. [Scots : auld, old + lang, long + syne, since.]

Au-lis (ô'līs) An ancient port of east-central Greece in Boeotia. According to tradition, it was the embarkation point for the Greek fleet during the Trojan War.

Aul-nay-sous-Bois (ô-nā'sōō-bwä') A town of north-central France, a suburb of Paris. Population, 75,996.

Aum (ôm) n. Hinduism & Buddhism. Variant of Om².

au na-tu-rel (ô' năch'ə-rĕl', ô' nă-tü-rĕl') adj. 1. a. Nude. b. In a natural state: an au naturel hairstyle. 2. Cooked simply. [French : au, in the + naturel, natural (state).]

Au-nis (ô-nēs') A historical region and former province of western France on the Atlantic Ocean. A part of Aquitaine, it was recovered from England in 1373 and incorporated into the French crown lands.

aunt (ănt, änt) n. 1. The sister of one's father or mother. 2. The wife of one's uncle. [Middle English aunte, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin amita, paternal aunt.] — aunt'hood n.

aunt·ie also aunt·y (än'tē, än'-) n. pl. aunt·ies. Informal. Aunt.

au pair (ô pâ'r') n. A young foreigner who does domestic work for a family in exchange for room and board and a chance to learn the family's language.

[French : au, at the + pair, equal.]

au·ra (ô'rə) n. pl. au·ras or au·rae (ô'rē). 1. An invisible breath, emanation, or radiation. 2. A distinctive but intangible quality that seems to surround a person or thing; atmosphere: An aura of defeat pervaded the candidate's headquarters.

3. Pathology. A sensation, as of a cold breeze or a bright light, that precedes the onset of certain disorders, such as an epileptic seizure or an attack of migraine.

[Middle English, gentle breeze, from Latin, from Greek, breath. See wer¹ in Appendix.]

au·ral¹ (ô'rəl) adj. Of, relating to, or perceived by the ear. [From Latin auris, ear. See ous- in Appendix.] —au·ral·ly adv.

au·ral² (ô'rəl) adj. Characterized by or relating to an aura.

Au·rang·a·bad (ou-rŭng'gə-bäd', -ə-bäd') A town of western India east-northeast of Bombay. Founded in 1610, it is near the site of a mausoleum erected by Aurangzeb in honor of his empress. Population, 284,607.

Au·rang·zeb also Au·rung·zeb or Au·rung·zebe (ô'rəng-zēb'), 1618-1707. Hindustani emperor (1658-1707) who imposed Muslim orthodoxy and expanded the empire.

au·rar (ou'rär', œ'rär') n. Plural of eyrir.

au·re·ate (ô'rē-īt) adj. 1. Of a golden color; gilded. 2. Inflated and pompous in style. [Middle English aureat, from Late Latin aureātus, from aureus, golden, from aurum, gold.] —au·re·ate·ly adv. —au·re·ate·ness n.

Au·re·lian (ô-rēl'yən, ô-rē'lē-ən), A.D. 212?-275. Emperor of Rome (A.D. 270-275) who held the barbarians in check beyond the Rhine River and regained Britain, Gaul, Spain, Syria, and Egypt for the empire.

au·re·ole (ô'rē-ōl') also au·re·o·la (ô-rē'ə-lə) n. 1. A circle of light or radiance surrounding the head or body of a representation of a deity or holy person; a halo. 2. Astronomy. See corona (n., sense 1a). [Middle English, from Late Latin (corōna) aureola, golden (crown), feminine of Latin aureolus, golden, from aureus, from aurum, gold.]

Au·re·o·my·cin (ô'rē-ō-mī'sin) A trademark used for chlortetracycline.

au re·voir (ô' rə-vwä'r') interj. Used to express farewell. [French : au, till the + voir, seeing again.]

au·ric (ô'r'ik) adj. Of, relating to, derived from, or containing gold, especially with valence 3. [From Latin aurum, gold.]

au·ri·cle (ô'r'i-kəl) n. 1. Anatomy. a. The outer projecting portion of the ear. Also called pinna. b. See atrium (n., sense 2). 2. Biology. An earlobe-shaped part, process, or appendage, especially at the base of an organ. [Middle English, auricle of the heart, from Old French, little ear, from Latin auricula, ear, from diminutive of auris. See ous- in Appendix.] —au'ri-cled (-kəld) adj.

au-ric-u-la (ô-rĭk'yə-lə) n. pl. au-ric-u-las or au-ric-u-lae (-lē'). 1. A central European primrose (Primula auricula) having large yellow flowers grouped in umbels. Also called bear's ear 2. Any of numerous hybrids of this species with other primroses. [Latin, auricle. See AURICLE.]

au-ric-u-lar (ô-rĭk'yə-lər) adj. 1. Of or relating to the sense of hearing or the organs of hearing. 2. Perceived by or spoken into the ear: an auricular confession. 3. Shaped like an ear or an earlobe; having earlike parts or extensions. 4. Of or relating to an auricle of the heart: auricular fibrillation. [Middle English auricular, spoken into the ear, from Late Latin auriculāris, from Latin auricula, ear. See AURICLE.] —au-ric'u-lar-ly adv.

au-ric-u-late (ô-rĭk'yə-līt, -lāt') also au-ric-u-lat-ed (-lāt'ĭd) adj. 1. Having ears, auricles, or earlobe-shaped parts or extensions. 2. Shaped like an earlobe. [From Latin auricula, auricle. See AURICLE.] —au-ric'u-late-ly adv.

au-rif-er-ous (ô-rĭf'ər-əs) adj. Containing gold; gold-bearing. [From Latin aurifer, gold-bearing : aurum, gold + -fer, -fer.]

au-ri-form (ô-rĭ'ə-fôrm') adj. Shaped like an ear. [Latin auris, ear; see ous- in Appendix + -FORM.]

Au-ri-ga (ô-rĭ'gə) n. A constellation in the Northern Hemisphere near Lynx and Perseus that contains the bright star Capella, which is 42 light-years from Earth. Also called Charioteer [Latin aurīga, charioteer, Auriga. See ōs- in Appendix.]

Au-ri-gnac (ô'rĕn-yăk') A village of southern France at the foot of the Pyrenees. It is the site of caves containing prehistoric relics.

Au-rig-na-cian (ôr'ĭg-nā'shən, ôr'ĕn-yă'-) adj. Of or relating to the Old World Upper Paleolithic culture between Mousterian and Solutrean, associated with early Homo sapiens and characterized by artifacts such as figures of stone and bone, graphic artwork, the use of dress and adornment, and a type of tool culture. [After Aurignac.]

Au-ri-ol (ôr'ĕ-ôl', ô-ryôl'), Vincent. 1884-1966. French politician and first president (1947-1954) of the Fourth Republic.

au-rochs (ou'rôks', ôr'ôks') n. pl. aurochs. 1. See urus. 2. See wisent. [Obsolete German, variant of German Aurochs, from Middle High German ūrohse, from Old High German ūrohso : ūro, aurochs + ohso, ox.]

au-ro-ra (ô-rôr'ə, ô-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə) n. 1. Aurora borealis. 2. Aurora australis. 3. The dawn. [Middle English, dawn, from Latin aurōra. See aus- in Appendix.] —au-ro'ral, au-ro're-an (-ĕ-ən) adj. —au-ro'ral-ly adv.

Au-ro-ra¹ (ô-rôr'ə, ô-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə) n. Roman Mythology. The goddess of the dawn. [Latin Aurōra. See AURORA.]

Au-ro-ra² (ô-rôr'ə, ô-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə, ə-rôr'ə) 1. A town of southern Ontario, Canada, north of Toronto. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 16,267. 2. A city of north-central Colorado, a residential suburb of Denver. Population, 222,103. 3. A city of northeast Illinois on the Fox River west of Chicago. It is an industrial center and was one of the first U.S. cities to use electricity for street lighting. Population, 99,581.

aurora aus-tra-lis (ô-rôr'ə ô-strā'līs) n. A luminous phenomenon of southern regions that corresponds to the aurora borealis of northern regions. Also called southern lights [New Latin aurōra austrālis : Latin aurōra, dawn + Latin austrālis, southern.]

aurora bo-re-al-is (ô-rôr'ə bôr'ē-āl'īs, bōr'-) n. Luminous bands or streamers of light that are sometimes visible in the night skies of northern regions and are thought to be caused by the ejection of charged particles into the magnetic field of the earth. Also called northern lights [New Latin aurōra boreālis : Latin aurōra, dawn + Latin boreālis, northern.]

au-rous (ôr'əs) adj. Of or relating to gold, especially with valence 1. [Latin aurum, gold + -OUS.]

Au-rung-zeb or Au-rung-zebe (ôr'əng-zēb') See Aurangzeb.

AUS abbr. Army of the United States.

Aus. abbr. 1. a. Australia. b. Australian. 2. a. Austria. b. Austrian.

Ausch-witz (əush'vīts') See Oświęcim.

aus-cul-tate (ô'skəl-tāt') v. tr. aus-cul-tat-ed, aus-cul-tat-ing, aus-cul-tates. Medicine. To examine by auscultation. [Back-formation from AUSCULTATION.] —aus'cul-ta'tive adj. —aus-cul'ta-to'ry (ô-skŭl'tə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

aus-cul-ta-tion (ô'skəl-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of listening. 2. Medicine. The act of listening for sounds made by internal organs, as the heart and lungs, to aid in the diagnosis of certain disorders. [Latin auscultātiō, auscultātiōn-, from auscultātus, past participle of auscultāre, to listen to. See ous- in Appendix.]

aus-form (ô'sfôrm') v. tr. aus-formed, aus-form-ing, aus-forms. To subject (especially steel) to deformation, quenching, and tempering to improve its wear properties. [AUS(TENITIC) + (DE)FORM.]

aus-land-er (ou'slĕn'dær, -slăn'-) n. A foreigner. [German Ausländer, from Ausland, outland : aus, out (from Middle High German ūz, from Old High German); see ud- in Appendix + Land, land (from Middle High German lant, from Old High German); see lendh- in Appendix.]

aus-pex (ô'spĕks') n. pl. aus-pi-ces (ô'spī-sēz'). An augur of ancient Rome, especially one who interpreted omens derived from the observation of birds. [Latin. See AUPICE.]

aus-pi-cate (ô'spī-kāt') v. tr. aus-pi-cat-ed, aus-pi-cat-ing, aus-pi-cates. To begin or inaugurate with a ceremony intended to bring good luck. [Latin auspicārī, auspicāt-, from auspex, auspic-, bird augur. See AUPICE.]

aus·pice (ô'spīs) n. pl. aus·pi·ces (ô'spī-sīz, -sēz'). 1. Also auspices. Protection or support; patronage. 2. A sign indicative of future prospects; an omen: Auspices for the venture seemed favorable. 3. Observation of and divination from the actions of birds. [Latin auspicium, bird divination, auspices, from auspex, auspic-, bird augur. See awi- in Appendix.]

aus·pi·ces¹ (ô'spī-sēz') n. Plural of auspex.

aus·pi·ces² (ô'spī-sīz, -sēz') n. Plural of auspice.

aus·pi·cious (ô-spīsh'əs) adj. 1. Attended by favorable circumstances; propitious: an auspicious time to ask for a raise in salary. See Synonyms at favorable. 2. Marked by success; prosperous. —aus·pi'cious·ly adv. —aus·pi'cious·ness n.

Aus·sie (ô'sē, ô'zē) n. Informal. A native or inhabitant of Australia. [From AUS(TRALIAN).] —Aus'sie adj.

Aust. abbr. 1. a. Australia. b. Australian. 2. a. Austria. b. Austrian.

Aus·ten (ô'stən), Jane. 1775-1817. British writer who is noted for her penetrating observation of middle-class manners and morality and her irony, wit, and meticulous style. Her novels include Pride and Prejudice (1813) and Emma (1816).

aus·ten·ite (ô'stə-nīt') n. A nonmagnetic solid solution of ferric carbide or carbon in iron, used in making corrosion-resistant steel. [After Sir William Chandler Roberts-Austen (1843-1902), British metallurgist.] —aus'ten·it'ic (-īt'ik) adj.

aus·tere (ô-stîr') adj. aus·ter·er, aus·ter·est. 1. Severe or stern in disposition or appearance; somber and grave: the austere figure of a Puritan minister.

2. Strict or severe in discipline; ascetic: a desert nomad's austere life. 3. Having no adornment or ornamentation; bare: an austere style. See Synonyms at severe. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin austērus, from Greek austēros.] —aus·tere'ly adv. —aus·tere'ness n.

aus·ter·i·ty (ô-stēr'ī-tē) n. pl. aus·ter·i·ties. 1. The quality of being austere.

2. Severe and rigid economy: wartime austerity. 3. An austere habit or practice.

Aus·ter·litz (ô'stər-līts', ous'tər-) A town of southeast Czech Republic.

Nearby, on December 2, 1805, Napoleon decisively defeated the Russian and Austrian armies of Czar Alexander I and Emperor Francis II.

Aus·tin¹ (ô'stən) See Saint. Augustine².

Aus·tin² (ô'stən, ős'tən) 1. A city of southeast Minnesota near the Iowa border southwest of Rochester. It is a processing and manufacturing center. Population, 21,907. 2. The capital of Texas, in the south-central part of the state. Austin was selected as the capital of the Republic of Texas in 1839 and became the permanent capital of the state of Texas in 1870. The main campus of the University of Texas (established 1881) is here. Population, 465,622.

Aus·tin (ô'stən), Alfred. 1835-1913. British writer who became poet laureate in 1896 and wrote several volumes of poetry, including The Season (1861).

Aus·tin (ô'stən), John. 1790-1859. British legal theorist who maintained that law is a form of command determined by power relationships and is therefore distinct from moral principles.

Aus·tin (ô'stən), Mary Hunter. 1868-1934. American writer known for her literary interest in the peoples and cultures of the Mojave Desert and for her ardent support of women's rights.

Aus·tin (ô'stən), Stephen Fuller. 1793-1836. American colonizer and political leader who worked to make Texas a state of Mexico but later helped Texas settlers gain their independence (1836).

Aus·tin·town (ô'stən-toun') A community of northeast Ohio, a suburb of Youngstown. Population, 32,371.

Austl. abbr. Australia; Australian.

aus·tral¹ (ô'strəl) adj. Of, relating to, or coming from the south. [Latin austrālis, from auster, austr-, south.]

aus·tral² (ous-träl') n. pl. aus·tral·es (-trä'lēs). A former unit of currency in Argentina. [American Spanish, from Spanish, from the south, from Latin austrālis. See AUSTRAL¹.]

Aus·tral·a·sia (ô'strə-lā'zhə, -shə) 1. The islands of the southern Pacific Ocean, including Australia, New Zealand, and New Guinea. 2. Broadly, all of Oceania. — Aus'tral·a'sian adj. & n.

Aus·tra·lia (ô-strāl'yə) Abbr. Aus., Aust., Austl. 1. The world's smallest continent, southeast of Asia between the Pacific and Indian oceans. 2. A commonwealth comprising the continent of Australia, the island state of Tasmania, two external territories, and several dependencies. The first British settlement, a penal colony at Fort Jackson (now part of Sydney), was established in 1788. The present-day states grew as separate colonies; six of them formed a federation in 1901. In 1911 Northern Territory joined the commonwealth and the Capital Territory, site of Canberra, was created. Canberra is the capital and Sydney is the largest city. Population, 15,544,500.

Aus·tra·lian (ô-strāl'yən) adj. Abbr. Aus., Aust., Austl. 1. Of or relating to Australia or its peoples, languages, or cultures. 2. Ecology. Of, relating to, or being the zoogeographic region that includes Australia and the islands adjacent to it, including New Guinea, New Zealand, Polynesia, and Tasmania. — n. Abbr. Aus., Aust., Austl. 1. A native or inhabitant of Australia. 2. A member of any of the aboriginal peoples of Australia. 3. Any of the languages of the aboriginal peoples of Australia.

Australian Alps (ô-strāl'yən əlps) A chain of mountain ranges of southeast Australia in the southern part of the Great Dividing Range. Mount Kosciusko, rising to 2,231.4 m (7,316 ft), is the highest elevation and the tallest peak in Australia.

Australian Ant-arctic Territory (ô-strāl'yən änt-ärk'tik tēr'i-tôr'ē, -är'tik) A large section of Antarctica claimed by Australia since 1931. It extends from longitude 45° east to longitude 160° east not including Adélie Coast. The claim is disputed by the United States.

Australian ballot (ô-strāl'yən bäl'ət) n. A printed ballot that bears the names of all candidates and the texts of propositions and is distributed to the voter at the polls and marked in secret. Also called secret ballot

Australian crawl (ô-strāl'yən krôl) n. Sports. A crawl stroke in swimming that is executed with a flutter kick to each arm stroke.

Australian pine (ô-strāl'yən pīn) n. See beefwood.

Australian terrier (ô-strāl'yən tēr'ē-ər) n. A small dog of a breed originally bred in Australia, having a coarse, blackish coat with tan markings.

Aus-tra-loid (ô'strə-loid') adj. Anthropology. Of, relating to, or being a human racial classification traditionally distinguished by physical characteristics such as dark skin and dark curly hair, and including the aboriginal peoples of Australia along with various peoples of southeast Asia, especially Melanesia and the Malay Archipelago. No longer in scientific use. [AUSTRAL(IAN) + -OID.]

—Aus'tra-loid' n.

aus-tra-lo-pith-e-cine (ô-strā'lō-pīth'ī-sīn', -sēn') n. Any of several extinct humanlike primates of the genus Australopithecus, known chiefly from Pleistocene fossil remains found in southern and eastern Africa. — adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of these extinct humanlike primates. [From New Latin Australopithecus: Latin austrālis, southern; see AUSTRAL¹ + pithēcus, ape (from Greek pithēkos).]

Aus-tra-sia (ô-strā'zhə, -shə) The eastern portion of the kingdom of the Franks from the sixth to the eighth century, including parts of eastern France, western Germany, and the Netherlands. It eventually became part of the Carolingian empire. —Aus'tra'sian adj. & n.

Aus-tri-a (ô'strē-ə) Abbr. Aus., Aust. A landlocked country of central Europe. A Roman and Carolingian territory, it was later a powerful empire ruled by the Hapsburgs. The empire was broken up in 1918, and the republic of Austria was annexed by Adolf Hitler in 1938. Full sovereignty was restored in 1955. Vienna is the capital and the largest city. Population, 7,555,338. —Aus'tri-an adj. & n.

Aus-tri-a-Hun-ga-ry (ô'strē-ə-hüŋ'gə-rē) A former dual monarchy of central Europe consisting of Austria, Hungary, Bohemia, Slovenia, Croatia, and parts of Poland, Romania, Dalmatia, and Italy. It was formed in 1867 after agitation by Hungarian nationalists within the Austrian empire and lasted until 1918.

—Aus'tro-Hun-gar'i-an (ô'strō-hüŋ-gâr'ē-ən) adj. & n.

Austro-¹ pref. Southern: Austro-Asiatic. [From Latin auster, austr-, south. See aus- in Appendix.]

Austro-² pref. Austria; Austrian: Austro-Hungarian.

Aus-tro-A-si-at-ic (ô'strō-ā'zhē-ăt'ĭk, -shē-, -zē-) n. A family of languages of southeast Asia once dominant in northeast India and Indochina, including Mon-Khmer and Munda. —Aus'tro-A'si-at'ic adj.

Aus-tro-ne-sia (ô'strō-nē'zhə, -shə) The islands of the Pacific Ocean, including Indonesia, Melanesia, Micronesia, and Polynesia.

Aus-tro-ne-sian (ô'strō-nē'zhən, -shən) adj. Of or relating to Austronesia or its peoples, languages, or cultures. — n. A family of languages that includes the Formosan, Indonesian, Malay, Melanesian, Micronesian, and Polynesian subfamilies.

aut- pref. Variant of auto-.

au-ta-coid also au-to-coid (ô'tə-koid') n. An organic substance, such as a hormone, produced in one part of an organism and transported by the blood, lymph, or sap to another part of the organism where it exerts a physiologic effect on that part. [AUT(O)- + Greek akos, cure + -OID.] —au'ta-coid'al (-koid'l) adj.

au-tarch (ô'tärk) n. An absolute ruler; a despot. [Greek autarkhos, self-governing, autarch. See AUTARCHY¹.]

au-tar-chy¹ (ô'tär'kē) n. pl. au-tar-chies. 1. Absolute rule or power; autocracy. 2. A country under such rule. [From Greek autarkhos, self-governing, autarch : aut-, auto-, auto- + arkhos, ruler (from arkhein, to rule).]

—au-tar'chic, au-tar'chi-cal adj.

au-tar-chy² (ô'tär'kē) n. Variant of autarky.

au-tar-ky or au-tar-chy (ô'tär'kē) n. pl. au-tar-kies or au-tar-chies. 1. A policy of national self-sufficiency and nonreliance on imports or economic aid.

2. A self-sufficient region or country. [Greek autarkeia, self-sufficiency, from autarkēs, self-sufficient : aut-, auto-, auto- + arkein, to suffice.] —au-tar'kic, au-tar'ki-cal adj.

au-te-col-o-gy (ô'tĭ-köl'ə-jē) n. The branch of ecology that deals with the biological relationship between an individual organism or an individual species and its environment. —au'te-co-log'i-cal (-kə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl) adj.

Au-teuil (ō-toi', ō-tœ'yə) A former town between the Seine River and the Bois de Boulogne, now part of Paris. It was a favorite gathering place for French literary figures, including Molière and La Fontaine.

au-teur (ō-tûr', ō-toer') n. A filmmaker, usually a director, who exercises creative control over his or her works and has a strong personal style. [French, from Old French autor, author. See AUTHOR.]

au-teur-ism (ō-tûr'iz'əm) n. Belief in the primary creative importance of the director in filmmaking, often combined with a critical advocacy of the works of certain strong, distinctive directors. Also called auteur theory —au-teur'ist adj. & n.

auth. abbr. 1. Authentic. 2. Author. 3. Authority. 4. Authorized.

au·then·tic (ô-thĕn'tĭk) adj. Abbr. auth. 1. Conforming to fact and therefore worthy of trust, reliance, or belief: an authentic account by an eyewitness. 2. Having a claimed and verifiable origin or authorship; not counterfeit or copied: an authentic medieval sword. 3. Law. Executed with due process: an authentic deed. 4. Music. a. Of, relating to, or being a medieval mode having a range from its final tone to the octave above it. b. Of, relating to, or being a cadence with the dominant chord immediately preceding the tonic chord. 5. Obsolete. Authoritative. [Middle English autentik, from Old French authentique, from Late Latin authenticus, from Greek authentikos, from authentēs, author.]
—au·then'ti·cal·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: authentic, bona fide, genuine, real, true, undoubted, unquestionable. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “not counterfeit or copied”: an authentic painting by Corot; a bona fide transfer of property; genuine crabmeat; a real diamond; true courage; undoubted evidence; an unquestionable antique.

ANTONYM: counterfeit

au·then·ti·cate (ô-thĕn'tĭ-kāt') v. tr. au·then·ti·cat·ed, au·then·ti·cat·ing, au·then·ti·cates. To establish the authenticity of; prove genuine: a specialist who authenticated the antique samovar. See Synonyms at confirm.

—au·then'ti·ca'tion n. —au·then'ti·ca'tor n.

au·then·tic·i·ty (ô'thĕn-tĭs'ĭ-tē) n. The quality or condition of being authentic, trustworthy, or genuine.

au·thor (ô'thər) n. 1. Abbr. auth., au a. The original writer of a literary work. b. One who practices writing as a profession. 2. An originator or creator: the author of a new theory. 3. Author. God. — v. tr. au·thored, au·thor·ing, au·thors. Usage Problem. To assume responsibility for the content of (a published or an unpublished text). [Middle English auctour, from Old French autor, from Latin auctor, creator, from auctus, past participle of augēre, to create. See aug- in Appendix.] —au·thor'i·al (ô-thôr'ē-əl, ô-thŏr'-) adj.

USAGE NOTE: The verb author, which had been out of use for a long period, has been rejuvenated in recent years with the sense “to assume responsibility for the content of a published text.” As such it is not quite synonymous with the verb write; one can write, but not author, a love letter or an unpublished manuscript, and the writer who ghostwrites a book for a celebrity cannot be said to have “authored” the creation. The sentence He has authored a dozen books on the subject was unacceptable to 74 percent of the Usage Panel, probably because it implies that the fact of having a book published is worthy of special lexical distinction, a notion that sits poorly with conventional literary sensibilities, and which seems to smack of press agency. The sentence The Senator authored a bill limiting uses of desert lands in California was similarly rejected by 64 percent of the Panel, though here the usage is common journalistic practice, and is perhaps justified by the observation that we do not expect that legislators will actually write the bills to which they attach their names. • The verb coauthor is well established in reference to scientific and scholarly publications, where it serves a useful purpose, since the people listed as authors of such works routinely include research collaborators who have played no part in the actual writing of the text, but who are nonetheless entitled to credit for the published results.

au·thor·i·tar·i·an (ə-thôr'î-târ'ē-ən, ə-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-) adj.

1. Characterized by or favoring absolute obedience to authority, as against individual freedom: an authoritarian regime. 2. Of, relating to, or expecting unquestioning obedience. See Synonyms at dictatorial. —au·thor'·i·tar'·i·an n.

—au·thor'·i·tar'·i·an·ism n.

au·thor·i·ta·tive (ə-thôr'î-tā'tiv, ə-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-) adj. 1. Having or arising from authority; official: an authoritative decree; authoritative sources.

2. Of acknowledged accuracy or excellence; highly reliable: an authoritative account of the revolution. 3. Wielding authority; commanding: the captain's authoritative manner. —au·thor'·i·ta'tive·ly adv. —au·thor'·i·ta'tive·ness n.

au·thor·i·ty (ə-thôr'î-tē, ə-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-, ô-thôr'-) n. pl. au·thor·i·ties.

Abbr. auth. 1. a. The power to enforce laws, exact obedience, command, determine, or judge. b. One that is invested with this power, especially a government or government officials: land titles issued by the civil authority. 2. Power assigned to another; authorization: Deputies were given authority to make arrests. 3. A public agency or corporation with administrative powers in a specified field: a city transit authority. 4. a. An accepted source of expert information or advice: a noted authority on birds; a reference book often cited as an authority. b. A quotation or citation from such a source: biblical authorities for a moral argument. 5. Justification; grounds: On what authority do you make such a claim? 6. A conclusive statement or decision that may be taken as a guide or precedent. 7. Power to influence or persuade resulting from knowledge or experience: political observers who acquire authority with age. 8. Confidence derived from experience or practice; firm self-assurance: played the sonata with authority. [Middle English auctorite, from Old French autorite, from Latin auctōritās, auctōritāt-, from auctor, creator. See AUTHOR.]

au·thor·i·za·tion (ô'thər-î-zā'shən) n. 1. The act of authorizing.

2. Something that authorizes; sanction. See Synonyms at permission.

au·thor·ize (ô'thə-rīz') v. tr. au·thor·ized, au·thor·iz·ing, au·thor·iz·es.

1. To grant authority or power to. 2. To give permission for; sanction: the city agency that authorizes construction projects. 3. To be sufficient grounds for; justify. [Middle English auctorisen, from Old French autoriser, from Medieval Latin auctōrizāre, from Latin auctor, author. See AUTHOR.] —au'thor·iz'er n.

SYNONYMS: authorize, accredit, commission, empower, license. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to give someone the authority to act”: authorized her partner to negotiate in her behalf; a representative who was accredited by his government; commissioned the real-estate agent to purchase the house for us; was empowered to make decisions during the president's absence; a pharmacist licensed to practice in two states.

Au·thor·ized Version (ô'thə-rīzd' vûr'zhən) n. Abbr. AV, A.V. Bible. See King James Bible.

au·thor·ship (ô'thər-shīp') n. 1. The act, fact, or occupation of writing.

2. Source or origin, as of a book or idea: a poem of disputed authorship.

au·tism (ô'tīz'əm) n. 1. Abnormal introversion and egocentricity; acceptance of fantasy rather than reality. 2. Psychology. Infantile autism. —au'tist n.

—au-tis'tic (-tīk) adj., n. —au-tis'ti-cal·ly adv.

au·to (ô'tō) n. pl. au·tos. An automobile. — v. intr. au·toed, au·to·ing, au·tos. To go by or ride in an automobile. [Short for AUTOMOBILE.]

auto. abbr. 1. Automatic. 2. Automotive.

auto- or aut- pref. 1. Self; same: autogamy. 2. Automatic: autopilot. [Greek, from autos, self.]

au·to·an·ti·bod·y (ô'tō-ăn'tī-bōd'ē) n. An antibody that attacks the cells and tissues of the organism in which it is formed.

au·to·bahn (ô'tə-bän', ou'tō-) n. An expressway in Germany and German-speaking countries. [German Auto, automobile; see AUTO + Bahn, road from Middle High German ban. See g^when- in Appendix.]

au·to·bi·og·ra·phy (ô'tō-bī-ōg'rə-fē, -bē-) n. pl. au·to·bi·og·ra·phies. The biography of a person written by that person. —au'to·bi·og'ra·pher n.

—au'to·bi'o·graph'ic (-bī'ə-grăf'ik), au'to·bi'o·graph'i·cal adj.

—au'to·bi'o·graph'i·cal·ly adv.

au·to·bus (ô'tō-büs') n. pl. au·to·bus·es or au·to·bus·ses. A motor coach; a bus.

au·to·ca·tal·y·sis (ô'tō-kə-tăl'ī-sis) n. pl. au·to·ca·tal·y·ses (-sēz'). Catalysis of a chemical reaction by one of the products of the reaction.

—au'to·cat'a·lyt'ic (-kăt'l-īt'ik) adj. —au'to·cat'a·lyt'i·cal·ly adv.

au·toch·thon (ô-tōk'thən) n. pl. au·toch·thons or au·toch·tho·nes (-thə-nēz'). 1. One of the earliest known inhabitants of a place; an aborigine.

2. Ecology. An indigenous plant or animal. [Greek autokhthōn : auto-, auto- + khthōn, earth; see dhghem- in Appendix.]

au·toch·tho·nous (ô-tôk'thə-nəs) also au·toch·tho·nal (-thə-nəl) or au·toch·thon·ic (ô'tôk-thŏn'ik) adj. 1. Originating where found; indigenous: autochthonous rocks; an autochthonous people; autochthonous folktales. See Synonyms at native. 2. Biology. Originating or formed in the place where found: an autochthonous blood clot. —au·toch'thon·ism, au·toch'tho·ny n.
—au·toch'tho·nous·ly adv.

au·to·clave (ô'tō-klāv') n. A strong, pressurized, steam-heated vessel, as for laboratory experiments, sterilization, or cooking. [French : Greek auto-, auto- + Latin clāvis, key.]

au·to·coid (ô'tə-koid') n. Variant of autacoid.

au·toc·ra·cy (ô-tôk'rə-sē) n. pl. au·toc·ra·cies. 1. Government by a single person having unlimited power; despotism. 2. A country or state that is governed by a single person with unlimited power.

au·to·crat (ô'tə-krăt') n. 1. A ruler having unlimited power; a despot. 2. A person with unlimited power or authority: a corporate autocrat. [French autocrate, from Greek autokratēs, ruling by oneself : auto-, auto- + -kratēs, -crat.] —au'to·crat'ic, au'to·crat'i·cal adj. —au'to·crat'i·cal·ly adv.

au·to·cross (ô'tō-krôs', -krŏs') n. Sports. A competition for automobiles that tests driving skill and speed. [AUTO(MOBILE) + (MOTO)CROSS.]

au·to·da·fé (ô'tō-də-fā', ou'tō-) n. pl. au·tos·da·fé (ô'tôz-, ou'tôz-).

- 1. Public announcement of the sentences imposed on persons tried by the Inquisition and the public execution of those sentences by the secular authorities.
- 2. The burning of a heretic at the stake. [Portuguese auto da fé : auto, act + da, of the + fé, faith.]

au·to·de·struct (ô'tō-dī-strŭkt') v. intr. au·to·de·struct·ed, au·to·de·struct·ing, au·to·de·structs. To destroy itself or oneself; self-destruct. [AUTO- + (SELF-)DESTRUCT.]

au·to·di·dact (ô'tō-dī'dăkt') n. A self-taught person. [From Greek autodidaktos, self-taught : auto-, auto- + didaktos, taught; see DIDACTIC.] —au'to·di·dac'tic adj.

au·to·dyne (ô'tə-dīn') n. A heterodyne radio device in which one tube serves simultaneously as oscillator and detector. [AUTO- + (HETERO)DYNE.] —au'to·dyne' adj.

au·toe·cious (ô-tē'shəs) adj. Biology. Having all stages of a life cycle occurring on the same host. [From AUTO- + Greek oikos, house; see weik-¹ in Appendix.] —au·toe'cism (-siz'əm) n.

au·to·er·o·tism (ô'tō-ēr'ə-tiz'əm) or au·to·e·rot·i·cism (-ī-rŏt'ī-siz'əm) n. 1. Self-satisfaction of sexual desire, as by masturbation. 2. The arousal of sexual feeling without an external stimulus. —au'to·e·rot'ic (-ī-rŏt'ik) adj.

au·tog·a·my (ô-tôg'ə-mē) n. 1. Botany. Self-fertilization in plants. 2. Biology.

The union of nuclei within and arising from a single cell, as in certain protozoans and fungi. —au'to·gam'ic (ô'tô-gām'ik), au·tog'a·mous adj.

au·to·gen·e·sis (ô'tô-jěn'ī-sīs) also au·tog·e·ny (ô-tôj'ə-nē) n. See abio·genesis. —au'to·ge·ne'tic (-jə-nēt'ik) adj. —au'to·ge·net'i·cal·ly adv.

au·tog·e·nous (ô-tôj'ə-nəs) also au·to·gen·ic (ô'tə-jěn'ik) adj. 1. Produced from within; self-generating. 2. Medicine. Originating with the individual to which applied: an autogenous graft; an autogenous vaccine. —au·tog'e·nous·ly adv.

au·tog·e·ny (ô-tôj'ə-nē) n. Variant of autogenesis.

au·to·gi·ro also au·to·gy·ro (ô'tô-jī'rô) n. pl. au·to·gi·ros. An aircraft powered by a conventional propeller and supported in flight by a freewheeling, horizontal rotor that provides lift. [A former trademark.]

au·to·graph (ô'tə-grăf') n. 1. A person's own signature or handwriting. 2. A manuscript in the author's handwriting. — v. tr. au·to·graphed, au·to·graph·ing, au·to·graphs. 1. To write one's name or signature on or in; sign. 2. To write in one's own handwriting. — adj. Written in the writer's own handwriting: an autograph letter. [Late Latin autographum, from neuter of Latin autographus, written with one's own hand, from Greek autographos: auto-, auto- + graphein, to write; see -GRAPH.] —au'to·graph'ic, au'to·graph'i·cal adj.

—au'to·graph'i·cal·ly adv.

au·tog·ra·phy (ô-tôg'rə-fē) n. 1. The writing of something in one's own handwriting. 2. Autographs considered as a group.

au·to·gy·ro (ô'tô-jī'rô) n. Variant of autogiro.

Au·to·harp (ô'tô-hărp') A trademark used for a musical instrument similar to a zither.

au·to·hyp·no·sis (ô'tô-hīp-nō'sīs) n. 1. The act or process of hypnotizing oneself. 2. A self-induced hypnotic state. Also called self-hypnosis —au'to·hyp·not'ic (-nōt'ik) adj.

au·to·im·mune (ô'tô-ī-myōōn') adj. Of or relating to an immune response by the body against one of its own tissues or types of cells.

—au'to·im·mu'ni·ty n. —au'to·im'mu·ni·za'tion (-īm'yə-nə-zā'shən) n.

au·to·in·fec·tion (ô'tô-īn-fĕk'shən) n. Infection, such as recurrent boils, caused by bacteria, viruses, or parasites that persist on or in the body.

au·to·in·oc·u·la·tion (ô'tô-ī-nōk'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. Inoculation with a vaccine made from microorganisms obtained from the recipient's own body. 2. An infection caused by a disease that has spread from a different part of the body.

—au'to·in·oc'u·la·ble adj.

au·to·in·tox·i·ca·tion (ô'tô-īn-tōk'sī-kā'shən) n. Self-poisoning caused by endogenous microorganisms, metabolic wastes, or other toxins produced within the body. Also called autotoxemia au·to·load·ing (ô'tō-lō'dĩng) adj. Semiautomatic.

au·tol·o·gous (ô-tōl'ə-gəs) adj. Derived or transferred from the same individual's body: autologous blood donation. [AUTO- + -logous as in HOMOLOGOUS.]

au·tol·y·sate (ô-tōl'ī-sāt', -zāt') n. Biochemistry. An end product of autolysis.

au·tol·y·sin (ô-tōl'ī-sĩn, ô'tə-lī'sĩn) n. Biochemistry. A substance, such as an enzyme, that is capable of destroying the cells or tissues of an organism within which it is produced.

au·tol·y·sis (ô-tōl'ī-sĩs) n. Biochemistry. The destruction of tissues or cells of an organism by the action of substances, such as enzymes, that are produced within the organism. Also called self-digestion — au'to·lyt'ic (ô'tə-līt'ik) adj.

au·to·mak·er (ô'tō-mā'kər) n. A manufacturer of automotive vehicles; a car-maker.

Au·to·mat (ô'tə-măt') A trademark used for automated restaurant services in which food is dispensed from vending machines.

au·tom·a·ta (ô-tōm'ə-tə) n. A plural of automaton.

au·to·mate (ô'tə-măt') v. au·to·mat·ed, au·to·mat·ing, au·to·mates. — v. tr. 1. To convert to automatic operation: automate a factory. 2. To control or operate by automation. — v. intr. To convert to or make use of automation. [Back-formation from AUTOMATION.]

au·to·mat·ed teller machine (ô'tə-mā'tid tēl'ər mə-shēn') n. Abbr. ATM An unattended electronic machine in a public place, connected to a data system and related equipment and activated by a bank customer to obtain cash withdrawals and other banking services. Also called automated bank teller, automated teller, automatic teller, automatic teller machine, cash machine.

au·to·mat·ic (ô'tə-măt'ik) adj. Abbr. auto. 1. a. Acting or operating in a manner essentially independent of external influence or control: an automatic light switch; a budget deficit that caused automatic spending cuts. b. Self-regulating: an automatic washing machine. 2. a. Acting or done without volition or conscious control; involuntary: automatic shrinking of the pupils of the eyes in strong light. See Synonyms at spontaneous. b. Acting or done as if by machine; mechanical: an automatic reply to a familiar question. 3. a. Capable of firing continuously until ammunition is exhausted or the trigger is released: an automatic rifle. b. Semiautomatic: an automatic pistol. — n. 1. An automatic machine or device. 2. a. An automatic firearm. b. A semiautomatic firearm. 3. A transmission or a motor vehicle with an automatic gear-shifting mechanism. 4. Football. See audible. [From Greek automatos: auto-, auto- + -matos, willing; see men-¹ in Appendix.] — au'to·mat'ic·al·ly adv. — au'to·ma·tic'ity (-mə-tīs'ī-tē) n.

WORD HISTORY: The words automatic pilot or automatic transmission bring to mind mechanical devices that operate with minimal human intervention. Yet the word automatic, which goes back to the Greek word automatos, “acting of one’s own will, self-acting, of itself,” made up of two parts, auto-, “self,” and -matos, “willing,” is first recorded in English in 1748 with reference to motions of the body, such as the peristaltic action of the intestines: “The Motions are called automatic from their Resemblance to the Motions of Automata, or Machines, whose Principle of Motion is within themselves.” Although the writer had machines in mind, automatic could be used of living things, a use we still have, although not the primary one. The association of automatic chiefly with machinery may represent one instance of many in which we have come to see the world in mechanical terms.

automatic pilot (ô'tə-măt'ĭk pī'lət) n. A navigation mechanism, as on an aircraft, that automatically maintains a preset course. Also called robot pilot automatic teller (ô'tə-măt'ĭk tĕl'ər) n. See automated teller machine.

automatic teller machine (ô'tə-măt'ĭk tĕl'ər mə-shĕn') n. Abbr. ATM See automated teller machine.

au-to-ma-tion (ô'tə-mā'shən) n. 1. The automatic operation or control of equipment, a process, or a system. 2. The techniques and equipment used to achieve automatic operation or control. 3. The condition of being automatically controlled or operated. [From AUTOMATIC.] —au'to-ma'tive adj.

au-tom-a-tism (ô-tŏm'ə-tĭz'əm) n. 1. a. The state or quality of being automatic. b. Automatic mechanical action. 2. Philosophy. The theory that the body is a machine whose functions are accompanied but not controlled by consciousness. 3. Physiology. a. The involuntary functioning of an organ or other body structure that is not under conscious control, such as the beating of the heart or the dilation of the pupil of the eye. b. The reflexive action of a body part.

4. Psychology. a. Suspension of consciousness in order to express subconscious ideas and feelings. b. Mechanical, seemingly aimless behavior characteristic of various mental disorders. [From Latin automaton, automaton. See AUTOMATON.]

—au-tom'a-tist n.

au-tom-a-ti-za-tion (ô-tŏm'ə-tĭ-zā'shən) n. Automation.

au-tom-a-tize (ô-tŏm'ə-tĭz') v. tr. au-tom-a-tized, au-tom-a-tiz-ing, au-tom-a-tizes. 1. To make automatic. 2. To turn into an automaton. [From AUTOMATIC.]

au-tom-a-ton (ô-tŏm'ə-tən, -tŏn') n. pl. au-tom-a-tons or au-tom-a-ta (-tə). 1. A self-operating machine or mechanism, especially a robot. 2. One that behaves or responds in a mechanical way. [Latin, self-operating machine, from Greek, from neuter of automatos, self-acting. See AUTOMATIC.] —au-tom'a-tous adj.

au-to-mo-bile (ô'tə-mō-bĕl', -mō'bĕl') n. A self-propelled passenger vehicle that usually has four wheels and an internal-combustion engine, used for land transport. Also called motorcar — adj. Of or relating to automobiles; automotive. [French : Greek auto-, auto- + French mobile, mobile (from Old French); see MOBILE.] —au'to-mo-bil'ist n.

au-to-mo-tive (ô'tə-mō'tiv) adj. Abbr. auto. 1. Moving by itself; self-propelling or self-propelled. 2. Of or relating to self-propelled vehicles.

au-to-nom-ic (ô'tə-nŏm'ik) adj. 1. Physiology. a. Of, relating to, or controlled by the autonomic nervous system. b. Occurring involuntarily; automatic: an autonomic reflex. 2. Resulting from internal stimuli; spontaneous.

—au'to-nom'i-cal-ly adv.

autonomic nervous system (ô'tə-nŏm'ik nûr'vəs sīs'təm) n. The part of the vertebrate nervous system that regulates involuntary action, as of the intestines, heart, and glands, and that is divided into the sympathetic nervous system and the parasympathetic nervous system.

au-ton-o-mous (ô-tŏn'ə-məs) adj. 1. Not controlled by others or by outside forces; independent: an autonomous judiciary; an autonomous division of a corporate conglomerate. 2. Independent in mind or judgment; self-directed.

3. a. Independent of the laws of another state or government; self-governing.

b. Of or relating to a self-governing entity: an autonomous legislature. c. Self-governing with respect to local or internal affairs: an autonomous region of a country.

4. Autonomic. [From Greek autonomos : auto-, auto- + nomos, law; see nem- in Appendix.] —au-ton'o-mous-ly adv.

au-ton-o-my (ô-tŏn'ə-mē) n. pl. au-ton-o-mies. 1. The condition or quality of being autonomous; independence. 2. a. Self-government or the right of self-government; self-determination. b. Self-government with respect to local or internal affairs: granted autonomy to a national minority. 3. A self-governing state, community, or group. [Greek autonomia, from autonomos, self-ruling. See AUTONOMOUS.] —au-ton'o-mist n.

au-to-pen (ô'tō-pĕn') n. A mechanical device used for writing imitations of a personal signature.

au-toph-a-gy (ô-tŏf'ə-jē) n. The process of self-digestion by a cell through the action of enzymes originating within the same cell.

au-to-pil-er (ô'tō-pī'lər) n. Computer Science. A specific automatic compiler. [AUTO- + (COM)PILER.]

au-to-pi-lot (ô'tō-pī'lət) n. Automatic pilot.

au-to-plas-ty (ô'tō-plās'tē) n. Surgical repair or reconstruction of a body part using tissue taken from another part of the body. —au'to-plas'tic adj.

—au'to-plas'ti-cal-ly adv.

au-to-pol-y-ploid (ô'tō-pŏl'ə-ploid') adj. Having more than two sets of chromosomes all derived from the same species. — n. An organism having more than two sets of chromosomes, all of which were derived from the same species. —au'to-pol'y-ploid'y n.

au-top-sy (ô'töp'sē, ô'təp-) n. pl. au-top-sies. 1. Examination of a cadaver to determine or confirm the cause of death. Also called necropsy, postmortem, post-mortem examination. 2. A critical assessment or examination after the fact: a post-election campaign autopsy. [Greek autopsia, a seeing for oneself : auto-, auto- + opsis, sight; see ok^w- in Appendix.] —au-top'sic, au-top'si-cal adj. —au-top'sist n.

au-to-ra-di-o-gram (ô'tō-rā'dē-ō-grām') n. See autoradiograph.

au-to-ra-di-o-graph (ô'tō-rā'dē-ō-grāf') n. An image recorded on a photographic film or plate produced by the radiation emitted from a specimen, such as a section of tissue, that has been treated or injected with a radioactively labeled isotope or that has absorbed or ingested such an isotope. Also called autoradiogram —au'to-ra'di-o-graph'ic adj. —au'to-ra'di-og'ra-phy (-ög'rə-fē) n.

au-to-route (ô'tō-rōōt') n. An expressway in France and French-speaking countries. [French : auto, automobile; see AUTO + route, road (from Old French); see ROUTE.]

au-to-some (ô'tə-sōm') n. A chromosome that is not a sex chromosome.

—au'to-so'mal (-sō'məl) adj. —au'to-so'mal-ly adv.

au-to-strada (ô'tō-strā'də, ou'tō-) n. An expressway in Italy. [Italian : auto, automobile; see AUTO + strada, street (from Late Latin strāta, paved road); see STREET.]

au-to-sug-ges-tion (ô'tō-səg-jēs'chən) n. Psychology. The process by which a person induces self-acceptance of an opinion, belief, or plan of action.

—au'to-sug-gest' v. —au'to-sug-gest'i-bil'i-ty (-ə-bil'ī-tē) n.

—au'to-sug-gest'i-ble adj. —au'to-sug-ges'tive (-tīv) adj.

au-tot-o-mize (ô-töt'ə-mīz') v. au-tot-o-mized, au-tot-o-miz-ing, au-tot-o-miz-es. — v. tr. To cause the autotomy of. — v. intr. To undergo autotomy.

au-tot-o-my (ô-töt'ə-mē) n. The spontaneous casting off of a limb or other body part, such as the tail of certain lizards or the claw of a lobster, especially when the organism is injured or under attack. —au'to-tom'ic (ô'tə-tōm'ik) adj.

au-to-tox-e-mi-a also au-to-tox-ae-mi-a (ô'tō-tōk-sē'mē-ə) n. See auto-intoxication.

au-to-tox-in (ô'tō-tōk'sīn) n. A poison that acts on the organism in which it is generated. —au'to-tox'ic adj.

au-to-trans-form-er (ô'tō-trāns-fôr'mər) n. An electrical transformer in which the primary and secondary coils have some or all windings in common.

au-to-troph (ô'tə-trōf', -trōf') n. An organism capable of synthesizing its own food from inorganic substances, using light or chemical energy. Green plants, algae, and certain bacteria are autotrophs. —au'to-troph'ic (-trōf'ik, -trō'fik) adj. —au'to-troph'i-cal-ly adv. —au-tot'ro-phy (ô-töt'rə-fē) n.

au-to-work-er (ô'tō-wŭr'kær) n. A worker in the automobile industry.

au-tumn (ô'təm) n. 1. The season of the year between summer and winter, lasting from the autumnal equinox to the winter solstice and from September to December in the Northern Hemisphere; fall. 2. A period of maturity verging on decline. — adj. 1. Of, having to do with, occurring in, or appropriate to the season of autumn: autumn foliage; autumn harvests. 2. Grown during the season of autumn: autumn crops. [Middle English autumpne, from Old French autompne, from Latin autumnus.] —au-tum'nal (-tŭm'nəl) adj.

—au-tum'nal-ly adv.

autumnal equinox (ô'təm'nəl ē'kwə-nŏks') n. 1. The point at which the ecliptic intersects the celestial equator, the sun having a southerly motion. 2. The moment at which the sun passes through the autumnal equinox, about September 23, marking the beginning of autumn.

autumn crocus (ô'təm krŏ'kəs) n. A corm-producing European and North African plant (Colchicum autumnale) having showy colorful flowers that appear in the fall. Also called meadow saffron au-tun-ite (ō-tŭn'it', ô'tə-nīt) n. A yellowish, fluorescent minor ore of uranium with the composition $\text{Ca}(\text{UO}_2)_2(\text{PO}_4)_2 \cdot 10\text{-}12\text{H}_2\text{O}$. [After Autun, a city of east-central France.]

Au-vergne (ō-vŭrn', ō-vĕrn') A historical region and former province of central France traversed north to south by the Auvergne Mountains, a chain of extinct volcanoes. Auvergne became part of the French royal domain in 1615.

aux. abbr. 1. Auxiliary. 2. Grammar. Auxiliary verb.

aux-e-sis (ôg-zĕ'sis, ôk-sĕ'-) n. Growth resulting from increase in cell size without cell division. [Greek auxēsis, growth, from auxanein, auxē-, to grow. See aug- in Appendix.] —aux-et'ic (ôg-zĕt'ik) adj. —aux-et'i-cal-ly adv.

aux-il-ia-ry (ôg-zĭl'yə-rĕ, -zĭl'ə-rĕ) adj. Abbr. aux., auxil. 1. Giving assistance or support; helping. 2. Acting as a subsidiary; supplementary: the main library and its auxiliary branches. 3. Held in or used as a reserve: auxiliary troops; an auxiliary power generator. 4. Nautical. Equipped with a motor as well as sails.

5. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being an auxiliary verb. — n. pl. aux-il-ia-ries.

Abbr. aux., auxil. 1. An individual or a group that assists or functions in a supporting capacity: a volunteers' auxiliary at a hospital. 2. A member of a foreign body of troops serving a country in war. 3. Grammar. An auxiliary verb.

4. Nautical. a. A sailing vessel equipped with a motor. b. A vessel, such as a supply ship or a tug, that is designed for and used in instances and services other than combat. [Middle English, from Latin auxiliārius, from auxilium, help. See aug- in Appendix.]

auxiliary verb (ôg-zĭl'yə-rĕ vŭrb) n. Abbr. aux. v., aux. Grammar. A verb, such as have, can, or will, that accompanies the main verb in a clause and helps to make distinctions in mood, voice, aspect, and tense.

aux·in (ôk'sîn) n. Any of several plant hormones that regulate various functions, including cell elongation. [From Greek auxein, to grow. See aug- in Appendix.] —aux·in'ic adj. —aux·in'i·cal·ly adv.

aux·o·troph (ôk'sə-trōf, -trōf') n. An organism, such as a strain of bacteria, that has lost the ability to synthesize certain substances required for its growth and metabolism as the result of mutational changes. [Back-formation from AUXOTROPHIC.]

aux·o·troph·ic (ôk'sə-trōf'ik, -trō'fik) adj. Requiring one or more specific substances for growth and metabolism that the parental organism was able to synthesize on its own. Used with respect to organisms, such as strains of bacteria, algae, or fungi, that can no longer synthesize certain growth factors because of mutational changes. [Greek auxein, to increase; see AUXIN + -TROPHIC.]

aux. v. abbr. Grammar. Auxiliary verb.

Av (äv, ôv) also Ab (äb, äv, ôv) n. The 11th month of the year in the Jewish calendar. See Table at calendar. [Hebrew 'āb, from Canaanite 'ab.]

AV or A.V. abbr. 1. Audio-visual. 2. Bible. Authorized Version.

av. abbr. 1. Also Av. Avenue. 2. Average. 3. Avoirdupois.

a.v. or a/v abbr. Ad valorem.

a·vail (ə-vāl') v. a·vailed, a·vail·ing, a·vails. — v. tr. To be of use or advantage to; help: Nothing could avail the dying patient. — v. intr. To be of use, value, or advantage; serve: Halfway measures will no longer avail. — n. Use, benefit, or advantage: labored to no avail. —idiom. avail (oneself) of. To make use of. [Middle English availen: a-, intensive pref. (from Latin ad-); see AD- + Old French valoir, vail-, to be worth (from Latin valēre); see wal- in Appendix.] —a·vail'ing·ly adv.

a·vail·a·ble (ə-vā'lə-bəl) adj. 1. Present and ready for use; at hand; accessible: kept a fire extinguisher available at all times. 2. Capable of being gotten; obtainable: a bedspread available in three colors. 3. Qualified and willing to serve: a list of available candidates. 4. Archaic. a. Capable of bringing about a beneficial result or effect. b. Law. Valid. Used especially of a plea. —a·vail'a·bil'i·ty, a·vail'a·ble·ness n. —a·vail'a·bly adv.

av·a·lanche (äv'ə-lānch') n. 1. A fall or slide of a large mass, as of snow or rock, down a mountainside. 2. A massive or overwhelming amount; a flood: received an avalanche of mail. — v. av·a·lanched, av·a·lanch·ing, av·a·lanch·es. — v. intr. To fall or slide in a massive or overwhelming amount. — v. tr. To overwhelm; inundate. [French; akin to Provençal lavanca, ravine perhaps akin to Latin lābī, to slip.]

avalanche lily (äv'ə-lānch' līl'ē) n. A western North American corm-producing plant (Erythronium grandiflorum) in the lily family, having white or golden-yellow flowers with red anthers. [So called because it grows near the snow line and blooms when the snow begins to melt.]

Av-a-lon (äv'ə-lön') n. In Arthurian legend, an island paradise in the western seas to which King Arthur went at his death.

Avalon Peninsula (äv'ə-lön' pə-nīn'syə-lə) A large, irregularly shaped peninsula of southeast Newfoundland, Canada. Most of the province's population resides here.

a-vant-garde (ä'vānt-gärd', äv'änt-) n. A group active in the invention and application of new techniques in a given field, especially in the arts. — adj. Of, relating to, or being part of an innovative group, especially one in the arts: avant-garde painters; an avant-garde theater piece. [French, from Old French, vanguard. See VANGUARD.] — a'vant-gard'ism n. — a'vant-gard'ist n.

av-a-ri-ce (äv'ə-rīs) n. Immoderate desire for wealth; cupidity. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin avaritia, from avarus, greedy, from avēre, to desire.]

av-a-ri-cious (äv'ə-rīsh'əs) adj. Immoderately desirous of wealth or gain; greedy. — av'a-ri'cious-ly adv. — av'a-ri'cious-ness n.

a-vas-cu-lar (ā-väs'kyə-lər) adj. Not associated with or supplied by blood vessels. — a-vas'cu-lar'i-ty (-lär'ī-tē) n.

a-vast (ə-väst') interj. Nautical. Used as a command to stop or desist. [From Middle Dutch hou vast, hold fast : hou, houd, imperative of houden, to hold + vast, fast; see past- in Appendix.]

av-a-tar (äv'ə-tär') n. 1. The incarnation of a Hindu deity, especially Vishnu, in human or animal form. 2. An embodiment, as of a quality or concept; an archetype: the very avatar of cunning. 3. A temporary manifestation or aspect of a continuing entity: occultism in its present avatar. [Sanskrit avatārah : ava, down + tarati, he crosses; see terə-² in Appendix.]

a-vaunt (ə-vōnt', ə-vānt') adv. Hence; away. [Middle English, forward, from Old French avant, from Latin abante : ab-, from; see AB-¹ + ante, before; see ANTE-.]

AVC abbr. 1. American Veterans Committee. 2. Automatic volume control.

avdp. abbr. Avoirdupois.

a-ve (ä'vā) n. 1. An expression of greeting or farewell. 2. Ave. Roman Catholic Church. Hail Mary. [Middle English, from Latin.]

ave. or Ave. or AVE abbr. Avenue.

Av-e-don (äv'ī-dön'), Richard. Born 1923. American photographer noted for his imaginative, lively fashion photography and stark portraits.

A-vel-la-ne-da (ä-věl'yä-ně'dä, ä-vě'yä-, ä-vě'zhä-ně'thā) A city of eastern Argentina near Buenos Aires. It is an important commercial and industrial center. Population, 330,654.

A-vel-li-no (ä'věl-lē'nô) A city of southern Italy east-northeast of Naples. Although damaged by an earthquake in 1930, the old city retains much of its medieval aspect. Population, 56,120.

A·ve Ma·ri·a (ä'vā mə-rē'ə) n. Roman Catholic Church. Hail Mary. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin.]

a·venge (ə-vĕnj') v. tr. a·venged, a·veng·ing, a·veng·es. 1. To inflict a punishment or penalty in return for; revenge: avenge a murder. 2. To take vengeance on behalf of: avenged their wronged parents. [Middle English avengen, from Old French avengier : a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + vingier, to vindicate (from Latin vindicāre, to claim); see VINDICATE.] —a·veng'er n.

—a·veng'ing·ly adv.

av·ens (äv'ənz) n. pl. avens. 1. Any of various perennial herbs of the genus Geum in the rose family, having often pinnate basal leaves and variously colored flowers with many pistils. 2. The mountain avens. [Middle English avence, from Old French, from Medieval Latin avencia.]

Av·en·tine (äv'ən-tīn', -tĕn') One of the seven hills of ancient Rome. It was turned over to the plebes for settlement in 456 B.C. —Av'en·tine' adj.

a·ven·tu·rine (ə-vĕn'chə-rĕn', -rĭn) also a·ven·tu·rin (-rĭn) n. 1. An opaque or semitranslucent brown glass flecked with small metallic particles, often of copper or chromic oxide. 2. Any of several varieties of quartz or feldspar flecked with particles of mica, hematite, or other materials. In this sense, also called sunstone [French, from aventure, accident (so called because of its accidental discovery or the randomness of inclusions in it). See ADVENTURE.] —a·ven'tu·rine' adj.

av·e·nue (äv'ə-nōō', -nyōō') n. 1. Abbr. Ave., AVE, Av., ave., av. A wide street or thoroughfare. 2. a. A broad roadway lined with trees. b. Chiefly British. The drive leading from the main road up to a country house. 3. A means of access or approach: new avenues of trade. [French, from Old French, arrival, from feminine past participle of avenir, to approach, from Latin advenire, to come to. See ADVENT.]

Av·en·zo·ar (äv'ən-zō'ər), 1090?-1162. Spanish-Arab physician and writer whose Practical Manual of Treatments and Diet showed an advanced understanding of the human body based on science rather than speculation.

a·ver (ə-vûr') v. tr. a·verred, a·ver·ring, a·vers. 1. To affirm positively; declare. See Synonyms at assert. 2. Law. a. To assert formally as a fact. b. To justify or prove. [Middle English averren, from Old French averer, from Vulgar Latin advērāre* : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin vĕrus, true; see wĕro- in Appendix.] —a·ver'ment n. —a·ver'ra·ble adj.

av·er·age (äv'ər-ĭj, äv'rĭj) n. Abbr. av., avg. 1. Mathematics. a. A number that typifies a set of numbers of which it is a function. b. See arithmetic mean. 2. a. An intermediate level or degree: near the average in size. b. The usual or ordinary kind or quality: Although the wines vary, the average is quite good. 3. Sports. The ratio of a team's or player's successful performances such as wins, hits, or goals, divided by total opportunities for successful performance, such as games, times at bat, or shots: finished the season with a .500 average; a batting average of .274. 4. Law. a. The loss of a ship or cargo, caused by damage at sea. b. The incurrence of damage or loss of a ship or a cargo at sea. c. The equitable distribution of such a loss among concerned parties. d. A charge incurred through such a loss. 5. Nautical. Small expenses or charges that are usually paid by the master of a ship. — adj. 1. Mathematics. Of, relating to, or constituting an average. 2. Being intermediate between extremes, as on a scale: a player of average ability. 3. Usual or ordinary in kind or character: a poll of average people; average eyesight. 4. Assessed in accordance with the laws of average. — v. av·er·aged, av·er·ag·ing, av·er·ag·es. — v. tr. 1. Mathematics. To calculate the average of: average a set of numbers. 2. To do or have an average of: averaged three hours of work a day. 3. To distribute proportionately: average one's income over four years so as to minimize the tax rate. — v. intr. 1. To be or amount to an average: Some sparrows are six inches long, but they average smaller. Our expenses averaged out to 45 dollars per day. 2. To buy or sell more goods or shares to obtain more than an average price. [From Middle English averay, charge above the cost of freight, from Old French avarie, from Old Italian avaria, duty, from Arabic 'awārīyah, damaged goods, from 'awar, blemish.] — av'er·age·ly adv.

— av'er·age·ness n.

SYNONYMS: average, medium, mediocre, fair, middling, indifferent, tolerable. These adjectives indicate rank or position around the middle of a scale of evaluation. Average and medium apply to what is midway between extremes on such a scale; usually they imply both sufficiency and lack of distinction: a novel of average merit; an orange of medium size. Mediocre stresses the undistinguished aspect of what is average: “The caliber of the students... has gone from mediocre to above average” (Judy Pasternak). What is fair is passable but substantially below excellent: a fair student; in fair health; have a fair idea of what's going on. Middling refers to middle position between best and worst: gave a middling performance at best. Indifferent applies to what is of less than striking character, being neither very good nor very bad: “One and the same thing can at the same time be good, bad, and indifferent, e.g., music is good to the melancholy, bad to those who mourn, and neither good nor bad to the deaf” (Spinoza). Something that is tolerable is merely acceptable: prepared a tolerable dinner.

A·ver·no (ä-vër'nō) Ancient name A·ver·nus (ə-vûr'nəs). A small crater lake of southern Italy near the Tyrrhenian Sea west of Naples. Because of its gloomy aspect and intense sulfuric vapors, now extinguished, the ancient Romans regarded it as the entrance to the underworld.

A·ver·ro·ës or A·ver·rho·ës (ə-vër'ō-ēz', äv'ə-rō'ēz), 1126-1198. Spanish-Arab physician and philosopher best known for his commentaries on Aristotle.

Although he was a Muslim, his work was most influential among medieval Christian theologians.

A-ver-sa (ä-vēr'sä) A city of southern Italy near Naples. It is known for its sparkling white wines. Population, 50,525.

a-verse (ə-vûrs') adj. Having a feeling of opposition, distaste, or aversion; strongly disinclined: was averse to sharing a table with them; investors who are averse to risk-taking. [Latin aversus, past participle of avertere, to turn away. See AVERT.] —a-verse/ly adv. —a-verse/ness n.

a-ver-sion (ə-vûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. A fixed, intense dislike; repugnance: formed an aversion to crowds. 2. One that is intensely disliked and avoided. 3. A feeling of extreme repugnance accompanied by avoidance or rejection: Her aversion to alcohol consumption caused her to shun all social gatherings where such beverages would be served. 4. Obsolete. The act of turning away or averting.

aversion therapy (ə-vûr'zhən thēr'ə-pē) n. A type of behavior therapy designed to modify antisocial habits or addictions by creating a strong association with a disagreeable or painful stimulus.

a-ver-sive (ə-vûr'siv, -ziv) adj. Causing avoidance of an unpleasant or punishing stimulus, as in techniques of behavior modification. —a-ver/sive-ly adv. —a-ver/sive-ness n.

a-vert (ə-vûrt') v. tr. a-vert-ed, a-vert-ing, a-verts. 1. To turn away: avert one's eyes. 2. To ward off (something about to happen); prevent: averted an accident by turning sharply. See Synonyms at prevent. [Middle English averten, from Old French avertir, from Latin avertere: ā-, ab-, away from; see AB-¹ + vert-ere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.] —a-vert/i-ble, a-vert/a-ble adj.

A-ver-y (ā'və-rē), Milton Clark. 1893-1965. American painter. Influenced by the works of Henri Matisse, his style of subtle colors and flat patterns influenced abstract expressionism.

A-ves-ta (ə-vēs'tə) n. A body of ancient Persian writings, a sacred text of Zoroastrianism. [Middle Persian apastāk, the basic (text), and apastāk, the (hymns of) praise.]

A-ves-tan (ə-vēs'tən) n. The eastern dialect of Old Iranian, in which the Avesta is written. — adj. Of or relating to the Avesta or Avestan.

avg. abbr. Average.

a-vi-an (ā'vē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of birds. [From Latin avis, bird. See awi- in Appendix.]

a-vi-ar-y (ā'vē-ēr'ē) n. pl. a-vi-ar-ies. A large enclosure for holding birds in confinement. [Latin aviarium, from avis, bird. See awi- in Appendix.]

—a/vi-a-rist (-ə-rĭst, -ēr'ĭst) n.

a-vi-ate (ā'vē-āt', äv'ē-) v. intr. a-vi-at-ed, a-vi-at-ing, a-vi-ates. To operate an aircraft; fly. [Back-formation from AVIATION.]

a·vi·a·tion (ā'vē-ā'shən, äv'ē-) n. Abbr. avn. 1. The operation of aircraft.

2. The design, development, and production of aircraft. 3. Military aircraft.

[French, from Latin avis, bird. See awi- in Appendix.]

aviation medicine (ā'vē-ā'shən mēd'ī-sīn) n. See aeromedicine.

a·vi·a·tor (ā'vē-ā'tər, äv'ē-) n. One who operates an aircraft; a pilot. [French aviateur, from aviation, aviation. See AVIATION.]

aviator glasses (ā'vē-ā'tər gläs'īz) pl.n. Eyeglasses having a lightweight metal frame and oval lenses that narrow toward the bridge of the nose.

a·vi·a·trix (ā'vē-ā'triks, äv'ē-) n. A woman who operates an aircraft; a woman pilot.

Av·i·cen·na (äv'ī-sēn'ə), 980-1037. Persian physician and philosopher noted for his Canon of Medicine, a standard medical textbook used in Europe until the 17th century.

a·vi·cul·ture (ā'vī-kül'chər, äv'ī-) n. The raising, keeping, and care of birds.

[Latin avis, bird; see awi- in Appendix + CULTURE.] —a'vi·cul'tur·ist n.

av·id (äv'īd) adj. 1. Having an ardent desire or unbounded craving; greedy: avid for adventure. 2. Marked by keen interest and enthusiasm: an avid sports fan.

See Synonyms at eager¹. [Latin avidus, from avēre, to desire.] —av'id·ly adv.

av·i·din (äv'ī-dīn) n. A protein found in uncooked egg white that binds to and inactivates biotin. An abundance of avidin in the duct can result in a deficiency of biotin. [AVID + (BIOT)IN, from its affinity for biotin.]

a·vid·i·ty (ə-vid'ī-tē) n. 1. Ardent desire or craving; eagerness. 2. Keen interest or enthusiasm: followed the tournament with avidity. 3. Chemistry. a. The dissociation-dependent strength of an acid or base. b. Degree of affinity.

a·vi·fau·na (ā'və-fô'nə, äv'ə-) n. The birds of a specific region or period.

[Latin avis, bird; see awi- in Appendix + FAUNA.] —a'vi·fau'nal adj.

A·vi·gnon (ä-vē-nyôn') A city of southeast France on the Rhone River. It was the seat of the papacy from 1309 to 1378 and the residence of several antipopes from 1378 to 1417. Population, 89,132.

Á·vi·la (ä'və-lə, ä'vē-lä) A town of central Spain west-northwest of Madrid. It is a religious and tourist center. Population, 42,165.

Á·vi·la Ca·ma·cho (ä'vē-lä' kə-mä'chō), Manuel. 1897-1955. Mexican general and politician whose presidency (1940-1946) was a period of stability.

A·vi·lés (ä'-və-lās', ä'vē-lēs') A town of northwest Spain on an inlet of the Bay of Biscay. It is a port and an industrial center. Population, 89,992.

a·vi·on·ics (ā'vē-ön'īks, äv'ē-) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The science and technology of electronics and the development of electronic devices as applied to aeronautics and astronautics: Avionics has become even more important with the development of the space program. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The electronic systems, equipment, and other devices so developed: The avionics on this spacecraft represent a new generation of sophistication. [AVI(ATION) + (ELECTR)ONICS.]

—a'vi-on'ic adj.

a·vir·u·lent (ā-vîr'yə-lənt, ā-vîr'ə-) adj. Not virulent. —a·vir'u·lence n.

a·vi·ta·min·o·sis (ā-vī'tə-mī-nō'sīs) n. A disease, such as scurvy, beriberi, or pellagra, caused by deficiency of one or more essential vitamins.

—a·vi'ta·min·ot'ic (-nōt'ik) adj.

avn. abbr. Aviation.

AV node (ā'vē' nōd) n. See atrioventricular node. [A(TRIO)V(ENTRICULAR) NODE.]

a·vo (ä'vō) n. pl. a·vos. A unit of currency in Macao. See Table at currency. [Portuguese, shortened from oitavo, eighth, from Latin octāvus. See OCTAVE.]

av·o·ca·do (äv'ə-kä'dō, ä'və-) n. pl. av·o·ca·dos. 1. A tropical American tree (Persea americana) having oval or pear-shaped fruit with leathery skin, yellowish-green flesh, and a large seed. Also called alligator pear. 2. The edible fruit of this tree. 3. Color. A dull green. [American Spanish, alteration (influenced by Spanish avocado, earlier form of abogado, lawyer), of Nahuatl ahuacatl.]

WORD HISTORY: The history of avocado takes us back to the Nahuatl (the language of the Aztecs) word ahuacatl, “fruit of the avocado tree” or “testicle.” The word ahuacatl was compounded with others, as in ahuacamolli, meaning “avocado soup or sauce,” from which the Spanish-Mexican word guacamole derives. In trying to pronounce ahuacatl, the Spanish who found the fruit and its Nahuatl name in Mexico came up with aguacate, but other Spanish speakers substituted the form avocado for the Nahuatl word because ahuacatl sounded like the early Spanish word avocado (now abogado), meaning “lawyer.” In borrowing the Spanish avocado, first recorded in English in 1697 in the compound avogato pear (with a spelling that probably reflects Spanish pronunciation), we have lost many of the traces of the more interesting Nahuatl word.

av·o·ca·tion (äv'ō-kā'shən) n. 1. An activity taken up in addition to one's regular work or profession, usually for enjoyment; a hobby. 2. One's regular work or profession. 3. Archaic. A distraction or diversion. [Latin āvocātiō, āvocātiōn-, diversion, from āvocātus, past participle of āvocāre, to call away : ā-, ab-, away; see AB-¹ + vocāre, to call; see wek^w- in Appendix.] —av'o·ca'tion·al adj.

—av'o·ca'tion·al·ly adv.

av·o·cet (äv'ə-sēt') n. Any of several long-legged shore birds of the genus Recurvirostra, characterized by a long, slender, upturned beak. [French avocette, from Italian avocetta.]

A·vo·ga·dro (ä'və-gä'drō, ä'vō-), Amedeo. 1776-1856. Italian chemist and physicist who advanced the hypothesis that has come to be called Avogadro's law. From this hypothesis other physicists were able to calculate Avogadro's number.

A·vo·ga·dro's law (ä'və-gä'drōz lô, ä'vō-) n. The principle that equal volumes of all gases under identical conditions of pressure and temperature contain the same number of molecules.

Avogadro's number also Avogadro number (ä'və-gä'drōz nŭm'bər) n.
Symbol N The number of molecules in a mole of a substance, approximately 6.0225×10^{23} .

a·void (ə-void') v. tr. a·void·ed, a·void·ing, a·voids. 1. To stay clear of; shun. See Synonyms at escape. 2. To keep from happening: avoid illness with rest and a balanced diet. 3. Law. To annul or make void; invalidate. 4. Obsolete. To void or expel. [Middle English avoiden, from Anglo-Norman avoider, to empty out, variant of Old French esvuidier: es-, out (from Latin ex-); see EX- + vuidier, to empty (from voide, empty); see VOID.] —a·void/a·ble adj.
—a·void/a·bly adv. —a·void'er n.

a·void·ance (ə-void'ns) n. 1. The act of shunning or avoiding. 2. Law. An annulment.

av·oir·du·pois (äv'ər-də-poiz') n. 1. Abbr. avdp., av. Avoirdupois weight. 2. Informal. Weight or heaviness, especially of a person. [Middle English avoir de pois, commodities sold by weight, alteration of Old French aveir de peis, goods of weight : aveir, avoir, to have (from Latin habēre); see ABLE + de, of (from Latin dē-, from); see DE- + peis, pois, weight (from Vulgar Latin pēsūm*, from Latin pēnsum, past participle of pendere, to hang); see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

avoirdupois weight (äv'ər-də-poiz' wāt) n. A system of weights and measures based on a pound containing 16 ounces or 7,000 grains and equal to 453.59 grams.

A·von (ā'vŏn, ā'vən, äv'ən) also Up·per Avon (ŭp'ər) A river of south-central England flowing 154.5 km (96 mi) to the Severn. It is known for its associations with Shakespeare.

a·vouch (ə-vouch') v. tr. a·vouch·ed, a·vouch·ing, a·vouch·es. 1. To declare the provable truth or validity of; affirm: She avouched that she herself was innocent. 2. To vouch for. 3. To accept responsibility for (an action, for example); acknowledge. 4. To avow; confess. [Middle English avouchen, to cite as a warrant, from Old French avochier, from Latin advocāre, to summon. See ADVO·CATE.] a·vow (ə-vou') v. tr. a·vow·ed, a·vow·ing, a·vows. 1. To acknowledge openly, boldly, and unashamedly; confess: avow guilt. See Synonyms at acknowledge. 2. To state positively. See Synonyms at assert. [Middle English avowen, from Old French avouer, from Latin advocāre, to call upon. See ADVOCATE.] —a·vow/a·ble adj. —a·vow/a·bly adv. —a·vow'ed·ly (-id-lē) adv. —a·vow'er n.

a·vow·al (ə-vou'əl) n. A frank admission or acknowledgment.

a·vulse (ə-vŭlsʹ) v. tr. a·vulsed, a·vuls-ing, a·vuls-es. To separate, cut, or tear off by avulsion. [Latin āvellere, āvuls-, to tear off : ā-, ab-, away; see AB⁻¹ + vellere, to pull.]

a·vul·sion (ə-vŭlʹshən) n. 1. Medicine. The forcible tearing away of a body part by trauma or surgery. 2. The sudden movement of soil from one property to another as a result of a flood or a shift in the course of a boundary stream.

a·vun·cu·lar (ə-vŭngʹkyə-lər) adj. 1. Of or having to do with an uncle. 2. Regarded as being similar to an uncle, especially in benevolence. [From Latin avunculus, maternal uncle. See awo- in Appendix.]

aw (ô) interj. Used to express sympathy, disgust, or disbelief.

AW abbr. 1. Aircraft warning. 2. Articles of War. 3. Automatic weapon.

a.w. abbr. 1. Also A/W. Actual weight. 2. All water.

AWACS (āʹwăks) n. pl. AWACS. A military surveillance system, carried by aircraft, that is capable of tracking a large number of other aircraft from a great distance. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: AWACS surveillance; AWACS operations. [A(irborne) W(arning) A(nd) C(ontrol) S(ystem).] a·wait (ə-wātʹ) v. a·wait-ed, a·wait-ing, a·waits. — v. tr. 1. a. To wait for. See Synonyms at expect. b. To be in a state of abeyance until: a contract awaiting signature. 2. To be in store for: Death awaits us all. 3. Obsolete. To lie in ambush for. — v. intr. 1. To wait. 2. To be in store: A busy day awaits. [Middle English awaiten, from Old North French awaitier : a-, on (from Latin ad-); see AD- + waitier, to watch; see WAIT.]

A·wa·ji (ə-wäʹjĕ) or A·wa·ji·shi·ma (ə-wäʹjĕ-shĕʹmə) An island of Japan in the Inland Sea between southwest Honshu and Shikoku.

a·wake (ə-wākʹ) v. a·woke (ə-wōkʹ) or a·waked, a·waked or a·wok·en (ə-wōʹkən), a·wak-ing, a·wakes. — v. tr. 1. To rouse from sleep; waken. 2. To stir the interest of; excite. 3. To stir up (memories, for example). — v. intr. 1. To wake up. 2. To become alert. 3. To become aware or cognizant: awoke to reality. See Usage Note at wake¹. — adj. 1. Completely conscious; not in a state of sleep. 2. Vigilant; watchful. See Synonyms at aware. [Middle English awaken, from Old English āwacan : ā-, intensive pref. + wacan, wake; see *WAKE*¹.]

a·wak·en (ə-wäʹkən) v. a·wak-ened, a·wak-en-ing, a·wak-ens. — v. tr. To cause to wake up. — v. intr. To wake up. See Usage Note at wake¹. [Middle English awakenen, from Old English āwæcnian : ā-, on, up; see A⁻² + wæcnian, to waken; see WAKEN.] — a·wakʹen-er n.

a·ward (ə-wôrdʹ) v. tr. a·ward-ed, a·ward-ing, a·wards. 1. To grant as merited or due: awarded prizes to the winners. 2. To give as legally due: awarded damages to the plaintiff. See Synonyms at grant. — n. 1. Something awarded or granted, as for merit. 2. A decision, such as one made by a judge or arbitrator. [Middle English awarden, from Anglo-Norman awarder, to decide (a legal case), variant of Old North French eswarder : es-, out (from Latin ex); see EX- + warder, to judge, guard; see wer-³ in Appendix.] —a·ward/a·ble adj. —a·ward'er n. a·ward·ee (ə-wôr-dē') n. The recipient of an award.

a·ware (ə-wâr') adj. 1. Having knowledge or cognizance: aware of their limitations. 2. Archaic. Vigilant; watchful. [Middle English, variant of iwar, from Old English gewær. See wer-³ in Appendix.] —a·ware'ness n.

SYNONYMS: aware, cognizant, conscious, sensible, awake, alert, watchful, vigilant. These adjectives mean mindful or heedful of something. Aware implies knowledge gained through one's own perceptions, as of the attitudes of others, or by means of information: Are you aware of your opponent's hostility? I am aware that Congress has passed the legislation. Cognizant is a rather formal equivalent of aware: "Our research indicates that the nation's youth are cognizant of the law" (Jerry D. Jennings). Conscious emphasizes the recognition of something sensed or felt: "an importance... of which even Americans are barely conscious" (William Stanley Jevons). Sensible implies knowledge gained through intellectual perception or through intuition: "I am sensible that the mention of such a circumstance may appear trifling" (Henry Hallam). To be awake is to have full consciousness of something: "as much awake to the novelty of attention in that quarter as Elizabeth herself" (Jane Austen). Alert stresses quickness to recognize and respond: alert enough to spot the opportunity when it came. Watchful and vigilant imply being on the lookout for what is dangerous or potentially so: a watchful parent with a toddler in tow; keeping a vigilant eye on every building where a fire might start.

a·wash (ə-wôsh', ə-wôsh') adv. 1. a. Washed by the sea. b. Washing about. 2. In such a position or way as to be covered with or as if with water. — adj.
1. Level with or washed by waves. 2. Overflowing with or as if with water: "Some of America's big cities are awash in vacant office space" (Ross K. Baker). 3. Floating on or as if on waves.

A·wash River (ä'wâsh' rĭv'ər) also Ha·wash River (hä'-) A river of eastern Ethiopia flowing about 805 km (500 mi) northeast to the Danakil Desert.

a·way (ə-wā') adv. 1. From a particular thing or place: ran away from the lion; sent the children away to boarding school. 2. a. At or to a distance in space or time: We live a block away from the park. b. At or by a considerable interval: away back in the 17th century; away off on the horizon. 3. a. In a different direction; aside: glanced away. b. On the way: We want to get away early in the day. 4. In or into storage or safekeeping: put the toys away; jewels locked away in a safe. 5. Out of existence or notice: The music faded away. 6. So as to remove, separate, or eliminate: chipped the paint away; cleared away the debris. 7. From one's possession: gave the tickets away. 8. Continuously; steadily: toiled away at the project for more than a year. 9. Freely; at will: Fire away! — adj. 1. Absent: The neighbors are away. 2. Distant, as in space or time: The city is miles away. The game was still a week away. 3. Played on an opponent's field or grounds: an away game.

4. Baseball. Out: bases loaded, with two away. [Middle English, from Old English aweg: a-, on; see A⁻¹ + weg, way; see wegh- in Appendix.]

awe (ô) n. 1. A mixed emotion of reverence, respect, dread, and wonder inspired by authority, genius, great beauty, sublimity, or might: We felt awe when contemplating the works of Bach. The imprisoned soldiers were in awe of their captors. 2. Archaic. a. The power to inspire dread. b. Dread. — v. tr. awed, aw-ing, awes. To inspire with awe. [Middle English, from Old Norse agi.]

a·wea·ry (ə-wîr'ē) adj. Archaic. Tired; weary.

a·weath·er (ə-wēth'ər) adv. Nautical. To the windward side.

a·weigh (ə-wā'f) adj. Nautical. Hanging clear of the bottom. Used of an anchor.

awe·some (ô'səm) adj. 1. Inspiring awe: an awesome thunderstorm.

2. Expressing awe: stood in awesome silence before the ancient ruins. 3. Slang. Remarkable; outstanding: "a totally awesome arcade game" (Los Angeles Times).

—awe'some·ly adv. —awe'some·ness n.

awe·struck (ô'strūk') also awe·strick·en (-strīk'ən) adj. Full of awe.

aw·ful (ô'fəl) adj. 1. Extremely bad or unpleasant; terrible: had an awful day at the office. 2. Commanding awe: "this sea, whose gently awful stirrings seem to speak of some hidden soul beneath" (Herman Melville). 3. Filled with awe, especially: a. Filled with or displaying great reverence. b. Obsolete. Afraid.

4. Formidable in nature or extent: an awful burden; an awful risk. — adv.

Informal. Extremely; very: was awful sick. [Middle English aweful, awe-inspiring, blend of awe, awe; see AWE, ayfull*, awful (from Old English egefull: ege, dread + -full, -ful.)] —aw'ful·ly adv. —aw'ful·ness n.

a·while (ə-hwīl', ə-wīl') adv. For a short time.

USAGE NOTE: Awhile, an adverb, is never preceded by a preposition such as for, but the two-word form a while may be preceded by a preposition. In writing, each of the following is acceptable: stay awhile; stay for a while; stay a while (but not stay for awhile).

a·whirl (ə-hwûrl', ə-wûrl') adj. 1. Having a whirling motion; spinning: leaves whirl in the wind. 2. Being in a condition suggestive of a whirl, such as a state of excited activity or confusion: "All we could do was just stand there, our minds whirl with the fluky wonder of it all" (David Mazel). —a·whirl' adv.

awk·ward (ôk'wərd) adj. 1. Not graceful; ungainly. 2. a. Not dexterous; clumsy. b. Clumsily or unskillfully performed: The opera was marred by an awkward aria. 3. a. Difficult to handle or manage: an awkward bundle to carry. b. Difficult to effect; uncomfortable: an awkward pose. 4. a. Marked by or causing embarrassment or discomfort: an awkward remark; an awkward silence.

b. Requiring great tact, ingenuity, skill, and discretion: An awkward situation arose during the peace talks. [Middle English awkeward, in the wrong way : awke, wrong (from Old Norse öfugr, backward); see apo- in Appendix + -ward, -ward.] —awk'ward-ly adv. —awk'ward-ness n.

SYNONYMS: awkward, clumsy, maladroit, inept, gauche, ungainly. These adjectives mean lacking grace or skill in movement, manner, or performance. Awkward and clumsy, the least specific, are often interchangeable. Both emphasize lack of physical dexterity (an awkward dancer; clumsy fingers); both can also suggest embarrassment or lack of ease (several awkward moments in the discussion; offered a clumsy apology). Maladroit implies tactlessness or lack of skill in social relations: a maladroit comment. Inept applies to inappropriate actions and speech: If the rumor is true, can anything be more inept than to repeat it now? Gauche suggests a lack of social polish: too gauche to leave the room when the conversation became intimate. Ungainly implies a visible lack of grace in form or movement: long, ungainly legs; an ungainly gesture.

awl (ôl) n. A pointed tool for making holes, as in wood or leather. [Middle English aul, probably blend of Old English *æ*l, and Old English awel, fleshhook.] awn (ôn) n. A slender, bristlelike appendage found on the spikelets of many grasses. [Middle English awne, from Old Norse ögn, or from Old English agen; see ak- in Appendix.] —awned adj. —awn'less adj.

awn-ing (ô'nĭng) n. A rooflike structure, often made of canvas or plastic, that serves as a shelter, as over a storefront, window, door, or deck. [Origin unknown.]

a·woke (ə-wōk') v. A past tense of awake.

a·wok-en (ə-wō'kən) v. A past participle of awake.

AWOL or awol (ā'wôl') adj. Absent without leave. — n. One who is absent without leave.

a·wry (ə-rī') adv. 1. In a position that is turned or twisted toward one side; askew. 2. Away from the correct course; amiss. See Synonyms at amiss. —a·wry' adj.

aw-shucks (ô'shŭks') adj. Informal. Characterized by a shy, self-effacing, often unsophisticated manner: “He grinned his aw-shucks grin, passed a hand over his face and said, ‘Hi ya, guys!’” (William Manchester).

ax or axe (ăks) n. pl. ax-es (ăk'sĭz). 1. A tool with a bladed, usually heavy head mounted crosswise on a handle, used for felling trees or chopping wood. 2. Any of various bladed, hand-held implements used as a cutting tool or weapon.

3. Informal. A sudden termination of employment: My colleague got the ax yesterday. 4. Slang. A musical instrument, especially a guitar. — v. tr. axed, ax-ing, ax-es. 1. To use a heavy, bladed cutting implement in order to chop or fell (something). 2. Informal. To remove ruthlessly or suddenly: a social program that was axed to effectuate budget cuts. —idiom. ax to grind. A selfish or subjective aim: He claimed to be disinterested, but I knew he had an ax to grind. [Middle English, from Old English æx.]

WORD HISTORY: To understand the origin of the idiom ax to grind, we need to know that grind means “to sharpen.” This phrase is said to have come from a story by the 19th-century journalist Charles Miner (alias Poor Robert) about a seemingly friendly man who was able by flattery to persuade a young boy to turn a grindstone for him. The tale first appeared in the Luzerne, Pennsylvania, Federalist on September 7, 1810, under the title “Who’ll Turn Grindstones?” and later in an 1815 book entitled Essays from the Desk of Poor Robert the Scribe. Because “Poor Robert” was confused with “Poor Richard,” the story has often been erroneously attributed to Benjamin Franklin. The idiom itself is an Americanism—a word or expression originating in the United States. It was at first restricted to political contexts, but quotations from James Joyce (“Skin-the-Goat... evidently with an axe to grind, was airing his grievances”) and George Bernard Shaw (“distinguished statesmen of different nations... each with a national axe to grind”) attest that the phrase has traveled abroad and, as we know only too well, is no longer found only in political contexts.

ax. abbr. 1. Logic & Mathematics. Axiom. 2. Axis.

axe (ăks) n. & v. Variant of ax.

ax-el (ăk'səl) n. Sports. A jump in figure skating that is initiated from the outer forward edge of one skate, followed by one and one half midair turns and a return to the outer backward edge of the other skate. [After Axel Paulsen, 19th-century Norwegian figure skater.]

Ax-el Hei-berg (ăk'səl hī'bûrg') An island of northern Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Ocean west of Ellesmere Island.

Ax-el-rod (ăk'səl-räd'), Julius. Born 1912. American biochemist. He shared a 1970 Nobel Prize for studies of how nerve impulses are transmitted.

a·xen·ic (ā-zěn'ik, ā-zē'nĭk) adj. Not contaminated by or associated with any other living organisms. Usually used in reference to pure cultures of microorganisms that are completely free of the presence of other organisms.

—a·xen'i·cal·ly adv.

ax·es¹ (ăk'sēz') n. Plural of axis.

ax·es² (ăk'sĭz) n. Plural of ax.

ax·i·al (ăk'sē-əl) adj. 1. Relating to, characterized by, or forming an axis.

2. Located on, around, or in the direction of an axis. —ax'i-al'i·ty (-ăl'ĭ-tē) n.

—ax'i-al·ly adv.

axial skeleton (ăk'sē-əl skēl'ī-tn) n. The bones constituting the head and trunk of a vertebrate body.

ax·il (ăk'sīl) n. The upper angle between a lateral organ, such as a leafstalk, and the stem that bears it. [Latin axilla, armpit.]

ax·ile (ăk'sīl) adj. Situated along the central axis of an ovary having two or more locules: axile placentation. [AX(IS) + -ILE¹.]

ax·il·la (ăk-sīl'ə) n. pl. ax·il·lae (-sīl'ē). Anatomy. 1. The armpit. 2. A body part analogous to the armpit, such as the hollow under a bird's wing. [Latin.]

ax·il·lar (ăk-sīl'ər, ăk'sə-lər) or ax·il·lar·y (ăk'sə-lēr'ē) n. pl. axillars or ax·il·lar·ies. One of the feathers in the axilla of a bird's wing.

ax·il·lar·y (ăk'sə-lēr'ē) adj. 1. Anatomy. Of, relating to, or located near the axilla. 2. Botany. Of, relating to, or located in an axil. — n. Variant of axillar.

axillary bud (ăk'sə-lēr'ē būd) n. A lateral bud.

ax·i·ol·o·gy (ăk'sē-ōl'ə-jē) n. Philosophy. The study of the nature of values and value judgments. [Greek axios, worth; see ag- in Appendix + -LOGY.]

—ax'·i·o·log'·i·cal (-ə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —ax'·i·o·log'·i·cal·ly adv.

—ax'·i·ol'·o·gist n.

ax·i·om (ăk'sē-əm) n. 1. A self-evident or universally recognized truth; a maxim: “It is an economic axiom as old as the hills that goods and services can be paid for only with goods and services” (Albert Jay Nock). 2. An established rule, principle, or law. 3. Abbr. ax. A self-evident principle or one that is accepted as true without proof as the basis for argument; a postulate. [Middle English, from Old French axiome, from Latin axiōma, axiōmat-, from Greek, from axios, worthy. See ag- in Appendix.]

ax·i·o·mat·ic (ăk'sē-ə-măt'īk) also ax·i·o·mat·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or resembling an axiom; self-evident: “the axiomatic pillars of a new code of the law of nations” (William Taylor). —ax'·i·o·mat'·i·cal·ly adv.

ax·is (ăk'sīs) n. pl. ax·es (ăk'sēz'). Abbr. ax. 1. A straight line about which a body or geometric object rotates or may be conceived to rotate. 2. Mathematics. a. An unlimited line, half-line, or line segment serving to orient a space or a geometric object, especially a line about which the object is symmetric. b. A reference line from which distances or angles are measured in a coordinate system. 3. A center line to which parts of a structure or body may be referred. 4. An imaginary line to which elements of a work of art, such as a picture, are referred for measurement or symmetry. 5. Anatomy. a. The second cervical vertebra on which the head turns. b. Any of various central structures, such as the spinal column, or standard abstract lines used as a positional referent. 6. Botany. The main stem or central part about which organs or plant parts such as branches are arranged. 7. One of three mutually perpendicular lines that define the orientation of an aircraft, with one being along its direction of travel and the other two being perpendicular to the direction of travel. 8. A line through the optical center of a lens that is perpendicular to both its surfaces. 9. One of three or four imaginary lines used to define the faces of a crystal and the position of its atoms.

10. a. An alliance of powers, such as nations, to promote mutual interests and policies. b. Axis. The alliance of Germany and Italy in 1936, later including Japan and other nations, that opposed the Allies in World War II. [Middle English, from Latin.]

axis deer (ăk'sis dîr) n. A deer (Axis axis) of central Asia, having a brown coat with white spots. [Latin axis, a spotted Indian quadruped.]

ax·i·sym·met·ric (ăk'sē-sī-mět'rik) also ax·i·sym·met·ri·cal (-rī-kəl) adj. Having symmetry around an axis: an axisymmetric cone.

—ax'i·sym·met'ri·cal·ly adv.

ax·le (ăk'səl) n. 1. A supporting shaft or member on or with which a wheel or a set of wheels revolves. 2. a. The spindle of an axletree. b. Either end of an axletree. [Middle English axel, from Old Norse öxull.]

ax·le·tree (ăk'səl-trē') n. A crossbar or rod supporting a vehicle, such as a cart, that has terminal spindles on which the wheels revolve. [Blend of Middle English axel, axle; see AXLE, Middle English axtre, axletree (ax from Old English eax + tre, tree); see TREE.]

ax·man (ăks'mən) n. A man who wields an ax.

Ax·min·ster (ăks'mîn'stər) n. A carpet with stiff backing and a soft, colorful cut pile usually arranged in a complex pattern. [After Axminster, a town of southwest England.]

ax·o·lotl (ăk'sə-lõt'l) n. Any of several salamanders (genus Ambystoma) native to Mexico and the western United States that, unlike most amphibians, often retain their external gills and become sexually mature without undergoing metamorphosis. [Nahuatl.]

ax·on (ăk'sön') also ax·one (-sön') n. The usually long process of a nerve fiber that generally conducts impulses away from the body of the nerve cell. [Greek axōn, axis.] —ax'on·al (ăk'sə-nəl, ăk-sön'əl) adj.

ax·o·neme (ăk'sə-nēm') n. 1. The bundle of fibrils that constitutes the central core of a cilium or flagellum. 2. The axial thread of a chromosome. [Greek axōn, axis + nēma, thread; see (s)nē- in Appendix.] —ax'o·ne'mal adj.

ax·o·no·met·ric (ăk'sə-nō-mět'rik) adj. Of or relating to a method of projection in which an object is drawn with its horizontal and vertical axes to scale but with its curved lines and diagonals distorted. [From axonometry: Greek axōn, axis + -METRY.]

ax·o·plasm (ăk'sə-plăz'əm) n. The cytoplasm of an axon. [Greek axōn + -PLASM.] —ax'o·plas'mic (-plăz'mik) adj.

Ax·um (ăk'sōom') See Aksum.

ay¹ (ī) interj. Used before me to express distress or regret.

ay² (ī) n. & adv. Variant of aye¹.

ay³ (ā) adv. Variant of aye².

a·yah (ä'ʏə, ā'ə, ī'ə) n. A maid or nurse native to India. [Hindi āyā, from Portuguese aia, nursemaid, from Latin avia, grandmother. See awo- in Appendix.]

a·ya·tol·lah (ī'ə-tō'lə, -tō-lä') n. Islam. 1. A high-ranking male Shiite religious authority, generally assuming a political role and regarded as worthy of imitation. 2. Used as a title for such a leader. [Persian ayətollah, from Arabic 'āyatullāh : 'āyah, Koranic verse, miracle + allāh, Allah.]

AYC abbr. American Youth Congress.

aye¹ also ay (ī) n. An affirmative vote or voter. — adv. Yes; yea: “between the Scylla and Charybdis of Aye and No” (John Henry Newman). [Perhaps from Middle English *ayye : ay, always; see AYE² + ye, yes; see YEA.]

aye² also ay (ā) adv. Always; ever. [Middle English ai, from Old Norse ei. See aiw- in Appendix.]

aye-aye (ī'ī') n. A nocturnal lemur (Daubentonia madagascariensis) native to northern Madagascar, having prominent ears, a long, bushy tail, and rodentlike teeth. [French, from Malagasy aiay, probably imitative of its cry.]

A·ye·sha (ä'ē-shä') See Aisha.

AYH abbr. American Youth Hostels.

a·yin (ī'īn) n. The 16th letter of the Hebrew alphabet. [Hebrew 'ayin.]

Ayl·mer (āl'mər) A town of southwest Quebec, Canada, on the Ottawa River west of Hull. It is a resort community. Population, 26,695.

Ay·ma·ra (ī'mä-rä', ī'mə-) n. pl. Aymara or Ay·ma·ras. 1. A member of a South American Indian people inhabiting parts of highland Bolivia and Peru. 2. The Aymaran language of the Aymara.

Ay·ma·ran (ī'mä-rän') n. A subgroup of the Quechumaran languages, the most important language being Aymara. — adj. Of or relating to the Aymara or their language or culture.

Ayr (âr) A burgh of southwest Scotland at the mouth of the Ayr River on the Firth of Clyde. It is a resort and a fishing port. Population, 48,600.

Ayr·shire (âr'shîr, -shər) n. Any of various brown and white dairy cattle of a breed that originated in Ayr, Scotland.

a-yuh (ä'ʏə, ī'ʏə, ā-yü') interj. New England. Used to express agreement.

A-yut·thay·a (ä-yōō'tə-yä') A city of south-central Thailand on an island in the Chao Phraya River north of Bangkok. It was founded c. 1350 and was the capital of a Siamese kingdom until 1767, when it was destroyed by the Burmese. Population, 55,319.

AZ abbr. Arizona.

az. abbr. 1. Azimuth. 2. Azure.

az- pref. Variant of azo-.

a·zal·ea (ə-zāl'ʏə) n. Any of various shrubs of the genus Rhododendron having showy, variously colored flowers. [Greek, from feminine of azaleos, dry (so called because it grows in dry soil or from the texture of its wood). See as- in Appendix.]

a·zan (ä-zän') n. Islam. The Muslim summons to prayer, called by the muezzin from a minaret of a mosque five times a day. [Arabic 'adān, from 'addana, to call to prayer, from 'udn, ear.]

A·za·ña y Dí·ez (ə-zän'yə ē dē'ěz, -ēs, ä-sän'yä), Manuel. 1880-1940. Spanish writer and politician. He served as prime minister (1931-1933 and 1936) and was elected president (1936) but fled to France after the Nationalist victory in the civil war (1939).

A·za·ni·a (ə-zā'nē-ə, ə-zän'yə) South Africa. The term is often used by Black African nationalists. —A·za'ni·an adj. & n.

az·a·thi·o·prine (äz'ə-thī'ə-prēn') n. An immunosuppressive agent used especially to prevent organ rejection in kidney transplant recipients. [Probably from AZ(O)- + THIO- + P(U)RINE.]

A·za·zel (ə-zā'zəl, äz'ə-zēl') n. 1. Bible. In the Old Testament, the evil spirit in the wilderness to whom a scapegoat was sent on the Day of Atonement. 2. Islam. One of the jinn. [Hebrew 'āzā'zēl, removal, scapegoat (ritually sent into the wilderness), perhaps originally a divine name.]

A·ze·glio (ä-zēl'yō), Marchese d' Originally Massimo Taparelli. 1798-1866. Italian politician and writer who headed the government under Victor Emmanuel II and later served as a diplomat to France and England.

a·ze·o·trope (ə-zē'ə-trōp', ā'zē-) n. A liquid mixture of two or more substances that retains the same composition in the vapor state as in the liquid state when distilled or partially evaporated under a certain pressure. [A⁻¹ + Greek zein, to boil; see ZEOLITE + Greek -tropos, turning; see -TROPOUS.] —a'ze·o·trop'ic (ā'zē-ə-trōp'ik, -trō'pik) adj. —a'ze·ot'ro·py (-öt'rə-pē) n.

A·zer·bai·jan (äz'ər-bī-jän', ä'zər-) A country of Transcaucasia north of Iran. The region was settled by the Medes before the eighth century B.C. and was a separate kingdom after the death of Alexander the Great. Ceded to Russia by Persia in 1813 and 1828, the territory was a constituent republic of the U.S.S.R. from 1936 to 1991. Baku is the capital. Population, 6,614,000.

A·zer·bai·ja·ni (äz'ər-bī-jä'nē, äz'ər-) adj. Of or relating to Azerbaijan or its people, language, or culture. — n. pl. Azerbaijani or A·zer·bai·ja·nis. 1. A native or inhabitant of Azerbaijan. 2. The Turkic language of Azerbaijan.

az·ide (äz'id, ā'zīd) n. A chemical compound that contains the group N₃. —az·i·do (az'ī-dō') adj.

a·z·i·do·thy·mi·dine (ə-zī'dō-thī'mī-dēn', ə-zē'-, äz'ī-) n. An antiviral drug that inhibits replication of the retrovirus that causes AIDS; AZT. Also called zidovudine

A·zil·ian (ə-zīl'yən) adj. Archaeology. Of or relating to a Mesolithic western European culture. [After le Mas d'Azil, a village of southern France.]

az-i-muth (ăz'ə-məth) n. Abbr. az. 1. The horizontal angular distance from a reference direction, usually the northern point of the horizon, to the point where a vertical circle through a celestial body intersects the horizon, usually measured clockwise. Sometimes the southern point is used as the reference direction, and the measurement is made clockwise through 360°. 2. The horizontal angle of the observer's bearing in surveying, measured clockwise from a referent direction, as from the north, or from a referent celestial body, usually Polaris. 3. The lateral deviation of a projectile or bomb. [Middle English azimut, from Old French, from Arabic as-sumūt, pl. of as-samt, the way, compass bearing, from Latin sēmita, path.] —az'i-muth'al (-müth'əl) adj. —az'i-muth'al·ly adv.

azimuthal equidistant projection (ăz'ə-məth'əl ē'kwī-dīs'tənt prə-jĕk'shən) n. A map projection of the earth designed so that a straight line from the central point on the map to any other point gives the shortest distance between the two points.

azine (ăz'ēn', ā'zēn') n. A six-membered heterocyclic compound, such as pyridine, that contains one or more atoms of nitrogen with a ring structure resembling that of benzene.

azine dye (ăz'ēn' dī) n. Any of various dyes derived from phenazine.

az-o (ăz'ō, ā'zō) adj. Containing a nitrogen group, especially N=N. [From AZO-.]

azo- or az- pref. Containing a nitrogen group, especially one attached at both ends in a covalent bond to other groups: azole. [From French azote, nitrogen : Greek a-, not; see A⁻¹ + Greek zōē, life (from the fact that nitrogen does not support respiration); see g^wei- in Appendix.]

azo dye (ăz'ō dī) n. Any of various red, brown, or yellow acidic or basic dyes derived from amino compounds.

a·zo·ic (ā-zō'ik) adj. Of or relating to geologic periods that precede the appearance of life.

az-ole (ăz'ōl', ā'zōl') n. A class of organic compounds having a five-membered heterocyclic ring with two double bonds.

a·zon·al (ā-zō'nəl) adj. Not divided into zones.

a·zon·ic (ā-zōn'ik, ā-zō'nik) adj. Not restricted to a particular zone or region; not local.

A-zores (ā'zôrz, ā'zōrz, ə-zôrz', ə-zōrz') also A·ço-res (ä-sôr'ësh) A group of volcanic islands in the northern Atlantic Ocean about 1,448 km (900 mi) west of mainland Portugal, of which they are administrative districts. Fishing, farming, and tourism are important to their economy. —A-zor'e-an, A-zor'i-an adj. & n.

az-ote (ăz'ōt, ā'zōt, ə-zōt') n. Used formerly as a name for nitrogen. [French. See AZO-.]

az-o-te-mi-a (ăz'ə-tē'mē-ə, ā'zə-) n. See uremia. [French azote, nitrogen; see AZO- + -EMIA.] —az'o-te'mic (-mĭk) adj.

az·oth (äz'öth, -ôth) n. Mercury considered in alchemy to be the primary source of all metals. [Middle English azoc, from Old French, from Arabic az-zā'uq, the mercury, from Syriac zīwag, from Middle Persian zhīwak*, from Old Iranian jīvaka-*, lively; akin to Sanskrit jīvaka-, lively, from jīva-, alive. See g^wei- in Appendix.]

a·zo·to·bac·ter (ā-zō'tə-băk'tər) n. Any of various rod-shaped, nonpathogenic, nitrogen-fixing bacteria of the genus Azotobacter, found in soil and water. [French azote, nitrogen; see AZO- + BACTER(IA).]

az·o·tu·ri·a (äz'ə-tōör'ē-ə, -tyōör'-) n. Increase of nitrogenous substances, especially urea, in the urine. [French azote, nitrogen; see AZO- + -URIA.]

A·zov (äz'ôf, ä'zôf, ə-zôf'), Sea of. The northern arm of the Black Sea between Russia and the Ukraine. The shallow sea has important fisheries.

AZT (ä'zē-tē') n. Azidothymidine. [AZ(IDO)T(HYMIDINE).]

Az·tec (äz'těk') n. 1. A member of a people of central Mexico whose civilization was at its height at the time of the Spanish conquest in the early 16th century.

2. The Nahuatl language of the Aztecs. — adj. also Az·tec·an (-těk'ən) Of or relating to the Aztecs or their language, culture, or empire. [Spanish Azteca, from Nahuatl Aztecatl: aztatl-, cranes + lan-, near + ztecatl, place.]

A·zue·la (ə-zwā'lə), Mariano. 1873-1952. Mexican novelist whose work chronicles the social and political conflicts of the Mexican Revolution and its aftermath.

a·zu·ki bean (ə-zōō'kē bēn) n. Variant of adzuki bean.

az·ure (äzh'ər) n. 1. Abbr. az. a. Color. A light purplish blue. b. Heraldry. The color blue. 2. The blue sky. [Middle English, from Old French azur, from Medieval Latin azura, from Arabic al-lāzaward, from Persian lājvard, lapis lazuli.]

az·ur·ite (äzh'ə-rīt') n. An azure blue vitreous mineral of basic copper carbonate, $\text{Cu}_3(\text{CO}_3)_2(\text{OH})_2$, used as a copper ore and as a gemstone. Also called chessylite a·zy·gous (ā-zī'gəs) adj. Anatomy. Occurring singly; not one of a pair, as a vein or muscle.

A·zu·sa (ə-zōō'sə) A city of southern California east of Pasadena. It is a residential and industrial center in a citrus-growing region. Population, 41,333.

b¹ (bē) or B (bē) n. pl. b's or B's. 1. The second letter of the modern English alphabet. 2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter b. 3. The second in a series. 4. Music. a. The seventh tone in the scale of C major or the second tone in the relative minor scale. b. A key or scale in which B is the tonic. c. A written or printed note representing this tone. d. A string, key, or pipe tuned to the pitch of this tone. 5. A human blood type of the ABO system. 6. The second best or second highest in quality or rank: a mark of B on an English theme.

b² abbr. Physics. 1. Barn. 2. Or B. Bel. 3. Bottom quark.

B¹ 1. The symbol for the element boron. 2. The symbol for magnetic flux density.

B² or b abbr. 1. Baryon number. 2. Games. Bishop.

b. or B. abbr. 1. Base. 2. Music. Basso. 3. Bay. 4. Billion. 5. Bolivar. 6. Book. 7. Born. 8. Breadth. 9. Brother.

B. abbr. 1. Bachelor. 2. Bacillus. 3. Baumé scale. 4. Bible. 5. Brotherhood.

Ba The symbol for the element barium.

B.A. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Arts. 2. British Academy.

baa (bǎ, bā) v. intr. baaed, baa-ing, baas. To make a bleating sound, as a sheep or goat. — n. The bleat of a sheep or goat. [Imitative.]

Baa-de (bǎ'də), Walter. 1893-1960. German-born American astronomer whose research led to more accurate measurement of interstellar distances.

Ba-al (bā'əl) n. pl. Ba-als or Ba-al-im (-ə-līm). 1. Any of various local fertility and nature gods of the ancient Semitic peoples considered to be false idols by the Hebrews. 2. Often baal. A false god or idol. [Hebrew ba'al, lord, Baal.]

Baal-bek (bāl'bək', bā'əl-) Formerly He-li-op-o-lis (hē'lē-öp'ə-līs). A town of eastern Lebanon northeast of Beirut. It is the site of an ancient Phoenician city probably devoted to the worship of Baal and is now noted for its extensive Roman ruins. Population, 24,000.

Baal Shem Tov also Baal Shem Tob (bāl' shēm' tōv'), Originally Israel ben Eliezer. 1700?-1760. Polish-born Jewish religious leader and mystic who founded Hasidism.

Bab (bāb, bāb), the. Title of Ali Mohammad of Shiraz. 1819?-1850. Persian founder of Babism, a 19th-century religion that forbade polygamy, begging, trading in slaves, and the use of alcohol or drugs.

Bab. abbr. Babylonian.

ba-ba (bā'bə) n. A leavened rum cake, usually made with raisins. [French, from Polish baba, old woman.]

baba au rhum (bā'bā ō rŭm') n. Baba. [French : baba, baba + au, with the + rhum, rum.]

Ba-bar (bā'bər) See Baber.

- ba-bas-su (bă'bə-sōō') n. A Brazilian feather-leaved palm (Orbignya barbosiana) having hard-shelled fruits whose seeds yield an edible vegetable oil. [Portuguese babaçú, from Tupi babassú, oauaussu.]
- Bab-bage (băb'ĭj), Charles. 1792-1871. British mathematician and inventor of an analytical machine based on principles similar to those used in modern digital computers.
- Bab-bitt (băb'ĭt) n. A member of the middle class whose attachment to its business and social ideals is such as to make that person a model of narrow-mindedness and self-satisfaction. [After George F. Babbitt, the main character in the novel Babbitt by Sinclair Lewis.] — Bab'bitt-ry n.
- Bab-bitt (băb'ĭt), Irving. 1865-1933. American humanist and scholar whose New Humanism movement sought to revive interest in classical virtues in literary criticism.
- Bab-bitt (băb'ĭt), Isaac. 1799-1862. American inventor who patented (1839) a bearing housing lined with an alloy of tin, antimony, and copper now known as babbitt metal.
- Bab-bitt (băb'ĭt), Milton Byron. Born 1916. American composer whose works, including Vision and Prayer (1961), for soprano and synthesizer, combine serial music and electronic effects.
- bab-bitt metal (băb'ĭt mēt'1) n. Any of several soft, silvery antifriction alloys composed of tin usually with small amounts of copper and antimony. [After Isaac BABBITT.]
- bab-ble (băb'əl) v. bab-bled, bab-bling, bab-bles. — v. intr. 1. To utter a meaningless confusion of words or sounds. 2. To talk foolishly or idly; chatter: "In 1977 [he] was thought of as crazy because he was babbling about supply side" (Newt Gingrich). 3. To make a continuous low, murmuring sound, as flowing water. — v. tr. 1. To utter rapidly and indistinctly. 2. To blurt out impulsively; disclose without careful consideration. — n. 1. Inarticulate or meaningless talk or sounds. 2. Idle talk; prattle. 3. A continuous low, murmuring sound. [Middle English babelen.]
- bab-bler (băb'lər) n. 1. One that babbles: a babbler of half-truths. 2. A tape recording of several dozen voices talking at the same time, used as an antiebugging device to make private or secret conversations inaudible to eavesdroppers.
- Bab-cock (băb'kۆk'), Stephen Moulton. 1843-1931. American agricultural chemist who developed the Babcock test for determining the fat content of milk.
- babe (bāb) n. 1. A baby; an infant. 2. An innocent or naive person. 3. Slang. A young woman. [Middle English.]
- ba-bel also Ba-bel (băb'əl, bā'bəl) n. 1. A confusion of sounds or voices. See Synonyms at noise. 2. A scene of noise and confusion. [After Babel.]

Ba·bel (bā' bəl, bǎb' əl) In the Old Testament, a city (now thought to be Babylon) in Shinar where construction of a heaven-reaching tower was interrupted when the builders became unable to understand one another's language.

Bab el Man·deb (bǎb' əl mǎn' dəb) A strategically important strait, 27.4 km (17 mi) wide, between the Arabian Peninsula and eastern Africa. It links the Red Sea with the Gulf of Aden.

Ba·ben·berg (bǎ' bən· bûrg', -bĕrk') A Franconian dynasty ruling the margraviate (976-1156) and duchy (1156-1246) of Austria.

Ba·ber also Ba·bar or Ba·bur (bǎ' bər), Originally Zahir ud-Din Mohammed. 1483-1530. Mongol conqueror of India who made periodic raids into India (1519-1524), captured Delhi and Agra (1526), and founded the Mogul dynasty.

ba·be·sia (bə· bē' zhə) n. A genus of parasitic sporozoans of the family Babesiidae that infect the red blood cells of human beings and of animals such as dogs, cattle, and sheep. Also called piroplasm [New Latin Babesia, genus name, after Victor Babeş (1854-1926), Romanian bacteriologist.]

ba·be·si·o·sis (bə· bē' zē· ō' sīs) also bab·e·si·a·sis (bǎb' ĭ· zī' ə· sīs) n. 1. A tick-borne protozoan infection of animals, such as Texas fever of cattle, that is caused by species of Babesia. 2. A human protozoan disease of red blood cells caused by Babesia species that is transmitted by the northern deer tick, characterized by fever, malaise, and hemolytic anemia, and prevalent on the coastal islands of the northeast United States. Also called piroplasmosis

Ba·beuf (bə· bœf'), François Noël. 1760-1797. French communist and revolutionary who was guillotined after his plot to overthrow the government was exposed.

Ba·bi·a Gó·ra (bǎ' bē· ə gōr' ə) A peak, 1,726 m (5,659 ft) high, of the Beskids in the West Beskids on the border between Poland and Slovakia. It is the highest elevation in the range.

Ba·bian Jiang (bǎ' byǎn' jyǎng') See Black River (sense 1).

Ba·bin·ski reflex (bə· bĭn' skē rē' flĕks') also Ba·bin·ski's reflex (-skĕz) n. An extension of the great toe, sometimes with fanning of the other toes, in response to stroking of the sole of the foot. It is a normal reflex in infants, but it is usually associated with a disturbance of the pyramidal tract in children and adults. Also called Babinski sign, Babinski's sign. [After Joseph François Felix Babinski (1857-1932), French neurologist.]

bab·i·ru·sa also bab·i·rus·sa or bab·i·rous·sa (bǎb' ə· rōō' sə, bǎ' bə·) n. A nocturnal, forest-dwelling wild pig (Babyrousa babyrussa) of the East Indies, having long, upward-curving tusks in the male. [Malay bābīrūsa : bābī, hog + rūsa, deer.]

Ba·bi Yar (bǎ' bē yār', bǎ' byē) A ravine outside Kiev in north-central Ukraine where the Jews of the city were killed by German troops in 1941. The massacre is commemorated in Yevgeny Yevtushenko's 1961 poem "Babi Yar."

bab·ka (băb'kə) n. A coffee cake flavored with orange rind, rum, almonds, and raisins. [Polish, diminutive of baba, old woman.]

ba·boo (bă'bōō) n. Variant of babu.

ba·boon (bă-bōōn') n. 1. Any of several large, terrestrial African and Asian monkeys of the family Cercopithecidae, especially of the genus Papio or Chaeropithecus and related genera, characterized by an elongated, doglike muzzle, a short tail, and bare calluses on the buttocks. 2. Slang. A brutish person; a boor. [Middle English babewin, from Old French babuin, gaping figure, gargoyle, baboon, perhaps blend of Old French babine, muzzle, and babau, grimace.]

—ba·boon'er·y n. —ba·boon'ish adj.

Bab·son (băb'sən), Roger Ward. 1875-1967. American financial statistician who in September 1929 forecast a sharp drop in stock prices, thereby correctly predicting the stock market crash of October 1929.

ba·bu also ba·boo (bă'bōō) n. 1. Used as a Hindi courtesy title for a man, equivalent to Mr. 2. a. A Hindu clerk who is literate in English. b. Offensive. A native of India who has acquired some superficial education in English. [Hindi bābū, father.]

ba·bul (bə-bōōl') n. A tropical African tree (Acacia nilotica) that yields a gum similar to gum arabic and has a bark used in tanning. [Persian bābul.]

Ba·bur (bă'bər) See Baber.

ba·bush·ka (bə-bōōsh'kə) n. A woman's head scarf, folded triangularly and worn tied under the chin. [Russian, grandmother, diminutive of baba, old woman.]

Ba·bu·yan Islands (bă'bōō-yän' ī'ləndz) An island group of the Philippines separated from the northern coast of Luzon by the narrow Babuyan Channel. The group comprises 24 islands, including Babuyan Island in the northeast.

ba·by (bă'bē) n. pl. ba·bies. 1. a. A very young child; an infant. b. The youngest member of a family or group. c. A very young animal. 2. An adult or a young person who behaves in an infantile way. 3. Slang. A girl or young woman. 4. Slang. An object of personal concern or interest: Keeping the boat in good repair is your baby. — adj. bab·i·er, bab·iest. 1. Of or having to do with a baby. 2. Infantile or childish. 3. Small in comparison with others of the same kind: baby vegetables. — v. tr. ba·bied, ba·by·ing, ba·bies. To treat with often inordinate indulgence and solicitude. See Synonyms at pamper. [Middle English.] —ba'by·hood' n. —ba'by·ish adj.

baby blue (bă'bē blōō) n. Color. A very light to very pale greenish or purplish blue.

ba·by·blue·eyes (bă'bē-blōō'īz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). An annual plant (Nemophila menziesii), native to California and having showy flowers that typically are bright blue with white centers.

baby bond (bă'bē bōōnd) n. A bond issued in an amount less than $1,000.

baby boom (bā'bē bōom) n. A sudden, large increase in the birthrate, especially the one in the United States after World War II from 1947 through 1961. — ba/by-boom' (bā'bē-bōom') adj.

ba-by boom-er also ba-by-boom-er (bā'bē-bōō'mər) n. A member of a baby-boom generation.

baby bust (bā'bē būst) n. A sudden decline in the birthrate.

baby carriage (bā'bē kār'ij) n. A four-wheeled carriage, often with a hood that folds back and having a handle for pushing, used for wheeling an infant about.

baby grand (bā'bē gränd) n. Music. A small grand piano about 1.5 meters (5 feet) long.

Bab·y·lon¹ (băb'ə-lən, -lŏn') 1. The capital of ancient Babylonia in Mesopotamia on the Euphrates River. Established as capital c. 1750 B.C. and rebuilt in regal splendor by Nebuchadnezzar II after its destruction (c. 689 B.C.) by the Assyrians, Babylon was the site of the Hanging Gardens, one of the Seven Wonders of the World. 2. A community of southeast New York on the southwest coast of Long Island. It is mainly residential. Population, 12,388.

Bab·y·lon² (băb'ə-lən, -lŏn') n. 1. A city or place of great luxury, sensuality, and often vice and corruption. 2. A place of captivity or exile.

Bab·y·lo·ni·a (băb'ə-lŏ'nē-ə, -lŏn'yə) An ancient empire of Mesopotamia in the Euphrates River valley. It flourished under Hammurabi and Nebuchadnezzar II but declined after 562 B.C. and fell to the Persians in 539.

Bab·y·lo·ni·an (băb'ə-lŏ'nē-ən) adj. Abbr. Bab. 1. Of or relating to Babylonia or Babylon or their people, culture, or language. 2. Characterized by a luxurious, pleasure-seeking, and often immoral way of life. — n. Abbr. Bab. 1. A native or inhabitant of Babylon or Babylonia. 2. The form of Akkadian used in Babylonia.

ba-by's breath (bā'bēz brēth) n. Any of several Eurasian plants of the genus Gypsophila, such as G. paniculata, having numerous small, white flowers in profusely branched panicles. It is especially popular in flower arrangements and bouquets.

ba-by-sit (bā'bē-sīt') v. ba-by--sat (-săt'), ba-by--sit-ting, ba-by--sits. — v. intr. To take care of someone or something needing attention or guidance. — v. tr. To take care of: baby-sat the children; baby-sat the Soviet defector; baby-sit a breaking news story.

WORD HISTORY: The verb baby-sit is of interest to parents, children, and linguists. It is interesting to the last group because it illustrates one of two types of the linguistic process called back-formation. The first type is based on misunderstanding, as in the case of our word pea. In Middle English the ancestor of pea had plural forms, such as pese and pease, that were identical with singular forms.

In other words, the s was part of the word, not a plural ending. But around the beginning of the 17th century people began to interpret the sound represented by s as a plural ending, and a new singular, spelled pea in Modern English, was developed. On the other hand, in the case of baby-sit, first recorded in 1947, and baby sitter, first recorded in 1937, no misunderstanding is involved. The agent noun baby sitter with its -er suffix could have been derived from the verb baby-sit, as diver was from dive, but the evidence seems to show that the pattern was reversed, and the agent noun preceded the verb from which it would normally have been derived.

baby sitter (bā' bē sīt' ər) n. 1. A person engaged to care for one or more children when the parents or guardians are not at home. 2. A person who cares for or watches someone or something that needs constant attention and guidance.

baby's tears also ba-by-tears (bā' bē-tīrz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb.)
An evergreen, mat-forming perennial (Soleirolia soleirolii) native to Corsica and Sardinia, grown as an ornamental for its numerous tiny, roundish leaves.

baby tooth (bā' bē tōōth) n. See milk tooth.

BAC abbr. Blood alcohol concentration.

Ba-ca-bal (bä' kä-bôl') A city of northeast Brazil south-southwest of São Luís. It is a trade center in an agricultural area. Population, 111,753.

Ba-cău (bə-kou') A city of eastern Romania north-northeast of Bucharest. It is an industrial center in an oil-producing region. Population, 165,655.

bac-ca-lau-re-ate (băk' ə-lôr' ē-īt) n. 1. See bachelor's degree. 2. A farewell address in the form of a sermon delivered to a graduating class. [Medieval Latin baccalaureātus (influenced by bacca, berry + laureātus, crowned with laurel), from baccalārius, bachelor. See BACHELOR.]

bac-ca-rat (bä' kə-rä', băk' ə-) n. Games. A card game in which the winner is the player who holds two or three cards totaling closest to nine. [French baccara, from Provençal.]

bac-cate (băk' āt') adj. 1. Resembling a berry in texture or form; berrylike.
2. Bearing berries. [From Latin bacca, berry.]

Bac-chaē (băk' ē) pl.n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The priestesses and women followers of Bacchus. [Latin, from Greek Bakkhai, pl. of Bakkhē, female worshiper of Bacchus, from Bakkhos, Bacchus.]

bac-cha-nal (băk' ə-năl', -näl', băk' ə-nəl) n. 1. A participant in the Bacchanalia. 2. Often bacchanals. The Bacchanalia. 3. A drunken or riotous celebration. 4. A reveler. — adj. Of, relating to, or typical of the worship of Bacchus. [Latin bacchānālis, of Bacchus, probably from Bacchānālia, Bacchanalia, from Bacchus, Bacchus, from Greek Bakkhos.]

Bac-cha-na-lia (băk' ə-nāl' yə, -nāl' ē-ə) n. pl. Bacchanalia. 1. The ancient Roman festival in honor of Bacchus. 2. bacchanalia. A riotous, boisterous, or drunken festivity; a revel. [Latin, from Bacchus, Bacchus, from Greek Bakkhos.]

—Bac'cha-na'lian adj. & n.

bac·chant (bə-kānt', -kānt', bāk'ənt) n. pl. bac·chants or bac·chan·tes (bə-kān'tēz, -kän'-, -kānts', -kānts'). 1. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. A priest or votary of Bacchus. 2. A boisterous reveler. [Latin bacchāns, bacchant-present participle of bacchārī, to celebrate the festival of Bacchus, from Bacchus, Bacchus, from Greek Bakkhos.] —bac·chan·tic (-kān'tik) adj.

bac·chan·te (bə-kān'tē, -kän'-, -kānt', -kānt') n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. A priestess or female votary of Bacchus. [French, from Latin bacchāns, bacchant-. See BACCHANT.]

bac·chan·tes (bə-kān'tēz, -kän'-, -kānts', -kānts') n. A plural of bacchant.

Bac·chic (bāk'ik) adj. 1. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. Of or relating to Bacchus. 2. bacchic. Drunken and carousing; bacchanalian.

Bac·chus (bāk'əs) n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. See Dionysus.

bach also batch (bäch) v. intr. bached also batched, bach·ing also batch·ing, bach·es also batch·es. Informal. To live alone and keep house as a bachelor. [Short for BACHELOR.] —bach n.

Bach (bäKH, bāk), Johann Sebastian. 1685-1750. German composer and organist of the late baroque period. Among the greatest composers in history, he wrote more than 200 cantatas, the Saint Matthew Passion (1729), the Mass in B minor (1733-1738), orchestral works such as the the six Brandenburg Concertos, and numerous works for organ, harpsichord, other solo instruments, and chamber ensembles. Four of his children became noted musicians: Wilhelm Friedemann Bach (1710-1784); Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach (1714-1788), an important figure in the development of the symphony; Johann Christoph Friedrich Bach (1732-1795); and Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782).

bach·e·lor (bäch'ə-lər, bäch'lər) n. Abbr. B. 1. An unmarried man. 2. A person who has completed the undergraduate curriculum of a college or university and holds a bachelor's degree. 3. A male animal that does not mate during the breeding season, especially a young male fur seal kept from the breeding territory by older males. 4. A young knight in the service of another knight in feudal times. [Middle English bachelor, squire, youth, bachelor, from Old French, from Medieval Latin baccalārius, tenant farmer, perhaps of Celtic origin.]

—back'e·lor·dom, bach'e·lor·hood', bach'e·lor·ship' n.

bach·e·lor's (bäch'ə-lərz, bäch'lərz) n. A bachelor's degree.

bachelor's but·ton (bäch'ə-lərz büt'n) n. pl. bachelor's buttons. 1. See cornflower. 2. Any of several plants, that have buttonlike flowers or flower heads.

bachelor's degree (bäch'ə-lərz dī-grē') n. An academic degree conferred by a college or university upon those who complete the undergraduate curriculum. Also called baccalaureate bac·il·lar·y (bäs'ə-lēr'ē, bə-sīl'ə-rē) also ba·cil·lar (bə-sīl'ər, bäs'ə-lər) adj.

1. Shaped like a rod or rods.
2. a. Consisting of small rods or rodlike structures.
- b. Caused by, relating to, or resembling bacilli: bacillary dysentery. [From BACILLUS.]

ba·cil·lus (bə-sīl'əs) n. pl. ba·cil·li (-sīl'ī'). Abbr. B. 1. Any of various rod-shaped, spore-forming, aerobic bacteria of the genus Bacillus that often occur in chains and include Bacillus anthracis, the causative agent of anthrax. 2. Any of various bacteria, especially a rod-shaped bacterium. [Late Latin, diminutive of Latin baculum, rod. See bak- in Appendix.]

Ba·cil·lus Calmette-Guérin vaccine (bə-sīl'əs käl-mēt'gā-rän' käl-mēt'gā-rän') n. Abbr. BCG A preparation consisting of attenuated human tubercle bacilli that is used for immunization against tuberculosis. [After Albert L.C. Calmette (1863-1933) and Camille Guérin (1872-1961), French bacteriologists.]

bacillus thu·rin·gi·en·sis (bə-sīl'əs thoō-rīn'jē-ən'sis) n. BT. [After Thuringia.]

bac·i·tra·cin (bäs'ī-trā'sin) n. A polypeptide antibiotic obtained from a strain of a bacterium (Bacillus subtilis) and used as a topical ointment in the treatment of certain bacterial infections, especially those caused by cocci. [BACI(LLUS) + Margaret Tracy, an American child in whose blood it was first isolated + -IN.]

back¹ (bāk) n. 1. a. The posterior portion of the trunk of the human body between the neck and the pelvis; the dorsum. b. The analogous dorsal region in other animals. 2. The backbone or spine. 3. The part or area farthest from the front. 4. The part opposite to or behind that adapted for view or use: the back of the hand; wrote on the back of the photograph. 5. The reverse side, as of a coin. 6. A part that supports or strengthens from the rear: the back of a couch. 7. a. The part of a book where the pages are stitched or glued together into the binding. b. The binding itself. 8. Sports. a. A player who takes a position behind the front line of other players in certain games, such as football. b. This playing position. — v. backed, back-ing, backs. — v. tr. 1. To cause to move backward or in a reverse direction: Back the car up ten feet and then make the turn. 2. To furnish or strengthen with a back or backing. 3. To provide with financial or spiritual help; support or sustain: backed our candidate with a $1,000-a-plate dinner. See Synonyms at support. 4. To bet or wager on. 5. To adduce evidence in support of; substantiate: backed the argument with facts. 6. To form the back or background of: Snowcapped mountains back the village. — v. intr. 1. To move backward. 2. To shift to a counterclockwise direction. Used of the wind. — adj. 1. Located or placed in the rear: Deliveries should be made at the back entrance. 2. Distant from a center of activity; remote. 3. Of a past date; not current: a back issue of a periodical. 4. Being owed or due from an earlier time; in arrears: back pay. 5. Being in a backward direction. 6. Linguistics. Pronounced with the back of the tongue, as oo in cool. Used of vowels. — adv. 1. At, to, or toward the rear or back; backward. 2. In, to, or toward a former location: went back for the class reunion. 3. In, to, or toward a former condition. 4. In, to, or toward a past time. 5. In reserve or concealment. 6. In check or under restraint: Barriers held the crowd back. 7. In reply or return. —phrasal verbs. back away. To withdraw from a position; retreat. back down. To withdraw from a position, opinion, or commitment. back off. To retreat or draw away. back out. 4. To withdraw from (an enterprise or a plan) before completion. 5. To fail to keep a commitment or promise. back up. 6. To cause to accumulate or undergo accumulation: The accident backed the traffic up for blocks. Traffic backed up in the tunnel. 7. Computer Science. To make a backup of (a program or file). —idiom. back and fill. 1. Nautical. To maneuver a vessel in a narrow channel by adjusting the sails so as to let the wind in and out of them in alteration. 2. To vacillate in one's actions or decisions. [Middle English bak, from Old English bæc.] —back'less adj.

USAGE NOTE: The expression back of is an informal variant of in back of and is best avoided in writing: There was a small stable in back of (not simply back of) the house.

back² (băk) n. A shallow vat or tub used chiefly by brewers. [Dutch bak, from French bac, from Old French, boat, from Vulgar Latin baccus*, vessel, probably of Celtic origin.]

back·ache (băk'āk') n. Discomfort or a pain in the region of the back or spine.

back and forth (băk ənd fôrth) adv. 1. Backward and forward; to and fro.

2. From side to side. —back'-and-forth' (băk'än-fôrth', -fôrth') n. & adj.

Back Bay (băk bā) An area of Boston, Massachusetts, largely consisting of filled-in land reclaimed from mud flats after the 1850's. It is noted for its many residences, long thoroughfares, and fine shops.

back·beat (băk'bēt') n. Music. A loud, steady, rhythmic beat characteristic of rock music. [BACK(GROUND) + BEAT.] back·bench (băk'bēnch') n. 1. Chiefly British. The rear benches in the House of Commons where junior members of Parliament sit behind government office-holders and their counterparts in the opposition party. 2. New members of Congress considered as a group: "a revolt of the backbench fueled by a powerful lobbying campaign" (Washington Post). —back-bench'er n.

back·bite (băk'bīt') v. back·bit (-bīt'), back·bit·ten (-bīt'n), back·bit·ing, back·bites. — v. tr. To speak spitefully or slanderously about (another). — v. intr. To speak spitefully or slanderously about a person. —back'bit'er n.

back·board (băk'bôrd', -bôrd') n. 1. a. A board placed under or behind something to provide firmness or support. b. A board placed beneath the body of a person with an injury to the neck or back, used especially in transporting the person in such a way as to avoid further injury. 2. Basketball. The elevated vertical board from which the basket projects.

back·bone (băk'bö'n') n. 1. The vertebrate spine or spinal column.

2. Something, such as the keel of a ship, that resembles a backbone in appearance or position. 3. A main support or major sustaining factor: the backbone of a thesis. 4. Strength of character; determination: displayed grit and backbone in facing adversity. —back'boned' adj.

back·break·ing (băk'brā'kīng) adj. Demanding great exertion, especially physical exertion; arduous and exhausting. —back'break'er n.

back burner (băk bū'r'nər) n. Informal. A position of relatively little importance: put the issue of punctuation on the editorial back burner.

back channel (băk chă'n'əl) n. A means by which actions, especially in government and diplomacy, are carried out secretly rather than through regular avenues of communication. —back'-chan'nel (băk'chă'n'əl) adj. & v.

back·cloth (băk'klôth, -klôth) n. See backdrop (n., sense 1).

back·coun·try (băk'kūn'trē) n. A sparsely inhabited rural region.

back·court (băk'kôrt', -kôrt') n. 1. Sports. a. The part of a court between the service line and the base line in tennis and other net games. b. The part of the playing area farthest from the goal or target wall in certain court games, such as handball. 2. Basketball. a. The half of the court that a team defends. b. The part of a team that forms the two guard positions. c. The players in these positions.

back·cross (băk'krôs', -krôs') v. tr. back·crossed, back·cross·ing, back·cross·es. To cross (a hybrid) with one of its parents, or with an individual genetically identical to one of its parents. — n. 1. The act of making such a cross. 2. An individual resulting from such a cross. —back'cross' n.

back dive (băk dīv) n. Sports. A dive performed from a board or platform with the diver's back to the water.

back·door (băk'dôr', -dôr') adj. Secret or surreptitious; clandestine: a back-door romance. —back'door' adv.

back·drop (băk'dröp') n. 1. A painted curtain hung at the back of a stage set. Also called backcloth 2. The setting, as of a historical event; the background.

backed (băkt) adj. Having or furnished with a back or backing. Often used in combination: a low-backed chair; a high-backed sofa.

back·er (băk'ər) n. 1. One that backs a person, a group, or an enterprise: financial backers of a ballet company. 2. A person who bets on a contestant. 3. A worker who provides or works with backs or backing.

back·field (băk'fēld') n. 1. Football. a. The players stationed behind the line of scrimmage. b. The positions filled by these players. c. The area in which these players line up. 2. Sports. The primarily defensive players in soccer, field hockey, and rugby.

back·fire (băk'fir') n. 1. An explosion of prematurely ignited fuel or of unburned exhaust gases in an internal-combustion engine. 2. The backward escape of gases or cartridge fragments when a gun is fired. 3. Another fire started to extinguish or control an oncoming fire, as in a forest, by burning an area in the path of the oncoming flames. — v. intr. back·fired, back·fir·ing, back·fires. 1. To explode in the manner of or make the sound of a backfire. 2. To start or use a backfire in extinguishing or controlling a forest fire. 3. To produce an unexpected, undesired result.

back·for·ma·tion or back formation (băk'fôr-mă'shən) n. 1. A new word created by removing an affix from an already existing word, as vacuum clean from vacuum cleaner, or by removing what is mistakenly thought to be an affix, as pea from the earlier English plural pease. 2. The process of forming words in this way.

back·gam·mon (băk'găm'ən) n. Games. A board game for two persons, played with pieces whose moves are determined by throws of dice. [BACK¹ + GAMMON¹.]

back·ground (băk'ground') n. Abbr. bg., bkgd. 1. The ground or scenery located behind something. 2. a. The part of a pictorial representation that appears as if it were in the distance and that provides relief for the principal objects in the foreground. b. The general scene or surface against which designs, patterns, or figures are represented or viewed. 3. A position or an area of relative inconspicuousness or unimportance. 4. The circumstances and events surrounding or leading up to an event or occurrence. 5. A person's experience, training, and education: Her background in the arts is impressive. 6. Subdued music played especially as an accompaniment to dialogue in a dramatic performance. 7. Sound or radiation present at a relatively constant low level at a specific location. —back'ground' v.

back·ground·er (băk'groun'dər) n. An informal meeting at which an official provides background information, as to news reporters, about a governmental issue: "In a White House backgrounder on July 18 I had sketched the Administration's philosophy for post-Vietnam Asia" (Henry A. Kissinger).

back·hand (băk'hănd') n. 1. Sports. A stroke or motion, as of a racket, made with the back of the hand facing outward and the arm moving forward. 2. Handwriting characterized by letters that slant to the left. — adj. Backhanded. — adv. With a backhanded stroke or motion. — v. tr.

back·hand·ed, back·hand·ing, back·hands. Sports. To perform, catch, or hit with a backhand: She backhanded the ball crosscourt.

back·hand·ed (băk'hănd'dīd) adj. 1. Sports. Made with or using a backhand: a backhanded shot into the opponent's court. 2. Oblique or roundabout: a backhanded compliment. —back'hand'ed·ly adv. —back'hand'ed·ness n.

back-hoe (băk'hō') n. An excavator whose bucket is rigidly attached to a hinged pole on the boom and is drawn backward to the machine when in operation. —back'hoe' v.

back-ing (băk'ŋ) n. 1. Something forming a back: the backing of a carpet. 2. a. Support or aid: financial backing. b. Approval or endorsement: The President has backing from the farm belt.

back-lash (băk'lăsh') n. 1. A sudden or violent backward whipping motion. 2. An antagonistic reaction to an earlier action: "White backlash increases as the pressure for change in South Africa mounts" (Masipula Sithole). 3. A snarl formed in the part of a fishing line that is wound around the reel. 4. The play resulting from loose connections between gears or other mechanical elements. —back-lash' v.

back-light (băk'līt') n. A type of spotlight, used in photography, that illuminates a subject from behind. — v. tr. back-light-ed or back-lit (-līt'), back-light-ing, back-lights. To light (a subject, for example), from behind: "Desert sunshine backlights her chestnut curls and moon-white skin with an otherworldly halo" (Los Angeles Times).

back-list (băk'līs't') n. A publisher's list of older titles kept in print. —back-list' v.

back-lit (băk'līt') v. A past tense and a past participle of backlight.

back-log (băk'lŏg', -lŏg') n. 1. A reserve supply or source. 2. An accumulation, especially of unfinished work or unfilled orders. 3. A large log at the back of a fire in a fireplace. — v. back-logged, back-log-ging, back-logs. — v. tr. To acquire (something) as a backlog. — v. intr. To become a backlog.

back matter (băk măt'ər) n. Material, such as an index or appendix, that follows the main body of a book. Also called end matter back mutation (băk myōō-tā'shən) n. A reversal process whereby a gene that has undergone mutation returns to its previous state.

back-pack (băk'păk') n. 1. A knapsack, often mounted on a lightweight frame, that is worn on a person's back, as to carry camping supplies. 2. A piece of equipment, often containing life-support devices, designed to be used while being carried on the back: a parachute in a backpack; an astronaut's backpack. — v. back-packed, back-pack-ing, back-packs. — v. intr. To hike while carrying a backpack. — v. tr. To carry in a backpack. —back'pack'er n. —back'pack'ing n.

back-ped-al (băk'pĕd'l) v. back-ped-aled or back-ped-alled, back-ped-al-ing or back-ped-al-ling, back-ped-als or back-ped-als. — v. intr. 1. Sports. To move backward, especially in boxing or football. 2. To retreat or withdraw: The senator later backpedaled on the issue. — v. tr. To pedal (a bicycle or other such vehicle) backward, in order to brake it.

back·pres·sure (băk'prĕsh'ər) n. Residual pressure opposing the free flow of a gas or liquid, as in a pipe or an exhaust system.

back·rest (băk'rĕst') n. A rest or support for the back.

Back River (băk rĭv'ər) A river, about 965 km (600 mi) long, of central Northwest Territories, Canada. It rises in several lakes and flows northeast and north to an inlet south of Boothia Peninsula.

back·room or back room (băk'rōom', -rōom') n. 1. A room located at the rear. 2. The meeting place used by an inconspicuous controlling group. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or taking place in a backroom: backroom card games. 2. Marked by the exercise of inconspicuous control and maneuvering: backroom politics.

back·rush (băk'rŭsh') n. The seaward return of water after the landward motion of a wave. Also called backwash back·saw (băk'sô') n. A saw that is reinforced by a metal band along its back edge.

back·scat·ter (băk'skăt'ər) n. The deflection of waves or particles by electromagnetic or nuclear forces through angles greater than 90° to the initial direction of travel. —back'scat'ter v.

back seat (băk sēt) n. 1. A seat in the back, especially of a vehicle. 2. A subordinate position, as in a group or hierarchy.

back-seat driver (băk'sēt' drĭ'vər) n. 1. A passenger who constantly advises, corrects, or nags the driver of a motor vehicle. 2. A person who persists in giving unsolicited advice.

back·set (băk'sĕt') n. 1. A setback or reversal. 2. An eddy or countercurrent in water.

back·shore (băk'shôr', -shōr') n. The part of a shore between the foreshore and the landward edge that is above high water except in the most severe storms.

back·side (băk'sĭd') n. Informal. The buttocks; the rump.

back·slap (băk'slăp') v. back·slapped, back·slap·ping, back·slaps. — v. intr. To demonstrate effusive goodwill. — v. tr. To demonstrate effusive goodwill toward (another or others). —back'slap'per n.

back·slide (băk'slĭd') v. intr. back·slid (-slĭd'), back·slid·ing, back·slides. To revert to sin or wrongdoing, especially in religious practice. —back'slid'er n.

back·space (băk'spās') v. intr. back·spaced, back·spac·ing, back·spac·es. To move the carriage of a typewriter or the cursor of a computer back one or more spaces by striking the key used for this purpose. — n. The key on a typewriter or computer keyboard used for backspacing.

back·spin (băk'spĭn') n. A spin that tends to retard, arrest, or reverse the linear motion of an object, especially of a ball.

back-stab (băk'stăb') v. tr. back-stabbed, back-stab-bing, back-stabs. To attack (someone) unfairly, especially in an underhanded, deceitful manner: "Some backstab each other and threaten to settle their differences with a punch" (Thomas Boswell). —back'stab'ber n.

back-stage (băk'stāj') adv. 1. In or toward the area behind the performing space in a theater, especially the area comprising the dressing rooms. 2. In secret; privately. — adj. (băk'stāj') 1. Of, relating to, occurring in, or situated behind the performing area of a theater. 2. Concealed from the public; private.

back-stairs (băk'stârz') also back-stair (-stâr') adj. Furtively carried on; clandestine: backstairs gossip.

back-stay (băk'stā') n. 1. Nautical. A rope or shroud extending from the top of a mast aft to a ship's side or stern to help support the mast. 2. A supporting device at or for the back of something else.

back-stitch (băk'stich') n. A stitch made by inserting the needle at the midpoint of a preceding stitch so that the stitches overlap by half lengths. —back-'stitch' v.

back-stop (băk'stöp') n. 1. Sports. A screen or fence used to prevent a ball from being thrown or hit far out of a playing area, as in baseball. 2. Baseball. A catcher. 3. Something that supports or bolsters. — v. tr. back-stopped, back-stop-ping, back-stops. 1. To serve as a backstop for. 2. a. To support or bolster: "The firm lacks a topflight strategic-consulting arm to backstop its technology gurus" (Alex Beam). b. To substitute for (another) in an emergency.

back-sto-ry (bak'stôr'ē, -stôr'ē) n. A prequel.

back-stretch (băk'strēch') n. Sports. The part of an oval racecourse farthest from the spectators and opposite the homestretch.

back-stroke (băk'strök') n. 1. Sports. A swimming stroke executed with the swimmer lying on his or her back. 2. A backhanded stroke or motion: a saw that cuts on the backstroke. —back'stroke' v. —back'strok'er n.

back-swept (băk'swēpt') adj. Swept, angled, or slanting backward: a back-swept hairstyle.

back-swim-mer (băk'swim'ər) n. Any of various aquatic bugs of the family Notonectidae that swim on their backs by means of broadened, oarlike hind legs.

back-sword (băk'sörd', -sörd') n. 1. A sword with only one cutting edge. 2. A one-handed fencing stick; a singlestick.

back talk (băk tōk) n. Insolent or impudent retorts.

back-to-back (băk'tə-băk') adj. Consecutive: back-to-back performances; back-to-back home runs.

back-track (băk'trăk') v. intr. back-tracked, back-track-ing, back-tracks. 1. To go back over the course by which one has come. 2. To reverse one's position or policy.

back-up (băk'ŭp') n. 1. a. A reserve or substitute. b. Computer Science. A copy of a program or file that is stored separately from the original. 2. a. Support or backing. b. Music. A background accompaniment, as for a performer. 3. An overflow or accumulation caused by clogging or by a stoppage: a backup in the sink; a backup of traffic at the drawbridge. — adj. Extra; standby: a backup pilot.

back-ward (băk'wərd) adj. 1. Directed or facing toward the back or rear. 2. Done or arranged in a manner or an order that is opposite to previous occurrence or normal use. 3. Unwilling to act; reluctant; shy. 4. Behind others in progress or development: The technology was backward, but the system worked. — adv. or back-wards (-wərdz) 1. To or toward the back or rear. 2. With the back leading. 3. In a reverse manner or order. 4. To, toward, or into the past. 5. Toward a worse or less advanced condition. — idiom. bend over backward (or lean over backward). To make an effort greater than is required. — back'ward·ly adv. — back'ward-ness n.

USAGE NOTE: The adverb may be spelled backward or backwards, and the forms are interchangeable: stepped backward; a mirror facing backwards. Only backward is an adjective: a backward view.

back-wash (băk'wōsh', -wōsh') n. 1. a. A backward flow of water, as from the action of oars. b. See backrush. 2. A backward flow of air, as from the propeller of an aircraft. 3. A result of an event; an aftermath.

back-wa-ter (băk'wō'tər, -wōt'ər) n. 1. a. Water held or pushed back by or as if by a dam or current. b. A body of water thus formed. 2. A place or situation regarded as isolated, stagnant, or backward: "The running of family fortunes has always been a backwater—albeit a lucrative one—of the investment management business" (Business Week). 3. A rowing or paddling stroke in which the oar or paddle is pushed forward, used to check a boat's forward motion or move it backward.

back-woods (băk'wōdz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. Heavily wooded, uncultivated, thinly settled areas. 2. An area that is far from population centers or that is held to be culturally backward. — back'woods'man n.

back yard also back-yard (băk'yărd') n. A yard at the rear of a house. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: backyard barbecues; backyard gossip.

Ba-co-lod (bă-kō'lôd') A city of northwest Negros Island in the south-central Philippines. It is a major port and processing center in a sugar-cane region. Population, 262,415.

ba-con (bă'kən) n. The salted and smoked meat from the back and sides of a pig. [Middle English, from Old French, of Germanic origin.]

Ba·con¹ (bā'kən), Francis First Baron Verulam and Viscount Saint Albans. 1561-1626. English philosopher, essayist, courtier, jurist, and statesman. His writings include The Advancement of Learning (1605) and the Novum Organum (1620), in which he proposed a theory of scientific knowledge based on observation and experiment that came to be known as the inductive method.

Ba·con² (bā'kən), Francis. 1909-1992. Irish-born British painter best known for his portraits in which subjects are distorted and invested with feelings of terror.

Ba·con (bā'kən), Nathaniel. 1647-1676. English-born American colonist who led Bacon's Rebellion (1676), in which a group of frontiersmen captured and burned Jamestown in an attempt to gain reforms and greater participation in the government of Virginia.

Ba·con (bā'kən), Roger. Known as "the Admirable Doctor." 1214?-1292. English friar, scientist, and philosopher whose Opus Majus (1267) argued that Christian studies should encompass the sciences.

Ba·co·ni·an (bā-kō'nē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the works or thought of the philosopher Francis Bacon. — n. 1. A follower of the doctrines of Francis Bacon. 2. One who believes in the Baconian theory.

Baconian theory (bā-kō'nē-ən thē'ə-rē) n. The theory that Francis Bacon was the author of the plays attributed to Shakespeare.

bact. abbr. Bacteria; bacterial.

bacter- pref. Variant of bacterio-.

bac·te·re·mi·a (băk'tə-rē'mē-ə) n. The presence of bacteria in the blood.

—bac'te·re'mic (-mīk) adj. —bac'te·re'mi·cal·ly adv.

bacteri- pref. Variant of bacterio-.

bac·te·ri·a (băk-tîr'ē-ə) n. Abbr. bact. Plural of bacterium.

bac·te·ri·al (băk-tîr'ē-əl) adj. Abbr. bact. Relating to or caused by bacteria: a bacterial enzyme; bacterial diseases. —bac'te'ri-al n. —bac'te'ri-al·ly adv.

bac·te·ri·cide (băk-tîr'ī-sīd') n. An agent that destroys bacteria.

—bac'te'ri·cid'al (-sīd'l) adj.

bac·ter·in (băk'tər-ĭn) n. A suspension of killed or weakened bacteria used as a vaccine.

bacterio- or bacteri- or bacter- pref. Bacteria; bacterial: bacteriology. [New Latin bacterium, bacterium. See BACTERIUM.]

bac·te·ri·o·cin (băk-tîr'ē-ə-sĭn') n. An antibacterial substance, such as colicin, produced by a strain of certain bacteria and harmful to another strain within the same family. [BACTERIO- + (COLI)CIN.]

bac·te·ri·o·gen·ic (băk-tîr'ē-ə-jĕn'ĭk) also bac·te·ri·og·e·nous (-ŏj'ə-nəs) adj. Caused by bacteria.

bac·te·ri·ol·o·gy (băk-tîr'ē-ŏl'ə-jĕ) n. Abbr. bacteriol. The study of bacteria, especially in relation to medicine and agriculture. —bac'te'ri·o·log'ic (-əlŏj'ŭk), bac-te'ri-o-log'i-cal adj. —bac-te'ri-o-log'i-cal-ly adv.

—bac-te'ri-ol'o-gist n.

bac-te-ri-ol-y-sis (băk-tîr'ē-ŏl'ŭ-sĭs) n. pl. bac-te-ri-ol-y-ses (-sēz'). Dissolution or destruction of bacteria. —bac-te'ri-o-lyt'ic (-ə-lĭt'ŭk) adj.

bac-te-ri-o-phage (băk-tîr'ē-ə-fāj') n. A virus that infects and lyses certain bacteria. —bac-te'ri-o-phag'ic (-fāj'ŭk) adj. —bac-te'ri-oph'a-gy (-ŏf'ə-jē) n.

bac-te-ri-o-rho-dop-sin (băk-tîr'ē-ŏ-rŏ-dŏp'sĭn) n. Microbiology. A purple pigment similar to rhodopsin occurring in the cell membranes of bacteria of the genus Halobacterium that converts sunlight directly into chemical energy.

bac-te-ri-os-co-py (băk-tîr'ē-ŏs'kə-pē) n. Microscopic examination of bacteria.

bac-te-ri-o-sta-sis (băk-tîr'ē-ŏ-stā'sĭs) n. pl. bac-te-ri-o-sta-ses (-sēz'). The inhibition of growth, but not the killing, of bacteria.

bac-te-ri-o-stat (băk-tîr'ē-ə-stăt') n. An agent, such as a chemical or biological material, that inhibits bacterial growth. —bac-te'ri-o-stat'ic adj.

bac-te-ri-um (băk-tîr'ē-əm) n. pl. bac-te-ri-a (-tîr'ē-ə). Any of the unicellular, prokaryotic microorganisms of the class Schizomycetes, which vary in terms of morphology, oxygen and nutritional requirements, and motility, and may be free-living, saprophytic, or pathogenic, the latter causing disease in plants or animals. [New Latin, from Greek baktērion, diminutive of baktron, rod. See bak- in Appendix.]

bac-te-ri-u-ri-a (băk-tîr'ē-yŏŏr'ē-ə) n. The presence of bacteria in urine.

bac-te-rize (băk'tə-rĭz') v. tr. bac-te-rized, bac-te-riz-ing, bac-te-riz-es. To change the composition of (something) by means of bacterial action.

—bac'te-ri-za'tion (-rĭ-zā'shən) n.

bac-te-roid (băk'tə-roid') adj. Resembling bacteria in appearance or action.

— n. Any of various structurally modified bacteria, such as those occurring on the root nodules of leguminous plants.

Bac-tra (băk'trə) See Balkh.

Bac-tri-a (băk'trē-ə) An ancient country of southwest Asia. It was an eastern province of the Persian Empire before its conquest by the Greeks in 328 B.C. The kingdom was destroyed c. 130 B.C. by nomadic tribes. —Bac'tri-an adj. & n.

Bactrian camel (băk'trē-ən kăm'əl) n. A two-humped camel (Camelus bactrianus) native to central and southwest Asia.

bac-u-li-form (băk'yə-lə-fŏrm', bə-kyŏŏ'lə-) adj. Rod-shaped. [Latin baculum, stick; see bak- in Appendix + -FORM.]

bad¹ (băd) adj. worse (wŭrs), worst (wŭrst). 1. Not achieving an adequate standard; poor: a bad recital. 2. Evil; sinful. 3. Disobedient or naughty: bad children. 4. Disagreeable, unpleasant, or disturbing: a bad piece of news.

5. Unfavorable: bad reviews for the play. 6. Not fresh; rotten or spoiled: bad meat. 7. Injurious in effect; detrimental: bad habits. 8. Not working properly; defective: a bad telephone connection. 9. Full of or exhibiting faults or errors: bad grammar. 10. Having no validity; void: passed bad checks. 11. Severe; intense: a bad cold. 12. a. Being in poor health or in pain: I feel bad today. b. Being in poor condition; diseased: bad lungs. 13. Sorry; regretful: She feels bad about how she treated you. 14. bad·der, bad·dest. Slang. Very good; great. — n. Something that is below standard or expectations, as of ethics or decency: weighing the good against the bad. — adv. Usage Problem. Badly. — idioms. in bad. Informal. In trouble or disfavor. not half bad (or not so bad). Informal. Reasonably good. [Middle English badde.] — bad'ness n.

SYNONYMS: bad, evil, wicked. These adjectives are compared as they mean departing from moral or ethical standards. Bad is the most inclusive; it applies to what is regarded as being unpleasant, offensive, or blameworthy: bad weather; a bad temper. “A bad book is as much of a labor to write as a good one” (Aldous Huxley). Evil, a stronger term, adds to bad connotations of depravity and corruptive influence: “The unconscious is not just evil by nature, it is also the source of the highest good” (Carl Jung). Wicked suggests conscious or premeditated moral transgression: “this wicked man Hitler, the repository and embodiment of many forms of soul-destroying hatred, this monstrous product of former wrongs and shame” (Winston S. Churchill).

USAGE NOTE: Bad is often used as an adverb in sentences such as The house was shaken up pretty bad or We need water bad. This usage is common in informal speech but is widely regarded as unacceptable in formal writing. In an earlier survey, the sentence His tooth ached so bad he could not sleep was unacceptable to 92 percent of the Usage Panel. • The use of badly with want, once considered incorrect, is now entirely acceptable: We wanted badly to be at the wedding. • The adverb badly is often used as the complement of verbs such as feel, as in I felt badly about the whole affair, where the choice of badly as opposed to bad may convey an implication that the distress is emotional, rather than physical. Although the origin of this usage is a matter of dispute, the usage is now widespread and is supported by analogy to the use of other adverbs with feel (as in We feel strongly about this issue). In an earlier survey, a majority of the Usage Panel accepted this use of badly in speech, though bad is less likely to occasion objections. • Badly is also used in some regions to mean “unwell,” as in He was looking badly after the accident (compare poorly, which is also used in this way). In an earlier survey, however, the usage was found unacceptable in formal writing by 75 percent of the Usage Panel.

bad² (băd) v. Archaic. A past tense of bid.

bad actor (băd äk'tər) n. One that consistently behaves or reacts poorly: “Perhaps... they will not be able to keep out the criminals and the bad actors who could end up harming the honest operators” (Economist). “Phosphorus is not the only bad actor in lake eutrophication” (Chemical Week).

Ba·da·joz (bä'də-hōz', -thä-hôth') A city of southwest Spain on the Guadiana River near the Portugal border. An ancient fortress city, it rose to prominence under the Moors as the seat (1022-1094) of a vast independent emirate. Population, 92,800.

Ba·da·lo·na (bä'də-lō'nə, -thä-lô'nä) A city of northeast Spain, an industrial suburb of Barcelona on the Mediterranean Sea. Population, 229,281.

bad·ass (bäd'äs') Vulgar Slang. n. A mean-tempered or belligerent person. — adj. Mean; belligerent.

bad blood (bäd blüd) n. Enmity or bitterness among individuals or groups of people.

bade (bäd, bād) v. A past tense of bid.

Ba·den (bäd'n) A historical region of southwest Germany. In the 1840's it was a center of the German liberal movement.

Ba·den-Ba·den (bäd'n-bäd'n) A city of southwest Germany in the Black Forest near the French border. Founded as a Roman garrison in the third century A.D., it has long been one of Europe's most fashionable spas. Population, 48,622.

Ba·den-Pow·ell (bäd'n-pō'əl), Sir Robert Stephenson Smyth. 1857-1941. British soldier who founded the Boy Scouts (1908) and with his sister Agnes (1858-1945) the Girl Guides (1910).

badge (bäj) n. 1. a. A device or emblem worn as an insignia of rank, office, or membership in an organization. b. An emblem given as an award or honor.

2. A characteristic mark. See Synonyms at sign. [Middle English bagge, from Norman French bage.] —badge v.

badger (bäj'ər) n. 1. a. Any of several carnivorous, burrowing mammals of the family Mustelidae, such as Meles meles of Eurasia or Taxidea taxus of North America, having short legs, long claws on the front feet, and a heavy, grizzled coat. b. The fur or hair of this mammal. c. Any of several similar mammals, such as the ratel. 2. Badger. Slang. A native or inhabitant of Wisconsin. — v. tr. badgered, badger-ing, badgers. To harry or pester persistently. See Synonyms at harass. [Perhaps from BADGE.]

WORD HISTORY: Our name for the Eurasian species of this mammal, which is noted for championing its burrow just like a knight of old, may come from the badger's knightly emblem. The creature's white head with a broad black stripe on each side of the snout may have brought to mind a badge, hence the name badger. One good piece of supporting evidence for this theory is that an earlier name for the animal was bauson, which comes from the Old French word baucenc, usually referring to a white patch on a horse and also meaning “badger.” Bauson is first recorded before 1375, badger in 1523.

Bad Hom·burg (bät' hōm'bûrg', -böörk') A city of west-central Germany at the foot of the Taunus Mountains near Frankfurt. It is a famous spa and resort. Population, 50,647.

bad·i·nage (bäd'n-äzh') n. Light, playful banter. [French, from badin, joker, from Provençal badar, to gape, from Latin batāre*.]

bad·lands (bäd'ländz') pl.n. Barren land characterized by roughly eroded ridges, peaks, and mesas.

Bad·lands also Bad Lands (bäd'ländz') A heavily eroded arid region of southwest South Dakota and northwest Nebraska. The Badlands National Monument in South Dakota was established in 1939 to protect the area's colorful rock formations and prehistoric fossils.

bad·ly (bäd'lē) adv. Usage Problem. 1. In a bad manner. 2. Very much; greatly. See Usage Note at bad¹.

bad·min·ton (bäd'mîn'tən) n. Sports. A sport played by volleying a shuttlecock back and forth over a high, narrow net by means of a light, long-handled racket. [After Badminton, the Duke of Beaufort's country seat in western England.]

bad·mouth or bad-mouth (bäd'mouth', -mouth') v. tr. bad-mouthed, bad-mouth-ing, bad-mouths. Slang. To criticize or disparage, often spitefully or unfairly; run down: "those cross-Atlantic aficionados who persistently idolize the British theater and bad-mouth Broadway" (Benedict Nightingale).

bad news (bäd nōōz) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb). Slang. One that is unpleasant or undesirable: A troublemaker within a group is always bad news.

Ba·do·glio (bə-dōl'yō), Pietro. 1871-1956. Italian general and politician. A military figure in both World Wars, he formed a nonfascist government after Mussolini's downfall (1943) and negotiated an armistice with the Allies (1944).

Bad Salz-uf-len (bät sālts'ōōf-lən, zälts'-) A city of northwest Germany southwest of Hanover. Founded in 1048, it is a health resort with thermal springs. Population, 50,494.

B.A.E. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Aeronautical Engineering. 2. Bachelor of Agricultural Engineering. 3. Bachelor of Architectural Engineering. 4. Bachelor of Art Education. 5. Bachelor of Arts in Education.

Bae·da (bē'də) See Bede.

bae·de·ker (bā'dī-kər) n. A guidebook to countries or a country. [After Karl BAEDEKER.]

Bae·de·ker (bā'dī-kər), Karl. 1801-1859. German publisher who established a series of guidebooks in 1829.

B.A.Ed. abbr. Bachelor of Arts in Education.

B.Ae.E. abbr. Bachelor of Aeronautical Engineering.

Baeke-land (bāk'lənd'), Leo Hendrik. 1863-1944. Belgian-born American chemist who developed the first plastic to harden permanently after heating.

bael (bēl, bāl, bīl) n. The round to pear-shaped, yellowish, edible fruit of a chiefly Indian tree (Aegle marmelos), used in southern Asia as a food and as a medicine to treat dysentery. [Hindi bēl; akin to Sanskrit bilva Tamil vilāvilavu.]

Baer (bâr), Karl Ernst von. 1792-1876. Estonian-born German naturalist and pioneer embryologist who discovered the mammalian egg (1827).

Bae-yer (bā'ēr), (Johann Friedrich Wilhelm) Adolf von. 1835-1917. German organic chemist. He won a 1905 Nobel Prize for research on organic dyes and compounds.

Ba-ez (bī-ēz', bī'ēz'), Joan. Born 1941. American folk singer and political activist.

Baf-fin (băf'fīn) A region of northeast Northwest Territories, Canada, including Baffin Island, the Queen Elizabeth and Parry islands, and Melville Peninsula.

Baf-fin (băf'fīn), William. 1584?-1622. English explorer who led several expeditions (1612-1616) in search of the Northwest Passage.

Baffin Bay (băf'fīn bā) An ice-clogged body of water between northeast Canada and Greenland. It connects with the Arctic Ocean to the north and west and with the Atlantic Ocean to the south by way of Davis Strait.

Baffin Island (băf'fīn ī'lənd) An island of northeast Northwest Territories, Canada, west of Greenland. It is the fifth-largest island in the world.

baf-fle (băf'fəl) v. tr. baf-fled, baf-fling, baf-fles. 1. To frustrate or check (a person) as by confusing or perplexing; stymie. 2. To impede the force or movement of. — n. 1. A usually static device that regulates the flow of a fluid or light. 2. A partition that prevents interference between sound waves in a loudspeaker. [Perhaps blend of Scottish Gaelic bauchle, to denounce, revile publicly, and French bafouer, to ridicule.] — baf-fle-ment n. — baf-fler n.

baf-fle-gab (băf'fəl-găb') n. Slang. Gobbledegook. [BAFFLE + GAB.]

bag (băg) n. Abbr. bg. 1. a. A container of flexible material, such as paper, plastic, or leather, that is used for carrying or storing items. b. A handbag; a purse. c. A piece of hand luggage, such as a suitcase or a satchel. d. An organic sac or pouch, such as the udder of a cow. 2. An object that resembles a pouch.

3. Nautical. The bulging part of a sail. 4. The amount that a bag can hold. 5. An amount of game taken or legally permitted to be taken. 6. Baseball. A base.

7. Slang. An area of interest or skill: Cooking is not my bag. 8. Slang. A woman considered ugly or unkempt. — v. bagged, bag-ging, bags. — v. tr. 1. To put into or as if into a bag. 2. To cause to bulge like a pouch. 3. To capture or kill as game: bagged six grouse. 4. Informal. To gain possession of; capture. — v. intr. 1. To hang loosely. 2. To swell out; bulge. — idioms. bag it. Slang. 1. To be a truant. 2. To cease discussion of an issue: Finally in disgust I told my debating opponent to bag it. in the bag. Assured of a successful outcome; virtually accomplished or won. [Middle English bagge, from Old Norse baggi.] —bag'ful n. —bag'ger n.

bag and baggage (bäg ənd bæg'ij) adv. 1. With all one's belongings. 2. To a complete degree; entirely.

ba-gasse (bə-gäs') n. The dry, fibrous residue remaining after the extraction of juice from the crushed stalks of sugar cane, used as a source of cellulose for some paper products. [French, from Spanish bagazo, dregs, from Latin bāca, berry.]

bag·a·telle (bäg'ə-těl') n. 1. An unimportant or insignificant thing; a trifle. 2. A short piece of verse or music. 3. Games. A game played on an oblong table with a cue and balls. [French, from Italian bagatella, diminutive of dialectal bag-ata, little property, possibly from Latin bāca, berry.]

Bag-dad (bäg'däd') See Baghdad.

Bage-hot (bäj'ət), Walter. 1826-1877. British economist, social scientist, and journalist who wrote The English Constitution (1867), an analysis of the comparative powers of the branches of British government.

ba-gel (bā'gəl) n. A glazed, ring-shaped roll with a tough, chewy texture, made from plain yeast dough that is dropped briefly into nearly boiling water and then baked. [Yiddish beygl, from Middle High German böugel*, diminutive of bouc, ring, from Old High German boug. See bheug- in Appendix.]

bag-gage (bäg'ij) n. 1. The trunks, bags, parcels, and suitcases in which one carries one's belongings while traveling; luggage. 2. The movable equipment and supplies of an army. 3. Superfluous or burdensome practices, regulations, ideas, or traits. 4. a. A wanton or immoral woman. b. An impudent or saucy girl or woman. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a baggage handler; baggage claim. [Middle English bagage, from Old French bague, bundle, perhaps of Germanic origin.]

Bag-gies (bäg'ēz) A trademark used for a variety of plastic storage bags. This trademark, often styled without a final s and in lowercase, sometimes occurs in print with the meaning “a small plastic bag”: “[He] pulls out a Baggie full of parsley” (Washington Post). “Police found marijuana in a baggie he had dropped into a truck” (National Law Journal).

bag-ging (bäg'ing) n. Material used for making bags.

bag-gy (bäg'ē) adj. bag-gi-er, bag-gi-est. Bulging or hanging loosely: baggy trousers. —bag'gi-ly adv. —bag'gi-ness n.

Bagh-dad or Bag-dad (bäg'däd') The capital and largest city of Iraq, in the center of the country on the Tigris River. Founded in the eighth century, it became a large and powerful city whose greatness is reflected in the Arabian Nights. Population, 2,200,000.

bag job (bäg jöb) n. Slang. A black bag job.

bag lady (bäg lā'dē) n. Slang. A homeless woman, especially one in a big city, who carries her possessions in a shopping bag.

Bag·ley (băg'lē), William Chandler. 1874-1946. American psychologist and critic of progressive educational techniques.

bag·man (băg'mən) n. 1. Slang. A person who collects money, as for racketeers. 2. Chiefly British. A traveling salesman.

ba·gnio (băn'yō, băn'-) n. pl. ba·gnios. 1. A brothel. 2. Obsolete. A prison for slaves in Asian countries. 3. Obsolete. A public bathhouse in Italy or Turkey. [Italian bagno, bath, from Latin balneum, from Greek balaneion.]

Bag·nold (băg'nəld), Enid. 1889-1981. British writer whose works include the novel National Velvet (1935) and the play The Chalk Garden (1956).

bag of waters (băg ũv wô'tərz) n. See water bag.

bag people (băg pē'pəl) pl.n. Slang. Homeless people considered as a group.

bag·pipe (băg'pīp') n. Music. An instrument having a flexible bag inflated either by a tube with valves or by bellows, a double-reed melody pipe, and from one to four drone pipes. Often used in the plural. —bag'pipe' v.

—bag'pip'er n.

ba·quette (bă-gět') n. 1. a. A gem cut in the form of a narrow rectangle.

b. The form of such a gem. 2. Architecture. A narrow, convex molding. 3. A small, narrow loaf of French bread often used for sandwiches. [French, rod, from Italian bacchetta, diminutive of bacchio, rod, from Latin baculum, stick. See bak- in Appendix.]

Ba·gui·o (bă'gē-ō') A city of northwest Luzon, Philippines. It is a mountain resort and the summer capital of the country. Population, 119,009.

bag·wig (băg'wīg') n. A wig with the back hair encased in a small silk sack, worn in the 18th century.

bag·worm (băg'wûrm') n. Any of several moths of the family Psychidae, which construct fibrous cases of silk spun together with leaves, twigs, or grass. The plant-feeding larvae and wingless adult females live in these cases.

bah (bă, bā) interj. Used to express impatient rejection or contempt.

Ba·ha'i (bă-hă'ē, bə-hī') adj. Of or relating to a religion founded in 1863 in Iran and emphasizing the spiritual unity of all humankind. — n. A teacher of or a believer in this faith. [Persian bahā'ī, a follower of Bahā'ullāh (see BAHAULLAH), "the Splendor of God". bahā'ī from bahā', splendor, from Arabic.] —Ba·ha'ism (bə-hă'īz'əm, -hī'-) n. —Ba·ha'ist n.

Ba·ha·mas (bə-hă'məz, -hă'-) also Ba·ha·ma Islands (-mə) An island country in the Atlantic Ocean east of Florida and Cuba comprising some 700 islands and islets and numerous cays. The country gained its independence from Great Britain in 1973. Nassau, on New Providence Island, is the capital and the largest city. Population, 218,000. —Ba·ha'mi·an (-hă'mē-ən, -hă'-), Ba·ha'man (-hă'mən, -hă'-) adj. & n.

Ba·ha·sa Indonesia (bə-hă'sə ĩn'də-nē'zhə) n. See Indonesian (n., sense 4). [Indonesian, Indonesian language, from Sanskrit bhāṣā, speech, language.]

Bahasa Ma-lay (bä-hä'sə mə-lä', mä'lä) also Bahasa Me-la-yo (mə-lä'yōō)
n. See Malay (n., sense 2). [Malay, Malay language, from Sanskrit bhāṣā, speech, language.]

Ba-ha-ul-lah (bä-hä'öö-lä'), Originally Mirza Huseyn Ali. 1817-1892. Persian religious leader who was a follower of the Bab and founded the Baha'i sect (1863).

Ba-ha-wal-pur (bə-hä'wəl-poor', -hä'wəl-poor') A region and former princely state of east-central Pakistan between the Sutlej River and the Indian border.

Ba-hi-a (bə-hē'ə, bä-ē'ə) See Salvador. —Ba-hi'an adj. & n.

Ba-hí-a Blan-ca (bə-hē'ə bläng'kä, bä-ē'ä vläng'kä) A city of eastern Argentina on the Bahía Blanca, an inlet of the Atlantic Ocean southwest of Buenos Aires. It is a major shipping and commercial center. Population, 223,818.

Ba-hi-a grass (bə-hē'ə gräs) n. A perennial, sod-forming tropical American grass (Paspalum notatum) grown in warm regions, such as the southern United States, for forage, soil binding, and turf. [After Bahia (Salvador), Brazil.]

Bah-rain or Bah-rein (bä-rän') A country comprising an archipelago of low, sandy islands in the Persian Gulf between Qatar and Saudi Arabia. It was the first Arabian country to strike oil (1932). A British protectorate after 1861, Bahrain became independent in 1971. Manama, on Bahrain Island, the largest in the archipelago, is the capital. Population, 350,798. —Bah-rain'i adj. & n.

Bahr el Gha-zal (bâr' ěl' gə-zäl', bär' ěl' gä-zäl') A river of southwest Sudan flowing about 805 km (500 mi) east to Lake No, where it joins the Bahr el Jebel.

Bahr el Jeb-el (bâr' jëb'əl) A river, about 956 km (594 mi) long, of southern Sudan. It is a section of the White Nile.

baht (bät) n. pl. bahts or baht. A basic unit of currency in Thailand. See Table at currency. [Thai bāt.]

Ba-ia-Ma-re (bä'yə-mä'rə) A city of northwest Romania north of Cluj. It is an industrial center and popular health resort. Population, 129,719.

bai-gnet (běn-yā') n. Southern Louisiana. Variant of beignet.

Bai-kal or Bay-kal (bī-kôl', -kôl'), Lake. A lake of south-central Russia. It is the largest freshwater lake in Eurasia and the world's deepest lake, with a maximum depth of 1,742.2 m (5,712 ft).

bail¹ (bāl) n. 1. Security, usually a sum of money, exchanged for the release of an arrested person as a guarantee of that person's appearance for trial. 2. Release from imprisonment provided by the payment of such money. 3. A person who provides this security. — v. tr. bailed, bail-ing, bails. 1. To secure the release of by providing security. 2. To release (a person) for whom security has been paid. 3. Informal. To extricate from a difficult situation: always bailing you out of trouble. 4. To transfer (property) to another for a special purpose but without permanent transference of ownership. [Middle English, custody, from Old bail² (bāl) v. bailed, bailing, bails. — v. tr. 1. To remove (water) from a boat by repeatedly filling a container and emptying it over the side. 2. To empty (a boat) of water by bailing. — v. intr. To empty a boat of water by bailing. — n. A container used for emptying water from a boat. —phrasal verb. bail out. 1. To parachute from an aircraft; eject. 2. To abandon a project or enterprise. [From Middle English baille, bucket, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin bāiulā*, water container, from Latin bāiulāre, to carry a load.] —bail'er n.

French, from baillier, to take charge of, from Latin bāiulāre, to carry a load, from bāiulus, carrier of a burden.] —bail'er n.

bail³ (bāl) n. 1. The arched, hooplike handle of a container, such as a pail. 2. An arch or hoop, such as one of those used to support the top of a covered wagon. 3. A hinged bar on a typewriter that holds the paper against the platen. [Middle English beil, perhaps from Old English bēgel*, or of Scandinavian origin; see bheug- in Appendix.]

bail⁴ (bāl) n. 1. Chiefly British. A pole or bar used to confine or separate animals. 2. Sports. One of the two crossbars that form the top of a wicket used in the game of cricket. [Old French dialectal, probably from Latin baculum, stick. See BACILLUS.]

bail-a-ble (bā'lə-bəl) adj. 1. Eligible for bail: aailable defendant. 2. Allowing or admitting of bail: aailable offense.

bail-ee (bā-lē') n. A person to whom property is bailed.

bai-ley (bā'lē) n. bai-leys. 1. The outer wall of a castle. 2. The space enclosed by this outer wall. [Middle English bailli, from Old French baille, probably from Latin bacula, pl. of baculum, log, stick. See BACILLUS.]

Bai-ley (bā'lē), Gamaliel. 1807-1859. American journalist who edited antislavery periodicals, such as the Cincinnati Philanthropist (1836-1843) and the National Era (1847-1859), in which Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel Uncle Tom's Cabin was published serially (1851-1852).

Bai-ley (bā'lē), Liberty Hyde. 1858-1954. American botanist and horticulturist noted for various scientific contributions and for establishing college extension courses for farmers.

Bai-ley (bā'lē), Nathan or Nathaniel. Died 1742. British lexicographer whose Universal Etymological English Dictionary, first published in 1721, was used as a reference by Samuel Johnson and was the first English dictionary to treat etymology consistently.

Bailey bridge (bā'lē brīj) n. A steel bridge designed to be shipped in parts and assembled rapidly. [After Sir Donald Bailey (1901-1985), British engineer.]

bail-ie (bā'lē) n. 1. A Scottish municipal officer corresponding to an English alderman. 2. Obsolete. A bailiff. [Middle English baillie, town official, from Old French bailiff, from Medieval Latin bāiulivus*. See BAILIFF.]

bail-iff (bā'lif) n. 1. A court attendant entrusted with duties such as the maintenance of order in a courtroom during a trial. 2. An official who assists a British sheriff and who has the power to execute writs, processes, and arrests. 3. Chiefly British. An overseer of an estate; a steward. [Middle English baillif, from Old French baillis, baillif-, overseer of an estate, steward, from Medieval Latin bāiulivus*, from Latin bāiulus, carrier.]

bail-i-wick (bā'lə-wīk') n. 1. A person's specific area of interest, skill, or authority. See Synonyms at field. 2. The office or district of a bailiff. [Middle English bailliwik: baillif, bailiff; see BAILIFF + wik, town (from Old English wīc, from Latin vīcus); see VICINITY.]

Bail-lie (bā'lē), Joanna. 1762-1851. Scottish dramatist whose works include De Montfort, produced in 1800.

bail-ment (bāl'mənt) n. 1. The process of providing bail for an accused person. 2. The act of delivering goods or personal property to another in trust.

bail-or (bā'lər, bā-lôr') n. One who bails property to another.

bail-out (bāl'out') n. A rescue from financial difficulties: corporate bailouts.

bails-man (bālz'mən) n. One who provides bail or security for another.

Bain-bridge (bān'brīj'), William. 1774-1833. American naval officer who commanded the U.S.S. Constitution to victory over the H.M.S. Java in the War of 1812.

bain-ma-rie (bān'mə-rē') n. pl. bains-ma-rie (bān'mə-rē'). A large pan containing hot water in which smaller pans may be set to cook food slowly or to keep food warm. [French, from Medieval Latin balneum Mariae, bath of Maria, probably after Maria, an early alchemist.]

Baird (bârd), John Logie. 1888-1946. British electrical engineer and pioneer in the field of television, radar, and fiber optics.

Bai-ri-ki (bī-rē'kē) The administrative center of Kiribati, on Tarawa atoll in the northern Gilbert Islands of the west-central Pacific Ocean. Population, 1,956.

bairn (bārn) n. Scots. A child. [Middle English barn, from Old English bearn. See bher¹ in Appendix.]

bait¹ (bāt) n. 1. a. Food or other lure placed on a hook or in a trap and used in the taking of fish, birds, or other animals. b. Something, such as a worm, used for this purpose. 2. An enticement; a temptation. 3. Archaic. A stop for food or rest during a trip. — v. bait-ed, bait-ing, baits. — v. tr. 1. To place a lure in (a trap) or on (a fishing hook). 2. To entice, especially by trickery or strategy. 3. To set dogs upon (a chained animal, for example) for sport. 4. To attack or torment, especially with persistent insults, criticism, or ridicule. 5. To tease. See Synonyms at harass. 6. To feed (an animal), especially on a journey. — v. intr. Archaic. To stop for food or rest during a trip. [Middle English, from Old Norse beita, food, fodder, fish bait. V., from Old Norse beita, to put animals to pasture, hunt with dogs. See bheid- in Appendix.] — bait'er n.

USAGE NOTE: The word baited is sometimes incorrectly substituted for the etymologically correct but unfamiliar word bated (“abated; suspended”) in the expression bated breath.

bait² (bāt) v. Variant of bate².

bait and switch (bāt ənd swĭçh) n. A sales tactic in which a bargain-priced item is used to attract customers who are then encouraged to purchase a more expensive similar item.

bait-fish (bāt'fish') n. Chiefly Chesapeake Bay & Chiefly North Atlantic Coast. A small fish, such as a minnow, used for fishing bait.

bai-za (bī'zä) n. A unit of currency in Oman. See Table at currency. [Arabic, from Hindi paisā.]

baize (bāz) n. An often bright-green cotton or woolen material napped to imitate felt and used chiefly as a cover for gaming tables. [French baies, from pl. of bai, bay-colored, from Latin badius.]

Ba·ja Cal·i·for·nia (bä'hä käl'ĭ-fôr'nyə, -fôr'nē-ə) also Low·er California (lō'ər) A mountainous peninsula of western Mexico extending south-southeast between the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of California south of the U.S. border. It was first explored by the Spanish in the 1530's.

Ba·jer (bī'ər), Fredrik. 1837-1922. Danish pacifist who was a founder and president of the International Peace Bureau in Bern, Switzerland. He shared the 1908 Nobel Peace Prize.

bake (bāk) v. baked, bak·ing, bakes. — v. tr. 1. To cook (food) with dry heat, especially in an oven. 2. To harden or dry (something) by subjecting to heat in or as if in an oven: bake bricks. — v. intr. 1. To cook food with dry heat. 2. To become hardened or dry by or as if by having been subjected to the heat of an oven. — n. 1. a. The act or process of baking. b. An amount baked. 2. A social gathering at which food is cooked by baking and then served. [Middle English baken, from Old English bacan.]

Ba·ke·lite (bā'kə-līt', bāk'līt') A trademark used for any of a group of synthetic resins and plastics found in a variety of manufactured articles.

bake-off (bāk'ôf', -ôf') adj. Of, relating to, or being a bakery, as in a supermarket, that cooks preprepared pastry goods for public sale. —bake'-off' n.

Bake-Off (bāk'ôf', -ôf') A service mark used for a contest in which cooks prepare their own recipes, usually of baked goods, and prizes are awarded for originality and taste. This service mark sometimes occurs in lowercase with the meaning “any contest among cooks”: “All the jockeying for support that has been going on recently has added a new dimension to the proceedings, as if there were a bake-off being held in the next room” (New York Times).

bak·er (bā'kər) n. 1. One that bakes bread, cakes, or pastries, especially commercially. 2. One that bakes, especially a portable oven.

Ba·ker (bākər), Ella. 1903-1986. American social reformer whose organizational efforts were a major force behind the civil rights movement of the 1950's and 1960's.

Ba·ker¹ (bākər), George. Known as "Father Divine." 1877-1965. American religious leader who founded (1919) a communal religious sect called the Peace Mission.

Ba·ker² (bākər), George. 1915-1975. American cartoonist who created Sad Sack (1942), a comic strip about a hapless GI.

Ba·ker (bākər), George Pierce. 1866-1935. American drama professor who tutored many notable American playwrights, including Eugene O'Neill and Sidney Howard.

Ba·ker (bākər), Josephine. 1906-1975. American-born French entertainer who became a popular jazz dancer and singer in Paris during the 1920's and 1930's. During World War II she worked for the French Resistance.

Baker, Mount. A peak, 3,287.3 m (10,778 ft) high, of northwest Washington in the Cascade Range east of Bellingham. It is in a popular resort area.

Ba·ker (bākər), Newton Diehl. 1871-1937. American public official and lawyer who served as secretary of war under President Woodrow Wilson (1916-1921) and was appointed to the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague (1928).

Ba·ker (bākər), Ray Stannard. 1870-1946. American author and muckraking journalist who was the authorized biographer of Woodrow Wilson and wrote many books, including Our New Prosperity (1900) and Native American (1941). He also wrote essays under the pen name David Grayson.

Ba·ker (bākər), Russell Wayne. Born 1925. American writer. A long-time New York Times columnist, he won a Pulitzer Prize in 1979 for distinguished commentary and in 1983 for his autobiography Growing Up.

Ba·ker (bākər), Sir Samuel White. 1821-1893. British explorer who founded a settlement at Ceylon (1848), explored the Blue Nile region (1861-1862), and discovered Lake Albert (1864).

Ba·ker (bākər), Sara Josephine. 1873-1945. American pediatrician and public-health pioneer whose work helped reduce the infant mortality rate in New York City to the lowest level of any large American city.

Baker Lake (bā'kər lāk) A lake of eastern Northwest Territories, Canada, near Chesterfield Inlet, an arm of Hudson Bay.

bak·er's dozen (bā'kərz dūz'ən) n. A group of 13. [From the former custom among bakers of adding an extra roll as a safeguard against the possibility of 12 weighing light.]

Bakers-field (bā'kərz-fēld') A city of south-central California at the southern end of the fertile San Joaquin Valley north-northwest of Los Angeles. Gold was discovered in the region in 1855 and petroleum in 1899. Population, 105,611.

bak-er-sheet (bā'kər-shēt') n. Maine. See drip pan.

baker's yeast (bā'kərz yēst) n. A commercial preparation consisting of dried cells of one or more strains of the fungus Saccharomyces cerevisiae, used as a leavening in baking.

bak-er-y (bā'kə-rē) n. pl. bak-er-ies. A place where products such as bread, cake, and pastries are baked or sold. Also called bakeshop bake-shop (bāk'shōp') n. See bakery.

Bakh-ta-ran (bāk'tə-rān', bākH'tā-) Formerly Ker-man-shah (kēr-mān'shā', -shō'). A city of western Iran west-southwest of Tehran. Founded in the fourth century A.D., it was later a frontier fortress against the Ottoman Turks. Population, 532,000.

bak-ing powder (bā'kīng pou'dər) n. A mixture of baking soda, starch, and at least one slightly acidic compound such as cream of tartar that works as a leavening agent in baking by releasing carbon dioxide when mixed with a liquid, such as milk or water.

baking soda (bā'kīng sō'də) n. A white crystalline compound, NaHCO_3 , with a slightly alkaline taste, used in making effervescent salts and beverages, artificial mineral water, pharmaceuticals, and fire extinguishers. Also called bicarbonate of soda, sodium bicarbonate.

ba-klā-va (bā'klə-vā', bā'klə-vā') n. A dessert made of paper-thin layers of pastry, chopped nuts, and honey. [Turkish.]

bak-sheesh (bāk'shēsh', bāk-shēsh') n. pl. baksheesh. A gratuity or tip, paid to expedite service especially in some Near Eastern countries. [Persian bakhshish, present, from Middle Persian bakhshishn, from bakhshīdan, bakhsh-, to give presents, from Avestan bakhsh-. See bhag- in Appendix.]

Bakst (bākst), Léon Nikolaevich. 1866-1924. Russian painter and scenic designer who modernized theater design. His best-known works were for ballets produced by Sergei Diaghilev in Paris.

Ba-ku (bā-kōō') The capital of Azerbaijan, in the eastern part on the Caspian Sea. Frequently under Persian rule, the city was incorporated into Russia in 1806. It has been a center of oil production since the 1870's. Population, 1,104,000.

Ba-ku-nin (bā-kōō'nīn, -nyīn), Mikhail Aleksandrovich. 1814-1876. Russian anarchist and political theorist who was imprisoned and later exiled to Siberia for his revolutionary activities. He escaped to London (1861), where he opposed Karl Marx. Bakunin's theories of anarchy are considered the antithesis of Marx's communism.

BAL abbr. British anti-lewisite.

bal·a·cla·va (bäl'əklä'və) n. 1. A woolen hood almost completely covering the head and neck, worn by mountain climbers and skiers in cold climates. 2. A similar hood often covering the shoulders, worn by soldiers and sailors. [After Bal-aklava.]

Bal·a·cla·va (bäl'ə-kläv'ə, -klä'və) See Balaklava.

Ba·la·ki·rev (bə-lä'ki-rəf), Mili Alekseevich. 1837-1910. Russian composer whose works combine romanticism with folk music. The symphonic poems Tamara and Russia are among his best-known compositions.

Bal·a·kla·va also Bal·a·cla·va (bäl'ə-kläv'ə, -klä'və) A section of Sevastopol in the Crimea of southern Ukraine. During the Crimean War Balaklava became famous for the doomed charge of the British Light Brigade against heavy Russian fire (October 25, 1854).

bal·a·lai·ka (bäl'ə-lī'kə) n. Music. A Russian instrument with a triangular body and three strings that produces sounds similar to those of a mandolin. [Russian balalaïka, of Turkic origin.]

bal·ance (bäl'əns) n. 1. A weighing device, especially one consisting of a rigid beam horizontally suspended by a low-friction support at its center, with identical weighing pans hung at either end, one of which holds an unknown weight while the effective weight in the other is increased by known amounts until the beam is level and motionless. 2. A state of equilibrium or parity characterized by cancellation of all forces by equal opposing forces. 3. The power or means to decide. 4. A state of bodily equilibrium. 5. A stable mental or psychological state; emotional stability. 6. A harmonious or satisfying arrangement or proportion of parts or elements, as in a design. 7. An influence or force tending to produce equilibrium; counterpoise. 8. The difference in magnitude between opposing forces or influences. 9. Accounting. a. Equality of totals in the debit and credit sides of an account. b. The difference between such totals, either on the credit or the debit side. 10. Something that is left over; a remainder.

11. Chemistry. Equality of mass and net electric charge of reacting species on each side of an equation. 12. Mathematics. Equality with respect to the net number of reduced symbolic quantities on each side of an equation. 13. A balance wheel. — v. bal·anced, bal·anc·ing, bal·anc·es. — v. tr. 1. To determine the weight of (something) in or as if in a weighing device. 2. To compare by or as if by turning over in the mind: balanced the pros and cons before making a final decision. 3. To bring into or maintain in a state of equilibrium. 4. To act as an equalizing weight or force to; counterbalance. 5. Accounting. a. To compute the difference between the debits and credits of (an account). b. To reconcile or equalize the sums of the debits and credits of (an account). c. To settle (an account, for example) by paying what is owed. 6. To bring into or keep in equal or satisfying proportion or harmony. 7. Mathematics. To bring (an equation) into balance. 8. Chemistry. To bring (an equation) into balance. 9. To move toward and then away from (a dance partner). — v. intr. 1. To be in or come into equilibrium. 2. To be equal or equivalent. 3. To sway or waver as if losing or regaining equilibrium. 4. To move toward and then away from a dance partner. —idioms. in the balance. In an undetermined and often critical position: Our plans were left hanging in the balance. Resolution of these matters is still in the balance. on balance. Taking everything into consideration; all in all. [Middle English balaunce, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin bilancia*, having two scale pans, from Latin bilanx : bi-, two; see dwo- in Appendix + lanx, scale.]

SYNONYMS: balance, equilibrium, equipoise, poise. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a state of stability resulting from the cancellation of all forces by equal opposing forces”: upsetting the balance of nature through the use of insecticides; equilibrium of power between Western and Eastern countries; the weights of a scale in equipoise; a poise between disparate and contradictory emotions. See also Synonyms at proportion remainder balance beam (băl'əns bēm) n. Sports. 1. A horizontal, raised beam with a width of 10 centimeters (4 inches) and a length of 5 meters (16 feet) that is used in gymnastic competition for balancing exercises. 2. A competitive gymnastics event in which various balancing feats are performed on this beam.

ANTONYM: imbalance

Bal·ance (băl'əns) n. See Libra.

balance of payments (băl'əns ÷v pā'mənts) n. A systematic record of a nation's total payments to foreign countries, including the price of imports, the outflow of capital and gold, and the total receipts from abroad, including the price of exports and the inflow of capital and gold.

balance of power (băl'əns ÷v pou'ər) n. Distribution of power in which no single nation is able to dominate or interfere with others.

balance of terror (băl'əns ÷v tər'ər) n. Evenly distributed military power between two or more potentially belligerent nations such that the equilibrium constitutes a deterrent to nuclear or limited war: “Will the balance of terror ever end? Will it end in a balance free from terror, or a terror lacking all balance?” (Edward Teller).

balance of trade (băl'əns ÷v trād) n. The difference in value between the total exports and total imports of a nation during a specific period of time.

bal·anc·er (băl'ən-sər) n. See halter².

balance sheet (băl'əns shēt) n. Abbr. B.S. A statement of a business or an institution that lists the assets, debts, and owners' investment as of a specified date.

balance wheel (băl'əns hwēl) n. 1. A wheel that regulates rate of movement in machine parts, as in a watch. 2. A stabilizing influence.

Bal·an·chine (băl'ən-chēn', bäl'ən-chēn'), George. Originally Georgi Balanchivadze. 1904-1983. Russian-born American ballet director and choreographer who became artistic director of the New York City Ballet in 1948 and choreographed more than 100 ballets, including Firebird (1950) and Don Quixote (1965).

bal·as (bäl'əs) n. A rose-red to orange spinel used as a semiprecious gem, once confused with the ruby. [Middle English, from Old French balais, and from Old Spanish balax; both akin to Medieval Latin balascus from Arabic balakhš, from Persian Badakhshān, a region of northeast Afghanistan.]

ba·la·ta (bə-lä'tə) n. The nonelastic rubber obtained from the latex of the South American tree Manilkara bidentata. It has been used in the manufacture of golf-ball covers and machine belts. [American Spanish, from Tupi, and Galibi.]

Bal·a·ton (bäl'ə-tön', bö'l'ö-tôn'), Lake. A lake of west-central Hungary southwest of Budapest. It is the largest lake in central Europe, with many tourist and health resorts.

Bal·bo (bäl'bō), Italo. 1896-1940. Italian aviator and politician who aided Mussolini in the establishment of a fascist regime (1922).

bal·bo·a (bäl-bō'ə) n. A basic unit of currency in Panama. See Table at currency. [After Vasco N BALBOAÚÑEZ DE.]

Bal·bo·a (bäl-bō'ə), Vasco Núñez de. 1475-1517. Spanish explorer and colonial governor who discovered (1513) the Pacific Ocean and claimed it for Spain.

bal·brig·gan (bäl-brīg'ən) n. A knitted, unbleached cotton fabric for underwear. [After Balbriggan, a seaport of eastern Ireland.]

Bal·bue·na (bäl-bwā'nä), Bernardo de. 1562?-1627. Spanish-born poet who wrote all of his works, such as La Grandeza Mexicana (1604), while living in Mexico.

Balch (bôlch), Emily Greene. 1867-1961. American economist and sociologist. A founder of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (1919), she shared the 1946 Nobel Peace Prize.

bal·co·ny (bäl'kə-nē) n. pl. bal·co·nies. 1. A platform that projects from the wall of a building and is surrounded by a railing, balustrade, or parapet. 2. A gallery that projects over the main floor in a theater or an auditorium. [Italian balcone, from Old Italian, scaffold, of Germanic origin.]

bald (bôld) adj. bald·er, bald·est. 1. Lacking hair on the head. 2. Lacking a natural or usual covering: a bald spot on the lawn. 3. Zoology. Having white feathers or markings on the head, as in some birds or mammals. 4. Lacking ornamentation; unadorned. 5. Undisguised; blunt: a bald statement of policy. [Middle English balled, probably from bal, ball. See BALL¹.] —bald'ly adv. —bald'ness n.

bal·da·chin (bôl'də-kīn, bäl'-) also bal·da·chi·no (bäl'də-kē'nō) n. pl.

bal·da·chins also bal·da·chi·nos. 1. A rich fabric of silk and gold brocade.

2. A canopy of fabric carried in church processions or placed over an altar, a throne, or a dais. 3. Architecture. A stone or marble structure built in the form of a canopy, especially over the altar of a church. [Italian baldacchino, from Old Italian, from Baldacco, Baghdad.]

bald cypress (bôld sî'prîs) n. 1. A deciduous, coniferous tree (Taxodium distichum) native to the swamps and streamsides of the southeast United States, having alternate, awl-shaped leaves, globose cones, and sometimes aerial root knees.

2. The decay-resistant wood of this plant, used in construction and boat building.

bald eagle (bôld ĕ'gəl) n. A North American eagle (Haliaeetus leucocephalus) characterized by a brownish-black body and a white head and tail in the adult.

Also called American eagle bal·der·dash (bôl'dər-dăsh') n. Nonsense. [Possibly alteration of Medieval Latin balductum, posset.]

bald-faced (bôld'făst') adj. 1. Brash; undisguised: a bald-faced lie.

2. Zoology. Having a white face or face markings.

bald-head (bôld'hĕd') n. 1. A person whose head is bald. Also called baldpate

2. Any of several birds having white markings on the head.

bald·ing (bôl'dĭng) adj. Becoming bald.

USAGE NOTE: The word balding was popularized by the newsmagazines of the 1930's and was for a long time associated with breezy, journalistic style. It has since passed into general usage, however, and has lost its earlier association with journalism.

bald·pate (bôld'pāt') n. 1. See baldhead (n., sense 1). 2. The widgeon of North America.

bal·dric (bôl'drĭk) n. A belt, usually of ornamented leather, worn across the chest to support a sword or bugle. [Middle English baudrik, from Old French baudre, and from Middle High German balderich.]

Bald·win¹ (bôld'wĭn) 1. An unincorporated community of southeast New York on the southern shore of western Long Island. It is mainly residential. Population, 35,100. 2. A borough of southwest Pennsylvania, a suburb of Pittsburgh on the Monongahela River. Population, 21,923.

Bald·win² (bôld'wĭn) n. An American variety of apple with red or yellow and red skin. [After Loammi BALDWIN.]

Bald·win I (bôld'wĭn), 1058-1118. King of Jerusalem (1100-1118) who was appointed to the throne after taking part in the First Crusade (1096-1099).

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), Henry. 1780-1844. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1830-1844).

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), James Arthur. 1924-1987. American writer and outspoken critic of racism whose works include Go Tell It on the Mountain (1953), a novel, and Notes of a Native Son (1955), a collection of essays.

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), James Mark. 1861-1934. American psychologist and editor who founded and edited (1894-1909) the Psychological Review.

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), Loammi. 1745-1807. American engineer who built (1794-1804) the Middlesex Canal in Massachusetts and developed the Baldwin apple. His son Loammi (1780-1838) designed canals and the Bunker Hill Monument.

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), Matthias William. 1795-1866. American manufacturer who began producing steam locomotives in 1831.

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), Roger Nash. 1884-1981. American civil rights activist. In 1918 he helped found the American Civil Liberties Union, which he directed from 1920 to 1950.

Bald·win (bôld'wĭn), Stanley First Earl Baldwin of Bewdley. 1867-1947. British prime minister (1923-1929 and 1935-1937) who responded to the General Strike of 1926 with the Trade Disputes Act of 1927, an antiunion bill, and facilitated the abdication of Edward VIII (1936).

Bald·win Park (bôld'wĭn pârĕk) A city of southern California, a residential suburb of Los Angeles near the San Gabriel Mountains. Population, 69,330.

bale¹ (bāl) n. A large package of raw or finished material tightly bound with twine or wire and often wrapped. — v. tr. baled, bal·ing, bales. To wrap in a bale or in bales. [Middle English, from Old French. See bhel-² in Appendix.] — bal'er n.

bale² (bāl) n. 1. Evil: "Tidings of bale she brought" (William Cullen Bryant). 2. Mental suffering; anguish: "Relieve my spirit from the bale that bows it down" (Benjamin Disraeli). [Middle English, from Old English bealu.]

Bal·e·ar·ic Islands (bāl'ē-ăr'ĭk ī'lændz) An archipelago in the western Mediterranean Sea off the eastern coast of Spain. Noted for their scenery and mild climate, the islands are a major tourist center.

ba·leen (bə-lēn') n. See whalebone (n., sense 1). [Middle English balene, from Old French baleine, from Latin balaena, whale, from Greek phalaina. See bhel-² in Appendix.]

baleen whale (bə-lēn' hwāl) n. Any of several usually large whales of the suborder Mysticeti, such as the right whale and rorquals, having a symmetrical skull, two blowholes, and whalebone plates instead of teeth. Also called mysticete, whalebone whale.

bale·ful (bāl'fəl) adj. 1. Portending evil; ominous. See Synonyms at sinister. 2. Harmful or malignant in intent or effect. — bale'ful·ly adv. — bale'ful·ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Baleful and baneful overlap in meaning, but baleful usually applies to that which menaces or foreshadows evil: a baleful look. Baneful is said most often of that which is actually harmful or destructive: baneful effects of their foreign policy.

Ba·len·ci·a·ga (bə-lĕn'sē-ä'gə), Cristóbal. 1895-1972. Spanish fashion designer noted for his stark, elegant designs.

Balfe (bälf), Michael William. 1808-1970. Irish composer and singer whose works include the opera The Bohemian Girl (1843).

Bal·four (bäl'föör', -fôr', -fôr'), Arthur James First Earl of Balfour. 1848-1930. British prime minister (1902-1905) who later served as foreign secretary under David Lloyd George (1916-1919). In 1917 he promised British support for a national homeland for Jews in Palestine, provided that the rights of existing communities would be safeguarded.

Ba·li (bä'lĕ) An island of southern Indonesia in the Lesser Sundas just east of Java. Largely mountainous with a tropical climate and fertile soil, it is sometimes called the "the Jewel of the East."

Ba·lik·pa·pan (bä'lik-pä'pän) A city of Indonesia in southeast Borneo on an inlet of Makassar Strait. It is a major port and oil center. Population, 208,040.

Ba·li·nese (bä'lə-nēz', -nēs') adj. Of or relating to Bali or its people, language, or culture. — n. pl. Balinese. 1. A native or inhabitant of Bali. 2. The Indonesian language of Bali.

Balinese cat (bä'lə-nēz' kät) n. A domestic cat that is a hybrid between the Persian and Siamese and that closely resembles the Siamese in appearance but has long, silky fur.

Bal·iol (bäl'yoəl), John de. 1249-1315. Scottish king (1292-1296) who rebelled against English domination (1295) but was defeated by the English. He fled to France in 1296.

balk also baulk (bök) v. balked also baulked, balk·ing also baulk·ing, balks also baulks. — v. intr. 1. To stop short and refuse to go on: The horse balked at the jump. 2. To refuse obstinately or abruptly: She balked at the very idea of compromise. 3. a. Sports. To make an incomplete or misleading motion. b. Baseball. To make an illegal motion before pitching, allowing one or more base runners to advance one base. — v. tr. 1. To put obstacles in the way of; check or thwart. See Synonyms at frustrate. 2. Archaic. To let go by; miss. — n. 1. A hindrance, check, or defeat. 2. Sports. An incomplete or misleading motion, especially an illegal move made by a baseball pitcher. 3. Games. One of the spaces between the cushion and the balk line on a billiard table. 4. a. An unplowed strip of land. b. A ridge between furrows. 5. A wooden beam or rafter. [Middle English balken, to plow up in ridges, from balk, ridge, from Old English balca, and from Old Norse balkr, beam.] —balk'er n.

Bal·kan (bôl'kən) adj. 1. Of or relating to the Balkan Peninsula or the Balkan Mountains. 2. Of or relating to the Balkan States or their inhabitants.

Bal·kan·ize or bal·kan·ize (bôl'kə-nīz') v. tr. Bal·kan·ized, Bal·kan·iz·ing, Bal·kan·iz·es. To divide (a region or territory) into small, often hostile units. [From the political division of the Balkans in the early 20th century.] —Bal'·kan·i·za'tion n.

Balkan Mountains (bôl'kən moun'tənz) also Bal·kans (bôl'kənz) A major mountain system of southeast Europe extending about 563 km (350 mi) from eastern Serbia through central Bulgaria to the Black Sea. The Balkans are a continuation of the Carpathian Mountains and rise to 2,377.2 m (7,794 ft).

Balkan Peninsula also Balkans (bôl'kən pə-nīn'syə-lə) A peninsula of southeast Europe bounded by the Black Sea, the Sea of Marmara, and the Aegean, Mediterranean, Ionian, and Adriatic seas. The Balkan States include Albania, Bulgaria, continental Greece, southeast Romania, European Turkey, and most of the territories organized as Yugoslavia in 1918. Formerly part of the Roman and Byzantine empires, the region fell to the Ottoman Turks by 1500. The Balkan Wars (1912-1913 and 1913), treaties signed after World War I, and nationalist movements led to the present political boundaries.

Balkh (bälk) Formerly Bac·tra (bäk'trə). An ancient city in present-day northern Afghanistan. One of the world's oldest settlements, it was the capital of Bactria and is the legendary birthplace of the prophet Zoroaster.

Bal·khash (bäl-käsh', bäl-käsh', -KHäsh'), Lake. A shallow lake of southeast Kazakhstan. It has saline water in the east and fresh water in the west.

balk line also balk·line (bôk'līn') n. Games. A line parallel to one end of a billiard table, from behind which opening shots with the cue ball are made.

balk·y (bô'kē) adj. balk·i·er, balk·i·est. 1. Given to stopping and refusing to go on: a balky horse; a balky client. See Synonyms at contrary. 2. Difficult to operate or start: a balky switch; a balky engine. —balk'i·ness n.

ball¹ (bôl) n. 1. a. A spherical or almost spherical body: a ball of flame. b. A spherical object or entity: a steel ball. 2. Sports & Games. a. Any of various rounded, movable objects used in various athletic activities and games. b. Such an object moving, thrown, hit, or kicked in a particular manner: a low ball; a fair ball. c. A game, especially baseball, played with such an object. d. A pitched baseball that does not pass through the strike zone and is not swung at by the batter. 3. a. A solid spherical or pointed projectile, such as one shot from a cannon. b. Projectiles of this kind considered as a group. 4. A rounded part or protuberance, especially of the body: the ball of the foot. 5. balls. Vulgar Slang. a. The testicles. b. Courage, especially when reckless. c. Great presumptuousness. — v. balled, ball·ing, balls. — v. tr. 1. To form into a ball. 2. Vulgar Slang. To have sexual intercourse with. — v. intr. 1. To become formed into a ball.

2. Vulgar Slang. To have sexual intercourse. — phrasal verb. ball up. To confuse; bungle. — idiom. on the ball. Informal. 1. Alert, competent, or efficient: a teacher who is really on the ball. 2. Relating to qualities, such as competence, skill, or knowledge, that are necessary for success: a manager who has a lot on the ball; a student who has nothing on the ball. [Middle English bal, probably from Old English beall*. See bhel-² in Appendix.]

ball² (bôl) n. 1. A formal gathering for social dancing. 2. Slang. An extremely enjoyable time or experience: We had a ball during our vacation. [French bal, from Old French, from baller, to dance, from Late Latin ballāre, from Greek bal-lizein. See g^welə- in Appendix.]

Ball (bôl), John. Called “the Mad Priest.” Died 1381. English social agitator who was executed for his role in the Peasants’ Revolt (1381).

Ball (bôl), Lucille. 1911-1989. American actress best known as the star of the popular situation comedy I Love Lucy (1951-1956).

bal·lad (băl’əd) n. 1. a. A narrative poem, often of folk origin and intended to be sung, consisting of simple stanzas and usually having a recurrent refrain. b. The music for such a poem. 2. Music. A popular song especially of a romantic or sentimental nature. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a ballad singer; ballad compositions. [Middle English balade, poem or song in stanza form, from Old French ballade, from Old Provençal balada, song sung while dancing, from balar, to dance, from Late Latin ballāre, to dance. See BALL².] — bal·lad’ic (bə-lăd’ik, bǎ-) adj.

bal·lade (bə-lăd’, bǎ-) n. 1. A verse form usually consisting of three stanzas of eight or ten lines each along with a brief envoy, with all three stanzas and the envoy ending in the same one-line refrain. 2. Music. A composition, usually for the piano, having the romantic or dramatic quality of a ballad. [Middle English balade. See BALLAD.]

bal·lad·eer (băl’ə-dîr’) n. Music. A singer of ballads.

bal·lad·ist (băl’ə-dîst’) n. A singer or composer of ballads.

bal·lad·ry (băl’ə-drē) n. Ballads considered as a group.

ballad stanza (băl’əd stănz’zə) n. A four-line stanza often used in ballads, rhyming in the second and fourth lines and having four metrical feet in the first and third lines and three in the second and fourth.

ball-and-sock-et joint (bôl’ən-sök’it joint) n. 1. A synovial joint, such as the shoulder or hip joint, in which a spherical knob or knoblike part of one bone fits into a cavity or socket of another, so that some degree of rotary motion is possible in every direction. Also called enarthrosis 2. A joint, as in a mechanical device, that permits rotary movement in all directions through the movement of a ball in a socket.

- bal·last (bäl'əst) n. 1. Heavy material that is placed in the hold of a ship or the gondola of a balloon to enhance stability. 2. a. Coarse gravel or crushed rock laid to form a bed for roads or railroads. b. The gravel ingredient of concrete. 3. Something that gives stability, especially in character. — v. tr. bal·last·ed, bal·last·ing, bal·lasts. 1. To stabilize or provide with ballast. 2. To fill (a railroad bed) with or as if with ballast. [Perhaps from Old Swedish, or Old Danish barlast bar, mere, bare; see bhoso- in Appendix + last, load.]
- ball bearing (bôl bâr'îng) n. Abbr. bb, b.b. 1. A friction-reducing bearing consisting essentially of a ring-shaped track containing freely revolving hard metal balls against which a rotating shaft or other part turns. 2. A hard ball used in such a bearing.
- ball boy (bôl boi) n. Sports. 1. A male attendant on a tennis court who collects the ball when it is out of play. 2. A boy who is in charge of the extra balls used in practice or those that are out of play, especially in baseball.
- ball carrier or ball·car·ri·er (bôl'kâr'ē-ər) n. Football. A player who carries the ball on an offensive play.
- ball cock (bôl kôk) n. A self-regulating device controlling the supply of water in a tank, cistern, or toilet by means of a float connected to a valve that opens or closes with a change in water level.
- bal·le·ri·na (bäl'ə-rē'nə) n. 1. A principal woman dancer in a ballet company. 2. A woman ballet dancer. [Italian, from ballare, to dance, from Late Latin ballāre, from Greek ballizein. See BALL².]
- bal·let (bă-lā', bäl'ā') n. 1. A classical dance form characterized by grace and precision of movement and elaborate formal technique, often but not always performed on point by the women dancers. 2. A theatrical presentation of group or solo dancing to a musical accompaniment, usually with costume and scenic effects, conveying a story or theme. 3. A musical composition written or used for this dance form. 4. A company or group that performs ballet. [French, from Italian balletto, diminutive of ballo, dance, from ballare, to dance. See BALLERINA.] — bal·let'ic (bă-lēt'ik) adj.
- bal·let·o·mane (bă-lēt'ə-mān') n. An ardent admirer of the ballet. [French : ballet, ballet; see BALLETT + -mane, ardent admirer (from Greek -manēs); see MANIA.] — bal·let'·o·ma'ni·a (-mā'nē-ə, -mān'yə) n.
- ball·flow·er (bôl'flou'ər) n. Architecture. An ornament in the form of a ball cupped in the petals of a circular flower.
- ball game also ball·game (bô'gām') n. 1. Sports. A game, especially baseball, that is played with a ball. 2. Slang. a. A competition: “But in the winner-take-all world of politics, the contest for the undecided 2 or 3 percent can be the whole ball-game” (Brad Edmondson). b. A particular condition, situation, or set of circumstances. 3. Anthropology. A game with religious and political significance in Maya and other Mesoamerican societies before the Spanish conquest, played with a rubber ball on a walled court.

ball girl (bôl gûrl) n. Sports. 1. A woman attendant on a tennis court who collects the ball when it is out of play. 2. A girl who is in charge of the extra balls used in practice or those that are out of play, especially in baseball.

bal·lis·ta (bə-lis'tə) n. pl. bal·lis·tae (-tē'). An ancient and medieval engine of warfare used to hurl heavy projectiles at a target. [Latin, from Greek ballistēs, from ballein, to throw. See g^welə- in Appendix.]

bal·lis·tic (bə-lis'tik) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to the study of the dynamics of projectiles. b. Of or relating to the study of the internal action of firearms.

2. Of or relating to projectiles, their motion, or their effects. [From BALLISTA.]

—bal·lis'ti·cal·ly adv.

ballistic missile (bə-lis'tik mī'səl) n. A projectile that assumes a free-falling trajectory after an internally guided, self-powered ascent.

bal·lis·tics (bə-lis'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. a. The study of the dynamics of projectiles. b. The study of the flight characteristics of projectiles.

2. a. The study of the functioning of firearms. b. The study of the firing, flight, and effects of ammunition. — adj. Of, relating to, or engaging in the study of ballistics: a ballistics lab; ballistics experts.

—bal'lis-ti'cian (bāl'ī-stīsh'ən) n.

bal·lis·to·car·di·o·gram (bə-lis'tō-kär'dē-ə-grām') n. A recording made by a ballistocardiograph. [BALLIST(IC) + CARDIOGRAM.]

bal·lis·to·car·di·o·graph (bə-lis'tō-kär'dē-ə-grăf') n. A device used to determine the volume of blood passing through the heart in a specific period of time and the force of cardiac contraction by measuring the body's recoil as blood is ejected from the ventricles with each heartbeat. [BALLIST(IC) + CARDIOGRAPH.]

—bal'lis'to-car'di-og'ra-phy (-ög'rə-fē) n.

ball lightning (bôl lit'nīng) n. A rare form of lightning in the shape of a glowing red ball, associated with thunderstorms and thought to consist of ionized gas.

ball of fire (bôl ūv fīr) n. pl. balls of fire. A highly energetic or dynamic person. Also called fireball ball of wax (bôl ūv wăks) n. Slang. An unspecified set of items or circumstances: went shopping, had dinner, saw a play—the whole ball of wax.

bal·lo·net (bāl'ə-nā') n. One of several small, auxiliary gasbags placed inside a balloon or a nonrigid airship that can be inflated or deflated during flight to control and maintain shape and buoyancy. [French ballonnet, diminutive of ballon, balloon. See BALLOON.]

bal·loon (bə-lōōn') n. 1. a. A flexible, nonporous bag inflated with a gas, such as helium, that is lighter than the surrounding air, that causes the bag to rise and float in the atmosphere. b. Such a bag with sufficient capacity to lift a suspended gondola or other payload. 2. Any of variously shaped, brightly colored inflatable rubber bags used as toys. 3. Medicine. A sac that is inserted into a body cavity or tube and distended with air or gas for therapeutic purposes, such as angioplasty.

4. A rounded or irregularly shaped outline containing the words that a character in a cartoon is represented to be saying. — v. bal·looned, bal·loon·ing, bal·loons. — v. intr. 1. To ascend or ride in a balloon. 2. To expand or swell out like a balloon. See Synonyms at bulge. 3. To increase or rise quickly. — v. tr. To cause to expand by or as if by inflating. — adj. Suggestive of a balloon, as in shape: balloon curtains. [French ballon, from Italian dialectal ballone, augmentative of balla, ball, of Germanic origin. See bhel-² in Appendix.] — bal·loon·ist n.

balloon flower (bə-lōōn' flou'ər) n. An east Asian perennial herb (Platycodon grandiflorus), having large, star-shaped, often violet-blue flowers and grown as an ornamental.

balloon mortgage (bə-lōōn' mōr'gij) n. A mortgage with periodic payments that are insufficient to pay back a note, thereby requiring a large final payment.

balloon sail (bə-lōōn' sāl) n. Nautical. A comparatively large foresail used when going before the wind to supplement or replace a jib.

balloon tire (bə-lōōn' tīr) n. A wide pneumatic tire, inflated to low pressure.

balloon vine (bə-lōōn' vīn) n. A tendril-bearing vine (Cardiospermum halicababum) widespread in warm regions and having small, whitish flowers and bladderlike fruits.

bal·lot (bāl'ət) n. 1. A sheet of paper or a card used to cast or register a vote, especially a secret one. 2. The act, process, or method of voting, especially in secret. 3. A list of candidates running for office; a ticket. 4. The total of all votes cast in an election. 5. The right to vote; franchise. 6. A small ball once used to register a secret vote. — v. intr. bal·lot·ed, bal·lot·ing, bal·lots. 1. To cast a ballot; vote. 2. To draw lots. [Italian ballotta, a small ball used to register a vote, diminutive of dialectal balla, ball, of Germanic origin. See bhel-² in Appendix.] — bal'lot·er n.

bal·lotte·ment (bə-lōt'mənt) n. Medicine. A palpatory technique for detecting or examining a floating object in the body, as: a. The use of a finger to push sharply against the uterus and detect the presence or position of a fetus by its return impact. b. Palpation of the abdominal wall while a kidney is being pushed sharply from the backside, used as a test for determining the presence of a floating kidney. [French, from ballotter, to toss, from Italian ballotta, diminutive of dialectal balla, ball. See BALLOON.] ball·park (bōl'pärk') n. 1. Sports. A park or stadium in which ball games are played. 2. Slang. The approximately proper range, as of possibilities or alternatives: Your estimate is right in the ballpark. — adj. 1. Sports. Of, relating to, or used in a park or stadium: ballpark lights; ballpark seating. 2. Slang. Being approximately proper in range: gave a ballpark estimate of future unit sales.

ball-peen hammer (bôl'pēn' hăm'ər) n. A hammer having one end of the head hemispherical and used in working metal.

ball-point pen (bôl'point' pěn) n. A pen having as its writing point a small ball bearing that transfers ink stored in a cartridge onto a writing surface.

ball-room (bôl'rōom', -rōom') n. A large room for dancing.

ballroom dance (bôl'rōom' dăns) n. Any of various social dances, such as the fox trot, tango, or waltz, in which couples follow a conventional pattern of steps. — ballroom dancing n.

balls-y (bôl'zē) adj. balls-i-er, balls-i-est. Vulgar Slang. Very tough and courageous, often recklessly or presumptuously so.

ball valve (bôl vălv) n. A valve regulated by the position of a free-floating ball that moves in response to fluid or mechanical pressure.

bal-ly-hoo (băl'ē-hōō') n. pl. bal-ly-hoos. 1. Sensational or clamorous advertising. 2. Noisy shouting or uproar. — v. tr. bal-ly-hooped, bal-ly-hooing, bal-ly-hoos. To advertise by sensational methods. [Origin unknown.]

WORD HISTORY: The origin of ballyhoo has been the subject of much speculation. This spelling has actually graced four different words: ballyhoo, “sensational advertising”; ballyhoo, a spelling of balao, a kind of fish; ballyhoo, a part of the name ballyhoo bird, about which more later; and ballyhoo, a sailor’s epithet for a disliked ship. This last ballyhoo (first recorded in 1836) was thought to be related to, or the same as, the word ballahou, from Spanish balahú, “a type of schooner common in the Antilles.” First recorded in 1867, ballahou, besides being a term for a specific kind of ship, was also used contemptuously of inferior ships. But the connection between these sailing terms or the name of the fish and our word ballyhoo, first recorded in 1901, has not been established. There may, however, be a tie between ballyhoo and the creature called a ballyhoo bird. According to a July 1880 article in Harper’s, the bird had four wings and two heads and could whistle through one bill while singing through the other. Anyone who has ever hunted a snipe will know what hunting ballyhoo birds was like.

bal-ly-rag (băl'ē-răg') v. Variant of bullyrag.

balm (băm) n. 1. a. A chiefly Mediterranean perennial herb (Melissa officinalis) in the mint family, grown for its lemon-scented foliage, which is used as a seasoning or for tea. Also called lemon balm b. Any of several related plants in the mint family, such as the bee balm and the horse balm. 2. Any of various aromatic resins exuded from several trees and shrubs, especially the balm of Gilead (Commiphora) and related plants. 3. An aromatic salve or oil. 4. A pleasing aromatic fragrance. 5. A soothing, healing, or comforting agent or quality. [Middle English baume, balsam, from Old French basme, from Latin balsamum. See BAL-SAM.]

bal·ma·caan (bäl'mə-kän', -kän') n. A loose, full overcoat with raglan sleeves, originally made of rough woolen cloth. [After Balmacaan, an estate near Inverness, Scotland.]

Bal·main (bäl-män'), Pierre. 1914-1982. French fashion designer particularly noted for elegant evening wear.

balm of Gil·e·ad (bäm üv gíl'ē-əd, -äd') n. 1. a. Any of several trees or shrubs of the genus Commiphora, especially C. opobalsamum, of Arabia and Somalia. b. See myrrh (n., sense 1). 2. A poplar tree of hybrid origin, with sticky, aromatic, resinous buds and heart-shaped leaves, cultivated as a shade tree. 3. A shrubby plant (Cedronella canariensis) in the mint family, native to Madeira and the Canary Islands, having a large, lilac-to-violet corolla with two lips. [After Gilead, known for its balm.]

Bal·mor·al (bäl-môr'al, -mör'-) n. 1. A brimless Scottish cap with a flat, round top. 2. Often balmoral. A heavy, laced walking shoe. [After Balmoral Castle in northeast Scotland.]

bal mu·sette (bäl' mōō-zět') n. A dance hall in France, with the music provided by an accordion band. [French : bal, dance + musette, musette.]

balm·y¹ (bä'mē) adj. balm·i·er, balm·i·est. 1. Having the quality or fragrance of balm; soothing. 2. Mild and pleasant: a balmy breeze. —balm'i·ly adv. —balm'i·ness n.

balm·y² (bä'mē) adj. balm·i·er, balm·i·est. Slang. Eccentric in behavior. [Alteration of BARMY.] —balm'i·ly adv. —balm'i·ness n.

bal·ne·al (bäl'nē-əl) adj. Of or relating to baths or bathing. [From Latin balneum, bath. See BAGNIO.]

bal·ne·ol·o·gy (bäl'nē-öl'ə-jē) n. The science of baths or bathing, especially the study of the therapeutic use of mineral baths. [Latin balneum, bath; see BAGNIO + -LOGY.]

ba·lo·ney¹ (bə-lō'nē) n. pl. ba·lo·neys. Variant of bologna.

ba·lo·ney² (bə-lō'nē) n. pl. ba·lo·neys. Slang. Nonsense. [Probably variant of BOLOGNA.]

bal·sa (bôl'sə) n. 1. a. A tropical American tree (Ochroma pyramidale) having wood that is soft, very light in weight, and that is used as a substitute for cork in insulation, floats, and crafts such as model airplanes. b. The wood of this tree. Also called corkwood. 2. A raft consisting of a frame fastened to buoyant cylinders of wood or metal. [Spanish.]

bal·sam (bôl'səm) n. 1. a. Any of several aromatic resins, such as balsam of Peru and Tolu balsam, that contain considerable amounts of benzoic acid, cinnamic acid, or both, or their esters. b. Any of several other fragrant plant resins, such as Canada balsam. c. A similar substance, especially a fragrant ointment used as medication; a balm. 2. Any of various trees, especially the balsam fir, yielding an aromatic resinous substance. 3. See jewelweed. [Latin balsamum, from Greek balsamon.]

balsam apple (bôl'səm äp'əl) n. A tendril-bearing annual Old World vine (Momordica balsamina), grown as an ornamental for its yellow flowers and ovoid, orange, warty fruits that open at maturity to expose red-coated seeds.

balsam fir (bôl'səm fîr) n. A North American tree (Abies balsamea) having a pyramidal shape and flattened needles. It is widely used as a Christmas tree and yields Canada balsam and pulpwood.

bal·sam·ic (bôl-săm'ik) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling balsam.
2. Containing or yielding balsam.

bal·sam·if·er·ous (bôl'sə-mif'ər-əs) adj. Yielding balsam.

balsam of Pe·ru (bôl'səm ïv pə-rōō') n. The thick, brown, aromatic resin of a tropical American tree (Myroxylon balsamum) used medically in skin lotions and cough preparations and in the manufacture of perfumes. Also called balsam of Tolu balsam of To·lu (bôl'səm ïv tə-lōō') n. See balsam of Peru. [After Tolú, a seaport of northwest Colombia.]

balsam pear (bôl'səm pâr) n. 1. A tropical, Old World, tendril-bearing, annual vine (Momordica charantia), having yellow flowers and orange, warty fruits that open at maturity to expose red-coated seeds. 2. The immature fruit of this plant, used as a vegetable in Asian cuisine. The ripe fruit is not eaten. In this sense, also called bitter gourd balsam poplar (bôl'səm pöp'lär) n. A poplar tree of northern North America (Populus balsamifera) having ovate leaves and large buds coated with a sticky, fragrant resin. Also called hackmatack, tacamahac.

bal·sam·root (bôl'səm-rōōt', -rōōt') n. Any of several western North American perennial herbs of the genus Balsamorhiza in the composite family, having radiate heads of yellow flowers. The large roots of some species were used as food by certain Native American peoples.

Bal·sas (bôl'səs, bäl'-) A river flowing about 724 km (450 mi) from south-central Mexico to the Pacific Ocean.

Balt (bôlt) n. 1. A speaker of a Baltic language. 2. A native or inhabitant of Lithuania, Latvia, or Estonia.

Bal·tha·zar also Bal·tha·sar (bäl-thā'zər, bäl'thə-zär') In the New Testament, one of the three wise men from the East who came bearing gifts for the infant Jesus, guided by the Star of Bethlehem.

Bal·tic (bôl'tik) adj. 1. Of or relating to the Baltic Sea, the Baltic States, or a Baltic-speaking people. 2. Of or relating to the branch of the Indo-European language family that contains Latvian, Lithuanian, and Old Prussian. — n. The Baltic language branch.

Baltic Sea (bôl'tĭk sē) An arm of the Atlantic Ocean in northern Europe bounded by Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, and Germany. It opens to the North Sea via channels and canals, is mostly shallow, with relatively low salinity, and often freezes for three to five months of the year.

Baltic States (bôl'tĭk stāts) Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, on the eastern coast of the Baltic Sea. Formerly Russian provinces, they became independent countries after World War I and were incorporated into the U.S.S.R. as constituent republics in 1940. They became independent again in 1991.

Bal-ti-more (bôl'tə-môr', -môr') A city of northern Maryland on an arm of Chesapeake Bay northeast of Washington, D.C. It has been a busy port since the 18th century. Population, 736,014. —Bal'ti-mor'e-an n.

Bal-ti-more (bôl'tə-môr', -môr'), Lord. See Calvert.

Bal-ti-more (bôl'tə-môr', -môr'), David. Born 1938. American microbiologist. He shared a 1975 Nobel Prize for research on the interaction of tumor viruses and genetic material.

Baltimore oriole (bôl'tə-môr' ôr'ē-ôl') n. A subspecies of the northern oriole in its eastern range, of which the male is bright orange and black and the female olive brown with white wing bars. [After Lord. BALTIMORE.]

Bal-to-Sla-vic (bôl'tō-slă'vĭk, -slăv'ĭk) n. A subfamily of the Indo-European language family that consists of the Baltic and Slavic branches. —Bal'to-Sla'vic adj.

Ba-lu-chi (bə-lōō'chē) also Ba-luch (-lōōch') n. pl. Baluchi or Ba-lu-chis also Baluch or Ba-lu-ches (-lōō'chəz). 1. A member of a traditionally nomadic Muslim people of Baluchistan. 2. The Iranian language of the Baluchi.

Ba-lu-chi-stan (bə-lōō'chĭ-stăn') A desert region of western Pakistan bounded by Iran, Afghanistan, and the Arabian Sea.

ba-lu-chi-ther (bə-lōō'chĭ-thĭr') n. A very large, extinct rhinoceroslike mammal of the genus Baluchitherium, of the Oligocene and Miocene epochs. [Balu-chi(stan) + -there, an extinct mammal (from New Latin -therium, from Greek thērion, wild beast); see TREAACLE.]

bal-us-ter (băl'ə-stər) n. 1. a. One of the upright, usually rounded or vase-shaped supports of a balustrade. b. An upright support, such as a furniture leg, having a similar shape. 2. One of the supporting posts of a handrail. [French balustre, from Italian balaustro, from balaustra, pomegranate flower (from a resemblance to the post), from Latin balaustium, from Greek balaustion.]

bal-us-trade (băl'ə-strād') n. A rail and the row of balusters or posts that support it, as along the front of a gallery. [French, from Italian balaustrata, from balaustro, baluster. See BALUSTER.]

Bal-zac (bôl'zăk', băl'-, bäl-zăk'), Honoré de. 1799-1850. French writer and a founder of the realist school of fiction who portrayed the panorama of French society in a body of works known collectively as La Comédie Humaine.

—Bal·zac/i·an adj.

B.A.M. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Applied Mathematics. 2. Bachelor of Arts in Music.

Ba·ma·ko (bä'mə-kō') n. The capital and largest city of Mali, in the southwest on the Niger River. It was a leading center of Muslim learning under the Mali empire (c. 11th-15th century). Population, 502,000.

Bam·ba·ra (bäm-bä'rä) n. pl. Bam·ba·ra or Bam·ba·ras. 1. A member of a people of the upper Niger River valley. 2. The Mandingo language of the Bambara, used as a lingua franca in Mali.

Bam·berg (bäm'bûrg', bäm'bërk') n. A city of south-central Germany north-northwest of Nuremburg. An industrial and commercial center, it was the capital of a powerful ecclesiastical state from 1007 to 1802. Population, 69,990.

bam·bi·no (bäm-bē'nō, bäm-) n. pl. bam·bi·nos or bam·bi·ni (-nē). 1. A child; a baby. 2. A representation of the infant Jesus. [Italian, diminutive of bambo, child.]

bam·boo (bäm-boō') n. pl. bam·boos. 1. Any of various usually woody, temperate or tropical grasses of the genera Arundinaria, Bambusa, Dendrocalamus, Phyllostachys, or Sasa. 2. The hard or woody stems of these plants, used in construction, crafts, and fishing poles. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: bamboo furniture; bamboo sticks. [Malay bambu, of Indic origin.]

Bam·boo Curtain (bäm-boō' kûr'tn) n. A political and ideological barrier between the West and the Communist countries of Asia after the Chinese revolution of 1949.

bamboo shoot (bäm-boō' shoōt) n. The young shoot of certain species of the bamboo genera Dendrocalamus and Phyllostachys, sliced, cooked, and eaten as a vegetable, especially in east Asian cuisine.

bam·boo·zle (bäm-boō'zəl) v. tr. bam·boo·zled, bam·boo·zling, bam·boo·zles. Informal. To take in by elaborate methods of deceit; hoodwink. See Synonyms at deceive. [Origin unknown.] —bam·boo'zle·ment n.

ban¹ (băn) v. tr. banned, ban·ning, bans. 1. To prohibit, especially by official decree. See Synonyms at forbid. 2. South African. To deprive (a person suspected of illegal activity) of the right of free movement and association with others. 3. Archaic. To curse. — n. 1. An excommunication or condemnation by church officials. 2. A prohibition imposed by law or official decree. 3. Censure, condemnation, or disapproval expressed especially by public opinion. 4. A curse; an imprecation. 5. A summons to arms in feudal times. [Middle English ban·nen, to summon, banish, curse, from Old English bannan, to summon, and from Old Norse banna, to prohibit, curse; see bhā-² in Appendix.]

ban² (băn) n. pl. ba·ni (bä'nē). A unit of currency in Romania. See Table at currency. [Romanian, from Serbo-Croatian băn, lord, from Turkic bayan, very rich person : bay, rich; akin to Turkish bay, rich, gentleman + -an, intensive suff.]

ba·nal (bə-nāl', bā'nəl, bə-näl') adj. Drearily commonplace and often predictable; trite. See Synonyms at trite. [French, from Old French, shared by tenants in a feudal jurisdiction, from ban, summons to military service, of Germanic origin. See bhā-² in Appendix.] —ba·nal'ize' v. —ba·nal'ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: The pronunciation of banal is not settled among educated speakers of American English. Sixty years ago, H.W. Fowler recommended the pronunciation BAN-al (rhyming with panel), but this pronunciation is now regarded as recondite by most Americans: it is preferred by only 2 percent of the Usage Panel. Other possibilities are BANE-al (rhyming with anal), preferred by 38 percent of the Panel; ba-NAL (rhyming with canal), preferred by 46 percent; and ba-NAHL (the last syllable rhyming with doll), preferred by 14 percent (this last pronunciation is more common in British English). Some panelists admit to being so vexed by the problem that they tend to avoid the word in conversation. Speakers can perhaps take comfort in knowing that any one of the last three pronunciations will have the support of a substantial minority, and that none of them is incorrect. When several pronunciations of a word are widely used, there is really no right or wrong one.

ba·nal·i·ty (bə-näl'ī-tē, bā-) n. 1. The condition or quality of being banal; triviality. 2. Something that is trite, obvious, or predictable; a commonplace.

ba·nan·a (bə-nän'ə) n. 1. Any of several treelike Asian herbs of the genus Musa, especially M. acuminata, having a terminal crown of large, entire leaves and a hanging cluster of fruits. 2. The elongated, edible fruit of these plants, having a thick yellowish to reddish skin and white, aromatic, seedless pulp. [Portuguese, and Spanish from Wolof, Mandingo, and Fulani.]

banana oil (bə-nän'ə oil) n. 1. A liquid mixture of amyl acetate and usually nitrocellulose, having a bananalike odor and used as a solvent or flavoring agent. 2. See amyl acetate. 3. Slang. Insincere flattery; nonsensical exaggeration.

banana republic (bə-nän'ə rī-püb'līk) n. A small country that is economically dependent on a single crop, such as bananas, or a single product, such as tin. It is often governed by a dictator or officers of the armed forces: “America has begun to take on certain... characteristics of a banana republic. In those countries, savings are hoarded rather than invested in productive enterprises” (Richard B. Hoey).

ba·nan·as (bə-nän'əz) adj. & adv. Slang. Crazy: “That’s the horrible thing when you’re bananas—nobody can know the awful things that are going on in your head” (Otto Friedrich). “City dwellers... are subjected to so much noise it drives them bananas” (New Yorker).

banana seat (bə-nän'ə sēt) n. An elongated bicycle seat that usually curves upward in the back. [From its shape.]

banana split (bə-năn'ə splīt) n. Several scoops of ice cream and usually flavored syrups or sauces, nuts, fruit, and whipped cream served on a banana that has been split lengthwise. Also called houseboat

Ba·na·ras (bə-när'əs, -ēz) See Varanasi.

Ba·nat (bə-năt', bā'năt') A region of southeast-central Europe extending across western Romania, northeast Yugoslavia, and southern Hungary.

ba·nau·sic (bə-nô'sīk, -zīk) adj. 1. Merely mechanical; routine: “a sensitive, self-conscious creature... in sad revolt against uncongenially banausic employment” (London Magazine). 2. Of or relating to a mechanic. [Greek banausikos, from banausos, mechanic.]

ban·co (bäng'kō, bäng'-) n. pl. ban·cos. Games. A bet in certain gambling games for the entire amount the banker offers to accept. — interj. Used to announce a bet in certain gambling games. [Italian, masculine of banca, bank. See BANK².]

Ban·croft (băn'krōft', -krōft', bäng'-), George. 1800-1891. American historian and diplomat whose published works include the ten-volume History of the United States (1834-1874). As secretary of the navy (1845-1846) he established the naval academy at Annapolis.

Ban·croft (băn'krōft', -krōft', bäng'-), Hubert Howe. 1832-1918. American publisher and historian noted for his 39-volume history of the North and Central American Pacific Coast (1875-1890).

band¹ (bänd) n. 1. A thin strip of flexible material used to encircle and bind one object or to hold a number of objects together: a metal band around the bale of cotton. 2. A strip or stripe that contrasts with something else in color, texture, or material. 3. A narrow strip of fabric used to trim, finish, or reinforce articles of clothing. 4. Something that constrains or binds morally or legally: the bands of marriage and family. 5. A simple ungrooved ring, especially a wedding ring.

6. a. A neckband or collar. b. bands. The two strips hanging from the front of a collar as part of the dress of certain clerics, scholars, and lawyers. c. A high collar popular in the 16th and 17th centuries. 7. a. Biology. A chromatically, structurally, or functionally differentiated strip or stripe in or on an organism.

b. Anatomy. A cordlike tissue that connects or holds structures together.

8. Physics. a. A specific range of wavelengths or frequencies of electromagnetic radiation. b. A range of very closely spaced electron energy levels in solids, the distribution and nature of which determine the electrical properties of a material.

9. Any of the distinct grooves on a long-playing phonograph record that contains an individual selection or a separate section of a whole. 10. Computer Science.

Circular tracks on a storage device such as a disk. 11. The cords across the back of a book to which the sheets or quires are attached. — v. tr. band·ed, band·ing, bands. 1. To tie, bind, or encircle with or as if with a band. 2. To mark or identify with or as if with a band: a program to band migrating birds.

[Middle English, from Old Norse band, band, fetter,, and from Old French bande, band, strip of Germanic origin. See bhendh- in Appendix.]

band² (bänd) n. 1. a. A group of people. b. A group of animals. 2. Music. A group of players who perform as an ensemble. — v. band-ed, band-ing, bands. — v. tr. To assemble or unite in a group. — v. intr. To form a group; unite: banded together for protection. [Old French, probably of Germanic origin.]

SYNONYMS: band, company, corps, party, troop, troupe. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a group of individuals acting together in a shared activity or enterprise”: a band of thieves; a company of scientists; a corps of drummers; a party of tourists; a troop of students on a field trip; a troupe of actors.

band-age (bän'dij) n. A strip of material such as gauze used to protect, immobilize, compress, or support a wound or injured body part. — v. tr.

band-aged, band-ag-ing, band-ag-es. To apply a bandage to. [French, from Old French bande, band, strip. See BAND¹.] — band'ag-er n.

Band-Aid (bänd'äd') A trademark used for an adhesive bandage with a gauze pad in the center, employed to protect minor wounds. This trademark sometimes occurs in print in figurative uses: “True welfare reform is being bypassed for Band-Aid solutions” (Los Angeles Times). “Many critics contend that these measures are mere Band-Aids” (U.S. News & World Report).

band-an-na or band-an-a (bän-dän'ə) n. A large handkerchief usually figured and brightly colored. [Probably Portuguese, from Hindi bāndhnū, tie-dyeing, from bāndhnā, to tie, from Sanskrit bandhati, he ties. See bhendh- in Appendix.]

Band-ar Se-ri Be-ga-wan (bүн'där sēr'ē bə-gä'wən) The capital of Brunei, on the northern coast of Borneo. Population, 63,868.

Ban-da Sea (bän'də sē, bän'-) An arm of the Pacific Ocean in eastern Indonesia southeast of Sulawesi and north of Timor. It includes the Banda Islands, a group of volcanic islands in the Moluccas south of Ceram.

B & B abbr. Bed-and-breakfast.

band-box (bänd'böks') n. A lightweight cylindrical box used to hold small articles of apparel.

B and E abbr. Law. Breaking and entering.

bandeau (bän-dō') n. pl. bandeaux (-dōz') or bandeaux. 1. A narrow band for the hair. 2. A brassiere. [French, from Old French bandel, diminutive of bande, band, strip. See BAND¹.]

Band-er-lier (bän'də-lîr'), Adolph Francis Alphonse. 1840-1914. Swiss-born American historian, explorer, archaeologist, and anthropologist particularly noted for his work in South and Central America.

Ban-del-lo (băn-dě'l'ō, băn-), Matteo. 1485?-1561. Italian prelate and writer whose tales form the basis of many plays, including Shakespeare's Much Ado about Nothing and Twelfth Night.

ban-de-ri-lla (băn'də-rē'l'ə, -rēl'yə) n. A decorated barbed dart that is thrust into the bull's neck or shoulder muscles by a banderillero in a bullfight. [Spanish, diminutive of bandera, banner, from Vulgar Latin bandāria*. See BANNER.]

ban-de-ri-llero (băn'də-rē-âr'l'ō, -rēl-yâr'ō) n. pl. ban-de-ri-lleros. One who implants decorated barbed darts into the bull's neck or shoulder muscles during a bullfight. [Spanish, from banderilla, banderilla. See BANDERILLA.]

ban-de-role or ban-de-rol (băn'də-rōl') also ban-ne-rol (băn'ə-rōl') n.

1. A narrow forked flag or streamer attached to a staff or lance or flown from a ship's masthead. 2. A representation of a ribbon or scroll bearing an inscription. [French, from Italian banderuola, diminutive of bandiera, banner, from Vulgar Latin bandāria*. See BANNER.]

ban-di-coot (băn'dī-kōōt') n. 1. Any of several large Indian rats of the genera Bandicota and Nesokia, of southeast Asia. 2. Any of several ratlike marsupials of the family Peramelidae, of Australia and adjacent islands, that feed on insects and plants and have a long, tapering snout and elongated hind legs. [Telugu bantikoku : banti, ball + kokku, long beak.]

ban-dit (băn'dīt) n. 1. A robber, especially one who robs at gunpoint. 2. An outlaw; a gangster. 3. One who cheats or exploits others. 4. Slang. A hostile aircraft, especially a fighter aircraft. —idiom. make out like a bandit (or make out like bandits). Slang. To be highly successful in a given enterprise. [Italian bandito, from bandire, to band together, probably of Germanic origin. See bhā² in Appendix.] —ban'dit-ry n.

Ban-djar-ma-sin (băn'jər-mă'sin, băn'-) See Banjarmasin.

band-lead-er (bănd'lē'dər) n. Music. One who conducts a band, especially a dance band.

band-mas-ter (bănd'măs'tər) n. Music. One who conducts a band.

ban-dog (băn'dôg', -dôg') n. A dog, such as a mastiff, kept chained as a watchdog or because of its ferocious aggressiveness. [Middle English band-dogge : band, leash, chain; see BAND¹ + dogge, dog; see DOG.]

ban-do-leer or ban-do-lier (băn'də-līr') n. A belt fitted with small pockets or loops for carrying cartridges and worn across the chest by soldiers. [French bandoulière, from Spanish bandolera, diminutive of banda, band, of Germanic origin. See bhā¹ in Appendix.]

ban-do-ne-on (băn-dō'nē-ōn') n. Music. A small accordion especially popular in Latin America. [American Spanish bandoneón, from German Bandonion, Bandoneon : after H. Band (1821-1860), German inventor + Akkordion, accordion; see ACCORDION.] —ban-do'ne-on-ist (-ə-nīst) n.

ban-dore (băn'dôr', -dôr') also ban-do-ra (băn-dôr'ə, -dôr'ə) n. Music. An ancient instrument resembling a guitar. Also called pandore [Portuguese bandurra, from Late Latin pandūra, from Greek pandoura.]

band saw (bănd sô) n. A power saw used in woodworking, consisting essentially of a toothed metal band coupled to and continuously driven around the circumferences of two wheels.

band shell also band-shell (bănd'shĕl') n. Music. A bandstand with a concave, almost hemispheric wall at the rear that serves as a sounding board.

bands-man (băndz'mən) n. Music. A player in a band.

band-stand (bănd'stănd') n. Music. 1. A stand or platform, often roofed, for a band or orchestra. 2. An indoor stand or platform for musicians and other performers.

Ban-dung (băn'doŋg') A city of Indonesia in western Java southeast of Jakarta. Founded by the Dutch in 1810, it is an industrial and cultural center and a resort known for its cool, healthful climate. Population, 1,462,637.

band-wag-on (bănd'wăg'ən) n. 1. Music. An elaborately decorated wagon used to transport musicians in a parade. 2. Informal. A cause or party that attracts increasing numbers of adherents: young voters jumping onto the party's bandwagon. 3. Informal. A current trend: tobacco companies that were hard hit by the nonsmoking bandwagon. — band'wag'on-ing n.

band-width (bănd'width', -with') n. The numerical difference between the upper and lower frequencies of a band of electromagnetic radiation, especially an assigned range of radio frequencies.

ban-dy (băn'dē) v. tr. ban-died, ban-dy-ing, ban-dies. 1. a. To toss or throw back and forth. b. To hit (a ball, for example) back and forth. 2. a. To give and receive (words, for example); exchange: The old friends bandied compliments when they met. b. To discuss in a casual or frivolous manner: bandy an idea about. — adj. Bowed or bent in an outward curve: bandy legs. — n. pl. ban-dies. Sports. 1. A game similar to modern field hockey. 2. A stick, bent at one end, used in playing this game. [Origin unknown.]

ban-dy-leg-ged (băn'dē-lĕg'ĭd, -lĕgd') adj. Bowlegged.

bane (băn) n. 1. Fatal injury or ruin: "Hath some fond lover tic'd thee to thy bane?" (George Herbert). 2. A cause of death, destruction, or ruin: "Obedience,/ Bane of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,/ Makes slaves of men" (Percy Bysshe Shelley). 3. A deadly poison. [Middle English, destroyer, from Old English bana. See g^when- in Appendix.]

bane-ber-ry (băn'bĕr'ē) n. 1. Any of several perennial herbs of the genus Actaea, native to northern temperate regions, having terminal clusters of red, white, or blackish berries. 2. The poisonous berry of a plant of this genus.

bane-ful (băn'fəl) adj. Causing death, destruction, or ruin; harmful. See Usage Note at baleful. — bane'ful-ly adv.

Banff (bǎmf) A town of southwest Alberta, Canada, in the Rocky Mountains near Lake Louise. It is a popular winter resort. Population, 4,208.

bang¹ (bǎng) n. 1. A sudden loud noise, as of an explosion. 2. A sudden loud blow or bump. 3. Informal. A sudden burst of action: The campaign started off with a bang. 4. Slang. A sense of excitement; a thrill: We got a bang out of watching the old movies. — v. banged, bang-ing, bangs. — v. tr. 1. To strike heavily and often repeatedly; bump. 2. To close suddenly and loudly; slam. 3. To handle noisily or violently: banged the pots in the kitchen. 4. Vulgar Slang. To have sexual intercourse with. — v. intr. 1. To make a sudden loud, explosive noise. 2. To crash noisily against or into something: My elbow banged against the door. — adv. Exactly; precisely: The arrow hit bang on the target. — phrasal verbs. bang away. 1. To assail insistently, especially with questions. 2. To work diligently and often at length: banged away at the project until it was finished. bang up. To damage extensively: banged up the car. [Probably from Old Norse bang, a hammering.]

bang² (bǎng) n. A fringe of hair cut short and straight across the forehead. Often used in the plural. — v. tr. banged, bang-ing, bangs. To cut (hair) in bangs. [Perhaps short for BANGTAIL.]

bang³ (bǎng) n. Variant of bhang.

bang⁴ (běn-yā') n. Southern Louisiana. Variant of beignet.

Ban-ga-lore (bǎng'gə-lōr', -lōr') A city of south-central India west of Madras. Founded in 1537, it is a major industrial center and transportation hub. Population, 2,476,355.

ban-ga-lore torpedo (bǎng'gə-lōr' tōr-pē'dō, -lōr') n. A piece of metal pipe filled with an explosive, used primarily to clear a path through barbed wire or to detonate land mines. [After Bangalore.]

bang-er (bǎng'ər) n. Chiefly British. 1. A sausage. 2. A noisy old car. 3. A firework that explodes with a sudden loud noise.

Bang-ka or Ban-ka (bǎng'kə) An island of western Indonesia in the Java Sea separated from Sumatra by the narrow Strait of Bangka. Tin was discovered here in the early 1700's.

bang-kok (bǎng'kōk', bǎng-kōk') n. A hat made of finely woven straw. [After Bangkok.]

Bang-kok (bǎng'kōk', bǎng-kōk') also Krung Thep (grōng tēp') The capital and largest city of Thailand, in the southwest on the Chao Phraya River near the Gulf of Siam. It is a leading port and industrial center with a major jewelry market. Population, 5,174,682.

Bang-la-desh (bǎng'glə-dēsh', bǎng'-) A country of southern Asia on the Bay of Bengal. Formerly part of Bengal, it became East Pakistan when India achieved independence in 1947. After a savage civil war with West Pakistan (1971), Bangladesh formed a separate nation. Dacca is the capital and the largest city. Population, 87,052,000. —Bang'la-desh'i adj. & n.

ban-gle (bǎng'gəl) n. 1. A rigid bracelet or anklet, especially one with no clasp. 2. An ornament that hangs from a bracelet or necklace. [Hindi baṅgrī, glass bracelet.]

Ban-gor (bǎng'gôr, -gər) 1. A municipal borough of eastern Northern Ireland on Belfast Lough. It is a seaport, resort, and yachting center. Population, 67,600. 2. A city of south-central Maine on the Penobscot River. Settled in 1769, it was occupied by the British during the War of 1812. Population, 33,181.

Bangs (bǎngz), John Kendrick. 1862-1922. American humorist and editor of Harper's Weekly (1899-1907).

Bang's disease (bǎngz dĩ-zēz') n. See brucellosis (n., sense 2). [After Bernhard L.F. Bang (1848-1932), Danish veterinarian.]

bang-tail (bǎng'tāl') n. 1. A racehorse. 2. A detachable extension to the back of an envelope, having a perforated edge and special marketing information or an order form on it. [BANG¹ + TAIL¹.]

Ban-gui (bǎng-gē', bǎn-) The capital and largest city of Central African Republic, in the southern part of the country on the Ubangi River. It is a major port and trade center. Population, 340,000.

bang-up (bǎng'üp') adj. Informal. Very good; excellent. [From BANG¹.]

Bang-we-u-lu (bǎng'wē-ōō'lōō), Lake. A shallow lake bordered by swamps on a plateau of northeast Zambia. It was discovered by David Livingstone in 1868.

ba-ni (bǎ'nē) n. Plural of ban².

ban-ian (bǎn'yən) n. Variant of banyan.

ban-ish (bǎn'ish) v. tr. ban-ished, ban-ish-ing, ban-ish-es. 1. To force to leave a country or place by official decree; exile. 2. To drive away; expel: We banished all our doubts and fears. [Middle English banishen, from Old French banir, baniss-, of Germanic origin. See bhā⁻² in Appendix.] —ban'ish-er n.
—ban'ish-ment n.

SYNONYMS: banish, exile, expatriate, deport, transport, extradite. These verbs mean to send away from a country or state. Banish applies to forced departure from a country by official decree: was convicted of heresy and banished from the kingdom. Exile specifies departure from one's own country, either involuntarily because of legal expulsion or voluntarily because of adverse circumstances: When the government was overthrown, the royal family was exiled. Expatriate pertains to departure that is sometimes forced but often voluntary and may imply change of citizenship: an immigrant whose citizenship was revoked and who was expatriated because he had concealed his criminal record. Deport denotes the act of sending an alien abroad by governmental order: was deported for entering the country illegally. Transport pertains to the sending abroad, usually to a penal colony, of one convicted of a crime: Offenders are no longer transported to Devil's Island. Extradite applies to the delivery of an accused or convicted person to the state or country having jurisdiction over him or her: The court refused to extradite political refugees.

ban·is·ter also ban·nis·ter (băn'ĩ-stər) n. 1. A handrail, along with all of its supporting structures. 2. One of the vertical supports of a handrail on a staircase. [Variant of BALUSTER.]

Ban·ja Lu·ka (băn'yə lōō'kə) A city of northwest-central Yugoslavia northwest of Sarajevo. Ruled at various times by Turkey and Austria, Banja Luka became part of Yugoslavia after World War I. Population, 104,000.

Ban·jar·ma·sin also Ban·djar·ma·sin (băn'jər-mä'sin, bän'-) A city of Indonesia on a delta island of southern Borneo. An important deep-water port, Banjarmasin was part of a Hindu kingdom in the 14th century and passed to Muslim rulers in the 15th century. Population, 381,286.

ban·jo (băn'jō) n. pl. ban·jos or ban·joes. Music. A fretted stringed instrument having a narrow neck and a hollow circular body with a stretched diaphragm of vellum upon which the bridge rests. [; akin to Jamaican English banja, fiddle probably akin to Kimbundu, Tshiluba mbanza, a plucked stringed instrument.] — ban·jo·ist n.

Ban·jul (băn'jōol') Formerly Bath·urst (băth'ərst). The capital and largest city of Gambia, on an island at the mouth of the Gambia River on the Atlantic Ocean. It was founded as a trading post by the British in 1816. Population, 44,536.

bank¹ (băngk) n. 1. A piled-up mass, as of snow or clouds. See Synonyms at heap. 2. A steep natural incline. 3. An artificial embankment. 4. Often banks. The slope of land adjoining a body of water, especially adjoining a river, lake, or channel. 5. Often banks. A large elevated area of a sea floor. 6. Games. The cushion of a billiard or pool table. 7. The lateral inward tilting, as of a motor vehicle or an aircraft, in turning or negotiating a curve. — v. banked, bank·ing, banks. — v. tr. 1. To border or protect with a ridge or embankment. 2. To pile up; amass: banked earth along the wall. 3. To cover (a fire), as with ashes or fresh fuel, to ensure continued low burning. 4. To construct with a slope rising to the outside edge: The turns on the racetrack were steeply banked. 5. a. To tilt (an aircraft) laterally and inwardly in flight. b. To tilt (a motor vehicle) laterally and inwardly when negotiating a curve. 6. Games. To strike (a billiard ball) so that it rebounds from the cushion of the table. 7. Sports. To play (a ball) in such a way as to make it glance off a surface, such as a backboard or wall. — v. intr. 1. To rise in or take the form of a bank. 2. To tilt an aircraft or a motor vehicle laterally when turning. [Middle English, of Scandinavian origin.]

bank² (băngk) n. Abbr. bk. 1. a. A business establishment in which money is kept for saving or commercial purposes or is invested, supplied for loans, or exchanged. b. The offices or building in which such an establishment is located.

2. Games. a. The funds of a gambling establishment. b. The funds held by a dealer or banker in some gambling games. c. The reserve pieces, cards, chips, or play money in some games, such as poker, from which the players may draw.

3. a. A supply or stock for future or emergency use: a grain bank. b. Medicine. A supply of human tissues or other materials, such as blood, skin, or sperm, held in reserve for future use. 4. A place of safekeeping or storage: a computer's memory bank. 5. Obsolete. A moneychanger's table or place of business. — v. banked, bank-ing, banks. — v. tr. To deposit in or as if in a bank. — v. intr. 1. To transact business with a bank or maintain a bank account. 2. To operate a bank.

—phrasal verb. bank on. To have confidence in; rely on. [French banque, from Old Italian banca, bench, moneychanger's table, from Old High German banc.]

bank³ (bǎngk) n. 1. A set of similar or matched things arranged in a row, especially: a. A set of elevators. b. A row of keys on a keyboard. 2. Nautical. a. A bench for rowers in a galley. b. A row of oars in a galley. 3. Printing. The lines of type under a headline. — v. tr. banked, bank-ing, banks. To arrange or set up in a row: “Every street was banked with purple-blooming trees” (Doris Lessing). [Middle English, bench, from Old French banc, from Late Latin bancus, of Germanic origin.]

Ban·ka (bǎng'kə) See Bangka.

bank·a·ble (bǎng'kə-bəl) adj. 1. Acceptable to or at a bank: bankable funds.

2. Guaranteed to bring profit: a bankable movie star. —bank'a·bil'i·ty n.

bank acceptance (bǎngk äk-sĕp'təns) n. A draft or bill of exchange drawn upon and accepted by a bank. Also called banker's acceptance bank account (bǎngk ə-kount') n. Funds deposited in a bank that are credited to and subject to withdrawal by the depositor.

bank annuity (bǎngk ə-nōō'ī-tē) n. Chiefly British. See consol.

bank barn (bǎngk bärn) n. A barn built into a hillside as protection against wind and cold, with a back entrance at the second-floor level.

bank bill (bǎngk bīl) n. See bank note.

bank·book (bǎngk'böök') n. A book held by a depositor in which his or her deposits and withdrawals are recorded by the bank. Also called passbook bank·card (bǎngk'kärđ') n. A card issued by a bank especially to identify the holder, used for receiving credit or for operating an automated teller machine.

bank discount (bǎngk dīs'kount') n. The interest on a loan computed in advance and deducted at the time the loan is made.

bank·er¹ (bǎng'kər) n. 1. One serving as an officer or owner of a bank.

2. Games. The player in charge of the bank in some gambling games.

—bank'er·ly adj.

bank·er² (bǎng'kər) n. One engaged in cod fishing off Newfoundland.

bank·er³ (bǎng'kər) n. A workbench used by a mason or sculptor. [From BANK³, bench (obsolete).]

bank·er's acceptance (bǎng'kərz äk-səp'təns) n. See bank acceptance.

bank·ers' hours (bǎng'kərz ourz) pl.n. A short working day.

Bank·head (bǎngk'hěd'), Tallulah Brockman. 1903-1968. American actress noted for her wit, glamour, and performances in plays, such as The Little Foxes (1939), and motion pictures, including Lifeboat (1943).

Bank·head (bǎngk'hěd'), William Brockman. 1874-1940. American politician. A U.S. representative from Alabama, he was speaker of the House from 1936 to 1940.

bank holiday (bǎngk hōl'ī-dā') n. 1. A day on which banks are legally closed.

2. Chiefly British. A legal holiday when banks are ordered to remain closed.

bank·ing (bǎng'kĩng) n. Abbr. bkg. 1. The business of a bank. 2. The occupation of a banker.

ban·kit (bǎng'kĩt) n. Southern Louisiana & East Texas. Variant of banquette (n., sense 2).

bank note (bǎngk nōt) n. A note issued by a bank representing its promise to pay a specific sum to the bearer on demand and acceptable as money. Also called bank bill bank paper (bǎngk pā'pər) n. 1. Bank notes considered as a group.

2. Securities, drafts, bills of exchange, and other commercial paper acceptable by a bank.

bank rate (bǎngk rāt) n. The rate of discount established by a country's central bank.

bank·roll (bǎngk'rōl') n. 1. A roll of paper money. 2. Informal. One's ready cash. — v. tr. bank·rolled, bank·roll·ing, bank·rolls. Informal. To underwrite the expense of (a business venture, for example). — bank·roll'er n.

bank·rupt (bǎngk'rũpt', -rəpt) n. Abbr. bkpt. 1. Law. A debtor that, upon voluntary petition or one invoked by the debtor's creditors, is judged legally insolvent. The debtor's remaining property is then administered for the creditors or is distributed among them. 2. A person who is totally lacking in a specified resource or quality: an intellectual bankrupt. — adj. 1. a. Having been legally declared financially insolvent. b. Financially ruined; impoverished.

2. a. Depleted of valuable qualities or characteristics: a morally and ethically bankrupt politician. b. Totally depleted; destitute: was bankrupt of new ideas.

c. Being in a ruined state: a bankrupt foreign policy. — v. tr. bank·rupt·ed, bank·rupt·ing, bank·rupts. 1. To cause to become financially bankrupt. 2. To ruin: an administration that bankrupted its credibility by seeking to manipulate the news. [French banqueroute, from Italian bancarotta: banca, moneychanger's table; see BANK² + rotta, past participle of rompere, to break (from Latin rumpere); see reup- in Appendix.] —bank'rupt·cy (-rəpt-sē, -rəp-sē) n. —bank·rup'·tive adj.

Banks (bängks), Sir Joseph. 1743-1820. British botanist noted for his circumnavigation of the globe (1768-1771) with James Cook, during which he discovered and cataloged many species of plant and animal life.

Banks (bängks), Nathaniel Prentiss. 1816-1894. American politician and general who was governor of Massachusetts (1858-1861) and led the capture of Port Hudson, Louisiana (1863), during the Civil War.

bank·si·a (bängk'sē-ə) n. Any of various Australian evergreen shrubs or trees of the genus Banksia, having narrow, spiny or toothed leaves, showy, dense clusters of usually yellow flowers, and small fruits in conelike clusters. [After Sir Joseph Banks.]

Banks Island (bängks 'lænd) An island of northwest Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Ocean west of Victoria Island. It is the westernmost island of the Arctic Archipelago.

Banks·town (bängks'toun') A city of southeast Australia, a suburb of Sydney. Population, 153,600.

Ban-Lon (bän'lön') A trademark used for knitted and woven fabrics made from artificially crimped yarns.

Ban·ne·ker (bän'ī-kər), Benjamin. 1731-1806. American mathematician and astronomer who published an almanac (1792-1802) containing ephemerides that he had calculated.

ban·ner (bän'ər) n. 1. a. A piece of cloth attached to a staff and used as a standard by a monarch, military commander, or knight. b. The flag of a nation, a state, or an army. 2. A piece of cloth bearing a motto or legend, as of a club. 3. A headline spanning the width of a newspaper page. 4. Botany. See standard (n., sense 8). — adj. Unusually good; outstanding: a banner year for the company. — v. tr. ban·nered, ban·ner·ing, ban·ners. Informal. To give a banner headline to (a story or an item) in a newspaper. [Middle English banere, from Old French baniere, from Vulgar Latin bandāria*, from Late Latin bandum, of Germanic origin. See bhā-¹ in Appendix.]

ban·ner·et¹ (bän'ər-īt, -ə-rēt') also ban·ner·ette (bän'ə-rēt') n. A small banner. [Middle English baneret, from Old French banerete, diminutive of baniere, banner. See BANNER.]

ban·ner·et² (bän'ər-īt, -ə-rēt') n. A feudal knight ranking between a knight bachelor and a baron, who was entitled to lead men into battle under his own standard. [Middle English baneret, from Old French, from baniere, banner. See BANNER.]

ban·ner·ette (bän'ə-rēt') n. Variant of banneret¹.

ban·ne·rol (bän'ə-rōl') n. Variant of banderole.

ban·nis·ter (bän'ī-stər) n. Variant of banister.

Ban-nis-ter (băn'ī-stər), Roger. Born 1929. British runner who in 1954 became the first human being to run the mile in under four minutes.

ban-nock (băn'ək) n. 1. A flat, usually unleavened bread made of oatmeal or barley flour. 2. New England. Thin cornbread baked on a griddle. [Middle English bannok, from Old English bannuc, of Celtic origin.]

Ban-nock (băn'ək) n. pl. Bannock or Ban-nocks. 1. a. A Native American people inhabiting southeast Idaho and western Wyoming. b. A member of this people. 2. The variety of Northern Paiute spoken by the Bannock.

Ban-nock-burn (băn'ək-bûrn', băn'ək-bûrn') A town of central Scotland north-northeast of Glasgow on the Bannock River, a tributary of the Forth. It was the site of Robert the Bruce's defeat of the English under Edward II on June 23, 1314.

banns also bans (bänz) pl.n. An announcement, especially in a church, of an intended marriage. [Middle English banes, pl. of ban, proclamation, from Old English gebann, and from Old French ban (of Germanic origin); see bhā-² in Appendix.]

ban-quet (băng'kwit) n. 1. An elaborate, sumptuous repast. 2. A ceremonial dinner honoring a particular guest or occasion. — v. tr. intr. ban-quet-ed, ban-quet-ing, ban-quets. To honor at or partake of a banquet. [Old French, diminutive of banc, bench. See BANK³.] —ban'quet-er n.

WORD HISTORY: The linguistic stock of the word banquet has been fluctuating for a long time. The Old French word banquet, the likely source of our word, is derived from Old French banc, “bench,” ultimately of Germanic origin. The sense development in Old French seems to have changed from “little bench” to “a meal taken on the family workbench” to “feast.” The English word banquet is first recorded in a work possibly composed before 1475 with reference to a feast held by the god Apollo, and the word appears to have been used from the 15th to the 18th century to refer to the feasts of the powerful and the wealthy. Perhaps this association led a 19th-century newspaper editor to label the word “grandiloquent” because it was being appropriated by those lower down on the social scale.

banquet room (băng'kwit rōom) n. A large room, as in a restaurant, suitable for banquets.

ban-quette (băng-kět') n. 1. A platform lining a trench or parapet wall on which soldiers may stand when firing. 2. Also ban-kit (băng'kīt). Southern Louisiana & East Texas. A sidewalk: “The flower of loafers... was found stretched on the banquette on Tuesday night” (New Orleans Daily Picayune). See Regional note at beignet. 3. A long upholstered bench placed against or built into a wall. 4. A ledge or shelf, as on a buffet. [French, from Provençal banqueta, diminutive of banca, bench, of Germanic origin.]

bans (bǎnz) pl.n. Variant of banns.

ban·shee also ban·shie (bǎnʹshē) n. A female spirit in Gaelic folklore believed to presage, by wailing, a death in a family. [Irish Gaelic bean sídhe, woman of the fairies, banshee : bean, woman (from Old Irish ben); see g^wen- in Appendix + sídhe, fairy (from Old Irish síde).]

ban·tam (bǎnʹtəm) n. 1. Any of various breeds of very small domestic fowl that are often miniatures of members of larger breeds. 2. A small but aggressive and spirited person. — adj. 1. Diminutive; miniature. 2. Aggressive and spirited. [After Bantam, Indonesia.]

ban·tam·weight (bǎnʹtəm-wātʹ) n. Sports. 1. A professional boxer weighing between 112 and 118 pounds (approximately 51-53.5 kilograms), heavier than a flyweight and lighter than a featherweight. 2. A contestant in various other sports in a similar weight class.

ban·ter (bǎnʹtər) n. Good-humored, playful conversation. — v. ban·tered, ban·ter·ing, ban·ters. — v. tr. To speak to in a playful or teasing way. — v. intr. To exchange mildly teasing remarks. [Origin unknown.] — banʹter·er n. — banʹter·ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: banter, chaff, josh, kid, rag, razz, rib. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to poke fun at good-humoredly”: bantered with her colleagues about their long coffee breaks; chaffed her for forgetting the appointment; joshed his brother about his strange new haircut; thought you were kidding me; ragged her about being so stubborn; razzed the teammate who missed the shot; ribbing a friend for being helplessly in love.

Ban·ting (bǎnʹtǐng), Sir Frederick Grant. 1891-1941. Canadian physiologist. He shared a 1923 Nobel Prize for the discovery of insulin.

bant·ling (bǎntʹlǐng) n. A young child. [Origin unknown.]

Ban·tu (bǎnʹtōō) n. pl. Bantu or Ban·tus. 1. A member of any of a large number of linguistically related peoples of central and southern Africa. 2. A group of over 400 closely related languages spoken in central, east-central, and southern Africa, belonging to the South Central subgroup of the Niger-Congo language family and including Swahili, Kinyarwanda, Kirundi, Zulu, and Xhosa. [From Proto-Bantu bantū*, people : ba-, pl. human pref. + ntu, entity.] — Banʹtu adj.

ban·yan also ban·ian (bǎnʹyən) n. A tropical Indian fig tree (Ficus benghalensis), often widely spreading because of the many aerial roots that descend from the branches and develop into additional trunks. It is planted for ornament and shade. [Short for banyan tree, merchants’ tree, from Portuguese banian, Hindu merchant, from Gujarati vāṇiyo, from Sanskrit vāṇijaḥ. See wen-¹ in Appendix.]

ban·zai (bän-zī') n. A Japanese battle cry or patriotic cheer. [Japanese, (may you live) ten thousand years, from Chinese (Mandarin) wàn suì : wän, ten thousand + suì, years.]

banzai attack (bän-zī' ə-täk') n. A desperate attack by Japanese troops in World War II. Also called banzai charge ba·o·bab (bā'ō-băb', bā'-) n. A tropical African tree (Adansonia digitata) having a swollen trunk that stores water, palmately compound leaves, and long, hanging, hard-shelled fruits. [Possibly from North African Arabic bū hibab, fruit of many seeds.]

Bao·ding also Pao·ting (bou'dĩng') A city of northeast China south-southwest of Beijing. The city wall was built during the Ming period. Population, 400,000.

Bao·ji also Pao·ki (bou'jē') A city of central China on the Wei He west of Xian. It is a thriving industrial center. Population, 275,000.

Bao·tou also Pao·tow (bou'tō') A city of northern China on the Huang He (Yellow River) west of Hohhot. It is a major manufacturing center. Population, 866,200.

Bap. abbr. Baptist.

Bapt. abbr. Baptist.

bap·tism (băp'tiz'əm) n. 1. A religious sacrament marked by the symbolic use of water and resulting in admission of the recipient into the community of Christians. 2. A ceremony, a trial, or an experience by which one is initiated, purified, or given a name. 3. Christian Science. A submergence in Spirit or purification by Spirit. [Middle English baptisme, from Old French, from Late Latin baptismus, from Greek baptismos, from baptizein, to baptize. See BAPTIZE.] —bap·tis'mal adj. —bap·tis'mal·ly adv.

baptism of fire (băp'tiz'əm ïv fīr) n. 1. A soldier's first experience of actual combat conditions. 2. A severe ordeal experienced for the first time.

Bap·tist (băp'tist) n. 1. Abbr. Bap., Bapt. A member of an evangelical Protestant church of congregational polity, following the reformed tradition in worship, and believing in individual freedom, in the separation of church and state, and in baptism of voluntary, conscious believers. 2. baptist. One that baptizes. [Middle English, baptizer, from Old French baptiste, from Late Latin baptista, from Greek baptistēs, from baptizein, to baptize. See BAPTIZE.] —Bap'tist adj.

bap·tis·ter·y also bap·tis·try (băp'tī-strē) n. pl. bap·tis·ter·ies also bap·tis·tries. 1. A part of a church or a separate building used for baptizing. 2. A font used for baptism. [Middle English baptisterie, from Old French, from Late Latin baptistērium, from Greek baptistērion, from baptizein, to baptize. See BAPTIZE.]

bap·tize (băp-tīz', băp'tīz') v. bap·tized, bap·tiz·ing, bap·tiz·es. — v. tr.

1. To admit into Christianity by means of baptism. 2. a. To cleanse or purify.

b. To initiate. 3. To give a first or Christian name to; christen. — v. intr. To administer baptism. [Middle English baptizen, from Old French baptiser, from Late Latin baptizāre, from Greek baptizein, from baptein, to dip.] —bap-tiz'er n.

bar¹ (bär) n. 1. A relatively long, straight, rigid piece of solid material used as a fastener, support, barrier, or structural or mechanical member. 2. a. A solid oblong block of a substance, such as soap or candy. b. A rectangular block of a precious metal. 3. Something that impedes or prevents action or progress. See Synonyms at obstacle. 4. A ridge, as of sand or gravel, on a shore or streambed, that is formed by the action of tides or currents. 5. A narrow marking, as a stripe or band. 6. Heraldry. A pair of horizontal parallel lines drawn across a shield. 7. Law. a. The nullification, defeat, or prevention of a claim or action. b. The process by which nullification, defeat, or prevention is achieved. 8. The railing in a courtroom enclosing the part of the room where the judges and lawyers sit, witnesses are heard, and prisoners are tried. 9. A place of judgment; a tribunal. 10. Law. a. Attorneys considered as a group. b. The profession of law. 11. Music. a. A vertical line dividing a staff into equal measures. b. A measure. 12. a. A counter at which drinks, especially alcoholic drinks, and sometimes food, are served. b. An establishment or room having such a counter. — v. tr. barred, bar-ring, bars. 1. To fasten securely with a long, straight, rigid piece of material. 2. To shut in or out with or as if with bars. 3. To obstruct or impede; block. 4. To keep out; exclude. See Synonyms at hinder¹. 5. To rule out; except. 6. To mark with stripes or bands. 7. Law. To stop (a claim or action) by objection. — prep. Except for; excluding: This was your best performance, bar none. —idiom. behind bars. In prison. [Middle English barre, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin barra*.]

bar² (bär) n. A unit of pressure equal to one million (10^6) dynes per square centimeter. [Greek baros, weight. See g^werə-¹ in Appendix.]

BAR abbr. Browning automatic rifle.

bar. abbr. 1. a. Barometer. b. Barometric. 2. Barrel.

bar- pref. Variant of baro-.

Bar-a (bär'ə), Theda. 1890?-1955. American actress of the silent film era. She appeared in sensational, highly publicized films, including Cleopatra (1917) and Salome (1918).

Ba-rab-bas (bə-räb'əs) In the New Testament, the condemned thief whose release, instead of that of Jesus, was demanded of Pilate by the multitude.

Ba-ra-cal-do (bär'ə-käl'dō, bär'rä) A city of northern Spain, an industrial suburb of Bilbao. Population, 118,692.

Ba-ra-co-a (bär'ə-kō'ə, bär'rä-) A city of southeast Cuba on the coast near the eastern end of the island. It is the oldest settlement in Cuba. Population, 35,754.

Ba-ra-ka (bə-rä'kə), Imamu Amiri. Originally LeRoi Jones. Born 1934. American writer whose poems and plays, such as Slave Ship (1967), focus on racial conflict.

Ba-ra-nof Island (bär'ə-nôf' ī'lənd, -nôf', bə-rä'nəf) An island off southeast Alaska in the Alexander Archipelago. It was named after Aleksandr Baranov, who founded the town of Sitka on the island.

Ba-ra-nov (bə-rä'nəf), Aleksandr Andreevich. 1746-1819. Russian fur trader and first governor of the Russian colony of Alaska.

Ba-ra-no-vi-chi (bə-rä'nə-vič'ē) A city of southwest Belarus west of Bobruisk. Founded in 1870, it passed to Poland in 1920 and was reincorporated into the U.S.S.R. in 1939. Population, 149,000.

Bá-rá-ny (bä'rän'yə), Robert. 1876-1936. Austrian otologist. He won a 1914 Nobel Prize for research on the auditory system.

bar-a-the-a (bär'ə-thē'ə) n. A soft fabric of silk and cotton, silk and wool, or all wool. [Origin unknown.]

barb¹ (bärb) n. 1. A sharp point projecting in reverse direction to the main point of a weapon or tool, as on an arrow or fishhook. 2. A cutting remark. 3. Zoology. One of the parallel filaments projecting from the main shaft of a feather. 4. Botany. A short, sharply hooked bristle or hairlike projection. 5. See barbel¹. 6. Any of various Old World freshwater fishes of the genus Barbus or Puntius and related genera. 7. A linen covering for a woman's head, throat, and chin worn in medieval times. — v. tr. barbed, barb-ing, barbs. To provide or furnish with a barb. [Middle English barbe, from Old French, beard, from Latin barba. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

barb² (bärb) n. 1. A horse of a breed introduced by the Moors into Spain from northern Africa that resembles the Arabians and is known for its speed and endurance. 2. One of a breed of domestic pigeons that is similar to the carrier and has dark plumage. [French barbe, from Italian barbero, Berber, from Vulgar Latin Barbaria*, Barbary States. See BARBARIAN.]

Bar-ba-dos (bär-bā'dōs', -dōz', -dəs) Abbr. Barb. A country occupying the easternmost island of the West Indies. Probably first visited by the Portuguese, who named it Los Barbados ("the bearded") for its numerous bearded fig trees, the island gained its independence from Great Britain in 1966. Bridgetown is the capital and the largest city. Population, 248,983. — Bar-ba'di-an adj. & n.

Barbados cherry (bär-bā'dōs' chēr'ē) n. 1. A tropical American evergreen shrub (Malpighia glabra), having red or rose flowers in umbels and red cherrylike edible fruits. 2. The fruit of this plant, used to make desserts, preserves, and jellies.

Barbados gooseberry (bär-bā'dōs' gōōs'bēr'ē) n. 1. A tropical American cactus (Pereskia aculeata) with climbing or trailing spiny stems, broad leaves, and clusters of fragrant whitish, pale yellow, or pinkish flowers. 2. The small, globular, yellow edible fruit of this plant, used to make jellies and preserves. Also called blade apple bar·bar·i·an (bär-bâr'ē-ən) n. 1. A member of a people considered by those of another nation or group to have a primitive civilization. 2. A fierce, brutal, or cruel person. 3. An insensitive, uncultured person; a boor. See Synonyms at boor. [French barbarien, from barbare, from Latin barbarus, barbarous. See BARBAROUS.] —bar·bar'·i·an·ism n.

bar·bar·ic (bär-bär'ĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of barbarians. 2. Marked by crudeness or lack of restraint in taste, style, or manner. [Latin barbaricus, from Greek barbarikos, from barbaros, foreign.] —bar·bar'·i·cal·ly adv.

bar·ba·rism (bär'bə-rĭz'əm) n. 1. An act, trait, or custom characterized by ignorance or crudity. 2. a. The use of words, forms, or expressions considered incorrect or unacceptable. b. A specific word, form, or expression so used. [Latin barbarismus, use of a foreign tongue or of one's own tongue amiss, barbarism, from Greek barbarismos, from barbarizein, to behave or speak like a barbarian, from barbaros, non-Greek, foreign.]

USAGE NOTE: There is a significant difference in meaning between barbarism and barbarity. Both denote some absence of civilization, but the word civilization itself has several different senses, one the opposite of barbarism, the other the opposite of barbarity. On the one hand civilization may refer to the scientific, artistic, and cultural attainments of advanced societies; and it is this sense that figures in the meaning of barbarism. The English word barbarism originally referred to incorrect use of language, but it is now used more generally to refer to ignorance or crudity in matters of taste, including verbal expression: The New Yorker would never tolerate such barbarisms. On the other hand, civilization may refer to the basic social order that allows people to resolve their differences peaceably, and it is this sense—that is, civilization as opposed to savagery—that figures in the meaning of barbarity, which refers to savage brutality or cruelty in actions, as in The accounts of the emperor's barbarity shocked the world.

bar·bar·i·ty (bär-bär'ĭ-tē) n. pl. bar·bar·i·ties. 1. Savage brutality or cruelty in actions or conduct. 2. A cruel or savage act. 3. Usage Problem. Crudity; coarseness. See Usage Note at barbarism.

bar·ba·rize (bär'bə-rĭz') v. tr. intr. bar·ba·rized, bar·ba·riz·ing, bar·ba·riz·es. To make or become crude, savage, or barbarous. —bar'ba·ri·za'tion (-rĭ-zā'shən) n.

Bar·ba·ros·sa¹ (bär'bə-rōs'ə, -rōs'ə), European name for Khair ed-Din. Died 1546. Greek-born Turkish corsair who with his brother Arouj (died 1518) ravaged the coasts of Spain, Italy, and Greece.

Bar·ba·ros·sa² (bär'bə-rōs'ə, -rōs'ə) See Frederick I.

bar·ba·rous (bär' bər-əs) adj. 1. Primitive in culture and customs; uncivilized. 2. Lacking refinement or culture; coarse. 3. Characterized by savagery; very cruel. See Synonyms at cruel. 4. Marked by the use or occurrence of barbarisms in spoken or written language. [From Latin barbarus, from Greek barbaros, non-Greek, foreign.] —bar'ba-rous-ly adv. —bar'ba-rous-ness n.

Bar·ba·ry (bär' bə-rē, -brē) A region of northern Africa on the Mediterranean coast between Egypt and the Atlantic Ocean. Settled by Berbers in the 2nd millennium B.C., it fell to the Arabs in the 7th century A.D. From the 16th to the 19th century it was used as a base by pirates who raided ships in the Mediterranean Sea and extracted tribute from the European powers trading in the area.

Barbary ape (bär' bə-rē āp) n. A tailless monkey (Macaca sylvana) of Gibraltar and northern Africa. Also called magot Barbary Coast (bär' bə-rē kōst) 1. The Mediterranean coastal area of Barbary and the Barbary States. 2. A waterfront area of San Francisco, California, in the years after the 1849 gold rush. It was notorious for its gambling dens, saloons, brothels, and disreputable boarding houses.

Barbary sheep (bär' bə-rē shēp) n. See aoudad.

Barbary States (bär' bə-rē stāts) The North African states of Algeria, Tunisia, Tripoli, and Morocco, especially from the 16th to the 19th century.

bar·bas·co (bär-bäs' kō) n. pl. bar·bas·cos. 1. Any of several tropical American plants, as in the genus Lonchocarpus, that contain a substance that can stun or paralyze fish. 2. Any of several Mexican plants of the genus Dioscorea having a large, inedible root that yields an extract used as a raw material for synthetic steroid hormones. [American Spanish, from Spanish barbasco, mullein, alteration (possibly influenced by barba, beard), of verbasco, from Latin verbascum.]

bar·bate (bär' bāt') adj. Having a beard; bearded. [Latin barbātus, from barba, beard. See BARB¹.]

bar·be·cue (bär' bī-kyōō') n. 1. A grill, pit, or outdoor fireplace for roasting meat. 2. a. A whole animal carcass or section thereof roasted or broiled over an open fire or on a spit. b. A social gathering, usually held outdoors, at which food is cooked over an open flame. — v. tr. bar·be·cued, bar·be·cu·ing, bar·be·cues. To roast, broil, or grill (meat or seafood) over live coals or an open fire, often basting with a seasoned sauce. [American Spanish barbacoa, of Taino origin.]

barbed (bärbd) adj. 1. Having barbs. 2. Cutting; stinging: barbed criticism; barbed statements. —barb'ed·ness (bär' bīd-nīs) n.

barbed wire (bärbd wīr) n. Twisted strands of fence wire with barbs at regular intervals.

bar·bel¹ (bär' bəl) n. One of the slender, whiskerlike tactile organs extending from the head of certain fishes, such as catfishes. Also called *barb*¹ [Obsolete bar·bel² (bär'běl) n. Any of several Old World freshwater fish of the genus Barbus, especially B. barbus, having four barbels on its upper jaw. [Middle English, from Old French, from Medieval Latin barbellus*, diminutive of barbus, from Latin barba, beard. See BARBEL¹.]

French, from Old French, from Medieval Latin barbula, diminutive of Late Latin barbus, beard, from Latin barba. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

bar·bell (bär'běl') n. A bar with adjustable weights at each end, lifted for sport or exercise. [BAR¹ + (DUMB)BELL.]

bar·bel·late (bär'bē-lāt', bär-běl'īt, -āt') adj. Botany. Finely or minutely barbed: barbellate stems. [From New Latin barbella, diminutive of Latin barba, beard. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

bar·ber (bär'bər) n. One whose business is to cut hair and to shave or trim beards. — v. bar·bered, bar·ber·ing, bar·bers. — v. tr. 1. To cut the hair of. 2. To shave or trim the beard of. — v. intr. To work as a barber. [Middle English, from Old French barbour, from Medieval Latin barbātōr, from Latin barba, beard. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

Bar·ber (bär'bər), Samuel. 1910-1981. American composer whose works include Adagio for Strings (1936) and the opera Vanessa (1958), for which he won a Pulitzer Prize.

bar·ber·ry (bär'bər'ē) n. Any of various shrubs of the genus Berberis having leaves that are often clustered, small yellow flowers, and red, orange, or blackish berries. They are grown as specimen or hedge plants. [Middle English berberie, from Medieval Latin berberis.]

bar·ber·shop (bär'bər-shōp') n. The place of business of a barber. — adj. Music. Of, consisting of, or relating to the performance of sentimental songs in four-part harmony: a barbershop quartet.

bar·ber's itch (bär'bərz ɪtʃ) n. Any of various skin eruptions on the face and neck, especially ringworm of the beard. Also called tinea barbae Bar·ber·ton (bär'bər-tən) A city of northeast Ohio, an industrial suburb of Akron. Population, 27,623.

bar·bet (bär'bīt) n. Any of various brightly colored tropical birds of the family Capitonidae that have a broad bill with bristles at the base and are related to the toucans. [Probably from BARB¹.]

bar·bette (bär-bět') n. 1. A platform or mound of earth within a fort from which guns are fired over the parapet. 2. An armored protective cylinder around a revolving gun turret on a warship. [French, diminutive of barbe, beard. See BARB¹.]

bar·bi·can (bär'bī-kən) n. A tower or other fortification on the approach to a castle or town, especially one at a gate or drawbridge. [Middle English, from Old French barbacane, from Medieval Latin barbacana, from Persian barbārkhāna :

barbār, guard (from Old Iranian parivāraka-*, protective); see wer⁴ in Appendix + khāna, house (from Middle Persian khānak.)] bar·bi·cel (bär'bi-sēl') n. Zoology. One of the minute, hooked projections extending from and interlocking the barbules of a feather. [New Latin barbicella, diminutive of Latin barba, beard. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

bar·bi·tal (bär'bi-tōl', -tāl') n. A barbiturate, $C_8H_{12}N_2O_3$, that is a white crystalline powder and is used as a sedative and hypnotic especially in the form of its soluble salt, sodium barbital. [From BARBITURIC ACID.]

bar·bi·tu·rate (bär-bīch'ər-īt, -ə-rāt', bär'bi-tōōr'īt, -āt', -tyōōr'-) n. 1. A salt or ester of barbituric acid. 2. Any of a group of barbituric acid derivatives that act as central nervous system depressants and are used as sedatives or hypnotics. [BARBITUR(IC ACID) + -ATE².]

bar·bi·tu·ric acid (bär'bi-tōōr'ik əs'īd, -tyōōr'-) n. An organic acid, $C_4H_4O_3N_2$, used in the manufacture of barbiturates and some plastics. [Partial translation of German Barbitursäure.]

Bar·bi·zon (bär'bi-zōn') adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a 19th-century group of landscape painters in France that included Corot, Daubigny, Millet, and Rousseau. [After Barbizon, a village of north-central France.]

Bar·bour (bär'bər), Philip Pendleton. 1783-1841. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1836-1841).

Bar·bu·da (bär-bōō'də) An island of Antigua and Barbuda in the West Indies north of Antigua. It was privately owned from 1691 to 1872. —Bar·bu'dan adj. & n.

bar·bule (bär'byōōl) n. Zoology. A small barb or pointed projection, especially one of the small projections fringing the edges of the barbs of feathers. [Latin barbula, diminutive of barba, beard. See bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

Bar·busse (bär-bōōs', -būs'), Henri. 1873-1935. French writer and editor whose works include Under Fire (1916), a novel based on his World War I experiences. His disillusionment led him to pacifism and later to communism.

barb·wire (bärb'wīr') n. Barbed wire.

bar·ca (bär'kə) n. Nautical. A double-ended boat, skiff, or barge used in the Mediterranean. [Italian barca. See BARK³.]

bar·ca·role also bar·ca·rolle (bär'kə-rōl') n. Music. 1. A Venetian gondolier's song with a rhythm suggestive of rowing. 2. A composition imitating a Venetian gondolier's song. [French, from Italian barcaruola, from barcaruolo, gondolier, from barca, boat, from Latin.]

Bar·ce·lo·na (bär'sə-lō'nə) A city of northeast Spain on the Mediterranean Sea. Founded by the Carthaginians, it prospered under the Romans and Visigoths, fell to the Moors in 713, and was taken by Charlemagne's Frankish troops in 801. It has long been a center of Catalan separatism and of anarchic, socialist, and syndicalist movements. Population, 1,770,296.

Barcelona chair (bär'sə-lō'nə châr) A trademark used for a wide armless chair with leather cushions on a double X-shaped frame formed of gently curving stainless steel bars.

B.Arch. abbr. Bachelor of Architecture.

bar chart (bär chärt) n. See bar graph.

Bar-clay (bär'klē), Robert. 1648-1690. Scottish Quaker apologist whose Truth Triumphant (1692), a collection of his writings, describes and defends the tenets of Quakerism.

Bar-clay de Tol-ly (bər-klī' də tōl'yə), Prince Mikhail. 1761-1818. British-born Russian field marshal active in the Napoleonic Wars.

bar code (bär kōd) n. See Universal Product Code.

bard¹ (bärd) n. 1. One of an ancient Celtic order of minstrel poets who composed and recited verses celebrating the legendary exploits of chieftains and heroes. 2. A poet, especially a lyric poet. See Synonyms at poet. [Middle English, from Irish and Scottish Gaelic bard, and from Welsh bardd; see g^werə-² in Appendix.] —bard'ic adj.

bard² also barde (bärd) n. A piece of armor used to protect or ornament a horse. — v. tr. bard-ed, bard-ing, bards. To equip a horse with bards. [Middle English barde, from Old French, from Old Italian barda, from Arabic barda'ah, packsaddle, from Persian pardah. See PURDAH.]

Bard (bärd), John. 1716-1799. American physician who was among the first to use systematic dissection of cadavers for instruction.

bar-da-cious (bär'dā'shəs) adj. & adv. Southern U.S. & South Midland U.S. Variant of bodacious.

barde (bärd) n. & v. tr. Variant of bard².

Bar-deen (bär-dēn'), John. 1908-1991. American physicist. He shared a Nobel Prize in 1956 for the development of the electronic transistor and in 1972 for a theory of superconductivity.

Bar-do-li-no (bär'dl-ē'nō) n. pl. Bar-do-li-nos. An Italian red wine with a dry, light taste. [After Bardolino, a village of northern Italy.]

Bar-dot (bär-dō'), Brigitte. Born 1935?. French actress whose best-known films are And God Created Woman (1956) and Shaloko (1968).

bare¹ (bâr) adj. bar-er, bar-est. 1. Lacking the usual or appropriate covering or clothing; naked: a bare arm. 2. Exposed to view; undisguised: bare fangs. 3. Lacking the usual furnishings, equipment, or decoration: bare walls. 4. Having no addition, adornment, or qualification: the bare facts. See Synonyms at empty. 5. Just sufficient; mere: the bare necessities. 6. Obsolete. Bare-headed. — v. tr. bared, bar-ing, bares. 1. To make bare; uncover or reveal: bared their heads; baring secrets. See Synonyms at strip¹. 2. To expose: The dog bared its teeth. [Middle English bar, from Old English bær. See bhoso- in Appendix.] —bare'ness n.

bare² (bâr) v. Archaic. A past tense of bear¹.

bare·back (bâr'băk') also bare·backed (-băkt') adv. & adj. On a horse, pony, or other animal with no saddle: rode bareback; a bareback rider.

bare bones (bâr bōnz) pl.n. Informal. The basic elements or essentials: outlined the bare bones of the proposal. —bare'-bones' (bâr'bōnz') adj.

bare·faced (bâr'făst') adj. 1. a. Having no covering over the face. b. Having no beard. 2. Without disguise; unconcealed. 3. Undisguisedly bold; brazen. See Synonyms at shameless. —bare'fac'ed·ly (-fâ'sid-lē, -făst'lē) adv. —bare'fac'ed·ness n.

bare·foot (bâr'fōot) also bare·foot·ed (-fōot'ïd) adv. & adj. With nothing on the feet: walking barefoot in the grass; a barefoot boy.

barefoot doctor (bâr'fōot dōk'tər) n. A lay health care worker, especially in rural China, trained in such activities as first aid, childbirth assistance, the dispensing of drugs, and preventive medicine.

ba·rege also ba·rège (bə-rēzh') n. A sheer fabric woven of silk or cotton and wool, used for women's apparel. [French barège, after Barèges, a town in France.]

bare·hand·ed (bâr'hăn'dïd) adv. & adj. With no covering on the hands: fought barehanded; barehanded boxing. —bare'hand'ed·ness n.

bare·head·ed (bâr'hěd'ïd) adv. & adj. With no covering on the head: walking bareheaded in the rain; a bareheaded pedestrian. —bare'head'ed·ness n.

Ba·reil·ly also Ba·re·li (bə-rā'lē) A city of northern India east-southeast of Delhi. It was founded in the 16th century. Population, 386,734.

bare·knuck·le (bâr'nŭk'əl) adv. Without gloves: boxers fighting bare-knuckle. — adj. 1. Wearing no gloves: an undefeated bare-knuckle champion. 2. Slang. Of a fiercely implacable character: the bare-knuckle world of commercial real estate.

bare·knuck·led (bâr'nŭk'əld) adv. & adj. Bare-knuckle.

bare·leg·ged (bâr'lěg'ïd, -lěgd') adv. & adj. With the legs uncovered: ran barelegged through the surf; barelegged children on the beach.

—bare'leg'ged·ness n.

Ba·re·li (bə-rā'lē) See Bareilly.

bare·ly (bâr'lē) adv. 1. By a very little; hardly: could barely see the road in the fog. 2. In a scanty manner; sparsely: a barely furnished room.

bare·na·ked (bâr'nā'kïd, -něk'ïd) adv. & adj. Chiefly Northern U.S. With no clothes on.

REGIONAL NOTE: Regional expressions abound for the meaning “entirely unclothed.” The chiefly Northern U.S. expression bare-naked illustrates the linguistic process of redundancy, not normally acceptable in Standard English but productive in regional dialect speech. A redundant expression combines two words that mean the same thing, thereby intensifying the effect. The expression buck-naked, used chiefly in the South Atlantic and Gulf States, is not as clear as bare-naked with respect to its origin; buck is possibly an alteration of butt, “buttocks.” If so, bum-naked and bare-ass(ed), attested in the Northeastern U.S., represent the same idea.

Bar-en-boim (bär'ĭn-boim'), Daniel. Born 1942. Israeli-born pianist and conductor who performed widely with his wife, the cellist Jacqueline du Pré.

Bar-ents (bär'ənts, bär'-), Willem. 1550?-1597. Dutch Arctic explorer who led several expeditions (1594-1597) in search of the Northeast Passage.

Barents Sea (bär'ənts sē) A shallow section of the Arctic Ocean north of Norway and northwest Russia. The North Atlantic Current keeps its southern ports ice-free all year.

barf (bärf) v. tr. intr. barfed, barf-ing, barfs. Slang. To vomit. [Probably imitative.] —barf n.

barf bag (bärf bäg) n. Slang. A disposable plastic or paper bag provided to a passenger by an airline for use in case of airsickness.

bar-fly (bär'flī') n. Slang. One who frequents drinking establishments.

bar-gain (bär'gĭn) n. 1. An agreement between parties fixing obligations that each promises to carry out. 2. a. An agreement establishing the terms of a sale or exchange of goods or services: finally reached a bargain with the antique dealer over the lamp. b. Property acquired or services rendered as a result of such an agreement. 3. Something offered or acquired at a price advantageous to the buyer. — v. bar-gained, bar-gain-ing, bar-gains. — v. intr. 1. To negotiate the terms of an agreement, as to sell or exchange. 2. To engage in collective bargaining. 3. To arrive at an agreement. — v. tr. To exchange; trade: bar-gained my watch for a meal. —phrasal verb. bargain for (or bargain on). To count on; expect: “I never bargained for this tearing feeling inside me” (Anne Tyler). —idiom. into the bargain (or in the bargain). Over and above what is expected; in addition. [Middle English, from Old French bargaigne, haggling, from bargaignier, to haggle, of Germanic origin. See bhergh-¹ in Appendix.] —bar'gain-er n.

SYNONYMS: bargain, compact, contract, covenant, deal. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an agreement arrived at after discussion in which the parties involved promise to honor their respective obligations”: kept his end of the bargain and mowed the lawn; made a compact to correspond regularly; a legally binding contract to install new windows in the house; a covenant for mutual defense; annoyance that wasn't part of the deal.

bargain basement (bär'gĭn bās'mənt) n. A basement floor or floors in a department store where goods and apparel are sold at reduced or discounted prices. — bar'gain-base'ment (bär'gĭn-bās'mənt) adj.

bar-gain-ing chip (bär'gə-nĭng chĭp) n. Leverage, typically in the form of an inducement or a concession, useful in successful negotiations: “A bargaining chip is ultimately worthless if you're not willing to bargain it away” (New Republic).

barge (bärj) n. Nautical. 1. a. A long, large, usually flat-bottomed boat for transporting freight that is generally unpowered and towed or pushed by other craft. b. A large, open pleasure boat used for parties, pageants, or formal ceremonies. 2. A powerboat reserved for the use of an admiral. — v. barged, barg-ing, barg-es. — v. tr. Nautical. To carry by barge. — v. intr. 1. To move about clumsily. 2. To enter rudely and abruptly; intrude: barged into the meeting. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin barca, boat.]

barge-board (bärj'bôrd', -bôrd') n. Architecture. A board, often ornately carved, attached along the projecting edge of a gable roof. [Origin unknown.]

barg-ee (bär-jē') n. Chiefly British. A bargeman. [BARGE + -EE².]

bar-gel-lo (bär-zhĕl'ō) n. pl. bar-gel-los. A needlepoint stitch that produces zigzag lines. [After the Bargello, a museum in Florence, Italy, which contains chairs upholstered in fabric worked in this stitch.]

barge-man (bärj'mən) n. The master or a crew member of a barge.

bar-ghest also bar-guest (bär'gĕst) n. A goblin in English folklore, often appearing in the shape of a large dog and believed to portend imminent death or misfortune. [bar (perhaps from BARROW²) + ghest, ghost (dialectal variant of GHOST).]

bar-girl (bär'gûrl') n. 1. A B-girl. 2. A barmaid.

bar graph (bär grăf) n. A graph consisting of parallel, usually vertical bars or rectangles with lengths proportional to the frequency with which specified quantities occur in a set of data. Also called bar chart bar-guest (bär'gĕst) n. Variant of barghest.

Bar Harbor (bär här'bər) A town of southeast Maine on Mount Desert Island. It is a summer resort. Population, 2,685.

bar-hop (bär'höp') v. intr. bar-hopped, bar-hop-ping, bar-hops. Slang. To patronize a series of bars during an evening.

Ba-ri (bä'rĕ) A city of southeast Italy on the Adriatic Sea. Controlled successively by the Greeks, Romans, Goths, Lombards, Byzantines, Normans, and Venetians, it became part of the kingdom of Naples in 1557. Population, 370,781.

bar-i-at-rics (bär'ĕ-ăt'rĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of medicine that deals with the causes, prevention, and treatment of obesity. [BAR(O)- + -IAT-RICS.] — bar'i-at'ric adj. — bar'i-a-tri'cian (-ə-trĭsh'ən) n.

ba-ri-l-la (bə-rĕl'yə, -rĕ'yə) n. 1. Either of two Mediterranean saltworts (Salsola kali or S. soda) or a similar plant (Halogeton sativus), burned to obtain a crude soda ash. 2. The crude sodium carbonate ash obtained from these plants. [Spanish barrilla.]

Bar-ing (bâr'îng), Alexander First Baron Ashburton. 1774-1848. British financier and public official who concluded the treaty between Great Britain and the United States that defined the border between Canada and Maine (1842).

Bar-ing (bâr'îng), Evelyn First Earl of Cromer. 1841-1917. British financier and diplomat who as British consul general in Egypt (1883-1907) promoted land, educational, legal, and transportation reforms.

Ba-ri-sal (bâr'î-sôl', bŭr'î-sâl') A city of southern Bangladesh on the Ganges River delta. The phenomenon known as "the Barisal guns," unexplained sounds resembling distant thunder or cannon fire, may be seismic in origin. Population, 159,298.

bar-ite (bâr'īt, bâr' -) also ba-ry-tes (bə-rī'tēz) n. A yellow, white, or colorless crystalline mineral of barium sulfate, BaSO₄, that is used in paint and as the chief source of barium chemicals. Also called heavy spar [Greek barus, heavy; see g^werə-¹ in Appendix + -ITE¹.]

bar-i-tone also bar-y-tone (bâr'î-tōn') n. Music. 1. a. A male singer or voice with a range higher than a bass and lower than a tenor. b. A part written for a voice with such a range. 2. A brass wind instrument with a range similar to that of a baritone voice. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: baritone voices; baritone parts. [Italian baritono, from Greek barutonos, deep sounding : barus, heavy; see g^werə-¹ in Appendix + tonos, tone; see TONE.]

bar-i-um (bâr'ē-əm, bâr' -) n. Symbol Ba A soft, silvery-white alkaline-earth metal, used to deoxidize copper and in various alloys. Atomic number 56; atomic weight 137.34; melting point 725°C; boiling point 1,140°C; specific gravity 3.50; valence 2. [BAR(YTA) + -IUM.] —bar'ic (-ĭk) adj.

barium sulfate (bâr'ē-əm sŭl'fāt') n. A fine white powder, BaSO₄, used as a pigment, as a filler for textiles, rubbers, and plastics, and as a contrast medium in x-ray photography of the digestive tract.

bark¹ (bärk) n. 1. The harsh, abrupt sound uttered by a dog. 2. A sound, such as a cough, that is similar to a dog's bark. — v. barked, bark-ing, barks. — v. intr. 1. To utter the harsh, abrupt sound of a dog. 2. To make a sound similar to a bark: "The birds bark softly, sounding almost like young pups" (Charleston SC News and Courier). 3. To speak sharply; snap: "It is power that can often be misused—as when an obscure lieutenant colonel can bark at a Pentagon general, commanding him to do something questionable 'because the White House wants it done'" (John Hughes). 4. To work as a barker, as at a carnival. — v. tr. To utter in a loud, harsh voice: The quarterback barked out the signals. —idiom. bark up the wrong tree. To misdirect one's energies or attention. [From Middle English berken, to bark, from Old English beorcan.]

bark² (bärk) n. 1. The tough outer covering of the woody stems and roots of trees, shrubs, and other woody plants. It includes all tissues outside the vascular cambium. 2. A specific kind of bark used for a special purpose, as in tanning or medicine. — v. tr. barked, bark-ing, barks. 1. To remove bark from (a tree or log). 2. To rub off the skin of; abrade: barked my shin on the car door. 3. To treat medically, tan, or dye using bark. [Middle English, from Old Norse börkr.]

bark³ also barque (bärk) n. Nautical. 1. A sailing ship with from three to five masts, all of them square-rigged except the after mast, which is fore-and-aft rigged. 2. A small vessel that is propelled by oars or sails. [Middle English barke, boat, from Old French barque, from Old Italian barca, from Latin.]

bark beetle (bärk bēt'l) n. Any of various small, cylindrical beetles of the family Scolytidae that burrow along the surface wood directly beneath the bark of trees, causing extensive damage.

bar-keep-er (bär'kē'pər) also bar-keep (-kēp') n. 1. A person who owns or operates a bar for the sale of alcoholic beverages. 2. See bartender.

bar-ken-tine also bar-quen-tine (bär'kən-tēn') n. Nautical. A sailing ship with from three to five masts of which only the foremast is square-rigged, the others being fore-and-aft rigged. [Probably BARK³ + (BRIG)ANTINE.]

bark-er¹ (bär'kər) n. 1. One, such as a dog, that makes a bark or a barking sound. 2. An employee who stands before the entrance to a show, as at a carnival, and solicits customers with a loud, colorful sales spiel.

bark-er² (bär'kər) n. One that removes bark from trees or logs or prepares it for tanning.

Bark-la (bär'klə), Charles Glover. 1877-1944. British physicist. He won a 1917 Nobel Prize for the discovery of roentgen radiation of the elements.

Bar-kley (bär'klē), Alben William. 1877-1956. Vice President of the United States (1949-1953) under Harry S Truman.

bar-le-duc also Bar-le-Duc (bär'lī-dōök') n. A savory preserve made of white currants or gooseberries. [After Bar-le-Duc, a town of northeast France.]

Bar-let-ta (bär-lēt'ə) A city of southern Italy on the Adriatic Sea west-northwest of Bari. It passed to the Goths after the fall of the Roman Empire. Population, 83,719.

bar-ley (bär'lē) n. 1. A grass in the genus Hordeum, native to temperate regions, having flowers in terminal, often long-awned spikes. 2. The grain of H. vulgare or its varieties, used for livestock feed, malt production, and cereal. [Middle English barli, from Old English bærlic. See bhaires- in Appendix.]

bar-ley-corn (bär'lē-kōrn') n. 1. The grain of barley. 2. A unit of measure equal to the width of a grain of barley, or about 3 inch (0.85 centimeter).

barley sugar (bär'lē shōög'ər) n. A clear, hard candy made by boiling down sugar, formerly with an extract of barley added.

Bar-low (bär'lō'), Joel. 1754-1812. American poet and diplomat in Algiers (1795-1797). Among his noted poetic works are "The Hasty Pudding" (1796) and the epic Columbiad (1807).

Barlow knife (bär'lō' nīf) n. A two-bladed pocketknife with a short, spear-shaped blade for prying and gouging and a long, fine blade for carving and slicing. [After Barlow, the family name of its makers, two brothers in Sheffield, England.]

barm (bärm) n. The yeasty foam that rises to the surface of fermenting malt liquors. [Middle English berme, from Old English beorma, yeast. See bhreu- in Appendix.] bar-maid (bär'mād') n. A woman who serves drinks in a bar.

bar-man (bär'mən) n. A man who serves drinks in a bar.

Bar-me-cid-al (bär'mī-sīd'l) also Bar-me-cide (bär'mī-sīd') adj. Plentiful or abundant in appearance only; illusory: a Barmecidal feast. [After Barmecide, a nobleman in The Arabian Nights, who served an imaginary feast to a beggar.]

bar mitz-vah or bar miz-vah (bär mīts'və) n. 1. A 13-year-old Jewish boy, considered an adult and responsible for his moral and religious duties. 2. The ceremony that initiates and recognizes a boy as a bar mitzvah. — v. tr. bar mitz-vahed, bar mitz-vah-ing, bar mitz-vahs. To confirm in the ceremony of bar mitzvah. [Hebrew bar mišwâ : bar, son + mišwâ, command, commandment.]

barm-y (bär'mē) adj. barm-i-er, barm-i-est. 1. Full of barm; foamy.
2. Eccentric; daft.

barn (bärn) n. 1. A large farm building used for storing farm products and sheltering livestock. 2. A large shed for the housing of vehicles, such as railroad cars. 3. A particularly large, typically bare building: lived in a barn of a country house. 4. Abbr. b Physics. A unit of area equal to 10^{-24} square centimeter, used to measure collision cross sections. [Middle English bern, from Old English berærn : bere, barley; see bhares- in Appendix + ærn, house.]

Bar-na-bas (bär'nə-bəs), Saint Originally Joses or Joseph the Levite. fl. first century A.D. Christian convert and missionary with Saint Paul to Cyprus and Asia Minor.

bar-na-cle (bär'nə-kəl) n. 1. Any of various marine crustaceans of the subclass Cirripedia that in the adult stage form a hard shell and remain attached to submerged surfaces, such as rocks and ships' bottoms. 2. The barnacle goose. [Middle English, barnacle goose, from Old French bernacle, from Medieval Latin bernacula, diminutive of bernaca, perhaps from Old Irish báirneach, limpet.] — bar'na-cled adj.

barnacle goose (bär'nə-kəl gōōs) n. A waterfowl (Branta leucopsis) of northern Europe and Greenland that breeds in the Arctic and has a white face with a black streak between the eyes and bill.

Bar-nard (bär'nərd, bär-närd'), Christiaan Neethling. Born 1923. South African surgeon who performed the first human heart transplant (1967).

Bar-nard (bär'nərd), Edward Emerson. 1857-1923. American astronomer and pioneer in photography noted for the discovery of Jupiter's fifth satellite (1892) and Barnard's star (1916), the second-nearest star system to the sun.

Bar-nard (bär'nərd), Frederick Augustus Porter. 1809-1889. American educator and advocate of higher educational opportunities for women. He was the president of Columbia University from 1864 to 1889. Barnard College is named in his honor.

Bar-nard (bär'nərd), George Grey. 1863-1938. American sculptor whose early works, such as Struggle of Two Natures in Man (1894), were influenced by Rodin. A colossal statue of Abraham Lincoln (1917) is perhaps his best-known work.

Bar-nard (bär'nərd), Henry. 1811-1900. American educator who sought higher standards in public schools and was the first U.S. commissioner of education (1867-1870).

Bar-na-ul (bär'nə-ōōl') A city of south-central Russia on the Ob River south of Novosibirsk. It is an industrial center in a mining and agricultural region. Population, 578,000.

barn-burn-er (bärn'bûr'nər) n. Informal. An extremely impressive event or successful outcome: "September will not be any barnburner [for car sales]" (Lee Iacocca).

barn dance (bärn dāns) n. A social gathering, often held in a barn, with music and square dancing.

Barnes (bärnz), Albert Coombs. 1873-1951. American physician and art collector noted for his discovery of Argyrol and his collection of modern French paintings.

Bar-ne-veldt or Bar-ne-veld (bär'nə-vělt'), Jan van Olden. 1547-1619. Dutch public official who negotiated a treaty with Spain (1609) and opposed certain Calvinist doctrines, both of which actions led to his arrest and execution for treason.

barn owl (bärn owl) n. A predatory nocturnal bird (Tyto alba) having a white, heart-shaped face, buff-brown upper plumage, and pale underparts, often nesting in barns and other buildings. Also called monkey-faced owl

Barns-ley (bärnz'lē) A municipal borough of northern England north of Sheffield. It is a transportation and industrial center in a coal-mining area. Population, 225,800.

Barn-sta-ble (bärn'stə-bəl) A town of southeast Massachusetts on central Cape Cod. It is a resort community with many fine beaches. Population, 30,898.

Barn-sta-ple (bärn'stə-pəl) A municipal borough of southwest England on Barnstaple Bay, an inlet of the Bristol Channel. Incorporated in 1557, Barnstaple is a marketing town and tourist center. Population, 19,025.

barn-storm (bärn'stôrm') v. barn-stormed, barn-storm-ing, barn-storms. — v. intr. 1. To travel around the countryside making political speeches, giving lectures, or presenting plays. 2. To appear at county fairs and carnivals in exhibitions of stunt flying and parachute jumping. — v. tr. To travel across while engaging in barnstorming. — barn'storm'er n.

barn swallow (bärn swöl'ō) n. A widely distributed bird (Hirundo rustica) that nests in barns and caves and has a deeply forked tail, a dark-blue back, and tan underparts.

Bar-num (bär'nəm), P(hineas) T(aylor). 1810-1891. American showman who established The Greatest Show on Earth (1871), which was merged with its major competition (1881) to form the Barnum and Bailey Circus.

barn-yard (bärn'yärd') n. The area surrounding a barn, often enclosed by a fence. — adj. Smutty; earthy: barnyard humor.

barnyard grass (bärn'yärd' gräs) n. Any of certain grasses in the genus Echinochloa, especially the Old World annual species E. crusgalli, used sometimes for forage and widespread as a weed.

baro- or bar- pref. Weight; pressure: barometer. [From Greek baros, weight. See g^werə-1 in Appendix.]

Bar-ro-da (bə-rō'də) A city of west-central India southeast of Ahmadabad. Once the capital of the princely state of Baroda, it is noted for its public buildings, palaces, and Hindu temples. Population, 734,473.

bar-o-gram (bär'ə-gräm') n. A record produced by a barograph.

bar-o-graph (bär'ə-gräf') n. A recording barometer. — bar'o-graph'ic adj.

Bar-ro-ja y Nes-si (bə-rō'hə ē nēs'ē, bə-rō'hä), Pío. 1872-1956. Spanish writer whose novels largely concern the intellectual and political climate of his homeland.

Bar-ro-lo (bə-rō'lō', bə-rō'-) n. A full-bodied red wine produced in Italy. [After Barolo in the Piedmont region of Italy.]

ba-rom-e-ter (bə-röm'i-tər) n. 1. Abbr. bar. An instrument for measuring atmospheric pressure, used especially in weather forecasting. 2. Something that registers or responds to fluctuations; an indicator: Opinion polls serve as a barometer of the public mood. — bar'o-met'ric (bär'ə-mēt'rik), bar'o-met'ri-cal adj. — bar'o-met'ri-cal-ly adv. — ba-rom'e-try n.

bar-on (bär'ən) n. 1. a. A British nobleman of the lowest rank. b. A nobleman of continental Europe, ranked differently in various countries. c. A Japanese nobleman of the lowest rank. d. Also Baron. Abbr. Bn., bn. Used as the title for such a nobleman. 2. a. A feudal tenant holding his rights and title directly from a king or another feudal superior. b. A lord or nobleman; a peer. 3. One having great wealth, power, and influence in a specified sphere of activity: an oil baron.

4. A cut of beef consisting of a double sirloin. [Middle English, from Old French, probably of Germanic origin.]

bar-on-age (bǎr'ə-nĭj) n. 1. The peers of a kingdom considered as a group.

2. Barons considered as a group. 3. The rank or dignity of a baron. 4. A list of barons.

bar-on-ess (bǎr'ə-nĭs) n. 1. a. The wife or widow of a baron. b. A woman holding the title to a barony. 2. Also Baroness. Used as the title for such a noblewoman.

bar-on-et (bǎr'ə-nĭt, bǎr'ə-nĕt') n. 1. A man holding a British hereditary title of honor reserved for commoners, ranking immediately below the barons and above all orders of knighthood except the Garter. 2. Also Baronet. Abbr. Bart., Bt. Used as the title for such a man. [Middle English, diminutive of baron, baron. See BARON.]

bar-on-et-age (bǎr'ə-nĭ-tĭj, -nĕt'ĭj) n. 1. Baronets considered as a group. 2. The rank or dignity of a baronet. 3. A list of baronets.

bar-on-et-cy (bǎr'ə-nĭt-sĕ, -nĕt'sĕ) n. pl. bar-on-et-cies. The rank or dignity of a baronet or a baronetess.

bar-on-et-ess (bǎr'ə-nĭ-tĭs, bǎr'ə-nĕt'ĭs) n. 1. A woman holding a British hereditary title of honor reserved for commoners, ranking immediately below the barons and above all orders of knighthood except the Garter. 2. Baronetess. Abbr. Btss. Used as the title for such a woman.

ba-rong (bə-rōng', -rōng') n. A large, broad-bladed knife used by the Moros of the Philippines. [Native word in the Philippines.]

ba-ro-ni-al (bə-rō'nĭ-əl) adj. 1. Of or relating to a baron or barony. 2. Suited for or befitting a baron; stately and grand: a baronial mansion.

bar-o-ny (bǎr'ə-nĕ) n. pl. bar-o-nies. 1. The domain of a baron. 2. The rank or dignity of a baron.

ba-roque (bə-rōk') adj. 1. also Baroque. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a style in art and architecture developed in Europe from about 1550 to 1700, emphasizing dramatic, often strained effect and typified by bold, curving forms, elaborate ornamentation, and overall balance of disparate parts. 2. Also Baroque. Music. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a style of composition that flourished in Europe from about 1600 to 1750, marked by chromaticism, strict forms, and elaborate ornamentation. 3. Marked by rich and sometimes bizarre or incongruous ornamentation. See Synonyms at ornate. 4. Irregular in shape: baroque pearls. — n. Also Baroque The baroque style or period in art, architecture, or music. [French, from Italian barocco, and from Portuguese barroco.] —ba-roque/ly adv.

bar·o·re·cep·tor (băr'ə-rĭ-sĕp'tər) n. A sensory nerve ending that is stimulated by changes in pressure, especially one in the walls of blood vessels such as the carotid sinus.

Bar·rot·se·land (bə-rŏt'sĕ-länd') A former kindgom of central Africa, now the western part of Zambia.

ba·rouche (bə-rōōsh') n. A four-wheeled carriage with a collapsible top, two double seats inside opposite each other, and a box seat outside in front for the driver. [German Barutsche, from Italian biroccio, from Vulgar Latin birotium*, from Late Latin birotus, two-wheeled : Latin bi-, bi-; see dwo- in Appendix + Latin rota, wheel; see ret- in Appendix.]

barque (bärk) n. Nautical. Variant of bark³.

bar·quen·tine (bär'kən-tĕn') n. Nautical. Variant of barkentine.

Bar·qui·si·me·to (bär'kə-sə-mā'tō, -kĕ-sĕ-mĕ'tō) A city of northwest Venezuela west-southwest of Caracas. It was founded in 1552 and rebuilt after a major earthquake in 1812. Population, 504,000.

bar·rack¹ (bär'æk) v. tr. bar-racked, bar-rack·ing, bar-racks. To house (soldiers, for example) in quarters. — n. Abbr. bks. 1. Often bar-racks (bär'æks). A building or group of buildings used to house military personnel. 2. Often barracks. A large, unadorned building used for temporary occupancy. [From French baraques, barracks, from Spanish barracas, soldiers' tents or huts.]

bar·rack² (bär'æk) v. bar-racked, bar-rack·ing, bar-racks. — v. intr.

1. Chiefly British. To jeer or shout at a player, speaker, or team. 2. Australian. To shout support for a team. — v. tr. Chiefly British. To shout against; jeer at.

[Perhaps from Irish dialectal barrack, to brag; akin to brag.] — bar'/rack·er n.

barracks bag (bär'æks bæg) n. A cloth bag, usually with a drawstring, for the storage of clothing or laundry.

bar·ra·coon (bär'ə-kōōn') n. A barracks in which slaves or convicts were formerly held in temporary confinement. [Spanish barracón, augmentative of bar-raca, hut. See BARRACK¹.]

bar·ra·cu·da (bär'ə-kōō'də) n. pl. barracuda or bar·ra·cu·das. Any of various fierce, mostly tropical marine fishes of the genus Sphyræna that resemble pike, have a projecting lower jaw with fanglike teeth, and include some edible species. [American Spanish, from Spanish dialectal barraco, overlapping tooth.]

bar·rage¹ (bär'ij) n. An artificial obstruction, such as a dam or an irrigation channel, built in a watercourse to increase its depth or to divert its flow. [French, from barrer, to bar, from barre, bar, from Old French. See BAR¹.]

bar·rage² (bə-rāzh') n. 1. a. A heavy curtain of artillery fire directed in front of friendly troops to screen and protect them. b. A rapid, concentrated discharge of missiles, as from small arms. 2. An overwhelming, concentrated outpouring, as of words: a barrage of criticism. — v. tr. bar-raged, bar-rag·ing, bar-rag-es. To direct a barrage at. [French (tir de) barrage, barrier (fire). See BARRAGE¹.]

SYNONYMS: barrage, bombard, pepper, shower. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to direct a concentrated outpouring, as of missiles or words, at something or someone”: barraging the speaker with questions; bombarded the box office with ticket orders; peppered the senator with protests; showered the child with gifts.

bar-rage balloon (bə-rāzh/ bə-lōn/) n. A balloon anchored singly or in a series over a military objective to support nets that hinder the passage of enemy aircraft.

Bar-ra Man-sa (bä'rä män'sä) A city of southeast Brazil west-northwest of Rio de Janeiro. It is a rail junction and an industrial center. Population, 123,335.

bar-ra-mun-da (bär'ə-mün'də) also bar-ra-mun-di (-dē) n. pl. barra-munda or bar-ra-mun-das also barramundi or bar-ra-mun-dis. Any of several Australian food fishes, such as the lungfish. Also called ceratodus [Probably of Aboriginal origin.]

bar-ran-ca (bə-räng'kə) also bar-ran-co (-kō) n. Southwestern U.S. 1. A deep ravine or gorge. 2. A bluff. [Spanish, probably of Iberian origin.]

Bar-ran-ca-ber-me-ja (bä-räng'kä-věr-mě'hä) a city of northwest-central Colombia on the Magdalena River west-southwest of Bucaramanga. It is a river port. Population, 139,708.

Bar-ran-quil-la (bär'ən-kē'ə, -yə, bä'rän-) A city of northern Colombia on the Magdalena River near the Caribbean Sea. Founded in 1629, it is Colombia's chief port. Population, 891,545.

bar-ra-tor also bar-ra-ter (bär'ə-tər) n. Law. One that persistently instigates lawsuits. [Middle English baratour, from Old French barateour, swindler, from barater, to cheat, perhaps from Vulgar Latin prattāre*, from Greek prattein, to do.]

bar-ra-try (bär'ə-trē) n. pl. bar-ra-tries. 1. Law. The offense of persistently instigating lawsuits, typically groundless ones. 2. An unlawful breach of duty on the part of a ship's master or crew resulting in injury to the ship's owner: “Gross misconduct of the officers is... barratry” (Tom Clancy). 3. Sale or purchase of positions in church or state. [Middle English barratrie, the sale of church offices, from Old French baraterie, deception, malversation, from barater, to cheat. See BARRATOR.] —bar'ra-trous (-trəs) adj. —bar'ra-trous-ly adv.

Barr body (bär böd'ē) n. Genetics. The condensed, inactive, single X chromosome found in the nuclei of somatic cells of most female mammals. Its presence is the basis of sex determination tests that are performed, for example, on athletes. Also called sex chromatin [After Murray L. Barr (born 1908), Canadian anatomist.]

barred (bärd) adj. Marked with bars or stripes: barred prison cells; barred plumage on a bird.

barred owl (bärd owl) n. A large North American owl (Strix varia) having barred, brownish plumage across the breast, a streaked belly, and a strident, hooting cry.

Bar-rei-ro (bä-rä'rōō) A city of western Portugal, an industrial suburb of Lisbon on the estuary of the Tagus River. Population, 50,863.

bar-rel (bär'əl) n. 1. A large, cylindrical container, usually made of staves bound together with hoops, with a flat top and bottom of equal diameter. 2. The quantity that a barrel with a given or standard capacity will hold. 3. Abbr. bar., bbl, bbl., bl. Any of various units of volume or capacity. In the U.S. Customary System it varies, as a liquid measure, from 31 to 42 gallons (120 to 159 liters) as established by law or usage. See Table at measurement. 4. The cylindrical part or hollow shaft of any of various mechanisms, as: a. The metal, cylindrical part of a firearm through which the bullet travels. b. A cylinder that contains a movable piston. c. The drum of a capstan. d. The cylinder within the mechanism of a timepiece that contains the mainspring. 5. Informal. A large quantity: a barrel of fun. 6. Slang. An act or an instance of moving rapidly, often recklessly, in a motor vehicle. — adj. Likened to a barrel, as in shape: a barrel chest; barrel hips. — v. bar-reled or bar-relled, bar-rel-ing or bar-rel-ling, bar-rels or bar-rels. — v. tr. To put or pack in a barrel. — v. intr. Slang. To move at a high speed. — idioms. on the barrel (or on the barrelhead). Granting, giving, or requesting no credit: paid cash on the barrel for the car. over a barrel. In a very awkward position from which extrication is difficult: During the negotiations the opposing faction had us over a barrel. [Middle English barel, from Old French baril.]

barrel cactus (bär'əl kāk'təs) n. Any of several cacti, especially in the genera Ferocactus and Echinocactus, having unbranched, globular to columnar, ribbed spiny stems.

barrel chair (bär'əl châr) n. A large upholstered chair having a high, rounded back resembling a half barrel.

bar-rel-ful (bär'əl-fōōl') n. pl. bar-rel-fuls. The amount that a barrel can hold.

bar-rel-head (bär'əl-hĕd') n. The flat top of a barrel.

bar-rel-house (bär'əl-hous') n. 1. A disreputable old-time saloon or bawdyhouse. 2. Music. An early style of jazz characterized by free group improvisation and an accented two-beat rhythm.

barrel organ (bär'əl ôr'gən) n. Music. A mechanical instrument on which a tune is played by the action of a revolving cylinder fitted with pegs or pins that open pipe valves supplied by a bellows.

barrel roll (bǎr'əl rōl) n. A flight maneuver in which an airplane makes a complete rotation on its longitudinal axis while approximately maintaining its original direction.

bar-ren (bǎr'ən) adj. 1. a. Not producing offspring. b. Incapable of producing offspring. See Synonyms at sterile. 2. Lacking vegetation, especially useful vegetation. 3. Unproductive of results or gains; unprofitable: barren efforts. See Synonyms at futile. 4. Devoid of something specified: writing barren of insight. See Synonyms at empty. 5. Lacking in liveliness or interest. — n. A tract of unproductive land, often with a scrubby growth of trees. Often used in the plural. [Middle English barreine, from Old French brahaigne, perhaps of Germanic origin.] —bar'ren-ly adv. —bar'ren-ness n.

Bar-ren Grounds (bǎr'ən groundz) A treeless, sparsely inhabited region of northern Canada northwest of Hudson Bay and east of the Mackenzie River basin.

barren strawberry (bǎr'ən strô'bēr'ē) n. A low-growing, eastern North American perennial herb (Waldsteinia fragarioides) having strawberrylike leaves, yellow flowers, and small, dry, inedible fruit.

Bar-rès (bä-rēs'), Auguste Maurice. 1862-1923. French writer and politician whose written works trace his metamorphosis from egocentric to nationalist.

bar-rette (bə-rět') n. A small clasp used by women and girls for holding the hair in place. [French, diminutive of barre, bar, from Old French. See BAR¹.]

bar-ri-cade (bǎr'ī-kād', bǎr'ī-kād') n. 1. A structure set up across a route of access to obstruct the passage of an enemy. 2. Something that serves as an obstacle; a barrier. See Synonyms at bulwark. — v. tr. bar-ri-cad-ed, bar-ri-cad-ing, bar-ri-cades. 1. To close off or block with a barricade. 2. To keep in or out by means of a barricade. [French, from barrique, barrel, from Old Provençal barrica, from Vulgar Latin barrīca*. See EMBARGO.] —bar'ri-cad'er n.

Bar-rie (bǎr'ē) A city of southern Ontario, Canada, on Lake Simcoe north-northwest of Toronto. It is a manufacturing center and summer resort. Population, 38,423.

Bar-rie (bǎr'ē), Sir J(ames) M(atthew). 1860-1937. British writer whose whimsical and fantastic works include the play Peter Pan (1904).

bar-ri-er (bǎr'ē-ər) n. 1. A structure, such as a fence, built to bar passage. 2. Something immaterial that obstructs or impedes: Intolerance is a barrier to understanding. See Synonyms at obstacle. 3. Ecology. A physical or biological factor that limits the migration, interbreeding, or free movement of individuals or populations. 4. A boundary or limit. 5. Something that separates or holds apart. 6. A movable gate that keeps racehorses in line before the start of a race. 7. The palisades or fences enclosing the lists of a medieval tournament. Often used in the plural. 8. Geology. An ice barrier. [Middle English barrer, from Old French barriere, from Vulgar Latin barrāria*, from barra*, bar.]

barrier reef (băr'ē-ər rēf) n. A long, narrow ridge of coral or rock parallel to and relatively near a coastline, separated from the coastline by a lagoon too deep for coral growth.

bar-ring (băr'ing) prep. Apart from the occurrence of; excepting: Barring strong headwinds, the plane will arrive on schedule.

Bar-ri-ton* (băr'ing-tən) A town of eastern Rhode Island southeast of Providence. It was part of Massachusetts until 1746. Population, 15,849.

bar-ri-o* (băr'rē-ō', băr'-) *n. pl. bar-ri-os. 1. An urban district or quarter in a Spanish-speaking country. 2. A chiefly Spanish-speaking community or neighborhood in a U.S. city. [Spanish, from Arabic barrī, of an open area, from barr, open area.]

bar-ri-ter* (băr'ī-stər) n. Chiefly British. A lawyer admitted to plead at the bar in the superior courts. See Synonyms at lawyer. [Probably blend of BAR¹, and obsolete legister, legist; see LEGIST.]

Bar-ron* (băr'ən), Clarence Walker. 1855-1928. American financial editor who purchased Dow Jones & Company (1901), thereby acquiring the Wall Street Journal, and founded Barron's Financial Weekly (1921).

bar-room* (băr'rōom', -rōom') n. A room or building in which alcoholic beverages are sold at a bar.

Bar-ros* (băr'oōsh'), João de. 1496-1570. Portuguese historian whose major work, Decades (1552-1615), is a history of the Portuguese in the East Indies.

bar-row*¹ (băr'ō) n. 1. A flat, rectangular tray or cart with handles at each end. 2. A wheelbarrow. [Middle English barowe, from Old English bearwe. See bher-¹ in Appendix.]

bar-row*² (băr'ō) n. A large mound of earth or stones placed over a burial site. [Middle English bergh, from Old English beorg, hill. See bhergh-² in Appendix.]

bar-row*³ (băr'ō) n. A pig that has been castrated before reaching sexual maturity. [Middle English barow, from Old English bearg.]

Bar-row* (băr'ō), Isaac. 1630-1677. English theologian, scholar, and mathematician who wrote about trigonometry, optics, and papal supremacy.

Bar-row, Point*. The northernmost point of Alaska, in the northwest on the Arctic Ocean. The nearby city of Barrow has research and government facilities. Population, 2,207.

Bar-row-in-Fur-ness (băr'ō-ĭn-fûr'nĭs) A borough of northwest England on a peninsula in an inlet of the Irish Sea northwest of Manchester. It is a shipbuilding center. Population, 72,800.

Bar-ry* (băr'ē), John. 1745-1803. Irish-born American Revolutionary naval officer who commanded the Lexington in the capture (1776) of the Edward, the first British ship taken during the war.

- Bar-ry (băr'ē), Leonora Marie Kearney. Known as "Mother Lake." 1849-1930. Irish-born American labor leader who campaigned for better factory wages and working conditions for women and children.
- Bar-ry (băr'ē), Philip. 1896-1949. American playwright whose works, mostly comedies about the wealthy, include The Philadelphia Story (1939).
- Bar-ry-more (băr'i-môr', -môr') Family of American actors, including Lionel (1878-1954), who won an Oscar in 1931 for Free Soul; his sister Ethel (1879-1959), who appeared mainly on stage but also won an Academy Award in 1944 for None but the Lonely Heart; and their brother John (1882-1942), known as "the Great Profile," who appeared on stage as Hamlet and Richard III and in many motion pictures, including Dinner at Eight (1933).
- bar sinister (bär sɪn'ɪ-stər) n. 1. Heraldry. A bend or baton sinister held to signify bastardy. 2. A hint or proof of illegitimate birth.
- bar-stool (bär'stōol') n. A usually high stool with a cushioned seat, used chiefly as seating for patrons at a bar.
- Bar-stow (bär'stō) A city of southeast California northeast of Los Angeles. It was founded in the 1880's as a silver-mining town. Population, 21,472.
- Bart. abbr. Baronet.
- bar-tend-er (bär'tɛn'dər) n. One who mixes and serves alcoholic drinks at a bar. Also called barkeeper
- bar-ter (bär'tər) v. bar-tered, bar-ter-ing, bar-ters. — v. intr. To trade goods or services without the exchange of money. — v. tr. To trade (goods or services) without the exchange of money. — n. 1. The act or practice of bartering. 2. Something bartered. — adj. Of, relating to, or being something based on bartering: a barter economy. [Middle English barteren, probably from Old French barater. See BARRATOR.] —bar'ter-er n.
- Barth (bärth), John Simmons. Born 1930. American writer whose novels, including The Sot-Weed Factor (1960, revised 1967), often examine the relationship between language and reality.
- Barth (bärt, bärth), Karl. 1886-1968. Swiss Protestant theologian who advocated a return to the principles of the Reformation and the teachings of the Bible. His published works include Church Dogmatics (1932). —Barth'i-an adj.
- Bar-thel-me (bär'thəl-mē'), Donald. 1931-1989. American writer whose sometimes surrealistic stories of modern American life have been published in collections such as Unspeakable Practices, Unnatural Acts (1968).
- Barthes (bärt), Roland. 1915-1980. French critic who applied semiology, the study of signs and symbols, to literary and social criticism.
- Bar-thol-di (bär-thöl'dē, -tôl-dē'), Frédéric Auguste. 1834-1904. French sculptor best known for his monumental figure of Liberty Enlightening the World, the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor, presented to the United States by France and dedicated in 1886.

Bar·tho·lin's gland (bär'tl-īnz gländ, -thə-līnz) n. Anatomy. Either of two small compound racemose glands located on either side of the vaginal orifice that secrete a lubricating mucus and are homologous to the bulbourethral glands in the male. [After Caspar Bartholin (1585-1629), Danish physician.]

Bar·thol·o·mew (bär-thöl'ə-myōō'), Saint Sometimes called Na·than·ael (nə-thän'yəl) One of the 12 Apostles. According to tradition, he visited India and Ethiopia and was martyred in Armenia.

bar·ti·zan also bar·ti·san (bär'tī-zən, bär'tī-zän') n. A small, overhanging turret on a wall or tower. [Alteration of bratticing, timberwork, from BRATTICE.]
—bar'ti·zaned adj.

Bar·tles·ville (bär'tlz-vīl') A city of northeast Oklahoma north of Tulsa. It is a trade center in a ranching and oil-producing region. Population, 34,256.

Bart·lett¹ (bärt'līt) A town of southwest Tennessee, a suburb of Memphis. Population, 17,170.

Bart·lett² (bärt'līt) n. A widely grown variety of pear with yellowish skin and soft, juicy white flesh, eaten fresh or often canned. [After Enoch Bartlett (1779-1860).]

Bart·lett (bärt'līt), John. 1820-1905. American publisher and editor who compiled Familiar Quotations (1855) and a Shakespearean concordance (1894).

Bart·lett (bärt'līt), John Russell. 1805-1886. American historian and antiquarian who compiled the Dictionary of Americanisms (1848) and served (1850-1853) on the commission that established the boundary between Mexico and the United States.

Bart·lett (bärt'līt), Robert Abram. Known as "Captain Bob." 1875-1946. American explorer who accompanied Robert E. Peary's expedition to the North Pole (1909) and led numerous other Arctic voyages.

Bar·tók (bär'tök', -tök'), Béla. 1881-1945. Hungarian pianist and composer whose works, including the music for the opera Duke Bluebeard's Castle (1911) and Concerto for Orchestra (1943), combine Eastern European folk music with dissonant harmonies. —Bar·tók'i·an adj.

Bar·to·lom·me·o (bär-tōl'ə-mā'ō, -tō'lō-), Fra. Originally Bartolommeo di Pagolo del Fattorino. 1475?-1517. Italian painter of the Florentine school whose works include The Vision of Saint Bernard (1500-1507) and Madonna della Misericordia (1515).

Bar·ton (bär'tn), Clara. Full name Clarissa Harlowe Barton. 1821-1912. American administrator who did battlefield relief work during the Civil War and organized the American Red Cross (1881).

Bar·ton (bär'tn), Sir Derek Harold Richard. Born 1918. British chemist. He shared a 1969 Nobel Prize for the study of organic molecules.

Bar·tram (bär'trəm), John. 1699-1777. American botanist who established the first botanical garden in the colonies (1728) and corresponded with European botanists, thus introducing many American species to Europe. His son William Bartram (1739-1823) was also a botanist.

Bar-uch (bâr'ək, bə-rōōk) n. Bible. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

Ba-ruch (bə-rōōk'), Bernard Mannes. 1870-1965. American stock broker, public official, and political adviser for every President from Woodrow Wilson to John F. Kennedy.

bar-ware (bār'wâr') n. The glassware and other items used in preparing alcoholic drinks.

bar-y-cen-ter (bār'ī-sĕn'tər) n. See center of mass. [Greek barus, heavy; see g^werə-¹ in Appendix + CENTER.]

bar-y-on (bār'ē-ōn') n. Any of a family of subatomic particles, including the nucleon and hyperon multiplets, that participate in strong interactions, are composed of three quarks, and are generally more massive than mesons. Also called heavy particle [Greek barus, heavy; see g^werə-¹ in Appendix + -ON¹.]

—bar'y-on'ic adj.

baryon number (bār'ē-ōn' nŭm'bər) n. A quantum number equal to the difference between the number of baryons and the number of antibaryons in a system of subatomic particles. It remains the same throughout any reaction.

Ba-rysh-ni-kov (bə-rīsh'nī-kōf'), Mikhail Nikolayavich. Born 1948. Russian-born ballet dancer and choreographer who after performing with the Kirov Ballet in St. Petersburg defected to the United States (1974), where he has danced for the American Ballet Theater, appeared in independent productions, and choreographed many works.

bar-y-sphere (bār'ī-sfîr) n. See centrosphere (n., sense 2). [Greek barus, heavy; see g^werə-¹ in Appendix + SPHERE.]

ba-ry-ta (bə-rī'tə) n. Any of several barium compounds, such as barium sulfate. [New Latin, from Greek barutēs, weight, from barus, heavy. See g^werə-¹ in Appendix.]

ba-ry-tes (bə-rī'tēz) n. Variant of barite.

bar-y-tone (bār'ī-tōn') n. Music. Variant of baritone.

Bar-zun (bār'zŭn), Jacques Martin. Born 1907. French-born American educator, author, and historian whose works include Darwin, Marx, Wagner (1941), The American University (1968), and The Use and Abuse of Art (1974).

B.A.S. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Agricultural Science. 2. Bachelor of Applied Science.

bas-al (bā'səl, -zəl) adj. 1. a. Of, relating to, located at, or forming a base.

b. Botany. Located at or near the base of a plant stem, or at the base of any other plant part: basal placentation. 2. Of primary importance; basic. —bas'al-ly adv.

basal body (bā'səl bōd'ē) n. A cellular organelle associated with the formation of cilia and flagella and similar to the centriole in structure. Also called basal granule, kinetosome.

basal cell (bā'səl səl) n. Biology. A type of cell found in the deepest layer of the epithelium.

basal ganglion (bā'səl gǎng'glē-ən) n. Anatomy. Any of several masses of gray matter embedded in the cerebral hemispheres that are involved in the regulation of voluntary movement.

basal granule (bā'səl grăn'yōōl) n. See basal body.

basal metabolic rate (bā'səl mēt'ə-bōl'ik rāt) n. Abbr. BMR Physiology. The rate at which energy is used by an organism at complete rest, measured in human beings by the heat given off per unit time, and expressed as the calories released per kilogram of body weight or per square meter of body surface per hour.

basal metabolism (bā'səl mī-tǎb'ə-līz'əm) n. Abbr. BM Physiology. The minimum amount of energy required to maintain vital functions in an organism at complete rest, measured by the basal metabolic rate in a fasting individual who is awake and resting in a comfortably warm environment.

ba-salt (bə-sōlt', bā'sōlt') n. 1. A hard, dense, dark volcanic rock composed chiefly of plagioclase, pyroxene, and olivine, and often having a glassy appearance. 2. A kind of hard unglazed pottery. [Latin basaltēs, alteration of basanītēs, touchstone, from Greek basanitēs (lithos), from basanos, of Egyptian origin.]
—ba-sal'tic (-sōlt'tik) adj.

B.A.Sc. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Agricultural Science. 2. Bachelor of Applied Science.

bas-cule (bās'kyōōl) n. A device or structure, such as a drawbridge, counterbalanced so that when one end is lowered the other is raised. [French, seesaw : bas, low (from Medieval Latin bassus) + cul, bottom (from Latin cūlus, rump); see (s)keu- in Appendix.]

base¹ (bās) n. Abbr. b., B. 1. a. The lowest or bottom part: the base of a cliff; the base of a lamp. b. Biology. The part of an animal or plant organ nearest its point of attachment. 2. a. A supporting part or layer; a foundation: a skyscraper built on a base of solid rock. b. A basic or underlying element; infrastructure: the nation's industrial base. 3. The fundamental principle or underlying concept of a system or theory; a basis. 4. A fundamental ingredient; a chief constituent: a paint with an oil base. 5. The fact, observation, or premise from which a reasoning process is begun. 6. a. Games. A starting point, safety area, or goal. b. Baseball. Any one of the four corners of an infield, marked by a bag or plate, that must be touched by a runner before a run can be scored. 7. A center of organization, supply, or activity; a headquarters. 8. a. A fortified center of operations. b. A supply center for a large force of military personnel. 9. Architecture. The lowest part of a structure, such as a wall, considered as a separate unit: the base of a column. 10. Heraldry. The lower part of a shield. 11. Linguistics. A morpheme or morphemes regarded as a form to which affixes or other bases may be added. 12. Mathematics. a. The side or face of a geometric figure to which an altitude is or is thought to be drawn. b. The number that is raised to various powers to generate the principal counting units of a number system. c. The number raised to the logarithm of a designated number in order to produce that designated number. 13. A line used as a reference for measurement or computations. 14. Chemistry. a. Any of a large class of compounds, including the hydroxides and oxides of metals, having a bitter taste, a slippery solution, the ability to turn litmus blue, and the ability to react with acids to form salts. b. A molecular or ionic substance capable of combining with a proton to form a new substance. c. A substance that provides a pair of electrons for a covalent bond with an acid. 15. Electronics. a. The region in a transistor between the emitter and the collector. b. The electrode attached to this region. 16. One of the purines (adenine and guanine) or pyrimidines (cystosine, thymine, and uracil) that occurs attached to the sugar component of DNA or RNA. — adj. 1. Forming or serving as a base: a base layer of soil. 2. Situated at or near the base or bottom: a base camp for the mountain climbers. — v. tr. based, bas-ing, bas-es. 1. To form or provide a base for: based the new company in Portland. 2. To find a basis for; establish: based her conclusions on the report; a film based on a best-selling novel. 3. To assign to a base; station: troops based in the Middle East. — idiom. off base. Badly mistaken. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin basis, from Greek. See g^wā- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: base, basis, foundation, ground, groundwork. These nouns all pertain to what underlies and supports. Base is applied chiefly to material objects: amazed by the size of the monument's base. Basis is used in a nonphysical sense: "The basis of a democratic state is liberty" (Aristotle). Foundation applies physically (the foundation of a house) and figuratively (a statement without foundation in fact). It often stresses firmness of support for something of relative magnitude: "Our flagrant disregard for the law attacks the foundation of this society" (Peter D. Relic). Ground may denote an actual working surface, as in art (a white design on a blue ground); more often it is used figuratively in the sense of a justifiable reason: grounds for divorce. Groundwork is most often applied figuratively, in the sense of a necessary preliminary: laid the groundwork for future negotiations.

base² (bās) adj. bas-er, bas-est. 1. a. Having or showing a contemptible, mean-spirited, or selfish lack of human decency. See Synonyms at mean². b. Devoid of high values or ethics: a base, degrading way of life. c. Inferior in value or quality. 2. Containing inferior substances: a base metal. 3. Archaic. Of low birth, rank, or position. 4. Obsolete. Short in stature. — n. Obsolete. A bass singer or voice. [Middle English bas, low, from Old French, from Medieval Latin bassus.] — base'ly adv.

base-ball (bās'bôl') n. 1. Sports. a. A game played with a bat and ball by two opposing teams of nine players, each team playing alternately in the field and at bat, the players at bat having to run a course of four bases laid out in a diamond pattern in order to score. b. The ball that is used in this game. 2. Games. A game of darts in which the players attempt to score points by throwing the darts at a target laid out in the form of a baseball diamond. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a baseball hat; baseball gloves.

base-board (bās'bôrd', -bôrd') n. A molding that conceals the joint between an interior wall and a floor. Also called mopboard base-born (bās'bôrn') adj. 1. Ignoble; contemptible. 2. a. Born of unwed parents; illegitimate. b. Of humble birth.

base-burn-er (bās'bûr'nər) n. A coal stove with a hopper that automatically replenishes itself from above as lower layers of fuel are consumed.

base community (bās kə-myōō'nĭ-tē) n. Roman Catholic Church. A lay group, especially in South America, practicing nonliturgical religious devotions and striving for socioeconomic improvement in the community.

Base Exchange (bās ĩks-chānj') Abbr. BX A service mark used for general merchandise store services for government employees on a naval or air force base. This service mark, often lowercased, sometimes occurs in print with the meaning “a general merchandise store on a military base”: “The products are distributed at Army and Air Force base exchanges” (Washington Post).

base hit (bās hĭt) n. Baseball. A hit by which the batter reaches base safely without incurring an error, a fielder's choice, or a force play.

base house (bās hous) n. Slang. A crack house. [(FREE)BASE + HOUSE.]

BASE jump (bās jŭmp) n. Sports. A parachute jump from extremely high structures and earth formations, typically involving heights under 305 meters (1,000 feet). [B(UILDING) + a(ntenna tower) + S(PAN)¹ + E(ARTH) + JUMP.]

BASE-jump (bās'jŭmp') v. intr. BASE--jumped, BASE--jump-ing, BASE--jumps. Sports. To engage in the sport of parachuting off extremely high structures and earth formations. —BASE jumper n.

Ba-sel (bā'zəl) also Basle (bāl) A city of northern Switzerland on the Rhine River. It is one of the oldest intellectual centers in Europe. Population, 176,200.

base-less (bās'lĭs) adj. Having no basis or foundation in fact; unfounded.

SYNONYMS: baseless, groundless, idle, unfounded, unwarranted. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “being without a basis or foundation in fact”: a baseless accusation; groundless rumors; idle gossip; unfounded suspicions; unwarranted jealousy.

base level (bās lĕv'əl) n. The lowest level to which a land surface can be reduced by the action of running water.

base line (bās līn) n. 1. A line serving as a basis, as for measurement, calculation, or location. 2. Baseball. An area within which a base runner must stay when running between bases. 3. Sports. The boundary line at either end of a court, as in badminton or tennis.

base-man (bās'mən) n. Baseball. A player assigned to first, second, or third base.

base-ment (bās'mənt) n. 1. The substructure or foundation of a building. 2. The lowest habitable story of a building, usually below ground level. 3. New England. A public toilet, especially one in a school. [Perhaps obsolete Dutch, foundation, possibly from Italian basamento, base of a column, from basare, to found, from base, bottom, from Latin basis. See BASIS.]

basement membrane (bās'mənt mēm'brān') n. A thin, delicate layer of connective tissue underlying the epithelium of many organs. Also called basement lamina base-ness (bās'nīs) n. The quality or state of being contemptible, mean-spirited, or selfish.

ba-sen-ji (bə-sēn'jē) n. A dog of a breed originally from Africa, having a short, smooth, reddish-brown coat and characterized by the absence of a bark. [Of Bantu origin; akin to Tshiluba basenji, inhabitants of the hinterland : ba-, pl. pref. + -senji.]

base on balls (bās ōn bōlz) n. Baseball. An advance to first base that is awarded to a batter who takes four pitches that are balls.

base pair (bās pâr) n. The pair of nitrogenous bases, consisting of a purine linked by hydrogen bonds to a pyrimidine, that connects the complementary strands of a DNA molecule or of a double-stranded RNA molecule. The base pairs are adenine-thymine and guanine-cytosine in DNA, and adenine-uracil and guanine-cytosine in RNA.

base pay (bās pā) n. An amount or a rate of compensation for a specified position of employment or activity excluding any other payments or allowances.

base runner (bās rŭn'ər) n. Baseball. A member of the team at bat who has safely reached or is trying to reach a base.

ba-ses (bā'sēz') n. Plural of basis.

bash (băsh) v. bashed, bash-ing, bash-es. — v. tr. 1. To strike with a heavy, crushing blow. 2. Informal. To criticize (another) harshly, accusatorially, and threateningly: “He bashed the... government unmercifully over the... spy affair” (Lally Weymouth). — v. intr. Informal. To engage in harsh, accusatory, threatening criticism. — n. 1. Informal. A heavy, crushing blow. 2. Slang. A celebration; a party. [Origin unknown.] —bash'er n.

Ba-shan (bā'shān) An ancient region of Palestine northeast of the Sea of Galilee.

ba-shaw (bə-shô') n. A pasha. [Arabic bāšā, from Turkish paşa, from Persian pādshāh. See PADISHAH.]

bash·ful (bāsh'fəl) adj. 1. Shy, self-conscious, and awkward in the presence of others. See Synonyms at shy¹. 2. Characterized by, showing, or resulting from shyness, self-consciousness, or awkwardness. [From Middle English basshe, from basshed, past participle of basshen, to be discomfited, probably variant of abaishen. See ABASH.] —bash'ful-ly adv. —bash'ful-ness n.

Bash·kir·i·a (bāsh-kîr'ē-ə) A region of southwest Russia in the southern Ural Mountains. It came under Russian control in the 16th century.

Ba-sho (bā'shō, bā-shô'), Matsuo. 1644-1694. Japanese poet known for his composition of haiku infused with the spirit of Zen Buddhism.

bas- or baso- pref. 1. Base; lower part: basipetal. 2. Chemical base; chemically basic: basophil. [From Latin basis, base. See BASIS.]

ba-sic (bā'sîk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or forming a base; fundamental: “Basic changes in public opinion often occur because of shifts in concerns and priorities” (Atlantic). 2. Of, being, or serving as a starting point or basis: a basic course in Russian; a set of basic woodworking tools. 3. Chemistry. a. Producing, resulting from, or relating to a base. b. Containing a base, especially in excess of acid. c. Containing oxide or hydroxide anions. Used of a salt. 4. Geology. Containing little silica, as igneous rocks. — n. 1. An essential, fundamental element or entity: the basics of math. 2. Basic training. —ba'si-cal-ly adv. —ba-sic'i-ty (-sîs'î-tē) n.

BA·SIC or Ba-sic (bā'sîk) n. Computer Science. A simplified user-level programming language often employed with remote or time-sharing computer centers. [b(eginner's) a(ll-purpose) s(ymbolic) i(nstruction) c(ode).] ba-si·chro·mat·ic (bā'sî-krō-măt'îk) adj. Easily stained with basic dye.

basic process (bā'sîk prôs'ēs') n. A method of steel production that uses a furnace lined with a basic refractory material.

basic training (bā'sîk trā'nîng) n. The initial period of training of a recruit in the armed forces.

ba-sid·i·a (bə-sîd'ē-ə) n. Plural of basidium.

ba-sid·i·o·carp (bə-sîd'ē-ə-kărp') n. A basidium-bearing structure found in such basidiomycetous fungi as mushrooms and puffballs. [BASIDI(UM) + -CARP.]

ba-sid·i·o·my·cete (bə-sîd'ē-ō-mî'sēt', -mî-sēt') n. Any of various members of a large group of fungi bearing sexually produced spores on a basidium. The group includes puffballs, shelf fungi, rusts, smuts, and mushrooms. [BASIDI(UM) + -MYCETE.] —ba-sid'i-o-my-ce'tous (-mî-sē'təs) adj.

ba-sid·i·o·spore (bə-sîd'ē-ə-spôr', -spôr') n. A sexually produced fungal spore borne on a basidium. —ba-sid'i-o-spo'rous adj.

ba-sid·i·um (bə-sîd'ē-əm) n. pl. ba-sid·i·a (-ē-ə). A small, specialized club-shaped structure typically bearing four basidiospores at the tips of minute projections. The basidium is unique to basidiomycetes and distinguishes them from other kinds of fungi. [BAS(1)- + -idium, diminutive suff. (from Greek -idion).]

—ba·sid/i·al adj.

Ba·sie (bā'sē), William. Known as “Count Basie.” 1904-1984. American musician. A pianist, band leader, and composer, he was a major force in jazz music and was especially famous for his Big Band sound.

ba·si·fixed (bā'sə-fīkst') adj. Botany. Attached by the base, as certain anthers are to their filaments.

ba·si·fy (bā'sə-fī') v. tr. ba·si·fied, ba·si·fy·ing, ba·si·fies. Chemistry. 1. To convert into a base. 2. To make alkaline.

—ba'si·fi·ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

—ba'si·fi'er n.

bas·il (bāz'əl, bā'zəl) n. 1. An Old World aromatic annual herb (Ocimum basilicum) in the mint family, cultivated for its leaves, which are a popular seasoning. Also called sweet basil

2. Any of various plants in the genus Ocimum, native to warm regions, having aromatic foliage and terminal clusters of small, usually white flowers. [Middle English, from Old French basile, from Medieval Latin basilicum, from Greek basilikon, from neuter of basilikos, royal. See BASILICA.]

Bas·il (bāz'əl, bās'-, bā'zəl, -səl), Saint Known as “the Great.” A.D. 330?-379?.

Greek Christian leader who was bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia after A.D. 370 and a vigorous opponent of Arianism.

Ba·si·lan Islands (bā-sē'lān' ī'ləndz) A group of islands in the southern Philippines separated from southwest Mindanao by the narrow Basilan Strait.

Basilan Island is the largest island in the group.

bas·i·lar (bās'ə-lər) also bas·i·lar·y (-lēr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, or located at or near the base, especially the base of the skull: the basilar artery. [New Latin basilāris, from Latin basis, base. See BASIS.]

basilar membrane (bās'ə-lər mēm'brān') n. Anatomy. A membranous portion of the cochlea in the mammalian inner ear that supports the organ of Corti.

Bas·il·don (bāz'əl-dən, bā'zəl-) An urban district of southeast England east-northeast of London. It has varied light industries. Population, 153,200.

ba·sil·i·ca (bə-sīl'i-kə) n. 1. a. A public building of ancient Rome having a central nave with an apse at one or both ends and two side aisles formed by rows of columns, which was used as a courtroom or assembly hall. b. A Christian church building of a similar design, having a nave with a semicircular apse, two or four side aisles, a narthex, and a clerestory. 2. Roman Catholic Church. A church that has been accorded certain privileges by the pope. [Latin, from Greek basilikē, from feminine of basilikos, royal, from basileus, king.] —ba·sil/i·can (-kən) adj.

Ba·si·li·ca·ta (bə-zīl'i-kä'tə, bā-zē'lē-kä'tä) A region of southern Italy bordering on the Tyrrhenian Sea and the Gulf of Taranta. It forms the instep of the Italian “boot.”

bas-i-lisk (bäs'ə-lĭsk', bätz'-) n. 1. A legendary serpent or dragon with lethal breath and glance. 2. Any of various tropical American lizards of the genus Basiliscus, characterized by a crest on the head, back, and tail and the ability to run on the hind legs. [Middle English, from Old French basilisc, from Latin basiliscus, from Greek basiliskos, diminutive of basileus, king.]

ba-sin (bā'sĭn) n. 1. a. An open, shallow, usually round container used especially for holding liquids. b. The amount that such a vessel can hold. 2. A wash-bowl; a sink. 3. a. An artificially enclosed area of a river or harbor designed so that the water level remains unaffected by tidal changes. b. A small enclosed or partly enclosed body of water. 4. A region drained by a single river system: the Amazon basin. 5. Geology. a. A broad tract of land in which the rock strata are tilted toward a common center. b. A large, bowl-shaped depression in the surface of the land or ocean floor. [Middle English, from Old French basin, from Vulgar Latin baccĭnum*, from baccus*, container, of Celtic origin.] —ba'sin-al adj.

bas-i-net (bäs'ə-nĕt', bäs'ə-nĭt) n. A small, light, rounded steel helmet, terminating in a point and often closed in front with a visor. [Middle English, from Old French bacinet, diminutive of basin, basin. See BASIN.]

Ba-sing-stoke (bā'zĭng-stōk') A municipal borough of south-central England on the North Downs west-southwest of London. Mentioned as a royal manor in the Domesday Book, it was long a market center for silk and woolen textiles. Population, 67,300.

ba-sip-e-tal (bā-sĭp'ĭ-tl, -zĭp'-) adj. Botany. Of or relating to the development or maturation of tissues or organs or the movement of substances, such as hormones, from the apex downward toward the base. —ba-sip'e-tal-ly adv.

ba-sis (bā'sĭs) n. pl. ba-ses (-sĕz'). 1. A foundation upon which something rests. 2. The chief constituent; the fundamental ingredient. 3. The fundamental principle. See Synonyms at base¹. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek. See g^wā- in Appendix.]

basis point (bā'sĭs point) n. One one-hundredth of a percent, used in measuring yield differences among bonds.

bask (bäsk) v. intr. basked, bask-ing, basks. 1. To expose oneself to pleasant warmth. 2. To take great pleasure or satisfaction: She basked in her teacher's praise. [Middle English basken.]

Bas-ker-ville (bäs'kər-vĭl'), John. 1706-1775. British printer and typographer. He produced a notable edition of Virgil in 1757 and designed the typeface that bears his name.

bas-ket (bäs'kĭt) n. 1. Abbr. bsk. a. A container made of interwoven material, such as rushes or twigs. b. The amount that a basket can hold. 2. An item resembling such a container in shape or function. 3. A usually open gondola suspended from a hot-air balloon. 4. Basketball. a. Either of the two elevated goals, each consisting of a metal hoop from which an open-bottomed circular net is suspended. b. The score, normally worth two points, made by throwing the ball through this goal. 5. Sports. A circular structure at the base of a ski pole, used to prevent the pole from sinking too deeply into the snow. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Vulgar Latin baskauta*, of Celtic origin.] —bas'ket-ful' n.

bas-ket-ball (bäs'kīt-bôl') n. Sports. 1. A game played between two teams of five players each, the object being to throw the ball through an elevated basket on the opponent's side of the rectangular court. 2. The ball that is used in this game.

basket case (bäs'kīt kās) n. Informal. 1. One that is in a completely hopeless or useless condition: "He immediately becomes a psychological basket case, embittered to the point of craziness" (New York). "After World War I, when the Hapsburg empire was split up, little Austria seemed a basket case" (Paul A. Samuelson). 2. A person, especially a soldier, who has had all four limbs amputated.

basket fish (bäs'kīt fīsh) n. See basket star.

basket hilt (bäs'kīt hīlt) n. A sword hilt with a basket-shaped guard serving to cover and protect the hand.

Bas-ket Maker (bäs'kīt mā'kər) n. 1. Any of several early periods of Anasazi culture preceding the Pueblo periods and characterized by the use of wicker basketry, dry farming, and coiled pottery. 2. A member of the Anasazi people who produced this culture.

bas-ket-of-gold (bäs'kīt-əv-gōld') n. A shrubby perennial European herb (Aurinia saxatilis) widely grown for its grayish foliage and profusion of small, golden-yellow flowers.

bas-ket-ry (bäs'kī-trē) n. 1. The craft or process of making baskets. 2. Baskets considered as a group.

basket star (bäs'kīt stār) n. Any of various marine organisms of the class Ophiuroidea, related to the starfishes and having slender, branching, interlaced arms. Also called basket fish basket weave (bäs'kīt wēv) n. A textile weave consisting of double threads interlaced to produce a checkered pattern similar to that of a woven basket.

Bas-kin (bäs'kīn), Leonard. Born 1922. American sculptor, graphic artist, and teacher known especially for his powerfully expressive woodcuts.

bask-ing shark (bäs'kīng shärk) n. A very large shark (Cetorhinus maximus) that measures up to about 12 meters (40 feet) in length, feeds on plankton, and often floats near the surface of water.

Basle (bäl) See Basel.

bas mitz-vah or bas miz-vah (bäs mīts'və) n. & v. Variants of bat mitz-vah.

baso- pref. Variant of basi-.

ba-so-phil (bā'sə-fīl, -zə-) n. A cell, especially a white blood cell, having granules that stain readily with basic dyes.

ba·so·phil·i·a (bā'sə-fil'ē-ə, -zə-) n. 1. The affinity of cellular structures for basic dyes, such as methylene blue. 2. An increase in the number of basophils in the circulating blood. 3. An abnormal stippling of red blood cells with basic staining granules.

ba·so·phil·ic (bā'sə-fil'ik, -zə-) also ba·soph·i·lous (bə-söf'ə-ləs) adj. Relating to tissue components that stain readily with basic dyes.

Ba·sov (bā'sōf', -səf), Nikolai Gennadievich. Born 1922. Russian physicist. He shared a 1964 Nobel Prize for developing the maser and laser principle of producing high-intensity radiation.

basque (bäsk) n. A woman's close-fitting bodice. [French, skirt of a garment, alteration (perhaps influenced by Basque, Basque); see BASQUE, of Old French baste, from Italian basta, tuck, possibly of Germanic origin.]

Basque (bäsk) n. 1. A member of a people of unknown origin inhabiting the western Pyrenees and the Bay of Biscay in France and Spain. 2. The language of the Basques, of no known linguistic affiliation. [French, probably from Latin Vascō, perhaps from Basque Euskadi.] —Basque adj.

Basque Provinces (bäsk pröv'in-siz) A region comprising three provinces of northern Spain on the Bay of Biscay. It borders on France in the northeast along the western Pyrenees.

Bas·ra (bäs'rə, büs'-) A city of southeast Iraq on the Shatt al Arab near the Persian Gulf. It is the only port in the country. Population, 616,700.

bas·re·lief (bä'rī-lēf') n. See low relief. [French, from Italian bassorilievo: basso, low (from Medieval Latin bassus) + rilievo, relief (from rilevare, to raise, from Latin relevāre); see RELIEVE.]

bass¹ (bäs) n. pl. bass or bass-es. 1. Any of several North American freshwater fishes of the family Centrarchidae, related to but larger than the sunfishes.

2. Any of various marine fishes of the family Serranidae, such as the sea bass and the striped bass. [Middle English bars*, perch, from Old English bærs.]

bass² (bäs) n. Music. 1. A low-pitched sound or tone. 2. The tones in the lowest register of an instrument. 3. The lowest part in vocal or instrumental part music.

4. a. A male singing voice of the lowest range. b. A singer who has such a voice.

5. An instrument, especially a double bass, that produces tones in a low register.

— adj. 1. Having a deep tone. 2. Low in pitch. [Middle English bas, lowest musical part, from bas, low. See BASE².]

Bass (bäs), Sam. 1851-1878. American outlaw in Nebraska and Texas during 1877 and 1878. He was killed by Texas Rangers during an attempted bank robbery.

Bas·sa·no (bə-sä'nō), Jacopo. 1510-1592. Italian painter of the Venetian school. One of the earliest genre painters in Italy, he depicted rustic life in both secular and religious scenes.

bass clef (bās klĕf) n. Music. A symbol indicating that the fourth line from the bottom of a staff represents the pitch of F below middle C. Also called F clef bass drum (bās drŭm) n. Music. A large drum having a cylindrical body and two heads and producing a low, resonant sound.

Basse-terre (bās-târ', bās-) The capital of St. Christopher-Nevis, on St. Christopher Island in the Leeward Islands of the West Indies. Population, 14,725.

Basse-Terre (bās-târ', bās-) The capital of the French overseas department of Guadeloupe, on the southern end of Basse-Terre Island in the Leeward Islands of the West Indies. Population, 13,656.

basset hound (bās'it hound) n. A short-haired hunting dog of a breed originating in France and having a long body, short legs, and long, drooping ears.

[French, short, basset hound, diminutive of basse feminine adjective of bas, low. See BASE².]

bass fiddle (bās fīd'l) n. Music. See double bass.

bas-si (bā'sē) n. Music. A plural of basso.

bas-si-net (bās'ə-nĕt', bās'ə-nĕt') n. An oblong basketlike bed for an infant.

[French, small basin, diminutive of bassin, basin, from Old French, basin. See BASIN.]

bas-si pro-fun-di (bā'sē prə-fōon'dē) n. Music. A plural of basso profundo.

bass-ist (bā'sist) n. Music. One who plays a bass instrument, especially a double bass.

bas-so (bās'ō, bā'sō) n. pl. bas-sos or bas-si (bā'sē). Abbr. b., B. Music. A bass singer, especially an operatic bass. [Italian, from Medieval Latin bassus, low.]

bas-soon (bə-sōon', bā-) n. Music. A low-pitched woodwind instrument with a double reed, having a long wooden body attached to a U-shaped lateral tube that leads to the mouthpiece. The range of this instrument is typically two octaves lower than that of the oboe. [French basson, from Italian bassone, augmentative of basso, bass. See BASSO.] —bas-soon'ist n.

bas-so pro-fun-do (bās'ō prə-fŭn'dō, bā'sō prə-fōon'dō) n. pl. basso pro-fun-dos or bas-si pro-fun-di (bā'sē prə-fōon'dē). Music. 1. A deep bass singing voice. 2. A singer who has such a voice. [Italian : basso, bass + profondo, deep.]

bas-so-re-lie-vo (bās'ō-rī-lĕ'vō) n. pl. bas-so-re-lie-vos. See low relief. [Italian bassorilievo. See BAS-RELIEF.]

Bass Strait (bās strāt) A channel between Tasmania and southeast Australia connecting the Indian Ocean with the Tasman Sea. Its discovery in 1798 by the British explorer George Bass (died c. 1812) proved that Tasmania was not part of the Australian continent.

bass viol (bās vī'əl) n. Music. 1. See double bass. 2. See viola da gamba.

bass-wood (bäs'wōōd') n. 1. See linden. 2. The soft, light-colored wood of any species of linden. It is used in making crates and boxes, in carving, and in millwork. [bass, linden bark (alteration of BAST) + WOOD¹.]

bast (bäst) n. Botany. Bast fiber. [Middle English, from Old English bæst.]

bas-tard (bäs'tärd) n. 1. An illegitimate child. 2. Something that is of irregular, inferior, or dubious origin. 3. Vulgar Slang. A person, especially one who is held to be mean or disagreeable. — adj. 1. Born of unwed parents; illegitimate. 2. Not genuine; spurious: a bastard style of architecture. 3. Resembling a known kind or species but not truly such. [Middle English, from Old French, probably of Germanic origin; akin to Old Frisian bōst, marriage.] — bas'tard-ly adj.

bas-tard-ize (bäs'tär-dīz') v. tr. bas-tard-ized, bas-tard-iz-ing, bas-tard-iz-es. To lower in quality or character; debase. — bas'tard-i-za'tion (-tär-dī-zā'shən) n.

bastard toadflax (bäs'tärd tōd'fläks') n. Any of various hemiparasitic plants of the genus Comandra, having clusters of small, whitish or greenish flowers.

bastard wing (bäs'tärd wīng) n. See alula.

bas-tard-y (bäs'tär-dē) n. 1. The condition of being of illegitimate birth; illegitimacy. 2. The begetting of a bastard.

baste¹ (bäst) v. tr. bast-ed, bast-ing, bastes. To sew loosely with large running stitches so as to hold together temporarily. [Middle English basten, from Old French bastir, of Germanic origin.] — bast'er n.

baste² (bäst) v. tr. bast-ed, bast-ing, bastes. To moisten (meat, for example) periodically with a liquid, such as melted butter or a sauce, especially while cooking. [Middle English basten.] — bast'er n.

baste³ (bäst) v. tr. bast-ed, bast-ing, bastes. 1. To beat vigorously; thrash. See Synonyms at beat. 2. To lambaste. [Probably of Scandinavian origin; akin to Old Norse beysta. See bhau- in Appendix.]

bast fiber (bäst fī'bär) n. Botany. Any of various durable fibers obtained from the phloem or from tissues outside the phloem. These fibers include flax, hemp, jute, and ramie and are used for textiles and cordage.

Bas-ti-a (bäs'tē-ə, bā-stē'ə) A city of northeast Corsica, France, on the Tyrrhenian Sea. It is a commercial and tourist center. Population, 44,020.

bas-tille (bä-stēl') n. A prison; a jail. [French, from Old French, fortress, alteration of bastide, from Old Provençal bastida, from bastir, to build, of Germanic origin.]

Bas-tille Day (bä-stēl' dā) n. July 14, observed in France in commemoration of the storming of the Paris Bastille in 1789, a citizens' victory at the outset of the French Revolution.

bas-ti-na-do (bäs'tə-nā'dō, -nä'f-) also bas-ti-nade (-nād', -näd') n. pl.

bas-ti-na-does also bas-ti-nades. 1. A beating with a stick or cudgel, especially on the soles of the feet. 2. A stick or cudgel. — v. tr. bas-ti-na·doed also bas-ti·nad·ed, bas-ti·na·do·ing also bas-ti·nad·ing, bas-ti·na·does also bas-ti·nades. To subject to a beating; thrash. [Alteration of Spanish bastonada, from baston, stick, from Vulgar Latin bastō*, bastōn*-.]

bas·tion (bäs'chən, -tē-ən) n. 1. A projecting part of a fortification. 2. A well-fortified position. 3. One that is considered similar to a defensive stronghold: You are a bastion of strength. See Synonyms at bulwark. [French, from Old French bastillon, from bastille, fortress. See BASTILLE.] — bas'tioned adj.

bast·naes·ite (bäst'nə-sīt') n. A yellowish to reddish-brown mineral, (Ce,La)CO₃(F,OH), that is a source of rare-earth elements, including gadolinium, samarium, and neodymium. [After Bastnäs, a mine in south-central Sweden.]

Bas·togne (bä-stōn', bä-stōn'yə) A town of southeast Belgium near the Luxembourg border. It was a crucial point in the U.S. defensive line during the World War II Battle of the Bulge (December 1944-January 1945). Population, 11,386.

Bas·trop (bäs'trəp) A city of northeast Louisiana north-northeast of Monroe. It is an industrial center adjacent to a natural-gas field discovered in 1916. Population, 15,527.

Ba·su·to·land (bə-sōō'tō-länd') See Lesotho.

bat¹ (bät) n. 1. A stout wooden stick; a cudgel. 2. A blow, such as one delivered with a stick. 3. Baseball. A rounded, often wooden club, wider and heavier at the hitting end and tapering at the handle, used to strike the ball. 4. Sports. a. A club used in cricket, having a broad, flat-surfaced hitting end and a distinct, narrow handle. b. The racket used in various games, such as table tennis or racquets. — v. bat·ted, bat·ting, bats. — v. tr. 1. To hit with or as if with a bat. 2. Baseball. a. To cause (a run) to be scored while at bat: batted in the winning run with a double. b. To have (a certain percentage) as a batting average. 3. Informal. To produce in a hurried or an informal manner: bat out a speech; bat out dance music. 4. Informal. To discuss or consider at length: bat an idea around. — v. intr. 1. Baseball. a. To use a bat. b. To have a turn at bat. 2. Slang. To wander about aimlessly. — idioms. at bat. Sports. Taking one's turn to bat, as in baseball or cricket. go to bat for. To give assistance to; defend. off the bat. Without hesitation; immediately: They responded right off the bat. [Middle English, perhaps partly of Celtic origin, and partly from Old French batte, pounding implement, flail (from batre, to beat); see BATTER¹.]

bat² (bät) n. Any of various nocturnal flying mammals of the order Chiroptera, having membranous wings that extend from the forelimbs to the hind limbs or tail and anatomical adaptations for echolocation, by which they navigate and hunt prey. — idiom. have bats in (one's) belfry. To behave in an eccentric, bizarre manner. [Alteration of Middle English bakke, of Scandinavian origin.]

bat³ (băt) v. tr. bat-ted, bat-ting, bats. To wink or flutter: bat one's eyelashes.
[Probably a variant of BATE².]

bat⁴ (băt) n. Slang. A binge; a spree. [Probably from batter, spree.]

bat. abbr. Battalion.

B.A.T. abbr. Bachelor of Arts in Teaching.

Ba-taan (bə-tăn', -tän') A peninsula of western Luzon, Philippines, between Manila Bay and the South China Sea. After an extended siege U.S. and Philippine World War II troops surrendered to the Japanese in April 1942. U.S. forces recaptured the peninsula in February 1945.

Ba-tan Islands (bə-tăn' ī'ləndz) The northernmost island group of the Philippines, separated from southern Taiwan by a narrow channel.

Ba-ta-vi-a (bə-tā'vē-ə) 1. A city of western New York west-southwest of Rochester. It is an industrial center in a farming region. Population, 16,310. 2. See Jakarta.

bat-boy (băt'boi') n. Baseball. A boy who is employed by a baseball team to look after its equipment, especially the bats.

batch¹ (bäch) n. 1. An amount produced at one baking: a batch of cookies.
2. The quantity produced as the result of one operation: mixed a batch of cement.
3. The quantity needed for one operation: a batch of dough. 4. A group of persons or things: a batch of tourists; a whole new batch of problems. 5. Computer Science. A set of data or jobs to be processed in a single program run. — v. tr. batched, batch-ing, batch-es. To assemble or process as a batch. [Middle English bache, probably from Old English bæcce*, from bacan, to bake.]

batch² (bäch) v. Informal. Variant of bach.

bate¹ (bāt) v. tr. bat-ed, bat-ing, bates. 1. To lessen the force or intensity of; moderate: "To his dying day he bated his breath a little when he told the story" (George Eliot). See Usage Note at bait². 2. To take away; subtract. [Middle English baten, short for abaten. See ABATE.]

bate² also bait (bāt) v. intr. bat-ed also bait-ed, bat-ing also bait-ing, bates also baits. To flap the wings wildly or frantically. Used of a falcon. [Middle English baten, from Old French batre, to beat. See BATTER¹.]

ba-teau (bă-tō') n. pl. ba-teaux (-tōz'). Nautical. 1. A long, light, flat-bottomed boat with a sharply pointed bow and stern, used especially in Canada and the northeast United States. 2. A small, light, flat-bottomed rowboat used chiefly in Louisiana. [Canadian, and Louisiana French from French, boat, from Old French batel, from Old English bāt. See bheid- in Appendix.]

bateau bridge (bă-tō' brīj) n. See pontoon bridge.

Bates (bāts), Herbert Ernest. 1905-1974. British writer who served with the Royal Air Force during World War II and under the pen name Flying Officer X wrote many short stories based on his experiences.

Bates (bāts), Katherine Lee. 1859-1929. American educator and writer best known for her poem “America the Beautiful,” written in 1893 and revised in 1904 and 1911.

Bates-i-an mimicry (bāt'sē-ən mīm'ī-krē) n. A form of protective mimicry in which an unprotected species, especially of an insect, closely resembles an unpalatable or harmful species and therefore is similarly avoided by predators. [After Henry W. Bates (1825-1892), British naturalist.]

Bate-son (bāt'sən), William. 1861-1926. British biologist who was one of the founders of the science of genetics. He experimentally proved Gregor Mendel's theories on heredity and published the first English translation of Mendel's work in 1900.

bat-fish (băt'fish') n. pl. batfish or bat-fish-es. Any of various marine anglerfishes of the family Ogcocephalidae, having a retractable appendage above the mouth.

bat-fowl (băt'foul') v. intr. bat-fowled, bat-fowl-ing, bat-fowls. To catch roosting birds at night by blinding them with a light and then hitting or netting them.

bat-girl (băt'gûrl') n. Baseball. A girl who is employed by a baseball team to look after its equipment, especially the bats.

bath¹ (băth, bāth) n. pl. baths (băthz, bāthz, bāths, bāths). 1. a. The act of soaking or cleansing the body, as in water or steam. b. The water used for cleansing the body. 2. a. A bathtub. b. A bathroom. 3. A building equipped for bathing. 4. Often baths. A resort providing therapeutic baths; a spa. 5. A liquid or a liquid and its container in which something is dipped or soaked in order to process it: an acid bath; a bath of dye. [Middle English, from Old English bæth.]

bath² (băth) n. An ancient Hebrew unit of liquid measure, equal to about 38 liters (10 U.S. gallons). [Hebrew.]

Bath (băth, bāth) A city of southwest England southeast of Bristol. Famous for its Georgian architecture and its hot mineral springs, tapped by the Romans in the first century A.D., it is a popular resort. Population, 84,100.

Bath chair (băth châr, bāth) n. A hooded wheelchair used especially for invalids, typically at a spa. [After Bath.]

bathe (bāth) v. bathed, bath-ing, bathes. — v. intr. 1. To take a bath. 2. To go into the water for swimming or other recreation. 3. To become immersed in or as if in liquid. — v. tr. 1. To immerse in liquid; wet. 2. To wash in a liquid. 3. To apply a liquid to for healing or soothing purposes: bathed the wound with iodine. 4. To seem to wash or pour over; suffuse: a room that was bathed in sunlight. [Middle English bathen, from Old English bathian.]

—bath'er n.

ba·thet·ic (bə-thět'ik) adj. Characterized by bathos. See Synonyms at sentimental. [Probably a blend of BATHOS, and PATHETIC.]

bath·house (băth'hous', băth'-') n. 1. A building with facilities for bathing. 2. A building with dressing rooms for swimmers.

Bath·i·nette (băth'ə-nět', bă'thə) A trademark used for portable bathing devices for infants.

bath·ing cap (bă'thĩng kăp) n. A snug elastic cap worn in the water especially to keep the hair dry.

bathing suit (bă'thĩng sōt) n. See swimsuit.

bath·mat (băth'măt', băth'-') n. A mat used in front of a bathtub or shower, as to absorb water or prevent slipping.

batho- pref. Variant of bathy-.

bath·o·lith (băth'ə-lĩth') n. A large mass of igneous rock that has melted and intruded surrounding strata at great depths. —bath'·o·lith'ic adj.

ba·thom·e·ter (bə-thōm'ĩ-tər) n. An instrument used to measure the depth of water.

bath·o·pho·bi·a (băth'ə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of depths.

ba·thos (bă'thōs', -thōs') n. 1. a. An abrupt, unintended transition in style from the exalted to the commonplace, producing a ludicrous effect. b. An anticlimax. 2. a. Insincere or grossly sentimental pathos: “a richly textured man who... can be... sentimental to the brink of bathos” (Kenneth L. Woodward). b. Banality; triteness. [Greek, depth, from bathus, deep.]

bath·robe (băth'rōb', băth'-') n. A loose-fitting robe worn before and after bathing and for lounging.

bath·room (băth'rōōm', -rōōm', băth'-') n. A room equipped with facilities for taking a bath or shower and usually also containing a sink and toilet.

bath salts (băth sōlts, băth) pl.n. A perfumed crystalline substance for softening bathwater.

Bath·she·ba (băth-shē'bə, băth'shə-) In the Old Testament, the wife of Uriah and later of David. Her second son by David was Solomon.

bath·tub (băth'tüb', băth'-') n. A tub for bathing, especially one installed in a bathroom.

Bath·urst (băth'ərst) 1. A city of northern New Brunswick, Canada, on Chaleur Bay north-northeast of Fredericton. It is a popular beach resort. Population, 15,705. 2. See Banjul.

Bathurst Island (băth'ərst ī'lənd) An island of northern Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Parry Islands northwest of Baffin Island.

bath water (băth wō'tər, băth) n. The water used for a bath.

bathy- or batho- pref. 1. Deep; depth: batholith. 2. Deep-sea: bathysphere. [From Greek bathus, deep,, and from Greek bathos, depth (from bathus).]

ba·thym·e·try (bə-thīm'ī-trē) n. Measurement of the depth of large bodies of water. —bath'y·met'ric (bāth'ə-mēt'rik), bath'y·met'ri·cal adj.

—bath'y·met'ri·cal·ly adv.

bath·y·pe·lag·ic (bāth'ə-pə-lāj'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or living in the depths of the ocean, especially between about 600 and 3,000 meters (2,000 and 10,000 feet).

bath·y·scaph (bāth'ī-skāf') also bath·y·scaphe (-skāf', -skāf') n. A free-diving, self-contained deep-sea research vessel consisting essentially of a large flotation hull with a crewed observation capsule fixed to its underside, capable of reaching depths of 10 kilometers (6.2 miles) or more. [BATHY- + Greek skaphos, boat.]

bath·y·sphere (bāth'ī-sfīr') n. A reinforced spherical deep-diving chamber in which persons are lowered by a cable to study the oceans. The bathysphere, limited to depths of about 900 meters (3,000 feet), has been supplanted by the safer and more navigable bathyscaph.

ba·tik (bə-tēk', bāt'ik) n. 1. a. A method of dyeing a fabric by which the parts of the fabric not intended to be dyed are covered with removable wax. b. A design that is created by this method. 2. Fabric dyed by this method. [Malay batek, of Javanese origin, from Proto-Austronesian beCik*, tattoo (from the fact that the original process of piercing the waxed cloth prior to soaking was similar to tattooing).]

Ba·tis·ta y Zal·dí·var (bə-tēs'tə ē zāl-dē'vār', bā-tē'stä), Fulgencio. 1901-1973. Cuban dictator (1933-1940) and president (1940-1944 and 1954-1958). His corrupt authoritarian regime was overthrown on New Year's Day, 1959, by a revolutionary movement led by Fidel Castro.

ba·tiste (bə-tēst', bā-) n. A fine, plain-woven fabric made from various fibers and used especially for clothing. [French, from Old French, perhaps after Baptiste of Cambrai, 13th-century textile maker.]

bat·man (bāt'mən) n. A British military officer's orderly. [Obsolete bat (from French bât, from Old French bast, from Late Latin bastum) + MAN.]

bat mitz·vah or bat miz·vah (bāt mīts'və) or bas mitz·vah or bas miz·vah (bäs) n. 1. In Conservative and Reform Judaism, a Jewish girl of 12 to 14 years of age, considered an adult and responsible for her moral and religious duties. 2. The ceremony that initiates and recognizes a girl as having achieved this status. — v. tr. bat mitz·vahed, bat mitz·vah·ing, bat mitz·vahs. To confirm in the ceremony of bat mitzvah. [Hebrew bat mišwâ: bat, daughter + mišwâ, commandment.]

ba·ton (bə-tōn', bā-, bāt'n) n. 1. Music. A slender wooden stick or rod used by a conductor to direct an orchestra or band. 2. A hollow metal rod with a heavy rubber tip or tips that is wielded and twirled by a drum major or drum majorette. 3. A short staff carried by certain public officials as a symbol of office. 4. Sports.

The hollow cylinder that is carried by each member of a relay team and passed to the next runner. 5. A club or truncheon. 6. Heraldry. A shortened narrow bend, often signifying bastardy. [French bâton, from Old French baston, stick, from Vulgar Latin bastō*, ·bastōn-.]

Bat-on Rouge (băt'ŋ rōōzh') The capital of Louisiana, in the southeast-central part of the state on a bluff above the Mississippi River. It has notable antebellum houses. Population, 219,531.

bat·o·pho·bi·a (băt'ə-fō'bē-ə) n. An abnormal fear of being near an object of great height, such as a skyscraper or mountain. [Greek batos, passable (from bainein, to go); see g^wā- in Appendix + -PHOBIA.]

ba·tra·chi·an (bə-trā'kē-ən) adj. Of or relating to vertebrate amphibians without tails, such as frogs and toads. — n. A vertebrate amphibian. [From Greek batrakhos, frog.]

ba·tra·cho·tox·in (bə-trāk'ə-tōk'sīn, băt'rə-kō-) n. A steroid alkaloid derived from skin secretions of the Phyllobates and Dendrobates genera of South American arrow-poison frogs. It is one of the most potent venoms known. [Greek batrakhos, frog + TOXIN.]

bats (bäts) adj. Slang. Crazy; insane. [From bats in the belfry.]

bats·man (bäts'mən) n. Sports. The player at bat in cricket and baseball.

Bat·swa·na (bōt-swä'nə) n. pl. Batswana or Bat·swa·nas. See Tswana (n., sense 1).

batt (băt) n. Pieces of fabric used for stuffing; batting. [Variant of BAT¹, cotton or wool fiber wadded into rolls or sheets.]

bat·tal·ion (bə-täl'yən) n. 1. Abbr. bat., batt., bn., Bn. a. An army unit typically consisting of a headquarters and two or more companies, batteries, or similar subunits. b. A large body of organized troops. 2. A great number: battalions of ants. [French bataillon, from Old French, from Italian battaglione, augmentative of battaglia, from Vulgar Latin battalia*. See BATTLE.]

Bat·ta·ni (bə-tä'nē), al-. 858?-929. Arab astronomer and mathematician. Considered the greatest astronomer of his time, he proved the possibility of annular eclipses and introduced an organized table of sines.

bat·ten¹ (băt'n) v. intr. bat·tened, bat·ten·ing, bat·tens. 1. To become fat. 2. To thrive and prosper, especially at another's expense: slumlords who batten on the poor. [Ultimately from Old Norse batna, to improve. See bhad- in Appendix.]

bat·ten² (băt'n) n. 1. Nautical. a. One of several flexible strips of wood placed in pockets at the outer edge of a sail to keep it flat. b. A narrow strip of wood used to fasten down the edges of the material that covers hatches in foul weather. 2. Chiefly British. A narrow strip of wood used especially for flooring. — v. tr. bat·tened, bat·ten·ing, bat·tens. Nautical. To furnish, fasten, or secure with battens: batten down the hatches. [Middle English batent, from Old French bataunt, wooden strip, clapper, from present participle of batre, to beat. See BATTER¹.]

Bat·ten (băt'ŋ), Jean. 1909-1982. New Zealand aviator who was the first woman to fly a solo round trip between England and Australia (1935).

Bat·ten·berg (băt'ŋ-bûrg') Title of a family of German counts until 1314. The title was revived in 1851, first for counts and later for princes, but was renounced in 1917 by the English branch of the family in favor of the surname Mountbatten.

bat·ter¹ (băt'ər) v. bat·tered, bat·ter·ing, bat·ters. — v. tr. 1. To hit heavily and repeatedly with violent blows. 2. To damage, as by heavy wear. — v. intr. To pound repeatedly with heavy blows. — n. Printing. A damaged area on the face of type or on a plate. [Middle English bateren, from Old French batre, from Late Latin battere, from Latin battuere.]

SYNONYMS: batter, maim, mangle, maul, mutilate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to damage, injure, or disfigure by beating, abuse, or hard use”: a house battered by a hurricane; a wrist maimed in an accident; a mangled corpse; a tent mauled by a hungry bear; mutilated the painting with a razor blade. See also Synonyms at beat bat·ter² (băt'ər) n. Sports. The player at bat in baseball and cricket.

bat·ter³ (băt'ər) n. A liquid or semiliquid mixture, as of flour, milk, and eggs, used in cooking. [Middle English bater, probably from Old French bateure, a beating, from batre, to beat. See BATTER¹.]

bat·ter⁴ (băt'ər) n. A slope, as of the outer face of a wall, that recedes from bottom to top. — v. tr. bat·tered, bat·ter·ing, bat·ters. To construct so as to create an upwardly receding slope. [Origin unknown.]

bat·ter·cake (băt'ər-kāk') n. Chiefly Southern U.S. 1. See pancake. 2. See johnnycake. See Regional note at johnnycake.

bat·tered child (băt'ərd çıld) n. A child upon whom multiple, continuing, often serious nonaccidental injuries have been inflicted usually by parents, guardians, or other caregivers.

battered child syndrome (băt'ərd çıld sĭn'drôm') n. A combination of continuing, often serious physical injuries, such as bruises, scratches, hematomas, burns, or malnutrition, inflicted on a child through gross abuse usually by parents, guardians, or other caregivers.

battered woman syndrome (băt'ərd wŏm'ən sĭn'drôm') n. A pattern of signs and symptoms commonly appearing in women who are physically and mentally abused over an extended period by a husband or other dominant male figure. Characteristics of this syndrome are helplessness, constant fear, and a perceived inability to escape.

bat-ter-ing parent syndrome (băt'ər-īng pâr'ənt sĭn'drōm') n. A group of signs and symptoms characterizing a psychological disorder in a child's parent or other caregiver, resulting in a tendency or disposition to abuse the child. Elements contributory to this syndrome include a history of abuse upon the parent or other caregiver during childhood, unreasonable behavioral expectations of young children, and stress.

battering ram (băt'ər-īng rām) n. 1. A very heavy metal bar used by fire-fighters and law enforcement officers to break down walls and doors. 2. A heavy beam used in ancient warfare to batter down the walls and gates of a place under siege.

bat-ter-y (băt'ə-rē) n. pl. bat-ter-ies. 1. a. The act of beating or pounding. b. Law. The unlawful and unwanted touching or striking of one person by another, with the intention of bringing about a harmful or offensive contact. 2. a. An emplacement for one or more pieces of artillery. b. A set of guns or other heavy artillery, on a warship, for example. c. Abbr. btry. An army artillery unit, corresponding to a company in the infantry. 3. a. An array of similar things intended for use together: took a battery of achievement tests. b. An impressive body or group: a battery of political supporters. 4. Baseball. The pitcher and catcher. 5. Music. The percussion section of an orchestra. 6. Electricity. a. Two or more connected cells that produce a direct current by converting chemical energy to electrical energy. b. A single cell, such as a dry cell, that produces an electric current. [Middle English batri, forged metal ware, from Old French baterie, a beating, from batre, to batter. See BATTER¹.]

Bat-ter-y (băt'ə-rē) also Battery Park A park at the southern tip of Manhattan Island at the upper end of New York Bay in southeast New York. It is the site of early Dutch and English fortifications and of Castle Clinton, built in 1808 for the defense of the harbor.

bat-ting (băt'īng) n. 1. The act of one who bats. 2. Cotton, wool, or synthetic fiber wadded into rolls or sheets, used for stuffing furniture and mattresses and for lining quilts. [Sense 2, from the beating of raw cotton to clean it.]

batting average (băt'īng äv'ər-ĭj) n. Baseball. A measure of a batter's performance obtained by dividing the total of base hits by the number of times at bat.

bat-tle (băt'l) n. 1. a. An encounter between opposing forces: an important battle in the Pacific campaign. b. Armed fighting; combat: wounded in battle. 2. A match between two combatants: trial by battle. 3. a. A protracted controversy or struggle: won the battle of the budget. b. An intense competition: a battle of wits. — v. bat-tled, bat-tling, bat-tles. — v. intr. To engage in or as if in battle. — v. tr. To fight against: battled the enemy; battled cancer. [Middle English batel, from Old French bataille, from Vulgar Latin battālia*, from Late Latin battuālia, fighting and fencing exercises, from Latin battuere, to beat.]

—bat'tler n.

Bat-tle (băt'1) A town of southeast England, site of the Battle of Hastings (1066). William the Conqueror built Battle Abbey to commemorate his victory here. Population, 4,987.

bat-tle-ax or bat-tle-axe (băt'1-äks') n. 1. A heavy broad-headed ax formerly used as a weapon. 2. Informal. A woman held to be antagonistic or overbearing.

Battle Creek (băt'1 krēk) A city of southern Michigan east of Kalamazoo. Breakfast cereals and other food products are important to its economy. Population, 53,540.

battle cruiser (băt'1 krōō'zər) n. A large warship with lighter armor but greater maneuverability than a battleship.

battle cry (băt'1 krī) n. 1. A rallying cry uttered in combat, especially while attacking. 2. A slogan used by the proponents of a cause.

bat-tle-dore (băt'1-dôr') n. Sports. 1. a. An early form of badminton played with a flat wooden paddle and a shuttlecock. b. The paddle used in this game. 2. A badminton racket. [Middle English batildore, perhaps blend of betel, bat; see BEETLE³, Old Provençal batedor, bat (from battre, to beat, from Late Latin battere); see BATTER¹.]

battle fatigue (băt'1 fə-tēg') n. The debilitating psychiatric breakdown caused by the stress of combat. Also called combat fatigue bat-tle-field (băt'1-fēld') n. 1. An area where a battle is fought. 2. A sphere of contention. Also called battleground bat-tle-front (băt'1-frünt') n. 1. The line or sector in which armed forces engage in combat. 2. The area where opponents meet or clash: a struggle on the economic battlefield.

bat-tle-ground (băt'1-ground') n. See battlefield.

battle group (băt'1 grōōp) n. 1. A U.S. army unit usually composed of five companies. 2. A naval force composed of a variable number of warships, escorts, and supply vessels, depending on the nature of the mission: "A carrier battle group... consists of an aircraft carrier, 10 escort combatants, and four support ships" (Defense & Foreign Affairs Daily).

bat-tle-ment (băt'1-mənt) n. A parapet built on top of a wall, with indentations for decoration or defense. Also called embattlement [Middle English batelment, alteration (influenced by batel, battle); see BATTLE, of Old French batillement, tower, turret, from bastille. See BASTILLE.] —bat'tle-ment'ed (-mən'tid) adj.

battle royal (băt'1 roi'əl) n. pl. battles royal. 1. An intense altercation. 2. A battle involving many combatants. 3. A fight to the finish. [BATTLE + ROYAL, grand in scale.]

bat-tle-ship (băt'1-shīp') n. Any one of a class of warships of the largest size, carrying the greatest number of weapons and clad with the heaviest armor. Also called battlewagon [Short for line-of-battle ship.]

battleship gray (băt'1-shīp' grā) n. Color. A medium shade of gray. —bat'-tle-ship-gray' adj.

bat·tle·wag·on (băt'1-wäg'ən) n. See battleship.

bat·ty (băt'ē) adj. bat·ti·er, bat·ti·est. Slang. Crazy; insane. [From bats in the belfry.] —bat'ti-ness n.

Ba·tu·mi (bə-tōō'mē) also Ba·tum (-tōōm') A city of southwest Georgia on the Black Sea near the Turkish border. On the site of an ancient Greek colony, it is an important petroleum refining and shipping center. Population, 132,000.

Bat Yam (băt' yām') A city of west-central Israel on the Mediterranean Sea near Tel Aviv-Jaffa. It is a resort and an industrial center. Population, 131,200.

bau·ble (bô'bəl) n. 1. A small, showy ornament of little value; a trinket.

2. Archaic. A mock scepter carried by a court jester. [Middle English babel, from Old French, plaything.]

Bau·cis (bô'sīs) n. Greek Mythology. A peasant woman of Phrygia who together with her husband Philemon received with great hospitality Zeus and Hermes disguised as men. The gods rewarded the couple by turning them in their old age into intertwining linden and oak trees.

baud (bôd) n. Computer Science. A unit of speed in data transmission usually equal to one bit per second. [After Jean Maurice Emile Baudot (1845-1903), French engineer.]

Bau·de·laire (bôd-lâr'), Charles Pierre. 1821-1867. French writer, translator, and critic. His only volume of poetry, Les Fleurs du Mal (1857, expanded 1861), was publicly condemned as obscene but exerted an enormous influence over later symbolist and modernist poets such as T.S. Eliot.

Bau·douin I (bō-dwān'), 1930-1993. King of Belgium. Although he exercised the prerogative of rule after August 11, 1950, when the Belgian parliament accepted Leopold III's offer to abdicate, he did not formally ascend the throne until July 17, 1951.

Bau·haus (bou'hous') adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a 20th-century school of design, the aesthetic of which was influenced by and derived from techniques and materials employed especially in industrial fabrication and manufacture. [German, an architecture school founded by Walter Gropius (1883-1969) : Bau, construction, architecture (from Middle High German bū, building, from Old High German, from būan, to dwell, settle); see bheuə- in Appendix + Haus, house (from Middle High German hūs, from Old High German).]

bau·hin·i·a (bô-hīn'ē-ə, bō-īn'-) n. Any of various tropical or subtropical trees, shrubs, or woody vines of the genus Bauhinia in the pea family, having two-part or deeply cleft leaves and showy, variously colored flowers. [New Latin, after Jean Bauhin (1541-1612) and Gaspard Bauhin (1560-1624), Swiss botanists.]

baulk (bôk) v. & n. Variant of balk.

- Baum (bôm, bäm), Lyman Frank. 1856-1919. American writer known especially for The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900) and 13 other Oz stories, including Ozma of Oz (1917).
- Baum (boum), Vicki. 1896-1960. Austrian-born American writer whose best-known work is Grand Hotel (published in German in 1929 and in English in 1931), a tale of tangled relationships set in a luxurious European hotel.
- Bau-mé (bō-mā'), Antoine. 1728-1804. French pharmacist who invented a process for making sal ammonia and in 1768 devised an improved hydrometer using the scale that now bears his name.
- Baumé scale (bō-mā' skāl) n. Abbr. B., Bé A hydrometer scale used to measure the specific gravity of liquids. [After Antoine BAUMÉ.]
- Bau-ru (bou-rōō') A city of southeast Brazil northwest of São Paulo. It is a railroad junction and commercial center. Population, 180,093.
- Baut-zen (bout'sən) A city of eastern Germany on the Spree River east-northeast of Dresden. It was founded in the tenth century. Population, 50,502.
- baux·ite (bôk'sīt') n. The principal ore of aluminum, composed mainly of hydrous aluminum oxides and aluminum hydroxides. [After Les Baux, a commune of southeast France.] —baux·it'ic (-sīt'ik) adj.
- Ba·var·i·a (bə-vâr'ē-ə) A region and former duchy of southern Germany. Conquered by the Romans in 15 B.C., the region became one of the five preeminent duchies of medieval Germany but was later overrun and ruled by numerous factions and powers.
- Ba·var·i·an (bə-vâr'ē-ən) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Bavaria. 2. The High German dialect of Bavaria and Austria. —Ba·var'i·an adj.
- Bavarian Alps (bə-vâr'ē-ən älpz) A range of the Alps between southern Bavaria in Germany and the Tyrol in western Austria. It rises to 2,964.9 m (9,721 ft) at Zugspitze on the southern border of Germany.
- bawd (bôd) n. 1. A woman who keeps a brothel; a madam. 2. A prostitute. [Middle English, probably from Old French baud, gay, licentious, from Old Low German bald, bold, merry. See bhel-² in Appendix.]
- bawd·ry (bô'drē) n. Risqué, coarse, or obscene language. [Middle English bawdery, pandering, from bawd, bawd. See BAWD.]
- bawd·y (bô'dē) adj. bawd·i·er, bawd·i·est. 1. Humorously coarse; risqué. 2. Vulgar; lewd. —bawd'i·ly adv. —bawd'i·ness n.
- bawd·y·house (bô'dē-hous') n. A house of prostitution.
- bawl (bôl) v. bawled, bawl·ing, bawls. — v. intr. 1. To cry or sob loudly; wail. 2. To cry out loudly and vehemently; shout. — v. tr. To utter in a loud, vehement voice. See Synonyms at shout. — n. A loud, bellowing cry; a wail. —phrasal verb. bawl out. Informal. To reprimand loudly or harshly. [Middle English bawlen, to bark, from Medieval Latin baulāre, to bark (probably of Scandinavian origin,), or from Old Norse baula, to low (of imitative origin).]

—bawl'er n.

Bax·ter (băk'stər), Richard. 1615-1691. English nonconformist clergyman and writer who served as chaplain for Cromwell's army (1645-1647) and after the Restoration in the service of Charles II (1660-1662).

bay¹ (bā) n. Abbr. b. 1. A body of water partially enclosed by land but with a wide mouth, affording access to the sea: the Bay of Biscay. 2. An area of land, such as an arm of prairie partially enclosed by woodland, that resembles in shape or formation a partially enclosed body of water. 3. Often used as an attributive: bay flounder; bay scallops. [Middle English, from Old French baie, perhaps from baer, to open out, gape. See BAY².]

bay² (bā) n. 1. Architecture. A part of a building marked off by vertical elements, such as columns or pilasters: an arcade divided into ten bays. 2. Architecture. a. A bay window. b. An opening or recess in a wall. 3. A section or compartment, as in a service station, barn, or aircraft, that is set off for a specific purpose: a cargo bay; an engine bay. 4. A sickbay. [Middle English, from Old French baee, an opening, from baer, to gape, from Vulgar Latin badāre*.]

bay³ (bā) adj. Color. Reddish-brown: a bay colt. — n. 1. Color. A reddish brown. 2. A reddish-brown animal, especially a horse having a black mane and tail. [Middle English, from Old French bai, from Latin badius.]

bay⁴ (bā) n. 1. A deep, prolonged bark, such as the sound made by hounds. 2. The position of one cornered by pursuers and forced to turn and fight at close quarters: The hunters brought their quarry to bay. 3. The position of having been checked or held at a distance: "He has seen the nuclear threat held at bay for 40 years" (Earl W. Foell). — v. bayed, bay-ing, bays. — v. intr. To utter a deep, prolonged bark. — v. tr. 1. To pursue or challenge with barking: "I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon" (Shakespeare). 2. To express by barking or howling: a mob baying its fury. 3. To bring to bay: "too big for the dogs which tried to bay it" (William Faulkner). [Middle English, from abai, cornering a hunted animal, from Old French, from abaiier, to bark, perhaps from Vulgar Latin abbaiāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Vulgar Latin badāre*, to gape, yawn. V., from Middle English baien, to bark from abaien, from Old French abaiier.]

bay⁵ (bā) n. 1. See laurel (n., sense 1). 2. Any of certain other trees or shrubs with aromatic foliage, such as the California laurel. 3. A crown or wreath made especially of the leaves and branches of the laurel and given as a sign of honor or victory. 4. Often bays. Honor; renown. [Middle English, from Old French baie, berry, from Latin bāca.]

ba·ya·dere (bī'ə-dîr', -dâr') n. A fabric with contrasting horizontal stripes. [French bayadère, from Portuguese bailadeira, dancer, from bailar, to dance, from Late Latin ballāre, from Greek ballizein. See g^wel- in Appendix.]

Ba·ya·món (bä'yä-môn') A town of northeast Puerto Rico, a residential and industrial suburb of San Juan. Founded in 1772, it is one of the oldest settlements on the island. Population, 185,087.

Ba·yar (bī-är'), (Mahmud) Celal. 1884-1986. Turkish political leader. A founder of the Turkish Republic, he served as its president from 1950 to 1960, when he was ousted by a military coup.

Bay·ard (bā'ərd, bī'-, bā-yär'), Seigneur de Originally Pierre Terrail. 1473-1524. French military hero known for his fearlessness and chivalry in the Italian campaigns of Charles VII, Louis XII, and Francis I. He was called "le chevalier sans peur et sans reproche."

Bay·ard (bī'ərd, bā'-), James Asheton. 1767-1815. American politician. As a U.S. representative from Delaware he played a crucial role in the disputed presidential election of 1800 and secured the choice of Thomas Jefferson over Aaron Burr in the House of Representatives. His grandson Thomas Francis Bayard (1828-1898) was the first to hold the rank of ambassador to Great Britain (1893-1897).

bay·ber·ry (bā'bēr'ē) n. 1. A deciduous, eastern North American shrub (Myrica pensylvanica) having aromatic foliage and small, globose fruits with a waxy covering used for making fragrant candles. 2. The fruit of this tree.

Bay City (bā sīt'ē) 1. A city of eastern Michigan on Saginaw Bay north-northwest of Detroit. It is a port of entry and industrial center. Population, 38,936. 2. A city of southeast Texas near the Colorado River and the Gulf of Mexico southwest of Houston. There are oil wells and sulfur mines in the area. Population, 18,170.

Ba·yeux (bī-yōō', bā-, bā-yœ') A town of northwest France near the English Channel. The famed Bayeux tapestry, housed in a museum here, depicts incidents in the Norman Conquest (1066). Population, 14,721.

Bay·kal (bī-kôl', -köl'), Lake. See Lake Baikal.

bay laurel (bā lôr'əl) n. See laurel (n., sense 1).

Bayle (bāl, bēl), Pierre. 1647-1706. French philosopher and critic. Considered the progenitor of 18th-century rationalism, he compiled the famous Dictionnaire Historique et Critique (1697) and championed the cause of religious tolerance.

bay leaf (bā lēf) n. The dried aromatic leaf of the laurel or bay (Laurus nobilis) used as a seasoning in cooking.

Bay·lor (bā'lər), Robert Emmet Bledsoe. 1793-1873. American jurist and Baptist cleric who was instrumental in obtaining a charter for the first Baptist college in Texas, which was named in his honor.

bay lynx (bā līngks) n. See bobcat.

Bay of (bā ūv) For names of actual bays, see the specific element of the name; for example, Biscay, Bay of; Pigs, Bay of.

Bay of Pigs (bā ūv pĭgz) n. An invasion of another country that ends in failure and a rout: “A President who finally is afraid to risk a Bay of Pigs... will be reluctant to... intercept... terrorists” (Hugh Sidey).

bay·o·net (bā'ə-nĭt, -nĕt', bā'ə-nĕt') n. A blade adapted to fit the muzzle end of a rifle and used as a weapon in close combat. — v. tr. bay·o·net·ed or bay·o·net·ted, bay·o·net·ing or bay·o·net·ting, bay·o·nets or bay·o·nets. To prod, stab, or kill with this weapon. [French baïonnette, after Bayonne¹.]

WORD HISTORY: It is not unusual for a word to come from a place name. Cheddar, from the name of a village in southwest England; hamburger, after Hamburg, Germany; and mayonnaise, possibly from Mahón, the capital of Minorca, are often found together on our tables. The word bayonet, a very undomestic sort of word, also derives from a place name, that of Bayonne, a town in southwest France where the weapon was first made. The French word baïonnette could mean “a dagger or a knife” as well, and the English word bayonet is first found in 1672 with this meaning. The word is first recorded in its present sense in 1704.

Ba-yonne¹ (bā-ōn', bā-yōn') A town of southwest France near the Bay of Biscay and the Spanish border. French, Spanish, and Basque are all spoken here. Population, 41,381.

Bay-onne² (bā-yōn') A city of northeast New Jersey on a peninsula in Upper New York Bay across from Staten Island. First colonized by the Dutch, it passed to the English in 1664. Population, 61,444.

bay-ou (bī'ōō, bī'ō) n. 1. A body of water, such as a creek or small river, that is a tributary of a larger body of water. 2. A sluggish stream that meanders through lowlands, marshes, or plantation grounds. [Louisiana French bayouque, bayou, possibly from Choctaw bayuk.]

Bay-reuth (bī-roit', bī'roit) A city of east-central Germany northeast of Nuremberg. Richard Wagner lived here from 1872 to 1883 and designed the opera house used for the city's internationally famous music festivals. Population, 71,811.

bay rum (bā rŭm) n. An aromatic liquid originally prepared by distilling the leaves of the bay rum tree in rum and water but now usually made by mixing the oil from those leaves with other solvents.

bay rum tree (bā rŭm trē) n. A tropical American evergreen tree (Pimenta racemosa) having leathery leaves that yield a fragrant oil used in bay rum, perfumes, and soaps.

Bay Shore (bā shōr) An unincorporated community of southeast New York on the southern shore of Long Island. It is a residential town and fishing resort. Population, 21,279.

bay-side (bā'sīd') adj. Situated very close to or on the shore of a bay: bayside cottages.

Bay-town (bā'toun') A city of southeast Texas at the head of Galveston Bay on the Houston Ship Channel. It is an oil-refining and industrial center. Population, 63,850.

Bay Village (bā vīl'ij) A city of northeast Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland on Lake Erie. Population, 17,000.

bay window (bā wīn'dō) n. 1. Architecture. A large window or series of windows projecting from the outer wall of a building and forming a recess within. 2. Slang. A protruding belly; a paunch.

ba-zaar also ba-zar (bā-zār') n. 1. A market consisting of a street lined with shops and stalls, especially one in the Middle East. 2. A shop or a part of a store in which miscellaneous articles are sold. 3. A fair or sale at which miscellaneous articles are sold, often for charitable purposes. [From Italian bazarro, and from Urdu bāzār both from Persian. See wes-³ in Appendix.]

ba-zoo-ka (bā-zōō'kə) n. A shoulder-held weapon consisting of a long metal smoothbore tube for firing armor-piercing rockets at short range. [After the bazooka, a crude wind instrument made of pipes, invented and named by Bob Burns (1896-1956), American comedian, probably from bazoo, kazoo.]

bb also b.b. abbr. Ball bearing.

BB (bē'bē) n. A standard size of lead pellet that measures .40 of an inch (.44 centimeter) in diameter, and that is used in air rifles.

B.B.A. abbr. Bachelor of Business Administration.

BBC (bē'bē-sē') abbr. British Broadcasting Corporation.

BBC English (bē'bē-sē' ینگ'glīsh) n. See Received Pronunciation.

BB gun (bē'bē gūn) n. A small air rifle that shoots BB's.

bbl or bbl. abbr. Barrel.

B.C. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Chemistry. 2. Also B.C.. Before Christ. 3. Or BC. British Columbia.

B.C.B.G. abbr. French. Bon chic, bon genre (stylish and well-to-do).

BCD or bcd abbr. Computer Science. Binary coded decimal.

B.C.E. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Chemical Engineering. 2. Bachelor of Civil Engineering. 3. Or B.C.E.. Before the Common Era.

B cell (bē' sēl) n. A type of lymphocyte that plays a major role in the body's humoral immune response. When stimulated by a particular foreign antigen, these lymphocytes differentiate into plasma cells that synthesize the antibodies that circulate in the blood and react with the specific antigens. Also called B lymphocyte [b(ursa-dependent) cell.]

BCG abbr. Bacillus Calmette-Guérin vaccine.

B.Ch.E. abbr. Bachelor of Chemical Engineering.

B.C.L. abbr. 1. Bachelor of Canon Law. 2. Bachelor of Civil Law.

B complex (bē' kəm-plēks') n. See vitamin B complex.

bd abbr. Bundle.

BD abbr. 1. Bank draft. 2. Bomb disposal.

bd. abbr. 1. Board. 2. Bond. 3. Bound.

B.D. abbr. Bachelor of Divinity.

b/d abbr. Barrels per day.

bdel-li-um (děl'ē-əm) n. An aromatic gum resin similar to myrrh, produced by certain Asian and African shrubs or trees of the genus Commiphora. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek bdellion; akin to Hebrew bēdōlah.]

bd. ft. abbr. Board foot.

bdl abbr. Bundle.

bdle. abbr. Bundle.

bdrm. abbr. Bedroom.

bds. abbr. Bound in boards.

B.D.S. abbr. Bachelor of Dental Surgery.

be (bē) v. First and third person singular past indicative was (wūz, wōz; wəz when unstressed) second person singular and plural and first and third person plural past indicative, were (wūr) past subjunctive, were past participle, been (bīn) present participle, be-ing (bē'ing) first person singular present indicative, am (ām) second person singular and plural and first and third person plural present indicative, are (ār) third person singular present indicative, is (īz) present subjunctive, be. — v. intr. 1. To exist in actuality; have life or reality: I think, therefore I am. 2. a. To occupy a specified position: The food is on the table. b. To remain in a certain state or situation undisturbed, untouched, or unmolested: Let the children be. 3. To take place; occur: The test was yesterday. 4. To go or come: Have you ever been to Italy? Have you been home recently? 5. Usage Problem. Used as a copula in such senses as: a. To equal in identity: "To be a Christian was to be a Roman" (James Bryce). b. To have a specified significance: A is excellent, C is passing. Let n be the unknown quantity. c. To belong to a specified class or group: The human being is a primate. d. To have or show a specified quality or characteristic: She is lovely. All men are mortal. e. To seem to consist or be made of: The yard is all snow. He is all bluff and no bite. 6. To belong; befall: Peace be unto you. Woe is me. — v. aux. 1. Used with the past participle of a transitive verb to form the passive voice: The mayoral election is held annually. 2. Used with the present participle of a verb to express a continuing action: We are working to improve housing conditions. 3. Used with the infinitive of a verb to express intention, obligation, or future action: She was to call before she left. You are to make the necessary changes. 4. Archaic. Used with the past participle of certain intransitive verbs to form the perfect tense: "Where be those roses gone which sweetened so our eyes?" (Philip Sidney). [Middle English ben, from Old English bēon; see bheu- in Appendix. See AM¹, IS, etc. for links to other Indo-European roots.]

SYNONYMS: be, breathe, exist, live, subsist. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to have life or reality”: Her parents are no more. A nicer person has never breathed. He is one of the worst actors who ever existed. Human beings cannot live without food and water. The benevolence subsisting in her character draws her friends closer to her.

USAGE NOTE: Traditional grammar requires the nominative form of the pronoun in the predicate of the verb be: It is I (not me); That must be they (not them), and so forth. Even literate speakers of Modern English have found the rule difficult to conform to, but the stigmatization of It is me is by now so deeply lodged among the canons of correctness that there is little likelihood that the construction will ever be entirely acceptable in formal writing. Adherence to the traditional rule in informal speech, however, has come to sound increasingly pedantic, and begins to sound absurd when the verb is contracted, as in It's we. • The traditional rule creates particular problems when the pronoun following be also functions as the object of a verb or preposition in a relative clause, as in It is not them/they that we have in mind when we talk about “crime in the streets” nowadays, where the plural pronoun serves as both the predicate of is and the object of have. In this example, 57 percent of the Usage Panel preferred the nominative form they, 33 percent preferred the accusative them, and 10 percent accepted both versions. But H.W. Fowler, like other authorities, argued that the use of the nominative here is an error caused by “the temptation... to assume, perhaps from hearing It is me corrected to It is I, that a subjective [nominative] case cannot be wrong after the verb to be.” Writers can usually find a way to avoid this problem: They are not the ones we have in mind, We have someone else in mind, and so on. See Usage Note at I¹. See Usage Note at we.

Be The symbol for the element beryllium.

BE abbr. 1. Also B.E.. Bachelor of Education. 2. Also B.E.. Bachelor of Engineering. 3. Board of Education.

B/E abbr. 1. Bill of entry. 2. Bill of exchange.

be- pref. 1. Completely; thoroughly; excessively. Used as an intensive: bemuse. 2. On; around; over: besmear. 3. About; to: bespeak. 4. Used to form transitive verbs from nouns, adjectives, and intransitive verbs, as: a. To make; cause to become: bedim b. To affect, cover, or provide: bespectacled. [Middle English bi-, be-, from Old English be-, bi-. See ambhi in Appendix.]

Bé abbr. Baumé scale.

beach (bēch) n. 1. The shore of a body of water, especially when sandy or pebbly. 2. The sand or pebbles on a shore. — v. tr. beached, beach-ing, beach-es. To haul or run ashore: beached the rowboat in front of the cabin. [Perhaps Middle English beche, stream, from Old English bece.]

Beach (bēch), Alfred Ely. 1826-1896. American editor and inventor who built a demonstration pneumatic subway under Broadway in New York City in 1870.

Beach (bēch), Amy Marcey Cheney. 1867-1944. American pianist and composer best known for her songs and chamber music. Her Mass in E flat major was the first work by a woman to be performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Beach (bēch), Moses Yale. 1800-1868. American publisher whose aggressive journalism established the New York Sun as a leading daily newspaper. He is also credited with publishing the first syndicated news story. His son Moses Sperry Beach (1822-1892) invented a cutting device that allowed printing on a continuous roll of paper and a process for printing both sides of a newspaper sheet at one time.

Beach (bēch), Sylvia Woodbridge. 1887-1962. American bookseller. From 1919 to 1941 her shop in Paris, Shakespeare and Company, was a gathering place for authors such as Hemingway and Fitzgerald. She published the first edition of James Joyce's Ulysses in 1922.

beach ball (bēch bôl) n. A large inflatable ball used for games especially at a beach or swimming pool.

beach buggy (bēch bŭg'ē) n. See dune buggy.

beach bum (bēch bŭm) n. Informal. A person who habitually loafs or idles on beaches.

beach-burn-er (bēch' bŭr'nēr) n. Informal. A small, self-propelled watercraft for recreational use close to shore.

beach-comb-er (bēch'kō'mēr) n. 1. One who scavenges along beaches or in wharf areas. 2. A seaside vacationer.

beach flea (bēch flē) n. Any of various small, jumping crustaceans of the family Orchestiidae, living on sandy beaches at or near the tide line. Also called sand hopper beach-front (bēch'frŭnt') n. A strip of land facing or running along a beach. — adj. Situated along or having direct access to a beach: beachfront hotels; beachfront property.

beach grass (bēch grās) n. A perennial grass of the genus Ammophila, especially A. breviligulata, native to sandy shores along the Great Lakes and Atlantic coast of North America, and having spikelets in long, erect, crowded clusters. It is commonly planted as a sandbinder to stabilize dunes and combat beach erosion. Also called marram beach-head (bēch'hĕd') n. 1. A position on an enemy shoreline captured by troops in advance of an invading force. 2. A first achievement that opens the way for further developments; a foothold.

Beach-la-Mar (bēch'lə-mär') n. See Bislama.

beach-less (bēch'lis) adj. Having no beach, especially because of increased ocean level and wave action: beachless seaside towns.

beach pea or beach-pea (bēch'pē') n. Any of certain perennial herbs of the genus Lathyrus in the pea family, especially L. japonicus, native to shores in the Northern Hemisphere, having pinnately compound leaves and purplish flowers.

beach plum (bēch plūm) n. A seacoast shrub (Prunus maritima) in the rose family, native to northeast North America and having white flowers and edible, plumlike fruits used in jams, jellies, and pies.

beach-scape (bēch'skā') n. A view of shore scenery or an artistic representation of it.

beach-side (bēch'sīd') adj. Situated on or along a beach.

beach-wear (bēch'wâr') n. Clothing appropriate for swimming, boating, or sunning.

beach wormwood (bēch wûrm'woöd') n. An Asian perennial seacoast plant (Artemisia stelleriana) in the composite family, densely covered with grayish-white felty hairs and having elongate clusters of heads with tiny yellow flowers.

Beach-y Head (bē'chē hēd) Chalk cliffs, 175.4 m (575 ft) high, on the southeast coast of England. In 1690 Beachy Head was the scene of a French naval victory over Anglo-Dutch forces.

bea-con (bē'kən) n. 1. A signaling or guiding device, such as a lighthouse, located on a coast. 2. A radio transmitter that emits a characteristic guidance signal for aircraft. 3. A source of guidance or inspiration. 4. A signal fire, especially one used to warn of an enemy's approach. — v. tr. intr. bea-coned, bea-con-ing, bea-cons. To provide with or shine as a beacon. [Middle English beken, from Old English bēacen. See bhā⁻¹ in Appendix.]

Bea-con Hill (bē'kən hīl) An area of Boston, Massachusetts, noted for its historic residences, brick sidewalks, and picturesque mews.

Bea-cons-field (bē'kənz-fēld') A town of southern Quebec, Canada, a residential suburb of Montreal on Montreal Island. Population, 19,613.

bead (bēd) n. 1. a. A small, often round piece of material, such as glass, plastic, or wood, that is pierced for stringing or threading. b. beads. A necklace made of such pieces. c. beads. Roman Catholic Church. A rosary. d. Obsolete. A prayer. Often used in the plural. 2. A small, round object, especially: a. A drop of moisture: beads of sweat. b. A bubble of gas in a liquid. c. A small metal knob on the muzzle of a firearm, such as a rifle, used for sighting. 3. A strip of material, usually wood, with one molded edge placed flush against the inner part of a door or window frame. 4. Architecture. a. A decoration consisting of a usually continuous series of small spherical shapes, as on a convex molding. b. Beading. 5. A projecting rim or lip, as on a pneumatic tire. 6. A line of continuously-applied ductile material, such as solder or caulking compound. 7. Chemistry. A globule of fused borax or other flux used in a bead test. — v. tr. intr. bead-ed, bead-ing, beads. To furnish with or collect into beads. — idiom. draw a bead on (or get a bead on). To take careful aim at. [Middle English bede, rosary bead, prayer, from Old English bed, bedu, gebed, prayer. See g^whedh- in Appendix.]

bead·ing (bē'dɪŋ) n. 1. Beads or the material used for making them.

2. Ornamentation with beads. Also called beadwork 3. Architecture. A narrow, half-rounded molding; a bead. 4. A narrow piece of openwork lace through which ribbon may be run. 5. Tiny drops of condensation, as on the outside of a glass.

bea·dle (bē'dl) n. A minor parish official formerly employed in an English church to usher and keep order during services. [Middle English bedel, herald (from Old English bydel), and from Old French bedel (from Medieval Latin bedellus, from Old High German butil); see bheudh- in Appendix.]

Bea·dle (bē'dl), Erastus Flavel. 1821-1894. American publisher who in 1860 published the first dime novel, initiating a popular series of almost 3,000 books with virtually indistinguishable plots, implausible dialogue, and lashings of violence and suspense.

Bea·dle (bē'dl), George Wells. 1903-1989. American biologist. He shared a 1958 Nobel Prize for discovering how genes transmit hereditary characteristics.

bead plant (bēd plānt) n. An evergreen, mat-forming plant (Nertera granadensis) chiefly of the Southern Hemisphere, grown especially as a houseplant for its abundant, long-lasting, orange drupes.

bead test (bēd tĕst) n. Chemistry. A test to identify the metal constituents of a mineral in which a bead covered with the mineral is heated in a flame and cooled to observe its characteristic color and other properties.

bead·work (bēd'wŭrk') n. 1. See beading (n., sense 2). 2. Architecture. Beaded molding.

bead·y (bē'dē) adj. bead·i·er, bead·i·est. 1. Small, round, and shiny: beady eyes. 2. Decorated or covered with beads.

bea·gle (bē'gəl) n. One of a breed of small hounds having short legs, drooping ears, and a smooth coat with white, black, and tan markings. [Middle English begle, possibly from Old French bee gueule, loudmouth : beer, to gape (variant of baer); see BAY² + gueule, gullet (from Latin gula).]

beak (bēk) n. 1. a. The horny, projecting structure forming the mandibles of a bird, especially one that is strong, sharp, and useful in striking and tearing; a bill. b. A similar structure in other animals, such as turtles, insects, or fish. 2. A usually firm, tapering tip on certain plant structures, such as some seeds and fruits. 3. A beaklike structure or part, as: a. The spout of a pitcher. b. A metal or metal-clad ram projecting from the bow of an ancient warship. 4. Informal. The human nose. 5. Chiefly British. a. A schoolmaster. b. A judge. [Middle English bek, from Old French bec, from Latin beccus, of Celtic origin.] —beaked adj.

beaked salmon (bēkd sām'ən) n. See sandfish (n., sense 2).

beak·er (bē'kər) n. 1. A wide cylindrical glass vessel with a pouring lip, used as a laboratory container and mixing jar. 2. A large drinking cup with a wide mouth. [Middle Dutch bēker, drinking vessel, and Middle English bekir both from Medieval Latin bicārius, bicārium, probably from Greek bikos, jug, possibly of Egyptian origin.]

be all and end all or be-all and end-all (bē'ɔl' ənd ɛnd'ɔb') n. The quintessential or all-important element: “Not that the more spectacular athleticism is the be all and end all of free skating. Spins... and intricate step sequences are also important” (Howard Bass).

beam (bēm) n. Abbr. bm. 1. A squared-off log or a large, oblong piece of timber, metal, or stone used especially as a horizontal support in construction. 2. Nautical. a. A transverse structural member of a ship's frame, used to support a deck and to brace the sides against stress. b. The breadth of a ship at the widest point. c. The side of a ship: sighted land off the starboard beam. 3. Informal. The widest part of a person's hips: broad in the beam. 4. A steel tube or wooden roller on which the warp is wound in a loom. 5. An oscillating lever connected to an engine piston rod and used to transmit power to the crankshaft. 6. a. The bar of a balance from which weighing pans are suspended. b. Sports. A balance beam. 7. The main horizontal bar on a plow to which the share, colter, and handles are attached. 8. One of the main stems of a deer's antlers. 9. a. A ray or shaft of light. b. A concentrated stream of particles or a similar propagation of waves: a beam of protons; a beam of light. 10. A radio beam. — v. beamed, beam·ing, beams. — v. intr. 1. To radiate light; shine. 2. To smile expansively. — v. tr. 1. To emit or transmit: beam a message via satellite. 2. To express by means of a radiant smile: He beamed his approval of the new idea. —idiom. on the beam. 1. Following a radio beam. Used of aircraft. 2. On the right track; operating correctly. [Middle English bem, from Old English bēam. See bheuə- in Appendix.]

beam-ends (bēm'ɛndz') pl.n. Nautical. The ends of a ship's beams.

beam·ish (bē'mish) adj. Smiling, as with happiness or optimism.

—beam'ish·ly adv.

beam·y (bē'mē) adj. beam·i·er, beam·i·est. 1. Broad in the beam.

2. Emitting beams, as of light; radiant.

bean (bēn) n. 1. a. Any of various New World twining herbs of the genus Phaseolus in the pea family, having leaves with three leaflets, variously colored flowers, and edible pods and seeds. b. A seed or pod of any of these plants.

2. Any of several related plants or their seeds or pods, such as the adzuki bean, broad bean, or soybean. 3. Any of various other plants or their seeds or fruits, especially those suggestive of beans, such as the coffee bean or the vanilla bean.

4. Slang. A person's head. 5. beans. Slang. A small amount: I don't know beans about the stock market. 6. Chiefly British. A fellow; a chap. — v. tr. beaned, bean-ing, beans. Slang. To hit (another) on the head with a thrown object, especially a pitched baseball. — idioms. full of beans. 1. Energetic; frisky: The children were too full of beans to sit still. 2. Badly mistaken: Don't believe him; he's full of beans. spill the beans. To disclose a secret. [Middle English ben, broad bean, from Old English bēan. See bha-bhā- in Appendix.]

Bean (bēn), Roy. Self-styled “the Law West of the Pecos.” 1825?-1903. American frontiersman in Texas who in 1881 appointed himself justice of the peace and handed down judgments based on one law book and one six-shooter.

bean-bag (bēn'bag') n. 1. A small bag filled with dried beans and used for throwing in games. 2. A small folded bag filled with lead pellets, used as ammunition in a stun gun. 3. An article, such as a chair or the base of an ashtray, that is constructed as a bag filled with small pellets.

bean ball (bēn bōl) n. Baseball. A pitch aimed at the batter's head.

bean beetle (bēn bēt'l) n. The Mexican bean beetle.

bean counter (bēn koun'tər) n. Slang. A financial executive, especially an accountant: “Companies tended to recognize two cultures—that of the technologist and that of the bean counter” (Financial Times).

bean curd (bēn kûrd) n. Tofu.

bean-er-y (bē'nə-rē) n. pl. bean-er-ies. Informal. An inexpensive restaurant or café.

bean family (bēn fām'ə-lē) n. The pea family.

bean-ie (bē'nē) n. A small brimless cap. [Probably from BEAN, head.]

bean-o (bē'nō) n. pl. bean-os. Games. A form of bingo, especially one using beans as markers. [Blend of BEAN, and (BING)O.]

bean-pole (bēn'pōl') n. 1. A thin pole used to support bean vines.

2. Informal. A very tall, thin person.

bean sprouts (bēn sprouts) pl.n. The tender, edible seedlings of certain bean plants, especially those of the mung bean.

bean-stalk (bēn'stôk') n. The stem of a bean plant.

bear¹ (bâr) v. bore (bôr, bōr), borne (bôrn, bōrn) or born (bôrn), bear-ing, bears. — v. tr. 1. To hold up; support. 2. To carry on one's person; convey. 3. To carry in the mind; harbor: bear a grudge. 4. To transmit at large; relate: bearing glad tidings. 5. To have as a visible characteristic: bore a scar on the left arm. 6. To have as a quality; exhibit: “A thousand different shapes it bears” (Abraham Cowley). 7. To carry (oneself) in a specified way; conduct: She bore herself with dignity. 8. To be accountable for; assume: bearing heavy responsibilities. 9. To have a tolerance for; endure: couldn't bear his lying. 10. To call for; warrant: This case bears investigation. 11. To give birth to. 12. To produce; yield:

plants bearing flowers. 13. To offer; render: I will bear witness to the deed. 14. To move by or as if by steady pressure; push: “boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past” (F. Scott Fitzgerald). — v. intr. 1. To yield fruit; produce: peach trees that bear every summer. 2. To have relevance; apply: They studied the ways in which the relativity theory bears on the history of science. 3. To exert pressure, force, or influence. 4. a. To force oneself along; forge. b. To endure something with tolerance and patience: Bear with me while I explain matters. 5. To extend or proceed in a specified direction: The road bears to the right at the bottom of the hill. —phrasal verbs. bear down. 1. To overwhelm; vanquish. 2. To apply maximum effort and concentration: If you really bear down, you will finish the task. bear out. To prove right or justified; confirm: The test results bear out our claims. bear up. To withstand stress, difficulty, or attrition: The patient bore up well during the long illness. —idioms. bear down on. To effect in a harmful or adverse way: Financial pressures are bearing down on them. bear fruit. To come to a satisfactory conclusion or to fruition. bear in mind. To hold in one’s mind; remember: Bear in mind that bridges freeze before roads. [Middle English beren, from Old English beran. See bher¹ in Appendix.]

